The following are numbered to correspond with the map on the back. Also refer to the Range (R) and Site (S) grid numbers to help locate each gravesite.

1. DANIEL RAPINE (died 1826), was Washington’s second mayor, lived on Capitol Hill, and owned a bookstore that sold Washington Brewery beer—the first recorded retail outlet for beer in the city. R54/S6 – no headstone.

2. JAMES GREENLEAF (1765-1843) was a major investor in Washington real estate and Dr. Cornelius Coningham’s business partner for the Washington Brewery—the first brewery in the City of Washington. R49/S23.

3. CLEMENT T. COOTE (1784-1849) was an English immigrant, the fourth operator of the Washington Brewery near Navy Yard, a city alderman, dry goods store owner, and justice of the peace. He closed the brewery in 1836. R54/S59.

5. JOHN W. COLLET (died 1814) was the second owner of the Washington Brewery near the Navy Yard—and thus the second brewer in Washington. He died in September 1814, six weeks after the British raid on Washington during the War of 1812. R26/S20.

6. WILLIAM ZANNER (died 1832) owned first a brewery, then a beer bottling operation in Southwest. R12/S114.

7. HATTIE BERKLEY (died 1895), thirteen years old, was riding a bicycle on April 4, 1895 when she collided with a National Capital Brewing delivery wagon at Ninth and Pennsylvania Avenue, SE. She fractured her skull and soon died. R3/S115.

8. GEORGE WILSON (died November 15, 1910) ran the Arlington Brewery near Georgetown 1873-1874. He moved to Washington from Massachusetts during the Civil War. R38/S181.

9. The remains of HENRY SHOENBORN (1833-1886), a Beckert son-in-law and business partner to brewer Herman Richter, were placed in the Public Vault briefly after his death, then relocated to Oak Hill Cemetery in Georgetown. PUBLIC VAULT

10. WILLIAM A. GUNTON (died 1854) was born in England, ran a drugstore at Pennsylvania and Ninth Street, and brewed beer at the Washington Brewery with his brother Thomas from 1826-1832. R51/S155.

11. THOMAS GUNTON (died 1853) was born in England and brewed beer at the Washington Brewery with his brother William from 1826-1832. R51/S165.

12. WILLIAM SEATON (1785-1866) was a former mayor of Washington whose downtown mansion was torn down by restaurateur Edward Abner to build a beer garden. R57/S165.

13. FRANCIS FROMMEL (died 1866) operated a Civil War-era brewery at 504 D Street, SE from 1864 until his death two years later. R62/S187-no headstone.

14. GEORGE (1810-1859) and THERESA BECKERT (1813-1889) ran Beckert’s Park restaurant, brewery, and beer garden on Capitol Hill, where the Safeway now stands of 14th Street, SE. George may have been the first to brew lager in Washington. Much of the Beckert family is buried in the surrounding plot. R82/S220 and S219.

15. HERMAN RICHTER’S (died 1874) white obelisk is just inches away from Theresa Beckert’s grave; he was one of the two Beckert sons-in-law who took over the family brewery after George Beckert died in 1859. R82/S217.

16. JACOB ROTH (died 1888) ran a Capitol Hill brewery at 318 First Street, NE. R83/S228-no headstone.

17. MOSES T. BRIDWELL (died 1892) was a beer bottler in Southwest. Until 1890, federal law prevented brewers from bottling on premises, so most outsourced it to bottling plants. R98/S226.

18. WILLIAM SYNDOR (died 1872) was a driver for Whitney & Lander’s Brewery and was conducting his daily rounds on July 5 when he died from the heat. R91/S251.

19. EDWIN RYTHER (died January 20, 1875) purchased the Arlington Brewery at K Street and 27th Street, NW with a business partner in 1874, and briefly ran it until his death less than a year later. R82/S280.

An 1879 advertisement touting lager beer as a healthy, family-friendly beverage. Library of Congress.

A March 1873 brewer’s advertisement for Rock beer, the lager brewed once weekly. “The Rock (Duffy’s Draught in German) are rolling the cold-water temperature here within uptowning beer drinkers cheer them on.” Library of Congress.

The oldest-known image of a brewery in Washington is from George Cooke’s 1833 painting, “City of Washington from Beyond the Navy Yard.” The Washington Brewery is the tall brick building on the lower left. Clement Coote owned the brewery at the time. Library of Congress.
A WORD OF CAUTION: The centuries have made many grave markers and sites unstable. Please be careful near grave markers and watch where you step; depressions and sink holes lie hidden in grass, and footstones and corner markers can trip the unwary.

The Association for the Preservation of Historic Congressional Cemetery is a private, nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization dedicated to the restoration, interpretation, and management of Congressional Cemetery. It is predominantly a volunteer-based organization relying on over 400 neighbors, history buffs, conservators, dogwalkers, and armed forces personnel each year to restore and maintain this national treasure. Established in 1976, the Association is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Brewers Tour

History comes to life in Congressional Cemetery. The creak and clang of the wrought iron gate signals your arrival into the early decades of our national heritage. Surrounding you are the men and women who shaped the new capital and gave substance to the new nation: congressmen and tradesmen, diplomats and domestics, explorers and architects, soldiers and musicians. And brewers. Brewers were once the second-largest employer in Washington after the federal government. Early brewers were often English immigrants who focused on producing ale. The Washington Brewery, which operated near Navy Yard from 1805 to 1836, had numerous owners. Brewing grew dramatically after the 1850s once German immigrants settled in Washington and introduced lager, a more palatable beer for Washington’s hot, humid summers. George Beckert was one of the first to produce lager locally. Local Prohibition in 1917 shut down two major breweries on Capitol Hill: the Washington Brewery (where Stuart-Hobson Middle School now stands), and the National Capital Brewing Company on 14th Street, SE. This latter site was home to a long series of breweries, starting with Beckert’s Park in the 1850s. During Prohibition, it became an ice cream factory, then was torn down in the 1960s. It’s now the Safeway, just three blocks from here. Along with Prospect Hill Cemetery, Congressional Cemetery today has the lion’s share of historic Washington brewers.
