Caldwell, Elias Boudinot (Sr.)	d. 1 Jun 1825		R51/13
---------------------------------------	---------------	--	---------------

Caldwell. On Tuesday night last, after an illness of long duration, Elias B. Caldwell, Esq. Attorney at Law, and Clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States, which office he had filled for a number of years. Mr. C. was one of the oldest and most respected of the residents of this city, and has left, besides his disconsolate family, a large circle of friends, who will seriously deplore his loss. The funeral will take place from his late residence this day at 4 p.m.

Extract from the Minutes of the Circuit Court of the District of Columbia, for the county of Washington, June 1, 1825:

"The Court and the members of the Bar having been informed of the death of Elias B. Caldwell, a practitioner of this Court, and being desirous of manifesting their sorrow on this melancholy occasion, as well as their respect for their deceased brother -- it unanimously ordered by the court (with the approbation of the Bar) That the Judges, the Members of the Bar, and the Officers of the Court, do attend the funeral of the deceased tomorrow.

And it is further ordered, That the Judges, the Members of the Bar, and Officers of the Court, do wear crape on the left arm for the space of thirty days, as a mark of respect for the deceased and that the Court now adjourn until Friday next, 10 o'clock.

Wm. Brent, Clerk

A founding member of the American Colonization Society which responsible for establishing the state of Liberia and raising funds to send slaves back to Africa.

The first elder on record representing a Washington church in the Presbytery.

Prout's Collection of Articles for the Washington Post

"Washington Homes of the United States Supreme Court," pp. 135-136

It was at this time, upon the approach of the enemy, that the clerk of the court, Elias Boudinot Caldwell, took the court records to his home at 206 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and well that he did, for the British did all in their power to destroy that particular part of the Capitol.

Fate seems to have dictated Mr. Caldwell's appointment as clerk of the court in August, 1800, in place of Samuel Bayard, otherwise he could not have been of such great service at such a critical time. He undoubtedly came here with the court in 1801, for it was in that same year that he purchased the ground upon which he soon afterward erected his home.

More than 20 years ago, James Croggon of the Star wrote up the block in which the Caldwell house stands, and he made such a good job of it that I am going to let you read what he had to say. Here it is, particularly that part that relates to the house where the Supreme Court met in 1814:

"The square between Second and Third streets and A street to the Avenue, known as 761, was also slow in improving. Up to the beginning of the Civil War less than half a dozen buildings appeared. The block was laid off for 18 lots, which were assigned equally to the United States and to Mr. Carroll. About 1805, when the public school system had been inaugurated, lot 6, at the northeast corner of Second street and Pennsylvania avenue, was selected for the site of the Eastern Academy, but in 1810 an exchange was made with Mr. Carroll for a site at Third and D streets southeast.

"Elias B. Caldwell, clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States from 1800 to 1825, was perhaps the first actual settler on the square. He bought the southwest portion, lots 4 to 8, fronting B street, the Avenue and Second street, in 1801 and 1809. Three cents per foot was the ruling ground valuation about 1810. Twenty years later the rate had increased to 7 cents per foot. Joseph Gales, jr., of the Intelligencer bought lot 3, on B street, in 1812; Commodore William Zantlinger lot 5, in 1810, and Griffith Coombe lots 1, 2, 3 and 18 in 1819. For a dozen years no other transfers occurred.

"Mr. Caldwell came from New Jersey to Washington, and he soon became one of the city's leading citizens. Erecting a fine, three-story brick residence at the corner of Second street and Pennsylvania avenue, he lived in the Capital City for 25 years, and his circle of friends included members of the legal profession, officers of the Army and Navy and all the leading business men of the time. Mr. Caldwell was popular as the captain of the Washington Cavalry, which was employed in scouting duty during the British invasion. For a number of years Capt. Caldwell was a member of the City Council and Board of Health. ....

Mr. Caldwell's mother was one of the martyrs of the American Revolution, having been wantonly slain by a British soldier. His father, Rev. James Caldwell of Elizabethtown, N.J., was chaplain to the Jersey Brigade and assistant commissary general from 1777 to 1779. Just prior to the killing of Mrs. Caldwell, her husband moved from Elizabethtown to Connecticut Farms for safety. What ensued was told by his granddaughter, Miss Hallie L. Wright, as follows:

"When the British troops passed through the Farms, Mrs. Caldwell, with her maid, retired to a secluded apartment with the children. The girl looked out of the window and said: 'A redcoat soldier has jumped over the fence and is coming toward the house with a gun.'

"The youngest child, but one, Elias Boudinot, 2 years old, playing on the floor, called out, 'Let me see!' and ran to the window. Mrs. Caldwell arose from her chair, and at this moment the soldier fired his musket through the window at her. It was loaded with balls, which passed through her body, and she instantly expired. It was an act of fiendish barbarity that made the British name more execrable than ever. A correspondent of the New York Gazette says: 'I saw her corpse and was informed by the neighbors it was with infinite pains that they obtained leave to bring the body from the house before they set fire to it.'

"It is related of Mr. Caldwell that in the battle that followed he showed the utmost ardor in the fight, as if he would avenge himself for the murder of his beloved wife. He galloped to the church nearby and brought back an armful of Psalm books to supply the men with wadding for their fire-locks and shouted: 'Now put Watts into them, boys! Put Watts into them!' When the work of plunder began, 19 houses and the Presbyterian church were destroyed."

The Revolutionary War not only caused the loss of Mr. Caldwell's mother, but likewise his father, though under different circumstances. In the latter case the murder was caused by one of the many undesirable soldiers released from service after the surrender of Lord Cornwallis. Of this unfortunate event the New Jersey Gazette of November 28, 1781, has this to say:

"Last Saturday Rev. James Caldwell, minister of the Dissenting Congregation at Elizabethtown, was shot dead, without any provocation, by a native of Ireland named Morgan. The coroner's inquest brought a verdict of 'willful murder.' It was thought the ruffian was bribed by the enemy to do the dreadful deed. The British authorities had offered a reward for the assassination of Gov. Livingstone, and next to him Chaplain Caldwell was most dreaded by the enemy.

“The funeral services were performed on Tuesday, the 27th, the whole town suspending business and gathering in uncontrollable grief at the obsequies. An opportunity to view the body of Mr. Caldwell was given in front of the house, on the open street. After all had taken the last look and before the coffin was closed, Judge Boudinot came forward, leading nine orphan children of the deceased, and, placing them around the bier of their parent, he made an address of surpassing pathos to the multitude in their behalf. The procession slowly moved to the grave, weeping as they went. He was laid by the side of his wife’s remains, and over his body was placed a marble slab, with the following inscription: ‘Sacred to the memory of Rev. James Caldwell and Hannah Ogden, his wife, who fell victims to their country’s cause in the years 1780 and 1781.’”

Mr. Caldwell died in 1825, and his body was buried in a plain pine coffin, he having directed that this be done as an object lesson to the poor. It is said that the undertaker covered the coffin over with black cloth to conceal its severe plainness.

Many distinguished persons have been guests at the old mansion, including Gen. Lafayette, when visiting this country in 1824; Henry Clay, Daniel Webster and John C. Calhoun. It is, indeed, a reminder of the great events of long ago and a well preserved mansion, still able to keep company with the best residences of Capitol Hill and East Washington.

“Birthplace of Henry Watterson, Liberi,” pp. 168-169

One of the first men to lend his support to the colonization movement, and one of the leading spirits in organizing the American Colonization Society, which took place in this city, December 21, 1816, was Elias Boudinot Caldwell, clerk of the United States Supreme Court from 1800 to 1825. ....

In 1814 when the British burned Washington, Capt. Caldwell of the Washington Light Horse Cavalry was ordered to remove and destroy forage and provisions in front of the enemy, which—being a man of efficiency—he no doubt did to the best of his ability. Just what he did with his cavalry at the Battle of Bladensburg the writer has no knowledge, but he believes that he undoubtedly at least saved his horses and guns by hiding them over in Virginia somewhere, and that his men all lived to draw pensions later on, as there were few casualties except among Barney’s men at this engagement. ....

Capt. Caldwell was a close friend of Gen. Lafayette’s, and when he visited this city in 1824, went with his youngest daughter in his carriage to Bladensburg to meet him, and brought him to his house, which is still standing close to the Library of Congress, and where he is said to have remained for some days.

The captain was very devout and as he grew older became even more so. Mrs. Samuel Harrison Smith, in writing of him in 1822, or about three years before his death, gives a clear idea of his religious enthusiasm. She says:

“Mr. Caldwell, they say, is fast wearing himself out, but as his health decreases, his zeal and labors increase. All day he goes from house to house, exhorting and praying, and every night at different meetings. His little daughter Harriet is one of the new converts, and with twenty or thirty other young people, made a kind of public confession and were prayed over in church, as they do in Methodist meetings. They are introducing all the habits and hymns of the Methodists into our Presbyterian churches. After the regular service is closed by the clergyman, the congregation rise, and strike up a Methodist hymn, sung amidst the groans and sobs of the newly converted, or convicted, as they call them, then Mr. Caldwell calls on the mourners to come forward, and he and others pray over them, as they loudly vent their sorrows.”

Death of Mr. Calhoun

Died, yesterday morning at his lodgings in this city, the Honorable John Caldwell Calhoun.

It is known to all of our readers that this distinguished Senator and citizen has been suffering during the whole winter under a menacing pulmonic affection, which, during the last eight or ten weeks, has, with only a few brief intervals confined him to his room. Thus gradually sinking, he expired yesterday morning between 7 and 8 o'clock.

Mr. Calhoun was born the 18th of March, 1782, and was therefore just turned of 68 years of age. More than forty years of his life were spent in public service, and nearly the whole of that period in the Legislative or Executive Departments of the General Government. With ample materials before us, we yet deny ourselves the satisfaction of entering into the particulars of his long and brilliant career, and eminent character, as that grateful duty will be performed more fitly today in the Senate, by hands more worthy of the task. Without trenching on that privilege, we may be permitted to say of the deceased, that few of our public men, since those of the revolutionary era, have filled a larger space in the public eye; few have acted a more important part on the stage of American politics; few have left a larger void in the public councils, and not one has descended to the tomb with a deeper devotion on the part of personal friends, or with a larger share of public admiration, than this illustrious Carolinian.

The National Intelligencer, Tuesday, April 2, 1850

Congress

There was no business transacted in either House of Congress yesterday, beyond the melancholy proceedings occasioned by the death of the distinguished Senator, John C. Calhoun, and the tributes paid to his character by the most eminent members in both Houses. These were solemn and impressive in the highest degree, and were listened to with the profoundest attention and interest by as many auditors as could find room in the galleries, lobbies, and doorways of both halls. The Funeral will take place today.

Cameron, A. C. The Evening Star, June 27, 1872 Among the new cases of smallpox is that of Mr. A.C. Cameron, a well-known employee of the Post Office Department and editor of the Post Office Gazette, who resides on Capitol Hill.  The Evening Star, July 2, 1872 Another Victim of Small Pox Major A.C. Cameron, a clerk in the Post Office department, and editor of the Post Office Gazette, who has been ill of small-pox for about a week past, died at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was reported better yesterday morning, and strong hopes were entertained of his recovery. Major C. was taken ill about one week ago while on duty in the department, and complained to Mr. Marr, chief clerk to First Assistant Postmaster General Marshall, of severe pains in the back of the head and neck. He thought he had taken cold, but on making minute inquiries as to his condition, Mr. Marr advised him to go home, at the same time intimating that he had all the premonitory symptoms of the small pox. Major C. went home and the next day the disease made its appearance, and finally resulted in death yesterday afternoon, as above stated.  A meeting of his fellow clerks in the Post Office Department was held this afternoon at which resolutions of respect were adopted. The deceased, who served in the Union army, was a citizen of Iowa, and leaves a wife and several children.	d. 1 Jul 1872		R4/36

Cameron, John The Evening Star, June 14, 1870 Fatal Accident on the Railroad A Well-known Washingtonian Killed We regret to learn that this morning, at 9 1/2 o'clock, Mr. John Cameron, a well-known contractor and stonemason of this city, a resident of South Washington, was killed on the Washington Branch of the B. and O. R.R., near Mills Bridge, by being struck by a locomotive. Mr. Cameron had walked out to see Mr. Clark Mills, the artist, on business, and was on his return to the city, walking down the right hand track, when the train which left here at 9:25 approached, and after the engineer had repeatedly blown his whistle to "down breaks," which were promptly put down, and a series of short whistles blown to alarm him, which he probably failed to hear, (being a little deaf in one ear,) or he had become confused, and before the train was checked the engine had struck him, fracturing the back of his head, and cutting his forehead and breaking one arm and both legs below the knee. The train was stopped within its length, and the conductor and employees of the train went back and found his lifeless body on the side of the road. It was carefully placed in the baggage car and brought to this city. The conductor, Capt. J. Peck Dukehart, immediately reported the fact to Mr. Koontz, the agent, and word was sent to Mr. J.W. Plant, undertaker, who took charge of the remains about 10 1/2 o'clock. Officers Atchison and Lawler took charge of the remains until the arrival of Mr. Plant.  As soon as the facts became known Mr. Patterson, Mr Samuel Emery, and other friends of the deceased, including one of his sons, arrived, and word was sent to the family, who reside on C street, between 3d and 4 1/2 streets, S.W. The deceased was about 55 years of age and was a man of such sterling qualities as to make him universally respected. He was a prominent member of St. Andrew's Society, the Burns Club, and of Eastern Lodge No. 7 of Odd Fellows. He leaves a wife and five children.  Dr. Potter, the coroner, was called but did not deem it necessary to hold an inquest.	b. 1817 – d. 14 Jun 1870	55 yrs. 9 mo. 17 days	R29/229

The Evening Star, June 15, 1870

The Funeral of Mr. John Cameron whose death was noticed in yesterday's Star, from being run over by the cars, near Bladensburg, is taking place this afternoon from his late residence, D street south, near 4 1/2 street and is largely attended by his numerous friends. Eastern Lodge, No. 7, Odd Fellows, the St. Andrews Society, and the Burns Club are attending.

The remains are laid out in a handsome walnut coffin, lined with white satin and trimmed with fringe. On the coffin is a silver plate on which is engraved the name of deceased together with date of his birth and death. The coffin is also furnished with several symbols peculiar to the Odd Fellows.

Mr. J.W. Plant is the undertaker, and the coffin will be borne to the Congressional Cemetery on Mr. Plant's elegant white hearse, drawn by four white horses. Pall-bearers will be designated by the several societies of which deceased was a member.

April 1851: John Cameron built towers of Trinity Church.

Exhibit in the Forrestal Building (1997):

John Cameron was hired by Renwick, the architect, to take charge of the stone masonry for the building of the Smithsonian Castle. Cameron later built 2 row houses along B street (now Independence) known was Cameron Row. The houses were demolished in 1965 to make way for the Forrestal Building.

ca. 1848 -- razed 1941

Architect: attributed to John Cameron, Washington, D.C.

When Congress chartered the Smithsonian Institution in August 1846, the first Board of Regents chose one of their number, Congressman Robert Dale Owen of Indiana (who drafted the charter), to oversee the design and construction of the original Smithsonian Building, commonly known today as "The Castle." Not only did Owen approve New York architect James Renwick, Jr., to design the red sandstone building, but he was also a major influence in selecting the twelfth-century "Normal" style. When construction of the 450-foot-long edifice began in May 1847, Renwick brought down from New York John Cameron, a master stonemason, to oversee the cutting of the stone at nearby Seneca, Maryland, as well as the actual construction. Within a short time, Cameron erected these two Greek Revival row houses immediately behind the Castle both for his residence and as a rental property. The full English basement, handsome columned doorways, plain, classical, stone lintels, and dentiled cornice made them a welcome addition to Southwest Washington.

Cameron's work and history remain obscure, but recent investigations have revealed that he carried on extensive construction work in Washington during the 1850s. He was in charge of building Trinity Episcopal Church and the original Scott Hall of the Soldiers' Home--major architectural efforts during the decade preceding the Civil War. Cameron's building techniques were not appreciated in Washington, however, for the roofs of both the Smithsonian Building and the Soldiers' Home collapsed during construction. The Cameron houses remained in a remarkably good state of preservation (the iron steps and oriel window on the east, or left, facade were late nineteenth century additions) until they were razed in 1941 along with more than forty other Victorian houses and churches to widen the south side of Independence Avenue. The site today forms the entrance to L'Enfant Plaza.

Obsequies of the Late Colonel Camp

The obsequies of the late Brevet Lieut. Colonel E.E. Camp were held at the Church of the Epiphany, on G street, yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The funeral cortege having reached the church, the coffin was taken from the hearse by eight sergeants of the 12th United States Infantry, and at the door was met by Dr. Hall, the rector of the church, who read the solemn burial service of the Episcopal Church, beginning with, "I am the resurrection and the life." As the remains were being carried to the sanctuary, the organist performed a requiem hymn, after which the choir sang the psalms belonging to the funeral service. At the conclusion of the service, Dr. Hall delivered a eulogy upon the character and life of the deceased, speaking of the fidelity and assiduity with which he ever discharged his obligations to his country and to his fellowmen. He was in his last hours, as he had been through life, a faithful soldier of the cross; and when told that his hours upon earth were few, he said that he was ready to die. His character was without blemish. He had fought the good fight, and departed this life in the sincere hope of an eternal reward. The choir then sang, "I would not live away;" after which the remains were removed from the church, and were met by a battalion of the 12th infantry, with the usual military honors. The Washington Centennial Lodge, F.A.A.M., was present, together with the officers and members of the Hibernia Steam Fire Company, and escorted the remains to the Congressional Burying Ground. The pall-bearers were Brigadier Gen. Pelouze, Brevet Brigadier General Perry, Brevet Brigadier General N. Michler, Brevet Major General Chard, Colonel Potter, Colonel Taylor, Lieut. Colonel Crilly, and Major M.I. Luddington.

 Weep not for our dear father,
 His blessed spirit is fled;
 He sweetly sleeps in Jesus,
 Amidst the silent dead.

 We will think how safe forever,
 In that sweet home of love,
 The dear one for which we sorrow,
 Is now with his God above.

 The hopes of a fond wife,
 Lays crushed in gloom;
 The pride of his children,
 Lays cold in the tomb.

W.N. Campbell Dies; Played in Sousa Band

Walter N. Campbell who played in the United States Marine Band when John Philip Sousa was its conductor, died Saturday at his home after an illness of two weeks. He was 102.

He came to Washington after tours of the United States as a musician. He has maintained that Sousa was "too much of a showman" and "too conceited."

A native of Canada, Mr. Campbell spent his childhood in North Branch, Mich.

By 1892 he had ended his career as a musician. Mr. Campbell had earned a cum laude law degree at night from George Washington University and began working for the Federal Government.

He was among the first to pass Civil Service examinations taking them when Theodore Roosevelt was the Civil Service Commissioner.

Mr. Campbell's first job was in the Pension Office. He later went to the Interior Department, retiring from there in 1930 as an associate attorney.

But he had continued music as a hobby, playing the piano until an injury to his hand forced him to stop. He was also a water color painter and linguist, studying French, German, Spanish, Italian, Dutch and Russian.

Mr. Campbell leaves a son, Dr. Neil Campbell of 1613 Longfellow street N.W., the home address, and a daughter, Mrs. M.B. Skinker of 1615 Kennedy place N.W.

Services will be at 1 p.m. tomorrow at the Hines Funeral Home, 2901 Fourteenth street N.W. Burial will be private.

Funeral of a Greatly Esteemed Old Citizen

The obsequies of the late Mr. William H. Campbell were observed at the 4 1/2 street (First Presbyterian) church yesterday at 4 p.m. In the absence of Rev. Dr. Sunderland, who is in attendance upon the general assembly of the Presbyterian church at Buffalo, N.Y., the services were conducted by the Rev. S.H. Howe D.D., of the West Street church, in a most impressive manner. The casket was opened in the church, that the many friends, with whom and whose ancestry he had officiated as elder for nearly 50 years, might look upon the face of their friend for the last time. At the conclusion of the service the body was borne from the church by the four grandsons of the deceased assisted by Mr. Robert B. Tinney and Mr. John B. Wight. The honorary pall bearers were Enoch Pratt of Baltimore, Chas. Buckey, Dr. John B. Blake, Jordan W. Maury, Josiah Dent, Chas. Bradley, O.C. Wight and H.J. Frost. The body was buried in the family lot at Congressional Cemetery.

Serious Ill of Lockjaw

Harry E. Candler, a carpenter, 32 years old, whose home is at Falls Church, Va., is a patient at the Emergency Hospital for treatment of lockjaw. The physicians express the belief that he cannot recover. Last Thursday the carpenter accidentally wounded his foot on a rusty nail. Very little attention was paid to the injury until yesterday, when he suffered such intense pain that he called at the hospital. After receiving treatment he went away. This morning he returned to the hospital, his condition being extremely serious. His relatives at Falls Church have been notified of his condition.

The Evening Star, April 3, 1902, p. 16

Candler Refused Treatment and Succumbed to the Disease

Harry E. Candler, the carpenter from Falls Church, Va., who was under treatment at the Emergency Hospital yesterday for lockjaw, as published in yesterday's Star, died about 12:15 o'clock this morning, after several hours of intense suffering. The deceased was thirty-three years old. He was injured by stepping upon a rusty nail while working on the Long bridge a week ago.

When Candler called at the hospital for treatment Tuesday he refused to remain after his injury had been dressed. Had he remained at the hospital at that time it is thought the doctors might have saved his life. Yesterday he returned to the hospital, but it was then too late. His jaws were firmly set soon after he reached the hospital, and his death occurred at the hour stated. Relatives took charge of the body today.

From Dr. Phil Candy, UK, March 2005:

I have been searching for a member of my family from England who went missing some time after 1827, when he was apprenticed to a local man in Somerset England until the age of 21. His name was George CANDY, born in 1814.

I eventually found George Candy, born in 1814, who died in Washington DC, and was buried in 1899 in Congressional Cemetery; I also found the burial of his wife Mary A Candy in 1891. I then set out to track down his three children - all daughters. The first of the three children was born in 1840 in New Jersey (Paterson, from her death certificate); the other two girls were born in New York City, in 1842 and 1847 respectively. I haven't been able to find the family in the 1840 or 1850 Censuses, although I'm sure they are there somewhere.

That was all I knew until recently, when I found a marriage between a George Candy and Mary Amelia Sigler on 19 May 1840 in Greenwich Village, New York. Then I received the death certificate for Mary A Candy, and her full names were Mary Amelia Candy, so it all points to the fact that this is probably the same person. Unlike the Census records, the death certificate gives an actual place of birth, Deckertown NJ and this, along with her age in years, months and days allowed me to calculate her date of birth as 11 May 1818.

So the story seems to be: George Candy was born in England in 1814, and emigrated to the US in the period between his 21st birthday (1835) and marrying Mary Amelia Sigler in May 1840. She must already have been pregnant at the wedding, since they seem to have traveled to Paterson where the first child was born in June 1840. They then went back to New York, which is where the next two children were born.

Canter died Monday night at the Washington Asylum Hospital, aged 53 years. His funeral was held yesterday afternoon from the home of Mr. Frank Cox on Congress Heights, Rev. Willard G. Davenport, rector of the Episcopal Church in Anacostia, officiating. The interment was made in the Congressional cemetery. His wife and one grown son survive him.
Canter, Mary S.R.	d. 21 Apr 1895	18 yrs.	R8/71
Canter. Suddenly on Sunday evening, April 21, 1895, Miss Catherine R. Canter aged 18 years. Funeral service at Emmanuel P.E. Church, Anacostia, D.C. at 6 p.m., Tuesday April 23. Interment at Brick Church, Prince George's co., Md. on Wednesday, April 24. The Evening Star, April 22, 1895 A Double Tragedy Two Young People Drowned in Eastern Branch General Believed to Have Been an Accident-- The Bodies Recovered--Both Were Well Known A sad affair, by which two young people of Anacostia, Miss Katie Canter and Irving Lysles, lost their lives by drowning, occurred yesterday afternoon in the Eastern branch of the Potomac River, opposite Buzzard's Point. Both victims were well known in Anacostia. Both were members of the choir of Immanuel Protestant Episcopal Church, and both were universally popular. Rumors of a probable suicide on the part of each have been freely circulated in Anacostia, but careful investigation failed to substantiate such a theory, and there are no grounds for believing that the dreadful affair was other than an accident. Miss Canter and young Lyles occupied their usual places in the choir of Emmanuel Church yesterday morning, and after the conclusion of the church services agreed to take a boat ride on the river in the afternoon. Accordingly, between 1:30 and 2 o'clock they left Miss Canter's home on Fillmore street near Jefferson, where she resided with her father and stepmother, her own mother being dead, and went to French's boat house, corner of 11th street, Southeast Washington, where they hired a fat-bottomed boat. Lysles remarked to Mr. French, when engaging the boat that he preferred one of that sort, as he did not want one that would ever turn over. No attention was paid to the remark, except to comply with the ???, as inexperienced persons who go boating often select similar boats. On the way to the boat house the young couple met some friends to whom they spoke, and Lysles and Miss Canter both seemed to be in the best spirits. Seating themselves in the boat that Mr. French furnished them, Lysles took the oars and rowed a long distance down the river. On their way back and when nearly opposite Buzzard's Point, the unfortunate young people were seen to rise in the boat suddenly, and almost immediately both went into the river. An Eye Witness So far as is known, Chares S. Martin, a young man who has lived his entire life in Anacostia, and knew Miss Canter and Lysles well, was the only witness of the tragedy. Martin had also been down the river in a boat and was returning to Anacostia, and when about 100 yards distant saw the movement which preceded the fall into the river of the young couple. Martin hurried to the substation at Anacostia, where he told Sergt. Kerby and others that as soon as he saw Miss Canter and Lysles leave the boat he hastened to the scene. Miss Canter did not, he said, come to the surface at all, but Lysles rose twice and once seized hold of the boat. Even then Martin was too far away to render Lysles any assistance and, catching the boat, which was about to float away, towed it to French's boat house where it belonged. There it was found to contain Miss Canter's hat and parasol, which were properly taken care of.

One Body Found

Sergt. Kerby at once reported the facts to Lieut. McCathran, at the fifth precinct station house, and as quickly as possible the police boat Joe Blackburn, with Harbor Master Sutton in charge, proceeded to the place where it was supposed the bodies were. After several hours search that of Miss Canter was found a short distance from where she went down, and brought to the surface, and then taken on board the vessel. The boat conveyed the remains to the 7th street wharf where Coroner Hammett was communicated with, and a little later were carried by an undertaker to Miss Canter's late house.

The news of the double drowning spread through Anacostia like wild fire, and by the time Miss Canter's body reached her father's house a large crowd of people had assembled in front of the place. Among them were a number of ladies who were personally acquainted with the dead girl, and they were so affected by the sight of the dripping garments as the body was carried in and the knowledge of her sad end that some narrowly escaped fainting and there were many whose eyes became dimmed with tears at the scene before them.

As soon as the body of Miss Canter had been put in a proper place then shore Harbor Master Sutton returned in the Joe Blackburn and her crew and renewed the search for the body of Lysles, but up to 10 p.m., when the attempts to recover it were abandoned for the night it had not been found. The search was renewed this morning, and finally resulted in success.

A Great Loss

As has been already stated, Miss Canter was universally popular. She was also quite pretty, and her manners were such as to cause her to be a welcome visitor in any home. She was a daughter of Mr. George Canter, who has been employed in the navy yard for many years. Her stepmother is employed at the pension office and Miss Katie, who was just budding into womanhood, had the care of the household affairs. The Canter family has been greatly afflicted lately. A little more than a month ago Mrs. Downing, a sister of Mr. Canter, was taken ill at her home in Washington, and a second sister, Mrs. Rollins, went from her former home near Hughesville, Charles county, Maryland, to nurse her. Mrs. Downing died and her death was followed by that of Mrs. Rollins the next day.

Lysles was just past his eighteenth year. He was a plumber by trade and worked for a Washington house. He was a nice looking fellow and was respected as one of the best young men in Anacostia. He resided with his mother, Mrs. Albert Perkins at 321 Monroe street. Both families are completely prostrated by the sudden bereavement which has befallen them.

No Cause for Suicide

The young couple was acquainted from childhood, and it is understood were engaged to be married. There was, so far as is known, no opposition to the match from either side, and the wedding was postponed only until such time as Lysles could earn a sufficient sum to enable him to properly care for his wife.

Probable Cause

There seems to have been no reason whatever why Miss Canter and Lysles should wish to put an end to themselves, and the theory advanced today by an older waterman in reference to the matter seems to be the correct one. This was that Lysles had become tired while rowing and mentioned the fact to Miss Canter. She probably expressed a willingness to take the oars and they rose to exchange places. The met about midway of the boat, and in attempting to pass, the craft rocked and both were thrown into the river.

Coroner Hammett visited Anacostia today, and will decide whether or not an inquest shall be held.

Both Bodies

The body of young Lysles was recovered by the crew of the Joe Blackburn about 10:30 o'clock this morning in exactly the same spot as that from which the body of Miss Canter was taken last evening. One of the men on the boat who assisted in the dragging said that he was certain that his hook caught the young man's clothing twice yesterday, but that he was unable to retain the hold.

Coroner Hammett visited Anacostia today, and after a thorough examination into all the circumstances, decided that there was no reason to hold an inquest, as he was convinced that the drownings were entirely accidental.

The arrangements for the funerals have not been fully completed, but it is understood that it will be a double one and will take place tomorrow from Emmanuel Church, to which the remains will be carried from the late homes of the deceased. The services will be conducted by the rector of the church, Rev. W.G. Davenport and the bodies will be placed side by side in the Congressional cemetery.

Mr. Canter, father of the dead girl, said today that his daughter had often expressed a wish that after death her body should be taken to the church and permitted to remain there all night previous to interment, but he feared that under all the circumstances her expressed desire in this particular would have to be disregarded.

 Cantwell. Margret Dela Cloud, eldest and beloved daughter of E.J. and S.A. Cantwell, departed this life, after a short and painful illness, Thursday, July 21, 1887, at 5:28 o'clock p.m., aged 19 years 10 months and 12 days.
 The morning was b right, and balmy the air,
 And yet our household was dark,
 For the phantom of death had entered in
 To quench life's flickering spark.

 And Dela lay there with her dark brown hair
 And blue eyes hollow and dim,
 So patient she was, nor uttered a moan,
 Nor shrank from the phantom grim.

 Sleep on dear sister, and take thy rest;
 God called thee home, He thought best,
 From sin and sorrow;
 Yet free, may we all prepare to follow thee.

Mr. John R.P. Carpenter's Funeral

The funeral of the late John R.P. Carpenter, a well-known master plasterer, took place yesterday afternoon from his residence, No. 1008 25th street, and was attended by an immense throng of friends and relatives, including the organizations of which he was a member. In the parlors the remains in a cloth-covered casket reposed amid a profusion of floral offerings and here the impressive services of the Episcopal church were read by Rev. P. du G. Trapier of St. Paul's. After a last view of the deceased by the many friends the remains were taken to Congressional cemetery. The escort was formed of Washington division, U.R. Knights of Pythias, with band; Syracusians Lodge, K. of P.; Cyrus Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle, and the Veteran Firemen's Association. John W. Thompson and Chas. Coxen of the K. of P., F.C. Townsend and C.S. Tolsen of K. of G.E. and John W. Carr and Fred Mohler of Veteran Firemen were the pallbearers. After the hearse came the family, a widow with one son and six daughters, followed by the immediate relatives and friends, including a large delegation of the builders' exchange. At the cemetery Rev. Mr. Rapiere concluded the burial services and the burial rites of the several orders were performed.

The National Intelligencer, April 18, 1838
The death of Mrs. Chloe Lee Carr, widow of the late Overton Carr, of this city has left on the minds of her surviving friends impressions of regret, felt the more keenly in proportion to their knowledge of her estimable qualities; and one who has known her long and intimately cannot but give this passing tribute to her memory.
She was mild and considerate to all; unobtrusive and retiring in her acts of benevolence; calm and undeviating in her course of duty; and, whether we remember her as a wife, a mother, or a sister, we always find the same self devotion, and untiring affection.
Deeply impressed with the heavenly doctrines of her Savior, she offered an inspiring example in her practical illustrations of them through life; and this now affords to her orphan children the only consolation under which they bow to the bereavement of both father and mother in the short space of one month.

Heart Attack Is Fatal To John Carrington, Acting Fire Chief

Veteran Deputy Served 47 Years With Only 28 Days' Sick Leave

Acting Fire Chief Engineer John Carrington, who in his 47 years with the Fire Department had taken but 28 days of sick leave -- and that because of injuries received in line of duty -- died of a heart attack at 7 o'clock this morning at his home, 1526 East Capitol street.

Ranking senior deputy chief engineer, the veteran fireman had taken over the duties of Chief Charles Schrom when the department head became seriously ill with a kidney ailment January 15.

Chief Carrington, who was 68 years old, was preparing to report for duty today when he collapsed in the basement of his home, where he had gone to attend to the furnace.

His daughter, Mrs. Charlotte Heath, who lives at the East Capitol street address, found him in an unconscious condition and summoned the fire rescue squad. Efforts to revive him were futile.

Decorated, Commended

Department officials today pointed to his remarkable record in the service.

Chief Carrington was awarded the coveted ribbon decoration for outstanding work and heroism on the occasion of the Knickerbocker Theater tragedy in 1923. The district Commissioners gave him special commendation for his work at the Kann warehouse fire two years later.

In November, 1929, he received two commendations for work in two of the District's most disastrous fires both of which occurred on the same day -- the 5 and 10 cent store explosion on Seventh street N.W. and the five-alarm fire at a paper box factory at First street and Indiana avenue N.W.

Chief Carrington began his work with the department June 17, 1892 and was promoted three years later to the rank of assistant foreman, which corresponds to the present rank of lieutenant. On January 1, 1898, he was elevated to foreman (or captain under the present system).

Senior Deputy Engineer

His promotion to the rank of battalion chief came January 21, 1919, and he was made a deputy chief engineer July 1, 1931, after serving temporarily in that capacity for a year. There are two deputy chief engineers in the department.

Chief Schrom was taken to Emergency Hospital Thursday where he was reported "holding his own" today

In notifying the Commissioners of Chief Carrington's death, Acting Chief Engineer A.C. Buscher stated:

"He served the department faithfully and conscientiously and his death is sincerely felt by the entire department."

Among his survivors is a son, James W. Carrington, also with the Fire Department as a private attached to No. 28 Engine Company.

Other survivors include three other daughters, Mrs. Flora Cumberland of Ballston, Va.; Mrs. Margaret Gurley of Garrett Park, Md., and Mrs. Dorothy Raines of 1321 East Capitol street; another son, Frederick Carrington, also of Washington and a brother, Harry Carrington of Yorkville, Ill.

Carrington Funeral To Be On Tuesday

Funeral services for Acting Chief Engineer John Carrington of the District Fire Department, who died yesterday of a heart attack at his home, 1526 East Capitol street, will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday at his residence. The Rev. Dr. Enoch M. Thompson, rector of the Nativity and Resurrection Episcopal Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery, with Masonic rites at the grave.

As ranking senior deputy chief engineer of the department, Mr. Carrington had been acting chief since Chief Charles E. Schrom became ill on January 15. Chief Schrom is in Emergency Hospital.

Chief Carrington began service in the fire department in June, 1892. Following other early promotions he became a battalion chief in January, 1919, and was made deputy chief engineer July 1, 1931. He was 68 years old. He was awarded the ribbon decoration for outstanding work and heroism at the time of the Knickerbocker Theater disaster in 1922 and had received other commendations for outstanding work during big fires here. He was a member of Lebanon Lodge of Masons.

The deceased was born in New York in 1835. He had been in bad health for several months, although his condition during the past week was considered serious, his friends did not think the end was near. Early in life Mr. Carroll entered the grocery business in Troy, N.Y., and when the civil war began he enlisted at once in the federal army, and was given a commission as lieutenant in the 15th New York Regiment, Engineer Corps. At the close of the war Mr. Carroll came to this city and was appointed to a position in the government service, was employed in the pension office at the time of his death. He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, the Union Veteran Legion, and of the Masonic order. Two daughters, Miss Fannie E. Carroll and Mrs. Moses M. Swan, and several grandchildren survive him.

Death of Mrs. Sarah C. Carroll

Mrs. Sarah Catherine Carroll, wife of Mr. John J. Carroll, died suddenly of bronchial asthma at her residence, 113 4th street southeast Sunday night last at 11:20 o'clock. Mrs. Carroll had spent the day apparently in her usual health, retiring about half-past 10 o'clock. At 11 o'clock she became ill and passed away twenty minutes later. The funeral occurred from the family residence yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Carroll was born in the year 1835 in New York city, where she resided until her marriage. She at once removed with her husband to Troy, N.Y. At the close of the civil war they came to Washington, where she has since resided.

Mrs. Carroll was a member of the Baptist Church, and, while not taking an active part in religious work, was very much devoted to her church, and was a constant attendant. Her husband and three daughters survive her. The children are: Mrs. Emma Swann, wife of Mr. M.M. Swann; Mrs. Isabel Hammack, wife of Mr. Julian Hammack, and Miss Fannie E. Carroll, all of whom reside in this city.

Carter. In this city, yesterday morning, at 6 o'clock, after a long and lingering illness, which he bore with singular fortitude and Christian resignation, Mr. Daniel Carter, Merchant Tailor, aged 59 years. M.C. was a native of Plymouth, (Eng.) and came to this country, through a love for its institutions, which love he cherished to the day of his dissolution. He was possessed of a naturally strong mind, cultivated by reading and reflection. Through life, he was the firm supporter of the liberties of this country, honest in all his dealings, frank and sincere in his conversation, and regular in his devotions to his God; and in his death, he has given us additional evidence of the good cad of a life of strict morality and of time well spent. His virtues rendered him a citizen of high respectability, and his example will be followed by all witnesses of his goodness. He has left a parentless family to cherish his memory and emulate his virtues; and the esteem of their friends and fellow-citizens will assist in supporting them under their melancholy bereavement. His friends and acquaintances are invited to attend his funeral, from his dwelling, on B, near 3d street west, this afternoon (Tuesday) at 2 o'clock. Merchant Taylor. Carter of 210 Jackson street, Anacostia, received fatal burns yesterday morning while playing with Christmas toys at the home of her parents. Her mother had occasion to go to a store in the neighborhood, and the child was left in the house with a five-year-old sister. During the mother's absence the little one got too near the stove and her dress ignited. Her screams attracted the attention of her aunt, Mrs. Bridget Downey, in the adjoining house, and she went to the child's assistance and found her clothing burning. Picking her up the aunt ran to the yard and put her under the hydrant. She succeeded in extinguishing the flames but not before they had done their deadly work. Dr. Harrison was summoned and he found the child's condition was critical. All he could do for the sufferer was to relieve her pain. The child died about 6 o'clock last night. Coroner Nevitt was notified and he deemed an inquest unnecessary.

The funeral of the late Hon. T.J. Carter, Representative in Congress from the State of Maine, took place from the Capitol on Saturday last. The day was inclement and dreary, and a number of members having taken advantage of the vacation from Thursday to Monday to make short trips out of the city, the attendance was rather thin. Every thing was, however, conducted with great order, (under the direction of the committee of which Mr. Evans was chairman,) and with becoming solemnity.

The funeral service was performed by the Rev. Mr. Hawley, and an appropriate address was delivered on the occasion by the Rev. Mr. Reese, one of the chaplains to Congress.

leading teacher of dancing in this city. He was a native of Catania, Sicily. During the Tripolitan war his father joined the American squadron when it was off Catania, bringing his sons with him, and they all remained with the fleet until it returned to this country, when the family settled in this city. The father for a number of years was a teacher of music, and the sons about the year 1820 purchased the building at the corner of 11th and C streets, known for many years as "Carusi's saloon," and now as the "Theater Comique," where for nearly half a century the deceased taught dancing. He also taught that accomplishment in several institutions of learning, among them that of Kev. Dr. Keiley, in the building at the corner of 1st and C streets, known as the Old Capitol, where many of our "oldest inhabitants" were prepared for college over forty years ago. Many of the foremost ladies and gentlemen in the land can recollect when the old master taught them the slow and stately movements of the dances of the olden time. In some instances he taught the grandchildren of his earlier pupils. He was never married, and leaves a large

Mr. L. Carusi

I am happy to learn, from Mr. L. Carusi's advertisement, that he purposes to resume his old profession in our city. Mr. Carusi has been among us for many years, and his skill and success in teaching the youth of our city the fine art which he professes have been seen and acknowledged by all who have witnessed their performance. With that enterprise which has always distinguished him, Mr. C. many years ago purchased the first theatre erected in Washington, after it had been partially destroyed by fire, and converted it into a beautiful saloon for the accommodation of the citizens and the instruction of his scholars in dancing. For some time it was the only building calculated for such a purpose in our city, and used whenever a ball, assembly, or public meeting of the citizens was got up. On those occasions it was found to be a great convenience, and the liberal proprietor has often granted its use for public and other meetings. As an old citizen, who has spent a large portion of his life here, and has never failed, I believe, to give satisfaction to all who have employed him as a teacher of the "poetry of motion," I trust that he will again be patronized by the citizens as he has heretofore been, and according to his great merit and success as a professor of the art of dancing. I regretted to find that he had come to the determination to dispose of his fine saloon and remove from our city. But I learn that he has not been able to effect a sale of it, and has concluded, at the request of his friends, to remain among us, and continue to instruct the youth of our city in the art which he has so long and so successfully taught.

The Evening Star, October 22, 1896 Death of Carlos Carvalho The death of Carlos Carvalho, on the 7th instant, occasioned the deepest sorrow to his many friends, and was a profound affliction to his immediate family. He was born at Fort Mackinac, Michigan, December 13, 1873, and was the son of Dr. Carlos Carvalho, U.S.A., and Emma Bayless of the well-known old Washington family. Carlos Carvalho was in the 23rd year of his age. In all the relations of life he was unexceptionally a devoted son and brother. His loss is to those dear ones irreparable. He entered the National Bank of the Republic at an early age, and rose by his merits to a responsible position in that institution. His grandfather, Don Manuel Carvalho, was for years Chilean minister to the United States, and subsequently represented his country at London and Brussels, and was regarded as a most accomplished diplomat. The death of Carlos Carvalho was so unexpected that the announcement of his illness was speedily followed by the intelligence of his death. His remains were laid at rest in the vault of his great-grandfather, James H. Causten, at Congressional cemetery.

Her husband, who was the son of a former minister from Chile to this country, died in 1884. Her only son, Carlos Carvalho, a promising young man, died in this city a few years ago. His mother never fully recovered from her grief.  Mrs. Carvalho's maiden name was Baylis, and her family is well known among the older residents. She is survived by a daughter, Miss Maraquita Carvalho; a sister, Mrs. Hartley Soule, and other relatives. Mrs. Carvalho was a woman of fine attainments, and as a writer was always forcible and interesting. Obsequies of Senor Manuel Carvalho
We copy from the Indepence Belge of August 28 the following homage to Mr. Carvalho, who was so well known in this city as the esteemed Minister of Chili to this country for several years:
Yesterday, at 11 a.m., a funeral service was celebrated at the Church Saint Jacques Sur Candenburg in memory of his Excellency, Manuel Carvalho, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Chili, who died at Compeigne on the 25th of July last.
The son and son-in-law of the deceased were the mourners. Senor Erasmiz, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Chili to London, came in the name of his Government to render a last homage to his colleague. The royal house was represented by General Bormaan, aide de camp of the King, and an officer of ordinance; that of the Court of Flanders by Colonel Burnell, aide-de-camp of his Royal Highness. The diplomatic corps present at Brussels attended the funeral ceremony in full court dress.
Among the distinguished personages present, were the Cabinet Ministers then in Brussels, the Secretary General of Foreign Affairs, the Mayor, the general officers of the Civic Guard and of the army, the Consul General of Chili to Paris, as also the Consul of the Republic to Brussels and Antwerp, the friends of the deceased, the Chilians residing at Brussels, and the superior functionaries of the various Ministerial Departments, the officers of the Civic Guard and of the garrison. The church of St. Jacques was draped in mourning, and produced a most imposing effect. All the windows were covered with black hangings, and the interior of the church was lighted by the chandeliers of the choir and aisles as also by the thousands of tapers that surmounted the grand altar and surrounded the catafalque, bearing the arms of the Chilian Republic. During the service, a battalion of infantry, a squadron of cavalry, and a battery of artillery surrounded the church.
Before Manuel Carvalho, accredited to Brussels since May 27, 1860, had been, in Chili, Judge of the Supreme Court and Senator of the Republic. His superior capacity as a jurist, as likewise the correctness of his mind and judgment.

Carvalho. Yesterday at her residence in this city after a brief illness, Madame Carvalho, the excellent and universally respected consort of Don Manuel Carvalho, the esteemed Minister of the Republic of Chile.
The National Intelligencer, April 14, 1846
Letters of recent date from Santiago de Chili announce the appointment of Don Manuel Carvalho as Minister Plenipotentiary of that Government to the United States; and that he would, with his family, take passage at Valparaiso in the ship Hortensia, for Baltimore, to sail about the middle of March last, and may be expected here about the first of June.
Mr. Carvalho is very favorably known here, having made many friends on his former mission, which terminated some ten years ago on leave of absence. His amiable lady, one of our own country women, having enjoyed the kind attentions and marked civilities of the warm-hearted Chilians, now returns to us to partake of at least equal enjoyment in her own home. Their family and friends may be congratulated on the high gratification which their arrival will afford.
Married: Senor Don Manuel Carvalho, charge d'affaires from Chile and Mary E. Causten, 2d daughter of James H. Causten, Nov. 5, 1834, by Rev. Dr. Mullyedy.

Died, in this city, on Sunday morning at 4 o'clock, 1st instant of a pulmonary disease, Brigadier General Levi Casey, of South Carolina, in the fifty-ninth year of his age.
The fatal illness of this amiable gentleman was but of short duration; his closing moments were passed with that serenity which arises from the reflection of a well-spent life; his last breath was drawn with a calmness, resulting only from true fortitude and virtue.
Early in the revolutionary war, General Casey received the command of a company, with which, he gallantly assisted at the siege of Savannah, in the attempt made by the Americans and French to storm the British works. He was afterwards distinguished as a brave and prudent officer in the battles of Rocky Mount, Hanging rock, Musgroves, King's mountains, Fishdamford, Blackstocks and at the Cowpens, where, he performed very important services to General Morgan. Through the whole war he enjoyed, as a brave and valuable officer, the applause, friendship and confidence of General Sumpter.
During many years after the close of that war, in which his conduct was so important and successful, he represented Newbury district in the state legislature, both in the Senate and House of Representatives, and was, at the time of his death, on the fourth term of service in Congress, a representative from South Carolina.
The friends and family of no man have more cause to lament a loss of this land, than those of General Casey; for in sweetness and equanimity of temper, he was equaled by few; in the tenderness of affection, of domesticities, surpassed by none. He was from the commencement of the revolution, a uniform patriot; he has left behind him, the surest testimony of public confidence and private worth, the universal love of his neighbors. Painful as the regrets of his family must be, they will derive some consolation from the marked respect which was paid to his funeral by the national legislature. In this too, will the old revolutionary soldier participate; because, he will be in it, the memory of the brave is not forgotten.

Cassaday. Suddenly on Sunday, September 26, 1897 at 2 a.m., John R. Cassaday, aged 34 years.

Precious darling he has left us--
 Left us, yes, forever more;
 But we hope to meet our loved one
 On that bright and happy shore.

Lonely the house and sad the hours,
 Since our dear one has gone;
 But oh! a brighter home than ours
 In heaven is now his own.

Funeral from her late residence, 427 O street southwest on Wednesday, September 29 at 3 p.m. sharp; thence to Sixth Presbyterian Church.

Inquest Not Necessary

Death of John Cassidy at Capital Traction Power House

Coroner Carr yesterday investigated the circumstances attending the death of John Cassidy at the central power house early Sunday morning, and decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The unfortunate man, who was a splicer in the employ of the Capital Traction Company, was engaged with Samuel W. Woods in taking up a slack in the rope after the cars had stopped running for the night, when, in some manner, a half inch manilla rope, used as a guide for the wire rope, slipped and caught Cassidy so as to form a loop around his neck. The wheel, which was moving quite rapidly, jerked Cassidy forward and broke his neck, causing his instant death. The remains were conveyed to the late home of the deceased on O street southwest, to await interment. Cassidy had been in the employ of the railway company for several years. He leaves a wife and one child.

Henry P. Cattell Dead

Was a Retired Member of the Police Department

Henry P. Cattell, a retired member of the police department, died at his home at the Madrid this morning about 11 o'clock. Arrangements for his funeral have not been completed.

Mr. Cattell, who was a native of New Jersey, was born September 7, 1838, and was appointed a member of the police force September 17, 1883. He served as station clerk in several precincts and later was placed in charge of the property room at headquarters, where he handled thousands of dollars' worth of lost, stolen and abandoned property.

A number of years ago he did duty at the Baltimore and Potomac depot, and his last assignment was at Union station, where he was in charge of the police room. He was retired from the force March 1, 1912.

Mr. Cattell is survived by five daughters and one son. His daughters are Miss Fannie Cattell, Mrs. F.J. Mersheimer, Mrs. William Barclay and Mrs. Elizabeth Wood of this city and Mrs. Harry Ritner, Rocky Mount, N.C. The son is William Cattell, who is in the Philippines in the service of the Agricultural Department.

Forman, Stephen M., A Guide to Civil War Washington, Washington, DC: Elliott & Clark Publishing, 1995.

Cattell was an embalmer for Brown & Alexander and embalmed the body of Abraham Lincoln for the trip back to Springfield, Illinois. Lincoln's blood was drained from his jugular vein. A cut was made on the inside of his thigh, and a chemical preparation was force-pumped into the circulatory system, which soon hardened the body like marble.

Succumbs to Consumption and Is Interred in Congressional Cemetery

The funeral of George Samuel Catts, retired policeman took place this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, from the family home, 2143 L street northwest. Death was due to tuberculosis.

A native of Virginia, he was born October 27, 1872, and came to this city when a young man to work for a street railway company, afterward joining the police force.

For several years he did duty as a bicycle policeman in the third precinct making such a good record that he was transferred to the first precinct. Several years ago he was given the position of hack inspector.

When health failed he was given an indefinite leave of absence to enable him to go to another climate. He returned, but soon grew worse. Arrangements were made for him to go away again.

He was unable to go, however, Saturday afternoon death claimed him.

He is survived by his widow. The funeral was private. Interment was in Congressional cemetery.

Here follows a testimonial that flatters me so much I cannot keep it to myself. It is from my old friend and your old friend, John Hadley Doyle (Johnny Doyle for short), No. 3016 O street northwest (Georgetown):

"My Dear Shannon:

You know how much I am interested in your 'Rambles ' and I follow your digging up of the hallowed past, being of the old cycle class, with a high degree of enthusiasm; and The Star is to be congratulated on your work, as it is superb, (Quit yer kiddin', John!)

In yesterday's Ramble you mentioned the tomb of Mr. James H. Causten and the wonderful array of names and legends that adorned the sepulcher; and you, will pardon me if I inform you something of that splendid character. He was one of the leading characters of this city; a lawyer of national reputation, closing out his career as the international head of the Mexican Claims Commission, which he carried through to a success, pleasing to both countries, as there were many intricate claims of the war between the United States and Mexico in 1848.

His town residence was on F street, where the Washington Hotel now stands, a large and imposing residence, the scene of many brilliant social gatherings and attended by the elite before the stormy days of 1861. His country residence, Weston, was a large manor out on the Rockville pike and embraced all the land that is now being beautified by the erection of the magnificent Episcopal Cathedral. There he erected a large and spacious colonial type home that was the pride of ante-bellum Washington, but which in the march of progress being directly on Massachusetts avenue was demolished in 1906.

Mr. Causten and my father were great friends and I recall when a kiddie the pleasure I had in visiting the old ancestral place, especially from a boy's viewpoint, as it was full of the finest cherries, peach, pear and plum trees.

Mr. Causten and his people, especially the Young's, were of the best that old Washington produced, and it was sure some good memories your article created.

Yours sincerely,
John Hadley Doyle"

Death of Dr. M.C. Causten

Dr. Manuel C. Causten, well-known throughout the District of Columbia, died yesterday afternoon at No. 65 1st street, in the 37th year of his age. The deceased was a son of the late James H. Causten, who for so many years was the agent here in the presentation of the French spoliation claims. The deceased married young. At the commencement of the late war he was a member of the President's Mounted Guard—a cavalry company then under the command of the late Col. S.W. Owen—and entered on the three months campaign. Going to see some of his relatives near the Great Falls, some one betrayed him and he was captured by a small band of confederates. He was taken to Richmond and held as a prisoner for over a year. On being exchanged, and when he recovered his health, he was commissioned by President Lincoln as a lieutenant in the regular infantry and was soon promoted to a captaincy, but in the second battle of Bull Run he was again captured and taken prisoner, and for over a year he was in Richmond as a prisoner of war, and was then sent to the Salisbury, N.C. prison for exchange. On again being exchanged, having spent in four years over two years as a prisoner, he resigned his commission. For several years he was one of the firm of Ritchie and Causten, druggists, here, but for some time past he has been a clerk in the Second Auditor's office. Mr. Causten was a man of fine education, being the master of several foreign languages. He was very popular among his acquaintances. He was a Past Master of George C. Whiting Lodge, No. 2, F.A.A.M.; a member of Potomac R.A. Chapter, No. 8; Potomac Commandery, No. 3, K.T., and also of Harmony Lodge, Knights of Pythias. He leaves a wife and three children. His funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon, and his remains will be interred at the Congressional cemetery.

The Late Manuel C. Causten

National Lodge, No. 642, Knights of Honor, of which this gentleman was a member, at its meeting on Thursday evening, adopted suitable resolutions in respect to his memory. Mr. Causten was a charter member of National Lodge which was instituted in Washington in May 1877. He had paid in a total of twenty dollars and his family receives the sum of two thousand dollars. The order of the Knights of Honor now numbers in the United States forty thousand members, and is paying to the families of deceased members an annual sum of nearly half a million dollars.

The Evening Star, June 5, 1861

Private M.C. Caustin, Capt. Owen's Company, (President's Mounted Guard,) D.C. Volunteers, whose wife lives near Seneca, Maryland, twenty-two miles above Georgetown, went to visit her night before last, and was taken prisoner by secession troops, who crossed from the Virginia shore in a boat. Where he was taken to is unknown, but it is supposed he was carried to Manassas Junction, where the Confederates have a considerable force. His company are in a great rage, and suspect Caustin is a victim to treachery. The Mounted Guard took an active part in the late advance on Virginia and the occupation of Alexandria by the Federal forces, having been selected by reason of their familiarity with the different localities on that side the river, and the Confederates have offered a reward of five hundred dollars for any member thereof taken dead or alive, it is said.

The Prisoner

The last heard of Dr. M.C. Causten, of Capt. Owen's Mounted Guard, who was captured by the secessionists near the Point of Rocks, he was at Manassas Junction--probably en route to Richmond to be imprisoned.

Letter from Mr. Causten Somewhere in Dixie

The following letter, received in this city from Mr. Causten, of the President's Mounted Guard, has no locale mentioned, and otherwise appears to have been written under the supervision of his captors:

June 9, 1861

My Dear Father:

You will be much surprised, no doubt, to learn that I have been taken prisoner by the southern forces, and with no prospect for the present of joining you all gain in the old and happy family circle, in which I was wont to spend so many pleasant hours. I was taken on the first of this month, near Darnestown, in Montgomery county, Md. I have been treated very kindly by every one ever since I have been a prisoner, but as to what disposal may be made of me and my fellow prisoners will, I dare say, depend entirely upon the action of the Federal Government.

I do not suppose that it will be possible to negotiate an exchange of prisoners until after the United States Congress has taken such steps as it may think proper with regard to the Confederacy. If, however, such exchange can be made, nothing would be more gratifying to we poor fellows here in confinement. I am enabled to write this hasty scrawl through the kindness of Col. Strange, who has treated us all with the kindness and humanity of a Christian and a soldier. I enclose herewith a note from my three fellow-prisoners, which they, as well as myself, would be much obliged should you deliver it.

With much love to all of the girls, I remain, dear father, your affectionate son,
Manuel C. Causten

The Evening Star, January 16, 1910  Found Dead in Chair -- Suicide of G.P.O. Laborer—Mind Temporarily Affected            Charles Ceas, forty-one years old, committed suicide yesterday afternoon in his room at the house of Harry Riley, No. 658 12th street northeast, by shooting himself through the heart. It is thought that his mind was affected by reading religious books. Ceas was employed as a laborer in the government printing office. He was a native of this city, but was away from here several years. Coroner Nevitt was told last night that he had been employed as attendant at a local reformatory and later at the Government Hospital for the Insane. The coroner learned that Ceas had suffered from mental depression, and that only a few weeks ago he spent some time in a sanitarium in Maryland. Yesterday afternoon he failed to appear on the lower floor of the house at the usual hour and Mr. Riley went to his room to inquire the cause of the delay. On a chair near the bay window was the dead body of the man, while on his lap was a .38-caliber revolver. Ceas was in his shirt sleeves when he fired the shot. He had bared his chest by opening his shirts, the powder stains showing that he had pressed the pistol against his chest. Friends of Ceas told the police and coroner that Ceas had read a great many religious books during recent weeks, and the reading seemed to have affected him. He was despondent, they said, but none of them had ever heard him say anything about killing himself, and his death came as a shock to his friends and relatives. The coroner gave a certificate of suicide, and the body was turned over to an undertaker to be prepared for burial. The deceased is survived by two brothers and a sister.

Was for About Eighteen Years Connected With Department of Justice

Maj. Wm. Leigh Chalmers, who died last evening at the Mt. Vernon House, 9th street and New York avenue, was well known in this city, as well as in Austin, Tex., where he had been for many years prominent in business and political life prior to his assuming a residence in Washington.

Maj. Chalmers was born September 13, 1832, in Jackson, Tenn., but in early boyhood removed to Texas, where his father became secretary of state of the republic, under President Sam Houston.

In 1879 Mr. W.L. Chalmers came to this city, and for a number of years held a position in the office of the secretary of the United States Senate. In 1885 he was appointed to a position in the Department of Justice by Attorney General Garland, and with the exception of a few years was connected with that department continuously to the time of his death, having for many years traveled throughout the United States making examinations of the United States courts.

For several weeks prior to November 1, 1903, he had been engaged in laborious and exacting duties connected with the examination of certain United States offices under the Department of Justice in the Indian territory. On returning from the west about the 1st of November last he was in bad health, and on reaching Hamilton, Va., where he had a country house, he became very ill of pneumonia, from which, however, he recovered sufficiently to permit his removal to this city. The disease was superseded by and complication with an acute inflammation of the brain, from which cause death ensued at 11:40 p.m. yesterday.

Funeral services will be held at 904 New York avenue at 2 p.m. tomorrow, and interment will be made at Congressional cemetery.

Chambers, Mrs. ? Wife of John Chambers	d. 13 Sep 1821	40 yrs.	R27/93
Chambers, Benjamin Chambers. On the 7th instant, at the advanced age of 82 years, Benjamin Chambers. Mr. Chambers has long been known to the residents of Washington as one of its oldest inhabitants, his residence in this city dating back upwards of fifty-five years.  He was born in the mountain wilds of Ashe county, North Carolina, and was raised in the game region, acquiring his early education under the great disadvantages common to new countries. At a very early age he exhibited evidences of a strong and active mind, characterized by genius and mechanical talent of the highest order, the fruits of which may now be seen in his numerous inventions and improvements in the mechanical arts. When about twenty years of age he left his native place, traveled on foot a distance of over four hundred miles, visited the city of Richmond, Va., and volunteered his services, without pay, in the defense of that city against a threatened attack from the British army. After sojourning for a time in Richmond, Alexandria, Baltimore and Philadelphia, he settled permanently in this city, pursuing the self taught profession of a plate engraver, wherein, for many years he was best known to the people of Washington. He was eminently successful, being largely employed by all the departments of the government, and considered one of the best artists of his day.  The energies of Mr. Chambers were not confined to the business of engraving, his mind being constantly employed in developing useful inventions for the saving of life and labor. Observing the frequency of accidents from premature discharges in firing naval and military salutes, he labored for years in devising means to obviate the danger of such explosions. The result of his labors was a breech-loading banded gun, which, after the abandonment of the breech-loading feature, became widely known as the Parrott gun, and was of inestimable value in field and siege service during the late war.  It is proper to state that Mr. Chambers, when he invented his gun, had no thought of its ever being applied to the destruction of human life; but, on the contrary, was, as before stated, impelled by a desire to avoid the mutilation and death so often attendant upon the firing of salutes.  Another of his remarkable inventions is a means of preventing the counterfeiting of bank notes, which, considered as a work of art and as a result of untiring labor, is an achievement of the highest order.  Besides those named he produced several other inventions and improvements, all worthy results of deep thought and indomitable perseverance.  His walk through life was distinguished by wide benevolence, deep and warm affection for family and friends, an unswerving fidelity to his convictions of right, and the strictest adherence to truth and morality.  During the later years of his life he was afflicted with an incurable malady; his sufferings towards the close being very great, but borne with resignation and fortitude, until finally, surrounded by family and friends, he calmly and peacefully slept the sleep that knows no waking.	d. 7 Jan 1871	82 yrs.	R66/250

Death of an Old Citizen

Mr. William Chambers, a well-known citizen of North Washington, died yesterday morning, after a long and painful illness, at his residence, 1217 11th street northwest, in the 66th year of his age. Mr. Chambers was a cabinet maker, by trade, and, for many years, was in the employment of the late Samuel Kirby. Some years ago he was a messenger in the office of the second controller of the Treasury department. He had been a member of Beacon Lodge, No. 15, of Odd Fellows for nearly thirty years, and was a past grand of the order. He was also known as a member of the old Jackson Democratic Association. His funeral took place this afternoon, the interment being at Congressional Cemetery.

House Committee to Attend His Funeral Monday

Capt. John T. Chancey, special employe under the doorkeeper of the House of Representatives, where he had been on duty for fifty nine years, died today at his home, 465 M street northwest, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. Death was due to a general breakdown. He had been failing since October 15, when, for the first time in his long service, he had been forced to remain away from his post.

Funeral services are to be held at his late residence Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. John T. Huddle officiating. Interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

Capt. Chancey was a member of Federal Lodge, F.A.A.M., a vice president of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, a member of Washington Lodge, I.O.O.F.; Columbian Encampment, I.O.O.F., and of Farragut Post, G.A.R.

Universally Popular

The news of his death was received by members and employes of the House today with great regret, as he was loved by every one who knew him. He had the record for the longest service at the Capitol. As he had close personal acquaintance with each of the present leaders of the House, as well as the leaders of former days, the expressions of sorrow for his death were numerous and sincere. Speaker Clark, Representative Underwood, Representative Mann and others today testified to Capt. Chancey's faithfulness as a House employe as well as to his extremely interesting character and personality.

Rev. Henry W. Couden, chaplain of the House, remembered Capt. Chancey in the opening prayer and Representative Austin of Tennessee presented a resolution reciting his years of service and regretting his death.

What is understood to be an unprecedented honor will be paid to Capt. Chancey's memory by the House of Representatives. By the terms of a resolution introduced by Representative Austin of Tennessee Speaker Clark will appoint a committee of seven members of the House, to attend the funeral, which will be held early next week. Older members of the House say that they do not believe that ever before in the history of the United States a Congress has appointed a committee to attend the funeral of an employe.

He was one of the few government employes mentioned by name in the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill. For many years past these bills have been signed by Presidents with a separate paragraph carrying his name, as distinguished from the ordinary legislative practice of providing money for a position alone.

Held in Office by Statute

In other words, the United States government held Capt. Chancey's position for him by a federal statue, and nothing could get it away from him. As an instance of the high esteem in which he was held, it was recalled today that on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of his employment in the Capitol the House passed resolutions congratulating him and voted him a present of $2,000.

He was known personally to several of the Presidents, especially President Grant and President Taft. He had intimate relations with the White House during the Grant administration, and was fond of telling of a conversation he had with the President in the White House at one time when he was doing some work there for Frederick Grant. Whenever President Taft would see Capt. Chancey, he would ask:

"Well, how is the flag today?"

This inquiry arose from a special duty which the old employe had assigned to him for years. The flag over the House of Representatives which is hauled to the top of the staff at the opening of the daily sessions, and lowered at the end of the day, was a special charge of Capt. Chancey, who took great pride in seeing that the drop of the gavel never found him absent from the halcyards. Of recent years, however, he relinquished the task for one of the younger employes. The valuable historic flag over the Speaker's desk had been in his charge for years.

His Memory for Names

He had a remarkable memory for the names and faces of congressmen and he had so impressed himself on them that they rarely revisited the Capitol without looking for him. A remarkable instance of this was seen once when Roger Pryor, a member of the civil war congressional days, and a former justice of the United States Supreme Court, called at the House. The two men talked for a long time over sessions of the early sixties.

In accordance with long standing custom, the House will vote to the members of his family an amount equal to what his salary would be for six months and an extra $250.

Born in Maryland

Born in Charles county, Md., November 16, 1830, he was brought to this city by his parents when five years old. He resided here ever since. Alexander H. Stephens of Georgia had Capt. Chancey's name inserted in the appropriation bill fifty-nine years ago.

He was a member of the old Northern Liberty Fire Company. When a fire at the home of Senator Benton proved the necessity of a hook and ladder company Capt. Chancey and others organized the Metropolitan Hook and Ladder Company.

In the Military Service

That company, almost to a man, went into military service during the civil war as the Metropolitan Rifles, under Capt. W.H. Nalley. When on May 22, 1861, the advance was made into Virginia, the company, under command of then Lieut. Chancey, and acting on orders of Col. Stone, marched to the Arlington House, of which they took possession.

His wife, Mrs. Emily Chancey; a daughter, Miss Lillie E. Chancey, and a sister, Mrs. Emily F. Harper, survive him.

A delegation of pages accompanied the funeral procession representing the National Fraternity of Pages, which fraternity Capt. Chancey organized. Many floral tributes were sent

Fifty-Two Years As Special Employe On House Floor

John T. Chancey, who has had a longer personal acquaintance with Presidents and national lawmakers than probably any other man in the country, celebrated his fifty-second anniversary of service as special employe of the House floor last week.

Mr. Chancey to the crowds of daily visitors to the Capitol is, next to Speaker Cannon, one of the most useful and best-known men in Congress.

For more than half a century he has sat at the left hand of every Speaker, beginning with the Buchanan administration. While he admits to seventy-eight years of active life, Mr. Chancey, like Uncle Joe Cannon, is one of the young old men in Congress. It may be said to his credit that he does not look a day over fifty.

Two years ago he celebrated his golden wedding anniversary. When visitors to the Capitol who make his acquaintance express surprise at his remarkable health and activity for a man of his age, he merely smiles and says, "I will introduce you to the lady who has taken good care of me for more than half a century." Mrs. Chancey is a bright little woman a few years younger than her husband, a remarkably young looking woman for her age.

"My first recollection of our Presidents," said Mr. Chancey, "was that of Andrew Jackson. While I was only five years old, I remember it well. My family had just moved to Washington from Maryland. The earliest recollection of our life here was the presentation to President Jackson of an immense cheese by the residents. This was, I suppose, regarded in the light that a loving cup or some similar gift would be today. I remember well the people had set apart what they called milking day. There were farms all about the White House then. With the huge contribution from the residents, they made this enormous cheese and presented it to the President, who, I dare say, duly appreciated it, for such a present was considered a pretty good thing in those days."

Mr. Chancey's first work in serving the government was to help organize Washington's first fire company. For some years he was head of the Volunteer Fire Company. While engaged in this work he spent two days and two nights fighting a stubborn fire which almost completely destroyed the Library of Congress and threatened destruction to the Capitol.

"In this work," said Mr. Chancey, recalling his experiences with the early fire fighters of the District, "I remember I often came home in the winter with icicles hanging all over me, but I seldom had a cold. I have been most fortunate in having good health all my life.

"Since I have been at the Capitol," said Mr. Chancey, speaking of his work there as though it covered a few months instead of many years, "I had a four weeks illness, and I have had but very few sick leaves--an occasional day or so, now and then."

When asked to what he attributed his prolonged youthfulness of health he smiled like a teacher might smile at a child's foolish question. "I cannot say that I attribute it to anything in particular," he said. "I have no recipe for good health to offer unless it is plenty of sleep, plenty of wholesome food -- I never went in for dieting or any other sort of fads -- plenty of water to drink -- I never drank much of anything else -- plenty of work to keep busy and forget about yourself -- think of others."

Mr. Chancey plays the part of congressional chauffeur to the new members. This role is included in his numerous duties. "I suppose you might call me general utility man," he said when asked to define the varied services he has performed during the 17,000 days he has spent at the Capitol, when his annual vacations of one month each and Sundays are taken out of his working record.

With each new incoming lot of congressmen, Mr. Chancey has taken pains to escort them about and familiarize them with their new surroundings at the Capitol, which is no small task, as many representatives find for the first time after they once enter upon their duties.

And there are a thousand and one things to be done that the public does not think of in connection with the business of lawmaking that falls to Mr. Chancey's lot to attend to.

Mr. Chancey is chief protector of the two big gold clocks, one over the Speaker's desk and the other which hangs opposite the floor of the House.

"I remember one time by turning back the clock we saved a minister his yearly salary," said Mr. Chancey. "The minister was the Rev. Mr. Boynton, father of Gen. Boynton, chaplain of the House at that time, which was many years ago. Congress was about to adjourn when it was remembered that the chaplain's salary was included in a bill not yet passed, so I hurried over to the clock and turned it back ten minutes to permit sufficient time to get this through. This form of proceedings was necessary in those days and if it had not been done then it would have had to wait perhaps another entire year.

"One time the clock was turned back to consider some phase of legislation which Ben Butler was bitterly opposed to. 'Mr. Speaker,' he said, rising. 'I should like to call attention to the clock,' pointing to the big timepiece. 'It seems to be running backward instead of forward.'

"For two days and two nights during a session of Congress many years ago I got no sleep. There were two successive night sessions. Business was not conducted with the facility it is now since the Reed rules went into effect. Prior to this time, during an exciting session, the House was a perfect bedlam of confusion.

A few years before I went to the Capitol there was a famous place just across the border line in Maryland, called the dueling ground, where men of those days went to settle their difficulties. Dueling was not allowed in the District, and they went across to this Maryland place selected especially for this purpose. I don't mean, of course, Congressmen, when I say they. However, there were two representatives that got into a heated argument on the House floor. This was before I went to the Capitol, but I remember it well. One of the men was Roger Pryor. I think he was from the south. The other was John Potter of Wisconsin. Pryor challenged Potter to a duel, which was accepted. But instead of naming the dueling grounds and pistols. Potter, who was given this privilege of choosing, named a little room about ten feet square, and bowie knives for weapons. When Pryor heard of this he changed his mind and absolutely refused to have anything to do with the affair he had previously suggested. I think that is the last time I heard of any reference to duels."

Mr. Chancey is a staunch admirer of ex-President Hayes and ex-President Grant.

"Gen. Grant was a fine man," said Mr. Chancey. "He was very fond of children and they all loved him. Society was not scattered then as it is now in the northwest part of town. Then the neighborhoods were more compact and the people had closer acquaintanceships than they have now, since the city was grown so much larger. All the children of the neighborhood knew Gen. Grant. Whenever he passed them walking he would stop and speak to them, sometimes chatting with them for several minutes. Often I have seen him pick up a little child he was particularly fond of and kiss him. The children used to make it a daily habit to watch for him and greet him. He was one of the most popular Presidents with the younger generation, as well as the older.

"Arthur was the most dignified of all the Presidents I knew, and Hayes was one of the most democratic in his manner.

"Daniel Webster was an impressive-looking statesman, with his big head, his long coat and big brass buttons.

"Ben Butler was a splendid man, and I was very fond of him. There were lots of brainy men in those days, but they did not dress so well and make the well-groomed appearance that the congressmen do today."

Mr. Chancey has attended nearly all of the New Year receptions at the White House in the last half century and all the funerals of the notable men who have died in Washington or lain in state here, among them Lincoln, Garfield, Henry Clay, William Henry Harrison, Zachary Taylor and many others.

"Garfield was a fine man," said Mr. Chancey, "and I was very fond of Benjamin Harrison. Mr. McKinley was a quiet man, but a lovable one, and knowing him as I did, or knowing of his fine character as I did, I admired him exceedingly."

Mr. Chancey arrives at the Capitol every day between 9 and 10 o'clock, and he seldom leaves before 6. When he enjoys his vacations he follows President Roosevelt's out-of-door habit, although the exercise he takes is tame in comparison. For Mr. Chancey's chief pleasure is playing croquet with the young folks and children.

Mr. Chancey has only one child, a charming young woman, who makes a gracious hostess and helps to entertain the scores of friends who call upon her father, for he is a most popular man, particularly among the established Washington people who have known him for years.

The Evening Star, February 9, 1903
Death of Dr. Chapin
One of the Oldest Residents of Washington
Graduated From Columbian University at the Age of Sixteen--
Sketch of His Career
Dr. E.M. Chapin, who has been a resident of the District of Columbia during the greater part of the past eighty years, died last evening at 7:30 o'clock at his residence, 1020 17th street northwest. For the past few years Dr. Chapin's condition had been somewhat feeble, but with the exception of minor infirmities he had enjoyed good health. Yesterday afternoon while walking upstairs to his room he slipped on the stairs and fell. His death occurred a few hours later as a consequence of the shock.
The funeral will take place Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock from the family residence. Rev. Dr. C.F. Winbigler, pastor of the First Baptist Church, will conduct the service, and interment will be made in Congressional cemetery.
Erastus M. Chapin was born in Yarmouth, Maine, in 1820, and came to Washington with his parents at the age of six years, his father, Stephen Chapin, coming to this city from Colby University, at Waterville, Me., to accept the presidency of the Columbian University. He was one of the early presidents of that institution, and it is stated as a coincidence that Dr. Whitman, who was president of Columbian University several years ago, also came to that institution from Colby University.
Among the First Graduates
Dr. E.M. Chapin began his studies in Columbian at an early age and graduated from the school when only sixteen years old. He was among the first of the graduates of the university. After graduating he went to Georgia to teach school. There were no railroads in that country at that time, and the young man drove all the way to his destination in a buggy. After teaching several years, he returned to Washington and studied medicine in Columbian. When he received his degree he again went to Georgia and practiced his profession for several years, but later returned to this city and established himself in the drug business.
Retiring from the drug business he became a contractor. He constructed some of the first railroad lines in Georgia, and built a number of buildings in this city. Among others, he built the foundations of the Church of the Ascension and of the coast survey building on New Jersey avenue southeast. During the civil war he was proprietor of a livery stable on G street.
Was Deputy U.S. Marshal
In the early fifties Dr. Chapin was deputy United States marshal of the District of Columbia. Prior to the civil war he occupied the position of police magistrate of the District, and later was a member of the excise board. For many years he was superintendent of streets in Washington. He retired from active life about fifteen years ago.
Dr. Chapin is the last of a family of six children. He was married in 1854 to a Washington lady, who survives him. He is also survived by three nieces and three nephews--Ella M. Kerfoot, Mattie D. Ellery, Sallie B. Chapin, Edwad L. Chapin, Stephen E. Chapin and John D. Chapin--all of whom reside in this city.
He was a member of the Oldest Inhabitants' Association, and had been an attendant and member of the First Baptist Church in this city for about 50 years.

The Late Dr. Chapin

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Columbian College, held on the 17th instant, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the decease of the Rev. Stephen Chapin, D.D., who was for many years President of the College, and at the time of his death one of its Trustees, affects the Board with feelings of sincere sorrow and regret.

Resolved, That the long-continued and effective services rendered to the College by Dr. Chapin, as well in the department of instruction as in the promotion of the financial and other interests of the Institution, in performing which he endured arduous toils and made many sacrifices, claim for this memory a lasting place in the affections of the members of this Board, and of all friends of the College.

Resolved. That the members of the Board sympathize with the family of the lamented and honored deceased in the afflictive bereavement which they have sustained, and assure them of their sincere condolence; and that the Secretary of the Board be directed to communicate to them a copy of the above resolutions.

The Evening Star, August 14, 1875 Worship in the Woods Washington Grove Camp Meeting Camp Near Gaithersburg, August 14th Rain--rain--rain every day. During Thursday night we were again visited by a heavy storm, and although the rain did not pour down yesterday morning, yet there was a disagreeable mist which continued nearly all the forenoon, but not sufficient to affect the services at the stand. In the afternoon the sun came out very feebly, it is true, but drying up to a considerable extent, the ground.  Arrivals Very few visited camp yesterday, the threatening weather no doubt preventing them from coming, but among them were the Rev. Mr. Dice and the Rev. Mr. Haddaway, of the Southern M.E. Church; Rev. Dr. Edwards and Davis, Mr. A.G. Yount, Miss Grace Ladan and Miss C.V. Braddock, accompanied by several persons from Rockville, Md.  Sudden Death in Camp Yesterday about 1 p.m., Mrs. B. Charlton, wife of Mr. B. Charlton, and daughter of the late Mr. Thomas Havenner (the famous baker of Washington) died of congestion of the brain, complicated with paralysis of the right side. She died in about three quarters of an hour after the attack of congestion, and in about ten minutes after she was taken with paralysis. She has been in poor health for the past year, but has not complained since she came on the camp until the day before yesterday. When Dr. Tuck, of Annapolis, who is on the ground, was called in to see her today, she was past human help. She attended the meeting at 6 o'clock this morning for "Entire Consecration," and sat in front of her tent and listened to the sermon, little thinking that in less than an hour she would be wearing the crown she has so nobly won, for her life is a model one. She was a lady of deep piety, beloved by all who knew her. Her death cast a gloom all over the camp, the smallest child seemed to realize that the angel of death had been in our midst.  Immediately after her death, Mr. Anthony Buchly, undertaker at Washington, was telegraphed to, and came out on the 3.40 train bringing with him a neat black walnut coffin.  As the hour drew nigh, for the departure of the corpse, a large concourse of people assembled around the tent, and a procession of nearly the entire camp, headed by M.G. Emory, Rev. W.A. Speake, the Presiding Elder, and the Rev. Mr. Wheeler, of Wesley Chapel, followed the remains, which were placed in Mr. W. Williams' wagon and taken to the depot, where the coffin was opened and an opportunity to all was given to look upon her face for the last time.  Dr. Tuck, of Annapolis, has come to the camp, with a well stocked medicine chest which is, with his services, at the command of the camp, without money and without price--and such has been the case for the past three years.  The Evening Star, August 15, 1875 The funeral of the late Mrs. Sarah H. Charlton, wife of Benjamin Charlton, of this city, whose sudden death at the Washington Grove camp ground yesterday is noticed in our correspondence elsewhere, will take place from the residence of her husband, No. 221 E street northwest, at 3 o'clock on Monday afternoon next.

On Saturday, 15th inst., after a long and painful illness, Catharine Maria Chauncey, only daughter of Commodore and Mrs. Catharine Chauncey.
Her funeral will take place on Tuesday next, at 12 o'clock, from the house of Mrs. Latimer on G street. Her friends and acquaintances, and those of the family, are respectfully invited to attend.
Seldom have our feelings been more painfully awakened than in recording the death of this estimable young lady. When one so truly lovely, just entering upon the threshold of life, with hopes and aspirations pure and bright; with a mind highly endowed by Nature, and cultivated in the perfection of all the virtues and graces which adorn her sex, and which have shed so bright a luster upon her character, is taken from among us, it may be permitted to one who enjoyed the happiness of her acquaintance, to offer the last sad tribute of his praise and his respect for her worth. This young lady, whose premature departure we deplore, united, in an uncommon degree, talents and qualifications of the mind rarely surpassed, with feelings of the heart so pure, so disinterested, in all the relations of life, that they invariably called forth the admiration, love, and esteem of her associates. Pure and spotless, ardent and sincere in her friendships and attachments, it is truly said she never had an enemy.

Cheek. On Saturday, December 14, 1889, at 3 o'clock p.m., Mrs. Alvena Cheek, beloved wife of Thomas Cheek, aged 24 years.

Day by day we saw her fade
And slowly sink away
Yet in our hearts we prayed
That she might longer stay.

I was weeping around her pillow
For I knew that she must die;
It was night within my bosom,
It was night within the sky.

I have given love's last token,
I have parted back her hair
From off the marble forehead
And left the last kiss there.

By Her Husband

Funeral will take place from her late residence, 1018 South Carolina avenue southeast, on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Relatives and friends are respectfully invited to attend. (Baltimore papers please copy).

Dead Bodies in a Buggy

Resurrectionists Surprised by a Policeman Last Night

They Run Off, Leaving Their Ghastly Plunder, The Dead Bodies of Two Women--

The Owner of the Abandoned Buggy May be Able to Throw Some Light on the Transaction

The prisoners in the District jail last night heard, or might have heard, the wheels of a vehicle rattling over the gravel road near that prison. The vehicle was a buggy. There was a guard in advance of it and one in the rear. The driver was a rather good-looking man with whiskers. There was something in the buggy besides the driver, but whatever it was it was concealed from the gaze of the curious by a covering. The buggy and its guards came over the hills from the direction of the poor house. It was then after 9 o'clock, and the driver and guards hardly expected to meet anybody on the lonesome commons such a dark night, but in order to be on the safe side they kept a sharp lookout.

The Surprise

The buggy had not gone far over the hill before it was heard by Policeman Clinton, who was aware that cadavers were often removed from that desolate place known as potters' field and suspected that the vehicle contained a dead body. The officer quietly stepped to the side of the road where he could not easily be seen to await the approach of the buggy. The officer saw the two guards in the positions mentioned above and the driver, looking, he said, like a physician and became satisfied that they were lawbreakers. When the buggy reached a position directly opposite the officer he made a rush for the vehicle. The driver used his whip and the animal started to gallop off. The officer grabbed for and caught hold of one of the reins. The animal became frightened and nearly upset the buggy. While the officer was struggling with the horse the driver jumped from the buggy and escaped. In the meantime the two guards had run off. When the officer examined the buggy he discovered.

The Dead Bodies of Two Women,

one white and the other colored. The bodies were in a kneeling position, and the driver must have sat-in the buggy with a leg on either side of the corpses to keep them from tumbling out. The officer drove the buggy to the morgue and there placed the remains upon cooling boards. The colored body is supposed to be that of Mary E. Hawkins, who was buried in potter's field yesterday. The remains of the white woman had not been identified this morning. She had a very pleasant face and was evidently a refined woman at some time.

The buggy looks like it may be the property of a physician. The horse is about seven years old. It is a bay, with white spots on its body.

This is the third time within a year that grave robbers have made their escape from within a few feet of the police.

The horse and buggy and the spoke used in opening the grave had not been called for this afternoon.

The horse was seen this morning by a colored man who claimed that he knew the owner of it. He said that it belonged to an East Washington physician.

There were no marks on the bodies to show that hooks had been used in raising them from their graves and for that reason the officers thought that the bodies were obtained in potter's field. They will be reinterred there.

The Body of Mrs. Cheek

Dr. A.C. Adams Charged with Taking It From Congressional Cemetery

The Remains Fully Identified--The Husband Appeals to the Law

The Jewelry Buried With the Body Missing

The law against the desecration of graves by body snatchers is openly violated in this District night after night, but prosecutions for the ghastly work are few. Potter's field is generally chosen as their scene of operations because they can go ther at any time after dark and drive off with their plunder undisturbed. A carriage resembling that abandoned Friday night with two dead bodies in it, as related in Saturday's Star, has stopped at or near the jail many nights and been left there, it is thought, until its occupant or occupants could go down to the burial place of the poor and carry off a ghastly burden. Friday night when the buggy drove near the jail it was seen by the prisoners and by the guards on duty. The guards were satisfied that there were cadavers in the vehicle, but they did not imagine that any other burial place than potter's field had been visited.

The Bodies of the Two Women who had been taken from their graves were kept at the morgue Saturday afternoon. The officers there had been informed that both of them had been taken from potter's field, and for that reason no effort was made to have them identified. During the afternoon a young man called at the morgue and asked permission to see the body of the white woman, saying that his sister had been buried in the Congressional cemetery a few days ago. He saw the body and thought it was that of his sister, but when Station Clerk Tayman telephone to the East Washington station he was informed that the bodies had been removed from potter's field. He told this to the young man, but the latter left the station in an uncertain frame of mind.

Mrs. Cheek's Remains Stolen From Congressional Cemetery

Policeman Oliver, who had seen the white woman's body, thought that there was a look of refinement about her that is not often seen about persons who occupy graves in the pauper cemetery, and he was not satisfied with the investigation that had been made. He examined the body and found on an undergarment that was wrapped about it the name "B. Cheek."

The health office records were searched and it was found that Mrs. Alvina Cheek of No. 1015 South Carolina avenue southeast had died on the 14th instant of phthisis pulmonalls and was buried in the Congressional Cemetery last Tuesday.

The piece of clothing bearing the name was taken to the house and there it was learned that the name had been written on Mrs. Cheek's undergarment. This left no doubt but that Congressional cemetery had been robbed, although Mr. Cross., the superintendent, said that the graves were all right and had not been disturbed. The identification was complete when reached the morgue and there saw the remains of his wife lying on the board ready to be placed in the ice box. Mrs. Cheek had been sick for some time and had gradually wasted away until there was hardly any flesh left on her form. Her remains with the body of her infant, which was only a few days old, were interred on a knoll overlooking the Anacostia river and not far from a gate which opens into the rear end of the work house grounds. The graves in the cemetery are not rammed, and for that reason the task of opening the grave was an easy one. The grave had been refilled and the flowers on it placed where they had been left by the bereaved husband. The body was no doubt taken through the gate or over the fence and stripped of clothing. Then it was carried through to potter's field and there kept until the body of Mary E. Hawkins was "lifted."

The Dead Babe

The grave was reopened yesterday and in the broken coffin was found the body of the child that had been buried in the grave with its mother.

Policeman Oliver made a thorough investigation of the buggy and in it were found the grave clothes that had been taken from the body of Mrs. Cheek and a heavy iron hook attached to a long rope which had been used in lifting the body from the grave.

Dr. A.C. Adams Claims The Buggy

No one came to claim the team until about noon, when Dr. A.C. Adams put in a claim. He appeared before Chief Clerk Sylvester of the police department and made affidavit in the usual form, as follows:

"Hdqrs. Of The Metropolitan Police,
Clerk's Office

Washington, D.C., Dec. 22, 1889

Personally appeared before me, Richard Sylvester, property clerk of the metropolitan police district, A.C. Adams, of Washington, D.C., who, upon his oath, says that he is the owner of one bay horse with white spots on its sides and a top buggy; that the same was estrayed from him on or about the 19th day of December, 1889; and that the same is now in the custody of the property clerk of the olice dipartment. Sworn to before me this 22d day of December, 1889.

Richard Sylvester,
Chief, also Prop. clk. M.P., D.C."

The receipt for the property was signed a.C. Adams, M.D.

When the doctor went to the sixth precinct station to get the horse and buggy he met Mr. Thos. B. Cheek, the husband of the dead woman. Mr. Cheek, was greatly incensed at what had taken place. He questioned the doctor sharply, but the latter said he did not own the team. The police lieutenant told them not to have any trouble there, and the doctor drove off with the buggy.

Later in the day Mr. Cheek called twice to see the doctor, but did not succeed.

Mrs. Cheek's Jewelry Missing

Before Mrs. Cheek died she requested that her jewelry be buried with her. Her request was complied with, but the jewelry, valued at about $30, cannot now be found.

Mrs. Cheek's remains were placed in a casket yesterday afternoon and again her bereaved friends followed the body to the cemetery. The remains were placed in the receiving vault where they will remain for some days.

A Warrant For Dr. Adams

This morning Mr. Cheek was at the Police Court and swore to a warrant against Dr. Arthur C. Adams unlawfully and wickedly did break and enter a grave, then and there being in Congressioanl cemeteryt, in which grave one Venie Cheek, deceased, had lately before there been interred, and then and there with force and arms unlawfully, wilfully and indecently did open the said grave and take away the body of the said Venie Cheek, to the evil example of all others to the like offending and against the form of the statute," etc.

The trustees of Congressional Cemetery have offered a liberal reward for the apprehension of the person or persons who desecrated the grave of Mrs Thomas B. Cheek last Friday night. Although Mr. Cheek swore out a warrant against Dr. Arthur C. Adams, it is evident that that physician took no part in robbing the grave. The warrant was sworn out, it is said, in order that there might be a legal investigation that would lead to the detection of the grave robbers. Dr. Adams denies that he is or was the owner of the buggy in which the two dead bodies were found, and mentions the name of Dr. Beall as its owner.

Dr. Adams' Whereabouts Friday Night

Dr. Adams states that he was at the medical college Friday night at the time the body was stolen and is corroborated by the following paper:

"We, the undersigned, most positively assert that Dr. A.C. Adams was at the National medical college on the night of December 20, 1889, between the hours of 8 and 12 p.m., and that we were in his presence, and know that he could not have had anything whatever to do with the outrageous proceedings charged against him in connection with the Congressional cemetery transaction.

Dr. Adams Explains

When seen by a Star reporter this morning Dr. Adams said that the horse and buggy did not belong to him; that he dropped in at police headquarters Sunday morning to see if the owner had recovered his team and learning that he had not, he (Adams) saw Chief Clerk Sylvester. That official, he said, told him that would transfer the property to him if he (Adams) would sign for it, and he was also given to understand that the matter of his signing for it would not be made public. With that understanding he signed for the horse and buggy and the next day he turned it over to Dr. Beall and obtained his receipt, therefore Doctor Adams explained that he only did this as an act of kindness for Dr. Beall. "If I had known that there was going to be so much to do about it," said the doctor, "I would never have troubled myself about the case."

Chief Clerk Sylvester Denies

that he promised to withhold the information from the public. He says that Dr. Adams called at his house Saturday evening, and that Sunday morning he called at headquarters by engagement and made oath that the horse and buggy were his property and for that reason he turned over the team to him. The affidavit referred to was printed in yesterday's Star. Mr. Sylvester said that if the property did not belong to Dr. Adams at the time stated in the affidavit he did not intend to let the matter drop.

There is a Law Here to Punish Grave Robbers

It has been stated that there is no law in the District under which resurrectionists can be punished, but such statements are not corroborated by the facts in cases of that kind brought before the courts in recent years. Vigo Janson Ross, or Jansen, the noted resurrectionist spent months in jail for grave robbing. Wm. Bowie, Henry Stephenson and others also served time for a similar offense. In every case of grave robbing brought before the courts, the offenders have been given something like one year in jail. The prosecutions were on informations, and, therefore, not examined by the grand jury.

A Warrant for Dr. Beall

Policeman Charles W. O'Neill, who is also a member of the board of trustees of Congressional cemetery, swore out a warrant at the Police Court this morning against Dr. W.W. Beall, charging him with desecrating Mrs. Cheek's grave. He is the person who, Dr. Adams says, owns the horse and buggy. Dr. Beall formerly kept a barber shop in East Washington, where he also extracted teeth. He afterward received a diploma to practice medicine. He had an office at No. 114 6th street southeast, but when the police inquired for him they learned that he moved from there about two months ago.

Statement of Superintendent Cross

Superintendent Cross of the Congressional cemetery said to a Star reporter that he had frequently seen a horse and buggy similar to the one recovered passing the cemetery going in the direction of potter's field. His daughter has also seen the vehicle. Friday night, when the alleged resurrectionist escaped from the buggy. Policeman Clinton blew his whistle several times hoping to attract the attention of an officer who would capture the escaping lawbreaker. Soon after the whistle blowing was heard a colored man met two of the precinct officers and told them that he saw a man answering Beall's description on Pennsylvania avenue with a carriage whip in his hand.

Uneasiness Among Mourners

The occurrence has caused many persons to suspect that their dead relatives have been removed, and many inquiries to that effect have been made at the cemeteries. One grave in Congressional cemetery was reopened yesterday and the body was found all right.

It was learned that a body was recently taken from another cemetery and traced to a medical college. The work of the resurrectionists was discovered and the body was returned to its grave before the dissecting knife had been used upon it.

Dr. Beall's Arrest Ordered

The police in the various precincts have been notified to arrest Dr. Beall.

The warrant sworn out against Dr. Adams yesterday has not been served. The doctor will not be arrested, but this evening an officer will notify him to appear in the Police Court day after tomorrow.

Mr. Cheek was at police headquarters again today making further inquiries concerning the robbery of his wife's grave. He is very anxious to recover the jewelry that was taken from the body so that he can place it upon the body in accordance with her last wishes.

No Testimony to Connect Him With The Desecration of the Grave of Mrs. Cheek--

The Policeman Testifies Positively That It Was Not Dr. A. Who Jumped From The Buggy

The charge of grave robbing against Dr. A.C. Adams was taken up this afternoon in the Police Court. Dr. Adams was represented by Henry Wise Garnett and W.A. Cook. The first witness was Thos. B. Cheek, who testified to the grave of Mrs. Cheek having been broken into.

Property Clerk Sylvester's Story

Property Clerk Sylvester was next called and asked about the buggy which had been claimed. He testified that Dr. Adams called on him at his house during the evening of the finding of the buggy and asked in reference to the buggy. Mr. Sylvester asked him if he was willing to take the usual oath about the ownership of the property. The doctor hesitated about the matter and Mr. Sylvester told Dr. Adams to call at the office in the morning. In the morning of December 22 Dr. Adams came to police headquarters and made the usual affidavit as to ownership. "I gave Dr. Adams an order and he gave me a receipt for the property."

Clerk Sylvester Cross-Examined

Henry Wise Garnett cross-examined the witness and brought out the fact that when Dr. Adams called at Mr. Sylvester's house the witness informed the doctor of the obligations which he incurred by making the affidavit after which Dr. Adams refused to make the affidavit; and also that at the first visit Dr. Adams did not claim the ownership of the buggy, but simply that he had come after the property.

The receipt from Dr. Adams for the buggy given on the 22d was read.

The Policeman's Testimony

Officer Clinton of the fifth precinct testified to capturing the buggy at 17th and A streets southeast. There was one man in the buggy at the time whose suspicious actions attracted his attention. The man jumped out of the buggy. In the vehicle were two dead bodies.

The witness was asked if Dr. Adams looked like the man who jumped out, and the officer said no.

The prosecution rested their case here and Mr. Garnett asked that the case against Dr. Adams be dismissed. In summing up he said nothing has been shown but that Dr. Adams called on Mr. Sylvester one night and refused to say the buggy belonged to him, and came the next day and made affidavit that now it did; and further, that the man who jumped from the buggy bore no resemblance to Dr. Adams.

Dr. Adams Discharged

Judge Miller said that Dr. Adams was charged with the desecration of a grave, and certainly the prosecution was called upon to show what connection the defendant had with the case. Judge Miller said he was unable to hold the defendant on the testimony and therefore discharged Dr. Adams.

The Double Grave Robbery

Testimony Against Dr. W.W. Beall in The Police Court Saturday

The chain of evidence against W.W. Beall in the grave-robbing case was closed by the government before the Police Court adjourned Saturday. The defense will be heard on Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. After the recess Saturday there was considerable sparring between the opposing counsel as to whether the two cases for desecration of graves against Dr. Beall should be tied together or separately. Mr. Armes wishes the cases separated, while Mr. W.A. Cook was for consolidation. At length it was decided to try the two desecration cases together.

The Testimony

John M. Mitchell, the undertaker, testified to the two informants of the remains of Mrs. Cheek.

Mr. Cheek, husband of the deceased was called as a witness. He was greatly affected and nearly broke down as he piteously told of opening the grave and finding the little baby thrown back into the grave on its head.

Henry Wallingsford, the driver of the work house ambulance, testified to the identity and burial of the body of Mary Hawkins, the colored woman, in potters field.

Thinks It Was Dr. Beall In The Buggy

Officer Clinton told the story so often repeated in The Star of the capture of the buggy with the bodies of the two women in it. Considerable of a sensation followed when the officer said he recognized the voice of the man in the buggy as that of Dr. Beall; that he saw his side face, and to the best of his knowledge and belief the man driving the vehicle containing two bodies was the defendant now present in the court and whom he had known for many years.

Mr. Cook cross-examined the officer at great length, but was unable to shake the testimony.

The Steel Hook

Officer Oliver testified to the finding of the iron hook in the buggy the next morning. Station Keeper Garner of the sixth precinct station told of the delivery of the buggy at the morgue, and Station Keeper Tayman related how it was turned over to Dr. A.C. Adams.

The steel hook was brought closer to Dr. Beall by the testimony of A.B> Anderson, a blacksmith, who testified to making such a hook for Dr. Beall, and who thought, although he could not be sure, that the one found in the buggy was the same.

W.H. Gargus testified to selling Dr. Beall the steel for the hook.

Dr. Adams on the Stand

Then Dr. A.C. Adams was called to the stand. He said he was the demonstrator in anatomy at the national medical school. He testified to recovering Dr. Beall's horse and buggy at his request. When the defendant asked him to get his property he asked no questions but agreed to do it. The witness did not know where the college obtained their subjects.

Mr. Cook objected to this line of questions and switched off by asking the witness point blank if he paid any money, directly or indirectly to the defendant, to which Dr. Adams answered promptly, "No, sire; I never did."

Dr. Beall Seen in the Neighborhood

Charles Johnson testified to seeing a man resembling Dr. Beall walking in front of the jail on the night of the robbery.

Charles White testified to seeing a man, who he thinks was Dr. Beall, on 6th and Pennsylvania avenue walking away from the scene of the capture of the buggy by the officers.

W.H. Berguson positively identified the horse and buggy as being the property of the defendant.

Detective Raff told of the chase and escape of Dr. Beall at Washington Grove.

Said He Assisted Dr. Beall in Getting Bodies

"Brocky" White was the last witness called. He testified to having worked for Dr. Beall and having assisted him in getting bodies from potter's field. He said the doctor was a hard worker at his trade, making on an average of three trips a week to the grave yard after subjects. This closed the government's case and the court adjourned.

The Evening Star, January 9, 1890

Dr. Beall's Sentence

Six Months in Jail and $400 Fine for Two Grave Robberies

The Beall grave-robbery case was terminated in the Police Court last night. It is something of an unusual thing for the court to hold an evening session and quite a crowd of people, attracted by this fact and by interest in the case itself, gathered by gas light in the court room last evening.

Trying To Prove An Alibi

The young man who has already been referred to in the Star as interesting himself in behalf of Dr. Beall, whose name turns out to be R.J. Ewing of 459 I street, was the first witness for the defense. He said he was a tailor and lived with Dr. Beall and slept in the same room. Dr. Beall, according to the young man, was called out by a patient at about 9:40 the night of the grave robbery and was gone until 10 o'clock, and on his return the doctor talked with witness about "the weather" for several hours.

Mr. Armes' Belief

Mr. Armes remarked that he believed the witness was one of the men walking with the buggy on the commons when it was captured, and young Ewig or Ewing stepped down.

Mr. and Mrs. Marlow (colored) testified to calling of Dr. Beall at their house on the night of the 20th.

This was all the testimony the defense had, and Prosecutor Armes wanted to put Detective Raff on the stand again in rebuttal. Judge Miller did not admit the testimony.

The Sentence

Mr. W.A. Cock and Mr. Armes made closing speeches and Judge Miller summed up the evidence in a clear and concise manner. He characterized the offense as a misdemeanor and said it was strange Dr. Beall did not take the stand. He also commented on the round about way the doctor went about recovering his buggy. The judge in closing imposed a fine of $200 and imprisonment for ninety days in each case--desecrating the grave of Mrs. Cheeks and that of the colored woman--making a total fine of $400 and imprisonment for six months.

The Evening Star, February 12, 1890The Case of Dr. Beall

The case of Dr. Beall under sentence for removing the bodies of Mrs. Cheek and Mary Hawkins from the Congressional and Poor House Cemeteries was called in the police court this afternoon on a motion for a new trial. Messrs. Cook and Sutherland appeared for Dr. Beall and Mr. Armes represented the government.

Cheek. On Saturday morning, October 1, 1892, at 10 o'clock, Blanchie, infant daughter of J.T. and Virgie Cheek, aged 1 year 1 month 11 days.

Little Blanchie was our darling,
Pride of all our house and home;
But the angels came and whispered,
Little Blanchie, do come home.

We loved her, oh, no tongue could tell
How much we loved her and how well;
God loved her too, and He thought best
To take our Blanchie with Him to rest.

By Her Parents

Cheek. On Thursday, April 20, 1893, at the residence of her mother, Lillian May, the daughter of S.C. McDonald and the late Benj. F. Palmer, in the 23d year of her age.

Oh, tender and sweet was the Master's voice
 As He lovingly called to me.
 "Come over the line, it is only a step--
 I am waiting, my child, for thee."

Ref.--"Over the line," hear the sweet refrain,
 Angels are chanting the heavenly strain.
 "Over the line"--why should I remain
 With a step between me and Jesus?

But my sins are many, my faith is small.
 Lo! the answer came quick and clear;
 "Thou needest not trust thyself at all,
 Step over the line I am here."

But my flesh is weak, I tearfully said,
 And the way I cannot see;
 I fear if I try I ay sadly fail,
 And thus may dishonor Thee.

Ah, the world is cold, and I cannot go back,

A Tailor's Suicide
Frank Chelmenski Ends His Life by a Pistol Bullet
Frank Chelmenski, who lived at 1003 South Carolina avenue southeast, committed suicide last evening by shooting himself in the mouth. The deceased was a tailor by trade and used the front room of his house as his workshop, and with his wife occupied the rest of the house. His wife was in the yard when she heard the report of the pistol, and she found him lying on his back and the pistol in his hand still pointed to his mouth. Dr. Patterson, the coroner, gave a certificate of death by suicide.
The deceased was a native of Poland, a stout, heavy-built man of about 180 pounds, and was regarded as a steady man in his habits. He had been in this country about eight years and lived in Harrisburg till about eighteen months ago, when he came here and had since worked for N. Horn, Mertz and others, but a few days ago he opened business for himself. The only reason that can be assigned is depression of spirits from business troubles.

No. 311 D Street, next to the Fugitt house, was also built by Mr. Fugitt, and was the home of Dr. James Chestney for eleven years up to the time of his death in January, 1869.

Dr. Chestney was born near Columbia, S.C., in 1799, and became a resident of this city in 1847. He was a Presbyterian minister by profession, but was not actively associated with the ministry during his life in this city. During the later years of his life, Dr. Chestney was a clerk in the Land Office, but he was particularly prominent in the most highly educated circles of society. He was thoroughly conversant with seven foreign languages and also an artist in music as well as painting. With such accomplishments it can be easily understood how entertainingly and instructively he could talk in company upon most subjects. An only daughter, Mrs. Josephine Chestney Butler--a niece by marriage of the late Benjamin F. Butler--still resides in this city, and a son, Maj. Theodore Chestney, has been living in Montgomery, Ala., for many years.

Death of Isaac P. Childs

Mr. Isaac P. Childs, senior member of the firm of the Childs Brick Co., died at his residence, 217 R street northeast yesterday afternoon. Thursday afternoon he was found in his buggy unconscious and was removed to his home, but never regained consciousness. He was born near Philadelphia 67 years ago and spent most of his life in brick manufacturing. He was a member of the I.O.O.F. and of the GAR. A widow, one son and four daughters survive him.

The Evening Star, April 19, 1886

Locals

A drying sheet at Isaac Childs' brickyard between 13th and 14th streets northeast caught fire from one of the drying flues and was burned this morning. Loss about $2,000 most of it caused by water on the unbaked bricks.

 Courage, brother; do not stumble,
 Though thy path be dark as night;
 There's a star to guide the humble,
 Trust in God and do the right;
 Though the road be long and dreary,
 And the end be out of sight;
 Foot it bravely, strong or weary;
 Trust in God and do the right.

But, oh! Beyond the shadow land,
 Where all is bright and fair,
 I know full well those dear old hands
 Will palms of victory bear,
 Where crystal streams through endless years
 Flow over golden sands,
 And where the old grow young and fair,
 We'll clasp our mother's hands.
 Selected.

Funeral will take place from the residence of her husband, Isaac P. Childs, 512 Virginia avenue southeast, Tuesday afternoon, March 2d, at 2 o'clock. Relatives and friends respectfully invited to attend.

CHARLES B. CHURCH

Charles B. Church, one of the oldest residents and business men of this city, died at his home, 306 11th street southwest, shortly after 2 o'clock this morning. The death was attributed to diabetes and complications arising from the disease. He had been ill about one month. Mr. Church was hale and hearty until a few weeks ago. He contracted a severe cold while attending the funeral of the late Crosby S. Noyes, which took a deep hold upon him, and for a time it was feared that pneumonia would develop. This was avoided by the physicians, however, but diabetes, from which Mr. Church had suffered for a number of years reappeared in an aggravated form, and this, as stated, coupled with a weak heart, proved fatal. Mr. Church passed away surrounded by his children and grandchildren. He was eighty-one years of age, and the greater part of his years was spent in this city, with whose business interests he was prominently identified.

Mr. Church was a native of Maryland, having been born in Jefferson, Frederick County, September 11, 1826 His father was Shepherd Solars Church and his mother Eliza Cherry Church. He attended school for a few years at Norfolk, Va., but in 1840, when he was about fourteen years of age, he came to this city and entered the shop of William A. Harris to learn the carpenter's and joiner's trade. On the completion of his apprenticeship, in 1845, he went into business for himself and until 1876 carried on the business of carpenter and joiner.

March 4, 1847, he married Miss Matilda S. Harris, the daughter of his first employer, and their happy married life extended over a period of fifty-four years.

Establishes Lumber Firm

In 1861 Mr. Church, in addition to his other business, established the lumber firm of C.B. Church & Co., and that business was later transferred to his son. Mr. Church was prominently identified with the ice business in this city, having been one of the organizers of the old Independent Ice Company, which, from its organization in 1866 until it was absorbed by the American Ice Company about eight years ago, was the leading concern of its kind in this section of the country. Mr. Church was made its general manager upon its organization and in 1873 he was also elected its president. He held this position when the company was merged with the American company, and he then became a director in the company for this city, but retired several years ago. Mr. Church always took an active part in any movement for the betterment of the southwest section of the city, and as chairman of the river and harbor committee of an old business men's association he had a foremost part in framing the legislation authorizing the reclaiming of the Potomac flats and the building of the Potomac Park. Against his protest the harbor was fixed at its present width. Mr. Church wanted it from 100 to 200 feet wider, and the wisdom of the position he took, a quarter of a century ago can be seen in the fact that what he advocated then is now being advocated in the new harbor improvement plans.

While Mr. Church was chairman of the river and harbor committee the depth of the water in the harbor was increased from fourteen to twenty-two feet, and the channel of the river was dredged to twenty-two feet from its mouth to Alexandria. In 1852 a big freshet carried away a portion of the old wooden Long bridge the sole connecting link between the north and south. It was necessary that it should be rebuilt quickly, and after consulting older builders the task was given to Mr. Church, then a young man of about twenty years of age. He completed the work in about three weeks, and at a cost of several thousand dollars less than the city authorities had estimated.

Develops Southwest Section

Mr. Church was a firm believer in the southwest section of the city, and a large portion of his fortune was invested in building it up. To him the southwest owes much of its present prosperity. He built many rows of neat dwellings in the vicinity of his home on 11th street and he was one of the largest holders of southwest property in the city at the time of his death. In recent years Mr. Church has not engaged in active business enterprises, contenting himself with looking after his property interests. He was a very charitable man, and many will doubtless miss his kindnesses.

Mr. Church built Westminster Presbyterian Church, at the corner of 7th and D streets southwest, and donated the structure to its congregation. He was a worshiper there. He was a very genial man, and was fond of telling of his experiences in the early days of Washington, when the city was but a struggling village. He numbered his friends by the score, not only in this city, but throughout the country, and his death will be sincerely regretted.

He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, having received the degrees in Centennial Lodge in this city. Two sons -- Mr. C.W. Church of the firm of Dupue & Church, and W.A.H. Church of Church & Stephenson -- and three daughters -- Mrs. Alice V. Dupue, Mrs. Mattie E. Berkley and Miss Mary A. Church -- survive him. Mrs. Church died September 26, 1901.

Two veteran citizens of the District of Columbia -- John Edward Libbey and Charles B. Church -- both honored members of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia, passed away at an early hour yesterday morning.

Funeral of Mr. Church

The funeral of Mr. Church will take place from Westminster Memorial Presbyterian Church tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. T.E. Davis, the pastor, will officiate, and Rev. Dr. Bittinger, a lifelong friend of the deceased and a former pastor of Westminster Memorial Church, will assist at the services. Messrs. Ambrose H. Stephenson, Joseph G. Stephenson, John B. Stephenson, William A. Wimsatt, Frederick J. White and R. Harrison Johnson, all nephews of the deceased, will be the pallbearers. The interment will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Mr. Church was a charter member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, and his death, it is stated, leaves only one charter member, William H. Williams, 89 years of age, living. Mr Church was for nearly a quarter of a century a vice president of the association and the organization, it is stated will attend the funeral services in a body. Centennial Lodge, F.A.A.M. of which the deceased, it is stated, was the oldest member, will also attend.

The Washington Board of Trade held a meeting today to take action in the matter. It was decided that by the deaths of Mr. Church and Mr. Libbey the Washington Board of Trade loses two of its members who have been associated with the board for more than ten years and who served on many important committees.

To Represent Board of Trade.

The following named were appointed representatives of the board to attend the funeral services of Mr. Church: Cuno H. Rudolph, president; William T. Galliher, N.H. Shea, M.I. Weller and W.H. Yerkes.

The Evening Star, September 27, 1882A Question of Title

Mr. Charles B. Church, a lumber dealer of South Washington, was charged in the Police Court this morning with obstructing a public alley in square between C and D and 9th and 10th streets southwest. Sergeant Nokes testified that this alley is in the rear of a row of twelve houses owned by the defendant. It was formerly a private alley, but Mr. Church sold the ground to the government, and it was made a ten foot public alley, though Mr. Church continues to keep the gates at both ends of the alley. The court said he would continue the case until Friday, and gave the defendant until that time to remove the gates.

Handsome Improvement in South Washington

Through the enterprise of Mr. C.B. Church, South Washington improvements are being made daily in that section of G street, running on both sides, between 6th and 7th streets. On the south side, a row of handsome frame cottages, each having ornamental bay windows (a description of which has already appeared in the STAR) is about being completed, and will be ready for occupancy in a short time, while on the opposite side the spacious center building of two tenements, to be flanked on either side by four other cottage residences, is in the same advanced stage of completion. Within the past few days Messrs. George T. Davis and Edward H. May, carpenters, have commenced the erection of the four tenements to form the west wing of the row of ten, each of which will contain eight comfortable rooms, exclusive of bath and anterooms. Spacious halls will run through each, and the whole number will be finished in the most approved style of cottage architecture, having gas and water, with saloon parlors, high-pitched ceilings, good ventilation, etc. They will each have a main front of twenty and a-half feet, and a depth of thirty feet, with a twelve by twenty-two feet addition, situated on lots of over one hundred and thirty feet depth. Of the four tenements, the erection of which has just commenced, the inside two will occupy a recess of about ten feet from the front line of the centre and two outside tenements, but will be faced with plazas running their entire length, the front line of which will strike even with the main front of the protecting buildings. The center and outside tenements will also be adorned with piazzas, running in relief of the receding ones, while pediment roofs will add to the handsome appearance of the east and west wing, a French roof will adorn the center building, and the four inside tenements (two on each side) will have flat tin roofs.

These tenements (fifteen or twenty in number) will be occupied by such a class of tenants as will add to the hitherto good character of the neighborhood, and very much enhance its desirableness for family residences..

Our readers will find it worth their while to examine the ice advertisement in another column of Charles B. Church. He procures his stock from the Rockland Lake Company, which is celebrated for furnishing a firm and pure article. We advise all those desiring to be satisfactorily supplied with this indispensable luxury during the warm season, to immediately have their names registered on his books.

A History of the City of Washington, Its Men and Institutions

Mr. Charles B. Church is the founder of the firm of Church & Stephenson, lumber merchants, in Washington. Their main office is located at Maryland avenue, Eighth and Ninth streets, southwest, and their yards cover the entire block bounded by those thoroughfares. This firm is one of the oldest lumber firms in this part of the country, and consists of William A.H. Church and Thomas P. Stephenson. From their immense and well-stocked yards has come the building material for many of Washington's most prominent business houses, residences, churches, schools, manufacturing concerns, and Government buildings. At their yards is to be found the largest and most diverse stock of manufactured lumber of all grades and kinds. Nothing but the best that the market produces is furnished to builders here and everywhere by this reliable firm. It has always been the motto of this old and reliable establishment to accord its numerous customers honest and fair treatment, and furnish only the very best article. Upon this foundation the business has been conducted from its very inception, and today it occupies a high standing in the community of Washington.

Church Row

1871 - razed 1958

Architect: unknown

The seven houses that formed Church Row in the Southwest section are illustrations of the fact that new styles in architecture were often late in being adopted in Washington. Erected by lumber merchant and real-estate developer Charles B. Church in 1871, these houses would have been considered out of style in Baltimore, Philadelphia, or New York. They could have been built thirty years earlier. The most notable features to indicate that the row was built in 1871 rather than 1841 were the flat roofs and large sheets of glass in the sash windows. The entrances had arched architraves with heavy moldings. Above the three stories, with flat arched window, was a bracketed cornice. These were handsome buildings, nevertheless, and remained in good condition until they were demolished along with more than 2,000 other Victorian houses in the 1950s under Washington's urban renewal program.

Frightful Death on the Rail

A Man Beheaded

Last night about 8:40 o'clock, the day express train south was approaching this city. While passing Wilson's, about eight miles from here, the engineer (Baker Johnson) noticed a man lying on the track with his head on one rail and his feet on another. The engineer blew his whistle and attempted to stop the train, but could not do so in time, as it was within a few yards of the man when he was first seen. The entire train passed over him. When it stopped and the railroad men went to look for the body the head could not be found. It had been severed from the body. The feet were also cut off. The headless trunk was placed in a car and brought here, arriving about nine o'clock. The head, which was thrown some distance from where the body was struck was subsequently found and brought down on the Richmond train, arriving at 2:27. There was not a feature about the face that could be recognizable, it being one undistinguishable mass of mangled flesh. Searching the pockets of the clothing no paper could be found to give a clue as to the identity of the victim. The clothing was dark, of fair quality, and the hat was a Derby with the name James Y. Davis' Sons, Washington, D.C., in it. It has been ascertained that yesterday, just before the 8:30 train was approaching the bridge over the Eastern branch a man 50 years of age and 5 feet 7 or 8 inches in height, evidently out of his mind, attempted to cross ahead of it, and some of the railroad employees had to hold him. The operator at Benning's yesterday afternoon saw the same man there, acting as if his mind was not right, and he went on northwards. The through freight train north passed that point about 7:25 o'clock. The man was not there then, but he had been in the neighborhood. The general description given of the man, except as to age, corresponds to that of an old man, 76 years old, named John Church, who resided at 407 L street southeast, and strayed away from his home about 7 o'clock yesterday morning, since which time nothing has been heard of him. Mr. Church's mind has been failing for some time, and day before yesterday he got quite violent in his actions. There seems to be little doubt that it is he who voluntarily sought and met such a frightful death.

Later—The body was identified this afternoon as that of Mr. Church.

On Saturday afternoon Dr Patterson, the coroner, held an inquest on the body of John Church, whose head was cut off by an incoming train on the B & P railroad on Friday night while he was laying on the track. The jury found a verdict in accordance with the facts as stated in Saturday's Star, exonerating the railroad authorities from all blame.

Mrs. W.A.H. Church died at an early hour this morning of typhoid fever. She had been seriously ill for several weeks, but it was thought the crisis had been passed and her friends were beginning to be hopeful of her recovery. The deceased, whose maiden name was Maggie Clark, had lived in South Washington since her marriage some twelve years ago and was an active member of Westminster Presbyterian Church, from which she will be buried Monday afternoon. She had a large circle of friends, to whom she was endeared for her many traits of noble womanhood. She was a staunch friend, a devoted wife and daughter and leaves her sorrowing husband and relatives the memory of an earnest Christian life. The sympathy of the community in which she lived is with the bereaved ones in their affliction.

Funeral of R. Harry Church

The friends of R. Harry Church were greatly shocked Sunday to hear of his sudden death, following an illness of three days. Funeral services were held at the family residence, No. 2222 G street northwest, late yesterday afternoon. The interment was private.

Mr. Church had been in his usual health up to last Sunday week, when he had an attack of indigestion, but was much better and attended to his office duties Monday. Thursday morning he was brought home with another attack of acute indigestion and died Sunday at 12 o'clock. He was the second son of C.B. Church, a well-known resident of South Washington, and father of Charles D. Church.

Mr. R.H. Church was married to his second wife, formerly Miss Sauvan, not quite ten months ago. While he was a man of reserved and retiring disposition, his upright life and sterling qualities of character and generous heart endeared him most to those who knew him best. He had been for many years in charge of the American Ice Company's office in Georgetown.

A History of the City of Washington, Its Men and Institutions

William A.H. Church (20 Feb 1854 - 20 Jun 1931) was born in Washington, D.C. in 1853, the son of Charles B. Church and Matilda S. Harris. He was educated in the public schools of Washington, and Columbian

College. Leaving college in his sophomore year, 1873, he entered the firm of C.B. Church & Co., where he learned the lumber business, in which he today is so successfully engaged. In 1873 Mr. Church's father, then at the head of the lumber firm of C.B. Church & Co., took him in the business as partner. Today Mr. Church is the senior member of the firm Church & Stephenson.

Mr. Church is a director in the Citizens National Bank; vice-president of the Washington Asphalt Block and Tile Company; vice-president and treasurer of the Brennan Construction Company; manager and treasurer of the Fire Insurance Company, Washington, D.C.; is a member of the Board of Trade, Business Men's Association and Young Men's Christian Association; is prominent in Masonic circles, and takes a lively interest in all matters pertaining to the public welfare. Mr. Church was married twice, his first wife being Margaret, daughter of the late John B. Clark, doorkeeper of the Senate for a number of years, and property clerk for the District of Columbia. His second wife is Miss Mabel Spicer, daughter of the well-known commission merchant, O.O. Spicer, of this city. There is one son, William Alexander Harris Church, Jr. Mr. Church resides at 317 Eleventh street, southwest. Mr. Church is prominent in church affairs, being a member of the Westminster Church Memorial, on Seventh street between D and E streets, southwest.

Director in the Citizen's National Bank, Vice President of Washington Asphalt, Block & Tile Co.; Vice President and Treasurer Brennan Construction Co., Manager and Treasurer Mutual Fire Insurance Company. Member of Board of Trade. Prominent in Masonic circles.

Senior member of firm, Wm. A.H. Church Company, lumber dealers; born Washington D.C. 1853, son of Charles B. and Matilda S. (Harris) Church. Educated D.C. public schools and Columbian (now George Washington) University. Left college in second year (1873) to become associated with firm of A.B. Church and Company, and soon after was taken into the firm by father, C.B. Church, as partner. President, Mutual Fire Insurance Company, Vice President, Mutual Serial Building Association. Director: National Savings and Trust Company. Member - Board of Trade, Columbia Historical Society, Masonic Order. Married twice. Home 912 B Street, S.W. Office: 800 C Street, S.W. [Source: Who's Who 1926-1927].

W.A.H. Church, banker, financier and lumber merchant, is one of Washington's oldest and best-known residents. He was born in this city, February 20, 1854, son of Charles B. Church and Matilda S. Church. He has lived in Washington continuously ever since and has been engaged in the lumber business since 1875 when he entered it with his father. His present business, known as W.A.H. Church, Inc., is the outgrowth of a partnership formed in 1880 by Mr. Church and the late Thomas P. Stephenson, and operated under the name of Church & Stephenson. Mr. Church bought out Mr. Stephenson's interest in 1910, and it has since been operated as W.A.H. Church, Incorporated. Mr. Church is president of the company; C.W. Church, vice-president; T. Paul Speake, treasurer, and E.G. Lorenz, auditor and secretary.

In his business career, Mr Church has been a leader and an associate in many of Washington's outstanding enterprises. He is a director of the National Savings & Trust Company; president of the Mutual Fire Insurance Company; director of the Chapin & Sacks Corporation; vice president of the Mutual Serial Building Association; formerly director, president and chairman of the Board of the Commercial National Bank; member of the Board of Trade, and of the Chamber of Commerce.

During the World War, Mr. Church gave patriotic and untiring service as a member of the District Draft Board Number Four. He served continuously in this during the entire period of the war, not abandoning the work until the last man in the District of Columbia who was eligible was enrolled in the military service. In this connection he is particularly proud of the fact that he was also able to offer his own son to his country. As soon as the boy, his only son, was eighteen, he took him to an army recruiting office and saw him enrolled in Uncle Sam's fighting forces.

Mr. Church is also particularly proud that the beautiful drives and parks that have taken the place of the river flats and lowlands along the Potomac came through the suggestion of his father. The elder Church was a resident of Washington for sixty-seven years, and it was he that first suggested this civic improvement that has added so much to the beauty and improvement of the Capital.

The education of Mr. Church came through attendance at the old Fourth District Public School, and at Columbian (now George Washington) University, which he entered in 1870. Many of those who have been prominent in the affairs of the Nation's Capital, but most of whom have now passed on, attended the old Fourth District School with Mr. Church. The school was then taught by the late John E. Thompson, particularly well-known at the time as a teacher, and around whom and the school, much sentiment still abounds. Snowball battles were the vogue of the day with school pupils and many hard-fought battles between the Fourth District school and other schools of South Washington are to be recalled by the older Washington residents as having occupied places of much interest in the winters of 1867-68 and '69.

Mr. Church obtained his first financial training in the old Citizens National Bank, for many years one of Washington's leading financial institutions, but which was absorbed several years ago by the Metropolitan National Bank. Later, he was one of the organizers of the Commercial National Bank.

Mr. Church is a member of the Columbia Historical Society, the National Geographic Society, the Oldest Inhabitants' Society, Lebanon Lodge (Masonic), Excelsior Lodge (Odd Fellows), and the South Washington

Citizens' Association. He has also been a member of the Westminster Presbyterian Church for the past fifty-one years.

Mr. Church has been twice married, and has two children, a son, William A.H. Church, Jr., and a daughter, Virginia J. Church. His first wife was Margaret E. Clark, whom he married in Washington in December, 1880, who died in 1892. The second marriage came in October, 1899, when he was married to Mabel Spicer, daughter of the late O.O. Spicer. The Church residence is at 912 "B" Street, South Washington, D.C. [Prominent Personages of the Nation's Capitol, 19??]

Death of James Ciscle

Doorkeeper of Long Service at White House Passes Away

James Ciscle, for thirty years a doorkeeper at the White House, died shortly before noon today at his home, 504 B street southeast. Death was due to a complication of diseases. Mr. Ciscle had been ill for nearly three months. He retired from his post at the White House on account of ill health January 31. His wife, Mrs. Annie L. Ciscle, and one daughter, Miss Mabel, survive him. Arrangements for he funeral have not yet been completed.

Mr. Ciscle was prominently identified with a number of secret societies, among the organizations in which he held membership being Naval Lodge, No. 4, F.A.A.M.; Washington Naval Chapter, No. 6, R.A.M.; Orient Commandery, No. 5, K.T., and Almas Temple, Mystic Shrine. He was also past state councillor J.O.U.A.M., and past commander of Graham Camp, Sons of Veterans.

Funeral of James Ciscle Tomorrow Afternoon

Services at the Grave to Be Under Auspices of the Masonic Fraternity

Impressive ceremonies over the remains of James Ciscle will be held tomorrow afternoon. Services will be held at the Second Baptist Church, 4th street and Virginia avenue southeast, at 3 o'clock p.m., and also at the grave. The ceremonies in the cemetery will be under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity, and will be of the most solemn character. Interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

The death of James Ciscle occurred Thursday at his home, 504 B street southeast. For thirteen years he was a doorkeeper at the White House, and after his retirement he was appointed chief of the secret service at the Jamestown exposition, but was forced by ill health to give up that position, being succeeded by C.B. Peyton of Washington, who has since resigned. He was a great favorite with the Roosevelt children.

Archie, it is said, being particularly fond of him. A telegram was sent to President Roosevelt at Oyster Bay, notifying him of Mr. Ciscle's death.

James Ciscle was born in the District of Columbia, and was the son of Thomas Ciscle, a veteran of the civil war. He was educated in the public schools, and learned the heating and tinning trade. After serving in the United States Navy he engaged in the heating and tinning business, conducting an establishment a number of years in East Washington. Later he accepted an appointment on the police force. As an officer of the law he rendered efficient service, and he received merited praise from his superior officers for his faithful and conscientious performance of duty.

Loyal to Duty

His reputation for fearless and loyal attention to duty resulted in his being detailed for service at the White House, where he served during the administrations of four Presidents -- Cleveland, Harrison, McKinley and Roosevelt. While on duty there he became noted because of his knowledge of cranks who sought by various subterfuges and schemes to interview the several Presidents who occupied the White House during his guardianship at its portals.

One of Mr. Ciscle's noted experiences with desperate cranks occurred October 5, 1903, while he was conveying Philip Elliott, a demented Swede, to the station house in the wagon of the house of detention. Elliott drew a big pistol from its place of concealment on his person and attempted to shoot Ciscle. The latter sprang upon the Swede as he was trying to escape through the window of the vehicle. A jagged piece of glass cut through Ciscle's clothing and made a long and deep wound in his arm. After a desperate struggle Elliott was overpowered and conveyed to the lock-up. He was afterward sent to the insane asylum. Mr. Ciscle was detained at his home some time by the wound he had received in protecting the President from a maniac.

Fraternal Relations

James Ciscle was an honored member of the following organizations: Naval Lodge, No. 4, F.A.A.M.; Naval Chapter, No. 6, R.A.M.; Orient Commandery, No. 5, Knights Templar; Almas Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine; past state counsellor, Jr. O.U.A.M.; Old Glory Council, No. 24, Jr. O.U.A.M.; past commander Graham Camp, Sons of Veterans.

He retired from his position as one of the guardians of the White House January 31, 1906, and soon thereafter accepted the position of chief of detectives of the Jamestown exposition.

Funeral Services Held

Interment of James Ciscle Under Masonic Auspices

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon over the remains of James Ciscle, for thirteen years doorkeeper at the White House and recently chief of detectives at the Jamestown exposition, who died last Thursday, as stated in The Star. Interment was in Congressional cemetery. Services were held at his late residence, 504 B street southeast, and later at the Second Baptist Church, where Rev. Benjamin Clayton officiated. These services were particularly impressive. Many floral tributes were sent by Mr. Ciscle's friends and by various organizations, to which he belonged. There was a handsome wreath from Secretary Loeb and one from the office force at the White House.

The services at the grave were conducted by Orient Commandery, No. 5, Knights Templar, and were in accordance with the Masonic ritual, Mr. Ciscle having been a prominent member of that fraternity. The pallbearers were W.S. Parker, F.L. Carson, J.H. Hoover, E.J. Hollis, W.H. Andrews, H.I. Meador, Samuel Schrivener and W.E. Owens.

Dies Among Strangers
Mrs. Elizabeth Claggett Closes Her Career in Almshouse Hospital
Mrs. Elizabeth Claggett, apparently more than 50 years old, died in the almshouse hospital this morning with no relatives or friends about her bedside to say to her a comforting word. She had relatives by marriage, it is stated, both in this city and Maryland.
Mrs. Claggett was a widow whose husband died and left her to subsist upon her own resources several years ago. Since then she has been employed in the government printing office, but during recent years, it is said, she had a hard struggle to keep soul and body together. She lived in an office building at 458 Louisiana avenue for a long time, but for some reason moved away. Last September she returned to this building and rented the back room on the third floor, paying $5 a month rent. Two months ago she said she was no longer able to pay this amount of rent and she moved to a little attic room.
Two weeks or more ago she complained of being sick. Her only friend, so far as was known, was Mrs. Annie McCarthy. She called on Mrs. Claggett at irregular intervals, and was instrumental in having her sent to the hospital. More than a week ago application for her removal to a hospital was made to Sanitary Officer Frank, but when the ambulance was sent for her she was not in a condition to be moved. She was too weak to put on her clothes, and the sanitary officer sent for Mrs. McLeod, one of the police matrons. The matron dressed her and she was removed to the hospital. Since then Mrs. McCarthy has interested herself in the case and called on the police. She said yesterday that the unfortunate woman had her life insured for at least $100, which would pay for her decent burial. A brother of the dead woman, she said, is connected with the custom house at Montreal. Mrs. Claggett was a native of Canada.
Major Sylvester today telegraphed information of the woman's death to her brother and asked what disposition should be made of the body.
The Evening Star, August 24, 1898
Burial of Mrs. Claggett
Mr. Kemp's Efforts to Prevent Interment in Potter's Field
Chief Clerk J. Arthur Kemp of the police department is doing his utmost to prevent the burial of the body of Mrs. Elizabeth E. Claggett in potter's field. She is the woman who died in the almshouse hospital early yesterday morning, as published in yesterday's Star. Her brother in the Montreal custom house was notified of her death, but no response has been received from him. It was stated yesterday that the woman had relatives in this city, as well as in Montreal, but no one has yet come forward to claim the body or offer any assistance. It was also stated that her life was insured for about $100, and it was to find her insurance papers that Mr. Kemp made a thorough search of her room in an office building adjoining the District building this afternoon. He failed to find any such papers, however, but did find papers to show that she has been receiving a pension of $8 a month.
Her pension papers give her name as Elizabeth E. Claggett, widow of Harrison C. Claggett, alias William Leroy, who was a member of Battery G, 4th Artillery. In the directory the woman's name appears as Elizabeth E. Claggett, widow of Cornelius H. Claggett.
Chief Clerk Kemp learned that the unfortunate woman had two children, who are with relatives in Montreal. It was Mr. Kemp's effort to find something to guarantee the expenses of a decent funeral. The cheapest funeral in a cemetery where white and colored people are buried is $24, while $40 will pay for interment in another cemetery.

Among the woman's effects were many letters, mostly from relatives in Montreal, while some few were addressed to J.H. Hatch, who, it is thought, was the woman's first husband. Several years ago Mrs. Clagett lived at 625 F street and also at 609 F street.

Besides a set of furniture in the attic room are two large trunks, well filled with clothing, and a number of pictures. With the little pension money due Mrs. Clagett and a few small contributions, Chief Clerk Kemp will be able to prevent interment in potter's field.

Late this afternoon Chief Clerk Kemp was informed that Mrs. Clagett's first husband was John H. Hatch, who was a clerk in the Treasury Department. Among her effects was found a paper to show that Mr. Hatch was a member of a Masonic relief association.

Buried in Congressional Cemetery

The body of Elizabeth E. Clagett, who died in the Almshouse Hospital Tuesday morning, as heretofore published in The Star, found a resting place this afternoon in Congressional cemetery beside the body of her departed husband, who died a number of years ago. Mrs. Annie McCarthy, who took such a deep interest in the case and assisted Chief Clerk Kemp of the police department in the matter, is the one who learned of the burial place of Mr. Clagett's body. It turned out that Mrs. Clagett's life was insured for $135, and this money will be drawn upon in defraying the funeral expenses.

Clapham, John C. The Evening Star, September 16, 1864 Death of Capt. Clapham Capt. Clapham, who has for about twenty years past had charge of the pyrotechnist's department of the Navy Yard, died yesterday morning at his residence on K street south, near the Navy Yard, in the 58th year of his age. Mr. Clapham entered the service in 1837, as a gunner, having been appointed from New York, and stood at the time of his death second on the list. Mr. Clapham was a highly popular officer, and as a citizen he was universally respected, no man in the ward standing higher in the estimation of the community than he. He for many years was a member of the East Washington Methodist Church and of Washington Naval Lodge of Masons, of the latter being a Worshipful Master. His funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon, from the church, and will be attended by the lodge. Mr. C. has been suffering with a cancer for a long time past. On the receipt of the news of his death at the yard yesterday, work in his department was suspended until after the funeral, and the laboratory was draped in mourning.	d. 15 Sep 1864	57 yrs.	R82/223
The Evening Star, September 19, 1864 Funerals. On Saturday afternoon, the funeral of the late John Clapham, gunner U.S.. Navy, and pyrotechnist at the Navy Yard, took place from the East Washington Methodist Church, where there was a large assemblage of the numerous friends of the deceased, including a large number of the employees of the Yard. The services, which were of a highly interesting character, were conducted by Revs. Messrs. Sipes and Lanahan, after which the cortege moved to the Congressional Cemetery, under the escort of the Grand and Naval Lodges of Masons; the following acting as pall bearers; Messrs. Ellis, Marks, Holroyd, Gunnell, Davis and Boyd—where the remains were interred.	History of the Naval Lodge, No. 4, F.A.A.M. John C. Clapham, installed as Worshipful Master in Jan., 1864, was a highly respected citizen of East Washington and for many years filled a responsible position in the Washington Navy Yard. He affiliated with Naval Lodge May 3, 1856, and served as Junior and Senior Warden, 1858 to 1862. During the fragment of a year in which he occupied the East he was in declining health and obliged to be absent from many of the meetings, his illness culminating in his death Sept. 15, 1864. During his connection with the Lodge he was an earnest and zealous Mason.

The National Intelligencer, October 21, 1811

On the evening of Saturday, the 19th inst. (Oct. 19) in the forty-second year of his age, Francis Clark, a native of Garragh, in the county of Londonderry, and kingdom of Ireland, but for many years a citizen of the United States, and the last eight a merchant of this city.

With the ardent spirit of enterprise, which difficulty served but to increase -- with an untiring industry, which toil could not lessen -- with a liberality of public spirit which prompted to earnest exertion in every work of public utility, Mr. Clark could not fail to be one of our most useful citizens, and his death must be considered as a public calamity. With a lofty spirit of honorable pride, which despised all meanness -- with an unbending integrity which scorned all guile -- with a noble candor that abhorred all duplicity -- with a glowing benevolence that never withheld the tear of sympathy from the distresses, or the hand of beneficence from the necessities of his fellow man, he must necessarily have held a high place in the heart of friendship, and the void occasioned by his early and unexpected demise must long remain unfilled. But when we consider him as the affectionate husband of an amiable woman, now stretched low on the bed of sickness -- as the father of four amiable, interesting girls and one boy, to provide for whom was the stimulus to never-ceasing exertion -- to educate whom was the object of his dearest parental solicitude, and to trace their progress the sweetest soother of his cares, we are lost in the listlessness of unutterable woe -- we are shrouded in the darkness of undissipated gloom. May that merciful God who "tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," have the lovely shepherdless flock in his holy keeping.

On the afternoon of Sunday, the 20th, his remains were interred with Masonic honors. They were also attended by the "Society of the Sons of Erin," of which he was a respectable member, and by a large concourse of citizens.

Death of Justice J.T.C. Clark

Mr. John T.C. Clark, one of Washington's oldest citizens, died at noon today after a week's illness. He was taken with an attack of bowel trouble, from which he never recovered. He was attended by Dr. Sothoron. Deceased was nearly seventy-four years old. He was born in Georgetown. When a young man he learned the printing trade and worked on the National Intelligencer and Union and several other papers, and at the death of his father, the late John T. Clark, he was appointed his successor as justice of the peace, which office he has filled ever since, a one time serving as police magistrate. During recent years he occupied an office near the first precinct police station on 12th street. His death occurred at his boarding house, No. 1427 Ohio avenue. His body will be removed to the residence of his son, No. 2910 M street, from where his funeral will probably take place Sunday.

Clark. In this city, on Thursday, the 6th instant, Josephine S., daughter of the Hon. John C. Clark, of New York, in the 15th year of her age. Gentle and affectionate, gifted far beyond her years, and giving rich promise of every grace and excellence of character that can adorn her sex, the feelings of loneliness and sorrow that overwhelm her bereaved parents will find a deep sympathy among the wide circle of friends to whom the deceased was known, and by whom her early death will be long lamented.

Her funeral will take place today at 12 o'clock, from Mrs. Owner's, on Capitol Hill. The friends of the deceased and of her family are invited to attend.

The National Intelligencer, April 18, 1843

Departed this life on the 6th instant, Miss Josephine S. Clark, daughter of the Hon. John C. Clark, in the 15th year of her age.

It has never before been our melancholy duty to record an event in which the feelings and impulses of the heart have so naturally rushed forth to check expression of the very sentiments it dictates and would utter. This blow has been so sudden, and its anguish so severe, that there is little left but the grief proper to such an occasion, and that other more lasting and brighter consolation "beyond the grave." To say she was precocious, talented beyond her time, and gifted with qualities which shed light upon all who had the happiness to realize her virtues, would be but an humble tribute to the rare merits of one in whom Providence seemed to united and center his best gifts. In a community where she has moved for years, from the interesting child, the idol of her young companions and the admiration of more experienced years, until just blushing into early womanhood when summoned into the Omniscient presence, our poor offering to her memory is needless -- the recollection of her worth, the attraction of her virtues the moral principles which guided her action, and the becoming meekness which characterized her whole nature are all deeply engraved upon the memory of both, and they will continue to shine out, a brilliant and encouraging example to the young, a deep and instructive lesson to the old. Let reflection carry them back to the last hours of this pure child's earthly career, and see her, amidst the tortures of disease, offering up her spirit into the hands of Him who has called her among his faithful and then ponder upon the beautiful instruction which is offered.

Into the sorrowing hearts of an affectionate mother and doting father we would cheerfully pour the balm of our kindest sympathy for this afflicting dispensation. But God has summoned her to a kingdom above mortal sway: let their best hope be to join her in Heaven!

One who has known her well drops this humble memento with a tear upon her grave. H.

Clark. On Wednesday, December 12, 1900, at 11:55 p.m., at his residence, 1216 11th street southeast, Joshua Clark, beloved husband of Anne M. Clark, nee Naylor.

Day by day we saw him fade,
And slowly sink away;
Yet in our hearts we often prayed,
That he might longer stay.

Farewell, dear father, thou art at rest,
And shall forever be;
You could not stay on earth with us,
But we can come to thee.

Lonely the home and sad the hours
Since our dear father has gone;
But, oh a brighter day than ours
In heaven is now his own.

My heart is said and lonely,
My grief too deep to tell,
But time will come when we will meet,
And all to you I'll tell.

Loved in life. In death remembered
By his wife and children.

Locals

A girl aged 13 years, the daughter of Mr. Clarke, residing on 11th street between G and E streets northeast, while exercising with her jumping rope Saturday afternoon had a hemorrhage and died in half an hour.

The Evening Star, March 12, 1878

Locals

The death of little Katy Clark, who was nine years old, (not thirteen, as published) was not caused by jumping a rope on Saturday, as stated. She went to bed in her usual health, and was taken with a violent cough, which would not yield to medicine and she ruptured a blood vessel, and died in about a half hour, at 10:30 p.m.

A Fatal Accident
On Tuesday last three or four boys, not one of whom were over eight years of age, went to the camp east of the Capitol, and were furnished by the soldiers with four cartridges intended for ten pound cannon, and the boys attempted to set them off. The packages not taking fire immediately, two of the boys--Samuel Clark, son of Mr. S.T. Clark, and Harmon Mahlor, son of Mr. H. Mahlor, (both of whom reside on Massachusetts avenue, east of the Capitol)--approached just at the time the cartridges exploded. Both were horribly burnt, Clark having all his clothes burnt off, and so injured that he died the next morning. Mahlor is also so badly injured that his life is despaired of.
This should be a warning to soldiers and others not to give children such a dangerous plaything as powder, and it is certainly reprehensible for parties who have charge of cartridges to allow them to lay around in such a manner as to be easy of access to any one.

Boy Commits Suicide
Wm. E. Clark Fires Bullet Into His Own Head
Early Morning Tragedy
Fear of Death by Consumption Prompted the Deed
Brooding Over Possibility
Dead Boy Had Been a Popular Usher at Local Theater --
The Coroner's Verdict
William E. Clark, eighteen years old, an usher at Chase's Theater, shot himself through the head early this morning at his home, 1408 I street northwest, dying instantly. His grandmother, Lydia G. Conkling, with whom the boy had been living, was in the room at the time, but before the shooting he turned off the light, and she did not see him raise the weapon to his temple.
Coroner Nevitt viewed the remains about 2 o'clock this morning, and issued a certificate by suicide by a gunshot wound through the head. The body was afterward removed to the undertaking rooms of J. William Lee to be prepared for burial. The arrangements for the funeral have not been made.
The boy had brooded over the fact that he had consumption. His father and his mother both died of tuberculosis, and the boy had been for some time declaring he would kill himself rather than die of that disease. Last November, his grandmother states, the boy had a severe cold, and he then threatened to kill himself, and did take chloroform, but his grandmother caught him before he had succeeded in taking a fatal quantity.

About four weeks ago, his grandmother states, the boy again contracted a cold, and since then he had been unusually despondent, and had expressed the fear that he would die of consumption. His grandmother tried to persuade him that he was not afflicted with the disease, she says, but it seemed to do no good to talk with him.

Talked of Suicide

After performing his duties at the theater last night the boy returned to his home, and began at once to talk about suicide. His grandmother went into his room, which is the front room in the second story of the house, and lighted the gas. The boy thereupon took off some of his clothing, pretending to go to bed.

"I'm sick of it all, and there is nothing in life for me," he said. He continued to talk along that strain for several minutes. Finally he turned off the light as if to go to bed. His grandmother, however, fearing the boy would do himself harm, lighted the gas again, and again he turned out the light.

"I'm going to end it now and settle it all," he said.

Following that three shots rang out, and the boy fell to the floor. One of the bullets struck a camera lens on the center table, but the other two went through Clark's head, scattering his brains about the room. He was found by the police when they arrived lying in a pool of blood in the center of the room.

Shots Attract the Neighbors

The shots attracted a number of persons to the house and the police arrived soon afterward. Coroner Nevitt was at once notified and viewed the body, as stated, before it was removed from the place where it had fallen.

Mrs. Conkling is nearly prostrated by her grandson's rash deed, and when seen by a Star reporter this morning was ill. She stated that she knew of no reason why her grandson should have committed suicide except that he thought he would die of consumption.

Clark was highly thought of at his place of employment, Chase's Theater, and he was considered one of the most responsible ushers at the theater. He contemplated leaving his duties there next month to attend college. Mrs. Conkling, the grandmother, is a clerk in the Treasury Department.

The suicide was evidently premeditated. Clark had purchased a new Harrington & Richardson revolver of .32 caliber which he had concealed in his room. The weapon had never been seen by his grandmother before the shooting this morning.

The Evening Star, June 16, 1890 Shot Through The Heart Capt. C.M. Clarke Takes His Own Life in a Fit of Insanity Capt. Clarence M. Clarke, son of Mr. B.C. Clarke of East Washington, committed suicide yesterday morning by sending a bullet through his heart. The deceased lived at No. 216 5th street northeast, and had been employed in the office of the chief of engineers, United States Army, for nearly ten years. He was relieved from duty about a month ago on account of the lack of funds to run the office, but he would have returned to work at the beginning of the next fiscal year.
About two weeks ago Capt. Clarke did some surveying in Rockville and the hot weather so affected him that he afterward was troubled with insomnia and a couple of days ago his father noticed in him what he thought were evidences of insanity. Dr. Bayne treated him, but he was so ill that the medicine acted slowly, although the doctor had hopes of effecting a cure. Capt. Clarke married a daughter of ex-Representative Hazelton of Missouri and about a month ago she went to visit her parents in Missouri. While she was away the captain lived at his father's house, corner of 5th and C streets, but had his office in his own home.
Complained of Feeling Unwell

Yesterday morning he arose and appeared at the breakfast table as usual, but after the meal he complained of feeling badly and his father told him to lie down on the sofa in the parlor. He did so, but his restlessness caused anxiety on the part of his father.

Shortly after 11 o'clock the son rose, jumped out the window and ran to his own house as though someone had called him in a hurry. His father followed him across the street and when he reached the house his son had entered his office on the third floor and locked the door.

The distressed father rapped on the door and asked to be admitted but the son replied that he was busy and could not open the door. Mr. Clarke then returned down stairs and told a gentleman who lives in the house of his son's strange conduct. Before any plan of action could be determined on the report of a pistol shot was heard.

The Door Opened

The door was forced open. Seated in an easy chair near an open window was the captain with a smoking revolver in his hand. There was a bullet hole directly over the heart and death was almost instantaneous.

When Coroner Patterson was notified he questioned the folks in the house and gave a certificate of death from a pistol-shot wound self-inflicted, while suffering from temporary aberration of mind.

Capt. Clarke was born in Ellsworth, Ohio, in 1845, and was a graduate of Yale College. He was one of the best-known citizens of East Washington, where he was largely interested in real estate.

When only seventeen years of age he enlisted in the Fifteenth Connecticut regiment of the Connecticut volunteer troops, in which position he served throughout the war. The deceased was a member of Burnside Post, G.A.R., which organization will probably take part in the funeral ceremonies.

Edward L. Clarke Struck by Street Car and Fatally Injured

An inquest is to be held at the District morgue tomorrow morning over the body of Edward L. Clarke, a special watchman employed at the Government Hospital for the Insane, who died at Providence Hospital last night shortly after he had been removed there from 3d street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, where he had been struck by car No. 521 of the Capital Traction railway.

Mr. Clarke was returning to his home at Congress Heights shortly before 12 o'clock. He was walking on the terrace between the street car tracks when an east-bound car approached. He is said to have stepped to the adjoining track not noticing an approaching west-bound car. He was struck and thrown several feet. The motorman applied his brakes but he was unable to stop the car in time.

Mr. Clarke was taken to the hospital in a taxicab which was passing the place at the time. It was found that his skull had been crushed and he died shortly after reaching the institution.

Motorman B. Hummer and Conductor G.T. Daniels were arrested this morning and locked up at the fifth precinct station pending the investigation of the coroner's jury.

Death Was Accidental

Coroner's Verdict in Case of Asylum Special Policeman Clarke

An inquest was held at the morgue yesterday into the circumstances under which Edward L. Clarke, a special policeman at the Government Hospital for the Insane, received fatal injuries when he was struck by a Capital Traction car at 3d street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast Thursday night, shortly before 12 o'clock. Motorman Beverly Hummer, in charge of the car which inflicted the fatal injury, said his train was moving west, and just as the crossing was reached the pedestrian made an effort to get out of the way of a car moving east, stepping directly in front of his car. Hummer stopped his car as quickly as possible, but not before Clarke had been struck and thrown into the fender.

Thomas Hill, motorman on the east-bound car, testified that he saw Mr. Clarke when he jumped from in front of his car and thought he had cleared the track. Chester L. Rollins testified that he saw Clarke try to get out of the way of one car and step in front of the other, and Morgan Hopkins told of having assisted the injured man from the fender. A verdict of accidental death was returned, and the body of the deceased was removed to the family home, Congress Heights. Funeral of Henry D. Clarke

Was Supreme Court Librarian for Thirty Years

Henry D. Clarke, one of the oldest and best-known employees of the Supreme Court of the United States, and an upright and public-spirited citizen, died in this city Monday. Mr. Clarke was born sixty years ago in New York city, and after a few years spent there was reared and educated by Gen. Winfield Scott, who had him with him while he was superintendent of West Point. Gen. Scott afterwards took him with him on many of his travels, both in this country and abroad. An historic engraving of Gen. Scott and his staff, of which but a few copies are extant, shows Mr. Clarke, then a youth, standing at the side of the general.

Salmon P. Chase appointed Mr. Clarke to a position in the Treasury Department, afterwards transferring him to the New York customs service, and then, when he became chief justice, had Mr. Clarke made librarian of the Supreme Court law library, which position he has held continuously ever since, a period of thirty years.

Mr. Clarke was the author of a Hand Book of Supreme Court Decisions. His wife, who was Miss Elizabeth Cunningham of New York city, and three sons -- Winfield Scott, Oscar De Forrest and Morrison Waite Clarke -- survive him. The funeral is to take place from his late residence tomorrow morning, the services to be conducted by the Rev. Dr. George N. Luccock, pastor of the Metropolitan Presbyterian church of whose congregation Mr. Clarke was a member. The interment will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Herbert Lincoln Clarke Monument Unveiled

A monument to the late Herbert Lincoln Clarke, band leader and composer, was unveiled yesterday in Congressional Cemetery. Erected by the Pennsylvania Bandmasters' Association and the Sousa Band Fraternal Society, the monument was designed by David P. King of York, Penn. Participating in the ceremonies was the Rev. Carter S. Gilliss, rector of Christ Church, Washington parish.

John Philip Sousa Biography

p. 176 -- Herbert L. Clarke (1867-1945) had nearly every faculty a cornetist could hope for: a brilliant technique, a delicate lyric style, and extremes of range and dynamics. He joined Sousa in 1893, left after one season, and then returned to play almost continuously from 1899 until 1917. He was assistant conductor for several seasons. As the premier soloist with the Sousa Band for so many years, he became a legendary figure among cornet and trumpet players.

p. 190 -- Of those who became conductors, most chose band work rather than orchestral work. When the elite organization known as the American Bandmasters Association was founded in 1929, three Sousa alumni were among the nine charter members: Herbert L. Clarke, Frank Simon, and Arthur Pryor. A fourth, Victor J. Grabel, had played under Lt. Sousa at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station during World War I. As the ABA grew in stature to become the most prestigious band organization on this side of the Atlantic, four former Sousa men were subsequently elected to its presidency: Clarke, Simon, Howard Bronson, and Peter Buys.

When Herbert L. Clarke retired from the Sousa Band at the age of fifty in 1917, he no longer played cornet in public. He established himself as a conductor, first with the Anglo-Canadian Band of Huntsville, Ontario, and then, for twenty years, with the Long Beach (California) Municipal Band. The latter was a full-time professional band and was staffed by several former Sousa musicians. Several of his cornet solos became classics among brass players, and he also had several fine band transcriptions to his credit. Clarke's name will always be associated with Sousa's because the Clarke Library at the University of Illinois is adjacent to the Sousa Library and because his grave is but a few feet from Sousa's at Congressional Cemetery in Washington.

Mrs. Clarke, 86, Third-Generation Washingtonian

Mrs. Imogen Bohrer Clarke, 86, a third-generation Washingtonian and a teacher here for many years, died today at the Eventide Nursing Home in Takoma Park, Md.

She was the widow of Oscar DeForest Clarke, who died in 1947 after working at the United States Supreme Court since 1900, including many years as its librarian. Her father, George P. Bohrer, was superintendent of the Old Northern Liberty Market here and was an elder of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church.

In addition to her work as a teacher in public and private schools here, Mrs. Clarke was also well-known locally for her work in the arts.

Her art work in water colors and oils won numerous prizes. She was also a writer and a member of the American Pen Women and the Writers League.

She leaves two sisters, Mrs. Drucilla B. Hallam, 1841 Columbia road N.W., and Mrs. Henry C. Hallam, 3000 Tilden street N.W.; two nieces, Mrs. Albert Milans, Bethany Beach, Del., and Mrs. Dorothea Cook, 4000 Massachusetts avenue N.W., and a nephew, Henry C. Hallam, jr., 113 Normandy drive, Silver Spring.

Funeral arrangements, which are being made by the S.H. Hines Funeral Home, 2901 Fourteenth street N.W., are incomplete. Burial will be in the family plot in Congressional Cemetery.

The National Intelligencer, May 7, 1852
In this city, yesterday, about noon, Matthew St. Clair Clarke, Esq., in the sixty-second year of his age, heretofore for a long time Clerk of the House of Representatives, and in that public capacity widely known. Universally esteemed for his amiable and social qualities, he had others, never ostentatiously displayed, but well known to those who have been in intimacy with him. He was a devout Christian, an affectionate husband and parent, a faithful friend, and an upright and honorable man. Of him it may be said, with entire truth, that he had a soul for pity, and "a hand open as day to melting charity."
In lamenting his death, after a long and painful illness, we may well console ourselves with the reflection that he has left us for a better world, Where the wicked cease from troubling, And the weary are at rest.
The funeral of the deceased will take place this (Friday) afternoon, at 4 o'clock, from his late residence at Mr. Willard's, near F and Fourteenth streets.

Oscar D. Clarke Dies; Served as High Court Librarian Many Years

Oscar D. Clarke, 71, librarian of the Supreme Court, died early today at his home, 3034 Newark street N.W.

Mr. Clarke had been librarian since February 1, 1915, when he succeeded his father, H.D. Clarke, who held the position many years. He had served as assistant librarian from March 1, 1900 until his promotion.

A native of Washington, he received a bachelor of law degree from Columbian College, now George Washington University, in 1898.

Mr. Clarke counted among his friends 37 of the 85 justices who served on the Nation's highest tribunal during his many years of service. He was librarian under Chief Justices Fuller, White, Taft, Hughes, Stone and Vison, and knew all of them.

When Mr. Clarke became head of the library, it was small and housed in a rather obscure part of the Capitol. He was the only member of the staff and had only a messenger to help him. In those days, each justice had only one or two assistants and so often visited the library themselves to do some research work.

After moving to the new Supreme Court building, Mr. Clarke supervised the enlargement of the library and saw it grow in importance also as members of the tribunal came to depend on it more and more. At the time of his death he had a staff of nine assistants.

He was a member of the American Association of Law Libraries.

Mr. Clarke had spent his summers in Maine for many years and was a member of the Rotary Club in Skowhegan.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Imogene Clarke.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday at the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street N.W., with Canon Curtis Draper of Washington Cathedral officiating. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Funeral Services This Afternoon—Resolutions Adopted by the Reform School Trustees

The funeral of Major O.P.G. Clarke took place this afternoon from Ascension church. Burnside Post, G.A.R., National Lodge of Masons, and the Loyal Legion attended in a body. There was present a large representation from the Pension Office. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Smith, The Assistant rector of Ascension parish. The remains were borne to the hearse upon the conclusion of the services, and the funeral cortege proceeded to the Congressional Cemetery. The burial services of the Masonic order and of the Grand Army were read at the grave, concluding with the sounding of "taps" by the drum corps of the Loyal Legion. The pall-bearers were as follows: Dr. T.B. Hood and Wm. H. Webster, of the Loyal Legion; N.G. Ellis and M.C. Baxter, of National Lodge, F.A.A.M.; J.E. Mason and D.J. Evans of Burnside Post, G.A.R.; Fred. Mack and F.G. Butterfield, of the Pension Office.

At a meeting of the board of trustees of the Reform School held yesterday afternoon to take action upon the death of Major Otis P.O. Clarke, resolutions were adopted expressing appreciation of his spotless integrity, of his personal modesty and rare ability, and of his faithful and valuable services in connection with the administration of the affairs of the institution for many years. The sympathy of the board was tendered to his family.

A Sketch of his Career—The Funeral Will Take Place Tomorrow

The funeral of Major O.P.G. Clarke, who died Saturday, will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from Ascension church. The services will be under the direction of the National Lodge of Masons, the Burnside Post, G.A.R., and the Loyal Legion. The deceased was a member of all these organizations. He was also a valued member of the board of trustees of the Reform School. Major Clarke had a large circle of friends in the Pension Office, where he spent so many years of his life. He entered the office as an ordinary clerk and rising by promotion through the various grades finally became Commissioner of Pensions. His war record, which was an honorable one, gave him prominence in Grand Army circles, while his qualities of mind and heart enlisted the respect and affection of all those who came in contact with him. His death was an unexpected blow to his friends. Stricken with paralysis on Tuesday evening, those about him had reason to hope that the result would not be fatal. Saturday morning he passed away. He had looked forward to a visit to a daughter who had recently married and who had gone to New Mexico to live, and he expected early in the spring to spend several months on the ranch. Instead of receiving the joyful intelligence that her father was preparing to start for New Mexico she was informed that he was dead. A kind father and a loving husband, he leaves a widow and five children to mourn their loss. Mrs. Boca, one daughter is living in San Mateo, N.M. His son, William P., is in San Francisco. The other children—Mrs. Harding, Mrs. Stearns and Joseph P. Clarke—are residents of this city. Major Clarke was about sixty years of age. His brother Lucius P. Clarke is still living at Morrisville, Madison County, New York, and a sister is residing in the immediate vicinity. His father, Joseph Clarke, was the founder of Clarksville, in New York state. Major Clarke was a graduate of Clinton College, and was educated as a lawyer, but never practiced his profession. His tastes led him to pursue the study of art, and he became a pupil of William Hunt. The war put an end to his art studies, but he always retained his early love, and painted at intervals. A number of his paintings from his brush now adorn the walls of his home.

The flag on the Pension building was placed at half-mast today as a mark of respect to the memory of Major Clarke, and the employees in the Pension Bureau held meetings to take appropriate action in regard to the death.

The board of trustees of the Reform School will hold a meeting this afternoon to take appropriate action in reference to the death of Major Clarke, who was a member of the board.

An Old Citizen Gone

Mr. Richard H. Clarke, who died on Saturday at his residence on 9th street between Massachusetts avenue and L street in his 73d year, was one of the old-time residents of the District. He was a son of Archibald Clarke, who, over a half a century ago, was a justice of the peace located on E street between 8th and 9th streets northwest. For many years the deceased was a printer on the old Union newspaper and subsequently he was a clerk in the Interior department, and for the past few years had prosecuted pension and other claims. He was in ante-bellum days prominent in the local democratic organizations of the District. He was a communicant of St. Patrick's Catholic church, from whence his funeral will take place on Wednesday.

Aided in Laying Corner Stone of Washington Monument

A dispatch from Erie, Pa., last night says: Major Robert Clark died today, aged 89 years.

Major Clarke was a native of this city where he had lived for many years. He was born October 6, 1815, and was therefore in his ninetieth year.

For a long period of time he was in business in Southeast Washington, but upon receipt of the news of the firing on Sumter in 1861 he gave up his business and opened a rendezvous for the enlistment of soldiers. He raised a company and the 24th day of April 1861, was mustered into the service of the United States. With his company he did guard duty in and around Washington, and on that fateful Sunday of the first Bull Run battle (July 21, 1861) was in command at the Virginia end of the Long Bridge.

In describing this incident two or three years ago Major Clarke said: "Over this bridge most of the troops passed into Virginia. I remember distinctly the cry 'On to Richmond' by members of Congress and others as they followed the army in carriages into Virginia. But about half-past nine the evening of the day of the battle they began to come back the most crest-fallen set of men I ever saw. They had witnessed the battle and were sorry they had gone.

"For several days the soldiers were crossing the bridge, completely demoralized, and not a regiment retreated in anything like order."

Major Clarke was mustered out July 24, 1861, his three months' service having expired, but he immediately raised another company and was mustered into the service for three years with the 1st Regiment of the District of Columbia Volunteers, was ordered into Virginia and was wounded at Cedar Mountain, August 10, 1862. Upon recovering he was ordered to special duty at Alexandria, and subsequently appointed provost marshal at Fort Ethan Allen near the Chain bridge. He was promoted major, took command of his regiment in the absence of his superiors and after a war service of four years and three months was honorably discharged.

Major Clarke was prominent as a member of the Masonic order. He was made a Master Mason in Naval Lodge, No. 4, May 6, 1838, and at the time of his death was its senior past master. He was deputy grand master in 1846 and was past high priest of Washington Chapter and deputy grand high priest in 1856. In 1847 he was elected grand treasurer of the Grand Lodge and served as such until 1855. As grand treasurer he took part in the Masonic ceremonies at the laying of the corner stone of the Washington monument July 4, 1848, and had the honor of making the Masonic deposits therein. His name is engraved on a silver plate that was placed in the corner stone. He was present also at the completion and dedication of the monument February 21, 1885, when Chester A. Arthur as President was presiding officer and Myron M. Parker, as grand master of Masons, had charge of the ceremonies.

Maj. Clarke was knighted in Washington Commandery of this city, April 29, 1848, and had been continuously a member of that venerable and notable organization for upward of 57 years.

An unusual incident of the career of Major Clarke was the presentation while convalescent from the wound received at Cedar Mountain of a sword, belt, revolver and cap from the members of his Masonic lodge.

For some years he had resided in Erie, Pa., well known and highly respected by the entire community.

History of the Naval Lodge, No. 4, F.A.A.M.

Robert Clarke, one of the most interesting characters in the history of Naval Lodge, served as Worshipful Master during the years 1842 and 1847, and a rather extended sketch of his life cannot fail to be of interest. He was born in Washington, D.C., Oct. 6, 1815, and for many years was one of its prominent citizens. He was in the carpenter and undertaking business in Southeast Washington, but upon receipt of the news of the firing on Ft. Sumter in 1861 he gave up his business and opened a rendezvous for the enlistment of soldiers. He raised a company and on the 24th day of April 1861, was mustered into the service of the United States. With his company he did guard duty in and around Washington, and on that fateful Sunday of the first Bull Run battle (July 21, 1861) was in command at the Virginia end of the Long Bridge. Major Clarke was mustered out July 24, 1861, his three months' service having expired, but he immediately raised another company and was mustered into the service for three years with the 1st Regiment of the District of Columbia Volunteers, was ordered into Virginia and was wounded at Cedar Mountain, August 10, 1862. Upon recovering he was ordered to special duty at Alexandria, and subsequently appointed Provost Marshal at Fort Ethan Allen near the Chain Bridge. He was promoted Major, took command of his regiment in the absence of his superiors and after a ware service of four years and three months was honorably discharged. Major Clarke attained considerable eminence in Masonic circles. He was initiated in Naval Lodge, May 5, 1838, and passed and raised Sept. 1, 1838; was Junior Grand Warden in 1845; Senior Grand Warden in 1846; Deputy Grand Master in 1847, and Grand Treasurer from 1848 to 1854; was High Priest of Washington R.A. Chapter, No. 2, and Deputy Grand High Priest in 1856. As Grand Treasurer of the Grand Lodge he took part in the Masonic ceremonies at the laying of the cornerstone of the Washington Monument July 4, 1848, and had the honor of making the Masonic deposits therein. His name is engraved on a silver plate that was placed in the corner stone. He was present also at the completion and dedication of the monument Feb. 21, 1885, when Chester A. Arthur, as President, was presiding officer, and Myron M. Parker, as Grand Master of Masons, had charge of the ceremonies. Major Clarke was knighted in Washington Commandery of this city April 29, 1848, and had been continuously a member of that organization for upward of fifty-seven years. An unusual incident of the career of Major Clarke was the presentation August 22, 1862, while convalescent from the wound received at Cedar Mountain, of a sword, belt, revolver, and cap from members of Naval Lodge, No. 4. For some years he resided in Erie, Pa., well-known and highly respected by the entire community, and died in that city Feb. 25, 1905, in the ninetieth year of his age. At the time of his death he was the Senior Past Master of Naval Lodge and possessed the distinction of being the oldest affiliated Mason on the rolls of the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia. He was made a life member of his Lodge, Nov. 21, 1889.

Death of Detective Clarvoe.
Mr. John A.W. Clarvoe, who had been ill for some time past, of dropsy of the heart, but who was out walking yesterday, and it was hoped had entirely recovered, died last evening at his residence, No. 523 7th street s.w., shortly after returning home. Mr. Clarvoe in early life served in the merchant marine service, and also in the navy. He subsequently learned the trade of plasterer, at which he worked for some years. He served in the early part of the war as a District volunteer, and on the organization of the Metropolitan police (Sept. 11, 1861) he was appointed, and went on duty in South Washington. In October 1863, he was appointed a detective officer, and for a series of years was chief of detectives. For over a year he was detailed for service in the secret service of the Treasury, in which he rendered such service as gave him a national reputation. He leaves a wife and six children. He was a member of Dawson Lodge, No. 16, F.A.A.M., Washington R.A. Chapter, and Columbia Commandery, No. 2, K.T. It is said that Mr. Clarvoe was born on a steamboat, between this city and Alexandria, and for that circumstance was named John Alexandria Washington Clarvoe. It is thought that an extended walk up and down Pennsylvania avenue yesterday was too much exertion for him, and caused a relapse.

The Funeral of John A.W. Clarvoe for many years a detective of the Metropolitan police force, took place from his late residence in South Washington yesterday afternoon, and was attended by a large concourse of people. The remains were in a handsome rosewood coffin, on which were the insignia of the Masons, and it was literally covered with floral ornaments, a number of which were sent from Baltimore, Philadelphia and other places. One of the ornaments was a shield of white immortalles with the letters M.D.D. in violets. The services at the house were conducted by Revs. Drs. Meador and Bittinger, the former making a short address. The cortege moved from the residence in the following order: Detachment of police mounted and on foot, under command of Capt. W.G. Brock; Donch's band; Columbia Commandery, No. 2; Washington R.A. Chapter; Dawson Lodge, No. 16; carriages containing our detective corps, and Detectives Sharkle, Miller, Davis and Genther, of Philadelphia; Detectives Crone, Pontier, Mitchell, Freeburger, West and Lyon, Capt. Jas. Irvin, of the jail, and Capt. Beler, deputy marshal of Baltimore, and others; carriages containing the ministers, in which was borne a floral column; hearse containing the remains; the pall-bearers, Messrs. Cavanaugh and McCarthy, on behalf of Columbia Commandery; MacFeely and Howard, on behalf of Washington Chapter; Stephenson and Clements, on behalf of the Blue Lodge, and Lieut. Skippon and Detective Coomes, on behalf of the police department. Then followed a long line of carriages containing the family and friends of the deceased. At the cemetery the casket was deposited in the vault. The Masonic funeral service was celebrated, and the Masonic choir rendered several odes in their usual fine style.

Locals

Detective J.A.W. Clarvoe is still dangerously ill at his residence in South Washington. A consultation of police surgeons was held last night on his case but the results are not known.

Locals

The condition of Mr. J.A.W. Clarvoe of the detective force was very much worse yesterday, but there was some change for the better during the night.

The Evening Star, January 8, 1879

Locals

We regret to learn that Mr. J.A.W. Clarvoe of the detective force is quite sick and within the last four days there has been an unfavorable turn in the disease--pneumonia.

Forman, Stephen M., A Guide to Civil War Washington, Washington, DC: Elliott & Clark Publishing, 1995.

Clarvoe was one of four city detectives who went to Mary Surratt's boardinghouse on H Street on the night of April 14 looking for John Wilkes Booth and John Surratt. He told the boarders at the house that Booth had shot the president and that John Surratt had assassinated the secretary of state. Clarvoe then showed them a black scarf saying, "Do you see the blood on that? That is the blood of Abraham Lincoln."

Claxton, James d. 6 Jan 1822 R49/38

The National Intelligencer, January 7, 1822

In this city, on Saturday morning, January 5, Mr. James Claxton, in the 23d year of his age. His disease was pulmonary consumption, brought on, it is believed, by confinement to his duties as an assistant to his late father, the Principal Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives. The writer of this small testimonial of respect to the memory of James Claxton has known him from his childhood, and felt the highest confidence in his integrity. He possessed an intelligent and well cultivated mind, and manners eminently amiable and correct. His deportment, while he officiated in the post office attached to the House of Representatives, conciliated the good will of every member of that body, without a single exception in the knowledge of the writer. His attention, correctness, and readiness, obtained for him the highest confidence. Mr. Claxton was the third son of his parents, and brother to Captain Alexander Claxton, of the United States' Navy and Midshipman Thomas Claxton, who fell so nobly in the battle of Lake Erie. The severe bereavement of such a son, following in quick succession on the death of a most excellent husband and father, excites for his respectable mother and surviving relatives the sympathy of all who know them.

Claxton, Mrs. Johannah Elizabeth d. 31 Mar 1853 33 yrs. R54/251

Claxton. On Thursday, at 11 p.m., Mrs. Johannah Elizabeth Claxton, consort of Mr. A.B. Claxton, in the 34th year of her age. She bore her sufferings, which were great, with the patience and fortitude of a Christian and left behind the pleasing assurance of having attained to a blessed immortality. Her funeral will take place this afternoon, from her late residence on Ninth street, at 3 o'clock p.m. The relatives and friends of the family are respectfully requested to attend.

The National Intelligencer, December 3, 1821

In this city, on Saturday evening last, after an indisposition by which he has been more or less afflicted for several years, Mr. Thomas Claxton, Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives of the United States. This responsible station he has filled, with zeal and exemplary fidelity, for thirty-two years. On the first organization of this government, he was appointed Assistant Doorkeeper, and not long afterwards succeeded to the higher station. His original profession was that of a printer, which, however, he did not practically follow after being appointed to his late station. Mr. C. was one of those upright and worthy men who enjoyed general respect, and was regarded by the Members of Congress generally as a friend and equal, rather than as an inferior in station. For many years past, he was biennially re-appointed to the office he held without a dissenting voice.

His death recalls to our mind an occasion in which his name was introduced in Debate in the House of Representatives in one of the most impressive bursts of eloquent feeling that we ever witnessed. It was in the month of March, 1814, towards the close of a debate on the Loan Bill, when the Opposition party in that House had rallied all their strength and poured forth all their eloquence against the prosecution of the War, and some of them had bitterly denounced it as "an inglorious war," that Mr. Cheves rose and delivered a speech of great effect, and even meriting the epithet of brilliant. We copy from it the following extract, as containing a just tribute to the memory of our deceased friend:

"An inglorious war! Insult not the gallant men who have fought and bled in your battles, and yet live with high claims to your applause. Tread not so rudely on the ashes of the heroic dead. Could the soul of Lawrence speak from the cerements which confine his mouldering body, in what appalling language would he rebuke the man who should assert that the contest in which he so nobly conquered and so nobly died, was an inglorious war! Will you tell that worthy man [Claxton] who fills with so much fidelity and usefulness a station in your service on this floor, that this is an inglorious war? He has beheld one son triumph over his country's foes, and live to hear and receive the applause and gratitude of his country. He has seen another fall in the arms of victory, heroically aiding in an achievement, which if it be not unparalleled, is certainly not exceeded in the annals of history. Happy Father! Yet I would call him miserable and hopeless man were this an inglorious war. But I must call him a most happy Father, for God and nature have implanted in our bosoms a principle which elevates us above the love of life, and friends, and makes us think their loss a blessing, when they are yielded up in the cause of a beloved country, on the altar and in the spirit of patriotism. It is this principle which makes that excellent father reflect not merely with composure, but with pleasure, on the child of his love giving up his life in battle -- his blood mingling with the wave, and his body entombed in the bosom of Erie. Yes, he would rather feel the consciousness that his gallant boy fought with Perry, and died in the glorious battle of the 10th September, than now embrace him in his arms, again animated with the strong pulse of life -- again pouring into the parental bosom his filial duty, and lighting up a father's pride and joy."

Mrs. Margaret Clem, fifty years of age, a trained nurse, died of apoplexy at 6:30 o'clock this morning at the Casualty Hospital, where she had been removed last night from her apartments, 114 C street northeast.

Mrs. Clem, who was a widow, retired at an early hour last night as she was feeling unwell. About 9 o'clock she was stricken with apoplexy. Miss M. Lane, another nurse in the house, went to her assistance, and a physician was called to attend her. It was then decided to remove her to the hospital. The ambulance was summoned and the woman was taken to that institution, where the physicians worked through the night in an effort to relieve her sufferings, but she died this morning.

Mrs. Clem is survived by one brother, who resides in Martinsburg, W. Va.

The funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at St. Mark's P.E. Church, 3d and A streets southeast. Rev. Dr. W.L. DeVries, rector of the church, will conduct the services. Interment will probably be made in Congressional Cemetery.

John Cleveland Struck by Locomotive at Odenton

John Cleveland of this city, one of the oldest engineers in the employ of the Baltimore division of the Pennsylvania railroad, was instantly killed at Odenton, Md., Thursday afternoon.

Cleveland was running from Baltimore to Washington. There was something wrong with the engine and he got out to see what it was. As he walked around the locomotive he was struck by the engine of a northbound train. He was dead when picked up.

Magistrate Byron Phelps was called and he summoned a jury of inquest.

After the jury viewed the body the magistrate gave permission to remove it to Cleveland's late home in Washington.

Mr. Cleveland's body was brought to Washington that night, and the funeral will be held from the residence, 512 D street northeast, at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Died at His Post

Joseph C. Cline, an elderly white man, who has been employed for the past fifteen years as watchman at the Citizens' National Bank, was found dead at his post at the bank yesterday morning. He was alone in the building at the time so that there is no way of telling when he died.

Cline was always on duty all day Sunday, and it was customary for his son to bring his breakfast to him. Yesterday morning when the young man reached the bank and knocked for admission he was unable to get a reply. Becoming alarmed he sought assistance from the police, and the day engineer was sent for. Entrance was finally obtained and a search for Cline began. In this the son and the police were assisted by a little terrier that Cline always had with him. The intelligent animal barked to attract their attention and then guided them to the basement. There the faithful old watchman was found lying in a corner in the basement. He had been dead for some time, and from the position of the body it was evident that he died in great agony.

It was at first thought that Cline had met with foul play, but a thorough examination of the building showed that all the windows and doors were securely locked, so that no one could have entered or left the place. The officers of the bank were at once summoned, and they made an investigation which showed that everything was in proper condition. Deputy Coroner Glazebrook viewed the body, and later a certificate of death from heart disease was given. Cline was about sixty years of age, and enjoyed the trust and confidence of his superiors. He lived at 606 C street southwest.

Gen. Clinton

The National Intelligencer, April 21, 1812

It is with feelings of unmixed veneration for the character of the Revolutionary Hero, the Patriot and Statesman combined in one, that we announce that the venerable GEORGE CLINTON IS NO MORE. He expired about nine o'clock yesterday morning at his lodgings in this city, after an illness of about four weeks continuance.

Immediately after the annunciation of the above melancholy event, both Houses of Congress adjourned. They meet tomorrow morning, earlier than usual to receive the report of their joint committee and authorize the necessary arrangements for the funeral obsequies.

Gives Up Its Dead, Grave of Vice President Clinton Opened, Body To Be Sent Away Reinterment Will Be Made at Kingston, N.Y.

Sixteen-Ton Monument That Has Marked the Burial Spot in Congressional Cemetery Dismantled for Shipment.

The body of George Clinton, first governor of New York, and Vice President during the administrations of Jefferson and Madison, which was taken from its grave in Congressional cemetery Monday, is now resting in the public vault in the cemetery, and will be carried to New York, May 27. The body will be reburied May 30, in Kingston, N.Y., Gov. Clinton's native town, and where he took the oath of office as first governor of the state in 1777.

A committee appointed by the legislature of New York state has been working for the removal of the body for two years. According to the regulations of the cemetery, it is necessary to obtain the permission of every living descendant before a body can be removed. This consumed several months, and only recently have letters been obtained from the sixteen living descendants granting their full permission.

The Disinterment

The disinterment was made in the presence of Benjamin M. Brink, secretary of the New York committee, and Dudley S. Bright of Washington, representing Christ Church, to which the cemetery belongs.

After taking down the sixteen-ton monument and packing it carefully for shipment to Kingston, the coffin was located seven feet below ground, and although the original oak casing had long since rotted away, the metal interior was in an excellent state of preservation.

The casket was taken to the naval hospital, at 9th street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, where Dr. Lamb made an examination of the body. No jewelry or other articles of identification were found, but Dr. Lamb announced that the body was that of a person who had suffered from rheumatism. As Clinton's letters contain frequent allusions to his sufferings from the rheumatism, the committee was willing to accept the doctor's announcement as identification.

The body was originally wrapped in a white cloth, which was found darkened from the action of the lead of the casket and water which leaked into the coffin through a small hole. Silk

Removal to New York

When the body is taken to New York it will be accompanied to the railway station by several troops of cavalry and other military bodies, and will be met in New York by militia and escorted from one station to the other.

Gov. Clinton died April 20, 1812. He was born in Orange county, N.Y., July 26, 1739. He was a delegate to the second Continental Congress and was elected Governor of New York in April, 1777. He was Vice President under Jefferson during his second term and continued in that office after Jefferson's retirement and while Madison was President, and died in that office.

At this point it will be well to record that General George Clinton was originally interred in Congressional Cemetery, where he remained until a few years ago, when his body was transferred to New York with considerable ceremony.

The National Intelligencer, August 27, 1819

We learn, with extreme regret, that Mr. G.W. Clopper, of New York, a youth of eighteen, and nephew to Major Miller, of Marines, who was on a visit to his friends in this city, fell in a duel on the 24th instant. He was not personally known to us, but we understand that he was esteemed and beloved by all his acquaintances for his amiability of temper and correct and gentlemanly deportment. His remains were respectfully interred in the Episcopal burying ground in this city.

We forbear any further notice of this lamentable occurrence, than to say, that public feeling is shocked at the frequency with which Duels take place in this vicinity; and that, wherever the arm of the government can reach, it is hoped and expected it will be extended to arrest the practice. This is the fourth duel we have heard of within a few days past, though the only one which has terminated fatally.

Deaths of Old and Well Known Citizens
Mr. John L. Clubb, an old citizen of the District, died at his residence on I street, between 6th and 7th, about one o'clock this morning, of typhoid pneumonia, in the 70th year of his age. Mr. Clubb was a native of Maine, but came to this District when a boy and for many years was a member of the Marine band. Subsequently he was a clerk for several years in the library of Congress, but of late years he has been filling various positions under the District government. For several years he led various church choirs in the District. He was a prominent member of the order of Odd Fellows, holding membership in Excelsior Lodge, Mount Nebo Encampment, and the Grand Lodge and Grand Encampment. Mr. Clubb was also a prominent mason--a member of St. Johns Lodge, No. 11, and Washington Commandery, Knight Templar.

Clum, Bessie W.	d. 8 Jul 1881		R5/210

Clum. In Washington, D.C., July 8, 1881, Bessie W. Clum, infant daughter of John P. Clum of Tombstone, Arizona. Funeral from the residence of her grandparents, 514 6th street northeast at 4 p.m., Saturday, July 9, 1881.

Note: John P. Clum was U.S. Indian Agent at San Carlos Agency, Arizona Territory. He brought a group of 21 Indians to Washington and Philadelphia in September 1876 -- including Taza son of Cochise who died of pneumonia (R2/125).

From Nancy Pope, September 10, 2001:

The grandparents' house mentioned was John's parents, William Henry Clum & Elizabeth Ann Van Deusen. He wasn't in DC when his daughter passed away but was living in Tombstone, Arizona as their mayor at that time [from his paper, the Epitaph, July 3, 1881: "Mayor Clum received a telegram from Washington yesterday afternoon that his youngest child was at the point of death. We sympathize with him in this affliction."]

Clum had gone east in April official to Troy, NY to arrange for the purchase of fire-fighting equipment for Tombstone. Unofficially, he was taking his daughter, a son, and his mother-in-law (Angelina Ware) back to Washington, D.C. The kids stayed with their paternal grandparents. The son, Woodworth Clum, was raised by his grandparents and two maiden aunts, Jane & Cornelia Clum. Woodie later edited some of his father's memoirs into the book, "Apache Agent."

John Clum returned to Tombstone on June 22. The mother of his children, Mary Dennison Ware Clum, had died on December 18, 1880. As John noted many years later: "With the approach of the Yuletide season, there was unfeigned joy in our little home when a daughter was born. And then, only a week later, I encountered the major tragedy of my life when, on December 18, my wife passed away. Her remains rest in the old pioneer cemetery at Tombstone, and, as if to emphasize the tragic ending of her young life, the ruthless elements during the passing years have swept away every marker from her grave."

John remarried twice, his second wife, Belle Atwood was the mother of his only other child, Caro Clum. He moved back to DC with Belle for a few years.

Joseph Cochran Dies of Disease of Heart

Civil War Veteran and Mentor of Masonic Order -- Funeral Tomorrow

Joseph Cochran a veteran of the civil war and for forty-four years an employe of the Post Office Department, died of heart disease Friday evening about 6 o'clock at the home, 725 Florida avenue northeast. Although he had been in poor health for two weeks prior to his death, Mr. Cochran had been absent but one day from his desk at the post office, where he was chief of the contract division of the second assistant postmast general, Dr. H.C. Duffey, Mr. Cochran's physician, had called on his patient just a few hours before his death and members of his family were apprised of the seriousness of his illness, but there was nothing in his condition to indicate death should be expected, and the end came as a shock to his friends.

Was Union Veteran

Mr. Cochran was born in Boston, Mass., April 16, 1844. He enlisted as a private in Company B, 21th Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, at the outbreak of the civil war, and was a member of Company G, 15th Regiment Veteran Reserve Corps, and Company I, 7th Regiment, U.S. Veteran Volunteer Infantry. He was wounded in the battle of Gettysburg, and attained the rank of sergeant. On being mustered out at the close of the war he was connected with the War Department for about a year, and then was transferred to the Post Office Department, where he served continuously until the time of his death.

In the more than two-score years of his government service, Mr. Cochran came in contact with many high officials of the federal and state governments, and numbered among his personal friends the late Senator Stephen B. Elkins of West Virginia and Richard C. Kerens of St. Louis, now American Ambassador to Austria and Hungary.

Mr. Cochran was for many years active in Masonic circles, being a member of Lafayette Lodge, No. 10, F.A.A.M. He also was a member of the Post Office Department Benefit Association.

Prominent in Republican Party

As a young man in Massachusetts, before entering the ranks of the Union army, Mr. Cochran was prominent in republican political circles, following in the footsteps of his father, who was a member of the state legislature from a Boston district for a number of years.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at his late residence, 725 Florida avenue northeast, with Rev. John E.A. Doermann, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, 13th street between Q and R streets northwest, of which Mr. Cochran was a member officiating.

Services at the grave in Congressional cemetery will be conducted by the Masonic fraternity.

Surviving Mr. Cochran are his wife who was Miss Katherine Parker of Philadelphia, one daughter Mrs. Charles R. Churchman of Wilmington, Delaware and three sons, Richard K. Cochran, Stephen E. Cochran and George S. Cochran, all of this city.

The National Intelligencer, Saturday, Feb. 17, 1844.  Duel. We understand that a duel was fought in Virginia, near the Chain Bridge, yesterday morning early, between Mr. Julian May [R31/12] and Mr. Joseph Cochrane, both of this city. The parties fought with rifles and Mr. Joseph Cochrane was, at the first fire, shot through the head. He was still living at 7 o'clock last night. Mr. May was not hurt.
The National Intelligencer, February 19, 1844  Death of Mr. Cochrane.  We are sorry to learn that Mr. Cochrane, who was wounded on Friday morning last in a duel with Mr. Julian May, expired yesterday morning, about 5 o'clock, at Mr. Nelson's farm in Fairfax county, Virginia, near the place of combat.
Yesterday morning, Sunday, at half past 5 o'clock, Joseph Cochrane, aged 18 years. His funeral will be solemnized at the place of his late residence in 6th street at 11 o'clock this morning, the 19th instant. The friends of the deceased and of his family are invited to attend.
The National Intelligencer, Feb. 24, 1844  To the Editor  Messrs. Gales &amp; Seaton. Justice to the dead is the only object of this communication. The friends of the late Mr. Cochrane entertained the hope that there would be no necessity for them to tax the attention of the community with any statement in regard to the recent unfortunate affair which terminated in his death. At an early period after the probability of this sad result was communicated to them, they made the declaration that they had no charge to make, and wished none made, against Mr. May, and though they were impressed with the belief that Doctor Miller might have rendered essential service in aiding to remove Mr. Cochrane from the field, and also after that had been effected, they had no intention of disposition to make any representations to his prejudice. They made up their minds to bear their grief in silence, and, but for the injustice done by statements in the publication in vindication of Dr. Miller contained in the National Intelligencer of the 21st instant to the memory of the deceased, this determination would not have been departed from. By those statements Mr. Cochrane is made to appear to have been actuated by blood-thirsty purposes, and to have been determined to admit not even of an opportunity for an apology or explanation. All who have ever known him will bear testimony that such feelings and conduct were entirely foreign to his disposition, that his heart was kind and generous, and his nature tractable. He left this city under strong injunctions that, if the challenge were withdrawn, he should make a reasonable explanation or apology. His second was also strongly enjoined to the same effect. Mr. Cochrane went disposed and prepared to make a reasonable explanation or apology if the challenge were withdrawn. Before leaving he several times expressed to his friends a determination not to kill his antagonist; and, in conversation with a friend who accompanied him, he "expressed the wish strongly of settling the matter amicably, frequently using the expression, "I would not kill May for the world." and this friend also states that he knew Mr. Cochrane would not have objected to an honorable adjustment of the difficulty.
In regard to the conversations it is stated Dr. Miller had with Mr. Cochrane, it is not pretended that they took place by the authority or with the consent or knowledge of his second, and it is well known that, under the rules that govern such affairs, Mr. C. could not listen to any proposition from any one connected with the opposite party unless he knew such authority or consent had been given. There was no witness present to hear those conversations. Dr. M. is the only person who can now give a version of them; the dead cannot speak for himself. A friend of Mr. Cochrane, who did not accompany him out, but who by request was present on the ground for the purpose of doing whatever he properly could to aid in an amicable adjustment of the difficulty, went to the second of Mr. May, at Mr. Nelson's house, and anxiously inquired whether such an adjustment could not take place. He received a brief answer that one could not, unless a written apology, signed by Mr. C. in his presence, were given, without intimation that there was an opportunity open, or that one would be given, by the withdrawal or suspension of the challenge.
It is stated that Mr. Cochrane, when an apology was first required of him, with insulting language refused to give it. What Language he used is not specified. Mr. C. was invited by Mr. May's second to his room to receive a note from Mr. M.; he found the note of a serious character; that he was in the room of the second of the adverse party without a friend, and in the presence of another person with whom he was unacquainted, and that he was required to sign an apology dictated by the other party. Under these circumstances, he naturally felt excited, and indignantly remarked, during the conversation which took place, that he would not be bullied into an apology--he was able to defend himself. He felt that the opposite party required more than they had a right to ask--that to consent to an apology dictated by them would bring infamy and degradation upon himself.

d. 19 Oct 1910

R58/340The Evening Star, October 22, 1910, p. 12Third Man Missing, May Have DrownedBoat From Which Men Lost Their Lives Loaded With Pig Iron*

Frederick Stewart twenty-five years old, who resided at 617 Virginia avenue southeast, is reported missing. The police think he was drowned with Alexander Coghill and Richard Langley, whose bodies were recovered from the flats opposite the wharf at Giesboro yesterday morning. Stewart the police learned was with Coghill and Langley about the time they hired a boat at Bailey's boathouse Wednesday night. He has not been seen by his relatives since.

The crew of the police boat yesterday afternoon recovered the boat from which the men were drowned.

Loaded With Pig Iron

The boat was about 1,000 feet west of the channel, where there is practically no water at low tide, and not more than three feet of water at high tide. The boat contained 1,492 pounds of pig iron the weight being almost too much for it to carry.

The police allege that the iron had been taken from the Anacostia bridge, where it was used by the District for testing purposes. This morning Coroner Nevitt impaneled a jury over the bodies of Coghill and Langley at the morgue and adjourned the hearing until later. The bodies were turned over to the relatives to be prepared for burial.

In addition to the 1492 pounds of iron, the police found a bottle of whisky and a broken whisky bottle in the small bateau yesterday. Lieut. Dean of the harbor police said today he could hardly realize that three men could have occupied the boat with so much iron in it.

Found in Shallow Water

The lieutenant thinks the men in the boat made for the shoal water when the storm overtook them Wednesday night, and that they waded about on the flats after the boat filled with water. He thinks they walked over the edge of the channel and were drowned or that they became exhausted and dropped. There was scarcely water enough on the flats to cover their bodies, the lieutenant says, and had it not been that William Lewis of Alexandria was on the flats gunning yesterday the bodies would probably not have been recovered for several days.

b. 1832 - d. 8 Feb 1884

R89/305

Coldwell. On February 8, 1884, at 12:30 a.m., Joseph T. Coldwell in the 53d year of his age. Funeral will take place from his late residence, No. 469 Missouri avenue n.w. on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Friends and relatives are respectfully invited to attend.

The Evening Star, February 4, 1884

Knocked Down and Run Over

Mr. J.T. Coldwell, the Real Estate Dealer, Badly Injured

Mr. J.T. Coldwell, the well known real estate dealer, was yesterday afternoon knocked down and run over by a horse and wagon, driven by J.W. Wallace, at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and 11th street. Wallace was arrested by Officer Diggins, and a charge of assault and battery was preferred against him. Mr. Coldwell was taken to the station house, where he was attended by Drs. Bronson and Taylor, after which he was sent to his home at No. 469 Missouri avenue.

Wallace was charged in the Police Court this morning with assault, and the case was continued on account of the illness of Mr. Coldwell until next Saturday.

The Sufferer Not Yet Conscious

The condition of Mr. Coldwell had not changed up to 12 o'clock today. He was shown no signs of returning consciousness, and a consultation of physicians will be held some time this evening as to his condition. Dr. Poulton thinks it a severe concussion of the brain.

The Evening Star, February 5, 1884

The Condition of Mr. J.T. Coldwell

Mr. J.T. Coldwell, who was run over on Sunday afternoon by a horse and wagon driven by J.W. Wallace, still lies at his residence in a precarious condition. The first sign of consciousness he has shown was this morning, when he seemed to recognize his wife. It is thought that his skull was not fractured, but that he received a severe concussion of the brain. His physicians consider his condition as critical.

The Evening Star, February 6, 1884

Serious Condition of Mr. J.T. Coldwell

The condition this morning of Mr. J.T. Coldwell, injured by being run over a day or two ago by a horse and wagon, was not cheering. Dr. J. Ford Thompson stated to a Star reporter that the case looked discouraging; the patient showed no symptoms of returning consciousness, and was weaker this morning than he had been.

Death of Joseph T. Coldwell

Fatal Result of Street Accident--Sketch of Mr. Coldwell's Life--The Knights of Pythias Celebration Postponed

Mr. Joseph T. Coldwell, who was run over by a vehicle driven by a man named Wallace, last Sunday evening, died at 12:30 o'clock this morning, at his residence, No. 469 Missouri avenue. Mr. Coldwell was unable to speak from the time of the occurrence until his death. The only signs of consciousness he gave was on Tuesday morning, when he, by look, recognized his wife. Mr. Coldwell, who was a native of Petersburg, Virginia, was born in 1832, and came to this city about thirty years ago as a telegraph operator. He was known as one of the most expert operators in this section of the country. On the breaking out of the war Mr. Coldwell returned to his native state, and he was made chief of the military telegraph of the confederacy, serving as such till the close of the war. He was one of the first, at the conclusion of the war, to accept the situation, and returning to this city, he accepted the management of the Southern Express company, the office being at 4 1/2 street and the Avenue. Subsequently he engaged in the auction business, and afterwards, with Mr. B.H. Waner, in the real estate business. For the past few years he has been in business on his own account. He has been a prominent worker in the order of Knights of Pythias, having filled the highest offices in that organization. He was a P.G.C. or Excelsior lodge, No. 14, and was also a member of Federal City lodge of Odd Fellows. Mr. Coldwell leaves a widow, but had no children of his own. He had, however taken in his family the children of a deceased brother-in-law. The funeral will take place from his late residence Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

An Inquest to be Held

The coroner will hold an inquest on the body of Mr. Coldwell and inquiries into the causes which led to his death. Mr. J.W. Wallace, who was driving the horse and buggy which knocked him down on Sunday last, has given bonds to answer for the assault. The inquest will take place tomorrow at 11 o'clock, at the late residence of deceased.

The Grand Lodge of the Knights of Pythias has, in consequence of the death of Mr. C., determined to postpone the celebration of the anniversary of the order, which had been arranged for the 19th inst.

At a Meeting of the Real Estate Agents, held this morning, at the office of B.H. Warner, representatives from some thirty five offices being present, B.H. Warner was called to the chair, and F.H. Smith elected secretary. A committee of five having been appointed to prepare resolutions expressive of the sentiments of the meeting relative to the death of the late Joseph T. Coldwell, retired, and subsequently reported the following resolutions, which, after remarks by man of those present, were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we learn with deep sorrow of the sudden death of our friend and associate in business, Joseph T. Coldwell.

Resolved, That we will cherish the memory of our deceased friend for his unswerving business integrity, kindness and gentleness of nature, purity of life, and for all the qualities of mind and heart which have won for him the earnest friendship and esteem of all who knew him.

Resolved, That we extend to his family our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement, and that we will, in a body, attend his funeral.

Resolved, That these resolutions, duly attested by the chairman and secretary of this meeting, be communicated to the family of the deceased, and that the same be furnished the daily press of the city for publication.

The Coldwell Inquest

Verdict of Accidental Death

A coroner's inquest was held this morning, at 11 o'clock, on the body of the late J.T. Coldwell, at the residence of his family, 469 Missouri avenue. The jury was composed of Messrs. John A. Goldin, Horatio Browning, Walter H. Wyvill, J.B. Kendall, Henry Larman and Richard E. Parker. The first witness that was called was Henry S. Breslin, who testified that he was coming down Pennsylvania avenue about four o'clock Sunday afternoon. He saw Mr. Coldwell passing near 11th street, and a horse and buggy going along very near him, and some one called out, "Look out." At the same moment he saw Mr. Coldwell throw up his hands, and just then he was struck by the horse and thrown down violently, striking heavily on the pavement, and the buggy ran over him, striking him on the body. The horse was going on a brisk trot at the time, but not above the gait usually allowable for traveling.

Albert Stewart testified that the horse at the time was going very slow--just a dog trot.

Wm. Kelly testified that he was standing at the southwest corner of 11th street and Pennsylvania avenue, and noticed Mr. Wallace driving the horse and buggy. After he crossed the car-track on the avenue witness' attention was called in another direction, and in a moment afterwards he heard talking, and when he turned the driver was holding up, having driven over some one. The man was prostrate on the ground, his head about three feet from the curb, and his feet in a westerly direction. It happened about 20 minutes past 4 o'clock.

Dr. Hartigan testified that there was no fracture of the skull; there must have been great concussion.

Washington Finney (colored) testified that Mr. Coldwell had his back about half turned when the horse struck him. Witness stood about two steps from him, and was going towards The Star office.

Mr. J.W. Wallace stated that about 4 o'clock his wife wanted to go out, and he went to the stable, on 11th street, and got his horse and started up to cross the avenue, and the accident occurred when within about twelve feet of the northwest corner of the curb. He was a great friend of Mr. Coldwell, and belonged to several associations with him.

The case was given to the jury, who in a few moments rendered a verdict of death from being accidentally run over, and that Mr. Wallace was blameless.

The Funeral

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. The pall-bearers selected on the part of the Knights of Pythias will be G.J.L. Foxwell and Halvor Nelson, of Washington Division, No. 1, U.R.; M.C. Mitchell and Joseph Gibbons, of Excelsior Lodge, No. 14, and Richard Goodheart and W.T. Bailey, of the Grand Lodge.. Other gentlemen named as pall-bearers are F.H. Smith, B.H. Warner, E.A. McIntyre, Randall Hagner, and C.C. Duncanson. The Rev. Dr. Pitzer, of the Central Presbyterian church, will preach the funeral sermon.

At a meeting of the Washington division, No. 1, Uniformed Rank Knights of Pythias last evening, Sir Knight Jacob P. Smith announced the death of Sir Knight Commander J.T. Coldwell in appropriate terms, and eulogies were pronounced by Sir Knights Nelson, Foxwell and Glasscock.

The members of Hermione Lodge, No. 12, K. of P., will attend in a body tomorrow the funeral of P.G.C. J.T. Coldwell. See advertisement of meeting called.

The Coldwell Obsequies

The funeral of Joseph T. Coldwell, which took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence, No. 469 Missouri avenue, was one of the most imposing private funerals ever witnessed in the District. The cortege was fully half a mile in length. A large number of floral tributes were displayed about the casket. The most conspicuous was a large floral chair, a double triangle of immortelles from the uniform rank, Knights of Pythias. The large attendance included representatives of the grand lodge K. of P., the uniformed rank, and all the lodges of the order in the city, Excelsior lodge, of which the deceased was a member, attending in a body. Deputations were present also from the Odd Fellows and other orders of which the deceased was a member. The remains were interred in the Congressional cemetery. The pall-bearers were F.H. Smith, B.H. Warner, E.A. McIntyre, J.G.L. Foxwell, Randall Hagner, Halvor Nelson, C.C. Duncanson, Richard Goodhart and William Bailey.

Obituary

In the sad death of that good man, Joseph T. Coldwell, the community has lost one of its noblest representatives; a large social circle a most honored link; the poor and distressed a loving, undenyng friend. But alas! the anguish in that bereaved home! To lift the veil therefrom were almost too sacred a thing. Nearly thirty years of perfect happiness in married life had cemented a love the parallel of which is seldom seen. Such a devotion in these days of domestic strife was so beautiful as it is rare. Tender courtesies and delicate little mutual attentions were daily and hourly continued, with all the freshness and fervor of a union that might have counted only as many days as theirs were years.

If aught of business care perchance annoyed or vexed, it was left on the outside, and never brought within the door where ever awaited him his devoted companion. A modest, retiring gentleness, with a heart overflowing with charity, were his marked characteristics, and only those who knew him best fully appreciated his worth.

To God's mysterious inscrutable Providence the agonized widow bows in holy reverence, whilst from her broken heart she lifts a prayer of grateful thanksgiving for that last loving smile of recognition (the reward of her unceasing supplication); the same which awaits her at their meeting on the threshold of that Happy Home where their joyous union will abide forever.

Death of Mrs. Coldwell

In the death of Mrs. Virginia Josephine Coldwell, which occurred yesterday evening at 6:30, the city loses one of its oldest inhabitants. Mrs. Coldwell was born in Washington nearly seventy years ago, and was the youngest daughter of William A. Williams, who will be recalled by the older generation as the leading jeweler of his time. She married Joseph T. Coldwell, who served under Lee in the confederacy. Twenty years ago Mrs. Coldwell suffered a shock in the loss of her husband, who at that time was a prominent real estate dealer. Mr. Coldwell was knocked down at the corner of 11th street and Pennsylvania avenue by a horse and died a few days later. She was a devoted wife, and the loss of her husband completely prostrated her. She never fully recovered, and had been ailing for a long time. Deceased was a woman of the most lovable character, and her death will be keenly felt by a large circle of devoted friends and acquaintances.

Cole, Mrs. Adeline A. Cole. On the evening of the 1st instant, at her residence on Pennsylvania avenue, Adelia A., wife of S.L. Cole, aged 36 years. Her friends and acquaintances are respectfully invited to attend her funeral this morning, at 11 o'clock. The subject of the above paragraph was truly the embodiment of female excellence -- a mother in the most elevated and ennobling sense of the word, and a fond and beloved companion, esteemed and admired by all who moved within the sphere of her acquaintance. Commanding in an enlarged degree those refined attributes of character which dignify and adorn her sex, to those who appreciated the virtues she was a continuous center of attraction. Endowed by nature with a warm and confiding temperament, secured to her a constant incentive to humane action. She has left an affectionate husband and tender offspring to deplore her early departure.	d. 1 Jun 1853	36 yrs.	R57/222

Almost Lifelong Resident of Washington--Employe of Government Printing Office Since 1876

Ira E. Cole, one of the oldest residents of the District, died early today at his home 723 8th street northeast, in his ninety-second year.

Mr. Cole spent the greater part of his life as a pressman, a large part of the time at the government printing office remaining on the job until the spring of 1919, when he was ninety years of age.

He is survived by eight children, thirty-six grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren. For several years past it has been the custom of the three generations to gather at Mr. Cole's home on the anniversaries of his birth for a celebration with him. The last of these reunions was held in September, when he was ninety-one.

Mr. Cole was born near the Kalb, St. Lawrence county, NY in 1829. Before he reached school age his parents moved to Oswego county -- about the year 1834. The little schoolhouse was so distant from his hoe that Mr. Cole could only attend when the roads were in good condition.

He worked on his father's farm until he was sixteen, when he became an apprentice in a printing office. At the outbreak of the civil war Mr. Cole enlisted in Company G, 81st New York Volunteers. During the three years of his enlistment he participated in twenty-one engagements.

In September, 1864 he returned to Oswego, and entered a printing office, remaining there eleven years. In February of 1876 he was appointed to a position in the government printing office in this city.

Mr. Cole's wife died in 1905. One of his children, Arthur G. Cole, is chief clerk of the District health department. Burial will be in Congressional cemetery. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Mr. Cole was a member of Lincoln Post, G.A.R., the National Union and a life member of Printing Pressmen's Union No. 1.

His Eightieth Birthday

Veteran Printing Office Pressman Greeted by His Friends

Ira E. Cole, one of the oldest residents of the National Capital, celebrated the eightieth anniversary of his birth last night at his residence, 723 8th street northeast. He was surrounded by seven of his eight children, their wives and husbands, and twenty-nine of his grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. One son resides in California. The first break in Mr. Cole's large family was the death of Mrs. Cole, April 23, 1905.

Mr. Cole is very active, attending to his work daily at the government printing office. He has recently returned from an extended visit to his old home and friends in Oswego and Mexico, N.Y.

He received yesterday many tokens of affection, including letters and cards from out-of-town friends. After a pleasant evening a repast was enjoyed by all and three rousing cheers echoed through the house wishing Mr. Cole many more years.

Mr. Cole was born in DeKalb, St. Lawrence county, N.Y., September 28, 1829, but his parents early in his life moved to Oswego, N.Y., where he resided until 1876, when he received an appointment in the government printing office. He then moved to Washington and has been continuously in the service of the government, being now one of the oldest pressmen at the printing office.

He was confined to his home during the past ten days, and Wednesday evening he became unconscious. Death, which occurred about 6 o'clock this morning, was directly due to congestion of the brain.  Mr. Colegate was a member of one of the oldest and most highly respect families of Washington. He was the nephew and namesake of Dr. Hall, an able physician and man of wealth, who endowed many notable institutions. The deceased was born in this city and lived here all his life, and was 49 years of age. He studied law with the firm of the late Richard Merrick and Justice Morris of the District Court of Appeals, and at one time held an important position in the State Department. He was a brother of Mr. Gibson Colegate of the firm of R.O. Holtzman & Co., and has a brother who is connected with the New York custom house. The deceased has several sisters, one being the wife of Col. Theodore Mosher, adjutant general of the District of Columbia militia, and another the wife of Col. Skater Meets Death

Leroy A. Coleman the Victim of Accident

Popular High School Cadet Breaks Through the Ice at the Tidal Basin

A fatal skating accident occurred yesterday afternoon in the tidal basin near the Long bridge. The victim was Leroy A. Coleman, who lived at 604 Spruce street southwest. He was seventeen years old. The boy lost his life near the inlet of the basin where the ice was not thick enough to hold his weight, and apparently resulted from an effort on his part to reach the sea wall. It was about 3:45 o'clock when the accident happened, and the police report that the body was recovered at 5:20 o'clock. Policeman Peyton had warned the boy of the danger of skating near the thin ice, and the latter kept a safe distance from the danger points until he had almost crossed the basin.

Elliott Mason, living at 606 Spruce street, a companion of Coleman, was with him at the time of the fatal accident occurred. There were but few persons on the ice when Coleman and his companion reached there. They went first to the fish ponds, where they found the ice was too rough for good skating, and went from there to the basin. C.B. Harrington of 622 6th street and Truman Krauskopf of 629 E street were skating on the ice together when Coleman and Mason, both high school boys, came along. Harrington and his companion were skylarking when the boys appeared, and no attention was paid to the late comers until Coleman went through the thin ice. His weight broke the ice for quite a distance around him and he started to swim toward the thick ice. He lost his hat and turned to get it when Harrington called, "Let the hat go."

Harrington and Mason removed their coats and did their best to get the garments to him in order that they might be able to rescue him. Finding their efforts futile they hurried to a tugboat about fifty feet away to get a boat. There was a small craft there, but it was fast in the ice, and all the young men could get was a board. Returning to the break in the ice, they started to use the board, and it was about this time that Coleman uttered a groan and went down.

Aid Summoned

A pole with a nail driven in one end was procured, and with this Harrington was able to prevent the sinking of the body. While this was being done messages were sent in every direction summoning assistance. The police of the third and fourth precincts, the harbormaster's crew and Dr. Perkins of the Emergency Hospital staff responded. It had been impossible for Mason and Harrington to go on the thin ice to save Coleman. Policemen Peyton and Creagh cooperated with Sergeant Doyle and several volunteers. It was only after considerable difficulty that the rescuing party, by aid of a small boat, recovered the body.

Life had been extinct for so long that nothing could be done, and the body was removed to the morgue. Coroner Nevitt viewed the body, heard statements of the affair and gave a certificate of accidental death.

The coroner said he was satisfied that Coleman was frozen to death and that he was not drowned. Witnesses, he said, assured him that every effort was made to save the boy's life, and those who made the effort did succeed in keeping his body near the surface and his head out of the water until life was extinct.

Popular High School Student

The parents of the boy and his many friends were shocked terribly upon receipt of the news of his death. They are deeply grateful to those who rendered aid. Many sympathetic messages from friends have been received by the parents. Young Coleman was a pupil in the Business High School and was a member of the cadet company. He was transferred there this year from Central High School. He was extremely popular with the teachers and his school companions. The deceased was also a member of the choir of the Gurley Memorial Church and was vice president of the Christian Endeavor Society of the same church. His funeral will take place from the church tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The interment will be at Congressional cemetery and will be private.

The pallbearers will be Arthur L. Reiner, Lewis Q. Doyle, James Cooper, Charles Merwin, Fred Newburg and John Goodman, all of whom are members of the church choir.

Funeral Services Over the Remains of Leroy A. Coleman

Funeral services over the remains of Leroy A. Coleman were held this afternoon in Gurley Memorial Presbyterian Church at 2:30 o'clock, and were conducted by Rev. J.R. Verbrycke. The services were conducted according to the ritual of the Presbyterian Church, after which "Lead, Kindly Light," was rendered by the church choir.

A company of cadets from the Business High School, of which the deceased was a member, attended in a body. The floral offerings were many and beautiful, and attested the high esteem in which the young man was held. A handsome wreath was received from his fellow-students of the Business High School.

The pallbearers were Arthur L. Reiner, Lewis Q. Doyle, James Cooper, Charles Merwin, Fred Newberg and John Goodman.

As was stated in The Star of yesterday, young Coleman met his death while skating with a companion last Tuesday afternoon on the tidal basin by breaking through the ice.

Interment was made in Congressional cemetery.

Resided Here Nearly 40 Years
Death of Philip W. Coleman of the Pension Office
Principal Examiner and Assistant Chief --
Veteran of Civil War, Dies of Heart Disease
Philip W. Coleman, principal examiner and assistant chief of the board of review of the pension bureau, veteran of the civil war and a resident of the District of Columbia for nearly forty years, died yesterday afternoon at 3:40 o'clock at the home of his son-in-law, Fred L. Fishback, 907 S street. The immediate cause of his demise was disease of the heart.
The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the Fishback residence. The officiating clergymen will be Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, pastor of the First Congregational Church, and Rev. Stephen M. Newman, D.D., who was for twenty years pastor of that congregation. Members of Ki Carson Post, No. 2, G.A.R., will conduct services at the grave in Congressional cemetery.
Mr. Coleman was appointed to a position in the pension bureau February 1, 1877, after he had been an employe of the House of Representatives eight years. He went through the various grades in the pension bureau and at the time of his death was principal examiner and assistant chief of the board of review.
Born in Ontario
He was born in the Province of Ontario, Canada, of parents who were natives of Michigan. While he was a small child the family moved back into Michigan. The date of his birth was September 24, 1841. He enlisted as a private in Company I, 8th Michigan Volunteer Infantry, August 23, 1861. At the battle of James Island, S.C., June 16, 1862, he lost his left arm and received other wounds. He was discharged October 28, 1862, for disability by reason of wounds received in action.
Mr. Coleman was a graduate of the law school of the University of Michigan, and was clerk of Shiawasse county, Mich., for several years. He was secretary of the Michigan State Association of this city in 1883, and at the time of his death was a member of Kit Carson Post, No. 2, G.A.R. Mr. Coleman was an active member of the First Congregational Church, and for a number of years was a member of its choir, serving with the late Dr. Bischoff, its former long-time leader. He was also a member of the Soldiers' Union of the First Congregational Church. Mrs. Fred L. Fishback of this city is his only surviving child.

Sudden Death of A Lady

Mrs. W.J. Collamer left her residence, No. 1635 10th street, Thursday morning, to go to her dressmaker's on 14th street. She had been ill for several days, and it is thought that the exertion of walking precipitated her trouble and possibly affected her mind temporarily, as she was next seen in the afternoon by Mrs. Newkirk holding to the railing in front of her house, corner of 2d and B streets northwest. She was a stranger to Mrs. Newkirk, but was invited in to rest, and complained of feeling faint, and getting worse, Drs. Tarkinton and Johnson were called in, and done what they could for her. Before becoming delirious she gave her husband's name, and a messenger was dispatched for him. She died at 8 o'clock last night.

Man's Body Found In RiverBelieved to Be That of George W. Collins, 64, Who Is Missing

George Frye, colored, employed at a stone quarry about a mile above the Aqueduct bridge, reported this afternoon that he had found the body of a one-armed white man floating in the river near his place of employment. The body was made fast to the shore, he stated. The harbor police went for it this afternoon.

It is probable the body is that of George W. Collins, sixty-four years old, member of the G.A.R., and retired from business, who yesterday morning disappeared from his home, 1417 G street northeast, although no description of the body was given by Frye other than he had only one arm.

Mr. Collins' left arm was off below the elbow. Yesterday morning Mr. Collins left home about 9 o'clock. He was in his short sleeves, and he said nothing to his daughter as to where he was going.

"It was the first time he had ever been away without telling where he was going," said William M. Collins, son of the missing man who is employed as clerk in the Navy Department.

Young Mr. Collins said his father was not a robust man, although he had not complained of being ill lately. He was unable to believe his father had jumped overboard. Until the body reaches the morgue late this afternoon there will be no positive identification of it.

The Evening Star, August 3, 1913, p. 2George W. Collins Drowned In RiverFour Stab Wounds in Body Believed by Coroner to Have Been Self-InflictedFound By Colored Man Near the Dixie LandingVictim Had Been Melancholy Owing to Illness--Autopsy Disproves Murder Theory

Rumors of a murder spread through the police department yesterday afternoon following the finding of the body of George W. Collins, sixty-four years old, of 1417 G street northeast, in the river with four stab wounds near the heart.

Detectives from police headquarters hurried to the District morgue, while the police of the seventh precinct started an investigation when informed of the stabs in the body. An autopsy performed several hours later however, led the coroner and the detectives to believe that the wounds were self inflicted.

The autopsy revealed that death resulted from drowning, and not from the wounds, however. The fact that water was found in the lungs showed that death had resulted after the body was in the water, although it is declared by the acting coroner that the wounds would have later resulted in death, as the lungs had been punctured.

Body Found By George Frye

The body was found floating in the river near Dixie Landing by George Frye, colored, while he was crossing to the District side from one of the stone quarries in Virginia.

William M. Collins, a son, was at the morgue about the time the body reached there in charge of the harbor police, and he identified it. Young Mr. Collins, who is employed as a clerk in the Navy Department, was unable to conceal his grief. He had last seen his father alive when he went to his place of employment from his home at 1417 G street northeast Friday morning, and when he reached home that afternoon and learned of the absence of his father he became alarmed and appealed to the police to find him.

Dr Charles M. Emmons, acting deputy coroner, performed the autopsy at the morgue, and while he reached the conclusion that death had resulted from drowning he stated the wounds were a contributing cause.

It was found that a knife blade had passed between the ribs and touched the lungs and a serious hemorrhage had resulted.

Police Trace His Movements

As soon as it was learned that there were stab wounds in the body Capt. Schneider of the seventh precinct and Lieut. Giles of the Tenleytown police district started an investigation along the river with a view to tracing Collins' movements prior to his disappearance. Detectives Evans and O'Dea also took a hand in the investigation, the former being in attendance at the morgue when Dr. Emmons performed the autopsy.

Mounted Policeman Kuster learned that Harry Troup, son of a foreman on the canal,, had rowed Mr. Collins across the canal near the outlet lock, about one mile from the Aqueduct bridge, about 2 o'clock Friday afternoon.

In order to reach the river at that point it was necessary for Mr. Collins to cross the canal. He could have reached the towpath as far east as the Aqueduct bridge or he could have passed under it had he gone as far as Lock Cove, about a mile farther west, but he probably had a reason for wanting to cross near the Troup home, where there is an opening in the canal wall.

That reason, the police think, was because he probably had stabbed himself and concluded he had made so bad a job of his attempt or was suffering so much pain that he thought jumping into the water would make certain his death. Even then he had to walk a short distance from shore in order to reach deep water.

Appeared Entirely Sober

Young Troup told Capt Schneider, Sergt. Easley and Policemen Heide and Law the story of having taken the stranger across the canal. He said there was nothing unusual about the actions of his passenger. He said he merely asked that he be taken over and the boy accommodated him. He said that the man appeared to be entirely sober and that he said nothing as to why he wanted to cross the stream or where he was going when he got across.

It appears that Mr. Collins, a sufferer from stomach trouble had been melancholy at times, although he had never given any intimation that he contemplated taking his life. The condition of his stomach as revealed by the autopsy, Dr. Emmons stated, suggested that he had been a sufferer.

When the autopsy was finished an undertaker took charge of the body and prepared it for burial. The certificate of death was not given last night. It will show that death resulted from drowning, but the question of how he got into the water will be determined probably today. Mr. Collins was a native of Delaware. He served in the civil war and many years of his life were spent in Philadelphia. He resided at the G street address with his son and daughter. Funeral arrangements will be completed today.

Declared Suicide Victim

Funeral Services for George W. Collins, Civil War Veteran, Tuesday

Nothing having been ascertained by the police to suggest tht George W. Collins, civil war veteran, whose body was recovered from the upper Potomac, has been murdered, following his disappearance Friday morning from his home, 1417 G street northeast, a certificate of death setting out that he committed suicide was given.

The body was yesterday removed to the late home of the veteran, and arrangements have been made to have the funeral services held there tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Rev. E. Hez Swem, pastor of Centennial Baptist Church will officiate. Interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

Report Discredits Foul Play

Police Still Maintain That G.W. Collins Committed Suicide

Nothing has been found that would indicate that George W. Collins, whose body was found in the river Saturday, had met with foul play, according to a report based upon investigations made by Detective Evans.

The report tells of the disappearance of Mr. Collins and of the subsequent finding of the body. It says Collins left his home in his shirt sleeves and next was seen about five hours later, when he asked a boy to row him across the canal. He was alone. The four stab wounds in the left chest. Detective Evans suggests, were probably inflicted by Mr. Collins just before he went into the river. The pockets of his trousers showed no signs of having been disturbed, the police say, and nothing was found to suggest he had been robbed.

Some of Mr. Collins' friends are still of the opinion that he did not commit suicide. They have given the police no reason for the belief that he was murdered, however, and the police maintain that the certificate of suicide correctly stated the case.

Death Accidental, Coroner's Verdict

Jury Holds Hitting of Mrs. Margaret C. Collins by Auto Unavoidable

Life of Woman Gone on Reaching Hospital

Seven Witnesses Testify, Giving Versions of Just How the Accident Happened

A verdict of accidental death was returned by a corner's jury today in the case of Mrs. Margaret C. Collins, wife of C. Fenton Collins, druggist at 1201 New Jersey avenue northwest, who was almost instantly killed last night by being knocked down by an automobile after having alighted from a street car at 7th street and Rhode Island avenue northwest shortly before 7:30 o'clock. The jury was of the opinion the accident was unavoidable.

Seven witnesses were examined by Coroner Nevitt.

Dr. C.P. King of Garfield Hospital was first called. He stated that Mrs. Collins was practically dead when brought to the hospital, no pulse action being detected.

Dr. White, deputy coroner, who performed the autopsy, stated that he found the body was bruised and that the skull was fractured on the left side. Death was due to hemorrhage of the brain.

Gives Version of the Accident

Alfred H. Fink, who was in the auto when the accident occurred, testified that when he first saw Mrs. Collins it was after Mr. Forden had called out, and the car was then upon her and she went under it. The proper signals were blown, he said, as the car crossed 7th street. After striking the woman the car went ten or eleven feet before stopping.

The car was going about eight or ten miles an hour, he said.

J.L. Farden, a medical student, who was also in the car with Williams and Fink, stated that the first he saw of Mrs. Collins she was rushing across the street and, was almost upon the car. He called out, but as he did so the car struck her and she fell. The car did not go over her.

He jumped from the car, went to the woman and assisted in picking her up and carried her to the hospital. Mrs. Collins did not seem to see the automobile as she came from behind a crowd standing on the corner of 7th street and Rhode Island avenue he said.

Witness thought the car was going about ten miles an hour when the woman was struck.

Saw Mrs. Collins Struck

John E. Chrisman, 610 L street southwest, passed across the street just ahead of the machine and as he stepped on the curb the accident occurred. He saw Mrs. Collins dragged about six feet after being struck, and the car ran about fifteen feet before King stopped, he added.

James McCann, 168 Bryan street, saw the machine strike Mrs. Collins, and he says she fell, striking the back of her head on the paving.

T.B. Harris, colored, 242 M street northwest said he saw the car strike the woman and that it only went five or six feet after she was struck.

In Charge of Automobile

Arthur L. Williams, twenty-one years old residing at 1642 6th street northwest, partner of J.S. Berryman in the automobile and motorcycle business at 912 9th street, was operating the racer when the accident happened. Seated in the car with him were Alvin H Fink, a sheep raiser from Texas, who is visiting at 1528 8th street northwest and Joseph L. Farden, 1017 9th street northwest.

Mrs. Collins left her home at 627 North Carolina avenue southeast, last night to attend a millinery class at the McKinley School building. She was a trifle late, it is stated, and when she left a northbound car at 7th and R streets she turned south and started running in the direction of the school building, having in her hand the frame of a partly trimmed hat.

The automobile crossed 7th street from the west. Williams and his friends declaring it was going at a speed of not more than eight miles an hour, and when Williams saw Mrs. Collins, he later stated he thought there was no danger of his car striking her.

It is thought a fracture of the base of the skull resulted from her head striking the pavement. Williams brought his car to a stop as quickly as possible and had his companions lift Mrs. Collins into the vehicle. A hurried run to Garfield Hospital was made, Williams thinking prompt treatment might save her life, but she died about the time the hospital was reached.

Williams Under Arrest

Dr. C.P. King examined the body and pronounced life extinct. The body was placed in the hospital morgue, where it was today viewed by the jury of inquest. Coroner Nevitt reached the hospital soon after the accident happened, and found a fracture at the base of the skull. There was no mutilation of the body and identification was not difficult.

Mrs. Collins' name was in the hat frame she dropped and was the means of identifying her. Mr. Collins visited the hospital as soon as he learned of the accident.

Realizing the police would have to take action against him, Williams remained at the hospital until Policeman J.J. Geier of the eighth precinct came and placed him under arrest, in order to hold him until Coroner Nevitt concluded his investigation. Bond was not accepted last night, and Williams was detained until he was taken to the inquest today.

Colquitt, Walter Luke

d. 20 Mar 1846

Public Vault ®\* Removed to Alabama, January 1, 1850 ***

Colquitt. Died, in this city, on the 18th instant, Walter Luke, infant son of the Hon. Walter T. Colquitt, Senator from the State of Georgia. The death of this interesting little child has in it much of melancholy, and yet of consolation. So lovely in person, and so promising in its just unfolding intellect, it has twined itself most tenderly around the hearts of its parents, and they fondly clung to the hope it would prove an ornament and a beauty in life. But just as its little faculties began to develop themselves most sweetly, the hand of death removed it from the world, and left sorrow in its stead. And yet there is consolation in the bereavement. Such little "blossoms of being" are the special favorites of Heaven. It has been removed from a world of sin and suffering to the "spirit land," whose purity and beauty is constituted "of such as these." Though the parents have lost a child, Heaven has received another cherub. When asking, as of old, in the midst of their bereavement, "Is it well with the child?" haply they may hear the voice of Divine Love reply, "It is well." Then let them think upon and treasure up the consolation of which these lines are redolent to a Christian heart:

"Ere sin could blight, or sorrow fade,
Death came, with friendly care;
The opening bud to heaven conveyed,
And bade it blossom there."

The National Intelligencer, December 1, 1845 The Penitentiary at Greenleaf's Point, of which Mr. Robert Coltman has lately been appointed Warden, was visited by us a few days ago, and found to be in admirable order. There are now in confinement fifty-seven prisoners. Of these fifty-four are males, and three females. Of the males there are twenty-seven colored and twenty-four white men. In the female department of the prison there are only one white and two colored women. The workshops in the male department are kept in good order. In the boot and shoemaking department, where most of the male prisoners labor, work of an excellent kind is made, and a regular supply of boots and shoes kept up. Good brooms and substantial wheelbarrows are also manufactured in other parts of the prison.
With a view to the comfort of the prisoners, we understand the Warden has lately introduced an additional stove of great capacity into the male wing of the building, so as to warm thoroughly all the cells occupied by the men. The women's department is already sufficiently heated. He has it in contemplation to suggest some arrangements which will permit them to take more exercise than they can do at present. The health of the prisoners is remarkably good. We learn that only two of them have been sick during the late fall, and those had fever and ague. There was not a single death in the penitentiary during the last year.

The Remains Brought From Arizona for Interment Here
Robert M. Combs died at Phoenix, Ariz., the 14th instant, and the announcement was a great shock to his many friends in Washington. Mr. Combs had been in delicate health, and left here for Arizona about a year ago, in the hope that the climate there would be of benefit to him. For a time he improved, and his letters to friends here were very encouraging, but a sudden and unexpected hemorrhage terminated fatally.
Mr. Combs was a young man of much promise and a member of one of Washington's oldest families. He had a host of friends here. His remains arrived in the city this morning, and the funeral ceremonies will take place tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Congressional cemetery.

Mr. John W. Compton, a well known deaf mute clerk in the Sixth Auditor's office, Treasury department, died at his residence, 512 9th street northwest, in the 57th year of his age, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He had been efficient and faithful in the government service for thirty-five years, and was a native of Georgetown, D.C.
The Evening Star, November 8, 1878
The Funeral of the Late John W. Compton, the well known deaf mute clerk, who for a long series of years has been attached to the office of the Second Comptroller of the Treasury, took place from his late residence, No. 512 9th street, yesterday afternoon. There were present a very large attendance of friends of the deceased, including Dr. E.M. Gallaudet and officers and students of the National Deaf Mute College, many of his fellow clerks, and a large number of our oldest citizens. The remains were clothed in a full suit of black cloth, and were in state casket, heavily silver mounted with bar handles, full glass top, with the name and age of the deceased on the silver plate. There rested upon the coffin a profusion of floral ornaments, including an anchor, a pillow on which was the word "rest," and several bouquets. The services were conducted by Rev. A.T. Steele, of St. Mark's (P.E.) Church, Capitol Hill, an old personal friend of deceased, who feelingly spoke of the worth of the deceased, who feelingly spoke of the worth of the deceased as a friend and a Christian, and his remarks were interpreted in the sign language to the mutes present, his widow being herself a deaf mute. The corpse was followed by a large cortege of carriages to the Congressional Cemetery, where after the conclusion of the service they were placed by Mr. Speare in a vault, and they will be hereafter removed to Greenwood, N.Y. The pall bearers were Melville Ballard, C.W.K. Strong, and ___ Fowler, deaf mutes, James Smith, Byron H. Murphy, and J.E. Ellegood.

Funeral of George W. Conn
Veteran of Mexican War Dies at Age of Eighty-Six
The funeral of Mr. George W. Conn, who died at the home of his son, Mr. George Pendleton Conn, 606 Park road northwest, as stated in The Star yesterday, took place this afternoon at 3 o'clock.
Prayer and benediction was offered by Rev. Donald McLeod, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. The pall bearers were Messrs. Jesse D. Prosis, Robert E. Prosis, William F. Drown, Benjamin F. Martin, M. Buchannon and A.R. Pinci.
The interment was private at Congressional Cemetery.
The deceased was a native of Louisiana and was one of the original forty-niners in the rush to California in search of gold. When war was declared between this country and Mexico Mr. Conn was teaching school in Mississippi and he immediately enlisted in the Texas Rangers, with which he served throughout the war. At the storming of the citadels of the City of Mexico Mr. Conn participated, as a soldier of the army of Gen. Winfield Scott.
When the war came to a close it was his intention to return to his southern home, but the gold rush to California came about this time and he went to the golden gate country in search of the yellow metal. With the breaking out of yellow fever in California, Mr. Conn came east and began the practice of law in this city in 1856. He was later appointed to a clerkship in the land office, where he served for over ten years. He took to the law again, but relinquished it to take a position in the Post Office Department, where he remained for twenty-five years. He resigned about five years ago on account of his age.

Coody, William Shorey Cherokee Statesman. Legate to Washington.	d. 1806 – d. 16 Apr 1849	43 yrs.	R43/50

William Coody was the nephew of the famous Cherokee Chief, John Ross. He was educated ... William Coody owned a large farm not far from New Echota at the foot of Lookout Mountain. In the spring of 1833 he played host to Joseph Nicollet (R37/27) who was on an extended scientific tour of the Southeast. In 1839, after the forced removal to the West, he drafted the Constitution of the United (Eastern and Western) Cherokee Nation, and as a delegate to the national convention was one of the signators of the document on September 6, 1839. In 1840 he was elected President of the Senate in the 1st Council of the Cherokee Nation -- Bluford West (R40/89) and Thomas Pegg (R40/44) were fellow Senators and Ezekial Starr (R40/90) was a councilor. Later William Shorey Coody was elected Senator from the Canadian District (also elected President of the Senate) and served until his death in 1849. Coody was a delegate to Washington, D.C. in 1839 and 1845.

William Coody was a correspondent of the American Philosophical Society and was described as "slim and handsome" and a "hand-picked patriot" of the Cherokee nation.

William Shorey Coody was the son of Joseph Coody and Jennie Ross (sister of chief John Ross). His grandparents were Mary McDonald who was born Nov. 1, 1770 and married Daniel Ross, a Scotsman born in 1760 in Sutherlandshire, Scotland. She died Oct. 5, 1808 and he May 22, 1830. His great-grandparents were Annie Shory and John McDonald. His great-great-grandparents were Ghigooie, a full-blood Cherokee of the Bird Clan, who married William Shorey, a Scotsman.

Eyewitness to America, David Colbert (ed)
The Trail of Tears Begins (pp 154-155)

In 1824 about seventy-seven thousand Indians were living east of the Mississippi River, according to estimates given to the secretary of war. By 1840, almost all the tribes had been "removed," pushed westward to make room for new settlers.

In the series of forced marches that has become known as the 'Trail of Tears,' fourteen thousand Cherokees were driven out of Georgia and Tennessee into Oklahoma. About four thousand died along the way.

Coody, who witnessed the first of the thirteen drives, described the scene in this letter to a friend.

August 28, 1838

The entire Cherokee population was captured by the U.S. troops under General [Winfield] Scott in 1838 and marched to, principally, the border of Tennessee where they were encamped in large bodies until the time of their final removal west. At one of these encampments twelve miles south of the Agency and Headquarters of Genl. Scott, was organized the first detachment for marching under the arrangement committing the whole management of the emigration into the hands of the Cherokees themselves.

The first of September was fixed as the time for a part to be in motion on the route. Much anxiety was felt, and great exertions made by the Cherokees to comply with everything reasonably to be expected of them, and it was determined that the first detachment would move in the last days of August.

I left the Agency on the 27th, after night, and watched the encampment above alluded to, early the following morning for the purpose of aiding in the arrangements necessary to get a portion in motion on that day -- the remainder to follow the next day and come up while the first were crossing the Tennessee River, about twelve miles distant.

At noon all was in readiness for moving; the teams were stretched out in a line along the road through a heavy forest, groups of persons formed about each wagon, others shaking the hand of some sick friend or relative who would be left behind. The temporary camp covered with boards and some of bark that for three summer months had been their only shelter and home, were crackling and falling under a blazing flame; the day was bright and beautiful, but a gloomy thoughtfulness was depicted in the lineaments of every face. In all the bustle of preparation there was a silence and stillness of the voice that betrayed the sadness of the heart.

At length the word was given to "move on." I glanced along the line and the form of Going Snake, an aged and respected chief whose head eighty winters had whitened, mounted on his favorite pony passed before me and led the way in advance, followed by a number of young men on horse back.

At this very moment a low sound of distant thunder fell on my ear. In almost an exact western direction a dark spiral cloud was rising above the horizon and sent forth a murmur I almost fancied a voice of divine indignation for the wrongs of my poor and unhappy countrymen, driven by brutal power from all they loved and cherished in the land of their fathers, to gratify the cravings of avarice. The sun was unclouded -- no rain fell -- the thunder rolled away and sounds hushed in the distance. The scene around and before me, and in the elements above, were peculiarly impressive and singular. It was at once spoken of by several persons near me, and looked upon as omens of some future event in the west.

The National Intelligencer, April 17, 1849

Capt. Cook Found Dead In Gas-Filled Room
River Master Believed to Have Committed Suicide Because of Ill Health
Capt. George Cook, well known about the river front, was found dead in bed in his room at 1124 Robinson street southwest this morning about 5 o'clock with gas flowing from an open jet. His mother, Mrs. Mary Cook, detected the odor of gas and going to his room found him lifeless.
It is believed that Capt. Cook had become despondent because of bad health. He had been ill since the Christmas holidays last year, and had been confined to his home most of the time. Yesterday, it is stated, the question of sending him to a hospital was discussed by members of his family, and the captain is said to have objected to going.
Was Alive at 2 O'Clock
As late as 2 o'clock this morning, Capt. Cook was seen by a member of the family, and it is supposed he turned on the gas shortly after that time. It was three hours later when his mother went to his room.
The deceased was a native of this city, and was forty years old. He was thoroughly familiar with the Potomac river from its source to its mouth and had served in different capacities on many of the steamers, having been captain of the River Queen and Harry Randall. His mother and two daughters survive him. His wife died about ten years ago.
Coroner Gives Certificate
Coroner Nevitt viewed the body this morning and heard statements of relatives of the deceased. He was told that Cook had displayed evidences of mental aberration, and that some time ago he came near destroying the house by fire.
The coroner reached the conclusion tht the gas was turned on by Cook for the purpose of ending his life.

Funeral of Capt. Cook
Harry Randall and Other Well Known Boatmen to Be Pallbearers
Funeral services for Capt. George Cook, who ended his life yesterday morning by inhaling illuminating gas because he feared he would have to go to the Government Hospital for the Insane, will be held at his late home, 1124 Robinson street southwest, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.
Following a brief service at the house, the body will be taken to Gorsuch Church, 4 1/2 and L streets southwest, where a final service will be conducted by the pastor. Those who will serve as pallbearers are Capt. Harry Randall, Marion Good, Capt. Al Richards, Charles Cogswell, Capt. George Baggett and George Jones. Interment will be in Congressional cemetery.
Cook, George R.	b. 1839 - d. 25 Aug 1932		R61/220
The Evening Star, October 13, 1912, pt. 2, p. 2
A reception will be given in celebration of their golden wedding anniversary by Mr. and Mrs. George R. Cook at their residence, 712 4th street southeast, Wednesday, October 16. Several hundred guests have been invited. The celebrants will received a number of beautiful gifts in token of the occasion.
Both Mr. and Mrs. Cook are in good health and happy in the retention of youthful spirits and interests. He was born here in 1839, the son of James R. and Sarah Cook, and has resided here ever since, and seen the development of the National Capital from the time when the stage coach ran from the navy yard gate to Georgetown. Educated in the public schools of the District of Columbia, Mr. Cook was a pupil in an old school on the site of the present Brent School, at 3d and D streets southeast.

Mr. Cook at the age of twenty-three married Miss Annie E. Creighton, daughter of Capt. Sam Creighton of Baltimore. That was during the height of the civil war period. Young Cook had previously answered the first call for 75,000 volunteers and been mustered in as a member of Company B, 4th Battalion, D.C. Volunteers, after having served in the Washington Light Guards under Capt. S.A.H. Marks, jr. With other members of that organization, Mr. Cook participated as guard during the ceremonies attendant upon the inauguration of President Lincoln. Those times were troublous, and it will be remembered that Mr. Lincoln is said to have entered Washington in disguise before the inauguration, and a strong force of regulars and militia, under command of Gen. Winfield Scott, was employed to prevent violence during the inaugural period.

Wed in the midst of the war the Cooks were separated much, for a time, and the twenty-year-old bride became familiar with anxious nights spent awaiting news from the front. Mr. Cook was stationed for some time in forts near Washington. He served as enrolling officer and finally was detailed to duty at the foundry in the Washington navy yard. His service in the yard has been practically continuous since then. For many years he has been, and still is, a master mechanic in Uncle Sam's principal big-gun factory. Despite his seventy-three years, he does a full day's work, supervising 200 men, and keeps up to date on matters connected with his trade. Not long ago he learned steel making.

Mr. Cook is a member of Farragut Post, No. 10, G.A.R. For sixty years he has been an active member of the M.E. Church. He and his wife have for many years attended the old Fourth Street and Trinity M.E. churches where Mr. Cook has been for a quarter of a century recording steward and superintendent of the Sunday schools.

The golden wedding celebration will be participated in by Mr. and Mrs. Cook's only children, Robert E., Harry P. and Elmon A. Cook, and the latter's wives, and by the grandchildren, Misses Julia and Dorothy, daughters of Robert and Elmon Cook, respectively, as well as by many other relatives and friends.

Cook. On Sunday evening last, Mrs. Jane Summers Cook, wife of Mr. Peter W. Cook, of this city, in the 22d year of her age. While the relations and friends of this affable woman lament her early death, they have the consolation not to sorrow, as those who are without hope. During her lingering and painful illness, her mind became gradually resigned to the divine will of her Maker, and she died in the cheering assurance of a future happy state of existence in another and a better world.

Found Drowned

Late yesterday afternoon the body of an unknown white man was found floating in the Eastern Branch, a few years from the Anacostia Bridge, and was towed ashore by Wm. Bailey, Herbert Lewis and Pat Gardner. It had apparently been in the water several days, and was much swollen. From appearances the deceased was about forty years old, heavily built, with black curly hair and sandy mustache, wore a black alpaca coat, dark pants, gold studs and gold rings. The body was removed to Lieutenant Austin's precinct, and the coroner notified.

Later.--The body was today identified as that of Mr. Lewis G. Cook, a mate in the U.S. Navy, and a highly respected citizen of East Washington. Mr. Cook served in the Potomac flotilla during the late war. The jury found that his death was by drowning, on the 7th of August, between the hours of 4 and 6 o'clock, and was accidental.

The Evening Star, August 9, 1873

An Affecting Incident (Wawasett)

Among the victims was Mr. George Cook, grocer, 7th street southwest, between D and E. He had two little children with him, and while he was struggling in the water making a fight for life, he was seen holding his youngest child to the surface crying "Oh my God, save my baby!" It was supposed that the older child had already perished. There was a report that Mr. Cook was subsequently seen alive on the shore, but there has been nothing received to confirm the rumor, and it is probable that he and his two children all perished.

The Evening Star, August 11, 1873

The Body of Mr. George W. Cook, of South Washington was brought in between Chatterton and Boyd's Hole, about 12 o'clock by Mr. Robert Adams, and was at once recognized. On his person were found $51 and a silver watch. By the papers in the pockets he was at once known, and the body sent aboard the Vanderbilt, which had arrived down off the wreck.

Statement of a Boy who was Saved

A Graphic Narrative

Leslie Cook, son of George W. Cook, one of the victims about thirteen years of age was with his father on his way to see his mother, who was visiting some of her relatives near Stewart's wharf, about five or six miles below the scene of the disaster, and he reached Washington last night with his mother in the steamer Columbia. He is quite a smart-talking lad, but seems to be greatly depressed in spirits by the loss of his father. He this morning made to a representative of the Star the following statement: -- I was right in front of the engine-room a little before 12 o'clock when I saw smoke coming out, and just as I noticed it a man came running out and said to one of the engineers, who was standing by the bar-room, "The boat's afire." I got frightened and ran back towards the saloon, and the place was full of smoke, and saw father when he came down the steps, and we went on that place round by the stern and climbed over. I believe they call the place we came on the waist. We got on the rudder chains and held to them, and we could see the smoke and flames above us. All this time the people were screaming and halloing, and we were both frightened. The people kept jumping over the stern and getting on the rudder chains, and I was crowded off; but I got hold of father and clasped him round the waist, but we were both shoved off and sank. I let go my hold and went to the bottom, but I rose in about the same place, and got hold of the chain again. I looked around for father, but did not see him again. I was set on the chains very long--but it seemed a long time--before a boat took me off, and when I got to shore I went over towards the Rappahannock, and Dr. Price sent me to where my mother was."

Mr. Cook was a member of Harmony Lodge, Knights of Pythias, as also a member of Ryland chapel, and during the war was in the confederate service, serving as captain in the 15th Virginia cavalry. He has been in the grocery business latterly on 7th street southwest, and had just received a stall in Center market to go into business there. His funeral took place this afternoon.

Fire. About half-past eight o'clock, last evening, an old stable on South B, between Sixth and Seventh streets, was discovered to be on fire. The several fire engines were promptly on the spot, and to their energetic exertions are the neighborhood indebted for preventing the fire communicating to the frame buildings continuous. The building was the property of Mr. Wm. G.W. White, but occupied by Mr. John C. Cooke. Mr. C. lost a sleigh, valued at $200, four new sulky wheels, valued at $80 and about $75 worth of hay.

John C. Tompkins, aged seventeen, and James McGraw, fourteen years of age, were arrested on charge of setting the building on fire.

Mrs. Cooksey attended the Marvin M.E. Church South and took an active part in the affairs of the church. She was talented in music and had a large circle of friends, with whom she was very popular.
Funeral services were held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at her late residence. Rev. William F. Locke of Front Royal, Va., the clergyman who officiated at the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Cooksey in October, performed the last rites over the deceased. The casket was covered with flowers, the contributions of her friends and relatives. The pallbearers were Dr. W.G. Fisher, Mr. Mark A. Smith, Mr. Leonard Green, Mr. Albert Fisher, Mr. Elmer Edmonston and Mr. H. Mortimer Nisewanner. The funeral was private. The remains were interred in Congressional Cemetery.

Odd Fellows' Funeral
The Metropolis Lodge, No. 16, I.O.O.F., with Prosperi's band, paraded our streets yesterday afternoon, the occasion being the funeral of Mr. George R. Cooksey, late presiding officer of that lodge. At the house of the deceased they were met by a large delegation of mechanics, employed on the United States Treasury Extension. The remains were taken to the Christ's Church, where Rev. Mr. Morsell performed the funeral offices, and preached an appropriate sermon. The exercises at the church concluded, the corpse was conveyed to the Congressional burial ground, where the remains were interred, the final services at the grave being performed by Chaplain R.G. Campbell.

Angeline

In the Congressional Burial Ground is a tombstone on which is inscribed simply "Angeline" and "other refuge have I none."

Other refuge have I none-
 Carve ye this on my headstone,
 This, and my poor name alone,
 Angeline-plain Angeline;
 And I ask no text divine
 To illustrate life of mine;
 Neither gloss Death's truth nor garble;
 Simply on the milk-white marble
 Write-and should some tone bird warble
 The same sadness, in the gray
 Of the clamoured eye, I pray
 That ye drive it not away,
 But permit its music moan
 Utterance for the dead-cold stone,--
 "Other refuge have I none."

Angeline: no other name,
 Adjunct, antecedent fame,
 Style nor title do I claim;
 Maid or matron, widow, bride,
 Of what lineage, how allied,
 Tell not to my shame or pride.
 Green the branch or gravly mossed,
 It must fail; white death, a ghost,
 Comes in spring and autumn frost.
 Give no date for either fate:
 God's design is consummate,
 Die we early, die we late.
 So of me be nothing shown,
 Save that here, where I lie lone,
 "Other refuge have I none!"

Griffith Coombe and His Associates Were D.C. Leaders in Early Days
The shades of several actors are at my desk and I mean to call them into these stories, but I ask them to wait a week or two. There comes to me the memory of a man of early Washington. His name is in the records of the city and his descendants and collateral kindred are numerous. This man was Griffith Coombe.
Madison Davis [R53/184], an old friend of ours, read a paper before the Columbia Historical Society, November 12, 1900, on the "The Navy Yard Section During the Life of the Rev. William Ryland." You remember Madison Davis? He filled positions in the Post Office Department, and some of you knew him when he was chief clerk to the Third Assistant Postmaster General, but most of you knew him during the years he was Assistant City Postmaster. Some of you have been to the old Davis home, No. 316 A street southeast. Well, in the paper on "The Navy Yard Section During the Life of the Rev. William Ryland" is this:
"Griffith Coombe was one of the best-known men in the early days of Washington's history. He was intimately connected, socially and otherwise with Thomas Law, Frederick May and other prominent and wealthy men of Capitol Hill and other parts of the city, and was a very successful man of business. His wife was Miss Mary Pleasonton, the aunt of Gen. Alfred Pleasonton [R42/245] of subsequent military fame.

Mr. Coombe's residence, which is yet standing (1900) -- its location being the corner of Georgia avenue and Third street southeast, was one of the first houses in Washington. It was built before the seat of Government was moved from Philadelphia, and was for many years the abode of wealth, elegance and culture. Gen. Washington is said to have dined and slept in this house. Certainly Jefferson and Madison were not strangers to its generous hospitality.

It is perhaps worthy of especial mention, from a historical point of view that when Gen. Winder and his little army in 1814 retreated before the British from the Old Fields in Maryland he came into the city over what was then called the Lower Bridge, and encamped on the plain known as the Navy Yard Common. He chose, however, for his headquarters the house of Griffith Coombe; and it was there that he received, up to the hour he left with his troops for Bladensburg, the President, the Secretary of State, Mr. Monroe; the Secretary of War, Gen. Armstrong, Commodore Tingey, Commodore Barney and many other distinguished persons. I regret to see that this old house is being allowed to go to ruin. Mr. Coombe lived to extreme old age, dying, I think, in 1845 or 1846. He was a faithful attendant at Christ Episcopal Church."

The body of Griffith Coombe was put in the Coombe family vault, Congressional Cemetery, September 16, 1845. By kindness of my friend at the cemetery lodge, Lewis B. Taylor [R89/386] the superintendent, and Miss Gertrude Shelton, I can give you the names of those whose relics were laid in the Coombe vault.....

Griffith Coombe, was a son of Benjamin and Elizabeth Coombe of Delaware and he married Miss Mary Pleasonton, daughter of Jonathan and Ruhenna Pleasonton of that State, March 28, 1792. The children of Griffith and Elizabeth Coombe were Julianna, born in Philadelphia, November 14, 1793; Mary, born in Philadelphia, August 2, 1799; Ruhannah born at Washington, July 15, 1802; Elizabeth, born in Washington, January 16, 1805; James Griffith Coombe, born in Washington (I have not found the date).

Julianna Coombe married James D. Barry of Washington 1811. He died in 1856 and his widow, Julianna, lived to be 77 years old. Their descendants are numerous. Mary Coombe married Rev. David Butler, and one of their daughters married Edward Barry and another daughter married Dayton Ward. Mrs. Ward is living in Washington. Mary Barry lived to be 83.

Ruhannah Coombe married Rev. Thomas Hewett. Elizabeth Coombe married Bishop George Griswold. James Griffith Coombe married Emily L. McWilliams of southern Maryland in 1840.

The children of James Griffith Coombe and Emily were George G., Mary T., Alice Pleasonton, Thomas Rodney, Eliza Barry and Clement G. George G. Coombe married Constantine Middleton of Prince George's County, and their children were Harry, Ralph, Isabelle and William A. Coombe. Harry married a Miss Powers, Belle married, first a Mr. Harris, and has two sons, James and Ralph Harris. She married, second, Clayborne Hunter. Mary T. Coombe married William Page of Virginia and has as children Mary Emily, Anne Ramsey, Elizabeth Calhoun and Charles Craig Page. Mary Emily Page married William Letler of California and they have five children, William Bidemond, Craig, Mary, Catherine and Mildred Page Ketler. Mr. Ketler died in San Francisco in 1902. William Bidemond Ketler was killed in the World War. Mildred died in 1920. The others live in San Francisco.

Ann Ramsey Page married Gordon G. Ray of Montgomery County, Md., and they live in Mount Rainier, Md. Elizabeth Calhoun Page married Joseph F. Sheirburn of Charles County, and they have five children, William Harrison, Marjorie Elizabeth, Mary Paige, Elouise and Joseph L. Edmond Sheirburn.

A son and daughter of James Griffith Coombe and Emily L. McWilliams Coombe are living in Washington. They have a number of relics associated with the family and early Washington. I am told that they have four candlesticks which were on the altar of the first Catholic Church in Washington, Barry's Chapel. Griffith Coombe, I am told built that chapel for the Barry family. Miss Elizabeth Barry Coombe has two of the candlesticks and the others are with Mrs. Gordon G. Barry.

Mr. Coombe lived to extreme old age, dying, I think, in 1845 or 1846. He was a faithful attendant at Christ Episcopal Church.

Death of An Old Citizen

Mr. William Cooper, one of the oldest residents of this city, died this morning at his residence on south D street, between 9th and 10th streets. He was 74 years of age, born in Norwich, England, and emigrated to this country with his father when a small boy, and lived in Philadelphia until he was 17 years of age when he came to this city and learned the trade of printer. His father kept a music, job printing, and stationery store, on Pennsylvania avenue, between 9th and 10th streets, in which he was assisted by deceased, and where he learned his trade. He afterwards worked on the National Intelligencer, and when Mr. Seaton was elected Mayor, he appointed Mr. Cooper commissioner of the 4th ward, and afterwards police magistrate in the seventh ward, which position he held several years. He has for the last six or seven years held a responsible position as clerk in the Internal Revenue Department, which he had filled with entire satisfaction to the chief of the Bureau. His large circle of friends will be sorry to hear of his demise, especially those in the neighborhood where he has lived so many years and who were familiar with his social and genial nature. Mr. Cooper was formerly communicant in the Unitarian Church, but has recently been connected with the Baptist Church, of which Rev. Mr. Mendor is pastor. The funeral will take place on Monday next from his late residence.

The Evening Star, December 12, 1871

The Funeral of the late William Cooper took place from his late residence, on D street, south, yesterday afternoon, and was very largely attended; the Grand Lodge and Encampment, Magenenu Encampment and Excelsior Lodge of Odd Fellows, and Lebanon Lodge of Masons, with a number of the Oldest Inhabitants, being present. The services were conducted by Rev. C.C. Meador, and the remains were taken to the Congressional Cemetery, where they were placed in a vault temporarily.

Saw the Corner Stone Laid

Mr. John H. Semmes' Recollections of an Interesting Ceremony

"I remember the laying of the corner stone of the Washington monument," remarked Mr. John H. Semmes, the well-known B street, commissions merchant, to a Star reporter today, "as distinctly as if it had happened yesterday. If I remember the year rightly, it was the 4th of July, 1848. But some of my friends have claimed that it was in 1849. It was a beautiful day and there must have been not less than 10,000 people present. That, you know, was a big crowd in those days. All of the dignitaries of the government were there and Robt. C. Winthrop delivered the oration.

"The corner stone was laid by old Squire Clement T. Coote, who occupied some prominent position in local Masonic circles then. My position as one of the assistant marshals of the day's parade brought me just beside the old gentleman as he conducted the ceremonies, and I and Gen. Peter F. Bacon, I think, supported him, as he was quite feeble.

"Gen. Bacon at that time was the commanding officer of the District militia, but I forget whether he was the chief marshal of the parade or not. I am inclined that it was some one else. I remember well that the marshal of the parade agreed that day to keep our trappings, and when the monument was completed to again use them. But just before the monument was finished I loaned mine out and never got them again. But as it was I forgot the day of its completion, so I missed it after all.

"After the laying of the corner stone the procession was reviewed by the President Polk, I think it was, in front of Willard's Hotel.

"I never knew just why it was decided to put the monument just where it is, although I believe it was placed there because Architect Mills considered that a better foundation could be secured there than anywhere else. Mr. Mills was from South Carolina, and was, I think, the original architect of the monument. The monument lot in those days was nothing but hills and gullies, and it seemed almost incredible that such great and beautiful changes have taken place there. But such changes have taken place everywhere throughout the city, and it is very pleasant to have been permitted to live to behold such wonderful changes."

Young Bather Loses Life

Harry Cornwell Drowned Near Highway Bridge

Body Recovered by Police Boat Crew --

Dead Boy Son of Local Detective.

While bathing in the river near the south end of the Highway bridge yesterday afternoon, shortly after 4 o'clock, Harry Cornwell, eleven years old, son of Detective Fred M. Cornwell of Inspector Boardman's staff, waded too far from shore and was drowned. His brother, Fred, fourteen years old, was one of the party of bathers, and although he was unable to swim he went to the assistance of Harry. The latter did not appear on the surface after going down, however, and Harry was unable to rescue him.

When Fred Cornwell dived into the river and made an unsuccessful effort to save his brother he also came near losing his life. He swallowed considerable water, and when he came to the surface he found it necessary to call for help. James Duncan, twelve years old, living at 341 I street, also a member of the party of bathers, rushed to Fred Cornwell's assistance and saved him from drowning. He then made an unsuccessful attempt to find Harry.

Realizing there was nothing they could do the boys summoned the police to search for the body. They then left the river bank and returned to the city. Mrs. Cornwell was prostrated by the sad intelligence being imparted to her by her son. Detective Cornwell hurried to the harbor precinct, when he learned of the accident, reaching there after the members of the crew of the police boat had gone with the two young bathers to the scene of the drowning.

Body Recovered

Shortly after reaching the point where Harry Cornwell sank, the members of the crew of the police boat recovered the body, finding it on the bottom of the river near where the boy disappeared from view. The body was removed to the morgue. The boys had been in bathing there three times before yesterday, but, it is stated, on the former occasions the tide was low and they were able to wade out a long distance without endangering their lives. Yesterday they neglected to give proper attention to the condition of the tide.

Undertaker Lee took charge of the body at the morgue and removed it to his establishment, where it was prepared for burial. Today the body was removed to 359 I street southwest, where the funeral will take place Monday. The interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

Remains of Dr. Eppa Coumbe Rescued From the Bay

The body of Dr. Eppa H. Coumbe, who fell out of a sailboat and was drowned Thursday last in Comet bay, off the eastern shore of Maryland, was recovered in the deep water near the palce of the accident last evening. Dr. Oscar H. Coumbe, a brother of the deceased, who is now at Chapel Point, telegraphed the family here last night to the effect that the remains had been found. The friends had practically given up all hope, as several days had elapsed since the drowning.

The body is now on the way from Chapel Point, on Chesapeake bay, and is expected to arrive at Washington tomorrow. It will be conveyed to the residence of Dr. Oscar H. Coumbe, 1312 9th street. The funeral will take place from that number, but no arrangements can be attempted until the arrival of the remains. No information other than the telegram announcing the finding of the body had reached Washington up to this afternoon.

Dr. Coumbe Dies; Was Native of City

Physician Succumbs After Brief Illness--Practiced Here for Years

Dr. Oscar H. Coumbe, 66 years old, for many years a prominent physician of this city and a native Washingtonian, died at his residence, 1127 Euclid street, yesterday. Dr. Coumbe had a stroke of paralysis in 1922, but later was in fair health until he again became ill about two weeks ago. He was a member of the Society of Natives of the District of Columbia.

Born in this city December 31, 1858, Dr. Coumbe was the son of the late Dr. J.T. Coumbe, who was long prominent here. Dr. Oscar H. Coumbe attended Georgetown University and later graduated from the National Medical College, now a part of George Washington University.

In Many Societies

During his long practice as a physician in this city he was prominently identified with various medical societies and other organizations, being prominent in the Masonic fraternity.

He served for many years as president and examining physician of the State, War and Navy Council of the National Union and was the physician who passed upon the eligibility of persons for admittance to the union's hospital. He was also a member of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and Northern Virginia, the Fairfax Medical Society and the Virginia State Medical Society.

Dr. Coumbe was a member of Benjamin B. French Lodge, No. 15, F.A.A.M.; Columbia Chapter, No. 1, Royal Arch Masons; Columbia Commandry, No. 2, Knights Templare, and the Almas Temple of the Mystic Shrine. He was also past patron of Temple Chapter, No. 13, O.E.S., and a member of the Columbia Heights Citizens' Association.

Conducted Pharmacy

Prior to his graduation in medicine Dr. Coumbe conducted a pharmacy at Tenth and E streets. He married Miss Emma G. Larner, daughter of the late Dr. J.Q. Larner of this city, in 1881. He is survived by his widow and three brothers, A.T. Coumbe, Dr. A.G. Coumbe and Willie Coumbe.

Funeral services will be conducted at the residence, under the auspices of B.B. French Lodge, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. J.C. Palmer, grand chaplain of Masons in the District of Columbia, will officiate. Interment will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Anxiety About the Fate of a Missing Man

Mr. D.M. Covey, who resides at 626 3d street northwest, has been missing since Tuesday night, and his friends are much concerned about him, and have asked the police to make inquiries and find him if possible. Mr. Covey had been, up to about three months ago, an inmate of the Government Insane Hospital, under treatment for melancholia, but was discharged. About 11 o'clock Tuesday night, having had a return of despondency, he left the house, since which time his friends have no tidings of him. He is a tall, well-built man, of forty-five years, is of very light complexion and eyes and smooth face and when he left wore a black diagonal coat and vest, checkered pants and a black derby hat.

Found Floating in the River

The Mystery of D.M. Covey's Disappearance Cleared Up

Yesterday morning Mr. James P. Donnelly was standing on the float in front of Cumberland's boat-house, at the foot of 26th street, when he noticed the body of a man floating in the river only a short distance from him. Taking a boat he went out to where the body was and found it to be the body of a middle-aged white man. The body, which was terribly swollen and bruised, making identification almost impossible, was towed ashore, placed in a coffin by the police, and removed to the morgue. From the description of Delvert M. Covey, who disappeared from his home, No. 626 3d street northwest, last Tuesday, the police identified the remains as those of Covey. Friends of the family visited the morgue and fully identified the body. The deceased has been for a number of years a proof-reader in the Government Printing Office, but was discharged some time after the change of Administration. After his discharge he became despondent, and his mind was affected. He was sent to an asylum in Buffalo, from where he was discharged not many weeks ago, as cured. He returned to his home here and seemed perfectly happy, but he soon began to show signs of mental derangement. He frequently said to his wife, "Oh, if I could only die." His wife became very uneasy about him, and watched him as closely as possible, but last Tuesday night he stole from the house and did not return. His disappearance was reported to the police, who made a vain search for him. Nothing was heard of him till his body was found yesterday. The coroner examined the body and gave a certificate of death. The remains were then turned over to the family and prepared for burial.

Like too many of his youthful contemporaries, he deferred to a late hour those indispensable requisites preparatory to an awful change of life. But the writer of this article can say, with melancholy pleasure, that he gave manifest evidence of a full belief in the Savior of mankind -- and, in possession of his senses to the last moment of his life, resigned his breath with a conviction that his soul would be received into the mansions of eternal happiness.

Mr. Cowan was born in Glasgow, Scotland, thirty-seven years ago, but came to this country as a boy. He went to Piedmont, W. Va., and there learned the machinist's trade in the shops of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. In 1898 he entered the government employ as a first-class machinist in the Washington navy yard.

For seven years he was secretary of Columbia Lodge, No. 174, International Association of Machinists, and at the time of his death was the assistant secretary-treasurer of the grand lodge of that organization. He was an active Mason and financial keeper of records of St. John's Commandery, No. 32, United Order of the Golden Cross. His membership in the Knights of Pythias was in the Lafayette Lodge at Piedmont. Mr. Cowan is survived by a wife and four young children.

Funeral of Patent Attorney to Be Held Tomorrow

Died From Inhaling Gas

Wife, Who Lighted Match in the Room Is Severely Injured by Explosion

Arrangements have been made for the funeral of Benjamin G. Cowl, patent attorney, to take place tomorrow. Mr. Cowl died at the Casualty Hospital yesterday morning as a result of inhaling illuminating gas while asleep at his home, 25 7th street southeast. His wife, who was burned by an explosion of gas following the finding of her husband unconscious is under the care of Dr. E.S. Lothrop at the home of Edward J Scroggins, 22 7th street southeast.

Mr. Cowl was at home with his wife and three children Saturday night and retired about 9 o'clock. So far as Mrs. Cowl knows her husband was not up during the night nor was there anything about the house to indicate to her that anything was wrong until about 3:30 o'clock in the morning.

About that time Mrs. Cowl was awakened by the odor of gas, and found that it was coming from the rear room on the second floor, where her husband was sleeping, and she hurried there to make an investigation. The first thing she did was to stop the flow of gas and open a window. She found the windows were already wide open, however, and then she struck a match. As soon as the match blazed there was an explosion, Mrs. Cowl being so severely burned that she could hardly be of assistance to her dying husband. She called for aid and succeeded in arousing her stepdaughter before she collapsed.

Aid Is Summoned

Miss Cowl summoned assistance. Members of No. 8 engine company, police reserves from the fifth precinct and neighbors responded. The police took Mr. Cowl to the Casualty Hospital in the patrol wagon, but Mrs. Cowl would not go there for treatment. She insisted that she be taken to the house of her neighbor, where she was attended by Dr. Lothrop. The physician found she had suffered severe burns on her face and hands, although her gown had not ignited. While her condition is still serious, it seems quite certain that she will recover.

Coroner Nevitt and the police made an examination of the premises yesterday and reached the conclusion that the gas had been accidentally turned on by Mr. Cowl just before he retired. The fixture has two stops, one for a heater connection, which is loose and so close to the one which regulates the flow to the jet for lighting purposes that it was an easy matter to accidentally open it while cutting off the flow from the fixture.

Closed Shutters Kept Gas In

The two windows in the room were open, but the shutters were closed, which prevented the gas from escaping from the room. Considerable excitement was caused in the vicinity of the Cowl home by the sad affair, many neighbors responding with offers of assistance. The condition of Mr. Cowl was such that death claimed him a few minutes after he reached the hospital.

Mr. Cowl, who was forty-one years old, was a patent attorney at 715 8th street northwest. He was a nephew of Benjamin Guy, of the firm of Guy, Curran & Co. A sister of the dead man lives in Minneapolis. Mrs. Cowl may not be able to attend the funeral of her husband tomorrow.

Mr. Cowl was born near Syracuse, NY, November 6, 1848, but had lived in Washington since the close of the war. He was a Union veteran of the civil war. When a mere boy of fifteen he enlisted with one of the New York artillery companies. His long experience and his familiarity with the general office business made him particularly valuable in the patent office. He belonged to the Grand Army of the Republic and to the Masonic order. His nature was kindly and generous and he was endeared to all who knew him.

He leaves two children, Mr. Benjamin G. Cowl and Mrs. John A. Sweeney, both of this city. Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 3 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Sweeney and the remains will be interred at Congressional cemetery.

A Disaster This Morning on the Virginia Midland

A Train From This City Goes Down to Ruin Through a Trestle

Seven Killed and Forty Badly Injured

Particulars of the Accident

The train on the Virginia Midland Railroad which left here at 11 o'clock last night for the South met with a frightful accident about 2:30 o'clock this morning at a point 2 miles south of Orange Court House, Va. The train went through the trestle known locally as Fat Nancy's trestle, the engine and five of the cars attached to the train going down through the trestle and being badly wrecked. There were three Pullman sleepers on the end. The two rear ones remained on the track and were uninjured; the forward one went partly down, and rested partly upon the heap of wreckage below it and partly upon the track. Reports were received in this city this morning of the accident, stating the loss of life this morning of the accident, stating the loss of life as high as fourteen. More definite news received later was to the effect that seven people were killed and forty injured.

The Killed

The killed, so far as was known at the headquarters of the Richmond and Danville system in this city at noon today, were W.H. Whittington, a mail clerk, whose home is at Greensboro, N.C.; Mr. Cornelius Cox, of Alexandria, an assistant civil engineer on the road; a newsboy, and one passenger, whose names were not then known.

An Account From an Official Source

Gen. Randolph, the general manager of the Richmond and Danville system, gave a Star reporter an account of the accident from the brief particulars he had received, substantially as follows: There were seven cars on the train--a postal car, a baggage and express car, two passenger coaches, and three sleepers. The mail car, it is supposed, was derailed and struck and broke through the trestle, dragging the locomotive back after it. The baggage and two passenger coaches followed, going through the trestle, leaving the three Pullman cars upon the track, the forward one resting upon the wreckage below. The two passenger coaches fell upon the cars and locomotives that went down first.

The trestle was one of the last on the road to be filled, and a gan of men were employed on it at this time repairing it and filling it. It crosses a small branch, and according to Gen. Randolph's recollection is about 30 feet high.

At the Baltimore and Potomac depot a Star reporter was informed by railroad men that the trestle was 60 feet high.

The Mail Car

The mail car that went down first appears to have been badly wrecked. It left here last night with a crew of six men, and the official report received at the Post Office Department this morning was to the effect that Whittington was killed and his five comrades all injured. As the sleepers did not leave the track it is supposed that none of the passengers in them were seriously injured.

The Railroad Men

The train was the one known as No. 52, which leaves here at 11 o'clock for Danville. It was drawn by engine 694, John Watkins, engineer, and John Kelly, fireman, and, as stated above, was composed of seven cars. Neil Taylor, the conductor, was badly injured, and was reported today as in a dying condition. Kelly, the fireman, and James Goodwin, the baggage-master, were also badly injured. John Watkins, the engineer, according to reports received today, escaped uninjured. He saved himself, it is stated, by jumping from the cab of his engine.

A Wrecking Train

was sent from Alexandria at 5:30 o'clock this morning. Travel on the road was not interrupted by the wreck, as trains went North and South over the Chesapeake and Ohio line by way of Gordonsville. Railroad officials were active this morning arranging for the removal and care of the dead and wounded.

A Postal Clerk's Account

Mr. Millard Wood, mail clerk, who arrived in Washington this morning from the South, by way of Gordonsville, told a Star reporter that his train watered at Orange Court House, when he learned that, as near as could be ascertained, there were four killed, including conductor Neil Taylor, who was reported dying, and forty injured. There were six postal clerks in the mail car, he said. One of them, Whittington, was killed outright, and Jno. Q. West, of Washington, residing at 407 2d street northwest, seriously injured, and the other four more or less hurt. The baggage agent could not be found and he was included among the killed. Mr. Wood said that he considered the trestle to be ninety feet long and forty-five feet high, and that the entire train was on it when the engine went down.

Engineer Watkins, he said, although injured, was able to walk about when he passed Orange Court House. He is regarded as one of the best and most careful engineers on the road. He oils his engine oftener than any other engineer and pays strict attention to the rules governing speed, whistling, etc. He was not going over 5 miles an hour when he started across the trestle. He is known on the road as Mother Watkins, the name being given him because of the extreme caution with which he always runs his engine. Mr. Wood added that this train is always well loaded, because of the through connection it makes between Boston and New Orleans, Augusta and Atlant. On an average it carries between 150 and 200 passengers. One of the sleepers, he said, was destined for White Sulphur Springs to be dropped at Charlottesville. This car, however, was the last of the train and remained on the track.

Three More Bodies Found

General Manager Randolph received further details of the accident this afternoon. In addition to the four persons enumerated above as dead, in clearing away the debris three more persons were found dead. They were passengers. Two of them were men and one was a woman, but at the latest accounts they had not been recognized. This makes the list of killed seven in all.

How the Accident Occurred

It appears from the information received this afternoon that it was not the postal car, but one of the passenger coaches in the middle of the train that ran off the track, causing the accident. It broke down the trestle, dragging back the mail and baggage car and engine, which had passed beyond the point where the trestle broke and pulling them down to ruin with it.

Bringing the Dead to Alexandria

The train expected at Alexandria from the wreck arrived there late this afternoon, and brought two of the bodies of the dead. There were four injured persons who came to this city and went on to Baltimore.

Caring for the Wounded

Some of the wounded were taken to Charlottesville and some brought this way. A train from the wreck bringing some of the injured persons was expected at Alexandria this afternoon, and the general passenger agent went from this city to meet it and arrange for caring for the injured. Gen. Randolph said that there was nothing to indicate the cause of the derailment. It appeared to be one of those accidents, he said, that might have occurred despite the best of care. Just before the train crossed the trestle a heavy freight train had passed over in safety. The passenger train, he said, followed, going slowly at a speed not exceeding ten miles an hour.

Mr. Cornelius Cox, the assistant engineer who was killed in the accident, was formerly city surveyor of Alexandria and a grandson of the late W.H. McKnight. The conductor, Neal Taylor, said to be fatally hurt, was also a resident of Alexandria.

A Dispatch From Charlottesville

says the trestle was 48 feet high, and was known to be weak, and the railroad company was engaged in filling it in. The dispatch continues:

The engine went down pilot end foremost, thus communicating no fire to the wreck. As soon as the accident occurred the engineer, who was but slightly injured, walked back to Orange and telegraphed for assistance.

"Dr. W.C.N. Randolph and other physicians left here on a special train for the wreck. The dead and some of the wounded were taken to Orange, while the more seriously hurt were brought to Charlottesville."

The Killed and Wounded

"As far as can be now ascertained, five were killed: C. Cox, of Alexandria, of the engineering department of the Piedmont Air Line, was instantly killed; H.T. Whittington, of Greensboro, N.C., postal clerk, lived ten minutes; H.C. Brightwell, postal clerk, of Prospect Prince Edward County, Va., lived until he reached the hospital; W.D. Parrott, of Albemarle County postal clerk, badly injured; J.Q. West and J.L. Walthall, of Washington, D.C. postal clerks, badly injured; Louis Jenkins, of Lynchburg, postal clerk, slightly injured; Potterfield, express agent, seriously injured; Z. Jennings, of Lynchburg, a passenger, internal injuries. Capt. C.P. Taylor, of Alexandria, who was in the car next to the smoker when the accident occurred, was hurt about the head and one leg was injured. The injured are estimated at about twenty-five.

List of the Killed and Wounded

Additional details received from the scene of the wreck on the Virginia Midland road at a trestle 2 miles south of Orange Courthouse, Va., early yesterday morning, show that the first accounts published in The Star last evening were not exaggerated. In fact, the loss of life was understated yesterday. As the mass of wreckage was cleared away other bodies were found and the list of dead had lengthened to nine this morning. The scene that followed the plunge of the train through the trestle was one of horror. The shrieks and moans of the injured and dying, the shouts of excited passengers, and the hissing of the steam, made a frightful pandemonium of sound. All the lights on the train were extinguished, and the mass of the wreckage was shrouded in darkness, which seemed to increase the awfulness of the moment. As soon as self-possession returned to the startled survivors of the disaster they went at once to work to rescue the injured and recover the bodies of the dead. The train was piled in such an inextricable mass of debris that it was difficult to discover the outlines of human forms. Through the interstices of the wreck arms and legs protruded in every direction. Fragments of wood were gathered and a bonfire started, which threw a weird light over the scene, enabling the uninjured to make their way about the wreck.

The Scene at the Wreck

Mr. George S. Shackelford, who was at Orange, was one of the first to arrive at the scene of the disaster after the alarm was given. "When we got there," he said, "the gray light of the dawning day disclosed a scene of indescribable horror. The dead and the injured, to the number of about twenty-five were lying on either side of the wreck. The cut, bruised, bloody faces of the dead presented a ghastly spectacle, and the living exhibited every expression of suffering. Others of the wounded, with back bruises and undressed and bleeding wounds, which under other circumstances would certainly have prostrated them, regardless of their own injuries were doing all that they could to relieve their more unfortunate fellow passengers. There was one woman in the party who worked nobly--I do not know her name. She was frail and delicate in appearance, had not had a berth in the sleeper, but had marvelously escaped unhurt from one of the wrecked cars. She continued her exertions unceasing until the last injured man was placed upon the relief train sent from Charlottesville. Her conduct was in striking contrast to that of some of the ladies from the Pullman cars, who displayed great anxiety for the rescue of their trunks. When the sun arose the people from the country around, who had gathered in considerable numbers, cut bushes and branches from the trees, and made arbors over the wounded."

Dr. Row, of Orange Court House, was early upon the ground, and did all that could be done until the arrival of the relief train, about 7 o'clock, which brought Dr. W.C.N. Randolph, the surgeon of the company. By Dr.

Randolph's direction comfortable stretchers were quickly constructed of the doors of the wrecked cars and mattresses from the sleepers, and upon them the injured were carried up the hill to the relief train and then to Charlottesville.

Rotted Timbers in the Trestle

One hundred feet or more of the high wooden trestle gave way, and the timbers of that part, it is said, were rotted.

A coroner's jury met at Orange Court House this afternoon, and after visiting the wreck and the dead and hearing witnesses concluded that the accident and the resulting deaths were due to the rottenness of the timbers.

The Killed and the Wounded

The list of the killed so far as known this morning was as follows: Cornelius Cox, of Alexandria, assistant civil engineer of the road; W.F. Hunter and Chas. Francis, of Baltimore; J.N. Torrance of South Carolina; W.H. Waittington, United States mail agent, Greensboro, N.C.; H.C. Brightwed, postal clerk, Prospect, Prince Edward County, Va.; Miss Alice Burns or Brown, of Highlands, S.C.; James Smith, of Washington, a newsboy; L.G. Cortez, of Louisiana.

About thirty-five were injured, some quite seriously. The list includes the following: W.D. Parrott, of Albemarle County, postal clerk, badly injured; J.Q. West and J.L. Waithall, of Washington, D.C., postal clerks, badly injured; Louis Jenkins, of Lynchburg, postal clerk, slightly injured; G.L. Kelly, fireman, badly scalded; John Watkins, engineer, slightly scalded; B.F. Sprinkle, North Carolina, hand hurt; E.T. Jones, Chatham, Va., internal injuries; Henry Conway, Philadelphia, slightly bruised; Mrs. Stockard, Graham, N.C., slightly injured; D.M. Gretlish, Augusta, Ga., face bruised; Prof. E.L. Barber, Washington and Lee University, slightly bruised; W.G. Abell, Atlanta, slightly hurt; L.P. Sherer, Hagerstown, Md., bruised. The bodies of Messrs. Torrance, Whittington, and Cox arrived in Alexandria last evening from the wreck. Torrance's body was prepared for burial and sent to South Carolina last night. The body of the newsboy, James Smith, was brought to this city at 11 o'clock last night. He lived on 11th street northwest, near the Boundary.

Richard Smith Coxe, favorably known to the legal profession throughout the country, died this morning about six o'clock of chronic diarrhea, from which he had suffered several months. He was born in Burlington, N.J., graduated at Harvard in the same class with Judge Wayne of the U.S. Supreme Court, and studied law with Horace Binney of Philadelphia. Coming to Washington in 1822 he was soon recognized among the leading members of the District Bar, and the Supreme Court of the U.S., intimately associating with Gen. Jones, Pinckney of Maryland, Webster and other distinguished men. At the commencement of the rebellion he took a decided stand in favor of the Union and throughout the contest ably supported the Government. Death has removed him at the age of 72, from a large circle of valued friends, and deprived the legal profession of one of its most eminent members. His funeral will take place on Sunday next, at four o'clock, p.m.

The Funeral of Richard S. Cox

The interment of the remains of this much esteemed citizen was attended by a very large representation of the members of the bar, many other prominent citizens, and a large concourse of friends. Among the number were included many of the oldest residents of Washington. The funeral services were performed by the Rev. Mr. Kelly and Dr. Pyne. The pall bearers were Hon. W.W. Seaton, Johnson Hellen, Esq., Mr. Robert Beale, warden of the jail, Wm. A. Bradley, Esq., Dr. P. Parker, Philip R. Fendall, Esq., Major T.L. Smith and Chief Justice Carter. The remains were interred in the Congressional burying ground.

The Benning-McGuire House, Records of the Columbia Historical Society, Vol. 33-34, p. 101-105

When Secretary Ingham resigned in June 1831, he very soon thereafter gave up his residence at the Benning house on E street.

As Mr. Benning's death occurred a few months thereafter, it appears there was no tenant in this house the balance of the year. However it was soon to have a notable and more permanent tenant as the following advertisement in the Intelligencer of May 6th, 1831, indicated.

"For Rent"

"The three-story brick house, with nine rooms, lately occupied by Richard S. Coxe, Esq. on C street, east of the City Hall, and near to the same."

From this C street house Mr. Coxe removed early in 1832, to the Benning house on E street.

Whether Mr. Coxe arranged for the lease of this house with Mr. Benning in the fall of 1832, or after Mr. Benning's death in December, with the Executors, Messrs. Lenox and Peter, we are unable to say. There is little doubt that Mr. Coxe knew in the summer of 1831 of Secretary Ingraham's intention of giving up the house, as he resigned from the Cabinet in June, and by July had left the city. Here Mr. Coxe and his family resided for 18 years. It was in this interim that the alley adjoining on the west and running through Square 457 from D to E street, became known as Coxe's Alley.

Richard S. Coxe

In consideration of his connection with the Benning house, his long residence here of 44 years, and prominent identification with the affairs of the city as well as of the nation, and the universal esteem and confidence in which he was held, it is appropriate to here make further record of the life and activities of this exemplary citizen.

Richard Smith Coxe was born in Burlington, N.J. in 1792. He was the son of Hon. William Coxe, who was a Representative in Congress from New Jersey, from March 4, 1813 to March 3, 1815. He was a graduate of Harvard University, and came to Georgetown in 1822, engaging in the practice of law, where he resided until 1826, when he removed to Washington, and soon rose to distinction in his profession.

While much of his practice was before the Orphans' Court, he argued important cases before the Supreme and other courts. It is said of Mr. Coxe that he had more cases before the Supreme Court in the 40's than any attorney in the United States. He was the Attorney for the Corporation fo Washington from 1834 to 1838. He was Judge Advocate of the Court in the trial of Commodore Porter in July, 1825.

In the celebrated case of "The United States vs. Anne Royal" before Judge Cranch, in the Circuit Court, 1829, Richard S. Coxe voluntarily defended Anne Royal. In 1862 President Lincoln appointed Richard S. Coxe and Philip R. Fendall to codify the Laws of the District of Columbia.

In the fall of 1850, after the sale of the Benning house to James C. McGuire, Mr. Coxe removed to No. 430 D street, north side, next to the corner of Fifth street. The corner house, No. 432 D street, had been built in 1838 by Johnson Hellen, a leading attorney and the intimate friend of Richard S. Coxe. Mr. Hellen occupied it as his office and home until the close of the Civil War. This was also the office of the late Hugh T. Taggart, Esq. for many years, where I had the pleasure of visiting him in quest of accurate historical information, in the closing years of his busy life.

Richard S. Coxe and Johnson Hellen, intimate, confident friends and neighbors, were destined to spend their remaining years and close their careers in their adjoining D street homes, the second surviving the first for a short time only.

"Died"

"On Friday morning, the 28th inst., (April, 1865) Richard S. Coxe, Esq., L.L.D., in the 74th year of his age. The friends of the family are respectfully invited to attend the funeral from his late residence tomorrow, Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock."

The following is from the Evening Star of April 28, 1865: "Richard Smith Coxe, favorably known to the legal profession throughout the country, died this morning about six o'clock, from an illness.

The National Intelligencer, September 26, 1837.

With unfeigned sorrow we announced the death of Mrs. Susan B. Coxe, wife of Richard S. Coxe, Esq of this city. She died on Sunday night last, after an illness of six or seven days.

When called upon to relinquish our friends, among the pure and good in this world forever, we are permitted to mourn, though not as those without hope. The bright Christian character of the deceased, displayed in all the duties of wife, mother, and friend, forbids our repining at her happy translation to another sphere of existence. Yet long will flow the unbidden tear, and our hearts be disquieted within us -- "We call; and she answers not again!" May the remembrance of her active benevolence and mild feminine virtues abide with us, to be treasured in our hearts, and incite us to love and imitation. Her funeral will take place this afternoon at half past 3 o'clock.

Sorrow Expressed at the Death of Eddie Coyle

Resolutions Adopted by Members of the Press Galleries of Congress, Deploring Sad Event

A big meeting of the members of the corps of Washington correspondents was held yesterday afternoon in the Senate press gallery to adopt resolutions of sorrow for the sudden death of Edward E. Coyle, familiarly known as "Eddie" Coyle, who for a dozen years was one of their number. Charles S. Albert, secretary of the standing committee on correspondents presided in place of Maurice Splain, the chairman, who for many years was intimately associated with Mr. Coyle.

Upon motion of Mr. Splain a committee consisting of Isaac Gregg, E. Jesse Conway and Leroy T. Vernon, was appointed by the chair to draw up suitable resolutions. After a brief recess the committee reported the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted.

Resolutions Adopted

"The members of the press galleries of the Senate and House of Representatives are called together today to express formally the sorrow which each individual feels so deeply at the death of one of their best beloved associates--Edward E. Coyle.

"Few men have lived lives of such infinite kindness as "Eddie" Coyle. Few men, dying, leave behind them such sweet memories. Mr. Coyle died, after thirty five years of a lovable life, every minute of which now rises as a monument to his memory. His mission in life seemed to be to make others happier. His wit was inimitable. Neither sorrow nor adversity dampened it. A year ago he suffered as few men have suffered, but with his unflinching courage and sunny disposition he triumphed over the death which nearly overtook him. His end at this time, unexpected and so sudden as to be almost beyond understanding, is one of the cruelest blows ever dealt the newspaper workers of Washington.

"We extend our deep sympathy to his relatives.

"It is here ordered by the corps of correspondents in special session assembled that this expression of our affection for him and regret at his death be communicated to his relatives."

Baltimoreans Take Action

Mr. Albert read the following telegram from Raleigh C. Smith, president of the Journalists' Club of Baltimore:

Baltimore, Md., May 22, 1909

"Maurice Splain, Chairman Correspondents' Committee, Washington:

"Newspaper men of Baltimore will hold a memorial meeting at 3:30 this afternoon at the Journalists' Club to take action on the death of Eddie Coyle. The Baltimore newspaper men, especially Coyle's old intimate associates, send greetings to his Washington newspaper friends and indorse in advance any tribute paid by your organization to the best of comrades in our mutual vocation."

Mr. Splain was authorized to send a suitable reply to this telegram.

The chair appointed Maurice Splain, Harris M. Crist, James P. Hornaday and John Shriver as pallbearers to represent the corps of correspondents in pursuance of a request of Mr. Coyle's family. The following committee was also selected to attend the funeral, which will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at 632 East Capitol street: E.B. Johns, George R. Brown, A.O. Hayward, Angus McSween, Gerald Egan, Louis Garthe, John P. Miller, E.B. Clarke, George E. Miller, John E. Monk and Jesse Carmichael.

It was ordered that a floral tribute be sent in the name of the correspondents under the direction of James D. Preston, superintendent of the Senate press gallery.

Eddie Coyle Laid to Rest

Funeral Ceremonies for Popular Correspondent at Sister's Home

Final tribute was paid to Eddie Coyle, the popular news correspondent, yesterday afternoon, at the home of his sister, Mrs. H.T. Martyn, 632 East Capitol street, where funeral services were held. The house was filled with friends of the family and Mr. Coyle's associates in newspaper work.

The Rev. Richard Shipley, who conducted the services, paid high tribute to Mr. Coyle's character. He spoke of his attractive qualities and said that the main causes of Mr. Coyle's popularity were his earnest and sincere nature, his unflinching devotion to his friends and his high-minded devotion to right.

Following the services the remains were taken to Congressional cemetery, where they were laid to rest. The pallbearers were Mauice Splain, James Hornaday, Harris Crist and John Shriver, members of the press gallery, and Raleigh Smith, W. Dwight Burroughs and Arthur W. Haws of the Journalists' Club of Baltimore. The drawing room of Mrs. Martyn's home, where the services were held, was filled with floral offerings from Mr. Coyle's friends.

Obituary

We should do injustice to the community, as well as to the memory of a most excellent and valued man, if we took but the ordinary notice of the recent decease of Captain John Coyle, who on the 29th September closed a life of exemplary piety and usefulness, by a death of serene triumph and joyful hope. His illness, which lasted but nine days, was severe as it was rapid, breaking down the force of a fine constitution, which through more than sixty-six years had been preserved by habits of temperance in living, vigorous exercise, and regular employment, combined with a mind of great equanimity and cheerfulness. For the last thirty years he has resided in this city, respected by all who knew his character, beloved by all who had the pleasure of a personal acquaintance with him. In the midst of ripe and healthful age, on the day previous to the attack of his final and fatal sickness, he formed one of a mournful procession which paid its last heartfelt tribute to the mortal remains of a sister in Christ (Mrs. Blagden), whose gentle but triumphant spirit had been dismissed to its rest in Heaven. Endeared as she was to the family of the deceased, there seemed a kind of holy, providential connection between the times of their departure to the bliss and companionship of the saints in glory. In death they were scarcely divided, as to time; as to place, not at all; for the same solemn vault spreads its silent protection over the brother and sister who sweetly "sleep in Jesus." He was a useful citizen, a kind and charitable neighbor, whose bounty blessed the poor, whose assiduities cheered and relieved the sick, and raised up the distressed. The heart that was riven with affliction sprang with joy and gratitude under the influence of his benevolent visits. He was a husband, such as the bereaved widow who mourns his death, only can know; a father, such as his afflicted children only can tell, who remember with deep but grateful grief, the parental tenderness which no longer exercised upon the fond circle at home, is merged in the love of God in Heaven. If, as a man, he possessed that integrity, which is the brightest gem of the moral character; as a Christian he possessed that higher excellence, which is of great price in the sight of God. By this stroke death has protracted a pillar in the temple of the Lord here, to be rebuilt, as we trust, with undecaying beauty in the Temple above. He was the first founder of the first Presbyterian church erected in the City of Washington, and for many years the oldest of the Elders of that Society. But no more shall his hand pass the bread and the cup in the sanctuary. He has rested from his labors, and his works do follow him. The last scene was indeed in solemn harmony with the "Elder's death bed." There was no bursting enthusiasm--no bounding exultation of the happy spirit--no convulsion either of body or soul, but all was calm, even, and serene, in holy accordance with the equal tenor of his life. His bright hazel eye was undimmed by the shadows of death, as they overspread his pallid brow. A few moments before his departure, a brother asked him if the Lord Jesus was now precious to his soul. "As an anchor to the soul both sure and steadfast," he triumphantly replied. When unable to speak except in broken words, he was again asked if his faith was strong? With all the emphasis of the most unshaken confidence in the mighty Redeemer, he exclaimed, "Very, oh very!" With the setting sun, in a clear and cloudless sky, his spirit serenely departed, in other worlds to renew its strength and run its course, unaffected by the changes of time, or the frailties of mortality--without a cloud, and without a blot--glorious and triumphant forever--"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

The National Intelligencer, Friday, June 29, 1838

The decease of our respected fellow-citizen John Coyle was announced, in our last, in the brief terms in which it was communicated for the press by a near connection of the family. The delicacy which restrained the writer of that notice need not operate upon us to forbid our doing so much justice to sterling worth as to state that the deceased was a citizen eminently distinguished for those qualities which qualify a man for public usefulness, as well as for those which adorn the religious faith of which he was a zealous professor. He was unwearied in doing good in every way open to him. He signalized himself particularly by his endeavors, through the means of voluntary associations, and, by appeals in various forms to his fellow-citizens, to promote religion, temperance, and humanity. It is to his pen that we have been indebted for the efforts, through the attention of Congress to the condition of insane persons in this District, with a view to supply the defect of legal provision for their support, custody, and protection. He lived, in truth, not for himself, but for others; and in his death the whole of our community, as well as his immediate friends, have sustained a painful bereavement.

Funeral of Victim Probably Tomorrow Afternoon

A hunting expedition that promised a day of pleasure for Harry Crabbs and his son, Ernest, fourteen years old, of 233 14h street southeast yesterday had a sad termination about 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning, when the gun used by Ernest was accidentally discharged, killing him instantly. The accident happened on the farm of George Rhinefelt, about two miles from Marshall Hall, in Charles county, Md. The body was brought to this city last night by the father on a steamer from Marshall Hall and was turned over to a local undertaking establishment.

No definite arrangements for the funeral have been made, but it will be held either tomorrow afternoon or Thursday morning from the family home at 233 14th street southeast.

Planning to enjoy Labor day in Charles county yesterday, Ernest and his father left their home Sunday evening, each armed with a double-barreled shotgun. They made their headquarters at the farm of Mr. Rhinefelt. Arising early yesterday morning, they went out looking for game before breakfast. About 9 o'clock they returned to the farmhouse for something to eat.

Gun Slips From Chair

Ernest put his gun against a chair that was under a tree in the yard and was talking with his father and George Rhinefelt when the gun suddenly slipped from the chair and fell to the ground. The trigger evidently caught on part of the chair and he gun was discharged. The load penetrated Ernest's stomach and inflicted a terrible wound. The boy fell to the ground in an instant, and it is believed that he was dead before his father could reach him.

Mr. Crabbs picked up the limp body and carried it inside the house and a doctor was summoned. But it was soon realized that the boy was dead and that the doctor could do nothing.

A justice of the peace for Charles county was notified of the sudden death, and made an investigation of the circumstances. He decided that death was due entirely to accident.

About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon word reached his home here that Ernest had been killed. Mrs. Crabbs was nearly prostrated by the sudden shock. She embarked on the boat for Marshall Hall and soon joined her husband. They returned with the body late last night.

Ernest had two sisters, Annie and Myrtle, and one brother, John, who survive him, besides his parents. They were in great grief when a Star reporter called at the home.

Misfortune of J.A. Craig, P.W.B. Railway Brakeman

J.A. Craig, 21 years old, met with a frightful accident last night about 11 o'clock, while at work in the railroad yard on New Jersey avenue. He was employed on the P., W. and B. railroad as a brakeman and while cars were being shifted last night he fell and the wheels of one of the heavy vehicles passed over his legs. Both legs were so frightfully crushed that they had to be amputated after he reached Providence Hospital. He stood the operation well and was in good condition this morning. Craig's home is at No. 15 N street southeast.

Amputated legs buried 9 May 1904.

Obituary

The death of Mrs. Cranch, announced in the Intelligencer of Wednesday, appears to call for some more extended notice than the simple statement of name and age. For upwards of forty years had Mrs. Cranch been known to the inhabitants of this District as filling with exemplary attention, and with unassuming dignity, the most important relations of social life. Her character was marked by calmness and strong good sense; her deportment by kindness and readiness to please. Her politeness seemed to be without effort, yet won upon those she addressed more than studied exertion would have done. In the education of her children, her own singular equanimity and wisdom, with the high qualities of her husband, enabled them to avoid those difficulties which so often embarrass the parental relation. Her government was in the spirit of that "perfect love which casteth out fear," and she found a rich reward in the devoted affection of her offspring.

Her piety was deep, consistent, and practical. It controlled her life, and enabled her to bear the pain of sickness and the approach of death with composure. Shortly before her decease, she partook for the last time of the Lord's Supper -- thus renewing her testimony to the value of the religion she had cherished through life. Happy to a degree which few have attained in her family, she was still more happy in resigning her spirit to God, in the faith of a glorious resurrection.

Mrs. Cranch was a daughter of William Greenleaf, Esq., formerly Sheriff of Suffolk county, Massachusetts. She was one of a numerous family of brothers and sisters, among whom the widow of the late venerable Dr. Webster and others survive her. One, James Greenleaf, Esq., well known as among the earliest settlers of this city, outlived his beloved sister but a few hours.

"Have ye not met ere now? So let those trust,
Who meet for moments but to part for years;
That weep, watch, pray, to keep back dust from dust;
That love, where love is but a fount of tears."

Death of Judge Cranch

Our readers will learn, from the notices to be found in another part of our paper, that this eminent citizen died at his residence, in this city, on Saturday evening. He was one of the oldest residents of the Federal city, having removed here with his family from Massachusetts in 1796 or 1797, three or four years before the Government was transferred from Philadelphia. It will be seen that a meeting of the Bar of Washington has been called for this morning, at which, no doubt, some one of its members will make a suitable address, in which occasion will be taken to speak of the prominent incidents of his life. We shall, therefore, only add here that, as a private citizen, friend, and neighbor, there never lived a more upright, honest man than Judge Cranch.

The National Intelligencer, September 4, 1855

At a meeting of the Members of the Bar of the District of Columbia and of the officers of the Courts in said District, held pursuant to notice in the court room in the City Hall in the city of Washington on Monday, the 3d day of September, 1855 --

John Marbury, Esq. was called to the chair and John A. Smith appointed Secretary.

Richard S. Coxe, Esq. rose and stated that the meeting had assembled in consequences of an event which, though long anticipated had struck them with surprise. They had met to commemorate the life, virtues, and character of their deceased brother, the Honorable William Cranch, Chief Judge of the Circuit Court and Judge of the District Court of the District of Columbia, who died at his residence in this city on Saturday last.

Judge Cranch died (said Mr. C.) at about the age of eighty-six years, after having lived thus long as an individual, and having presided on the bench a longer period of time than he had ever heard of in a judicial officer. He was appointed a Judge of the Circuit Court in March, 1801, fifty-four years since. He has now left us, and the place made vacant by his death is to be supplied; but he might say that a long time would elapse before that place could be supplied with so acceptable a gentleman and one possessing so much ability.

Judge Cranch was a native of Massachusetts, and came to this city, he believed, in the year 1795 or 1796. He at once engaged in a great deal of active business, and obtained high respect for his talents. Having been appointed, in 1801, the junior Judge of the Circuit Court, he was subsequently elevated to the position of Chief Justice of that Court, and was likewise the Judge of the District Court. All who knew him in the course of their practice in the Courts knew how well and admirably he fulfilled all of the duties with which he was entrusted. Few Judges ever excelled him; few ever equaled him in all the essentials which go to constitute the character of a great Judge. He was eminent for learning in all the departments of law -- admiralty, chancery, criminal, and common -- and was thoroughly imbued with the learning of the profession from the earliest days.

With regard to his personal character no imputation ever rested upon it, for his integrity was never impugned. His faithfulness, his impartiality; his urbanity of manner toward those who practiced in the courts over which he presided; his uncommon industry in preparing and pronouncing judgment after argument had been closed -- in all these he stood pre-eminent; and, although they had known judges possessing a larger extent of inquiry, he possessed that necessary degree of inquiry which qualified him most admirably for the duties which devolved upon him.

We have met (said Mr. C.) with a great loss; but, thank God! he has left a bright example. We trust that every young man, while he reverences, will follow him -- will imitate Judge Cranch in industry, and endeavor to equal him in learning; be pure of heart as he was pure honorable as he was honorable; so as to leave as pure and eminent a character for the admiration of his countrymen.

With the views thus thrown out, and satisfied that he should have the hearty acquiescence of the gentlemen present, Mr. C. offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That a committee of five members of the meeting be appointed by the Chair to draft appropriate resolutions on the subject which has thus convened us together.

The CHAIR appointed Richard S. Coxe, Wm. Redin, Joseph H. Bradley, James M. Carlisle, and John F. Ennis, Esqrs. to compose the committee, who, having retired for the purpose, subsequently returned, and, by their chairman, Mr. Coxe, presented the following resolutions:

1. Resolved, That during the whole course of the private life of the deceased in this vicinity, extending beyond sixty years, he had eminently entitled himself to possess, what he fully enjoyed, the unqualified admiration and esteem of our whole community.

2. Resolved, That as Reporter of the Decisions of the Supreme Court and as a Judge of the Circuit Court, on the bench of which he occupied a seat for upwards of fifty-four years, he was distinguished for his acquirements in all the different branches of professional learning, for, untiring industry, for indefatigable diligence in the discharge of his high duties, for his kind and courteous amenity of deportment towards all with whom he had intercourse, for dignified, patient, and impartial treatment towards his colleagues and the members of the Bar.

3. Resolved, That we deeply deplore the loss which the community, the profession, and we ourselves more especially, have sustained in the death of Judge Cranch.

4. Resolved, That, in the manifestation of the high esteem and respect we entertained for the deceased, we will wear the customary badge of mourning for the period of thirty days, and will, as a body, attend his funeral.

5. Resolved, That we will undertake, with the consent and approbation of the family, to erect a substantial and appropriate monument over the grave of the deceased in commemoration of his character; and that the chairman of this meeting, Mr. Redin, and Mr. Carlisle be a committee to carry this resolution into effect.

6. Resolved, That the chairman communicate a copy of these proceedings to the family of the departed, with an expression of our condolence with them in the loss they have sustained.

7. Resolved, That at the next meeting of the Circuit Court the chairman be requested to present a copy to the Court, with a request that the same may be entered upon the minutes of the Court.

8. Resolved, That copies of these proceedings be handed to the various newspapers in this District for publication.

The resolutions, having been seconded by Mr. Carlisle with appropriate remarks, were unanimously adopted; and the meeting adjourned

At a meeting of the Levy Court of Washington county, held at the City Hall in Georgetown on Monday, September 3, the following resolutions were submitted by Dr. Henry Haw, and were unanimously adopted:

1. Resolved, That the members of this Court have heard with profound regret of the demise of William Cranch, late Chief Justice of the Circuit Court of the District of Columbia.
2. Resolved, That in his death the Judiciary has lost one who, by his integrity, zeal, uprightness, and purity of character, has added a lustre to the whiteness of the judicial ermine. For more than half a century he held the scales of justice with a steady hand, and, knowing no man in a cause, had dispensed only the equal law of the land with firmness, tempered by urbanity.
3. Resolved, That, out of respect to the memory of the deceased, the members of the Levy Court of Washington county will attend the funeral of the deceased, and that we will wear the usual badge of mourning.
4. Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the city papers, and a copy be communicated by the Clerk of this Court to the family of the deceased, together with the expression of our individual sympathy in their great bereavement, and that the Court now adjourn.

The Funeral of the lamented Judge Cranch took place yesterday afternoon. It was attended by the President of the United States (Pierce) and other distinguished officers of the General Government, by the Bench and Bar of our several Courts, and by a very large number of citizens and friends. The religious services of the occasion were conducted by the Rev. William Furness, of the Unitarian Church, Philadelphia, whose address on the occasion was appropriate, eloquent, and impressive.

The Evening Star, September 4, 1855

The Funeral of Judge Cranch took place yesterday afternoon, from his late residence on Capitol Hill. A large number of citizens were in attendance on the exercises including the bench and the bar of the several courts, the President of the United States (Pierce), Hon. Caleb Cushing, the Attorney General, and the Hon. Erastus Brooks, a son-in-law of the deceased. The address of the Rev. William Furnace, of the Unitarian church, Philadelphia, was appropriate, eloquent, and impressive.

The following named gentlemen acted as pall-bearers: Messrs. James Adams, R.C. Weightman, R.S. Coxe, James M. Carlisle, William Redin, and John Marbury.

On the conclusion of the funeral services, many of the persons present approached to take a parting look at the remains of the pure and upright judge; and we were thus privileged among the number. As in life the countenance of the deceased was serene, irradiated with intelligence and benevolence, so in death he lay as if in peaceful slumber--no distortion of the nerves; no repulsiveness such as frequently induces the spectator to hurry from the scene. Conscious of an honorable, virtuous life, the grave had, doubtless, no terrors for him; and hence with calmness he sunk into the eternal rest.

Mr. Anthony Buchly, the undertaker, superintended the funeral, in his usually polite but prompt manner; having made careful preparations for that duty. The coffin, it may here be observed, is mahogany, covered with fine black cloth, the studs and handles, of silver. The breastplate, of the same material, bore the inscription: "William Cranch; born July 17 1769; died September 1, 1855." The interior of the coffin was neatly lined with folds of white satin.

The funeral cortege was large, and the remains were conveyed to the Congressional Cemetery, where they were deposited in the family vault.

The Evening Star, October 22, 1855

Circuit Court—The time was occupied to day by the calling over of the docket and arranging the cases for trial. The room has been shrouded in the emblems of mourning, as a mark of respect to the memory of the late Chief Justice Cranch. A portrait of the deceased, painted by his son, has been placed on the wall. It is a good likeness, and much admired for its truthfulness. There could not be a more appropriate ornament to that tribunal.

The National Intelligencer, March 21, 1846 As a mark of respect to the memory of the late Commodore William M. Crane, of the United States Navy, Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance and Hydrography, and in recognition of his long and meritorious services, the flags of the several navy yards, and of vessels of the navy in commission, will be hoisted at half-mast, and thirteen minute-guns fired at noon on the day after the receipt of this order. Officers of the navy and marine corps will wear crape on the left arm for thirty days. George Bancroft. Navy Department, March 19, 1846 The National Intelligencer, March 28, 1846 Commodore Crane The sudden death of this distinguished officer reminds us that he was one of a class of men now almost passed away—men whose influence upon the destinies of this country will be better known when the stirring events of the times in which they lived shall be viewed as history, and will be better understood if ever the gloom and despair of defeat shall overtake us in the vicissitudes of future wars. Our people will then look back with gratitude to those men who shed so much lustre on our arms at sea, and whose deeds inspired us with a confidence of success, and made us ready to defy the world in the maintenance of a righteous cause. To them we owe some of the wisest lessons ever learned by our infant nation, and we owe to them some of the most important facts which have come to our knowledge as a people. They taught us that the proper tribute to the barbarian was presented by the broadsides of our fleets; that the ocean was the great highway of the world, free to all nations, and not the domain "where not a sail but with permission spreads." They gave to every man born in these broad lands the unwritten certificate of freedom to go unquestioned, like the winds of heaven, "where he listeth," under the protection of our glorious flag. They made us a name among the nations of the earth, and caused us to be regarded as the champions of the freedom of the seas. They drove the pirate from the ocean, and secured the peaceful pursuits of commerce. It is one of those men who has passed away forever.
 W M Crane

The subject of this notice was born at Elizabethtown, in New Jersey, the 1st of February, 1776, and was the son of General William Crane, who served with distinction as Colonel in the Revolutionary army before Quebec, where he received a wound of which he ultimately died. Commodore Crane entered the Navy on the 23d May, 1799, and first served as Midshipman on board the frigate United States in the following June. He served in this grade on board the Chesapeake, and as Master in the General Greene, and joined the brig Vixen in 1803 as Lieutenant, and remained in her in the Mediterranean as part of the fleet under the command of Commodore Preble, and was present at all the attacks on Tripoli.

In consequence of the energy and vigor of his character, Lieut. Crane was appointed to command one of three gunboats captured from the enemy on the 3d of August, 1804, and on the 7th was hotly engaged with the other gun-boats appointed to attack the nine-gun battery on the west of the city, which they demolished. Several men were killed in his vessel, and he and his command narrowly escaped from the explosion of one of the gunboats which blew up close by him.

In the ensuing year he was selected by Captain Smith as first Lieutenant of the brig Siren; he served subsequently in the Constellation; and was afterwards transferred to the cutter Hornet, of some sixty tons burden. Whilst in command of this little vessel, close in shore at night, she was run upon the rocks, and the next day was attacked by a party of the enemy, whom he managed to keep at bay with the small arms until he got his guns overboard, and his vessel afloat; after which he coolly picked up the cannon, which had been carefully buoyed, and remounted them.

This little craft he navigated to Charleston, and narrowly escaped with his life on the passage having been thrown overboard by the breaking of some of the sloop's gear.

In 1807 the Commodore served as Lieutenant of the Chesapeake frigate, and remained in her until the outbreak of the War of 1812, when he was appointed to the command of the brig Nautilus, and was unfortunately captured by the British fleet shortly after sailing. On his exchange he was ordered to the lakes, where, in command of the Madison and Pike, for the remainder of the war, he became the tried, trusted, and able friend and second of his gallant chief, Commodore Chauncey.

In 1815 he was appointed captain of the Independence ship-of-the-line, and successively of the Erie sloop, and frigates Constellation and United States. He returned in the latter in 1819, after a protracted cruise of more than four years.

Capt. Crane was then employed as commandant at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and again at Boston, and, in 1827, hoisted his broad pennant on board the Java, for command in the Mediterranean. The Delaware ship-of-the-line afterwards bore his flag, and afforded a better opportunity for the display of his nautical abilities and naval talents, always known in the navy to be of a very high order.

While lying in a Spanish port, the Delaware ship-of-the-line, sent out as the flag ship of the squadron, arrived before the harbor, having on board as a passenger one of the family of Napoleon, who had married the daughter of Joseph, the Revolutionary King of Spain. With a prompt delicacy and high bred courtesy, he dispatched orders to the ship to proceed to Italy, and land the Prince, whose presence in a Spanish port in a national vessel would have given umbrage to the Government. So highly was this friendly interposition appreciated by the Ministry that the King of Spain sent him the cross of Charles II, with a letter highly complimentary to the Commodore. But the honor thus intended to be conferred upon him, his duty compelled him to decline.

The command of our squadron in the Mediterranean was conducted ably and satisfactorily to the Government throughout its entire period, and besides affording the usual protection to our commerce, and cementing by friendly intercourse our relations with the Barbary and other Powers, laid the foundation of our present diplomatic intercourse with the Ottoman Porte. Commodore Crane was appointed joint Commissioner with our resident Consul at Smyrna, Mr. Offley, to open and conduct the negotiations preliminary to the desired commercial treaty. To the favorable impressions then made, and the judicious measures then taken, we are indebted for the extension of our commerce in the East.

On the return of the Delaware in 1830, after a short respite, Commodore Crane was ordered to the command of the Navy Yard, at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and in 1841 was made Commissioner of the Navy; and, finally, on the re-organization of the Navy Department, he was appointed Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance and Hydrography. Into this important department of the naval service he infused vigor and system, and continued until within a short period of his death to administer its affairs with admitted zeal and ability.

After passing through the several subordinate grades, he was promoted to a Captaincy in November, 1814, and at his death had attained the highest rank in the naval service, Barron, Steward, Jonas, Morris and Warrington alone standing before him in seniority. He was magnanimous, chivalrous, and brave; accomplished in the arts of peace as of war; a gentleman and scholar no less than a seaman, he leaves few equals and no superior in the service which he illustrated and adorned. To a numerous circle of attached personal friends his death will prove a source of lasting grief. He leaves a wife, a lady of Norfolk, Virginia, of rare personal merit, and two brothers, the gallant Col. Crane of the United States Artillery, and Judge Crane of Ohio. The Commodore was the second son, and was sixty-two years of age the 1st of February last.

At the last meeting of the New Jersey History Society, he was proposed as an honorary member, in consideration of his rare personal and professional worth.

In person the Commodore was a man to be remembered. In youth he is said to have been of striking manly beauty, and in matured years he was the beau ideal of the brave "old commodore." He was tall and of large and massive frame, of commanding and imposing presence, and no one could approach him with indifference. Afloat, in his appropriate element, he was stern, uncompromising, and exact in the execution of the duties of his office, and endowed with a firmness of purpose which seemed to know no change. In private life he was social, gentle, and affectionate, and guileless as a child.

The example of his discipline, which he leaves as a legacy to the Navy, will not be forgotten; his country will not forget his faithful services for nearly half a century; and his mourning friends will never cease to cherish his memory in their hearts. P.

March 19, 1846:

Commodore Crane of the Navy cut his throat yesterday at the Navy Department. It is believed that his mind was under a morbid aberration some time before the horrid deed was committed. No cause existed to evidence it except the state of his health which had for a long time been painfully delicate. He was a very intelligent and gallant officer and his distressing death is deplored not only by his fellow officers but by a very extensive circle of acquaintances.

Death of Mrs. Mary J. Crawford.

Mrs. Mary J. Crawford, a resident of Anacostia for the last twenty-two years, died Saturday night at 10 o'clock in Providence Hospital, where she had been removed for treatment for a fractured hip, the injury having been received at her late home, 13 Jefferson street, Anacostia, recently. Mrs. Crawford was in her eighty-fifth year and was stated to have been the oldest woman resident of the town. She was a native of the District, where she lived her entire life, and was the widow of Adam Crawford, who was a widely known resident of East Washington.

The deceased had been living with Mrs. Eliza Gousha, a daughter, a 13 Jefferson street, and during a number of months lately had been ill. She was recovering, however, when one day she accidentally fell, sustaining a severe fracture of one of her hips, to which injury her death is directly attributed. Two daughters and five sons survive her. They are Mrs. Emma Bloomer, Mrs. Eliza Gousha, George Crawford, James Crawford, William Crawford, Charles Crawford, now of Baltimore, and Samuel Crawford of Phoebus, Va. It is proposed to have her five sons act as pallbearers at the funeral, which will take place Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock from her late residence, 13 Jefferson street. Rev. Charles O. Isaac, the pastor of the Anacostia Methodist Episcopal Church, will officiate. The interment will be made in Congressional cemetery.

Death of Judge Crawford

This morning, at the usual hour to enter upon the session of the Criminal Court, Judge Merrick (who has been presiding during the sessions of the term, on account of the illness of Hon. T.H. Crawford) announced to the bar and juries the decease of that venerable and esteemed Judge of the Court, which occurred between three and four o'clock this morning, at his family residence, on E, between Sixth and Seventh sts.

Judge Merrick briefly announced the fact, and remarked that he thought the time inappropriate for him to eulogize the deceased while the body is yet warm. Judge Merrick addressed himself to the juries, and thanked them for their prompt and proper attention to the business required of them; and informed them that the court necessarily ceased by the death of the judge, and he discharged the juries.

Judge Crawford has been afflicted for many years, and even when apparently cheerful in the disposal of business, he was suffering extremely. From his most intimate friends, members of the bar, we learn that he had arrived at near 78 years of age, and the complication of disease and old age were probably the cause of death.

Judge Crawford has been known to our oldest citizens for many years, during which he honored the respective positions of a member of Congress, Commissioner of Indian Affairs and judge of the criminal court.

The members of the bar have not yet held a meeting in view of the decease of Judge Crawford, but one has been called for tomorrow, at which the legal profession will be fully represented.

Tribute to the Memory of Judge Crawford

A meeting of the members of the bar and of the officers of the Criminal Court was convened yesterday afternoon in the courtroom to take some action relative to the death of Judge T.H. Crawford.

On motion of Joseph H. Bradley, Esq., Richard S. Coxe, Esq., was called to the chair, and E.J. Middleton appointed secretary.

E.C. Carrington, Esq. (District Attorney), addressed the meeting, and paid a high tribute to the memory of deceased. Judge Crawford, he said, had served in early life as a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania, of which State he was a native. He afterwards received the appointment of Commissioner of Indian Affairs and was subsequently appointed Judge of the Criminal Court by President Polk.

Integrity, purity, energy and patriotism were his distinguishing characteristics. His private life was unstained by a single vice. As a citizen no one cherished a more sincere or ardent devotion to his country and her institutions. As a scholar and as a lawyer his accurate and comprehensive literary and legal acquirements were acknowledge and admired by all who knew him, and as a judge his wisdom and purity, his conscientious devotion to the duties of his position, adorned the office and were the safeguards of individuals, and of the welfare of the community.

Now that his seat is vacant we can but recall with emotion the sight that was so often presented to us, at once sublime and sad, the venerable Judge, infirm in body, but still vigorous in mind, striving with manly fortitude to resist the encroachments of disease and age, and to infuse the vigor of his clear intellect into the duties of his high office.

He has, at last, passed away. His last moments were calm and peaceful, and he passed away without expressing a fear or a regret.

Mr. Carrington closed by moving the appointment of a committee of avo to draft resolutions expressive of the sense of the meeting.

Messrs. Carrington, Bradley, Carlisle, Norris and Mattingly were appointed, and after retiring for a few moments returned and reported resolutions.

First, expressing sympathy with the family and friends of deceased.

The second resolution notes the friendship and courtesy he always manifested and the honesty and conscientiousness which always characterized Judge Crawford in the discharge of his duty.

The third resolution recommends the wearing of the usual badge of mourning for thirty days, and as a further mark of respect, that the members attend the funeral in a body.

The fourth resolution directs that a copy of the resolutions and proceedings be inscribed upon the minutes of the criminal and circuit courts, and that they be communicated to the family of deceased.

Joseph H. Bradley and J.M. Carlisle, Esqs., made brief remarks expressive of their high appreciation of the character of deceased.

Messrs. G.W. Phillips, John A. Smith and E.C. Morgan were appointed a committee to make arrangements, for attending the funeral in a body.

The meeting then adjourned to assemble at the same place tomorrow morning at eleven o'clock in order to attend the funeral at twelve o'clock.

Funeral of Judge Crawford

The funeral of the venerable Judge Crawford took place this morning from his late residence, No. 411 E streets between Sixth and Seventh, and was attended by the members of the Bar in a body, the Clerk and Assistant Clerk of the Court, the Marshal and Deputy Marshal of the District, and by the employees of the Court generally.

The Grand Jury met this morning and passed resolutions of condolence with the family of the deceased.

The remains of Judge Crawford reposed in the back parlor of his residence, in a mahogany coffin covered with black cloth and lined with white satin, made by Mr. Samuel Kirby, undertaker. The coffin was ornamented with a silver plate in the form of a heart, bearing the following inscription: "Hon. T. Hartley Crawford, Judge of the Criminal Court of the District of Columbia. Born 14th November, 1786. Died January 27th, 1863." The coffin was also mounted with silver handles, three upon each side and by screws tipped with silver.

The appearance of the deceased in the coffin was very natural, although his face bore the marks of emaciation from disease and old age.

The members of the bar all passed into the room and took a farewell look at all that remained of their late associate. A large number of the personal friends of the deceased, many of them venerable in appearance, were also present to pay a last sad tribute to his memory.

The services were conducted at the house by Rev. P.D. Gurley, D.D., of whose church deceased was a pew holder and regular attendant. In his address Dr. Gurley referred to the upright life deceased had led, and now full of years and honors, and in hope of a blissful immortality, he had departed from our midst.

After the service at the house the remains were conveyed to the Congressional Cemetery, where they were interred.

The following gentlemen acted as pall-bearers: Judge Dunlap, Judge Merrick, W.D. Davidge, J.M. Carlisle, J.H. Bradley, Sr. and E.C. Carrington, Esqs., members of the bar, F.J. Middleton, Clerk of the Court, and Mr. Lamon, Marshal of the District.

Who Is She?

A Lady Takes Laudanum on a Railroad Train, and is Supposed to be Dying

Yesterday afternoon an elderly white woman was brought into the city from Benning's station, on the B and P railroad, very ill from an overdose of laudanum. It appears that she left this city in train No. 15, at 6:55 o'clock p.m., and directly after passing through the tunnel Capt. Wilson Miller, the conductor, called for tickets when he discovered her leaning forward in the seat, and there was a strong smell of laudanum about her. He attempted to arouse her, but failed, and then some of the passengers remembered that when they were passing through the tunnel they heard something strike the window. A search was made, and on the floor was found a phial labeled "Laudanum--Poison." In her hand was found a ticket to Wilson's station about eight miles from this city. When the train reached Benning's she was removed from the train, and Captain Miller dispatched a messenger for a physician, and left her in the care of the railroad agent at that station. Dr. Dean responded, and did all in his power to revive her, but she continued to grow worse. In the afternoon, in response to a telegram, Mr. J.K. Sharp, of the railroad company, and Officer Connell, with an engine and car, went to Benning's, and she was brought into the city. She was carried to Providence Hospital, and today was reported to be very low, with but little hope of her recovery. She was neatly dressed and appears to be about 60 or 65 years of age, but up to this afternoon neither the railroad officials nor the police have been able to ascertain who she is or where she is from. She had about her person no papers, initials or other clue to her name or address.

The Evening Star, July 15, 1878

The Lady Who Took Laudanum on a Railroad Train

The lady who was found unconscious on the 6:55 train (B & P railroad) to Baltimore on Friday, as stated in Saturday's Star, was subsequently identified as Mrs. Sarah Crocker, who lives with her son-in-law, Chas. S. Ford, and two daughters, at 829 7th street northwest. They knew nothing of her condition till they read it in the papers, and they then took her from the hospital and placed her under the care of Dr. Sotheron, who is the family physician, and says that she has been insane for some three months, her mania being the idea that she was starving. Last night no hopes were entertained of saving her life; severe hemorrhages had set in, and she was sinking rapidly. Mr. Chas. L. Ford states that the officials at Police Headquarters were notified to look out for an aged lady, who had wandered from home at 10 o'clock Friday morning, and they were furnished with the necessary description; that he was informed at 7 o'clock that evening that nothing had been heard in regard to the case, and from a newspaper next morning he learned that a lady had attempted suicide on a train, and had been placed in the Providence hospital by the police; and that she would have remained there and perhaps would have died there without the knowledge of her family if it had not been for the accident of discovering it in the paper. He asks Major Morgan to investigate it. Sanitary Officer Connell claims that he was quite prostrated by the heat on his return from Benning's, which prevented him from ascertaining more of the case.

Wife of Veteran Newspaper Writer Succumbs After Long Illness

Mrs. Elizabeth C. Croggon, wife of James Croggon, a veteran newspaper writer, died at her residence, 243 North Capitol street, at 6:30 o'clock this morning, after a long illness. She was in her seventy-ninth year, being the eldest daughter of the late John Gardner of Sulphur Springs, Anne Arundle county, Md. Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been completed, but it will probably be held Saturday.

Mrs. Croggon was married to Mr. Croggon nearly fifty years ago. Besides her husband, a son, James H. Croggon of Severn, Md.; three daughters, Misses Josephine H., A. Louisa and M.F. Croggon; a granddaughter, Miss Evelyn Croggon, all of this city; three brothers, J. Harry and Charles T. Gardner of Kansas, and R.A. Gardner of Philadelphia, and relatives in Maryland survive her.

Mrs. Croggon became a member of the Methodist Church early in life and died in that faith, holding membership at Sulphur Springs, Md., and at Grace Church in this city.

JAMES CROGGON

James Croggon, who for many years was a reporter for The Star, died at 8:40 o'clock this morning at his home, 108 C street northeast, as a result of several attacks of paralysis, the last two having occurred Tuesday and yesterday. Mr. Croggon, who was approaching eighty-one years of age, had expected the end for some time, and had made such preparations as indicating his wishes as to pallbearers, so as to include some of the representatives of The Star, with whom he had been closely associated; members of the order of the Sons of Jonadab and of the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia and other organizations. Members of Mr. Croggon's family were with him at the time of his death as was Charles T. Smith.

An incident connected with the work with which he had been so long and faithfully identified was his habit of insisting during his last days, even when he lacked the strength, that The Star should be brought to him and placed in his hands each afternoon.

Funeral Services Thursday

The funeral will take place Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the family residence. In the absence of Rev. Francis M. McCoy of Waugh M.E. Church--of which church Mr. Croggon was a lifelong member--the officiating clergyman will be Rev. L.M. Chambers of McKendree M.E. Church. Interment will be in the Congressional cemetery. The pallbearers will be G.A. Lyon, Charles M. Shinn, C.P. Sudwarth, W.M. Hairston, S.H. Walker, Washington Topham, Charles T. Smith and Benjamin W. Reiss.

One of the most important pieces of work done by Mr. Croggon for The Star was the reporting of the assassination of President Garfield. Mr. Croggon was in the old Pennsylvania railroad station at the time Guiteau fired the shot which resulted in the President's death, having been assigned to report the departure of President Garfield from Washington, and as he was on the spot, in connection with that work, he sent to The Star, by chance-gathered messengers and in other ways through the enormous crowds, vivid, first-hand pictures of the scenes connected with the assassination.

Many young newspaper men and others eagerly listened to the reminiscences of "Uncle Jimmie," as he was familiarly known, of the reporting of the Garfield assassination, and how he got his reports to The Star by throwing them out of a window on the second floor of the Pennsylvania depot when the police lines prevented egress from the building.

Began Newspaper Work in 1862

Mr. Croggon was probably the oldest newspaper man in Washington. He entered the work in 1862, writing many stories of the civil war and coming into contact with many of the historic characters of that time. He continued in active newspaper work until 1894, at which time he retired. He wrote special articles, however, until July, 1915. Probably the best known of these were those in a series on "Old Washington." During his long service he met many prominent persons and had many interesting experiences. His memory for names, dates and other data was remarkable and stood him in excellent stead in his reminiscent work.

He was a native of Washington, having been born October 11, 1835, on the site now designated as 1315-1317 F street northwest. He attended Henshaw's public school, one of the earliest public schools established here. During his life he saw hundreds of acres converted from pasture lands and wood lots to business places and residence sites. He began his career as a clerk in the grocery establishment of the late B.W. Reed, which was located on the present site of the Ebbitt House, but he soon turned to journalism.

Was a Sole Surviving Founder

The veteran writer was one of the founders of the Order of Jonadaba, of which he was the sole surviving founder at the time of his decease. His also took a keen interest in the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia, of which he had been a member for many years. He also belonged to the Veteran Fireman's Association.

Mr. Croggon was the eldest of the family of Henry B. and Mary A. Croggon. Two sisters survive him, Mrs. Elizabeth Welch of Pelham, N.Y., and Mrs. Belle Langley of Decature, Neb. Two brothers, Henry and John Croggon, both of whom were for many years employed in the Treasury Department, are dead.

Mr. Croggon leaves one son, James H. Croggon, of Glenburnie, Md., and three daughters, Misses Louisa, Fannie and Josephine H. Croggon, all of this city.

The funeral of James Croggon, who was for many years a reporter for The Star, and who probably was the oldest newspaper reporter in Washington, took place this afternoon from the family residence, 108 C street northeast, at 2:30 o'clock, interment being in Congressional cemetery. Mr. Croggon, who died early Tuesday morning, at the age of eighty-one years, as a result of paralysis, enjoyed a wide acquaintance in Washington, and many persons connected with the newspaper profession, as well as others who are in public life, attended the funeral services.

Miss Bertie Thompson, the soloist of Waugh M.E. Church, of which church Mr. Croggon was a lifelong member, sang "Face to Face" at the services at the house, which were conducted by Rev. L.M. Chambers of McKendree M. E. Church, in the absence from the city of Rev. Francis M. McCoy of Waugh Church. Representatives of the Order of the Sons of Jonadab of which Mr. Croggon was the sole surviving founder, conducted special services at Congressional cemetery. Representatives of the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia and other organizations of which Mr. Croggon was a member attended the funeral, the youngest reporters and others on The Star also being present as a mark of respect to Mr. Croggon's long service on The Star.

The pallbearers were G.A. Lyon, Charles M. Shinn, C.F. Sudwarth, W.M. Hairston, S.H. Walker, Washington Topham, Charles T. Smith and Benjamin W. Reiss.

James Croggon, one of the oldest if not the oldest newspaper man in Washington, celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday anniversary today. Although not now regularly employed, Mr. Croggon is still an active writer and his articles on "Old Washington" appear at frequent intervals in The Star.

Mr. Croggon celebrated the anniversary of his birth quietly, only a few friends and relatives dropping in to wish him "many returns of the day." Mr. Croggon began work as a member of The Star's reportorial staff in 1862 and continued his work as a member of the active staff until 1894.

Wrote Civil War Articles

The veteran reporter wrote many of the articles which appeared at the time of the civil war and recorded the progress of that great struggle. In this capacity he came in contact with a large number of the prominent figures in the war.

He was educated in Henshaw's Public School, one of the first schools of the District, and which stood at 14th and G streets at that time. He was born on the site where the building at 1315-17 F street now stands, his parents being Henry B. and Mary A. Croggon.

Mr. Croggon is one of the five founders of the Order of Jonadabs. He also is a member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia and of the Veteran Volunteer Fireman's Association. He has three daughters, all of this city, and two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Welch of Pelham N.Y. and Mrs. Belle Langley of Decatur, Neb.

James Croggon Was Member of Staff of The Star From 1862 to 1894

James Croggon one of the veteran newspapermen of this city, and one of the five founders of the Order of Jonadabs, celebrated his seventy-fifty birthday yesterday.

Mr. Croggon was born October 11, 1835, on the site where the Sun building now stands, on F street northwest, his parents being Henry B. and Mary A. Croggon. While a boy he attended Henshaw's Public School, located at that time at 14th and G streets northwest. This was one of Washington's first schools.

In 1862 Mr. Croggon entered the service of The Star and was an active member of the reportorial staff until 1894. Since then he has written many articles, not least of these being his articles on Old Washington, which have appeared in The Star at various times.

Mr. Croggon celebrated his birthday quietly, a few of his friends and relatives being present at his home yesterday evening. Many tokens of remembrance were sent to him. He is a member of the Oldest Inhabitants' Association and the Veteran Volunteer Firemen.

James Croggon, one of the five founders of the Order of the Sons of Jonadab, was honored last night by members of Pioneer Council, No. 1, in the ceremonies attending the presentation of his picture to the council.

The picture, a large photograph embellished in water colors by an artist member of the order, heavily framed in oak, was presented by a committee and received by the worthy chief. Several speeches were made in opening meeting, and at the completion of the exercises refreshments were served. Members of Mr. Croggon's family and friends from other councils were present.

Mr. Croggon and Judge Samuel C. Mills are the survivors of the five men who found the order September 13, 1867. There is a bust of Judge Mills in the council room above the seat of the worthy chief.

Committee Procures Portrait

Several weeks ago a movement was started to pay a similar tribute to Mr. Croggon. The matter was placed in the hands of a committee, composed of A.H. Ragn, B.F. Larcombe and Frank J. McKenna. They obtained an excellent photograph of Mr. Croggon, had it enlarged and embellished by Leopold Oljeska, an artist member of the council.

Worthy Chief C.F. Sudwarth presided at the meeting last night, and after an informal opening, the committee made its report and presented the picture. As chairman of the committee, Mr. Ragan, making the presentation, said in part:

“We are sure that as time passes this picture will be treasured as our tribute to an associate of Judge Mills in founding this, the Pioneer Council No. 1, Sons of Jonadab, which has proved to be a power in the emancipation of the drinking man. In the reconstruction period in 167-70 there was much drinking in Washington and especially about the city hall or council house, which was at that time a stamping ground for drinking men.

“Numerous saloons in the vicinity were well patronized. It was about the courthouse that there was the most need for temperance and missionary work. Among the parties concerned in correcting this evil were Brother Mills and Brother Croggon.

Foundation of Order

“The idea of the formation of a new temperance organization found favor. These two men with three others laid the foundation of our order in 1867.

“In a few weeks the numbers increased and a hall was hired. The first meetings were held Saturday nights, the time men usually spend in drinking. Since then the order has flourished.”

In accepting the picture for the council, Worthy Chief Sudwarth declared that Mr. Croggon and the other founders of the order builded better than they knew, and that the superstructure that arose on their foundation far surpassed their original conception. He said that their plan had succeeded so well that they must have been guided by a Higher Power.

He told of the growth of the order and of the gratitude its members felt toward Mr. Croggon and the other founders. To show the work accomplished by the order he compared the conditions existing today with those that obtained just following the civil war, when, he said, almost everybody in Washington drank more or less.

Mr. Croggon's Response

Mr. Croggon was then called upon. As he arose to speak he was heartily applauded. He expressed his appreciation of the honor that had been conferred upon him by his brother members of Pioneer Council and then gave some personal recollections of the days when the order was started.

He told of how the five men who founded it met September 13, 1867, took the pledge and then entered upon the work of inducing others to join them. In order to organize the work and make it effective, each man offered suggestions and these were collected and compared.

From them a ritual for the newly formed order was evolved. Commonplace emblems and peculiar songs were adopted and ceremonies prepared which were calculated to make a lasting impression upon those who took the pledge and were initiated in the order.

Mr. Croggon explained that one of the characteristic features of the Son of Jonadah, which distinguishes it from other temperance bodies, is that a violation of the pledge works permanent expulsion. This, he said, has done more than anything else to help the members of the order in keeping their obligations.

The Sons of Jonadab, like all other orders, he said, had its ups and downs, but it was now flourishing and prosperous and had many noted reformations to its credit.

A letter was read from Judge Mills, who expressed regret that he was unable to be present. A verbal message from him was brought by Judge Nichols, who spoke of the lasting benefits of the order and of the gratitude due its founders.

Late Clerk of City Post Office Interred at Congressional Cemetery

The funeral of the late John G. Croggon, a clerk in the city post office at the time of his death Friday last, took place at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the Heinline residence, 503 Seward square southeast. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Lebanon Lodge, No. 7, F.A.A.M., of which deceased was an honored member, and Martha Chapter, No. 4, Order of the Eastern Star, were present in a body and there was a large delegation present also of his former fellow-employees in the city post office.

The remains were in a handsome casket on which laid the personal tributes of his immediate family (widow and daughter), of his father, mother, brother and sister while around the room were magnificent floral pieces from his fellow clerks and personal friends, the number necessitating the use of a wagon to carry them to the grave.

The services at the house were those of the Episcopal Church, read by Rev. Dr. Arthur S. Johns of Christ Church, and the Masonic services were conducted by Worthy Master Daniel W. Beach of Lebanon Lodge at Congressional cemetery, to which the remains were borne.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Harvey Coggins and Jones, representing Lebanon Lodge, and Messrs. Sellers, Gray and Bock representing the mailing division of the city post office.

Mr. Croggon was the son of James Croggon and grandson of the late John Gardner of Anne Arundel county, Md., and a native of this city. He received his education in the public schools of this city, learned the trade of a printer at the government office and for the past eighteen years had been in the city post office working his way from the bottom of the ladder to a head clerk. In this position he put his life, and it may be said that his death resulted from his fidelity to government and the public. He was taken with a chill on Friday, the 10th instant, and pneumonia set in, and being complicated with heart trouble, caused his death on Friday last.

Paul B. Cromelin, 66, prominent Washington attorney and Mason, died today of a heart condition at his home, the Berkshire Apartments, 4201 Massachusetts avenue N.W.

In 1954, Mr. Cromelin, was cited as lawyer of the year by the District Bar Association. He was president of the association in 1942.

A member of the law firm of Cromelin, Raynor, Fletcher, Walsh & Lauderdale with offices in the National Press Building. Mr. Cromelin had been a practicing attorney since 1920, when he was graduated from Georgetown Law School. From 1921 to 1938 he was in partnership with Bolitha J. Laws, who is now chief judge of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. Afterwards he was in partnerships with James R. Kirkland until he, too, became a judge of the same court.

Won Arnstein Case

Earlier in his career, Mr. Cromelin was an assistant United States district attorney for the District. During the 19 months he served in that capacity, beginning in 1920, he prosecuted a number of important cases. In one, he obtained the conviction of Nicky Arnstein and his associates for conspiracy to dispose of $5 million worth of bonds stolen from Wall Street.

Mr. Cromelin was formerly a member of the Committee on Admissions and Grievances of the United States District Court for the District. The committee passes upon admissions of lawyers to practice here. It also handles disbarment proceedings.

Mr. Cromelin was formerly president of the Board of Directors of Sibley Hospital. He was director and member of the Executive Committee of Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. and a former director of the Washington Savings bank and the Morris Plan Bank.

When he died he was general counsel and member of the board of the D.C. Society for Crippled Children; secretary and directory of the Kelly Lumber Co., a member of the board of the Law Reporter Printing Co., and a member of the Board of Trustees of American University.

Mr. Cromelin was active in Methodist Church affairs for many years. He was on the Executive Committee of the Methodist Union of the District of Columbia; trustee and general counsel of the Methodist Home of the District of Columbia, a member of the Board of Stewards of Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church and a former trustee of Trinity Methodist Church.

A 33d-degree Mason, Mr. Cromelin had filled many offices in that fraternal order. In 1937 he served as grand master in the District.

Mr. Cromelin was president of the Association of Worshipful Masters in 1920 and grand patron of the Eastern Star of the District in 1832. He as past master and past secretary of Benjamin B. French Masonic Lodge, member of Mount Vernon Chapter No. 3; Washington Commandery of the Knights Templar; member of the Jurisprudence Committee of Almas Temple; member of Albert Pike Consistory, the Royal Order of Scotland, and past patron of Lebanon Chapter of the Eastern Star.

He was director and general counsel of the Masonic and Eastern Star Home of the District of Columbia.

He was a trustee of the grand lodge of the District.

As for his judicial affiliation, Mr. Cromelin was president of the Barristers Club in 1924 and a member of the American District and Federal Bar Association.

A native of Washington, Mr. Cromelin enlisted in the Signal Corps in 1917 and was discharged two years later as a captain in the Air Service. During World War II he was chairman of a draft board and was a member of the Board of Appeals of Selective Service.

He was past president of the Business High School Alumni Association and a member of George Washington American Legion Post, the National Press Club, Washington Board of Trade, Congressional Country Club, Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, the Washington Rotary, the Society of Natives Sojourners and Les Amis d'Escoffier.

Survivors are his widow, Ruth S., whom he married in 1918, two daughters, Mrs. Robert A. Meyers, Akron, Ohio; Mrs. John H. Cragoe, 5814 Osceola road, Sumner, Md. and Paul, jr., 4420 Brandywine street N.W.

Services will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday at Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, Nebraska and New Mexico avenues N.W. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Paul B. Cromelin Praised in Court

The death yesterday of attorney Paul B. Cromelin formally was announced today in District Court by Thomas M. Raysor of the Memorial Committee of the District Bar Association.

Mr. Raysor appeared before Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws, a former law partner of Mr. Cromelin. The speaker recited events in the life of Mr. Cromelin and praised him for the "integrity of all his work."

Judge Laws responded by describing his sense of "deep personal loss" and remarking that Mr. Cromelin was "one of the finest lawyers I have ever known."

Funeral of an Old and Esteemed Citizen
Yesterday afternoon, the Grand Lodge and Central Lodge, No. 1, of the I.O.O.F., with Withers' Band, proceeded to the Navy Yard, where they were joined by Columbia District Tent and Eagle Tent, No. 299, of the order of Rechabites, and marched to the family residence of the late Alexander Cross, Esq., to pay the last tribute of respect to his memory and consign his body to the tomb. The corpse was removed from the dwelling to the Ebenezer M.E. Church, where the funeral services of the church was performed by Rev. Mr. Chapman, the pastor, before an audience that crowded the aisles, seats, doorways, and every place where one could stand or sit. After the church service, an opportunity was afforded for those who desired to view for the last time the face of their deceased friend. The procession was again formed, and proceeded to the Congressional Cemetery, where the impressive funeral services of the Odd Fellows were performed by Chaplain Crowley, and of the Rechabites by Chaplain McKim, and the body was deposited in the vault.
The deceased was very highly esteemed by our citizens generally, which may be inferred from the fact that, besides the line of the two orders, a procession on foot, made up of both sexes, extending three squares in length, followed the corpse from the church to the cemetery. He had been a member of Ebenezer Station twenty-five years; twenty-two years an Odd Fellow; and was one of the oldest members of Eagle Tent of the Rechabites.

Funeral Services Over the Remains of Mrs. Cross

The funeral of Mrs. W. Cross, who died very suddenly at an early hour yesterday morning from heart disease at the home of her father, Mr. James O'Neill, No. 1213 G street southeast, will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Eleventh Street Methodist Episcopal Church. The services will be conducted by the pastor of the church, Rev. Mr. Cook, and the interment will be made in Congressional cemetery.

Mrs. Cross, who was but nineteen years old, and the wife of a machinist employed in the navy yard, had been in ill health for a long time, the result of chills, for which she was attended by Dr. James W. Herbert. The day preceding her death she, however, seemed to be much better than for several weeks, but about midnight she was attacked with heart trouble and died in a couple of hours. The mother of Mrs. Cross was completely prostrated by the shock, and this morning her condition was regarded as very critical.

Policeman Is Accused In Handbook Raid Case

Inspector F.E. Cross Must Answer Charges After Lapse of Twenty Months

The District Commissioners today ordered Police Inspector France E. Cross, who is one of the four inspectors in the police department, to respond to charges preferred against him growing out of an alleged handbook raid made in July, 1911. Several persons were arrested at that time and some of them have served time and been discharged while other persons arrested, it is stated, have not been tried. The inspector's case probably will be heard Saturday.

About the time the raid was made it was whispered that agents of the Department of Justice had seen Inspector Cross at or about a hotel, where some of the alleged handbook men were said to have operated, and that he had conversed with them. The reports were later brought to the attention of former Attorney General Wickersham.

Delay Is Not Explained

Why the authorities waited about twenty months before filing the complaint does not appear as part of the record. Vigorous denials to the charges are being made, and friends of Inspector Cross assert that the filing of the complaint at so late a day has some significance attached to it. Just what that significance is, they will not say.

It is probable that the hearing will be held in the boardroom of the District Commissioners. The personnel of the board has not yet been determined, but it is said it probably will be composed of two police inspectors and Corporation Counsel Thomas or one of his assistants. The Commissioners probably will assign counsel to conduct the prosecution.

Inspector, Metropolitan Police

Inspector Francis E. Cross, one of Inspector Boardman's assistants, is one of the younger of the executive officials of the police and detective departments. By force of character, unquestioned ability and devotion to duty he has won his way from the rank of a private to one of the highest official positions in the department. He was first appointed on the force July 11, 1884, and has served nearly a quarter of a century as a guardian of the peace for the District. Seven years after his appointment, at the request of numerous business interests who knew his worth as an officer, he was appointed, March 1, 1891, an acting sergeant. On March 3, 1892, he was made a full sergeant, and on July 1, 1895, he was made a lieutenant inspector. May 10, 1901, he was promoted to be a captain, and when the Reorganization Act of July 1, 1906, went into effect he was promoted to his present position. He is one of the hardest working men in the police service and his intelligent efforts bring results. He is a man of wide information and ripe judgment in all matters in connection with the work of the department with which he is connected.

Five bathers lost their lives in the waters of the Potomac river and the Eastern branch yesterday. Three of them were members of one family--a father and his two sons. Three of the victims were good swimmers and the other two were boys who had gone to the river with their father to learn to swim. A third son was rescued. Those who lost their lives were:

Cross Was a Good Swimmer

Lloyd cross, who was the eldest son of Mrs. Mary and the late Pinkney Cross, was a popular young man in Georgetown adn the western section of the city. It was about 3 o'clock in the afternoon when he went to Lock Cove, a short distance above the Aqueduct bridge, with three friends, Lewis Hoover, George Thomas and James West, intending to enjoy a dip in the water. He was a splendid swimmer and there was no reason for his friends to display any uneasiness when he dived into what was thought to be deep water.

It is believed that his head struck against a rock and so completely stunned him that he was unable to make an outcry when he rose to the surface. When it was seen that he sank and remained beneath the surface his friends went to his assistance, but were unable to rescue him. The harbor police were appealed to for assistance and friends and boatmen searched for the body, which was finally recovered by James West and E.L. Kendig.

The drowned man formerly kept a cigar store at Pennsylvania avenue and 22d street and had recently been employed in a Georgetown restaurant. His mother, two brothers and a sister survive him. His sister is Mrs. George Goodacre of Georgia avenue. Pinkney Cross, one of his brothers, is a member of the fire department, while Hayward Cross is in the automobile business. Arrangements have been made for the funeral to take place at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The interment will be at Congressional cemetery.

Former Associates Speak of Him With Affection and Deep Regret at His Death

Samuel Cross, one of the foremost business men of the capital city and a man whose friends could not be numbered, died last evening of dropsy at his home, 1462 Harvard street northwest, shortly after 9 o'clock, aged 73 years. Around the bedside when the end came was his wife and daughter, Miss Hattie Cross. Mr. Cross, who was secretary of both the Washington

Safe Deposit Company and the National Metropolitan Fire Insurance Company, had suffered from dropsy since the latter part of August. Although feeling better part of August. Although feeling badly he kept going to his office each morning until about two weeks ago, when he was compelled to stay at home for several days on account of weakness. He seemed to regain his strength for a day or so shortly, but did not go again to his office, his gradually weakening condition causing him to keep to his room. Four days ago he seemed to grow much worse, and upon the advice of his physician he took to his bed. From that time he gradually became weaker until the end came, as stated, last evening.

Words of Regret

When the news of Mr. Cross' death spread over the city many were the words of regret heard on all sides. Those who had known and loved him in life were a unit in declaring that in his death Washington had lost one of its best residents as well as one whose life work stood as a monument for all that was straightforward and upright in the business life of the community.

Mr. Cross was married twice. His first wife was a Miss Miller, daughter of a prominent resident of Southeast Washington. The union was blessed with one child, Miss Hattie Cross, who resides in this city. Some years after the death of his first wife, Mr. Cross married Mrs. Ella Burbridge, a daughter of Mr. George Norbeck. All during his life Mr. Cross loved Washington. He loved to hear of the plans proposed for the beautification of the capital city. His residence on Harvard street in Columbia Heights shows the rare taste that always characterized his every effort. He was one of the simple men of the capital who loved the heights, and when the opportunity presented itself some years ago he occupied the home where he passed away. His father, Thomas Brooke Cross, was an employee of the navy yard in the early days of the history of the city, and inculcated in his son the love of the municipality. When the civil war broke out Mr. Cross was an ardent admirer of the union, and immediately raised a company for the defense of Washington, he acting as the captain. When the territorial form of government was in effect in the District of Columbia, Mr. Cross several times offered himself as a candidate for the assembly and each time was elected. He seemed always to appreciate the honor conferred upon him and did much to better the condition of the city.

In the District Government

Sometime afterward he became attached to the office of Tax Collector Dixon and during his service he made the acquaintance of many of the leading men of the city. The friendship here won continued until the day of his death. Mr. Cross was an active member of the Oldest Inhabitant Associations and of many other local organizations. Mr. Cross was known as one who possessed a fine bass voice and upon many occasions he gave pleasure to many with his renditions of musical selections. He also sang in several churches but during the last years of his life he had not been a member of any church choir. The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon at the residence, Rev. George F. Dudley, rector of St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church, will conduct the services. The interment, which will be private, will be in Congressional cemetery. The honorary pallbearers will be Messrs. E.F. Droop, William A. Gordon, W.H. Hoeke, Thomas Brown, J. Holdsworth Gordon, George C. Henning, C.W. Howard and Richard Tyler. The active pallbearers as chosen are Messrs. James M. Greene, Edward H. Droop, Watson F. Clarke, William Hitz, C.B. Lower and Carl Droop.

Cross' high character and kindly nature. He was looked upon with the greatest regard by the employers of the deposit company, as well as those of the National Metropolitan Fire Insurance Company, of which he was also the secretary.

Sam Cross' Funeral

Large Attendance at His Late Residence This Afternoon

In the presence of a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends the funeral services over the remains of Mr. Samuel Cross were held at the family residence, 1462 Harvard street northwest, at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The services were conducted by Rev. George F. Dudley, rector of St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church. Prominent among those in attendance were many members of the Oldest Inhabitants' Association of the District of Columbia, Loyal Legion and Board of Fire Underwriters of the District, of all of which organizations the deceased was a member.

At a meeting of the board of fire underwriters, held yesterday, resolutions of sympathy for the bereaved family were adopted, and Messrs. R.G. Rutherford, H.K. Simpson, Fred Platt, Ralph W. Lee, W.P. Young, H.H. Bergman, Walter A. Brown, Lem Towers, jr., C.S. Nesbit, P.S. Larner, Simon Wolf and Gen. G.W. Balloch appointed members of a committee to attend the funeral. This afternoon all were present at the services with the exception of Mr. Wolf and Gen. Balloch, who were unable to be in attendance on account of illness. The honorary pallbearers were Messrs. E.F. Droop, William A. Gordon, George C. Henning, Thomas Brown, W.H. Hoeke, J. Holdsworth Gordon, C.W. Howard and Richard Tyler. The list of the active pallbearers included Messrs. Edward H. Droop, James M. Greene, Watson F. Clark, C.B. Lower, Carl Droop and William Hitz.

The interment, which was private, was in Congressional cemetery.

A meeting of the board of underwriters was held yesterday to take action relative to the death of Mr. Samuel Cross. A committee consisting of Messrs. Simpson, Bermann and West was appointed to draft suitable resolutions, which were unanimously adopted, stating that the Board of Fire Underwriters of the District of Columbia, having heard, with deep regret and sorrow, of the death of our beloved associate, Samuel Cross, who for more than 35 years has been the efficient secretary of the National Metropolitan Fire Insurance Company and an honored member of this Board of Fire Underwriters since its organization. It was resolved that in the death of Samuel Cross the profession of fire underwriting has lost one who was ever true to the best principles of the profession, and an earnest exponent of those practices that made him beloved and respected by all with whom he had business relations, and this board is called to mourn for one whose cheery voice and affable manner ever came as welcome sunshine, at all our gatherings, whether it was in our hours of joy and relaxation, or in the more somber moments of business perplexities.

They united with all the citizens of this District in paying tribute to one, who, in his earlier years, bore a large part in its civic affairs, and when the life of our common country was in danger loyally enlisted in her defense, and one who in every position he was called upon to fill performed the duties with credit to himself and honor to the city of his birth; and it was further resolved that the president of the Board of Fire Underwriters appoint a committee to attend his funeral, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Simon Wolf, F.W. Pratt, Ralph W. Lee, W.P. Young, H.H. Bergmann, Walter A. Brown, R.G. Rutherford, Philip F. Lerner, Lem Towers, jr.; George W. Balloch, Charles F. Nesbit and Henry K. Simpson represented the board at the funeral of Mr. Cross.

Thomas B. Cross, Sr., Master in 1853, was for many years an employee of the Navy Yard in Washington, and is described as a good, straightforward man of warm heart and generous nature; was initiated June 6, 1846; passed Feb. 10, 1847; raised Feb. 20, 1847; died Nov. 27, 1871.

Cross, Colonel Truman                      b. 3 Apr 1796 - d. 10 Apr 1846      50 yrs.                      R39/141

Born in Prince George's County. Entered the army at 17 years as Ensign of the 12th Regiment of Infantry. Served in Maryland during the War of 1812. Subsequently joined the staff and after a long service of ability and distinction was killed by the Mexicans on the Rio Grande while pursuing his duties as Quarter Master General with the Army of occupation under General Taylor.

The National Intelligencer, April 30, 1846

The last advices from the camp of General Taylor, on the Rio Grande, mention the mysterious disappearance, a few days before, of Colonel Cross, Assistant Quartermaster General of the Army. He had ridden out from camp, and nothing authentic afterwards had been heard of him, although several parties of dragoons had been sent out in search, and it was believed that he had been captured and carried into the interior of the Mexican country. A negro, indeed, who had been seized in the vicinity by a party of dragoons under Captain May, admitted that he knew the fact; but the Mexican officers, who had brought a message from General Ampudia to General Taylor, stated that Colonel Cross was not in Matamoras, nor was any thing known there of his capture.

The National Intelligencer, May 7, 1846

Nothing further is known of Colonel Cross. Lieutenant Deas, who crossed the Rio Grande in search of him, had fallen into the hands of the Mexicans. There are various rumors in town in regard to skirmishes between the Mexican and American forces, but we have not been able to trace them to any authentic source.

The National Intelligencer, May 9, 1846

Further News from the Army

The New Orleans papers bring us later intelligence from the Army on the Rio Grande, including the melancholy news of the death of Col. Truman Cross, late of this city, whose fate will be deeply lamented by many of our citizens. It will be observed that, though some allowance should be made for exaggerated reports, the general complexion of the news is so warlike that it would seem almost impossible for the two armies much longer to avoid a direct conflict.

When Victory smiles upon the hero dying,
And glory stands beside his sable bier,
They who have known him can restrain a tear
Which glitters in the eye, and gaze unsighing
On the last relics of the loved and lost,
So nobly shrouded for the Soldier's grave;

Thus Spartan Mothers looked upon the brave,
 Nor curst the victory gained at such a cost;
 Thus might Columbia, if her cherished son
 Had fallen in battle, with his steadfast eye
 In death illumined by the mingled cry
 Of foeman's rout and victory nobly won;
 But now she only weepeth o'er her loss,
 And stands chief mourner at the grave of Cross.

The remains of the lamented Col. Cross are expected to reach this city in the train of cars which leaves Baltimore at 5 o'clock on Friday next. They will be escorted to the cars by the citizen soldiery of Baltimore, and as the volunteer corps of the city will no doubt wish to pay the last honors to the distinguished deceased we are requested to announce the expected arrival of the remains on the evening indicated. Due notice will no doubt be given, at a future day, of the time and place of interment.

Capt. Cathcart, of the Union Guards

Captain: In behalf of the Army Officers present in this city we cannot allow the prompt and generous manner in which the Washington volunteers tendered their services in honor of the remains of our much-lamented brother soldier, the late Colonel Cross, to pass unnoticed.

Will you add a personal to the professional obligation by conveying to the officers and men of

The Washington Light Infantry

The National Blues

The Union Guards, and

The Potomac Dragoons

our sincere thanks for the spontaneous offer and very handsome performance of their services in the solemnities of yesterday.

With great respect, we remain your obedient servants,

Cross. On April 13, 1881, after a long, painful illness, Virginia R., youngest daughter of Alice M. Brinkley and the late John F. Cross, aged 11 years and 7 days.

A little heart has ceased to beat
That once was filled with love,
But strikes its measured notes again
In that bight land above.

A mind mature beyond its years
Has faded out in time,
But lives again beyond its years
In yonder blissful clime.

Those bright eyes that gleamed with joy
Will gleam on earth no more,
But open again in brighter scenes
Beyond this earthly shore.

That silvery voice that sung so clear
Is now forever gone,
But wakes again in clearer strains
Around Jehovah's throne.

The little one, so fond and good,
Has faded from our view--
Transplanted from the earth by death
To better bloom anew.

We miss thee much; a void is felt
Within our anguished heart,
To heal no more until that day
We meet no more to part.

Explosion of Ammonia Kills Veto C. Cross

His Lungs, Weakened by Poisonous Fumes, Are Attacked by Pneumonia

Veto C. Cross, eighteen years old, an engineers' apprentice at the Naval Medical School Hospital, died yesterday of pneumonia, induced by the inhalation of fumes from an ammonia tank which exploded while the young man was at work near it. Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the residence, 107 M street southeast, where young Cross lived with his parents, and interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

The death of the young apprentice brings to naught a heroic attempt at rescue in which Assistant Engineer Albert Bauman defied asphyxiation by dashing into the midst of the strangling fumes of ammonia and dragging the young man to the outer air.

Young Cross was assisting Bauman to mend a belt operating a small refrigerating plant in the basement of the hospital. The repairs had just been completed and the men were starting the machine when, without warning, the ammonia tank burst, liberating about seventy-five pounds of liquefied ammonia. Immediately dense, suffocating fumes filled the room. Bauman, who was near the door rushed upstairs, believing his companion was following him. When he reached the top, however, the young man was not to be seen, but Bauman heard him call twice.

Realizing that the youth had been overcome, Bauman took a deep breath and went back into the fume-filled room. He picked up Cross, who was lying face down in a little of the liquid which remained. His exertion compelled him to inhale some of the fumes before he could drag his companion upstairs and into the open air, and Bauman also collapsed. Both men were taken to the operating room of the hospital, where the pulmotor was used to revive Cross, and it was thought he might recover. The irritation to his lungs was so great, however, that pneumonia developed, to which he succumbed yesterday morning.

Distressing Suicide

Yesterday at noon, the body of Mr. William Cross, an old and well-known resident of the Sixth Ward, was found dead in the stable of the Congressional Cemetery, where he had hung himself with a rope made fast to a beam. Mr. Cross was about 67 years of age, and had been a widower for some years, and made his home with his brother, Jeremiah Cross, who is the superintendent of the Congressional Cemetery. For some time past the deceased has been suffering with a disease which caused him much pain, and frequently when suffering he would wish himself dead, and at times he was in a melancholy mood. Yesterday he took breakfast with his daughter, near the Navy Yard, when he appeared in his usual spirits, and about 11 o'clock went to the cemetery. About noon, some one having occasion to go into the stable, found him hanging to the beam, as above stated. Coroner Woodward held an inquest yesterday afternoon, when a verdict was rendered that he came to his death by his own hands. Mr. Cross was known as a quiet, inoffensive man, and many years ago held the position of master mason at the Navy Yard.

At a meeting of Franklin Lodge, No. 2, Knights of Pythias, at McCauley's hall, Capitol Hill, last evening, the committee appointed to arrange for the reception of the remains of Segeant William H. Cross, one of the dead of the Greely expedition, reported that Mrs. Cross consented to have her husband's remains lie in state for at least twenty-four hours under the supervision of the order of which he was a member. In view of this it is probable that the committee will make arrangements to have the body remain for that length of time in one of the East Washington churches. The committee also reported that the body would probably arrive in Washington tomorrow, and that the funeral will take place Sunday afternoon, interment to be made at the Congressional cemetery. The following committee of the lodge--William J. Ferguson, William C. Peake, John Jost, Andrew Lauxman and John Minnix--will receive the body upon its arrival.

The Funeral Services Yesterday

The funeral of Sergeant Wm. H. Cross, one of the dead of the Greely expedition, which took place yesterday was largely attended. The street in front of the little house, No. 374 2d street southeast, which was Cross' home, was filled with people. From six o'clock in the morning until the services were held at half past three o'clock there was a constant stream of people passing in and out of the house to view the casket, which was placed in the parlor. The iron casket was covered with an American flag upon which was placed a Knights of Pythias sword and a number of elegant floral pieces. The most conspicuous floral offering was a large mat or pillow of white flowers with a design upon its face representing two signal flags crossed and the inscription "Arctic, 82-84, S.C." This was sent by members of the signal corps. Over the mantel was a large photograph, representing the Greeley party. It was taken before the members of the expedition left Washington, and this copy was hung in its present place by Cross himself. It was necessary when the hour for the funeral arrived to close the doors of the house on account of the large number of persons who pressed for admittance. Among those who took part in the services in the house, besides the members of the family and their immediate friends were Prof. J.E. Nourse, of the Navy, and Capt. P.H. Ray, of the Point Barrow expedition. Rev. C.D. Andrews of Christ P.E. church, read the Episcopal funeral services. Mr. Andrews made a brief address referring to the dead as a hero of duty, and drawing from the story of his death and the rescue of the living members of the party an illustration of what Christian endeavor and Christian love should be. Prof. Nourse also spoke briefly, referring to the moral lessons of the occasion and offered a prayer. The casket was borne to the hearse by the following pallbearers: Sergeants John J. Evan and C.P. Crons, of the signal corps, and William C. Peak, R.C. Langley, B.W. Carpenter, W.J. Ferguson, K.C. Kraft and J.W. Cox, of Franklin Lodge, K. of P., of which deceased was a member. The funeral procession was marshalled by Sergeant Major Dunn, of the Marine corps and headed by the Marine Band. It consisted of the uniformed rank, Knights of Pythias, Sir Knight Commander G.J.L. Foxwell commanding, Franklin and Harmony Lodges, K.P., and a long line of carriages. A detail of sixteen men from the signal corps under Sergeants Rotheril and Cobb, attended the hearse as a guard of honor. A large concourse of people assembled at the Congressional Cemetery to witness the final rites, which were brief. Rev. Mr. Andrews read the Episcopal burial service, and the Knights of Pythias funeral service was celebrated by Past Supreme Chancellor Rathbone, the founder of the order, who initiated Cross in Franklin Lodge. The casket was then placed in a vault.

The National Intelligencer, October 4, 1848 Dreadful Accident
We copy from the Baltimore Sun the following account of a fatal accident on the line of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, by which a son of Mr. Patrick Crowley, well known as an old resident of this city, unfortunately lost his life:
"On last Saturday afternoon, between the hours of four and five o'clock, an explosion of powder, attended with loss of life, took place at a blacksmith's shop, located within a short distance from Woodbine, about thirty-eight miles from Baltimore, and near the line of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. A number of men employed in blasting rock in the stone quarry of Mr. Patrick Crowley, were returning from the scene of their labors, when, overtaken by a showers of rain, they entered a blacksmith shop a short distance from the quarry, also owned by Mr. Crowley. Whilst there some of the party commenced amusing themselves by placing heated coals upon the anvil and striking them with a sledge-hammer, which occasioning a communication of sparks to a quantity of powder contained in three or four kegs within a barrel, which had been placed there for safety, caused the whole to explode, instantly killing Alexander Mosezza, injuring others so severely that their lives are despaired of, and blowing the whole shop into atoms, some pieces of which were picked up nearly a mile from the spot. Patrick Waldran, of this city, one of the party, was picked up dead some distance from the scene of the accident by his brother, who could hardly recognize him in consequence of the mangled condition of the body, and the blackened appearance of his face. "Mr. Henry Crowley, son of the proprietor, and Mr. James Morgan, from New Market, Frederick county, are also so seriously maimed and injured as to give no hopes of recovery. Thomas Newman, from Baltimore, was thrown some distance from the ruins, had his back and two ribs broken, and otherwise injured. Thomas McGivney, also from this city, received some injuries, but was enabled to walk a short distance to his house, and is doing well. Mr. Crowley's watch was driven two feet into the ground by some of the timbers. A number of horses were also in the shop at the time of the explosion, two of which were killed, and four wounded. The remains of Patrick Waldran were yesterday conveyed to the city in charge of his brother, and will be interred today. We learn that the unfortunate men were not aware that there was any powder in the shop, otherwise they would not have amused themselves in a manner fraught with so much danger, and which resulted in so terrible a catastrophe." P.S. Since the above was in type we have received the following letter from Sykesville, by which it will be seen that the accident has proved fatal to four of the unfortunate men: Sykesville, October 1, 1848 A most melancholy accident occurred on yesterday afternoon, about 4 o'clock. During a very heavy rain a number of men took shelter in the blacksmith shop of Patrick Crowley, contractor on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, near Woodbine, in which there was a half-barrel of powder; a spark from the fire caused an explosion, which caused instantaneous death to Alexander Mosezza; Patrick Waldran died this morning from wounds received; Henry C. Crowley, son of the contractor, and James Morgan, blacksmith, burnt very badly and died this morning; Thomas Newman and Thomas McGivney, very badly burnt. The attending physician, Dr. Gustavus Riggs, of Howard District, one of our most eminent physicians in the State, has hope of the last two. Two horses were killed on the spot. In haste, very respectfully, etc., Henry H. Hunt. (The remains of the son of Mr. Crowley having been brought to this city, the funeral will take place today, (Wednesday) at 10 o'clock, from the residence of Mr. J. Gideon, on Seventh street, which the friends of the family are invited to attend.)

Old Resident Dead

John P. Crowley, Treasurer of Washington and Alexandria Ferry Co.

Mr. John P. Crowley, one of the best known old residents of this city, died yesterday afternoon at Garfield Hospital of a complication of diseases. Mr. Crowley was for many years treasurer of the Washington and Alexandria Ferry Company, and after that company sold its river boats, about four years ago, he resigned his position to accept the position of auditor with the Mount Vernon and Marshall Hall Steamboat Company, which he held until the time of his death.

"Admiral," as he is called by his many friends, was 69 years of age, and a life-long bachelor. He was the son of the late Patrick Crowley, who was a contractor in this city many years ago. Mr. Crowley was a member of Federal Lodge, No. 1, of the Masonic fraternity, Masonic Veterans' Associations, and the Oldest Inhabitants' Association. The funeral services will be held at the parlors of Thos. S. Sergeant, undertaker, 1011 7th street northwest, tomorrow afternoon at 2 p.m. The interment will be at the Congressional Cemetery.

As a mark of respect to the memory of Mr. Crowley the flags on the steamers and on the steamboat offices in this city were placed at half-mast today.

Death of An Old Citizen

He Saw the Battle of Bladensburg and the Burning of the Capitol by the British

Mr. Patrick Crowley, one of the oldest natives of this city, died last night at No. 1020 26th street northwest. Mr. Crowley was born in the year 1800, in the neighborhood of the court house, in this city, and when a boy worked in the press-room of the old "National Intelligencer," and was subsequently pressman of that establishment till about 1830. As a boy he followed the military to Bladensburg and was a witness of the retreat of the Americans and the destruction of the public buildings here by the British. About the year 1830, he engaged in the contracting business, first taking a section of the work on the Chesapeake and Ohio canal, and afterwards he built several sections of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad above Cumberland. He also did considerable contract work for the corporation of Washington, and was a commissioner of streets of the 4th ward under the old municipal government. He was the last survivor of the original members of the Fourth Presbyterian church, and had been for half a century an Odd Fellow and Mason, holding his membership in Central Lodge, No. 1, of the former order, and Federal Lodge, No. 1, of the latter, and he was probably the last member of the old Washington Guards, commanded by Col. W.W. Seaton, a crack organization of half a century ago. He was also one of the earliest members of the Oldest Inhabitants Society. He leaves a widow, (a sister of Deputy Marshal Phillips) and five children, all grown -- Mr. John Crowley, of the Alexandria Ferry company; Benjamin Crowley and Mrs. S. Duvall, of this city; Frederick Crowley, of Illinois, and Gideon Crowley, of Arizona. The funeral will take place at two o'clock on Monday afternoon.

An Old Resident's Reminiscences of 1814 -- Recollections Appropriate to This Day

Among the few old citizens of this District whose recollection carries them back to the early history of this city, perhaps there are none whose mental faculties and physical powers are better preserved than those of Mr. Patrick Crowley, residing on I street, between 4th and 5th streets northwest. Mr. Crowley was born in this city in 1798, and has spent most of his days here in various pursuits. He is now eighty-four years old, and with the exception that his eyesight is somewhat impaired, is yet in a good state of preservation. He states that he was an apprentice to Joseph Gales in the printing business, and worked in the office of the "National Intelligencer" when the British made their raid on this city in 1814, and has a vivid recollection of the scenes attending.

The Battle of Bladensburg, which occurred 68 years ago today, having, like most of the patriotic boys of this city, been an eyewitness of the events. He says the public buildings one after another sacked and destroyed and the red coats under Gen. Ross and Admiral Cockburn run riot among the ruins. The office in which he worked as an apprentice was knocked into "pi" and the type thrown out of the windows. At the time he was bound to the printing trade the "Intelligencer" office was located on the south side of Pennsylvania avenue, between 6th and 7th streets, opposite the Metropolitan hotel. He states that he was well acquainted with Mr. Francis Key, and quite a favorite of his. Mr. Key sent a manuscript copy of

to the office of the "Intelligencer" for publication, and gave permission to Mr. Crowley to print it on slips of paper to distribute. He availed himself of this permission, and made about two hundred dollars by its sale on the streets and supplying it to those who wanted it. After it was set to music he used to go about singing it to gatherings on the street corners as he offered it for sale. He supplied a good many copies in Georgetown, where many of the best people of the District lived at that time. For a long time he kept the original manuscript copy, but would never part with it for money. It finally got mislaid and he never knew what became of it, but thinks it was stolen from him, as it was an object of much curiosity.

Mr. Crowley's description of the fight and rout of the federal soldiers at Bladensburg is about the same as given by others who were present. He recalls the positions of the several commands on the field, the order of engagement and the disorder of the retreat. He says that Gen. Ross was praised for the respect shown for private property and the rights of citizens who did not interfere with his troops, but that Cockburn was despised for his indifference to the rights of the citizens. He showed his character by the associates he made here; among them was a woman of loose character who lived, on F, near 5th street, where he spent a considerable part of his leisure time. The boys knowing how matters stood formed a plan to capture him there, and the plot coming to the ears of the woman, she decamped and was not seen for some time afterwards.

R84/232The National Intelligencer, March 16, 1866Funeral of Captain Samuel T. Crowley*

The funeral of Captain Samuel T. Crowley, of the 4th U.S. infantry, who died at Fort Niagara, New York, where he was stationed, took place yesterday from the residence of his father, No. 542 I street, between Fourth and Fifth. The remains were encased in a fine metallic burial case, which was decorated with rare and beautiful flowers. Religious exercises were held at the house, Rev. J.C. Smith officiating; after which the remains were taken to the Congressional Cemetery, a detachment of soldiers from a regiment of Hancock's corps doing escort duty. Captain Crowley was universally respected and loved, and his friends, among whom were many of our oldest and most respected citizens, evinced their respect for his memory by attending his funeral.

In the year 1861, when the Washington Zouaves were organized, Captain Crowley was chosen second lieutenant, and held that position during the time the lamented Ellsworth commanded the organization. When the latter left Washington for New York to organize the Fire Zouaves the first lieutenant, John T. Powell, took the position of captain, and Mr. Crowley that of first lieutenant, in which he served in the memorable "three-months campaign." After the Zouaves were discharged from service Captain Crowley received an appointment as second lieutenant in the 4th U.S. Infantry, and served with that regiment throughout the war, receiving at the battle of the Wilderness a wound in the arm, from which he never entirely recovered. For his bravery on the field, he was promoted to a first lieutenantcy, and subsequently brevetted a captain, which position he held at the time of his death. He was a son of Patrick Crowley, of this city.

Miraculous Escape of His Companion

About noon today, William Crown, a well-known house and sign painter, 40 years old, in the employ of Mr. Thomas A. Brown, fell with a scaffolding on which he was seated in company with another journeyman house painter, while engaged in painting the cornice of the Colonization building, corner of Pennsylvania avenue and 4 1/2 street, a distance of about fifty or sixty feet to the pavement, and was instantly killed. They had a swinging ladder on which to work, rigged by ropes attached to two pieces of joist fastened on the roof and the ropes became detached from one of the joists. Crown gave the warning to his companion, Charles Stephenson, who threw up his hands and caught by a narrow cornice above the 4th story window, on the 4 1/2 street side just in time to save himself as the ladder fell beneath him. He hung in this manner, and drawing up his legs, shoved the window sash down with his feet and gradually worked his way in the window inside, when he sank on the floor exhausted by the effort. Crown turned somersaults several times in the air before he struck the sidewalk. Striking on the left shoulder and crushing the skull on this side, and breaking his neck. He never breathed afterwards. Some bystanders who saw the accident picked him up and took him in Darby's drug store and Dr. Townshend was at once called in but to no avail. He examined him and pronounced his neck broke and skull fractured. Soon afterwards Mr. Brown arrived and the coroner was notified.

Coroner Patterson after learning the facts as above stated decided that an inquest was unnecessary and gave a certificate of death from fracture of the skull caused by accidental fall. The body was then removed by the Messrs. Zurhorst Bros., undertakers, 320 Pennsylvania ave. east.

Mrs. Elizabeth Crowthers, seventy-three years old, was found dead in bed in her room at the house of Mrs. M.M. Whitten, 227 K street northwest, shortly before noon today. Her death, Coroner Nevitt said, resulted from a cerebral hemorrhage, death having probably occurred late yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Crowthers had been employed as a clerk in the Post Office Department in her younger days. Little was known of her, however, at the K street house. She had rented a small hall room on the third floor about two weeks ago. Yesterday afternoon she did her washing and, it is believed, the exertion was too much for her. It is probable that her body will be taken to the morgue late this afternoon.

The police and the occupants of the K street house are trying to locate the relatives of the deceased.

Found Dead in Bed

An Overdose of Chloral

Joseph R. Crozet, a man about forty years of age, was found dead in his bed at his boarding place, No. 322 C street northwest, about 5 o'clock this morning. At first it was thought that he had committed suicide, but an investigation showed that he had died from an overdose of chloral, administered probably for the purpose of obtaining relief. He had been dissipated, and it is thought had drunk considerable lately. He wrote prescriptions himself and obtained chloral on them several times during the past week. Yesterday he obtained a drachm and a half of the drug from Christiani's drug store on a prescription which appears to be signed "Cole." Crozet once studied medicine, and, though he never took his degree, has occasionally prescribed for people in cases of necessity. It appears that he took all the chloral he obtained yesterday, which was enough to kill a man in his condition. The body was removed this morning to Henry Lees' Sons, undertaking establishment, Pennsylvania avenue. Coroner Patterson made an investigation, which resulted in his giving a certificate of death from an overdose of chloral, accidentally taken. Dr. Patterson said he thought no blame could be attached to the druggists, as any one would have issued the drug on such prescriptions as Crozet furnished. Crozet talked with some of his fellow-boarders at nine o'clock last night. It is thought that he took a part of the chloral, which stupefied him. Then waking he took the rest of the chloral, which put him into a sleep from which he will never awake. He was living here alone. Formerly, it is stated, he was a lieutenant in the revenue marine service. It appears that he as been an unfortunate victim of an appetite for drink. Last September he was arrested here on a charge of forgery, preferred by Wm. Hughes. It was claimed that he had obtained goods on forged orders, having represented himself as a naval officer empowered to obtain supplies. When investigated, however, the charge of forgery was not made out, and Crozet was released. His desire to get liquor, it is said, got him into the scrape.

The Evening Star, August 16, 1883

The Late Joseph R. Crozet

The funeral of Joseph R. Crozet, who died from the effects of an overdose of chloral, Tuesday, took place last evening at five o'clock from 322 C street northwest. Last fall, as stated in The Star, Mr. Crozet was apprehended on a charge of forgery, but upon examination the charge proved to be groundless. Mr. Crozet was educated in the U.S. navy and served sixteen years. He fought hard and gallantly before Fort Fisher, where he received severe and dangerous wounds. In 1873 he resigned from the navy and entered the revenue marine service, where he served with distinction.. He resigned in 1879. Soon afterwards, meeting domestic afflictions and losing his property, he had recourse to the wine cup for relief. This soon became a habit, but with which he struggled to the end. He had no relative, having lost his father and two brothers in the late war.

The Evening Star, December 3, 1911, p. 1

Ends Life at Dance

James L. Cryer Prefers Death to Facing Forgery Charge

Shoots Self in Temple

Detective Is Standing Near When Tragedy Occurs

Partner Awaits His Return

Girl With Whom He Was Dancing, as Well as Others There,

Knew Nothing of Suicide

Called from a merry throng of dancers at a dancing class at the National Rifles' Armory on G street last night about 10 o'clock to be placed under arrest to answer charges of forgery, James L. Cryer, twenty-four years old, drew a revolver from his hip pocket and shot himself in the right temple. He was rushed to the Emergency Hospital and died at 11:10 o'clock.

Cryer was in an alcove on the third floor of the building, the floor above the dance hall, and almost within reach of Detectives Cornwell and Fortney when the shot was fired. The officers were unable to reach him in time to prevent him from firing the shot, however, and when they saw what he had done they had an ambulance summoned.

While Cryer's companion waited in the hall for him to return and finish the dance, the wounded man was carried to the ground floor and placed in the ambulance. None of those participating in the dance knew of what had happened until the dance was finished, so quietly was the wounded man taken from the building.

Detectives had been looking for Cryer for two weeks or more. While Detectives Cornwell and Fortney were at the armory looking for him Detective Berman and others were looking elsewhere. A young woman had accompanied one of the detectives to the armory to point out the man wanted.

Dancing When Accosted

Cryer was dancing with a young woman when Detective Cornwell reached the door and saw him.

"I want to see you outside," Cornwell said to him.

"All right," said Cryer, excusing himself to his partner and walking to the door.

"Will you let me go upstairs and get my hat and coat?" he asked the detective.

Detective Cornwell said he had no notion of making him leave the armory bareheaded, and went with him to the upper floor, where the hats and coats are kept. Reaching the third floor, Cryer stepped to the opening and asked Maxed Thomas, the colored man in charge of the cloakroom for his hat and coat.

"They are in fifty-four," he told Thomas.

"All right," said Thomas, turning and going in the direction of the compartment indicated.

About the time Thomas reached the hat and coat, the owner of the articles turned from the detective and darted into the alcove, the top of the opening being so low that it was necessary for him to stoop in order to enter.

Cryer drew the weapon from his pocket as he passed through the low opening and fired.

"I saw him reach for the pistol," said Detective Cornwell, "and thought he was going to shoot the colored man. I hurried to grab him before he could shoot, but just as I was about to place my hands on him he discharged the weapon and fell to the floor."

Shot Himself in Temple

Detective Cornwell picked up the pistol. He saw that the bullet had entered the right temple of Cryer and that the wounded man was unconscious. He thought he was dying. The teacher of the class was quietly summoned from the hall and told of the occurrence, and in a few minutes the ambulance was at the armory door.

A large crowd of persons on the street gathered in front of the armory when they saw the ambulance stop. They waited to see the wounded man brought out, but those who were attending the dance continued to do the light fantastic without having been advised of the tragedy.

Cryer was wanted on a charge of passing checks to which the name of T. Freeman Mattingly, local agent for the Monumental Brewing Company of Baltimore, had been forged, and his bondsman, in other cases pending against him, wanted to surrender him to the police. Cryer had also been arrested for alleged failure to support his wife and child, he police say, and had been ordered to pay his wife $3 a week.

Cryer, it is said by the police, was separated from his wife and child, Mrs. Cryer residing at the home of her parents in Langdon.

The latter part of August Mr. Mattingly caused the arrest of Cryer for alleged embezzlement. Cryer was employed as driver and collector and it was charged that he embezzled $99.75 of the money he collected for beer he had delivered at saloons and private residences.

James Fletcher became surety for him in the sum of $500. A preliminary hearing was waived in the Police Court and the defendant was held for the grand jury. When Fletcher learned that Cryer was blamed for other offenses he procured a writ for his arrest in order that he might surrender him and have him committed to jail.

Charged He Forged Checks

Following the time he was arrested and given a preliminary hearing on a charge of embezzlement, it is charged, Cryer did little or no work. It is charged that he procured small sums of money or checks to which he is charged with having forged Mr. Mattingly's name saloonkeepers with whom he had previously had dealings having cashed the checks for him.

Detectives and policemen who knew he was wanted to answer the more recent charges found it a difficult matter to locate him. Cryer they believe, knew his bondsman wanted him surrendered and kept out of sight.

Last night Detectives Fortney and Cornwell learned that Cryer was at the dance, and each of them went to the armory without knowing the other was on his trail. A few minutes before 10 o'clock the detectives reached the armory and went in search of their man, Cornwell being first to reach the door leading to the armory and seeing Cryer.

Cryer did not regain consciousness before he died. His relatives were unable to reach the hospital until some time after life was extinct. As he was still alive when he reached the hospital his name was recorded at police headquarters as having been arrested, a charge of forgery being preferred against him.

Cummins, Nettie May	d. 10 Nov 1895		R135/257
The Evening Star, November 11, 1895  Mrs. Cummins' Death  Coroner Hammett Will Investigate It This Afternoon  The Drowning in the James Creek Canal --  Members of the Family Think There Was Foul Play The dead body of Mrs. Nettie May Cummins, an attractive woman, twenty-six years of age, was dragged from the foul waters of the James Creek canal, directly beneath the K street bridge, about 1:30 yesterday morning. Whether Mrs. Cummins' death was the result of murder, suicide or accident Coroner Hammett will endeavor to ascertain at an inquest to be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the fourth precinct police station. Mrs. Cummins was the divorced wife of Charles F. Cummins, a clerk in the sixth auditor's office, and was the daughter of James G. Thompson, a well-known carpenter of South Washington. She married Cummins six years ago, but secured a divorce at the end of three years, and since that time had been living with her parents, 4 L street southeast. The last person who saw Mrs. Cummins alive was Herman J. Martin, a printer, whose office is at 407 7th street northwest, but who resides at 702 T street northwest. For the past seven months Martin has been very attentive to Mrs. Cummins, and he often expressed himself as intending to make her his wife. According to the family of the deceased, about 6 o'clock Saturday Mrs. Cummins announced to her mother and two sisters that she was going to the theater that evening with Martin. She left the house, the family thought, to go to the theater, but the next time they saw her she was dead. Went for a Walk According to the story told the police by Martin, he went out with Mrs. Cummins for a walk. Several saloons were visited and a quantity of beer imbibed. Shortly before 12 o'clock the couple left Dugan's saloon, at 1st and K streets southwest, and were walking in the direction of Mrs. Cummins' home. As they were crossing the K street bridge, so Martin says, his companion requested that she have one more drink of beer. Martin replied that he would hurry back to Dugan's after a bottle. He had almost reached to door of the saloon when he heard Mrs. Cummins call out, "Good-bye, Herman." Turning back, Martin says, he saw the woman jump into the canal. He saw he could not save her without assistance, so he ran to her home. On reaching the house Martin aroused the family with the startling announcement, "Nettie is overboard." Accompanied by the father of the girl and a boarder named Cobb, Martin hastened back to the bridge and arrived in time to see the dead body carried up the bank by the police. What Was Heard at the Saloon John D. Dugan, the proprietor of the saloon at 1st and K street southwest, states that shortly after midnight he heard queer sounds coming from the direction of the bridge. The sounds were also heard by his barkeeper, and it seemed to them as though they were uttered by some one in agony. Dugan and the bartender hurried to the bridge and found Martin there alone in the middle of the span. He excitedly informed them that Nettie Cummins had fallen overboard. Dugan leaned over the rail and saw the body in the water. The bartender went in search of the police, and soon returned with several officers. Martin then departed for the house of the parents of the girl. The body was taken to the house, and when it was carried into the parlor Mrs. Thompson, the aged mother of the deceased, was overcome with grief. Members of the Family Suspicious It was said that a bag of fruit, crushed as though in a scuffle, was found on the bridge. There was a slight scratch over the woman's right eye. Mr. Spindler, the undertaker who prepared the body for burial, told a Star reporter that he discovered no marks of violence upon it. The family of the dead woman are quoted as not believing the suicide or accident theory, and her brother, William Thompson, says: "I know that Nettie didn't kill herself, and I firmly believe that she didn't fall into the canal by accident. Her death is a mystery I can't explain." Mr. Thompson expressed himself to the effect that his sister was not in the habit of drinking, and that he did not think many men would leave a young woman alone on a bridge in the middle of the night while he went of to a saloon.

Since telling his story to the police Martin has refused to say anything regarding the affair, acting, he says, on the advice of his attorney, Mr. T.K. deGraffenried. However, he is said to have told Mrs. Thompson that he had taken Mrs. Cummins to the theater, and returning home on an electric car he asked her when she would marry him, as promised. She replied that she could not be his wife, but would always be a good friend to him. Then he repeated the story about going back to Dugan's after beer and leaving her on the bridge.

No Motive for Suicide

The family declare that Mrs. Cummins had no known motive for ending her life. In contradiction of this idea they state that she had made an engagement to meet her sister, Mrs. Bessie Hodges, Sunday morning at 9 o'clock. The deceased had earned a good reputation as a dressmaker. Martin was not placed under arrest. As stated, an inquest will be held this afternoon. The funeral is to be held tomorrow afternoon.

Death Accidental

Coroner's Inquest Over the Body of Nettie Cummins

Fell In a Death Trap

She and Martin Had Been Drinking Some

Several Witnesses

James Whitemore, John Lucas, James E. Crump, Burton Vernon, John Thomas and Alfred T. Monroe composed the coroner's jury in the case of Nettie May Cummins, the young woman whose body was taken from the James Creek canal early Sunday morning as published in yesterday's Star. The inquest was held at the fourth police station yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. There had not been much of a police investigation made previous to the inquest except what the officers in uniform had made about the canal and at the home of the dead woman. Detective Boyd had been detailed on the case, but his work did not commence until he appeared before the coroner's jury and listened to the testimony of the witnesses, who had been summoned by the precinct officers. Those who had been summoned to pass upon the facts in the case reached the police station at 3 o'clock, and Deputy Coroner Glazebrook went with them to the house of the deceased, where they were sworn over the body to make diligent inquiry and render a true verdict as to the time, place and manner of the young woman's sad death.

When the members of the jury returned to the police station and were ready to take the testimony, there were several persons about the building, attracted there by the idle curiosity, evidently expecting to see the woman's body, but in this they were disappointed. Herman J. Martin, who was the last person with the woman before she was drowned, was there, as was the mother of the dead woman, and also her brother.

Two lawyers interested in both Martin and the deceased's mother were also present at the inquest.

In the Water

George Chapman, a colored man, who lives at No. 90 I street southeast, was the first witness called, and he testified that Saturday night about 12 o'clock he was at Mrs. Sweeney's. He went there with Della Washington. Witness said that when he went over the bridge to Mrs. Sweeney's he did not see anybody, but on his way back he heard a man say: "Oh, Nettie, why did you do this?"

The man said to witness: "For God's sake come and help me."

Witness said that the man was standing on the wall, and he saw a dark object (the woman) in the water. She was on the south side of the bridge and about four or five feet from the wall.

"Was the woman alive?" he was asked by the coroner.

Witness said he did not hear her say anything. He could see her floating on the water. The man called for witness to come down and help him. "But," said witness, "I was alone, and when he came towards me I backed."

The man (Martin) left and went for the woman's mother, and witness told two policemen of what had happened. The man came back and was there when the body was taken from the canal and put on a stretcher.

Witness went as far as the house, and there he saw the man (Martin), who was crying.

"Did the man say anything about swimming?" asked the coroner.

"Yes, sir," answered witness, "the man said he couldn't swim, and I told him I couldn't swim either."

Witness said he was afraid to go down on the wall, because he feared he might be pushed in the water.

No Marks

Deputy Coroner Glazebrook made an external examination of the woman's body, and while he could not give the cause of death positively, he thought, from the appearance of the body and the history of the case, that she was drowned.

Witness said there was no evidence of violence about the body. He did not make an autopsy. Dr. Glazebrook was questioned about the "death trap," as the canal is known, and he said it was the easiest matter in the world for a person, whether sober or not, to walk into the canal from this plain bridge.

John F. Dugan, who keeps a drinking saloon at No. 83 K street, was next sworn. He had just closed his place of business when he heard that there was trouble at the canal, and he went down to the bridge. Herman Martin was there crying, and was saying something about Nettie drowning. Witness looked in the canal and saw what appeared to him to be a raised umbrella floating on the water. He got in a boat and followed the floating object as far as the bridge, and when he reached out from the boat he felt the clothing and then he discovered from the length of the hair, that the object was the body of the woman. There was a rope in the boat which he tied about her body, and then towed her ashore.

Witness told of the dangerous condition of the bridge, and said that that locality was poorly lighted. The parties in the case, he said, had not been in his place for more than a week.

Mother and Lover

Mrs. Maggie V. Thompson, mother of the deceased, was sworn, and she said, while not positive of her daughter's age, she thought she was about twenty-eight years old. Her daughter lived with her husband, Mr. Cummins, until she was deserted three years ago, and about five months ago she got a divorce.

"Since then," said the coroner, "has your daughter been receiving company?"

"Only friends of the family," said the mother, "and she's been going with Mr. Martin."

"Was he regarded as her beau?"

"Well, I guess so."

She said she knew of no difficulty that Mr. Martin and her daughter ever had.

Herman J. Martin, who is a printer at 407 7th street southwest, who seemed deeply affected over the sad occurrence, was sworn. He said he had known the young woman for about six months. Friday night, he said, he made an engagement with her, and she was to meet him at his office Saturday evening. When she came in some joking remarks passed, and Nettie sat on his knee and kissed him. Then he sent out and got a kettle of beer, as Nettie had said she would like to have a glass of beer.

Witness told of their separation, with the understanding that they were to meet at 7th and D streets. In the meantime he had several drinks, and when he reached 7th and D streets he stepped up from behind her and, tapping her on the shoulder, said: "Hello, hun."

He told of the movements he made with the young woman, going to several saloons. She drank several glasses and bottles of beer and he drank whisky. Then he bought some pears and peanuts, and about 12 o'clock they got on a car and started for home. They got off the car at K street, and on the way over home she kissed him several times, and when they neared the bridge she sent him ahead to get a bottle of whisky. The last thing he heard her say was, "Goodbye Herm."

He then described the awful scene in the canal. Nettie Cummins was in the canal, and he knelt on the wall and asked her: "For God's sake, speak to me."

He offered the colored man all he had in the world if he would save the girl. He told him he would give him $500 if he saved her.

When questioned, Martin said he could not account for her getting in the canal. She appeared perfectly sober, although he said, she had drank about six glasses of beer and three bottles.

Witness was then questioned about the woman's statements, and he said she told him that she had met her husband that evening, and she also told him that her brother had quarreled with a man in the neighborhood and the man had threatened to shoot. He had been with Nettie every night for weeks with the exception of Sunday night and they had never quarreled.

"Did you see her fall?" the witness was asked.

"No, sir," he answered.

"Did she say anything about committing suicide?"

"No, sir; if she had I would not have left her."

Coroner Hammett questioned witness about the pears he had bought, and it was stated that the remnants of a partly eaten pear were found on the bridge.

"That doesn't seem as if she was very despondent," remarked the coroner, "eating a pear."

"No, sir," said Martin. "We were in the best of spirits."

The bag of pears, it was stated, was found on the wall.

Mrs. Thompson explained the neighborhood quarrel, and said that her daughter's life was threatened by a boy named Nolan, who had a pistol.

The Verdict

Other evidence was heard, and the jury returned a verdict finding that the woman's death was accidental.

"We do not hold anybody responsible for her death," says the verdict, "but we recommend that lights and guard rails be placed at the approaches to the bridge for the protection of citizens crossing the bridge at night."

The young woman's funeral took place from her late home on L street, today.

George F. Cunningham Dies of Heart Failure

Prominent in Washington Business and Fraternal Circles for Many Years

George F. Cunningham, a life-long resident of the District of Columbia and for fifty-six years a machinist at the Washington navy yard died at 9:30 o'clock this morning at his home, 1105 East Capitol street, in his eighty-sixth year. He was born in Georgetown, June 30, 1826. His death was due to heart failure. He had been ill only about two weeks.

Mr. Cunningham was a charter member of Syracusians Lodge, Knights of Pythias and a member of the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants. He entered the Washington navy yard in 1849 and served continuously until 1901, when he retired.

Strives for Education

When he was eleven years old Mr. Cunningham was obliged to quit school and go to work to help in the support of others in his family. He continued his studies at night, however, and made great progress.

He learned his trade at the old Mason foundry in Georgetown. When he was only twenty years old he had charge of the installation of the machinery in big mills at Laurel, Md., and Alexandria, Va. Later he set up a sawmill of his own on St. Georges Island, about sixty miles down the Potomac river.

Mr. Cunningham answered to call for volunteers to help defend the National Capital sent out by President Lincoln when Early was threatening Washington on his raid into the north. He was the machinist who installed the engines on the United States ships Richmond, Water Witch, Pennsacola and old Minnesota before the civil war.

Restores Monitor to Service

After the fight between the Monitor and the Merrimac he overhauled the Monitor's engines and put the vessel in shape for service. Mr. Cunningham also installed the first torpedo tube on a United States ship.

His wife, Mrs. Mary Rebecca Cunningham, and four children, Mrs. John T. Freeman, Mrs. Charles W. Henshaw, J. Harry Cunningham and Mrs. James F. Faulkner, survive him. He is also survived by a sister, Mrs. J. Henry Small, sr.

The funeral will be in charge of the Knights of Pythias. The interment will be made in Congressional cemetery. The date for the funeral has not yet been set.

The Evening Star, October 15, 1911, p. 8

To Be Buried From Home

Funeral of George F. Cunningham Will Probably Be on Tuesday

George F. Cunningham, who died yesterday at his residence, 1105 East Capitol street probably will be buried Tuesday afternoon in Congressional cemetery. The arrangements for the funeral had not been completed up to a late hour last night, but it is planned to have the ceremonies in the Cunningham home. The Knights of Pythias, of which Mr. Cunningham was a prominent member, will probably have charge of the ceremonies.

Many expressions of regret at the death of Mr. Cunningham were received last night by the members of his family. He was a lifelong resident of the District, and for fifty-six years he served the United States government as mechanic and master mechanic. Up to the time of his retirement in 1905, he was considered an authority at the Washington navy yard on all matters relating to machinery.

Mr. Cunningham is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Rebecca Cunningham, four children, Mrs. John T. Freeman, Mrs. Charles W. Henshaw, J. Harry Cunningham and James F. Cunningham, and also by a sister, Mrs. J. Henry Small, sr.

Acclaimed 20th Century American woman artist featured in upcoming show

MANCHESTER, Vermont -- For the month of July 2005 only, an extensive, privately-held collection of watercolor gouaches by acclaimed 20th century American woman artist Eleanor Parke Custis will be exhibited at Equinox Antiques & Fine Art at 5036 Main Street in Manchester Center.

An opening reception will be held on Saturday, July 2 from 5 to 7:30 p.m. at the gallery when the 33-work collection will be unveiled to the public for the first time ever in Vermont.

Custis - a direct descendent of America's First Lady Martha Washington (and First American President George Washington) - was a pioneer in her chosen medium of watercolor gouache, and traveled extensively throughout New England and overseas.

Gallery owner Mark Reinfurt was attracted to the 20th Century American artist for her "joyful, wonderful, colorful composition and greatly acknowledged body of artistic work. Custis' works are growing in popularity within private institutions and public collections of merit for their current affordable price to the collecting market."

Reinfurt described Custis as a "consistent, prolific artist who dedicated her life and career to the American 20th century art scene and focused on her uniquely tasteful American feministic worldly style. She was a Renaissance woman with direction and the financial determination to explore her passions."

Custis' works are collected from Maine to California, and a number of esteemed museums and collections and private, well-respected artistic residences.

Eleanor Parke Custis (1897 - 1983) lived through America's Gilded Age and painted scenes as varied as the artist's travels; from her hometown of Washington, D.C., to the coastal towns of New England; from the prosperous fishing villages of Brittany to Venice and the mountain villages and lakes of northern Italy.

She was trained at the Corcoran School of Art beginning in 1915, and studied with Henry Snell during the summers of 1924 and 1925 in Boothbay Harbor, Maine. She was guided and inspired by Impressionist artist Edmund C. Tabrell, one of the Ten American Painters, who became the Corcoran's principal in 1918.

An active member of the Washington arts community, she was an officer of the Washington Watercolor Club and exhibited with the American Watercolor Society, the Vose Galleries in Boston, and in many presentations of the Grand Central Art Galleries in New York. Her last one-woman show there was in April 1945.

In 1933 she sold her paintings at the Grand Central Art Galleries to finance a trip to North Africa, adding to her portfolio of countries that included Holland, northern France, Switzerland, Italy, Egypt, Morocco and Guatemala.

She was also known as a book and magazine cover illustrator, and her woodblock printing-influenced aesthetics popularly employed flat areas of color delineated by dark contours. This technique causes the compositions to move toward the viewer and come alive.

Custis' style captured the scenes of the streets, wharves and dry docks of seacoast villages from Maine to Massachusetts. During her three trips to Europe between 1926 and 1929 she captured bustling street scenes and marketplace views.

A Mediterranean cruise in 1934 introduced her to the Near East, and the bustling, colorful streets and bazaars of Cairo, which added an exotic flair to her paintings.

Gradually Custis moved on to photography, eventually earning her the title of "First Lady of Pictorial Photography" by 1935. She was a woman of change, reinventing her dreams and artistic passions throughout her life.

Born in the District of Columbia, Eleanor Custis is directly descended from Martha Washington. In 1915, she enrolled in a 3-year program at the Corcoran School of Art with Edmund Tarbell, and she also studied with Henry Snell.

Widely travelled she did watch color sketches in Europe and Guatemala. She was also a successful childrens' book and magazine cover illustrator and belonged to several art associations including the American Watercolor Society, the Washington Watercolor Club the ...

Interment of Remains of Mrs. Elizabeth S. Custis

The funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth S. Custis, who died last Monday, occurred yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of her son, Dr. Marvin A. Custis, 626 East Capitol street. The services were conducted by Rev. John Compton Ball, pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist Church.

Mrs. Custis, who was the widow of Lemuel W. Custis, was sixty-eight years of age and a native of the District of Columbia. Her death was a shock to her large circle of friends in the city. She was apparently in the best of health early Monday evening. During the latter part of the evening when she was informed of the death of a friend she said that she felt somewhat indisposed. After retiring one of the members of the family heard a faint call from Mrs. Custis and in response found that she was ill. Her son, Dr. Custis, was called immediately and gave his mother medical attention. It was seen at once that she was suffering from apoplexy and she gradually grew worse until the end. The interment was in Congressional cemetery.

Dr. Mavin Custis Dies; Physician and Banker

Dr. Marvin A. Custis, 89, retired Washington physician and chairman of the board of Perpetual Building Association, died Sunday at Gloucester, Mass., where he had gone for a vacation.

Dr. Custis practiced medicine here until 1925 when he joined the Perpetual Building Association as a director and trustee. In 1932 he became treasurer and in 1935 president of the company. He had been chairman of the board since 1947.

Also associated many years with the Fidelity Investment Co., he joined them in 1927 as vice-president. He was president from 1930-45.

Dr. Custis was a graduate of the Hahnemann Medical School in Philadelphia. He was a native Washingtonian.

His other activities included membership in the Washington Board of Trade, the Real Estate Board, the Washington Building Congress, the Society of Residential Appraisers, and the D.C. Medical Society.

He was also a Master Mason, a member of the Order of the Eastern Star, the Masonic Veterans Association, the Potomac River Power Squadron of the U.S. Power Squadrons, a yachting organization; Almas Temple and a number of other fraternal and social groups.

He is survived by a daughter, Eleanor Parke Custis, with whom he lived at 626 E. Capitol st.

Cutbush. On Sunday night last, after a protracted and distressing illness which she bore with the greatest patience, Mrs. Ann Cutbush, aged 54 years, consort of Dr. Edward Cutbush of the U.S. Navy (Surgeon). For all the virtues which adorn the female character for sincere piety, simplicity of manners, benevolence and affection and the fulfillment of domestic duties. The deceased had no superior in the circle of her acquaintances; by that circle she was sincerely esteemed and her death is unfeignedly lamented.

Attempted Suicide

A young man, named J. Cuthbert, whose mother keeps a restaurant on Seventh street near I, yesterday afternoon, between the hours of 4 and 5 o'clock, attempted to commit self-slaughter. He was observed to be despondent and at the time named told his mother that he would go up and take a little sleep, and accordingly went up stairs into his room. About 9 1/2 o'clock, his mother became apprehensive that all was not right, and proceeded to his door, which being locked inside had to be forced open, and what was her horror at seeing her son weltering in his blood on the floor. Drs. Duhamet and Elliott were sent for, and quickly attend to the wound, stopping the hemorrhage, but leaving him quite weak. When they entered they found the blood gushing from the wound, and beside him lay a razor, the handle tied up with a handkerchief, so as to give a firmer hold, showing a deliberate intent to commit the act. The blood also flowed from his mouth, and altogether the unfortunate man presented a most shocking spectacle. This morning he was fast sinking, and it was feared that he could not survive. The cause of the rash act is credibly said to be the breaking up of his mother's business by the recent acts of the City Councils.

Is No More

The unfortunate young man, Jas. Cuthbert, who lacerated his throat on Friday night, died on Saturday of his wounds, as was expected. A large number of sorrowing friends attended his funeral yesterday afternoon.

Blair says:

To run away
 From this world's ills, that at the very worst
 Will soon blow o'er, thinking to mend ourselves,
 By boldly venturing on a world unknown
 And plunging headlong in the dark--'tis mad!
 No frenzy half so desperate as this.

Cutter, George W.

d. 27 Dec 1865

R33/184The Evening Star, December 27, 1865Death of Geo. W. Cutter, The Poet*

On Christmas day Capt. Geo. W. Cutter, the poet, formerly of Kentucky, died at Providence Hospital, on Capitol Hill, where he was admitted a few weeks since on an order from the Commissioner of Public Buildings. About two weeks since Mr. C. Cammack, Sr., of St. John's Lodge of Masons, of this city, while visiting a brother mason of Georgia at the hospital, found Capt. Cutter at the hospital under treatment, and again on Friday last he saw him, but then he was insensible, at the time being affected with paralysis, and he then was sinking rapidly. He died on Monday, and some of the members of St. John's Lodge, into which he was initiated years ago, this morning attended his funeral from the undertaking establishment of Mr. A. Buchly, on Pennsylvania avenue, where the body was removed after the death and placed in a handsome coffin. His remains were interred with masonic honors in one of the sites of St. John's Lodge in Congressional Cemetery--the burial service being read by Mr. Cammack.

Capt. Cutter was a descendant of a Massachusetts family, and was born in Quebec, Canada. In early life he settled in the West, and practiced law in Kentucky until the breaking out of the war with Mexico, when he raised a company and joined Taylor's army on the Rio Grande. He served with him to the close with distinction. During Taylor's and Fillmore's Administrations he held a clerkship in the Treasury Department.

He figured in the days of "Know Nothingism" as an orator, and took part in the movement. He was a man of considerable ability, and with his pen made quite a reputation, his poem, a "Song of Steam," having wide popularity. At one time he was a strict temperance man, and spoke for the societies here. In his youth he was wedded to a tragic actress of some note, from whom he was afterwards divorced, and he married again in the West. He left here about the close of Mr. Fillmore's Administration, and returned again a few years since, but we believe he has not been in any employment here.

The Dictionary of American Biography

CUTTER, GEORGE WASHINGTON (1801-Dec. 25, 1865), poet, was born in Quebec, Canada, of a family which had come there from Massachusetts. His education was not extensive but for a time he studied law and, after a residence at Terre Haute, Ind., during which he served in the lower house of the Indiana legislature, 1838-39 (Complete List of Members, etc., 1903), he practiced in Covington, Ky., until the beginning of the Mexican War stirred his imagination with visions of conquest for his country and of military glory for himself. In 1847 he helped to raise a company of volunteers, which became a part of the 2nd Kentucky Regiment. He was made its captain and joined Taylor's army on the Rio Grande, where he served with distinction until the close of the war. He took part in the battle of Buena Vista during which he helped to carry Col. Clay from a position of danger under the enemy's fire and remained with him until his death. The victory inspired one of his best-known poems, written on the battle-field. At the close of the war he went into politics as a zealous Whig and later became a more or less popular orator in the cause of Know-Nothingism. He was also at one time an earnest advocate and speaker for the temperance cause. Under Taylor's administration he received a clerkship in the Treasury Department at Washington which he held until the close of Fillmore's administration, when he lost it through political changes and left Washington. Early in life he had married Mrs. Frances Ann Drake of Cincinnati, an actress in tragic parts, from whom he was divorced. Later he married again in the West. He published three volumes of verse, Buena Vista and Other Poems (1848), The Song of Steam and Other Poems (1857), and Poems, National and Patriotic (1857)—all vigorous and unconventional in thought, if conventional in metre. The Song of Steam, his best work, is suggestive of Kipling's later poetic apotheosis of machinery. A few years before his death Cutter returned to Washington but found no employment. When stricken with paralysis, he was admitted to Providence Hospital on an order from the Commissioner of Public Buildings, and there he died alone. His funeral was conducted by the St. John's Masonic Lodge and he was buried in the lot owned by the Lodge in the Congressional Cemetery.

CUTTER, George Washington, poet, was born in Southern Massachusetts in 1801. While little has been recorded of his forefathers, it is known that he came from a fairly distinguished family, several members of which took an active part in the settlement of Indiana. In his childhood his father moved to Quebec, Canada and later to Indiana. While his early schooling was somewhat limited, he occupied his spare time with reading and studying law. He practiced that profession in Terre Haute, was elected to the state legislature and because of his gift for oratory, became recognized as a brilliant and eloquent public speaker. He was practicing law in Covington, Ky., when the Mexican war was declared. Raising a company of infantrymen, he was commissioned its captain in the 2nd Ky. Volunteers under the command of Col. McKee. He distinguished himself in the battle of Buena Vista by rescuing his regimental commander who had fallen, severely wounded, during a charge. At the close of the war he affiliated himself with the Know-Nothing party, and was an ardent supporter of the cause of temperance. When Zachary Taylor was elected president Cutter's political activities were rewarded by a clerkship in the treasury department, a post he held until the end of Fillmore's administration in 1853. It was while thus employed in Washington that he wrote the verses which attracted considerable attention throughout the nation. His most celebrated poems are "The Song of Steam," "The Song of Lightning," and "E Pluribus Unum." His published books are "Buena Vista and Other Poems" (1848); "Song of Steam and Other Poems" (1857), and "Poems, National and Patriotic" (1857). At the end of his clerkship, he went West to practice law, but returned to Washington in 1865 to accept a special government commission. He belonged to the Masonic fraternity. He was twice married, his first wife being Mrs. Frances Ann Drake, an actress of Cincinnati, Ohio, whom he divorced. He died in Washington, D.C., Dec. 25, 1865.
