Earnshaw Is Cross

Thins Newspaper Account Is Unfair to Grocers

Dislikes Social Mention

Thinks Advertising Patronage Should Win Better Treatment

House Committee Hearing

President of Wholesale Association Tells of

"Undesirable" Customers, Who Sell Below Cost

B.B. Earnshaw, president of the Wholesale Grocers' Association of this city, which, according to Percival M Brown, the association's attorney, is "largely social" in its objects, was the principal witness today at the hearing before the Moore special committee which is investigating the food problem in the District of Columbia.

Mr. Earnshaw expressed considerable displeasure to the committee as a result of references to his organization as a "social" body. A little bit later he indorsed the designation himself.

"What do you do at your meetings of the association?" asked Representative Pearre of Maryland.

"Oh, not much," Mr. Earnshaw replied. "We have a few drinks, a few smokes, a few jokes and talk."

"The Wholesale Grocers' Association has not been fairly treated by The Star in its report of the proceedings of the Moore committee last Tuesday," Mr. Earnshaw complained.

"I find," Mr. Pearre commented, "that the newspapers are nearly always correct."

"They are generally always wrong," Mr. Earnshaw declared, gloomily; "in this case, anyway. I spend a thousand dollars a year, and then it goes back on me."

"What do you mean when you say 'paper has gone back on you?'" inquired Representative Johnson of Kentucky.

"I mean to say," responded Mr. Earnshaw, "that they publish erroneous reports of these hearings."

Thinks His Patronage Should Last

"In what respect were they erroneous?" persisted Mr. Johnson.

"I could not say," Mr. Earnshaw admitted. "I have not the clippings before me. I did not mean to charge the paper with an offense. I did not mean anything harmful. I think, in consideration of the patronage I give it, I am entitled to fair treatment.

"And don't you think you got that?" Mr. Johnson inquired.

"That is a question," Mr. Earnshaw replied.

"Is it your idea," Mr. Johnson demanded emphatically "that the newspapers should have withheld certain testimony at these hearings, just because you spend $1,000 a year in advertising?"

"I don't want any favors," said Mr. Earnshaw. "I only want fair treatment, and I think I got fair treatment only to some extent."

Didn't Like "Social" Mention

Finally, after Mr. Johnson had persisted for some time in his efforts to make Mr. Earnshaw be specific in his assertion that the account in The Star of the last hearing was erroneous, Mr. Earnshaw said he took exception to the manner in which the "social" activities of the Wholesale Grocers Association had been referred to.

Opposition to the Moore bill making it compulsory for any person, firm or organization in the District to sell their goods to all customers offering the regular price was opposed by Mr. Earnshaw and by Attorney Brown of the Grocers' Association.

Mr. Brown questioned the constitutionality of the bill, declaring there were numerous decisions of the United States Supreme Court which would sustain his contention that an individual has the right to sell to whom he pleases or to refuse to sell to any individual when he pleases and that the wholesale grocers act as individuals when they refuse to deal with those retail grocers whom he termed "undesirables."

"Undesirables" Are Defined

"What is an undesirable customer?" Representative Johnson inquired.

"A man who sells to his customers," President Earnshaw replied, "certain goods at from 25 per cent to 50 per cent less than cost, and makes up his loss on other classes of goods. I will not do business with such men. They are dishonorable business men."

Representative Moore of Pennsylvania, chairman of the committee, asked Mr. Earnshaw if the objection was a matter of credit or had to do with the methods of the men to whom he referred. Mr. Earnshaw replied that credit did not always enter into the question of whether or not a man was undesirable.

"If a man offered you cash for your goods and you believed he would sell them below cost you would not sell to him?" suggested Mr. Johnson.

"I would not," Mr. Earnshaw answered. "I do not want his trade and I exercise my individual right not to do business with him."

"Why not?" persisted Mr. Johnson

Fooling the Public

"Because," replied Mr. Earnshaw, "he has the reputation of deluding the public by selling a few goods below cost, and making his customers believe he sells all his goods at that low figure."

Mr. Johnson asked Mr. Earnshaw if the money of a man like this wasn't just as good as the money of any other man.

"Not to me. I don't want to have anything to do with him," said Mr. Earnshaw emphatically.

Mr Johnson asked Earnshaw if he sold short-weight canned goods. The reply was that he was not a manufacturer and didn't know that he did. Asked whether he sold first and classes of tomatoes, he declared he had not sold seconds in many years.

The president of the Wholesale Grocers' Association wound up by declaring the passage of the bill in question would compel him to sell to undesirable retailers and consumers, and would drive him out of business.

Mr. Earnshaw will continue his testimony at tonight's meeting of the committee, which will begin at 8 o'clock.

His friends say that he had laid down to sleep outside the rail in front of the wheelhouse, and awaking he turned suddenly, and was seen to fall in the river. He called for help once and immediately disappeared. Mr. Earpe was a native of Washington, and a tin and sheet-iron worker by trade. The body was found about four miles below Alexandria, and appears to have been in the hands of a party of thieves, who stripped it of money, rings, etc. There seems to be no doubt that the body drifted ashore as long ago as Tuesday last, and the supposition is that the parties in whose possession it was, concealed the fact of its being found, in hopes of a reward being offered for its recovery. The scoundrelly pirates even stripped the shoes from the corpse, cut out the pockets, etc.	d. 4 Jul 1864		R94/187 and dauntless of the young volunteers who acted against the British army in its memorable approach to Washington.

Capt. Easby was best known by the indomitable perseverance with which he prosecuted all his enterprises, whether public or private. This characteristic induced President Fillmore to appoint him Commissioner of Public Buildings in Washington, which office he held several years, giving the most complete satisfaction by his prompt and energetic discharge of its duties.

Capt. Easby was, at the time of his death, and had been for many years previously, the Treasurer of the National Institute, an association of the leading intelligences of Washington for the promotion of science.

In the death of this estimable citizen the people of Washington have sustained a great loss. From 1812, the date of his settlement here, he has been actively identified with the growth and interest of the city and its inhabitants; and amongst his numerous friends there are many who have grown up with him and the city together. These will feel his loss most sensibly and deeply.

The deceased was an Englishman by birth; but, having been brought to this country by parents in his infancy, he was thoroughly Americanized both in feeling and principle; ever looking, however, with becoming pride upon his native country, which he re-visited in 1849 as bearer of dispatches to the American Minister and as Commissioner to the World's Fair.

In 1812 Capt. Easby was one of the most energetic

In all his business transactions he was distinguished for straightforward integrity and honesty of purpose. In his feelings he was generous and humane, never refusing to assist the poor or the afflicted.

In addition to his generous emotions and his fine business qualities, he was a man of remarkable intelligence and of elevated taste. Notwithstanding his activity in the transaction of the business of out-of-door life, he had found time and leisure to bring together an extensive library of the most rare and elegant books, amongst which are many curious specimens of manuscripts, typography, and ancient paintings and engravings.

This library consists of about twenty-five hundred volumes, and combines in itself almost every thing which is essential to science or beautiful in literature. In this intellectual retreat Capt. Easby was accustomed to spend a large portion of his time, always profitably and agreeably employed; and to this he fondly looked for that retirement where the evening of his days could be passed in those quiet pursuits which are so congenial to declining age; but, alas! in the midst of the soothing contemplation of these approaching enjoyments, surrounded by the ministers of happiness which he had spent his life in accumulating, he fell, when he least expected it, into the arms of that spectral visitor from whose mournful treat no chamber is free.

Capt. Easby met death with the utmost fortitude and composure, at peace with all the world, and surrounded by most of the members of his immediate family, whose efforts to soothe him in his afflictions and to save him were unremitting, though fruitless.

The poor will need him; his friends will miss him; the energetic and the active will inquire for him; and the answer to all of these will be, in the ancient phrase of the preacher, (Ecclesiastes,) "Man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets."

History of the Naval Lodge, No. 4, F.A.A.M.

William Easby, who occupied the East in 1827, affiliated with the Lodge Oct. 7, 1826. He was a prominent business man of that period conducting a large ship-building plant at what was known as Easby's Point near Georgetown, D.C. Under his supervision was built the brig "Lawrence," which made one of the first trips around the "Norn" to California in the gold fever of '49. His old home, at that time surrounded by spacious grounds, which city improvements have since largely curtailed, still stands at the corner of Ninth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue S.E. During his somewhat limited career as a member of the Lodge he took an active part in its affairs.

The Evening Star, Dec. 7, 1913

In Odd Nooks and Crannies with the Rambler

In the Star of recent date it was announced that "a pictorial history of Washington is the plan of the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia," and that at the last meeting "Corresponding Secretary John B. McCarthy called attention to the fact that there had been presented to the association the model of the first ship launched at the Eastern shipyards in Washington in 1829, and also the original permit issued under the signature of Peter Force, May 26, 1840, to William Easby to extend a wharf into the Potomac river."

This brings to the Rambler's mind that not long ago he wrote, from data given him by the daughter of Capt. William Easby, a sketch of that worthy gentleman and the story of the family home at Pennsylvania avenue and 9th street southeast, called by the Easbys "Warwick," and which previously had been Tunnecliff's Hotel, a building which was erected several years before the removal of the seat of government to Washington.

Capt. Easby's daughter has preserved interesting memories of Easby's point. She told the Rambler that the part of the city in which Easby's point is situated was, before the establishment of the District of Columbia, part of a tract belonging to Robert Peter, and on the map of the first survey was called "Mexico." There were many plats of ground variously named – Hamburg, beyond Camp Hill, on the river above and to the north were Port Royal, Widow's Mite and Jamaica, and among others was Mount Pleasant, which also belonged to Robert Peter. Mrs. Easby-Smith remarked to the Rambler that she had often wondered how this holding of Mr. Peter came by the name "Mexico," and whether the visit of the Spaniards to a point on the Potomac river supposed now to be Occaquan, and who afterward returned to Mexico, had any bearing on the matter.

In dealing with the locality of Easby's point it is interesting to recall a paper which Hugh Taggart read before the Columbia Historical Society, May 13, 1907, in which he said: "The mouth of Rock Creek of our day does not exhibit a single feature of its appearance in 1751, when Georgetown was created. At that time the creek was a navigable stream within which the tide ebbed and flowed for a considerable distance above the present P street bridge; then, and for many years subsequently, there were visible in it, on frequent occasions, the tall masts of the trader to European ports, where now the only water craft to be seen is the sand scow.

"The creek at its junction with the river formed quite a large bay; its moutn extended from the point near the old Observatory grounds, where Littlefield's wharf is located (which point was first known as Cedar point, and afterward successively as Windmill point, Peters point and Easby's point) to a point on the present Water street between 31st street, which was formerly known as Congress street, and Wisconsin avenue, which as formerly known as High street."

When Capt. Easby bought this property upon which he decided to locate there was only a barae stretch of land and water from the point where a rock cabin, supposed to have been the dwelling of the keeper of the vanished windmill, to the stone house on the river's edge between G and H streets. The old stone house was very large and was probably built for a custom house, being at the confluence of the river and Rock creek. It was only a few years ago that this old landmark was demolished.

On square No. 12 Capt. Easby built his dwelling and tenant house. On the square to the south the ship lofts were erected and afterward the wharves. At first, and until the residence was completed he and his and John boarded with a family at the Stone House, only returning to their home, Warwick, on the navy yard, for week ends. In the same square with the ship lofts was the plant in which ship timbers were steamed, and later on this lot were built an ice house and the blacksmith shop where sheet iron buoys for the government were constructed.

With doors opening into the shipyard and others on the towpath of the canal, between the bridge and the point was the engine house, and at this place fire drills were frequently held.

It was within the limits of Hamburg where, in 1833, Capt. Easby built his lime kilns. Hamburg was originally a village of some pretensions, at least on paper. It was laid out at the instance of Jacob Funk into squares and streets, and in the center was a large plot for a town house. It extended north from the river and included H street. L'Enfant, in one of his letters, calls the village Funkstown, and it was commonly and variously called Hamburg and Funkstown. Mrs. Easy-Smith told the Rambler that Funk was a gunmaker in Georgetown during the American Revolution and that it seems that quite a colony of Hamburgers settled thereabouts early in the eighteenth century.

"After the completion of the canal," continued Capt. Easby's daughter, "the towpath from Rock creek to D street was on its east side. Here, crossing the bridge it formed the boundary of the shipyard. Turning eastward near the point it ran on the south side of the canal to 17th street, where the Goose creek basin was located. Upon this towpath traveled the mules that drew the barges and in my childhood there were not many hours in the day that laden boats might not be seen on their way to the Eastern branch.

"It is more than three-quarters of a century since I first opened my eyes at Easby's point. I do not remember quite so far back as that particular 14th of July, 1835, but I do distinctly recollect events that took place when I was not more than three years of age. My first remembrance of crossing the river to the Washington who cared for our horses and cow. The skiff was paddled over every evening to bring back a load of the sweet meadow grass which we were privileged to cut.

"I well remember George Washington Parke Custis and his family. Mrs. Lee was quite an artist, which aroused my interest in her. She made a fine copy of a Turner my father owned, a privilege he allowed no one else.

"Gen. Lee often crossed to our landing on his way to the department or the City. The interchange of boats was customary if they chanced to have been left at either of our respective landings.

"Lately I visited the old home of my childhood, but the place was well nigh unrecognizable. The dwelling house, large for those days is transformed into a blacksmith shop and the upper rooms into a depository for junk. The old garden, which occupied half the square except the corner lot, where dwelt the Ferguson family, has disappeared. The luscious fruit, figs, grapes, apples, pears and prunes, and the rare flowers that attracted many visitors, have long since perished. This part of the property is now covered by buildings. The bridge which spanned the canal is gone for the canal is no longer there. The shipyard has been transformed into an establishment for asphalt work. Not a vestige of the old rock cabin remains. Beyond its site, Littlefield's wharf has been constructed. Ere long all these will have been wiped off the earth and effaced from the maps, the whirr and honk of the automobile and the hoofbeats of blooded steeds will replace the sound of the hammers and steam whistles of busy industries, and Potomac Park will be the new name of Easby's point."

In the old rock cabin on the point lived Dyson Moran, who had charge of all the horses used in the various branches of Capt. Easby's plant and was also the driver of Mrs. Easby's carriage.

On 26th street, in the rear of the Easby's garden, lived a family, one of the sons of which, John Fardy, learned shipbuilding in the Easby yard. Later he built a fine shipbuilding plant in Baltimore, accumulated a large fortune and died in that city. The plant established by Fardy belongs now to the Woodall family, who are relatives of Capt. Easby's descendants.

South of the Easby blacksmith shop lived Ignatius Lucas and his wife. In those days there were no trained nurses. Neighbors visited and helped to care for the sick as part of neighborly duty, and chief among those was Mrs. Lucas, who was friend, counselor and comforter to the whole settlement. Mr. Lucas for many years filled a position in either the War or the Navy Department.

The Cumberlands lived on the next lot and their nets and their huge ducking guns were curiosities to the children roundabout. John Cumberland's third wife was a remarkable woman. She was the mistress of the house in which there were four families of children, and they all lived together in peace and happiness.

The brewery on the northwest corner of Potomac Park now covers the lot on which the Cumberlands and the Lucases lived and also the site where John Boyle had his residence. John Boyle was a conspicuous citizen and so closely resembled Gen. Zachary Taylor that each was often mistaken for the other.

On the square east of the lime kiln a glass factory was established in 1824. It was abandoned not many years after, but the building remained long standing. Much of the time it was untenanted and fell into decay. No sign of it remained when the speedway was first projected. Edward Hanley was Capt. Easby's partner in the lime kilns until the captain's death, when Hanley bought the whole interest. Mr. Hanley at first lived on 19th street below F, but later built a fine house on G street near 20th, where he died not long after moving into it. Aleanah Denham was the manager of the lime kilns for more than twenty years. He moved into the house on 19th street vacated by Mr. Hanley and died there in 1881.

There were gala days at the point when a ship was launched. As these were generally built for the government, the guests usually included cabinet officers, officials of high rank and frequently members of the diplomatic corps. The daughter of Capt. Easby, telling the Rambler of these events, said:

Every detail for a launching must be carefully prepared that no hitch or blunder may occur, and the workmen waited with baited breath for the success of the launching, for these, in those olden times were greatly interested in their work and became really attached to their construction as it grew into graceful proportions. It was a beautiful and exciting scene to watch the large vessel start on the ways, and to listen to the strokes of the hammers that loosed the wedges, to see her slowly gathering impetus as she glided gracefully down into the water upon whose bosom she was to spend her life and beneath which sooner or later she would find her grave. Then a collation spread in one of the ship lofts was enjoyed by guests and employes.

I well remember the launching of the revenue cutters "Forward", in 1842 or 1843 and the "Laurence" in 1848. The "Laurence" was in commission for more than a quarter of a century and may still be in existence. My brother, Dr. James Thompson Overstreet, whose father a congressman from South Carolina, was my

Death of Alexander W. Eaton

Union Veteran and Prominent in Local Organizations

Alexander Wadsworth Eaton, one of the most highly esteemed citizens of East Washington, died at an early hour this morning at his residence, 1240 3d street southeast, after a long and severe illness. He was born in the Washington navy yard the 16th of August, 1838, and was the son of the late David Eaton, boatswain, United States navy.

During the war between the states Alexander Eaton volunteered from the District in the three months' service and received an honorable discharge. Later on he was identified with the board of public work under Governor Shepherd, and was also a prominent contractor during that period. During the last twenty years of his life he was inspector of wood for the Anacostia and Eastern district.

In private life his character was that of an upright, honorable and charitable gentleman. He was a member of Dawson Lodge, No. 16, F.A.A.M.; of Washington Naval Chapter, No. 6, R.A.M., and of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite. He was also a charter member of Syracusian Lodge, No. 10, Knights of Pythias, and a member of the Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association, having been a member of the old Anacostia Fire Company.

His wife and two married sons--Frank and George G. Eaton--by his first wife, survive him.

Nine civil war veterans who had served with him for a time on the Capitol police force, acted as an escort to the body. They were Lieut. John Hammond, Sergeants G.W. Hazer, John O'Connell, D.R. He was later appointed to the Capitol police force. His home at the time of his death was at 1329 M street northwest.

Sounded Taps for Comrade

Logan Regiment Honors Memory of Col. Eaton

Soldier of Distinction

Served with Gallantry during the Civil War--Grand Army Notes of Interest

At the last meeting of Logan Regiment, held at the armory, 719 Sixth street northwest, with Col. M.F. Carey in command, the following motion was unanimously carried:

"Taps have again sounded from across the Great Divide, and the reaper who gathers without respect of persons has entered our hall.

Our comrade, Lieut. Col. Alonzo J. Eaton, has responded to the summons that comes to all. His life work has been ended, and a character full of tenderness and of loving kindness to all has ceased to exist, leaving his name to be added to the honored and sacred roll of patriotic dead.

"At the outbreak of the great war Comrado Eaton joined Company G, Fifteenth Maine Infantry, and served faithfully as a gallant soldier until the end, when he received an honorable discharge for work well performed.

"Since the war his life has been passed in this city, where he enjoyed the friendship and esteem of all who knew him.

"That he was royally welcomed by brave comrades, who have passed over before him, there can be no doubt, while we, his earthly comrades, are left to cherish his memory and remember that life is but a brittle thread that may be broken without a moment's warning, therefore, we should be prepared that when the Master calls us home we may be ready, like him, to depart in peace.

"To his bereaved family we tend our deepest sympathy, commending them to the care of Him who doeth all things well.

"Further resolved, That the charter be draped for thirty days."

This gentleman was a boatswain in the Navy and his residence was inside of the Navy Yard. He was a man of very independent and energetic character--so much so, indeed, that it stood in the way of his advancement to a higher position. He entered the naval service in 1795, was appointed boatswain in 1811, and served in the Navy throughout the whole of the War of 1812. He was with Captain James Lawrence on the sloop of war Hornet when she captured the British ship Peacock; was on the same vessel under Captain James Biddle when she took the British ship Penguin; and helped materially in the escape of Biddle's vessel when she was pursued by the enemy's frigate Cornwallis, a ship carrying over four times the number of men and guns carried by the Hornet. Among the descendants of Mr. Eaton are Alexander W. Eaton, his son, and George G. Eaton, his grandson, the latter a member of the Columbia Historical Society. Mr. Eaton was stationed at the Washington Navy Yard from 1820 until his death.

Death of Mrs. E.L Eaton*

Mrs. Elizabeth L. Eaton died, after an illness of five weeks, at Providence Hospital, Thursday night. Mrs. Eaton was the wife of Capt. Alonzo J. Eaton, an employee of the United States Senate, and was born in Brunswick, Me., and resided in Boston a number of years, but she has been a resident of the District during the twenty years last past. She had many friends, and it was greatly through her energetic efforts as a member of the Anacostia Citizens' Association, it is said, that the bill granting the franchise for an electric line from the navy yard to Congress Heights was passed, the property of the Eatons being along that line and adjoining the asylum grounds.

Mrs. Eaton was prominently identified with the Knights of Labor during its prosperous times and did a great deal toward bettering the condition of her sex through getting them better pay and their elevation in other respects. She was charitably disposed and was ever ready to assist the worthy poor, and during the distressing times of the last Potomac floods she was instrumental, through her connection with the Knights of Labor, in raising a large amount of money and securing donations of provisions and clothing for their relief. Prior to eight years ago, Mrs. Eaton was for a number of years, employed as translator in the botanical division of the Agricultural Department. Her remains will be buried in the Congressional cemetery, the funeral services taking place at Lee's undertaking establishment Monday afternoon, 15th instant, at 2 o'clock.

Death Came Suddenly
Henry True Eaton Succumbs to Heart Disease
While performing some specially fine masonry work at the navy yard yesterday afternoon, Henry True Eaton, sixty-eight years old, a prominent resident of the city, living at 734 7th street southeast, dropped dead. A surgeon from the Marine Hospital was summoned, but he found life extinct when he arrived. Coroner Nevitt had investigated the circumstances attending the death and the body was removed to the rooms of a local undertaker to be prepared for burial. The funeral will be held from his late residence, 734 7th street southeast, Monday at 3 o'clock p.m., with interment in Congressional cemetery.
Mr. Eaton had been complaining of feeling ill for a couple of months past and had done no work in that time, being retired from business. Yesterday, however, he was summoned to the navy yard to do some work on a new building there which required expert skill, and he answered the summons. Shortly before 3 o'clock, as stated, he suddenly collapsed. Fellow-workmen went immediately to his assistance, but they were too late. Death was declared to be due to heart disease.
For many years Mr. Eaton was a prominent business man in Southeast Washington and owned considerable property in that section of the city. He was born on August 8, 1838, and came to this city when he was a mere boy. He engaged in the grocery and liquor business for twenty-five years, having his store at 734 7th street southeast, where he lived. About eight years ago he determined to give up the cares of business and retire. Since that time, however, he had been active as a builder and contractor. He continued in that business up to about two months ago.
Mr. Eaton enlisted in the Union army during the civil war and served with credit to himself for several years. He was a member of the G.A.R. and was also a member of the Builders' Union.
Besides his wife, Mrs. Ann Rebecca Eaton, six children, three boys -- Henry T. jr., George and Clarence Eaton, and three daughters -- Cornna E., Anna and Lillian Eaton, survive him.

Mr. Eaton, who was sixty-eight years of age, had been complaining of a slight illness for a couple of months. He, however, went to the navy yard Friday to perform some expert work in masonry and shortly after 3 o'clock he collapsed. For many years he was engaged in the grocery business in Southeast Washington. About eight years ago he retired from the mercantile business and became a builder and contractor.

Mrs. Eckert's Petition
Applies for Appointment as Administratrix of Husband's Estate
Mrs. Aune M. Eckert, the widow of Richard J. Eckert, who lost his life at the time an engine and tender attached to a railroad train fell through the drawer of the Long bridge, today, through Attorney R. Golden Donaldson, petitioned the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to appoint her administratrix of her husband's estate. Mrs. Eckert informs the court that her husband was killed in the Long bridge accident, that he left no will, no property and no debts, and that his only heirs-at-law and next of kin, besides herself are two children, one named George H. Eckert, who is fifteen years of age, and the other Arthur A. Eckert, who is thirteen years of age.
Mrs. Eckert says she has been advised by counsel that the estate of her husband has a just claim against certain railroad companies and adds "that by reason of the insecure and damaged condition of the bridge and drawer that the said drawer did, on or about the 19th day of October, 1903, give way from its fastenings while a certain steam locomotive and railroad cars were passing over said bridge, at which time the death of said deceased was caused through the negligence of said railroad companies."
The court is asked to appoint the widow administratrix in order that appropriate proceedings may be instituted by her to recover damages.

The express train on the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, known as the "F.F.V." that left the 6th street station last night at 11:22 o'clock put the Long bridge out of business. Because of the heavy weight of the train the north half of the draw went down and part of the train went with it. One man, Richard J. Eckart, who was employed as assistant draw tender, is missing, and it is the belief of railroad men and policemen that he and several others lost their lives. ...

...No attention was paid by the railroad men to the matter of searching for the bodies of supposed victims of the disaster, but Harbormaster Sutton's crew attended to it. The river was dragged about the bridge, but up to this afternoon no sign of a body had been found. It was rumored that the diver had seen two or three bodies on the bottom of the river while he was examining the tender, but he denied that there was any truth in it. It is still the opinion of the police and railroad men that two tramps were drowned in addition to Richard Eckart, the assistant bridge tender. ...

Harbormaster Sutton was about the vicinity of the bridge this morning with his crew, and an effort was made to recover the body of Richard Eckart, the only man who is known to be missing, although it is thought that two or three tramps may also have lost their lives at the time of the accident. Only the hat of Eckart, who was assistant to the engineer in charge of the draw, has been found. The crew of the police boat, who made an effort to drag for the body, found the task a difficult one on account of the amount of wreckage in the river.

Arrangements were made to have Capt. Winters, the diver in the employ of the railroad company, go down this afternoon and search for the body. ...

Eckart Still Missing

Unsuccessful Search for His Body in the Potomac

Hundreds of teams hauling brick from the several yards in Virginia below Jackson City have passed over the Long bridge since 9 o'clock yesterday morning, when the work of restoring the wagon road was completed. There were so many teams on the bridge all yesterday and last night that the services of policemen were needed to prevent collision and confusion. There was a big crowd of spectators yesterday afternoon to see Captain Winter go down in his diving suit. He went through the baggage car and tender under the water, but failed to find the body of Richard Eckart, the only man known to be missing. He was enabled to give information, however, which assisted the men in charge of the work of taking sections of the bridge from the water.

The heavy machinery on the pile drivers was used for this purpose, but some of the heavy timbers and iron were so tightly fastened that they could not be budged. Harbor Master Sutton's crew of policemen also made every effort to find the body by using hooks, but without being successful. It is thought the body of the missing man may be held down by the mass of debris in the water, and that it will be found after this has been removed.

Today the work of searching for the body of the missing man was renewed. Should the body be found the coroner will probably hold an inquest, at which testimony regarding the condition of the Long bridge may be of an interesting nature.

Mrs. Eckert's Appeal

Wants Greater Effort Made to Recover Her Husband's Remains

Commissioner Macfarland today received a visit from Mrs. Richard Eckert, whose husband is supposed to have been killed under the wreck of the Long bridge draw recently. Mr. Eckert was the draw tender at the Long bridge.

Mrs. Eckert requested Mr. Macfarland to aid her in recovering the remains of her husband and complained of the delay in finding the body. The Commissioner told her he had the greatest sympathy for her and would do anything he could to help her, but that he believed every effort is being made to recover the body as quickly as possible. However, he telephoned the harbormaster and the general agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, asking them to continue the search, and get out the remains as quickly as practicable.

Both of these gentlemen assured Mr. Macfarland that they are doing all that could be done and would continue to do so. The harbormaster is using all the means at his command. The general agent of the railroad has had two divers at work. But both thought that, until the removal of the wreckage now in process is completed, the remains may not be recovered.

Mrs. Eckert told Mr. Macfarland that by the death of her husband she is left without support for herself and two children, and is in needy circumstances.

Inquest to Be Held

Remains of Richard Eckert Recovered From River

Coroner Nevitt will hold an inquest at the sixth precinct police station tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, at which time testimony will be taken with a view to determining the cause of the Long Bridge disaster. The inquest will be held over the body of Richard J. Eckert, the draw tender, who lost his life at the time the draw collapsed. His body was recovered this morning, after having been in the water about eleven days.

Peter Cavanaugh was in a small boat gathering driftwood about one-eighth of a mile east of the bridge, in the Georgetown channel, about 8:30 o'clock this morning, when he discovered Eckert's body floating about in the water. After securely fastening the body to the wall about the flats he went to the harbor office and informed Harbor Master Sutton of his discovery. The police boat was dispatched to the place where the body was fastened and the body was removed to the wharf at the foot of 6th street.

Mrs. Eckert was summoned to the wharf, where the body had been placed in a metallic casket, and she promptly identified the remains as those of her husband.

The body was badly swollen and discolored, and the condition of the clothing indicated that Eckert had met with violence before he reached the water. His garments had been torn about his right hip, and there was so much mud on the body that it was impossible to see just what injuries had been inflicted. The extent of the investigation to be made tomorrow will probably be to determine something concerning the condition of the bridge, and what, if any, effort has been made to make the structure safe.

It is probable that War Department officials will be called upon to render assistance, and that testimony of practical bridge workers will be heard to determine the condition of the broken timbers after the accident occurred.

The Death of Richard J. Eckert, an Employee of Railway Company, Subject of Inquiry

A searching inquiry was made today by a jury of inquest impaneled by Coroner Nevitt regarding the death of Richard J. Eckert, the watchman who lost his life at the time the draw of the Long bridge collapsed under the weight of a Chesapeake and Ohio railroad train nearly two weeks ago. ...

Deputy Coroner's Statement

The first evidence heard was the statement of Deputy Coroner Glazebrook. He found that the death of the draw tender was due to drowning. The only evidence of violence found about the body was a fracture of the right foot. The doctor discovered that the clothing over both hips was torn. ...

Was With the Draw Tender

George Heins, a boat builder and ship carpenter, testified that he was in the house with Mr. Eckert the night the accident occurred. He was building a boat for Eckert, and frequently called to see him on the bridge. He reached there Sunday night about 8 o'clock, more than three hours before the crash came. Just before Eckert went out to flag the train he complained of having a headache. The engineer of the train responded to the flagging. When the engine reached the draw and the crash was heard all started out of the little house. Eckert was the first to run out. The other men, Captain Giles and Frank Howard, climbed over the train. Witness was unable to climb, and managed to crawl to a place of safety. It was the opinion of witness that a falling timber struck Eckert and knocked him overboard.

Witness said Eckert left the house several seconds before he (witness) got out. ...

Jury's Inquiry Ends

Coroner's Investigation of Long Bridge Accident

Verdict Rendered

Richard J. Eckert's Death As Result of Collapse

The P. W. and B. Railway Company Held Responsible for Unsafe Condition of the Bridge

The investigation of the death of Richard J. Eckert, the watchman on the Long bridge, who was drowned at the time of the bridge disaster, when the draw gave way under the weight of a Chesapeake and Ohio railroad train, was resumed by the coroner's jury today. The accident occurred the night of October 19, and the body of the victim was recovered several days later. A number of witnesses were examined at the first session of the jury and the hearing was postponed for the purpose of getting information concerning what, if any action, had been taken by the War Department officials concerning the condition of the structure and also for the purpose of establishing the question of responsibility. Evidence was heard and the jury returned a verdict as follows:

"We, the jury find that Richard J. Eckert came to his death by drowning on the 18th day of October, in the Potomac river, in the collapse of the draw of that bridge on that date.

"We further believe that the accident resulting in his death was caused by the unsafe condition of the timbers composing the draw, for the condition of which the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railway Company is responsible."

--	-------------------------	--	----------------

The Nation has lost its last living contact with the Mexican War of 1846-1848. Owen Thomas Edgar, who since June 16, last had been the sole survivor of the American forces who fought in that conflict, died yesterday at the John Dickson Home, 5000 Fourteenth Street.

Soldier of 1846 Dies

OWEN THOMAS EDGAR

Mr. Edgar survived the next to the last active participant in the Mexican War by about three months. William Fitzhugh Thornton Buckner, a banker at Paris, Mo., died there June 16. The following day Mr. Edgar observed his ninety-eighth birthday. Mentally alert and surprisingly strong for a man of his advanced age, he seemed pleased that he should be the last man in the Nation who could recall armed service under the flag against Mexico.

Mr. Edgar was a private on the United States frigate Potomac and later on the frigate Allegheny at the time Ulysses S. Grant and Robert E. Lee were seeing their first active service after leaving West Point.

52 Years in U.S. Employ

He put in 52 years of active work in the civilian employ of the Government and with a bank after he was mustered out of the naval service. About a year ago he suffered an attack of grippe, but was able to be about until last Tuesday, when he fell from a chair and broke a leg. He was the "great joker" of the John Dickson Home maintaining a cheerful disposition throughout his 10 years at the institution. Nurses said it was the shock of his recent injury that caused death.

Born in Philadelphia June 17, 1831, Mr. Edgar worked as a printer in that city until the outbreak of the Mexican War, when he enlisted in the Navy. He came to Washington in 1861 and was employed at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, where he worked for 21 years. Then he transferred to the Columbia National Bank, where he worked for 31 years. He was retired from the bank in 1919 and went to the John Dickson Home to live.

Rarely Talked About War

With all his cheerfulness, Mr. Edgar was modest about his own achievements and rarely talked about his part in the Mexican War.

Mr. Edgar's last birthday anniversary was the occasion for a general celebration at the home. His daughter, Mrs. Philo L. Bush of 1812 Park road, carried flowers and candy to him and other gifts were placed in his room by attendants at the home.

His acquaintances found him a delightful character. "He is a great joker," one of the nurses said at the time. He enjoys his meals and never misses one. He eats everything--roast beef, pork, lamb, vegetables and sugar. He has a very sweet tooth and likes to keep candy on hand to give others."

The New York Times, September 4, 1929

The Final Survivor of Mexican War Dies
Owen Thomas Edgar, Who Served in the Navy,
Lived to Age of 98 Years
Washington, September 3

Owen Thomas Edgar, only surviving veteran of the Mexican War, died today at the age of 98.

The distinction of being the last survivor of the Americans who had part in the conflict of 1846 came the day before his ninety-eighth birthday, June 17, when William Filtzhugh Thornton Buckner, 101, died at Paris, Mo.

Mr. Edgar was born at Philadelphia in 1831. Before the war he had worked as a printer. He had been a resident of Washington for more than fifty years.

On Mr. Edgar's ninety-eighth birthday, Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams wrote him a letter of congratulation in the course of which he cited Edgar's Mexican War records as disclosed in the files of the Navy Department. Enlisting as a second-class apprentice on Feb. 10, 1846, he served on the frigates Experience, Pennsylvania, Potomac and Allegheny until his discharge as a first-class apprentice on Aug. 8, 1849.

The New York Times, June 19, 1929
Veteran of 1846 Honored
Secretary Adams Congratulates T.O. Edgar on 98th Birthday
Special to the New York Times
Washington, June 18

Thomas O. Edgar, an inmate of John Dickson Home here and said to be the sole surviving veteran of the Mexican War, was the recipient of a letter of congratulations from Secretary of the Navy Adams yesterday on his ninety-eighth birthday. Edgar served in the navy during the war. The letter read as follows:

June 17, 1929

"Dear Sir:

"An item in the press this morning stated that this was your ninety-eighth birthday.

"The records of the Navy Department show that you enlisted in the navy Feb. 10, 1846, as a second class apprentice, and served on th4e U.S.S. Experience, U.S.S. Pennsylvania, U.S.S. Potomac and the U.S.S. Allegheny until Aug. 8, 1849, when you were discharged as a first class apprentice by order of the Secretary of the Navy.

"While I have not gone into the records thoroughly, I doubt if there are few men alive who served with you in the navy during your period of service.

"It gives me great pleasure to congratulate you upon this, your ninety-eighth birthday, to wish you many happy returns of the day and to extend to you the hope that you will be spared to your family and friends for a long time to come.

"Very sincerely yours,

"Charles Francis Adams."

Was Not a Deserter

Marine Corps Mystery Cleared By Ghastly Discovery

Body of Missing Member Found in Shallow Grave Near Railway Tracks in Maryland

A recent discovery has caused the recall by the naval authorities of a recent circular offering the usual reward for the capture of John E. Edwards who was marked as a deserter from the marine barracks in this city, and the reward papers now bear the superscription "Found." Edwards, who was a private in the U.S. Marine Corps disappeared from the barracks on 8th street southeast, December 1, 1903, and after the time limit of "absence without leave" had expired the reward circular was issued and the police notified to look out for the man.

April 5 the body of Private Edwards, attired in a blue overcoat and full uniform was found buried in a shallow grave near the Pennsylvania railroad tracks at Patuxent Station, about twenty-one miles from this city. The gruesome discovery was made by some workmen who were excavating near the tracks, and the military authorities notified. After the remains had been identified as those of Edwards, Mr. S.R. Mundell and his son Harry K. Mundell, proceeded to Patuxent, and brought the body to Washington, and it was buried April 4 at the Congressional Cemetery.

Investigation has shown that Edwards was probably struck by a train and instantly killed. On the morning of December 2 last some colored men found the body lying beside the track. The man's face on the right side was torn away and his skull crushed, and his right leg had been badly injured.

It is stated that the colored men, without notifying the Washington authorities, placed the body in a wheel barrow, conveyed it to a place near the railroad tool house and buried it. Had it not been for the work of excavating of April 5, Edwards disappearance would have probably remained a mystery and he would have been carried on the naval rolls as a deserter.

A marine who knew the dead man intimately, said today that Edwards met a young woman who lived in the vicinity of the Pennsylvania railroad at a dance in this city last winter and became much attracted to her. It is his opinion that Edwards met his death while trying to find her home.

Deceased was a young man, a native of Ohio, heavily built and about five feet ten inches in height. It is said he was in line for a promotion to a lieutenancy.

Edwards. Departed this life on the 15th of May, 1874, Joseph H. Edwards, in the 48th year of his age. Six long weeks, dear brother, I have watched by thy bedside, hoping and trusting that God would not take you from me; but at last He has called thee home to Heaven, where sickness, sorrow, and death are feared no more.

Dear brothers and sisters, fare thee well,
 For with you I can no longer stay;
 I hear my Saviour sweetly call,
 And I must haste away;
 Around his frail and shattered bark,
 When ocean billows foam,
 His soul amid the storm could sing
 "Praise God, I'm going home."

This unfortunate one was George A. Egbert, who lost his life while bathing in the canal. Just about dark, when the members of the party were ready to return, the young men went in the canal to fake a bath and enjoy a swim. Egbert could not swim, but as his companions were good swimmers he felt perfectly safe, and so he ventured in the water. Almost as soon as he got in the water he disappeared below the surface and failed to come up. His friends made every effort to rescue him, but without success. After doing all in their power to rescue him before life was extinct, and, failing, they procured a set of grappling irons and, after some effort, found him. This afternoon the body was brought here and taken to the home of Egbert's mother, No. 823 D street northeast. His mother, Mrs. Neal, is a widow and has a number of relatives in Mecklinburg, near Watkins Glen, N.Y. His father died at Leonardtown, Md., several years ago. The deceased was about twenty-five years old and was a member of the Seventh Day Adventists Church, on 8th street northeast, from which church his funeral will take place. Death By Drowning

Arthur Ehle Loses His Life at the Bathing Beach

Had Gone With a Companion to the Swimming Pool--The Body Recovered

There was a distressing accident at the bathing beach this morning, which resulted in the drowning of Arthur Ehle, thirteen years old, son of Mr. John N. Ehle of the War Department, who lives at No. 118 4th street southeast.

The boys left home this morning on their bicycles and went to the bathing beach to take a swim. They had not been in the water many minutes before Life Guard McNamee's attention was attracted to Lawrence Frank by his calls for help, which were accompanied by the splashing of water. Frank was then in deep water between two floats, and the guard soon had him ashore.

The rescued boy was questioned by the guard but he was too badly frightened to tell where his companion was. After he had gone to the house the guards went and questioned him, and then he told for the first time that his companion had been in the water near him. Without waiting for an explanation an effort was made to find Ehle, and not more than a minute after the information had been received by Life Guard Tindall the body was taken from the water.

The guards and officers on duty went to work to save his life, and the Emergency Hospital physicians were summoned. When they had worked on him for nearly two hours the doctors concluded nothing more could be done and the body of the boy was removed to his father's home on Capitol Hill.

Tells How It Happened

Lawrence Frank gave the officers and guards an explanation of the affair. He did not know how to swim and he went to the beach with his companion to learn. When Ehle got out between the two floats he called to him to come in. As soon as he got overboard and found the water was deep, he says, he grabbed Ehle by the neck in order to save his life, and it was his idea he held to him several minutes before he was rescued. The condition of the dead boy's neck and bathing suit shows that he made a desperate struggle to free himself from the grasp of his companion.

This is the first fatal accident at the beach this season, and it is greatly regretted by the men who were on duty at the time it occurred. None of the men saw the Ehle boy before he went in the water, and unfortunately Frank could not in time give them the needed information.

Dead In Room At Hotel With The Gas Turned On

Mystery Surrounds Case of Robert Elam, Clerk in the City Post Office

Robert Elam, thirty-four years old, a clerk in the city post office, was found dead in bed in a room on the third floor of the Burdine Hotel on D street this morning, his death having resulted from the inhalation of illuminating gas. Whether the gas was turned on with suicidal intent or as the result of an accident is not known. No note indicating suicide was found in the room, nor had Elam ever made any suggestion that he was tired of life.

Two horseshoes hung on the wall of the room in which he died, but the death of the occupant dispelled the idea that they were an omen of good luck in his case.

In the pockets of the clothing of the dead man the police found cards indicating bets on race horses, the tickets bearing the names of Pine Hill, Mercantile, Cecil, Hunter, Houston and Lanesville clubs, and a memorandum indicating business with a money-lender.

Elam resided at 441 O street northwest. Yesterday afternoon he registered at the hotel and asked the clerk to telephone to the post office that he was sick and unable to attend to his duties.

This morning about 6:30 o'clock Theodore Green, colored porter in the hotel, went to the door of the room occupied by Elam and called him. The porter said he got a response from Elam. Two hours later he returned and found the guest dead. Coroner Nevitt made an investigation and gave a certificate of accidental death. His body was turned over to an undertaker and prepared for burial.

On the Death of Mrs. E.P. Elliott The shades of night had stolen away From this earthly home of ours And the golden ray of ineffable day Smiled on our world of flowers The sun rose up from the shadowy depths Of the ocean rolling far, And looked sublime from the heavenly clime Where glimmered the morning star.

'Twas then when earth in its roseate hue
Seemed bright to the gazing eye;
That the mother's soul, to its Heavenly goal
Fled up through the azure sky.
'Twas then that the wife, the loved one fled
And it seemed as I thought the while
That the sun-sent ray was to light her away
To the sweets of the god head's smile.

Ah! Yes, though her heart pulse beats no more
In this world where flowerets bloom
Though the orphan's tear has gemmed her bier
And watered her silent tomb,
Though her eye is dimmed and her form is still
And she breathes on earth no more
Yet her spirit smiles through the lighted aisles
Of Alden's eternal shore.

Publication of the Elliots' paper, the Washington Gazette, was suspended shortly after the British invasion. In November 1815 the paper was revived as The Washington City Weekly Gazette, with Jonathan Elliot as publisher and editor. In 1817 the journal, now the City of Washington Gazette, became a daily.

Elliot is known chiefly for his publication of Debates, Resolutions and Other Proceedings in Convention on the Adoption of the Federal Constitution, published in 1827. Three more volumes were published between 1827 and 1830. In 1836 a second edition was published, "much enlarged and improved." Nine years later he added a fifth volume including Madison's notes of debates in the Federal Convention. "Elliot's Debates" was for many years one of the most valuable collections relating to the Constitution. Elliot also published "The Diplomatic Code of the United States;" "Floral Columbianae" compiled by J.A. Brereton; and in 1830 a work of his own, "Historical Sketches of the Ten Miles Square Forming the District of Columbia" which is a 500-page compilation, including descriptions of the flora and fauna in the District, paragraphs describing a number of the mansions in the area, i.e., Arlington House, General Van Ness's Mansion, Meridian Hill, Mason's Island, Hayes' Manor, and the Calvert Mansion in Riverdale, Maryland. Also in this guide book are the names of all the members of the 21st Congress, (David Crockett of Tennessee appears in the list.) And statistics of deaths in 1829 in the District, wherein teething is given as cause of death for 7 infants.

Jonathan Elliot's last publication in 1845 was the "Funding System of the United States and Great Britain."

The mother of Jonathan and his brothers, who made her home in the United States with her sons, died in 1820, and is buried in Congressional Cemetery, Range 32, Site 21.

Jonathan was married twice, first to Brigit, who came from Ireland. It is said that they met on shipboard. They had two sons, Jonathan, Jr., and Henry, who became a lawyer in New Orleans. Brigit died and was buried in Congressional Cemetery, September 22, 1831, Range 31, Site 17.

Jonathan's second wife was Elizabeth King, daughter of Harry King of Richmond County, Virginia. Their first son Thomas was born in 1836 and died at nine years, in 1845. Their second son was Robert Kerr Elliot (1839-1885). Their third son was John Milton Elliot (1843-1896).

Jonathan died in March of 1846 after suffering with inflammatory rheumatism. His funeral took place at his residence at 2nd Street East and C Street North (formerly John Greenleaf's Corner) with burial in Congressional Cemetery Range 31, Site 5. His widow, Elizabeth, was left with her two small boys, Robert, seven, and John, three. The two older sons of Jonathan, Jonathan, Jr., and Henry, were probably young adults in 1846. In her later years Elizabeth made her home with her son Robert's family at Melrose, in Hyattsville, Maryland.

Robert Kerr Elliot married Emily Teresa Lake of Falmouth, England. Robert practiced law in Washington and had property and a home in Hyattsville, Maryland. The first child of Robert and Emily was young Robert, who died at 2 years of age, and is buried in Oak Hill Cemetery, as is Robert K. Elliot. Roberta, their daughter, was born in 1872. She grew to adulthood, married and had a number of children. For some years after Robert K.'s death in 1885, his widow, Emily, operated a rooming house for young women at 1400 L Street, N.W. About the turn of the century, Emiy, her daughter and son-in-law left the United States to live in Dublin, Ireland.

John Milton Elliot my great-grandfather and third son of Jonathan and Elizabeth Elliot, married Josephine (Josie) Harrison of Maysville, Kentucky, daughter of Robert and Diana Harrison, in 1864. Their children were: Inez Elliot Chase - my grandmother, Bessie Elliot Anderson, Thomas Harrison Elliot, Edith Rives Elliot Chapman, Robert King Elliot, and Jenny, who died at 2 years. John M. and Josephine Elliot made their home in the Washington, D.C. area as have four more generations of descendants of Jonathan and Elizabeth Elliot.

The National Intelligencer,

On the Death of Mrs. Sarah Elliot

She is gone! The chilling horrors of the grave have received her remains. She that but yesterday filled the hearts of a fond family with delight and the tenderest affection -- is no more.

Addison, on his death bed, sent for his son, for the purpose of letting him see with what calmness and serenity a Christian could die. The sublime tranquility of her spirit looked calmly, with Christian fortitude on the menacing aspect of Death, which now "lies on her like an untimely frost upon the sweetest flower of all the field."

So soon, so sudden, and so awful! Affections, deeply rooted, planted under the most enchanting smiles of Hope, that dwelt with rapture on her existence, are now troubled, convulsed, torn from their seat, by this unforeseen -- this frightful blow. -- But, "Thy will be done!"

What, let us ask, is this cold, damp, chilling frost of death -- this blighter of all the tender endearments of human life? It is the Law of the Almighty, and of our nature -- it is the principle of the universe, and it asserts its empire with unrelenting sway --

"Ah! how dark

Thy long-extended realms and rueful wastes;

Where naught but silence reigns, and night -- dark night

Darks as was chaos, ere the infant sun

Had tried his beam athwart the gloom profound."

It is as natural to die as to live; to die, then, is in the order of providence. That reflection brings with it a consolation. Philosophy teaches not to repine at what is inevitable. Religion admonishes us not to arraign the dispensations of Providence. Grief is, indeed, but a selfish indulgence. She that is taken away reposes beyond this world's limit, on the bosom of her Maker. Her husband, her children, her relatives, stricken and wounded at the separation, weep and bemoan. Yet why should their tears flow? Let us regard her moral and useful existence, brief as it was, as the bright vision of an angel, permitted, for an hour, to visit them, to hallow, to consecrate their thoughts, by her pious instruction, and her bright example, and to leave her sex, and to society, the model of a virtuous and accomplished woman".

To breathe domestic comforts in an element of fine ideas and virtuous sensations, is the very summit of rational human enjoyments. It is the lot of but few to attain that height of felicity., But he who does, when deprived of it, feels with bitter anguish the sand and sorrowful reverse.

It takes a long time, early and assiduous parental attention, to form an accomplished woman -- the most careful tuition, and, above all, good company. But, when once formed, and the delightful task completed, how admirable! Intelligence of mind, intellectual enjoyments, easy dignity, amiability, and a thousand nameless female graces, which render life agreeable, and the domestic hearth an earthly paradise--throwing a fascination around the whole circle of the enjoyments of life. It is a boon of heaven which few possess. The fond husband who enjoys such a treasure may be truly accounted happy, rich in so rare a felicity of bliss. But he who loses it, and loses it in an instant, has it snatched from him, by the hand of Death, in an unlooked for moment, and sees--

"The Fates deform his lovely Spring:

"His roses faded, and his lilies foil'd, and

"The worm riot of her damask cheek"

may well be desolate, forlorn, and miserable. It is, we believe, true moral courage and religious faith alone that can sustain the shock -- teach a husband to view his wife's death-bed of sickness, where all his hopes were garnered up, with resignation and composure and witness the approach of that awful dissolution which closes the scene on earth, and opens the prospect of eternity--

"Still shall thy grave with rising flowers be drest;

"And the green turf lie lightly on thy breast:

"There shall the morn her earliest tears bestow--

"There the first roses of the year shall blow;

"While angels, with their silver wings, o'ershade

"The ground now sacred by thy relics made."

Note. Mrs. E. was endowed with an excellent education, intended by her parents for her own intellectual enjoyments; but, on their demise, she devoted her talents, for a time, to the instruction of young ladies; eighty pupils, of the most respectable families, formed her school. Albert Gallatin, Langdon Cheves, Henry Clay, and other distinguished gentlemen, were among those who entrusted their daughters to her tuition. But the invasion of the British, who established their headquarters in an adjoining building on Capitol Hill, was the cause of the abandonment of this undertaking. But, always indefatigable in intellectual discipline, she gave her husband valuable assistance in the columns of the Washington Gazette, from 1815 to 1826. The successive translations from the Paris papers, which appeared in that paper, were always from her pen. The sketches of the trial of Sir Robert Wilson, the sittings of the Institute of France, the invasion of Spain by the French in 1823, and a variety of matter useful to the American reader, were among her translations. These articles were copied into many papers of the day. Laterly she had just completed the examination of the proof sheets of the French part of a work, no in the press, on Diplomacy. All these labors she performed as a matter of intellectual recreation, rather than literary toil.

The National Intelligencer, January 1, 1838

Suddenly, on the forenoon of Saturday last, Mr. William Elliott, Surveyor of the city of Washington, aged 64. Mr. E., though a native of England, was an old resident of this city -- was the founder of the Washington City Gazette in 1813, and, possessing considerable scientific attainments, was a useful as well as a kind-hearted citizen. He was one of the earliest and most zealous members of the Columbia Institute, and his remains were attended to the grave by that Society.

I desire to correct some imperfect statements lately appearing in public print, and for that reason I state, first, that a Mr. William Elliott, a civil engineer, emigrated from England in the year 1810 to the city of Washington, where he became known as a celebrated teacher of algebra and mathematics. He was appointed to a position in the Pension Office of the War Department, and being commissioned by the President of the United States to fix the longitude of the Capitol from Greenwich, England, on April 10, 1821, he resigned his position in the Pension Office on the 30th of that month.) He completed his instrumental Celestial observations for the longitude on February 21, 1822. (Its calculations were made by Wm. Lambert.) He built a frame house for a private observatory at the rear of his dwelling in March, 1824 (From his notes, in possession of his granddaughter, Miss E. Elliott, 216 North Capitol St.), and on April 2, 1824, he was engaged running a meridian line to the north of his observatory. He was appointed surveyor of the city of Washington in 1832, and continued in that office till his death in 1837.

The first United States Naval Observatory was brought into existence chiefly by the efforts of the said Mr. William Elliott. Lieut. L.M. Goldsborough, U.S.N., was the first officer who was placed in charge of that office in the Navy Department, in the year 1830. Lieut. Goldsborough was succeeded in that year by Lieut. Wilkes, U.S.N., who obtained permission from the Naval Commissioners to remove the Observatory office to a small frame building on a high elevation that was located at the rear of Mr. William Elliott's residence, No. 222 North Capitol street, situated on the west side between B and C streets, and N. 5 degrees 0 minutes W., 1,2000 feet (nearly) from the center of the Capitol, being the same observatory as was built by Mr. Ellicott in March, 1824.

It becomes our painful duty as above to record the death of our young friend Harry Ellis, son of our respected townsman, Jonas B. Ellis, Esq. The subject of this notice was not only endeared to his family, and especially to the heart of his sorrowing and now heart-broken father, but to a large number of devoted friends throughout the entire city. Exemplary in all the youthful walks of life, noble and generous in his nature, warm and kindly in his affections, always ready and willing to make sacrifice for others rather than himself, 'tis not strange that this affliction should have sent sorrow to so many hearts and shrouded in gloom the happy household where so recently his voice and presence administered so much of joy, peace and happiness. May the bereaved father and friends be supported in this the hour of their darkness by a merciful Providence which alone can give strength to bear and resignation to submit to the Divine will, knowing, as we do, that all is well ordered and right. Truly, a noble boy has gone. J.E.H.

Funeral of Jonas B. Ellis

An Old Citizen Who Was Prominent Before The War Buried In Congressional Cemetery

Mr. Jonas B. Ellis, an old and respected citizen street southwest, on Monday morning last, aged 71 years. Mr. Ellis was a native of Virginia, but came to East Washington when a youth, and learning the business of engineer and machinist in the Navy Yard worked there for many years, the latter part of the time as quartermaster under his brother, the late W.M. Ellis, master machinist. For many years he was an active fireman, and was the president of the old Anacostia Fire Company. He represented the old Sixth Ward in the Board of Common Council thirty five years ago, and after moving to South Washington he was sent to the same board from that section. He also served several terms as a member of the Board of Trustees of the Public Schools. As a member of the councils he was zealous in his advocacy of the public-school interests and the fire department. He was chairman of the committee on fire department when the transition was made from the old volunteer system to the paid department, and it was owing to his efforts, in a great measure, that the new system was adopted. In politics Mr. Ellis was an old-line whig, and was a warm admirer of Presidents Taylor and Fillmore, serving under the latter as warden of the old penitentiary. Before the war, with his brother, he embarked in the foundry and machine business, on Ohio avenue, near 13th street, but retired therefrom some years since, and the latter part of his life he passed in comparative quietness, at his home, on B street south. His funeral took place this afternoon, and was attended by a large number of the old families of the city. Rev. Joseph T. Kelly, of the Fourth Presbyterian church, officiated, and the interment was at the Congressional Cemetery.

Lewis Y. Ellis Dead

Was Recently Appointed Chief Clerk of Indian Office

Lewis T. Ellis, recently appointed chief clerk of the Indian office, and for many years chief of the files division of that office, died at his apartment in the Olympia, 14th and Euclid streets, last evening at 7 o'clock. The immediate cause of death was acute kidney trouble. When, about four months ago, he was attacked it was thought he would soon recover, but he continued to fail until about two weeks ago, when he was compelled to take to his bed. From that time he gradually sank until the end last evening.

A man of a most lovable nature, coupled with a high Christian character, Mr. Ellis was unusually popular among a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. He was born in Glens Falls, N.Y., February 2, 1852, and was consequently in the 55th year of his age. After spending his boyhood days in the east Mr. Ellis came to this city with his parents in 1863, and was afterward appointed a page at the Capitol, where he served for a number of years. Later he entered the Indian office, where he served till he was taken ill. During his early life here his father, the late Zabina Ellis, was the disbursing officer of the sixth auditor's office.

Regarded as an Authority

During his incumbency as the chief of the files division of the Indian office Mr. Ellis was regarded by his associates as an authority on all matters pertaining to Indian affairs. He had charge of the receipt, indexing and distribution of approximately 100,000 letters annually, and evolved a system whereby, upon being given the name of any individual who had ever corresponded with the office, he could in a moment place his hands upon all of the correspondence pertaining to that individual's case. In physique Mr. Ellis was tall and of athletic build. His most noticeable characteristics were his modesty and politeness.

His widow, who was Miss Ella Knight; a child by a former marriage, Miss Clara May Ellis, and three sisters and four brothers--Mrs. H.F. Lyon, Mrs. John F. Davis, Miss Kate Ellis, and Messrs. Harvey G. Ellis of the pension office, Thomas Ellis of the sixth auditor's office, Percy Ellis of the government printing office and Daniel Ellis of Ogden, Utah--survive the deceased.

Mr. Ellis was recently appointed to the position of chief clerk of the Indian office, and at the time of his death his commission had just been made out, he not having had the opportunity to qualify in his new position.

Deceased was a member of Lafayette Lodge, No. 19, F.A.A.M., and also of Goodwill Commandery, No. 21, of the Golden Cross.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Olympia. Rev. W.M. Ferguson, the pastor of Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church, of which the deceased was a member, will officiate. Rev. D.W. Skellenger pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian Church, will assist. The pallbearers have not yet been chosen, but will doubtless be members of Lafayette Lodge. The interment will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Death of Wm. M. Ellis

With regret we announce the death of Wm. M. Ellis, which occurred this morning at his late residence in the southern portion of the Fifth Ward. Mr. Ellis was the senior partner of the firm of Ellis & Brother, machinists, and in his line of business was a first Master Engineer, Navy Yard, during which time several first class engines for our vessels of war were built under his superintendence, as also the beautiful engine in the copper rolling mill, which is said to be one of the finest pieces of machinery ever made in this country. Mr. Ellis was one of the oldest members of the Masonic order in the District, and several years ago was the Grand Master, and was a member of Naval

WILLIAM M. ELLIS,
GRAND MASTER, 1844.

Lodge. He was a very quite, unassuming citizen, was deservedly popular among those with whom he was acquainted, and for several terms was honored by being elected to the Council. He has been for years a member of the Four-and-a-half Street Presbyterian Church, and was at the time of his death one of the deacons. He had been a member of the Church about forty years. He was at the time of his death one of the Board of Water Commissioners. It was through his mechanical skill and ingenuity, while master machinist at the Navy Yard, that the yard gained its high reputation as a manufacturing yard. His funeral will take place from the Four-and-a-half Street Church on Thursday at 2 1/2 o'clock, and will be attended by the Masonic fraternity, of which he was one of the three remaining past masters, (Dr. Magruder and J.E.F. Holmead being the others.) He was taken sick several weeks ago, and it was at first supposed that his disease was a bronchial affection, but it was subsequently ascertained that he had a tumor in one of his lungs, which caused his death.

Funeral of W.M. Ellis

The funeral of the late Wm. M. Ellis, a Past Grand Master of the Masons, and a highly respected citizen of the Fifth Ward, took place this afternoon at the 4 1/2 street Presbyterian Church, which was well filled by the many relatives and friends of the deceased, among whom were many of our oldest citizens, and members of the Masonic order.

The corpse was enclosed in a handsome coffin, covered with black cloth, on which were the Masonic emblems, square and compass, with the letter G and the five pointed star, understood by all bright Masons. On the breast of the coffin was a beautiful wreath of flowers, and the lambskin of the order.

The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Sunderland and Rev. John Chester, (the latter of the Capitol Hill Presbyterian Church,) and at their conclusion the corpse was removed to the hearse, R. Clark and J. Nokes, Past Masters of Naval Lodge; J. Essex and C.W. Bennett, of the Grand Lodge, and Messrs. Campbell and Carter, of the church, acting as pallbearers.

The procession was formed of Washington and Columbia Commanderies of Knights Templar escorting the Grand Lodge, headed by Heald's band, and the Washington Naval Lodge. No. 4, as mourners, headed by F. Prosperi's band. The remains were interred at the Congressional Cemetery, the Masonic service being conducted by Grand Master B.B. French.

History of the Naval Lodge, No. 4, F.A.A.M.

William M. Ellis, who filled the Master's chair in the year 1835 and later in the year 1848, was born in August 1806, and resided his entire life in Washington. He was a mechanic of high order, was thoroughly conversant with all branches of steam engineering and for many years held the position of Master Machinist in the Navy Yard in Washington; subsequently engaged in private business, conducting a machine shop on Ohio Avenue. His standing in the community is evidenced by the fact that he was for many years a member of the City Council. He is described as "quiet and unostentatious, beloved and respected." He was initiated Nov. 3, 1827; passed Dec. 1, 1827, and raised Dec. 19, 1827. Besides his service in Naval Lodge he was Senior Grand Warden in 1837; Deputy Grand Master in 1839, and Grand Master in 1844. His death occurred March 16, 1868. In the language of a resolution passed by the Grand Lodge on the occasion of his funeral under the auspices of that body, "He revered God, he loved his country, he loved his fellow men."

Harper, Kenton N., History of the Grand Lodge, 1911

p. 346: Grand Master, 1844

Born in Philadelphia, Pa., August 28, 1806, he received an academic education, and afterward became principal of the academy at Rockville, Md. Later he entered the Washington Navy Yard as a founder and subsequently became master machinist at that place. During his service at the Yard several first-class engines for our vessels were built under his supervision. In after years he established a private business under the firm name of Ellis & Bro., machinists and prospered. As a citizen he was active in public affairs, was President of the Anacostia Fire Co., and was for some years a member of the Board of Water Commissioners and of the City Council.

He was one of the founders of the First Presbyterian Church and one of its deacons for forty years. He is described as a model citizen, fond husband, and profound Christian. Quiet and unassuming, beloved, and respected, he was deservedly popular among his associates.

At the time of his death, which occurred March 16, 1868, he was one of the oldest members of the Fraternity in the District and one of the most venerated. In the language of a resolution passed by the Grand Lodge on the occasion of his funeral, under the auspices of that body, "he revered God, he loved his country, he loved his fellow men."

Often I would go there and when she offered me a seed cake I would always refuse, for I was afraid of the snuff. She was a kind friend of our family, and sympathy is often of more value than money. The Late Samuel Emery

Impressive Funeral Services at the Metropolitan

M.E. Church This Morning

Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church is generally unoccupied on Saturday, but this morning the exception and not the rule prevailed. A large number of people occupied seats in the audience chamber, and by so doing testified to their regard for the late Samuel Emery. More satisfactory evidence of a man's popularity could hardly be produced than that which was apparent in the assemblage. The great majority were elderly members in good standing of the solid business portion of the community.

It was 11:30 when the funeral procession, with the Rev. Dr. Bates of the Methodist Protestant church at its head, entered the edifice. As the familiar words "I am the resurrection and the life" were uttered the congregation arose and remained standing until the relatives of the deceased were seated. The casket, covered with lilies and roses and miniature wheat sheaves, was placed in front of the altar rail while the quartet choir of the church sang "Come Unto Me All Ye That Labor and Are Heavy Laden, and I Will Give You Rest."

Dr. Bates then read a scriptural selection--commencing "Behold, I show you a mystery" -- and following the conclusion of this the choir, unaccompanied by the organ, chanted the Lord's prayer.

After mentioning the causes which were responsible for the absence of both the Rev. Dr. Corey, pastor of the church, and Bishop John P. Newman, Dr. Bates announced as his text the words of Job: "All the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change come." With pointed brevity the venerable divine talked of the uncertainty of life and the certainty of death. The change, he said, was a desirable one; from a world of mutations to a land of unchangeable glory. Speaking of the deceased, the doctor said he had known him for forty years, most of the time as his pastor, and had found him to be a man of unquestioned integrity, liberal attentive to the services of the sanctuary and in all his relations a manly man.

A short prayer was succeeded by an invitation to those present to see the remains. The choir sang "Nearer, My God To Thee" while the many friends took a last look at the kindly face of the man they had respected. Among those who thus showed their esteem was ex-Senator Henry W. Blair.

The active pallbearers were Edward Graves, A.B. Duvall, William Mackey, Clarence Duvall, Commissioner John W. Ross and Dr. George H. LaFetra. The honorary bearers were Messrs. Charlton, Browning, Tallmadge, Clarke, Hanover, Tenney, McDowell and W.E. Clarke.

While the cortege was leaving the church enroute for Congressional cemetery, Organist W.T. Hutchinson played "Come, Ye Disconsolate."

The choir was composed of Mrs. Lapham, Miss Gray, Mr. Will Atkinson and Mr. W.R.

Few American shave such a splendid memorial as that which has been chosen by the officers of the coast survey to immortalize the excellent qualities of the late Lieut. Charles F. Emmerich of the United States navy, who died in California last year. Lieut. Emmerich was executive officer of the steamer Hassler, which took a surveying party to Alaska during the season of 1893, and endeared himself to every member of the ship's company. When the news of his death reached the city last year the officials of the survey determined to honor his memory by naming for him one of the peaks that had been discovered during the trip that he helped to make so pleasant. To note this fact the following letter was sent by Mr. J.F. Pratt, who was chief of the party, to Mrs. Catherine C. Emmerich of this city, Lieut. Emmerich's mother:
"I inclose a photograph of 'Emmerich mountain,' one of the most conspicuous peaks on the west side of the head of Chilkat inlet, Alaska. This mountain is 6,940 feet high, and was so named by the members of the coast survey party engaged in that locailty in the international boundary between Alaska and British America during the past season in honor of your son, in thankful remembrance of the good fellowship and many attentions shown them while he was the executive officer of the coast survey steamer Hassler."

Death Came Suddenly -- Rev. Richard Emmons Victim of Acute Indigestion

Active Member of Odd Fellow Fraternity, of the G.A.R., and Oldest Inhabitants Association

Rev. Richard Emmons, local preacher, connected with Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, died last evening at 9:30 o'clock at the family residence, 1019 G street southeast. The cause of death was heart failure brought on by acute indigestion. Shortly after 9 o'clock Mr. Emmons, who was conversing with his wife in their room on the second floor, told her he would go to the cellar to see that the furnace fire was banked for the night. Presently he left the room on that mission, and as he reached the top step of the stairs leading to the front hall he suddenly pitched forward and fell to the floor below.

Mrs. Emmons heard the noise and, rushing to the hall, found her husband apparently lifeless upon the floor. She at once called several passersby and a physician was hurriedly summoned. After an examination the physician state that Mr. Emmons was dead. It was his belief that he died before his body struck the lower floor. Mr. Emmons had complained to his wife several times during the afternoon of indigestion, and after the evening meal had said he felt worse than he had during the preceding evening. His wife thought he would soon recover, and his sudden demise was a great shock to her. The funeral will take place from Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church Monday at 2 o'clock. The interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

Church and Fraternal Relations

For forty-five years Mr. Emmons was an active member of Fourth Street M.E. Church, now known as the Trinity M.E. Church, having been licensed as elder of that church. At the time of his death he was an active member of Union Lodge, No. 11, I.O.O.F.; of Farragut Post of the G.A.R., of which he was the adjutant, and of the Oldest Inhabitants' Association of the District of Columbia.

Mr. Emmons was married in 1850 to Elizabeth S. Wilson of Wilmington, Del. She died in 1899, and he was again married to Mrs. Clara Moffitt of Wilmington in June, 1904.

The following children of his first marriage survive him: George E. Emmons, Dr. Charles M. Emmons, Oliver A. Emmons and Howard O. Emmons of this city, and Richard W. Emmons of Brooklyn, N.Y.

You have left me, mother, darling,
Left me, oh so sad and lonely
You have left me, gone forever,
To be happy with the blest.

By Her Loving Son, Raymond

Death has claimed me darling mother;
Set a seal upon her brow;
In the arms of her dear Savior
She is gently sleeping now.
Affliction sore, long time she bore --
Physicians were in vain --
Till Christ, the Chief, came to her relief
And eased her of her pain.
Home is sad! Oh, God how dreary;
Lonesome, lonesome every spot;
Listening for her voice till weary --
Weary, for we hear her not.

By Her Loving Daughter Nolie

To frail for this cold world of ours;
And God has kindly taken her,
To bloom amidst celestial bowers.

The bloom of youth has passed away,
The light of hope illumed her eye;
She looked like one too pure to live,
Too bright, too beautiful to die.

Because we dwell below?

We will bury her under the mossy sod,

We have only given her back to God,
Ah! wherefore do we weep?

Thomas E. Ertler Found Dead at Home of His Mother

Thomas E. Ertler was found dead on the floor in the kitchen at the home of his mother, Mrs. Bertha Long, 465 E street southwest, his morning shortly before 6 o'clock. His death was caused by inhaling illuminating gas.

The young man had prepared a bed on the floor some time during the night, turned on the gas at the stove and awaited the summons of death. It was stated to the police that he told his mother yesterday he was tired of life and the police were also informed that he had made several unsuccessful efforts at suicide during recent months.

Mrs. Long this morning detected the odor of gas and went to the kitchen, and was horrified to find her son dead. She at once summoned a policeman. Later in the day Coroner Nevitt made an investigation and gave a certificate of death in accordance with the facts.

Attempted Suicide

Yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock, an individual named William Espey, a cabinet-maker, residing in the Seventh Ward, under the excitement of brain that follows excessive drinking, applied for strychnine at the drug store of Mr. Dyson, at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Twelfth street, with an intimation that his purpose was to destroy his life. On being refused he left the store with oaths and imprecations on the head of the druggist, and, proceeding down to the drug store of the young Messrs. Ford, on the corner below, he changed his manner entirely, asking calmly, and so as to create no suspicion of his purpose, for an ounce of laudanum, which he purchased.

On getting out of the store, he hastily drew the cork and swallowed the contents of the vial. Fortunately, one of the proprietors of the store observed him, and sprang out after him, following him into Mr. Adams' Restaurant near by, where he had taken a seat in one of the boxes. He (the druggist) informed those present what Espey had done, and with their assistance, took him by main force back into the drug store, where Mr. Ford, instantly sending for medical aid, also attempted to force down his throat emetics, which Espey resisted, refusing to swallow them.

Drs. Berry and Force soon arrived, and made various efforts to compel him to take emetics, or to submit to the operation of the stomach pump, against which he struggled with a success truly remarkable, considering the physical force employed to save his life. Late in the afternoon the drowsiness consequent on the laudanum in him conquered his faculty of resistance, and the physicians applied the stomach pump, by means of which so much of the poison was extracted from him that he began to revive after they had given up almost all hope of saving him. Getting him on his feet again, they and their assistant bystanders next kept him in motion against his will, until all danger was passed. His case was managed with skill and perseverance, reflecting the highest credit on the physicians called in, as above described. Mr. Ford, too, by his presence of mind and energy, notwithstanding his youth, placed the case within the reach of the skill of those gentlemen. A delay of ten minutes on his part might have rendered Espey's recovery past hope.

Death of Archibald Etzler

Fatal Effects of a Fall Tuesday Morning Last

Archibald Etzler, an old and esteemed resident of Anacostia, died yesterday afternoon about 4:45 o'clock at his home, 119 Maple avenue, from the effects of a severe shock to his system, the result of a fall he sustained on Tuesday morning last. Early that morning Mr. Etzler fell on the platform at the top of his rear steps and broke his right leg near the hip. The same limb had caused him to lose a week from his work, and he had not yet returned. He considered it was slightly injured as the consequence of a light wall while at work.

Mr. Etzler was sixty years of age and had resided continuously in Anacostia for about twenty-five years, going there almost directly upon his arrival in the District. This lovely bud, so young and fair,
Called hence by early doom,
Just came to show how sweet a flower
In Paradise would bloom.

Ere sin could harm or sorrow fade,
Death came with friendly care.
The opening bud to heaven conveyed,
And bade it blossom there.

Dies of Injuries

Bevan Evans the Victim of Accident at Benning

Bevan Evans, 22 years old, of South Wales, England, an iron worker, was struck by a freight train at Benning, D.C., early this morning, and died in the Casualty Hospital as a result of injuries, at 8:15 o'clock. The coroner was at once notified of the death and will make an investigation today.

Evans came to this city to work in the construction of the new power house of the Potomac Electric Power Company, to be erected at Benning, and he had been employed there for several weeks, making his home at Mrs. Herbert's boarding house, near the water tank at Benning. He was a single man, and it is not believed he had any relatives in the city.

He was walking in the southbound yard of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at Benning last night and was run down by a freight train. Some of the railroad workmen who witnessed the accident picked up and cared for the injured man, and Policeman Behrens of the ninth precinct was notified at once. The ambulance of the Casualty Hospital was called and he was conveyed there, as stated.

The body was removed to the morgue this morning to await investigation by the coroner.

Which baffled skill and care,
And long he lingered racked with pain
And suffering hard to bear.

To the land of the faithful, the home of the blest,
Where joy knows no change, where the day knows no night;
Where the glory of God is the fountain of light.

Oh, weep not for him, though he sleeps in his grave
He trusted in one who is mighty to save,
And the Savior he trusted has taken him home
From the follies of earth, from the evils to come.

Everett, Margaret	d. 21 Oct 1905		R156/258
The Evening Star, October 19, 1905 A Double Tragedy Man Kills His Wife and Himself Uses A Revolver Resorts to a Ruse to Carry Out Plans Infatuation of married Woman for Unmarried Man Cause of Trouble The strange infatuation of a married woman for an unmarried soldier, according to evidence in possession of the police, was the cause of a double tragedy yesterday evening in West Washington. Harry J. Everett, a carpenter, 34 years old, while in a frenzy of jealousy, shot his wife, Margaret, and then turned the weapon on himself and committed suicide. The shooting took place in house 3042 M street northwest, where the alleged faithless wife had been rooming. The woman received two bullet wounds through the breast, just above the heart, and died in the arms of Policeman McDermott in the patrol wagon while being hurried to the Georgetown University Hospital. The man shot himself twice in the mouth and died on the operating table at the hospital. The double tragedy occurred about 6:20 o'clock last evening. The husband resorted to strategy in order to carry out his purpose of doing away with both his wife and himself. It appears from statements made to the police that the couple had been married about a year, and that some trouble had come into their lives, due principally to jealousy. About four weeks ago the wife deserted her husband and went to live at the above number with Mrs. Morton, who is said to be married to a soldier. When the wife left the home her husband had provided for her she informed him of her infatuation for the soldier, said to be Louis Hilt, a private in the 13th Cavalry at Fort Myer. She afterward said she engaged at the M street house in order to be near the fort. Everett had been searching for his wife ever since she left him, and yesterday he traced her to her abode in West Washington. He made several unsuccessful attempts to see the woman, and finally succeeded, after resorting to a trick. Soon after o'clock he rang the door bell at the house 3042 M street. Stella Patten, daughter of the landlady, responded and, although Everett had been to the house several times before yesterday, Miss Patten did not recognize him in the dim twilight. Everett walked into the hallway and asked if Mrs. Everett lived there. Being informed that she did he handed Miss Patten a folded piece of paper and requested her to take it to Mrs. Everett's room, adding, "There is no answer." The young woman hurried up the stairs to Mrs. Everett's apartment, but failed to observe that the man was following stealthily behind her. The lamp in the hallway had not been lighted and the place was quite dark. When the girl reached Mrs. Everett's room she was lying on the bed, but when Miss Patten said she had a letter for her Mrs. Everett sprang up with the remark: "I guess it is a note from Lou." As she stepped into the hallway to take the note a shadowy form sprang forward. It was her husband. He grasped her by the arm and pulled her toward him. "So this is where you are!" he exclaimed. "You won't come to live with me, will you?" Tried to Break Away Mrs. Everett screamed and tried to break away from her husband, and Mrs. Morton quickly closed and locked her door. Miss Patten ran screaming down the stairs. There was a short struggle, and as Miss Patten reached the floor below there were five rapid reports of a revolver. She ran to a front window and yelled for help.

The screams of "murder" were heard by Policemen Farquhar and Porter, and they ran to the house. Rushing up the stairs they found two prostrate forms lying on the landing close together in a great pool of blood. The man and woman were unconscious, but were breathing heavily. The policeman sent in a hurry call for the patrol wagon, and in less than ten minutes both victims of the tragedy were at the hospital.

Mrs. Everett, who had been lying in the lap of one of the policemen in the wagon, died before the hospital was reached. Opening her eyes for the last time, she whispered faintly: "This is the end of love; he has killed me." She then fell back lifeless into the patrolman's arms.

The husband was removed to the operating room, but the surgeons saw that he was past human aid, and his death soon followed that of his wife. Two bullets had entered his brain through the roof of his mouth, and hemorrhage of the brain resulted. The revolver used was of 38 caliber.

When the policeman found Mr. and Mrs. Everett lying in the dark hallway gasping in agony, the woman was lying on the floor on her back, while the husband lay across her feet. The empty revolver was close beside them.

Found Two Notes

The police found in the pocket of the dead man, two notes written on a telegraph blank. One of them read: "I, Margaret, agree to die with my husband this day. Please bury us together. This is all I ask of the living." It was signed "Margaret." The other note read as follows:

"This man and woman is Henry and Margaret Everett. We were married on September 23, 1904. We lived together until September 13, when she deserted me for a soldier named Louis Hilt, a soldier in Troop F, 13th Cavalry. They lived together and broke my heart, as I loved her. She said she could not give him up for me, so this is the consequence for being unfaithful; death I hope." This note was signed "Henry J. Everett, 3418 New Hampshire avenue northwest."

It is the opinion of the police from the tenor of the notes that Everett decided to kill his wife and himself and make it appear that their deaths had been mutually agreed upon by both.

On the fourth floor of the M street house where the tragedy occurred, Mrs. Everett and a friend, Mrs. Florence Morton, who is said to be married to a soldier, had two rooms. Mrs. Everett went to the house about two weeks ago. She became ill and was taken to Columbia Hospital for treatment last Saturday. Since leaving the hospital she had been weak and delicate and remained in her room most of the time.

When her husband made his first call at the M street house, about 9 o'clock yesterday morning, he saw Stella Patten, the daughter of the landlady. He asked to see Mrs. Everett, but the latter told Stella to inform the caller that she was not in. The wife became greatly excited when she learned that the caller was her husband and fell in a faint. Mr. Everett called twice again yesterday, but met with no better success than at the first visit. As he was leaving after his third call he said emphatically: "Well, I will see her." On his next visit the shooting followed.

Lieut. Schneider of the seventh police precinct said to a Star reporter this morning that he had succeeded in locating the mother of Mrs. Everett. She is a Mrs. Hale and resides at 215 15th street southeast. She said to the lieutenant: "So my daughter is dead. Well, she led an evil life and was beyond redemption."

Lieut. Schneider also said that Mr. Everett had an excellent reputation and was well liked by all who knew him. He was until a short time ago employed as a carpenter by the Washington Traction Company, and his father, who lives in Mount Pleasant, is employed by the same company as a blacksmith. At the time Everett married the woman he killed he was divorced from another whom he had married when he was a young man.

He had several children by his first wife, but none by the second. After his marriage to the second they lived in a house in Northeast Washington, and it was from there that Mrs. Everett left him. Since that time he had been boarding at the house on New Hampshire avenue.

The remains of the husband and wife were viewed at the morgue by Coroner J. Ramsey Nevitt, who gave a certificate of suicide in the case of the man and homicide in that of the woman. The bodies were today turned over to relatives for burial.

Lieut. Schneider denies that Everett was assisted in carrying out the details of the murder and suicide by an accomplice.

Everett. Suddenly, on Wednesday, October 18, 1905, at 9:30 o'clock p.m., Henry S. Everett, dearly beloved and eldest son of John T. and Anna F., Everett (nee Kettner), aged 27 years and 7 months.

Why feel so sad, why shed a tear,
 Even though He has taken from us one so dear?
 Cut down like a lily, cut down to die,
 They beautiful temple to occupy.
 Jesus himself has a messenger sent,
 That for a season our hearts might in anguish be rent.
 We are sad, oh, so sad he has gone; but then,
 Oh, how happy we'll be when we meet again.
