Labbe, Alphonse d. 8 Aug 1850 26 yrs. Labbe Vault
 Labbe. On Thursday at 6 p.m. after a brief illness in the 27th year of his age, Alphonse Labbe son of the late F.C. Labbe, and a clerk in the office of the clerk of the Supreme Court. The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock from the residence of his sister on Pennsylvania avenue opposite Willard's.

Labbe, Francois C. d. 25 Sep 1848 63 yrs. Labbe Vault
The National Intelligencer, September 25, 1848
 On the 23d instant, in this city, Francis Corday Labbe, in the 64th year of his age. The deceased was extensively known as a successful teacher of dancing. As such he has stood in relations of no inconsiderable interest to our city circles, especially the juvenile portion, for the last fourteen years. All will remember with delight those brilliant May-day spectacles in which the accomplishments of his pupils were displayed with such agreeable taste and effect. His associations and pursuits in early life were of a far different character. He was a native of L'Orient, in France, a nephew of that extraordinary woman, Charlotte Corday, whose daring hand relieved her country of one of its bloodiest scourges, Jean Paul Marat, a leader of the "Mountain" party in 1793. He was a midshipman in the French navy, and a prisoner of war to the English. Over forty years he has been a citizen of the United States. The aims of his early life appear to have given an elevation to his manners and character, and in a pursuit much humbler than that of his youth he has earned probably as much competence and contentment, and sustained his various relations in life with respectability and usefulness.

The friends of the deceased are invited to attend the funeral today at 11 1/2 o'clock a.m., from his late residence on Pennsylvania avenue, opposite Willard's Hotel.

Geannie Tree Rives, Greenleaf's Point, Columbia Historical Society, Vol 5, pp. 54-63

Francois Labbe emigrated from France in 1812. He settled in Philadelphia, and began the printing of calicoes. Not being successful he next started a dancing school, which succeeded well. I do not know when they moved to Washington, but they opened a dancing school opposite Willard's about where Cornwell's grocery now stands. His two children succeeded him in the dancing school, Miss Emily, the daughter, being a most refined gentle person, and a great favorite. Frank Labbe, the son, was the "Turvey drop" of his day, a perfect "Master of Deportment." I remember the stocks where the children had to stand until they learned to "turn out their toes properly," and the old colored man who played the violin for children.

The National Intelligencer, May 7, 1849

Mr. Labbe's May Ball is announced to take place at Jackson Hall next Thursday night, the 10th instant. Mr. Labbe, as well as Mr. Carusi, is one of the most popular matrics de danse among us. We have no doubt the pageant of Mr. Labbe's May Ball will be splendid, and that it will be conducted in such a manner as to gratify his public, their parents, and all others who may be present at the entertainment.

Will of Francis C. Labbe, of City of Washington, D.C. (dtd. May 19, 1846, probated Nov. 14, 1848; Book 6, pp. 195-196; Box 19)

To daughter Emily Labbe, all property, without any control of her husband should she marry; at her death, all estate to two sons Faanser R. Labbe and Alphonse Thos. Crosly Labbe.

Lacey. On the 19th of February, 1878, Edward T. Lacey, aged 32 years and 9 months.  We were weeping at his pillow  For we knew that he must die  And our house is sad and lonely  Since brother in the grave must lie.   I saw him in the bloom of youth;  Like a rose he budded and bloomed.

But affliction's breath stole o'er him
And hurried dear brother to the tomb.

Now dry thy dears, dear mother,
And remember the promise given;
And when on earth your mission's done
We'll met again in Heaven.

Miss Minnie Lacy, Well-Known in City, Commits Suicide

Miss Minnie Lacy, a well-known young woman, living on Capitol Hill, committed suicide yesterday afternoon by shooting herself in the head with a revolver in her bed room at her home 206 5th street southeast. Death was instantaneous. Coroner Carr made an investigation and decided that it was not necessary to hold an inquest. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon and the interment will be made in Congressional cemetery.

The cause of the suicide is a mystery. It is thought the unfortunate woman's mind was temporarily unbalanced by her suffering from grip. She resided with her two elder sisters at the number above stated. One of the latter said Miss Minnie had been ill of grip for about two weeks, and she was constrained to believe that when the rash act was committed she was not mentally responsible.

Yesterday at noon Miss Minnie partook of lunch as usual and a little later retired to her room on the third floor, presumably to take a nap, as was her custom. Shortly afterward the loud report of a pistol was heard, and, hastening to her room, Miss Fannie Lacy found her sister lying on the floor, with the smoking pistol by her side. She was writhing in the agonies of death. The dead woman was a devoted worker in and a member of Metropolitan Baptist Church, corner of 6th and A streets northeast.

Funeral of Nicholas Ladd, Descendant of the Washington Family

Funeral services were held yesterday at Holy Trinity Catholic Church over the remains of Nicholas Ladd, who died of pneumonia Sunday afternoon at the Georgetown University Hospital. The ceremonies were conducted by the Rev Father Jerome Daugherty, president of the Georgetown University, and the interment was made in Congressional cemetery.

Mr. Ladd contracted pneumonia about two weeks ago while on his way from his home, 3210 P street, to a dentist's office on F street, where he was having his teeth attended to. Upon returning home he went to bed and summoned a physician. He did not improve under treatment, and, at the suggestion of friends, he was removed to the Georgetown University Hospital about ten days ago. The deceased is said to have been a descendent of the Washington family and a great grandson of Nicholas Easton, colonial governor of Rhode Island. He was sixty-five years of age and unmarried. A sister, who is supposed to reside in Fairfax county, Va., survives him.

Old Friends Pay Last Respects At Bier of Jimmy LaFontaine

From all walks of life they came one by one and in small groups to file slowly past the bier of "Jimmy".

And then little knots of old friends gathered in the anteroom of the Lee fneral home, but the talk dwelt only momentarily on the days when JamesA. (Jimmy) LaFontaine was king of the gamblers.

The body of the fabulous little man, who died Monday at the age of 81, lay in state last night in the funeral home at Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue N.E. and was on view again today. Requiem high mass will be sung for him at 10 a.m., tomorrow in St. Dominic's Church.

Man From Niagara Falls

The little white cards pinned to the flowers heaped around the small casket bore such legends as "From Charlie's Family," "The Marino Family," and "The Kids of the Mount Rainier Athletic Club" -- testimony both to "Jimmy's" ties with the single-name set and to his many charities.

His visitors included a man from Niagara Falls, N.Y.; Herman Taylor, Philadelphia boxing promotor; and several persons, both white and colored, some of whom had never seen the man who used to operate the big gambling house on Bladensburg road just across the District line, but who somehow felt linked to him through relatives and just plain legend.

Mrs. Jessie Ross whose only tie to "Jimmy" was that for a dozen years she had rented a house at 718 Seventh street N.E. from his niece, dropped by because she "wanted to pay her respects." She had never seen LaFontaine in life.

Friend's Daughter Visited

Another "proxy" visitor was Mrs. Hazel Faunce, 6012 Fourth Street N.W., paying respects for her ailing father, John H. Neitzey, of 1609 Allison street N.W.

In the old days LaFontaine and Mr. Neitzey often fished together at the latter's place, Ferry Landing, near Mount Vernon. Mr. Neitzey wept when he learned his old friend was ill, for he, too, was ill and unable to visit LaFontaine in the hospital.

A friend who had know LaFontaine for 25 years and who was at his bedside when he died -- Attorney Charles E. Ford -- spent several hours in the funeral parlor, sitting and talking with "Jimmy's" relatives and greeting mutual friends as they entered.

Old Time Recalled

Out in the anteroom, after a final look at "Jimmy," many old friends, some in crisp new business suits and a few in leather jackets gathered and talked the small talk that hides emotion.

For many, the last visit to "Jimmy" became an occasion to greet other friends unvisited for years. Words like "Where have you been you old rascal?" flashed several times across the room.

But, as one small, thin-haired man in Navy peacoat said:

"The old days are over, Mac."

LaForge. In Alexandria on the 18th inst. at 2 o'clock a.m. after an illness of 11 days of typhoid fever, Ada Hancock LaForge aged 19 years 3 months 6 days, daughter of Andrew Hancock, Esq. of Washington, D.C. (Baltimore papers please copy).

LaForge. On the 18th instant, of typhoid pneumonia, Ada, beloved wife of Samuel F. LaForge, and daughter of Andrew Hancock, Esq., aged 19 years.

The brightness of earth can no more woo my heart,
Nor take from this bosom grief's festering dart,
For Ada, dear Ada, lies pale witht he dead,
The flowerest breathing perfume round her bed,
Death rode on the storm pneumonia in hand,
And bore thy beloved from the beautiful land;
The sunshine no more can enreath her bright hair.
Those blue eyes are closed--death's seal is placed there.

Brought Here For Burial

Nathan C. Lane Died at St. Petersburg, Fla., Wednesday

Nathan C. Lane, native of Washington, who died December 31 at St. Petersburg, Fla., will be buried here in the Congressional cemetery. The body is expected to arrive today. Mr. Lane was fifty-five years old and had been residing in Philadelphia for the last fifteen years, where he was a real estate operator.

Mr. Lane left Philadelphia December 21 for his winter home, in St. Petersburg. He developed a slight cold, and on Christmas day he developed a chill, which rapidly passed into pneumonia and caused his death.

With rare business ability Mr. Lane succeeded in many profitable real estate operations. The most notable was the development, single-handed, of the town of Edgely, a suburb of Bristol, Pa. He is the owner of considerable real estate in Philadelphia.

Lane, Pamela Bledsoe	b. 11 Feb 1814 - d. 24 Dec 1842		R47/101-103

The National Intelligencer, December 24, 1842

Died, in this city, at half past 11 o'clock, on the evening of the 22nd instant, in the 27th year of her age, Mrs. Pamela Bledsoe Lane, wife of the Hon. Henry S. Lane, Representative in Congress from the State of Indiana.

This most distressing and afflicting dispensation of Providence has thrown the deepest gloom and melancholy around those who enjoyed the society and acquaintance of this amiable and excellent lady. Possessed of a remarkably good constitution, her friends had promised themselves that she would yet, for many years, enliven their associations with the sweetness of her temper, the amiability of her deportment, and the example of her piety. But a few weeks ago she escaped death in its most terrifying -- by an accident from which her husband received an injury -- but to be summoned thus early to the payment of a debt which none can escape. And though this melancholy bereavement may agonize those who were attached to her by the tenderest and holiest of ties, the recollection of her piety and virtue will root out much of sorrow from their hearts, as it will assure them of her happy resurrection beyond the tomb.

For several years past the deceased had been a most exemplary member of the Baptist church; and if the observance of all the duties of the Christian -- a firm reliance upon the promises of the Gospel; if Christian charity and an humble submission to the will of Providence; if the tenderest attachment of friends, and the deep devotion of the most affectionate of husbands, could have warded off the arrow which sped but too fatally to its victim, she would not thus early have been snatched away, in the very prime of womanhood, and in the midst of a life enlivened by all the virtues and charities of the heart.

Mrs. Lane came to this city in company with her husband, whose duties required his attendance upon the present session of Congress, and until the day before her death enjoyed her usual health. She was then suddenly attacked with a disease which baffled all the skill of the most scientific and attentive physicians, and hastened the termination of a life adorned with all that makes it estimable and lovely. Although she suffered greatly during its progress, her departure to the bosom of the God upon whom she had so long relied was without a murmur or a sigh. Buoyed up with the hope of immortality, and clinging closely and solely to the Savior of the world, she gently and calmly fell into the sleep of death but to awake to life eternal. Fully realizing the idea of a Redeeming God, this most amiable lady, whose life had been decorated by so much that enlivens all the relations of wife, daughter, and friend, passed into the chamber of death as one enjoying the slumber of refreshing sleep. May that God whom she adored, and whose precepts she so devotedly followed, temper this deep affliction which has thus fallen upon her distressed husband and friends, and prepare them to meet her in that "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

T.

We are requested to state that the Funeral of Mrs. Lane will take place at twelve o'clock this day, at the residence of Mrs. Brawner, on the north side of Pennsylvania avenue, near the Railroad Depot. The friends and acquaintances of Mr. Lane are invited to attend.

Scuffle Ends in Death

Fatal Wounding of Boy By His Playmate

Probably an Accident

Another fatality was added yesterday to what may be termed the epidemic of homicide in this city. Earnest Langley, fifteen years old, of 29 Virginia avenue southeast, was the victim, and Raphael Aultman, a boy of the same tender age, was his assailant. Aultman made his escape immediately after the tragedy, and at a late hour this afternoon the police were still without a clue to his whereabouts. Deputy Coroner Glazebrook performed an autopsy on the body of Langley at the morgue this morning and ascertained that death was directly due to a stab wound of the heart, the blade of a penknife in Aultman's hands having penetrated the right wall of the vital organ.

Murder is the charge which stands against the boy Aultman, and yet all stories told of the occurrence seem to indicate the fatality was largely the result of accident -- the outcome of a bit of rough play between two comrades. As far as the police have been able to learn, and the story of an eye-witness of the tragedy affords basis for the claim, the two boys were in the midst of an imitation sparring match, dodging around a tree on the sidewalk at New Jersey avenue and E street southeast, and striking at each other, when the fatal stabbing occurred.

Account Given by Witness

Mr. Bunting, foreman of a stable at 3d and Canal streets southwest, was passing the corner at the time, and he said one of the boys -- evidently Aultman -- had a pen knife in his hand, and the other had a piece of brick as a weapon. Suddenly, Mr. Bunting said, one of the boys cried aloud: "My God, I have killed him" And with the words one of the boys fell to the ground and the other stooped over, raised the fallen boy's head in his arms and began fanning him. Feeling sure that medical assistance would be required Mr. Bunting ran to a nearby store and telephone for an ambulance. When he returned to the corner Langley was lying in the street and Aultman had disappeared.

A minute or two later P.L. Davis of 216 8th street southwest drove past in a buggy and the wounded boy was placed in his vehicle and all possible speed made to the Providence Hospital. The physicians, however, pronounced life extinct, and Langley's body was taken to his home, whence it was later transferred to the morgue. Coroner Nevitt shortly before noon today empaneled a jury to pass upon the evidence which will be adduced at an inquest to be held after the capture of Aultman. The jury consists of William Healy, P.P. Patrick, Joseph N. Alexander, Morris A. Tanger, William H. Bunch and Claude A. Gilman. After the jury viewed the body this morning it was transferred to the Langley home, and it is understood the funeral will be held Monday.

It is said Ernest Langley and his brother Bernie were almost the sole support of their parents. Both were employed at the grocery store of Proctor & Brother, on 1st street southeast. Ernest Langley was sent out to deliver a package yesterday afternoon, and shortly before 3 o'clock he passed the Aultman home, 448 New Jersey avenue southeast. Raphael was sitting on the front steps whittling on a stick, the police say, and when called by his nickname he got up and joined Langley and they started down the street together. No one heard any sort of altercation between them, though several persons have been found who, from a distance, saw the sparring match which Mr. Bunting described from a near view.

Following the disappearance of Aultman, and when the affair had been reported to the police of the fifth precinct and to headquarters, it was stated the boy had been seen running in the direction of the Virginia avenue tunnel. Capt. Matthews of the fifth precinct set men to guard each end of the tunnel, and others to go through the bore, but the rumor was found to be without foundation.

Was Seen in Depot

Subsequently it was learned that Aultman had been seen, about an hour after the tragedy, in the Pennsylvania railroad passenger depot. A man who lives in the same neighborhood in Southeast Washington passed Aultman in the package room at the station, and spoke to him, but at that time the general alarm for Aultman's arrest had not gone forth. His mother said he had between $5 and $10 in his pockets, and it is assumed he succeeded in buying a ticket and getting out of the city on one of the early afternoon trains.

With this possibility in view the police have sent descriptions of Aultman to all cities and towns for a considerable radius with the request that he be arrested and held for this jurisdiction. William Fretter, Aultman's stepfather, and his mother, with whom he lived at the New Jersey avenue address, have promised to aid the police in every way possible.

Langley's mother was prostrated by the shock of having the body of her son, whom she had last seen in his usual lively spirits, brought to the house. One report -- that Langley, too, had a knife in his hands during the playful struggle with his "buddy" -- was set at rest this morning when Morguemaster Schoenberger found Langley's penknife in the boy's pocket with all blades closed, and it was said he could not possibly have placed it there after receiving such a wound as that which caused death.

Aultman either carried his penknife away with him or else threw it away. The police searched all the surrounding ground without finding it.

The Evening Star, May 19, 1907, p. 13

Aultman Boy Caught

Slayer of Ernest Langley Found in Newark, N.J.

Raphael Aultman, the boy who is charged with having stabbed and killed Ernest Langley, is no longer a fugitive from justice. He was caught at Newark, N.J., where he went to seek the protection of his stepfather, William Fretter. Detective Evans was sent to Newark to get the boy, leaving here yesterday afternoon in time to reach Newark about 7 o'clock last night. He went away with the understanding that he would return with the lad without delay. Inspector Boardman expects him to reach home at an early hour this morning.

Capt. Mathews has had his men make a complete investigation of the affair, and he reported to Coroner Nevitt that the information obtained by the officers indicated that each boy had a knife and that they were cutting away at each other from behind a tree until the fatal wound was finally inflicted. Mrs. Fretter, mother of the boy who did the cutting, learned of his arrest yesterday afternoon and collapsed. Her condition became serious and the family physician was summoned.

The autopsy having been performed and the jury sworn, the coroner released the body and permitted its removal to the home of the mother of the deceased, 29 Virginia avenue southwest. Arrangements have been made for the funeral to take place from St. Peter's Church, 2d and C streets southeast, at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. The body will be interred at Congressional cemetery. Tomorrow morning the inquest will be held.

Jury's View of Death of Ernest Langley

Evidence Taken at Inquest Today

Raphael Altmann, Under Charges, Dismissed From Custody

A jury summoned by Coroner Nevitt, after an inquest over the body of Ernest Langley at the District morgue this morning, declared its belief that the boy's death was the result of accident, and Raphael Altmann, who was arrested on the charge of stabbing Langley, was discharged from custody. The verdict in full reads as follows:

"We believe Ernest Langley came to his death May 17, 1907, in a wagon en route to the Providence Hospital, from a stab wound of the heart. Such wound was caused by a knife in the hand of and stabbed by one Raphael J. Altmann. We, the coroner's jury, believe that the stabbing was not due to any malicious intent, but was the result of accident."

The verdict was signed by William Healy, P.P. Patrick, M.A. Tanzer, Joseph N. Alexander, William H. Bunch and Claude A. Hillman, the jury.

Summary of the Testimony

The testimony adduced, upon which the verdict was based, as in substance as follows:

William M. Hunter, resident physician at Providence Hospital, testified he saw no sign of life whatever in the body of Ernest Langley when it was brought into the receiving room at the hospital Friday afternoon.

Detective Sergeant Thomas Hartigan, who was detailed to investigate the case, said the only information he had been able to secure was from Raphael Altmann, the boy under arrest.

"He told me he and Langley were playing," said the detective, "and each had a knife with open blade in his hand. They were cutting at each other in playful manner as they ran around a telegraph pole. Finally Langley staggered and cried: 'You have stabbed me,' and then fell in the street. Altmann said he saw blood on the knife blade, and afterward went to his home, got his coat and went away."

Called to the stand for a moment, Morguemaster Schoneberger stated he found Langley's penknife in the pocket of the boy's trousers.

Deputy Coroner R.W. Baker stated the result of an autopsy performed on Langley's body, and said the wound penetrated the heart and this was the cause of death. Dr. Baker gave it as his opinion that Langley could not have closed the blade of a knife and replaced it in his pocket after receiving such a wound.

Gifford Hickman, a colored boy of 413 1st street southeast, testified he saw the Langley boy fall on the car tracks, but he did not witness the stabbing.

The knife with which Altmann did the stabbing was exhibited before the jury.

Was an Eyewitness

Declaring he witnessed the whole occurrence, Robert Bunting of 107 E street southeast, testified he was driving along New Jersey avenue and he saw the two boys lunging at each other. Both had knives in their hands, Mr. Bunting asserted, and as he approached nearer he saw them cutting at each other, but apparently in a spirit of play. As he came abreast of them he saw one boy stagger slightly and then the two turned and walked to the curb, where one fell.

"I jumped out of my buggy," Mr. Bunting continued, "and I saw the boys close their knives, put them in their pockets, and then noticed blood on Langley's shirt. As he fell I told the Altmann boy to fan his comrade while I went after water. When I returned Altmann was gone and others were taking Langley to the hospital."

"You are sure each of the boys had a knife?" queried Coroner Nevitt.

"Yes, sir," answered the witness.

"And you saw both replace the knives in their pockets?"

"I did."

Henry Jones, colored, a teamster, declared positively one of the boys had a brick in his hand and the other had a knife. He described the stabbing much as the other witnesses had one, and gave it as his impression the boys were playing.

Charles E. Buete of 518 1st street southeast saw the boys only after the stabbing occurred.

Bessie Herald of 454 New Jersey avenue southeast stated she saw Ernest Langley and Raphael Altmann start down the street together and they were not quarreling at that time.

Robert Crump, colored, testified he saw the boys shortly before the tragedy and heard one say to the other: "I will cut you with a knife." Crump said he could not identify the boy who made the remark.

Bernard Langley, brother of Ernest, testified he went to the corner of New Jersey avenue and E street southeast when he heard of the affair. Ernest died in his brother's arms on the way to the hospital.

In His Own Behalf

Placed on the stand to tell his own story, Raphael Altmann said:

"We were just fooling. Ernest had delivered an order to a house on New Jersey avenue and he was sitting on a box in front of the house, looking at a funny paper, and I went down there, too. I kicked the box, but not all the way from under him, and a little boy named Miller gave the box another kick. Then Ernest and I went down the street together. He took out his knife and I took out mine and we were letting on to stab each other. We ran round a telegraph pole and I cut him. I don't know how it happened."

Ernest said, "You have cut me," Altmann continued. "The he said it didn't amount to anything and we put our knives away and started to walk down the street. Ernest fell in the middle of the street and I went to him and saw the blood on his shirt. I fanned him with my cap, and when Bernie Langley came and they took Ernest to the hospital I got scared and ran away."

Altmann declared he had no quarrel with Langley and said they were the best of friends. The case was given to the jury shortly before noon.

'Tis hard, 'tis hard, to speak the word,
Must we forever part?
By His Wife and Children

Home is sad, but, oh, how dreary,
Listening for thy voice till weary.
Can we place thee with the dead?
Can we hear the cold earth falling
On our darling Frank's head?
By His Mother

Ira C. Lanham Dies Former District Official

Ira Clifford Lanham, 86, who succeeded his father was District superintendent of trees and parking and carried on the family tradition for 30 years, died yesterday t Providence Hospital of lung cancer.

Mr. Lanham's father, Truman, had been the first superintendent of trees and parking here and had served in that position for over 30 years.

Mr. Lanham, a veteran of 54 years in the division, took over the job of superintendent in 1915 and held it until he retired in 1946. The division has since been reorganized into the D.C. Department of Highways.

A native of Lanham, Md., which was named for his grandfather, Mr. Lanham first went to work for the division of trees and parking as a water boy, carrying water to working crews.

Later, as superintendent, he championed conservation of Washington's trees, directing campaigns to save and restore shade trees all over the city.

During World War I he served as chairman of local Draft Board No. 5, and was a member of the D.C. National Guard for many years.

He also belonged to the Oldest Inhabitants Club here. He lived at 1216 30th st. s.e.

Mr. Lanham leaves his son, Maj. Gen. Charles T. Lanham, USA (Ret.), 3407 Woolsey dr., Chevy Chase.

Wealthy Resident Expires While Seated in Chair

Augustus J.B. Larkin, 76 years of age, who retired from the paint business a few months ago, was found dead in his home, 319 M street southwest, last night about 7:30 o'clock. Death had claimed him probably two days ago while he was seated in front of a stove.

Mr. Larkin was in business near Pennsylvania avenue and 7th street southeast, for a great many years, and was prominent in that section. Since retiring from business he lived alone in the M street house. He was last seen alive Tuesday.

The police of the fifth precinct went to the house last night to make an investigation, and found his dead body on the chair. The deceased owned considerable property in the southeast section, and is thought to have been worth $200,000.

Two months ago he dispensed with the services of his domestic, after she had worked in the family for about ten years, saying he was no longer financially able to pay her. His body was removed to the morgue.

A message was received from Mrs. Attie Brooks, his daughter, this morning, who lives at Wilksburg, Pa. directing that Undertaker Nalley take charge of the body. She will reach here tonight to make arrangements for the funeral.

Funeral of A.J.B. Larkin

The funeral of the late A.J.B. Larkin, who died unexpectedly Thursday, took place at 2 o'clock this afternoon from No. 319 M street southeast. Services were conducted by Rev. J.W. Smith, pastor of the Epworth M.E. Church South, and the remains were later interred in the family lot at Congressional Cemetery. The pallbearers were chosen from among Mr. Larkin's close friends. Among those who accompanied the remains to their last resting place were Mrs. Hattie Brooks of Pennsylvania, a daughter of the deceased, and a grandson. The two were the closest living relatives of Mr. Larkin.

Six Wills Are Filed

Distribution of Estate of Augustus Larkin

Business Left in Trust to Manage and Clerk to

Share Profits in Lieu of Salary

The will of August J.B. Larkin, dated November 27, 1906, has been filed for probate. To his daughter, Achsa A. Brooks, he leaves his household effects. He leaves his business at 607 Pennsylvania avenue southeast to John Scrivener in trust to manage and continue. Should George R. Gill, his clerk, continue with the business he is to have half the profit in lieu of salary.

The remaining estate is devised to Mr. Scrivener in trust to manage and to pay one-half the net income to Achsa A. Brooks and to use the remainder in the care of the estate. On the death of the daughter and when her youngest child attains majority the estate is to be converted into cash. Out of the proceeds $500 is to be paid Orlanda M.E. Larking, brother of the testator; $500 to Epworth M.E. Church and the balance to be distributed among his grandchildren, excepting Jennie L. Brooks, Clara M. Brooks and Powell Brooks, who are to have only $1 each. John Scrivener is named as executor.

Friends of the family invited. The Washington Post, August 30, 1896  His Fad Was Funerals  "Poor Charlie" Larner Will Go from the Next in a Hearse  All the Undertakers Knew Him  For Years He Delighted in Attending Obsequies of the Dead,  and When Young and Active Would Follow the Body to Its Last Resting Place --  Preference for Funerals When There Was Music --  Much Funeral Display Always Pleased Him            "Poor Charlie" Larner will attend his last funeral on Tuesday. He had been a prominent figure at the obsequies over the remains of hundreds of people, who have lived and died in Washington, but he will not be able to see the procession of carriages on their way to Congressional Cemetery on Tuesday, for "Poor Charlie" will ride in the hearse. Charles Frederick Larner, which was his full name, was one of the best known characters in Washington. He was born here and lived here all his life. Although a man close upon fifty-five years of age, he was a child mentally up to the day of his death. He had many peculiarities, the most remarkable of which was the intense satisfaction he took in attending funerals. He had an impediment in his speech, which made it difficult for any one not familiar with him to understand what he said. Everybody sympathized with him in his affliction, and he was a general favorite in the downtown section. Every undertaker in town was well acquainted with him. Charlie was taken sick about three months ago, and was missed from his accustomed haunts. On Friday his complaint took an unfavorable turn, and yesterday morning, at 11:35, he died at 23 Grant place, where he had lived for a number of years. Charlie's father made ample provision for his son's support, and two sisters took care of him. It is said that valuable real estate at the corner of Ninth and D streets is held in his name. Liked Funerals from Boyhood            Some of the older men in the undertaking business can remember that when Charlie was a boy he took the same delight in attending a funeral that was so much a peculiarity of his later years. At that time he used occasionally to induce the driver of the hearse or one of the carriages to let him ride on the box seat. All the drivers and livery stable men knew him as well as the undertakers. Later on in life his taste ran to funerals in which music was a feature. He would march with the procession all the way to the cemetery and never seemed to get tired. Once at a funeral conducted by a fraternal organization Charlie in some way got possession of the regalia of some order, and dressing himself up in it he walked in the front rank all the way to the grave. That was one of the proudest days of his life. He grew very stout, however, and took to carrying a heavy cane, so finding it no easy matter to walk to the cemeteries with his 200 or more pounds avoirdupois, he began to content himself with standing in front of the church or house where the procession started and watching while the casket was placed in the hearse and the mourners took their places in the carriages. Then he would turn and walk slowly away.	d. 29 Aug 1896		R31/161

Attended in a Furniture Wagon

He had a habit of calling on the undertakers frequently and asking them whether they were going to conduct a funeral that day and where the procession would start. He has been known to hire a carriage for himself in order to attend a funeral, and once or twice he went in a furniture wagon, after the liver stable keepers refused to rent him a carriage.

Most of the undertakers would humor him when he asked for information regarding funerals, but some of them were inclined to regard his presence as an annoyance and send him to distant localities, where no obsequies were to be held. He never resented this, but finally learned that he was not receiving reliable information and kept away. He had no particular preference as to funerals, although the greater the display the more satisfaction he seemed to be afforded. There was no morbid curiosity about him, and he seemed not to be impressed with the mournful side of such affairs. Apparently he found a genuine pleasure in being present at a funeral, and when the entire ceremony was over he appeared as much satisfied as if he had achieved something of great benefit to the community at large. He never departed without a word to the undertaker in charge. "You are a friend of min," he used to say smilingly. "You are going to bury me when I die."

Always Asking for Cigars

Charlie was a great smoker and rarely met a person without asking for a cigar. Failing to get a cigar he would ask for a cent, and if neither were forthcoming he would moderate his demands down to a match. It made him almost as happy to get the match as it did to secure the cigar. His funeral fad clung to him as long as he was able to be about. He attended a big funeral near his own home about a year ago, and was honored with a seat in one of the carriages, much to his satisfaction.

Charlie has said a hundred times to Undertaker Gawler: "You'll bury me when I die." And so he will.

The Evening Star, July 7, 1873

Mr. Michael Larnar, one of our oldest inhabitants, died on Friday evening last at his residence on F street, between 6th and 7th streets, in the seventy-first year of his age. Mr. Larnar was born in 1803 in a house located on the square bounded by 4 1/2 and C streets and Indiana avenue. While a youth he entered the printing office of Jacob Gideon where he learned the printing business and afterwards worked as compositor in that office. After holding this position for many years he accepted the position of doorkeeper in the Senate where he served for upwards of twenty years. About the time Senator Fessenden was chosen Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. L. was offered a position under him which he accepted and filled for some time and left there to accept a position proffered him in the Patent Office, where he remained up to the time of his death. He served in the City Councils under the old corporation and was a member of the levy court. He was one of the vice presidents of the Oldest Inhabitants Association, and took a great interest in that organization always attending the meetings. Mr. Larnar was well known throughout this District, and highly respected for his integrity of character and Christian virtues; and a large circle of friends will mourn his loss.

The funeral is in progress this afternoon, and the remains will be interred in the Congressional Cemetery. The pall bearers are Messrs. Jenkin Thomas, Charles F. Wood, C.W. Denham, W. Tilly, Octavius Knight, and Mr. Patch.

The Evening Star, August 15, 1871

Mr. Michael Larnar, one of the oldest citizens, a clerk in the Patent Office, was taken suddenly ill today, we regret to hear, on returning from his office. His family physician, Dr. Palmer was called in, and expressed the fear that it may be paralysis. He was unable to converse at 3 o'clock, but appears conscious.

Larnar. Suddenly on the evening of Thursday, March 19, 1903 at 8:45 o'clock. Noble D. Larnar in the 74th year of his age. Funeral services at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church at 2 p.m., Monday, March 23.

The Evening Star, May 20, 1903Stricken in ChurchNoble D. Larnar Died Suddenly Last NightHad Read His Report in New York Avenue Presbyterian ChurchHis Long and Active Career in Every Phase of Civic Life -- His Masonic History

Just as he had concluded reading his annual report as treasurer of the board of trustees of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, last night, Noble D. Larnar sank into his seat and died without a word or a sign of pain. Mr. Larnar was seventy-three years old and heart failure was the cause of his death. He had been accompanied to the meeting, which was held in the Sunday school rooms of the church, by Mrs. Larnar and his two grand children, Nellie Larnar and Noble D., jr. The young people had been the guests of their grand parents at dinner in the afternoon, and the day had been one of unusual happiness.

Just before leaving for the church Mr. Larnar complained somewhat of fatigue, but in accordance with his accustomed regard for duty, decided to go for the purpose of making his report in person.

His Sudden End

The meeting was presided over by Mr. Justice Harlan, who had asked a question of two regarding the business of the church after Mr. Larnar had concluded. These had been answered by Mr. Larnar without any indication of physical distress, and in his usual quiet and substantial manner. As he resumed his seat his head sank forward on his breast, his hold relaxed on his cane and his life had ended in an instant. Mrs. Larnar had grasped the hand of her husband, and Dr. Charles H. Richardson, Dr. W.D. Hughes, Gen. Joseph C. Breckinridge and Mr. Brice Moses, who were seated near, all came to the assistance of the stricken man. The physicians in their hasty examination ascertained that there was no pulse and that the breathing had ceased. While the audience remained quietly seated Mr. Larnar's body was removed and placed in one of the adjoining rooms from where it was shortly taken to the family residence, 937 I street northwest. Mrs. Larnar was gently cared for by her many friends and accompanied to her home.

Throughout his long life Mr. Larnar had been prominently connected with every phase of civic citizenship in Washington. His name was a synonym for honesty and reliability in the business world, for sincerity and consistency in religious work and for felicity and comradeship in fraternal circles. Mr. Larnar's strong mentality and vigorous physique made him an indefatigable worker. In each of the fields to which he turned his attention he gave the same thoroughness and enthusiasm, and in each he achieved the same degree of eminent success.

Essentially a Washingtonian

He was essentially and above all a Washingtonian. His father, Michael Larner, was born in this city May 18, 1803, near the site of the city hall. Mr. Larner was born January 9 1830, in a house which stood on F street near the corner of 7th. His mother was a daughter of Jacob Gideon, who was at the time one of the wealthiest men in Washington, a publisher, and well known throughout the country as the printer of the Congressional Record.

Young Larner apprenticed himself to learn the printers trade to his grandfather. He soon evinced a decided liking for politics and took an active part in the local administration. He was elected a member of the board of common council and served one term, from 1862-63. During this time his father represented the fourth ward in the council, while young Larner served in the third. During this time Mr. Larner lived in a little frame house on the site of the present family residence on I street. At the expiration of his term in the council he took a clerkship in the general land office. While there he became lieutenant in the old National Rifles and during the war he enlisted in the "three months" volunteer service for the protection of the city. He served at Fort Sevens on the Potomac and in Virginia.

During his service in the council he was made a member of the draft committee for his ward, and in this capacity Mr. Larner secured a substitute for President Lincoln, at the latter's request, as the executive declared he desired to set the proper example. This substitute was uniformed and equipped and then taken to the White House by Mr. Larner for the President's inspection. President Lincoln expressed his approval of his substitute and presented the latter a check for his services.

After the war Mr. Larner associated himself with Charles Knapp, the well-known Pennsylvania gun founder, and George Riggs for the purpose of forming the National Union Fire Insurance Company. Mr. Larner became secretary of this company immediately, and continued in that position to the time of his death. The National Union at once became a popular concern. It has since been said that the selection of the name of that particular time had much to do with its success. However that may be, its business was prosperous from the first.

His Masonic History

Early in the sixties Mr. Larner became interested in Masonry. He became a member of the B.B. French Lodge. Later he left that organization to become a charter member of Lafayette Lodge, where he has retained his membership since. He went through the official chairs of the lodge and served as its master for two terms, during which time he had the distinction of raising 140 men in Masonry, the largest number to that time in the history of the local lodges. He became a member of Lafayette Chapter, and was made a high priest. He was connected with one of the foot commanderies, but left that organization to join in the formation of the De Molay Mounted Commandery, No. 4, of which he was made eminent commander. In 1896, when the Grand Commandery of the District of Columbia was organized, Mr. Larner became its first grand commander. In this position he signed the charters of all of the commanderies of the District, all having to take out new charters under the new organization. This honor was one which was very gratifying to Mr. Larner.

Another Masonic honor conferred on Mr. Larner was that of making him grand high priest of the General Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of the United States, the highest gift in the bestowal of the order, and a position which Mr. Larner held for three years.

Mr. Larner was also president of the Washington Masonic Veterans Association, an organization composed of men who were made Masons in Washington, and who have been members of local lodges for twenty-one years. He was president for two terms of the Sons of the American Revolution. His last term expired in February of last year, and Mr. Larner's administration of the affairs of the order proved the most prosperous period in the history of the organization.

At the Time of His Death

Mr. Larner was always an active and energetic worker in every branch of Masonry, and one of the most highly respected members of the fraternity in the capital. He was at the time of his death chairman of the Grand Lodge committee on jurisprudence and the Grand Commandery committee on templar jurisprudence. He was the senior past thrice illustrious master of Washington Council, No. 1, Royal and Select Masters. He was also president of the Washington Masonic Veteran Association, which but three weeks ago celebrated its anniversary with an annual dinner, at which he presided. It is a coincidence that within a few months both the Washington Masonic Veteran Association and the Masonic Veteran Association should suffer the loss of their venerable presidents, the late William Gibson, president of the latter organization, having but recently preceded President Larner to another world.

Mr. Larner had the pleasure of raising his two sons as Master Masons in Lafayette Lodge, and of exalting the same gentlemen as companions of Lafayette Chapter, R.A.M., an unusual privilege.

Long Church Membership

For forty years Mr. Larner had been a member of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, in which edifice his life came to an end last night. For many years he had been treasurer of the board of trustees.

In this business life Mr. Larner had been eminently successful. He was the organizer of many enterprises not one of which was a failure from any point of view. Besides his prominent connection with the National Union Fire Insurance Company, he was also secretary of the Home Plate Glass Insurance Company. He was an active member of the Washington Board of Trade, a member of the Columbia Historical Society, and other organizations.

Mr. Larner leaves a widow and two sons -- Phillip F. Larner, who is assistant secretary of the National Union Fire Insurance Company, and John B. Larner, a prominent member of the Washington Bar.

The arrangements for the funeral have not yet been definitely completed. The funeral will doubtless take place Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mr. Larner will be buried in Congressional cemetery with Masonic honors. Whether the services will be held in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church or at the residence will depend upon the condition of Mrs. Larner, and will be announced later.

Tribute to Memory of Noble D. Larner

Services at the Home and Later at Church--Masonic Honors at Grave

The honor and esteem in which the late Noble D. Larner was held by the people of Washington, where he was born and spent his life of usefulness, was attested by the character and standing of the large number of citizens who gathered at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church this afternoon to pay a final tribute to his memory. The Supreme Court of the United States, the army and navy, the District government, the different branches of the administration, business, fraternal and patriotic organizations were represented at the bier of this man whose death the national capital mourns.

A short service was held at the residence, 937 I street northwest, at 1:30 o'clock. It consisted of prayer and a few words by Mr. Larner's pastor, the Rev. Dr. Wallace Radcliffe. Only relatives and a few near friends of the family were present.

At 2 o'clock the body was taken to the church. The honorary pallbearers consisted of representatives from the Grand Lodge, F.A.A.M., two representatives of the Grand Chapter, R.A.M.; two from the Grand Commandery, Knights Templar; Justice John M. Harlan, representing the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church; Mr. Henry Orth, representing the National Union Insurance Company; Mr. F. Miller, representing the Home Plate Glass Insurance Company; Dr. J.W. Bayne, representing the Sons of the American Revolution; Mr. W.J. Acker, representing the Masonic Hall Association; Mr. S. Thomas Brown, representing the Oldest Inhabitants Association; Mr. G.Y. Atlee, representing the Washington Veterans' Association and the National Rifles of 1861; Mr. C.W. Howard, representing the fire underwriters of the District of Columbia, and Mr. Joseph A. Deeble.

The active pallbearers were chosen from Lafayette Chapter, No. 5; Lafayette Lodge, No. 19, and DeMolay Mounted Commandery, No. 4. The ushers at the church were William H. Pierce, John Doyle Carmody, Henry W. Samson, Sidney Besselevire, John P. Randolph, J.P. Ernest and Philip Walker, all members of Washington Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

The National Union Fire Insurance Company of which Mr. Larner had been secretary from its inception, was represented by Capt. R.W. Tyler, Samuel Cross, W.C. Duvall, Meyer Cohen, Henry Wells, Lemuel Towers, jr., E.N. Waters and H.L. Rust.

Simple Services at Church

The service at the church were simple. They consisted of "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and "Lead, Kindly Light," sung by a quartet of brother Masons, prayer and a brief sermon by Dr. Radcliffe, who spoke feelingly of Mr. Larner's life work for the betterment of mankind and his untiring interest in everything good. He said that the church had lost one of its firmest supporters and the city one of its noblest men.

The floral offerings were many and beautiful. Chief among them were large designs of roses and lillies from the Sons of the American Revolution and the Association of Underwriters respectively, Mr. Larner having been the first president of the latter organization. Other offerings were from Almas Temple, Mystic Shrine, Royal Arch Chapter, Lafayette Lodge, F.A.A.M., and the Union Fire Insurance Company.

At the grave the ceremonies were conducted by the Masonic fraternity under the charge of Mr. George H. Walker, grand master.

Jewel From King Bequeathed to Masonic Grand Lodge of England

The will of Noble Danforth Larner, dated March 14, 1901, was filed for probate in the register of wills' office today. By the terms of the will the testator bequeathed the greater part of his estate to his wife, Ann Margaret Larner. A portion is left in trust for his grandson, Noble B Larner. Upon the death of the wife the property is to descend to the testator's sons.

The jewel which Mr. Larner received as a gift from the King of England, Edward VII, as the grand representative of the Grand Lodge of F.A.A.M. of England to the Grand Lodge of the District, it is directed, shall be returned to the Grand Lodge of England.

The executors named are Philip F. Larner and John B. Larner, sons of the deceased.

A History of the City of Washington

Noble D. Larner

Occupying an exalted position in local matters, insurance and Masonic circles, Noble D. Larner, a Washingtonian by birth and residence, spent a life fraught with usefulness and distinction. The son of Michael and Christiana Larner, he was born on January 9, 1830. He was one of the organizers of the National Union Fire Insurance Company in 1865, and was elected its first secretary, which position he held continuously to the time of his death, on March 19, 1903. As a Mason Mr. Larner held every important position within the gift of the subordinate and grand lodges, and at the time of his death was past grand mater, past grand high priest and past grand commander of the District of Columbia, and past general grand high priest of the United States.

His early education was received at the District private schools, after which he entered the printing establishment of his grandfather, Jacob Gideon, and there learned the "art preservative of arts." In April 1861, Mr. Larner answered President Lincoln's first call for troops for ninety days' service and served until the expiration of this term of enlistment. Some time after Mr. Larner had been discharged from the army he was drafted to serve for three years under a call by the President. Sometime after this, he, in connection with others formed what was known as the Third Ward Draft Club, its object being to secure money to purchase substitutes for those citizens of the third ward that might be drafted. In this effort the club was so successful as to procure substitutes enough to relieve all that were drafted in that ward except the last two who were sent to the army. Some time afterwards President Lincoln decided that he would place in the army a substitute to the credit of the District of Columbia, and communicated his desire to the provost marshal general of the District, with the request that he select the gentleman who should fulfill his wishes. The provost marshal general sent for Mr. Larner, stated to him the President's wishes and placed the matter in his hands. After considerable trouble, substitutes being scarce, he succeeded in getting one. He was sworn in, dressed in uniform, taken to the White House and introduced to the President, who spoke very pleasantly to him as to the duties of a soldier. President Lincoln subsequently sent Mr. Larner a check on Riggs Bank in this city in payment of the price he had paid for the substitute. At another period during the year 1864 or 1865 the city council of Washington received notice that a delegation of the Baltimore, Maryland, city council intended to make a visit to Washington. The council of Washington appointed a committee of which Mr. Larner was chairman, to receive and escort them to the places of interest in the city. After visiting various places they expressed the desire to visit the President. After entering the President's office and being introduced to him, he was informed that the visitors desired to sing him a song or two. The President said he would be glad to hear them. They then formed a circle around him and sang several patriotic songs, much to the pleasure of the President. During the singing they used a fine American flag which they waved around his head. That flag is still in the possession of Mr. Larner's family and very highly prized by them.

In December, 1860, he received an appointment to a clerkship in the Interior Department, where he remained until 1865, resigning to accept the secretaryship of the National Union Fire Insurance Company, of Washington, which position he held till death. Mr. Larner was equally prominent in the District's public affairs, and as a member of its city council he left a most enviable record. He became a member of the council in June, 1863, serving until June, 1865, and was chairman of the committee on improvements throughout his incumbency and was vice-president of that body for one year. While a member of the council Mr. Larner introduced many important measures, among them the bill to arch the old canal; to sewer the old Slash Run, on L street, northwest, and to arch the sewer which ran from what is now Florida avenue down

Eighth street, northwest. The measures were defeated at the time because of the great cost involved, but were subsequently introduced and adopted by the Board of Public Works. Mr. Larner took an active part in the passage of the act establishing a paid fire department in the District. He also introduced and had passed the bill in both branches of the council for the establishment of the paid firm alarm telegraph system. Another important bill introduced at his instance was that providing for the removal of ashes from residences. This bill was not passed, because of lack of funds, but the District government has since adopted the regulation. Mr. Larner always took an active interest in politics, and was Democratic in his sympathies.

On the 19th of October, 1863, Mr. Larner became a Master Mason of B.B. French Lodge; the following December a charter member of Lafayette Lodge, No. 19, and on the 31st of December he was elected secretary; in 1864 senior warden, and worshipful master in December, 1865 and 1866, serving as such two years. November 6, 1866, he was elected grand secretary of the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia, and served for five years, and was grand master in 1881 and 1882. He became a member of Mount Vernon Royal Arch Chapter No. 20, then under the registry of Maryland and District of Columbia Grand Chapter. In 1867 he united with others in the formation of the Grand Chapter of the District of Columbia. On June 1, 1867 he became high priest of the new chapter, Lafayette No. 5, and served as such two and a half years. He became grand secretary at the time of the organization of the Grand Chapter, serving until November, 1872, when he was elected deputy grand high priest, and served one year. He was also chairman of the committee on correspondence of the Grand Chapter for many years. In November, 1873, Mr. Larner was elected grand high priest. At Nashville, Tennessee, in 1874, he was elected general grand captain of the Host of the General Grand Royal Arch Chapter of the United States, and general grand scribe of the same order at Buffalo, August 24, 1877; general grand king at Detroit, Michigan, in 1880; deputy general grand high priest at Denver, Colorado, in 1883, and general grand high priest in Washington, District of Columbia, in 1886. He first attended a convocation of the General Grand Chapter held in St. Louis, Missouri, in 1868, and has been present at every convocation held by that body since that time. He received the order of knighthood in Columbia Commandery, No. 2, of Washington, D.C., in May, 1866, and affiliated with DeMolay Mounted Commandery, No. 4, February 16, 1872, and was elected eminent commander from the floor, December, 1877. Upon the organization of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar in this city, Mr. Larner was elected its first grand commander, which office he held for one term, during which the duty of organizing and placing the Grand Commandery in proper working order devolved upon him, which duty was performed to the entire satisfaction of the members of the Grand Commandery. In cryptic masonry he united in the movement made in Washington in organizing a council of Royal and Select Masons, in 1870. In the following year (1871) he was elected thrice puissant grand master and in 1878 he received the degrees of the Ancient Scottish Rite up to and including the thirty-second degree. On January 31, 1887, Mr. Larner assisted in the formation of the Washington Masonic Veteran Association, and refused to accept the office of president at that time. Subsequently, on February 22, 1893, he was elected president of the association and has continued to hold that office. On February 22, 1901, he was elected president of the District of Columbia Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, and on February 22, 1902, he was re-elected. During his incumbency it was more successful in the number of new members enrolled than at any previous time, and in 1902 Mr. Larner was elected vice-president of the National Congress of the Sons of American Revolution.

On November 25, 1851, Mr. Larner married Miss Ann Margaret Keller, of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. Of this union four sons were born -- Philip F. Larner, now secretary of the National Union Fire Insurance Company of Washington, and John B. Larner, a member of the Washington bar; Harry Day Larner, who died in infancy, and Charles N. Larner, who died on October 30, 1895, in the thirty-fourth year of his age, at that time being assistant secretary of the National Union Fire Insurance Company of Washington City.

Mr. Larner died suddenly on the 19th day of March, 1903, at a meeting in the lecture room of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, after presenting his report as treasurer of the board of trustees of that church, having been a trustee of the church for nearly twenty years. He was buried with high Masonic honors from the church on March 23, 1903, and his remains were interred at the Congressional Cemetery in Washington.

Born in Washington, D.C., January 9, 1830, he received his education in private schools, and learned the “art preservative of all arts” in the printing office of his grandfather, Jacob Gideon. In April 1861 he answered President Lincoln’s first call for ninety-day men and served until expiration of term of enlistment. In the same year he was appointed to a clerkship in the Interior Department. In 1863 he was elected a member of the City Council, and served for three years. In 1865 he was elected Secretary of the National Union Fire Insurance Company, which position he retained until his death. In 1867 he organized and carried to a successful conclusion the project for the erection of the old Masonic Temple, and from that time until his death was Secretary of the Masonic Hall Association. He was also for many years Secretary of the Home Plate Glass Insurance Company, and prominently identified with many other business enterprises.

While a member of the City Council, Bro. Lerner introduced many important measures, among them the bill to arch the old canal, to sewer the old Slash Run on L Street, and to arch the sewer which ran from what is now Florida Avenue, down to Eighth Street, N.W. Defeated then they were later adopted by the Board of Public Works. He was also active in the passage of the act to get a paid fire department and the establishment of a fire-alarm telegraph system.

Bro. Lerner was made a Master Mason in Benjamin B. French Lodge, No. 15, October 19, 1863. On December 28 of the same year he became a charter member of the LaFayette Lodge, No. 19, and served the lodge as Secretary in 1864, Senior Warden in 1865, and Worshipful Master in 1866 and 1867.

In the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia he was elected Senior Grand Deacon for the year 1866, Grand Secretary for five years from 1867 to 1871, and Grand Master for the years 1881 and 1882.

He was exalted in Mount Vernon R.A. Chapter, No. 3, December 25, 1865. May 24, 1867, he became a charter member and the first High Priest of LaFayette R.A. Chapter, No. 5, and presided over that body in 1867, 1868 and 1869.

He took a prominent part in the organization of the Royal Arch Chapter of the District of Columbia, and served that body as Grand Secretary from 1867 to 1871, Deputy Grand High Priest in 1873, and Grand High Priest in 1874 and 1875.

He was present at every convocation of the General Grand Chapter from 1868 to 1900, and was elected General Grand Captain of the Host in 1874, General Grand Scribe in 1877, General Grand King in 1880, Deputy General Grand High Priest in 1883, and General Grand High Priest in 1886, serving three years in each office.

He assisted in forming LaFayette Council, R. and S.M., now extinct, in 1870, and was the presiding officer of that body in 1871. March 19, 1894, he affiliated with Washington Council, No. 1.

He was knighted in Columbia Commandery, No. 2, K.T., May 4, 1866; became a charter member of DeMolay Mounted Commandery, No. 4, February 16, 1872, and was Eminent Commander in 1878.

On the organization of the Grand Commandery of the District of Columbia, January 14, 1896, he was elected the first Grand Commander, and served in that office for the initial term ending at the First Annual Conclave, May 11, 1896.

He received the degrees of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, from fourth to thirty-second, from Grand Commander Albert Pike, in 1878.

Bro. Lerner was for nearly half a century a potential force in the business, social, and religious life of Washington. He was abundantly endowed with the qualities that make for success—great moral and physical courage, sound judgment, indomitable energy, and unswerving integrity—and it was said of him that no enterprise with which he was connected was ever known to fail. He was for forty years a member of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, and it was within its sacred walls, March 19, 1903, that the great change came to him, when “in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye,” he painlessly sank to rest.

“Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them.”

Death of E.H. Larrabee

E.H. Larrabee died yesterday after a long and painful illness from heart trouble and other complications incident to his hard service in the late war. He served faithfully in company F, first Connecticut heavy artillery. He was an efficient officer on the police force for twenty-three years, and was then retired and pensioned. He leaves a widow, who has the sympathy of a large circle of friends. Mr. Larrabee was fifty-seven years of age. His funeral will take place under the auspices of Lincoln Post, G.A.R., at 4:30 p.m. tomorrow, from his late residence, 19 K street northwest. Interment will be at Rock Creek cemetery.

Lashhorn. Suddenly, March 5, 1910, Harry P., beloved son of Margaret A. Lashhorn in the 28th year of his age. Funeral private Tuesday, March 8 at 2 p.m.

Feared Blood Poisoning

Body of Harry P. Lashhorn Found Near Spot

Indicated in Farewell Message

"Dear Jesse: I have committed suicide by drowning down at the arsenal. Don't let mother worry. Comfort her. I think I would never be able to work again. My health is very bad.

"May God have mercy on me. See that mother is taken care of. I drowned myself by the red house, and look after mother.

"Your brother, Harry."

After writing the foregoing message to his brother yesterday, Harry P. Lashhorn, twenty-four years old, who was a clerk in the office of the auditor for the Post Office Department, jumped overboard near where the James Creek canal empties into the Anacostia river and was drowned.

His brother, Jesse Lashhorn, viewed the remains at the morgue later in the afternoon and had an undertaker take charge of them after Coroner Nevitt gave permission for their removal. The young man lived with his widowed mother at 102 P street northwest and had always been a dutiful son.

Found Coat and Hat

The first that was known of the dawning was when Stephen F. Stella and Henry Lee, employed at the War College, found the coat and hat of he young man on the stone wall not far from the boiler room in which they were working. In one of the pockets of the garment, they found the note he had written to his brother, a membership card in St. John's Lodge, No. 11, F.A.A.M., disclosing his identity.

Shortly before 3 o'clock the harbor police were notified of the finding of the body. They got in communication with Jesse Lashhorn and were told by him that his brother was either at work or at home.

"It must be a mistake about his having jumped overboard," the brother said. "He had no reason to commit suicide. He was single and had a good position."

The police of the harbor precinct felt satisfied, however, that the finding of the card and note in the pockets of the coat hat had been abandoned meant that the writer of the message was beneath he surface of the water. Members of the crew of the boat were summoned and the search was soon begun. Those who engaged in the search went to the vicinity of the red boathouse referred to in the written message, near which the coat and ha were found, and shortly after 4 o'clock the body was recovered.

Body Found in Canal

About twenty feet from the little house the body was located. It was in the canal and evidently not far from where the young man jumped overboard. The members of the crew returned to the river front at the foot of 7th street and turned the body over to the superintendent of the morgue.

It is stated that the young man cut his hand while opening a can of tomatoes some time ago and had experienced considerable trouble with the injury. His hand had been operated upon, the police were told, but it did not seem to get much better. Lashhorn thought, and he feared blood poisoning would follow.

Friends say that he worried so much about his hand that he had become melancholy, although he had never said anything to suggest that he contemplated taking his life.

It is thought that Lashhorn ended his life about noon, although it was not until some time after the noon hour that the coat and hat were found. James P. Brigham of 412 2d street southwest saw the young man walking along the wall as early as 11 o'clock in the morning, and while the presence of the stranger attracted his attention, he did not have the slightest idea that he was contemplating suicide.

Robert V. Laskey Dies At Home In This City

Was Lifelong Resident Here and Veteran of the Civil War

Robert V. Laskey, one of Washington's oldest residents, died at his home, 729 6th street northwest, Friday, after an illness of two weeks. Funeral services are to be held at the family residence tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev G.W. VanFossen of Trinity Episcopal Church is to officiate. Interment is to be in Congressional cemetery.

Mr. Laskey was born in this city February 14 1828, when Washington was but a village compared to the great city into which it has grown since tht day. He lived here all his life, and took great pride in the growth of the city He was an expert horseman, and as a young man was a member of the President's Mounted Guard, a local volunteer cavalry organization, which had the honor of escorting President Lincoln to the Capitol at his first inauguration.

Among First to Enlist

When the call for troops came at the beginning of the civil war Mr. Lasky was among the first to enlist. He saw service with Samuel Owen's Volunteer Cavalry, which did duty guarding old Chain bridge and other approaches to the city.

Mr. Laskey was a member of Lafayette Post, G.A.R., and of the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants. He retired from business many years ago, and lived quietly at his home, where he died. His wife, Mrs. Virginia Laskey, and a son, John E. Laskey, a member of the District bar, survive him.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Samuel H. Laughlin was born May 1, 1796 (he says 1799) in Washington County, Virginia. Shortly after his birth, the family moved to Kentucky, returning to Virginia in 1810. In 1811, Mr. Laughlin began work as a clerk for Samuel Fulton, who sent Laughlin to McMinnville, Tennessee. In 1812, Mr. Laughlin began studying law under Major M. Campbell. He received his license to practice law in 1815. Laughlin moved to Murfreesboro, Tennessee in the same year and married Mary Clark Bass of Murfreesboro on October 29, 1816. They had eight children who survived infancy. Mrs. Laughlin died on November 11, 1840. Two daughters died in 1842, within three months of each other. In 1845, Mr. Laughlin moved to Washington D. C., where he lived with Major Herrplin C. Williams. He died there on May 5, 1850.

As editor of the Nashville Banner, Samuel Laughlin supported James K. Polk for speakership of the U.S. House until his publisher, a supporter of Polk's rival, John Bell, dismissed him (1833-1834). Laughlin then arranged the establishment of the Union, which vigorously backed Polk. Laughlin represented the first district in the Tennessee State Senate from 1838-1844, overseeing the establishment of Nashville as state capitol in 1843 and pushing for the establishment of a number of new Tennessee counties. He was also one of the "Immortal Thirteen" who, fearing the election of a Whig, refused to meet with the Tennessee House to elect a representative to the U.S. Senate, leaving Tennessee unrepresented in the Senate for 1841-1843. As a delegate to the 1840 Democratic convention, Laughlin (with Cave Johnson, Felix Grundy, and others) unsuccessfully supported Polk for the vice-presidency. Laughlin also attended the 1844 convention at which Polk was nominated for president.

WASHINGTON GROVE, August 8, 1898

With the coming of dawn came the death angel to this Eden and the camp is shadowed by a great sorrow and tears are falling in sympathy. Mrs. Harvey Laurenson passed away, after a brief illness, at her cottage on 1st avenue, while the prayer service was in progress at the Auditorium, led by Dr. L.B. Wilson.

At 11 o'clock Rev. Wm. E. Harns of Clarksburg circuit preached a melting sermon to a small but attentive congregation. The women's holiness meeting in the temple impressed all who attended. There was a lapse of public worship in the afternoon to the regret of the county contingent, for those who once came after the mid-day meal are obliged to quit the camp after the children's hour, from 4 to 5 o'clock, and so lose the afternoon.

Rev. A.J. Gill presided at the vesper services, which is pre-eminently a young people's meeting, in which he was assisted by Mr. S.A. Terry of Grace Church, who conducted the song service and added testimony to the power of God over human character.

The gathering clouds of the afternoon brought a refreshing shower upon the camp, which, however, in nowise dampened the ardor of the hosts, for a large audience attentively heard the Gospel message brought by Rev. E.L. Watson, as he outlined the tenses of religious character, basing his logic upon the text found in Phillipians 3, 13 and 14--"Laying aside the weight and the sin that doth so easily beset us, let us press forward."

Never in the annals of the camp has there been so large a contingent of Montgomery's representative Methodism as is to be found in camp quarters, and never have they been more cordially greeted by the committee and resident society than during these services. The proverbial courtesy and fellowship of old Montgomery has been given in return. The camp will close with the night service of Tuesday, much to the regret of many.

The remains of Mrs. Harvey Laurenson will be removed to Washington at 2:13 o'clock p.m. tomorrow where, after services at her late city residence, interment will be made in Congressional cemetery. The deceased was the eldest daughter of Mr. Charles King of Washington, and had passed her twenty-second birthday on Sunday last. A husband and three young children survive her.

Mr. Cranston Laurie, one of the principle clerks of the Post Office department, expired at his residence on O street northwest, yesterday, in the 73d year of his age. Mr. Laurie was appointed to office in 1834. He was a son of the late Rev. Dr. Laurie, of the Presbyterian Church; who erected the church for many years has been known as Willard Hall, on F street. His mother, Mrs. Laurie, is still well remembered as one of the first directresses of our Protestant Orphan Asylum.

Laurie. Died on Sabbath evening, the 6th instant, at a quarter before 9 o'clock, Mrs. Elizabeth Bell Laurie, wife of the Rev. Dr. James Laurie, of this city.

After a wasting illness of several weeks and the most anxious solicitude and untiring attention on the part of her family and friends, this estimable lady has passed from our midst; but the light which still radiates from those daily deeds of love and charity which marked the bright pathway she trod on earth remains to shed comfort and hope, in this dark hour, over that forsaken home. Pre-eminent for her piety, she wore its most attractive garb--humility and unostentatious zeal. For many years the presiding spirit of the "Female Union Benevolent Society," the "Dorcas Society," and also connected with the "City Orphan Asylum," her self-sacrificing devotion to these noble causes--seeking out the homeless, the destitute, and distressed, and relieving their wants--made her influence extensively known and felt; and, whilst many an echoing note of woe will come from the hearts of a numerous circle of friends, by none will her loss be more deeply felt than by that class of suffering humanity to which so large a portion of her time and energies were directed.

But, though her public acts of benevolence were so many and so various, the Christian virtues and graces which formed and adorned her character shone most conspicuously in that home where her absence leaves such an aching void; for it was there, where the tender devotion manifested to the interests, the comfort, and happiness of those dearest to her--the self-sacrificing spirit evinced on all, even the most trifling, occasions, as if the chief joy of her heart was, in imitation of her Savior and great exemplar, to minister to others--was best appreciated and felt. Those deeds of love have passed from earth, yet their record lives in the memory of One by whom even the simplest act of kindness is not forgotten, " and will in nowise lose its reward."

To her bereaved partner, advanced in years, and bowed down in affliction; we can but offer the sincerest sympathies of his numerous friends, confidently hoping that he will receive consolation in this his hour of need from Him who is ever now, as of old, near the open grave, to weep with those who weep and to breath forth once again those holy words of consolation; "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

The funeral services were conducted, on the 8th instant, with great solemnity, in F street church, which was appropriately clad in the deepest mourning. The Rev. Mr. Berry, of Georgetown, delivered a beautiful and impressive discourse, which was followed by most fervent and touching prayer, by the Rev. Mr. Gurley. A crowded assembly within the church testified their grief on this mournful occasion, and the tears and sobs of the little orphans who came to take a last fond look at the placid countenance of her who had been to them a mother, melted all hearts. Few such funerals have been witnessed in this place, and never perhaps was there a deeper, stronger, or more general manifestation of sympathy and regret than has been elicited by the departure of this venerated Christian lady.

A Friend.

The Late Dr. Laurie

At a meeting of the Washington City Young Men's Christian Association, held on Monday evening April 18th, 1853, the death of the Rev. James Laurie, D.D. having been announced, a committee was appointed, consisting of the Rev. Mr. Samson, C.W. Schreiner, and R.L. Smallwood, to prepare resolutions expressive of the feelings of the Association at this dispensation of Providence. The following were reported by the committee and adopted:

Whereas it has pleased the great Head of the Church to remove from the sphere of his labors, on this day of our meeting, the Rev. Dr. Laurie, who for nearly fifty years has been pastor of a Christian church in this city, who has been foremost in every new enterprise for good, and who was one of the first life members of this Association; therefore

Resolved, That, while we express our deep sympathy with the bereaved family and with the church of which he was so long pastor, we feel the sad conviction that our whole religious community has in him lost a valued friend and fellow-laborer.

Resolved, That the members of this Association will in a body attend his funeral, and that for this purpose they will meet on Wednesday afternoon, at three o'clock, at the hall of the Unio Academy, 14th street and New York avenue, to proceed thence to the F street church.

James Laurie Dies From Injuries He Received When Struck By a Train

James Laurie, the steamfitter who was struck by a train on the Baltimore and Potomac railroad on the grade crossing at New Jersey avenue the day before Thanksgiving, died at Providence Hospital at an early hour yesterday morning. The deceased was forty-three years old and had lived in the city all his life, and would in all probability have been alive today had the tracks been depressed or the grade crossings abolished in some other way.

On the day of the accident he was at work as usual and was on his way across Virginia avenue when a passing train struck and horribly injured his arms and legs. In that pitiable condition he was removed to Providence Hospital, where it was thought he would live but a short time, but under the good treatment he received he seemed to improve for a while. Then a change for the worse came and death ensued.

Although he died early yesterday morning his death was not made known to the coroner until a Star reporter gave the information today.

In the meanwhile, Dr. Hall, the resident physician at the hospital, gave a certificate of death and the body was removed to the late home of the deceased on N street southwest.

During the day Lieut. McCathran of the fifth police precinct notified, the coroner of the sad ending of Mr. Laurie, and the coroner will investigate the case this afternoon. It is likely that an inquest will be held tomorrow.

A burial permit has been issued for the interment of the deceased in Congressional cemetery on Wednesday.

A Coroner's Inquest Being Held to Determine the Responsibility

This afternoon at 2:30 o'clock Coroner Patterson held an inquest at the fifth precinct station to fix the responsibility for the death of James Laurie, whose death resulted from being struck on the New Jersey avenue grade crossing the day before Thanksgiving, as published in yesterday's Star.

The jury viewed the body at the house and then assembled in the police station and heard the testimony.

Lawyers Charles Maurice Smith and George W. Albright were present as representatives of the widow and children of the deceased, who they stated are in sad circumstances.

The watchman who is now on duty at this crossing, it was stated, was given his position after he had been struck by a train and injured.

Watchman Griffis' Testimony

The first witness examined was Charles Griffis, watchman at the New Jersey avenue crossing. He testified that he was on duty at the time of the accident. Conductor Collins was shifting passenger cars about 11 o'clock in the morning and the crossing was blocked about two minutes. The conductor cut the train in two, leaving an opening, and two gentlemen attempted to cross, going south, one in advance of the other. The one who started over first stopped in the middle of the north-bound track. He stepped backward and then forward and train No. 50 struck him. The witness was giving his testimony when the report closed.

We have again the regretted duty to perform of announcing the decease of a Member of Congress the Hon. Joab Lawler one of the Representatives from Alabama. His illness was so short that it was but a day or two ago that he was walking in the midst of us in apparently perfect health. His death was feelingly announced in both Houses and the usual testimonies of respect to the memory of the deceased were voted; after which, both Houses adjourned, without doing any business. As the funeral is to take place today no business will be transacted in Congress this day.

The Evening Star, October 28, 1881
Terrible Explosion at the Navy Yard
One Man Killed and Several Wounded
A terrible explosion took place about 2:30 o'clock today in the ordnance department, Washington navy yard, where the fulminate is made, by which one man, George Lawrence, was instantly killed and several wounded. The coroner was notified to go there at once.
The wounded were George W. Gates and Marion Thompson. The explosion was accompanied by three reports which were at first supposed to be caused in torpedo experiments and were not generally noticed until the alarm bell in the yard had struck several times. Then the greatest excitement prevailed. The gates of the yard were closed and no one was allowed to enter or depart. The explosion occurred in a small brick house, in the west end of the yard. Lawrence was engaged in drilling or charging an old rocket, which, through some derangement, exploded under his hands. It is thought other fulminates exploded too. The interior walls of the building were demolished. The wounded men were removed to the medical department, where they were being treated when the Star reported visited the yard.
Lawrence, who was killed, leaves a wife, two grown-up boys and several small children. Gates was very seriously injured about the back and face, and all his clothing was torn from his body. He presented a terrible spectacle, his flesh being blackened, torn and bleeding. It is thought his injuries will prove to be fatal. Thompson is a young man. His injuries are not so serious, apparently, as those with which Gates is suffering, but he was terribly singed, the hair being burned from his head. The hydraulic press room, where the accident occurred, is under charge of Capt. Howell. The accident will be thoroughly investigated by the officers of the yard. The news of the explosion spread very rapidly, and the precaution taken by the guard of closing the gates was found to have been a very wise one, as soon a struggling crowd was clamoring for admittance. Women whose husbands or sons were employed in the yard hastened in terror to the scene when the first exaggerated reports reached them. Within a few minutes there was a multitude at the gate. The officers of the guard were busied in quieting the fears of these anxious one. The excitement spread all along 8th street and the by streets in that quarter of the city, and little groups of men and women assembled here and there on the curb to discuss the terrible event.

The Navy Yard Explosion
The Inquest Over the Remains of Lawrence
Testimony of Naval Officers -- Something About the Manufacture of Rockets
At 11 o'clock today the jury empannelled on Saturday over the remains of George L. Lawrence, the victim of the accident at the Navy Yard on Friday last, met at the residence of Mr. E.M. Boteler, No. 735 8th street southeast. The jurors were J.D. O'Donnell, Adam Gaddis, M. McNelly, Jasper Scott, Gilbert Gannon and George Keil.
Lieut. Bohrer's Story
Lieut. Carl Bohrer, the first witness examined, testified that he was in his office engaged in writing at the time of the explosion (Friday at 2 1/2 o'clock); heard the explosion and saw smoke arising from the hydraulic press house; thought that there were one or more explosions after the first; ran to the fire hose in the west end of the machine shop, and called on the men, who seemed inclined to run out of the shop, to come back and help him. The hose was run out, and they commenced playing on the fire; saw the deceased lying as though he had fallen out the west door; his feet in the doorway and his body along side the steps; had the men pick him up. His clothes being on fire, the flames were smothered; did not know exactly how the accident occurred, not having been there. Witness explained that the rocket furnished the propelling power of the Weeks torpedo; the case is of boiler iron, four feet long and six inches in diameter, the inside is a case of sheet iron, in which the composition is placed, a small quantity at a time, and pressed under hydraulic pressure--20 tons to the inch--this process being continued until the rocket is finished. To prepare it as a propeller for a torpedo more surface than the simple face must be exposed to burning, and therefore a hole is drilled the length of the rocket. The composition is made of nitre charcoal and sulphur--the same ingredients as are in powder--but the proportion of nitre is much larger than in powder. Any work in explosives is dangerous. A large number of these rockets have been successfully made at the yard without accident, the persons engaged being very careful and taking every precaution. The hole may be made with a mandrel, but then there would be danger of foreign substances getting into the aperture. Witness did not regard the manufacture of these rockets as being as dangerous as the manufacture of powder.

Commander J.A. Howell

in charge of the ordnance department, testified that he was at his residence when he heard the explosion, and at once hastened to the scene. The matter of manufacture of these rockets had been considered by the ordnance bureau, and it had been determined to have them made at Newport. These were in no more danger of being fired than others, but in cases of accident the greater damage would be done by the largest rockets. The deceased, he understood, was perfectly reliable, and the fact that no accident had happened there under him before this was the best evidence of his capability. There had been 50 of these rockets made here, and had these four been finished, they would have in all probability been the last. There was no fulminate about this rocket, and while the ingredients were the same as those of powder, it burned much more slowly.

Lieut. R.D. Hitchcock

testified that he was about fifty feet from the building when the rocket exploded. He saw a flash, heard an explosion, and the rocket whizzing through the air. There were two other explosions and the whole thing occupied but a moment. The flash took place at the bottom--in the pan through which the auger passes--and in consequence this rocket went up. Two other rockets were lying down when they exploded and shot over a pile of timber. There was no way of accounting for this accident; it was one of those which will take place in the business, which, as is well known, was dangerous.

A Pyrotechnist's Testimony

Jeremiah Cross, a pyrotechnist, testified that there were three men engaged in drilling at the time. The business was dangerous, but there was no peculiar danger in the manufacture of this kind of rocket excepting that when an accident occurred--they being of larger size--the consequences would likely be more serious. He had been engaged in the business for years and never had a rocket to explode. The deceased was regarded as a skillful man in the business.

John W. Thompson,

who was in charge of the naval laboratory, testified that it was one of those unaccountable accidents incident to the business. Lawrence seemed to be more careful in handling these rockets than he had ever seen him before. He regarded these rockets less dangerous than the ordinary rocket, for it was not so explosive. A rocket made on a spindle was more dangerous. The pressure was about 5,000 pounds to the inch--100 tons to 5.35 inches. In no way is fulminating powder used in these rockets; they are fired by electric fuse. It is possible to turn the drill at such a speed as to ignite powder. It was usual to examine the drill as to its temperature about once a minute. The niter, sulphur and charcoal is passed through sieves both before and after mixing to be sure that no foreign substance had entered it.

Mr. Thompson explained, in detail, the manner of the work, showing the care taken; that after the ingredients are prepared, the mixing is made at a distance of 500 yards from the main buildings; that it is carried back and forth in covered pots, etc.

The Verdict

The jury, at 1:15 o'clock, rendered the following verdict: "That the said George L. Lawrence, came to his death at about 2:30 o'clock, October 29, 1881, at the press-house at the Washington Navy Yard, in the city of Washington, D.C. from puncture of the skull caused by the explosion of a "Weeks torpedo rocket" which he was engaged in drilling at the time. From the evidence addressed we believe that every precaution was taken to prevent accident, and that the cause of the explosion is unknown.

The Funeral of the Victim

The Funeral of Mr. George Lafayette Lawrence, the victim of the explosion at the Navy Yard on Friday last, took place from his late residence, No. 646 E street southeast, yesterday afternoon and was largely attended. The pall-bearers were from his fellow-workmen. The floral offerings were numerous, and many of them exceedingly beautiful in design and elaborate in finish. One was an anchor from the officers of the steamer Corroton. The remains were interred in the Congressional Cemetery.

The Evening Star, November 9, 1881

The Navy Yard Explosion

Report of the Board of Naval Officers

Commodore Pattison, commanding the Washington Navy Yard, has submitted to the Secretary of the Navy the report of the board of officers ordered to examine into the recent explosion there. Capt. Semmes was chairman of the board making the investigation. The report says that the explosion was primarily due to the ignition of a rocket which was being reamed out. The ignition may have occurred from the reamer becoming heated, or from the possible presence of grit in the fuller's clay used to close up the tail of the rocket. The damage was the complete destruction of the hydraulic press house of the ordnance department of the yard, involving a loss of about $600. It appears that three men--George Lawrence, M.C. Thompson and G.F. Gates--were engaged in reaming a Week's torpedo-rocket and were fully aware of the fact that the work was dangerous, and were exercising perhaps more caution than usual. A flash of fire was observed at the table where they were at work. This was followed almost immediately by an explosion. The south side of the house was blown out by the first explosion, which was followed at short intervals by two other explosions. Every known precaution had been taken to prevent accident. There were seven loaded rockets in the building at the time. Two were burnt outside the building and two completely shattered by the explosion of the first. The other two were taken out of the building by Mr. J.W. Thompson at the risk of his life. George Lawrence lost his life, probably by being struck by a part of the iron bar, which was used to center the rocket on the reamer. M.C. Thompson and G.F. Gates were burned, the former very badly. The board does not find that any one was to blame for the accident, and believe that the whole damage resulted from the ignition and partial explosion of the rocket upon which the men were working. This is the first explosion that has occurred at the yard in rocket manufacture since 1864. The rockets weigh, when loaded, 109 pounds, and after being reamed 107 pounds. The cases are of 3-16 boiler iron, with 1/2 inch steel head and tail plates.

Death of the Hon. Joseph Lawrence

The sad duty devolves upon us of announcing the decease of another Member of the House of Representatives, than whom that body possesses few whose death would be more lamented than his will be by those who have enjoyed the opportunity of knowing and appreciating his many titles to respect and esteem.

The Hon. Joseph Lawrence, one of the Representatives from the State of Pennsylvania, expired at his lodgings in this city yesterday morning, at a little after 11 o'clock. His illness had been of some two weeks' duration, and is supposed to have been induced by fatigue and anxiety of mind consequent upon his late painful attendance upon the deathbed of his eldest son and his son's wife, and upon the illness of other members of his family, from a protracted visit to whom he had but recently returned.

Mr. Lawrence was fifty-four years of age. For many years he had been in public service. Nine years, first and last, he served in the Legislature of his own State, during four years of which he occupied the post of Speaker of the House of Representatives. For four years, in the nineteenth and twentieth Congresses, he was a Member of the House of Representatives of the United States. One year he was Treasurer of the State of Pennsylvania; soon after retiring from which station upon a change of parties, he was again elected a Representative to Congress, and took his seat at the opening of the late Extra Session. His public duties he discharged with faithfulness, ability, and assiduity.

Uniting with great amenity of manners and kindness of heart, much experience in public affairs, and the most inflexible integrity, his influence was always great and salutary, and his death will be felt as a loss to his State and to the Public.

To the family of which he was the affectionate and beloved head, his death is an affliction which no earthly power can relieve. But to them it will be some consolation to know that he died the peaceful and happy death of a faithful follower of that religion of which he had for a long time been an earnest professor.

The National Intelligencer, Thursday, January 21, 1841

The Late Co. W. Lawrence

Col. William Lawrence, whose death in this city has been lately announced, was a native of Calvert county, Maryland, and entered the service of his country as a platoon officer in 1808, and by regular promotion attained the rank of Colonel. He commanded at Fort Bowyer, or Mobile Point, in September, 1814, with the rank of Major, when it was attacked by a British fleet in command of Commodore Nichols and a land force of marines and Indians, and succeeded in beating them off after a severe conflict of upwards of four hours, with the total loss of their flag ship, and two others so much crippled as not to be able to answer to their helms, and were towed off--the land forces was also compelled to fall back with considerable loss. For this gallant achievement, with a battalion not exceeding 200 effective men against fifteen hundred British troops and Indians, he received a brevet of lieutenant colonel. Again he was attacked, in February following, at the same post, by the whole British army and fleet soon after their defeat at New Orleans, and, after contending with indomitable energy for five nights and four days without a moment's cessation, being badly wounded himself as well as many of his men, was compelled to surrender to an overwhelming and exasperate enemy, and suffer the privations incident to a prison ship for fifty-three days, when an exchange was effected, and himself and battalion restored to their country at the mouth of the Mississippi just as the news of peace arrived. He was retained on the peace establishment, and served as colonel of the 5th regiment for some five or six years when he retired upon a pension granted him in consequence of a wound received in the last action at Fort Bowyer.

Heitman: Born Maryland, 2d Lt. 4th Infantry June 8, 1801; transferred to 2 Inf. April 1, 1802; 1st Lt. Oct. 12, 1804; R. Adj. Jan. 1807 to Jan. 1810; Capt. Jan 1, 1810; Maj. April 19, 1814; transferred to 8 Inf. May 17, 1815; Lt. Col. 3 Inf. May 8, 1818; transferred to 1 Inf. Dec. 12, 1820; transferred to 2 Inf June 1, 1821; Col. 5 Inf. Aug. 20, 1828; Bvt. Lt. Col. Sept. 15, 1814 for gallant conduct in the defense of Fort Bowyer, Ala. Against greatly superior British land and navy forces and Col. Sept. 15, 1824 for 10 years faithful service in one grade; resigned July 15, 1831. Died January 7, 1841.

Death of Dr. H.E. Leach

A Well-Known Physician and Surgeon Passes Away After a Long Illness.

At 2:50 this morning Dr. Hamilton Leach died at his residence in this city of tuberculosis after an illness of several months. His death had been expected for several days past, and on last Saturday evening it was thought that he could not survive until morning. A slight improvement followed, however, and yesterday morning he felt strong enough to rise from his couch, and after partaking of food, enjoyed a cigar. A sinking spell followed later in the day, from which he never rallied and death relieved him early this morning.

Hamilton Evans Leach was a native of Washington, having been born on 11th street in South Washington in 1852. He was educated in the District schools, afterward working for several years in a lime kiln, from which employment he saved sufficient money to matriculate at Georgetown Medical College. He graduated with honors, working at various occupations between times in order to pay his way through the college. In 1872 he commenced the practice of medicine with Dr. Fenwick in South Washington. Soon after that he branched out for himself and was appointed corporation physician. He was a hard student and by rigid application attained eminence in his profession. Dr. Leach was an excellent surgeon, having performed in this city some of the most difficult, yet successful, operations known to surgical science.

Dr. Leach had considerable dramatic talent and was complimented several years ago by Tony Pastor by the offer of an engagement. He was a member of the Order of Elks, having served three terms as grand exalted ruler of the order. In 1888 he made a tour of the country in the interest of the order. He was also a prominent member of the Masonic order, being a thirty-second degree man and also a member of the Mystic Shrine and DeMolay Mounted Commandery, K.T. He was a Knight of Pythias and also a member of the Washington Light Infantry Corps, being surgeon of the first battalion.

During the recent G.A.R. encampment he was physician in charge of the Citizens' Hospital.

Preparing for the Funeral

Dr. Leach was a member of so many organizations and had so many close personal friends that the arrangements for the funeral in detail cannot be fixed without consulting a large number of people. It was the wish of Dr. Leach that his body be taken in charge by the Knights Templar and that he be buried from the Scottish Rite hall. These two requests will of course be carried out. The body will be watched by details of the knights and either on Wednesday evening or Thursday morning will be taken to the Scottish Rite Temple, where it will lie in state. On Thursday, at either 2 or 3 o'clock, the funeral services of the church will be preached by Rev. Dr. Meader, after which the services of the Elks and Nights Templar will take place. The interment will take place in Congressional cemetery. The body will be accompanied to the grave by a large number of organizations and other friends. Over the grave the rites of the blue lodge will be performed. Accompanying the body to the cemetery will be the Light Infantry, the Elks, De Molay Commandery Knights Templar, Nights of Pythias and many detached officers of the National Guard.

Laid Away to Rest

Last Sad Rites Performed Over the Remains of Dr. H.E. Leach

It was with sad hearts that the hundreds of friends of the late Dr. Hamilton Leach bade a last farewell to his remains at Congressional Cemetery yesterday afternoon. As told in The Star, the funeral services took place at 3 o'clock at the Scottish Rites cathedral on G street. The body was guarded by a detail from De Molay Mounted Commandery while the ceremonies were presided over by William Oscar Roome, venerable master of Mithras Lodge of Perfection. Rev. James H. Lemon preached the sermon and told in a touching manner of the early life of the dead man.

At the conclusion of the sermon, Washington Lodge of Elks performed their funeral service over their departed brother. All those taking part were members of the Grand Lodge, to which Dr. Leach belonged. The service was performed by District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler John C. Maxwell, Esteemed Leading Knight Frank O'Connor of Norfolk, Grand Exalted Ruler E.B. Hay, Past Grant Trustee Thaddens Sailor, Chaplain George D. Scott and Esquire F.B. Clarkson.

Following the service of the Elks came the Knights Templar ceremonies by De Molay Commandery, No. 4, K.T., in full uniform. John O'Neil conducted the solemn services of the Knights Templar, assisted by Gen. Smith as prelate, while the commandery joined in the responses. Gen. Smith offered a touching prayer and with the benediction, "Peace to his ashes," the services concluded.

New Jerusalem Lodge, No. 9, F.A.A.M., then took charge of the body and at the grave the burial rites of the order were performed.

The Late Dr. Leach's Will

The will of the late Dr. Hamilton E. Leach was filed today. It is dated May 4, 1888 and he leaves his estate to his mother "she to take care of my son, if necessary, as far as supplying his needs and wants are concerned and the limited means left will permit."

The Evening Star, May 26, 1892

Dr. Leach Welcomed Home

Dr. Hamilton E. Leach, who has been abroad in Europe for some time returned home last night. A large number of ladies and gentlemen met him at the depot and escorted him to his residence.

Dr. Leach was an excellent surgeon, having performed in this city some of the most difficult, yet successful, operations known to surgical science.

Dr. Leach had considerable dramatic talent and was complimented several years ago by Tony Pastor by the offer of an engagement. He was a member of the Order of Elks, having served three terms as grand exalted ruler of the order. In 1888 he made a tour of the country in the interest of the order. He was also a prominent member of the Masonic order, being a thirty-second degree man and also a member of the Mystic Shrine and DeMolay Mounted Commandery, K.T. He was a Knight of Pythias and also a member of the Washington Light Infantry Corps, being surgeon of the first battalion.

Preparing for the Funeral

Dr. Leach was a member of so many organizations and had so many close personal friends that the arrangements for the funeral in detail cannot be fixed without consulting a large number of people. It was the wish of Dr. Leach that his body be taken in charge by the Knights Templar and that he be buried from the Scottish Rite hall. These two requests will of course be carried out. The body will be watched by details of the knights and either on Wednesday evening or Thursday morning will be taken to the Scottish Rite Temple, where it will lie in state. On Thursday, at either 2 or 3 o'clock, the funeral services of the church will be preached by Rev. Dr. Meader, after which the services of the Elks and Nights Templar will take place. The interment will take place in Congressional cemetery. The body will be accompanied to the grave by a large number of organizations and other friends. Over the grave the rites of the blue lodge will be performed. Accompanying the body to the cemetery will be the Light Infantry, the Elks, De Molay Commandery Knights Templar, Nights of Pythias and many detached officers of the National Guard.

Last Sad Rites Performed Over the Remains of Dr. H.E. Leach

It was with sad hearts that the hundreds of friends of the late Dr. Hamilton Leach bade a last farewell to his remains at Congressional Cemetery yesterday afternoon. As told in The Star, the funeral services took place at 3 o'clock at the Scottish Rites cathedral on G street. The body was guarded by a detail from De Molay Mounted Commandery while the ceremonies were presided over by William Oscar Roome, venerable master of Mithras Lodge of Perfection. Rev. James H. Lemon preached the sermon and told in a touching manner of the early life of the dead man.

At the conclusion of the sermon, Washington Lodge of Elks performed their funeral service over their departed brother. All those taking part were members of the Grand Lodge, to which Dr. Leach belonged. The service was performed by District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler John C. Maxwell, Esteemed Leading Knight Frank O'Connor of Norfolk, Grand Exalted Ruler E.B. Hay, Past Grant Trustee Thaddens Sailor, Chaplain George D. Scott and Esquire F.B. Clarkson.

Following the service of the Elks came the Knights Templar ceremonies by De Molay Commandery, No. 4, K.T., in full uniform. John O'Neil conducted the solemn services of the Knights Templar, assisted by Gen. Smith as prelate, while the commandery joined in the responses. Gen. Smith offered a touching prayer and with the benediction, "Peace to his ashes," the services concluded.

New Jerusalem Lodge, No. 9, F.A.A.M., then took charge of the body and at the grave the burial rites of the order were performed.

Lear, (Infant Daughter) Infant daughter of Maria Lear	d. 24 Mar 1828		R28/12
Lear, Benjamin Lincoln Only son of Tobias and Polly Lear (Tobias' first wife). Born in Washington's early "white house" in Philadelphia, Benjamin was named after Portsmouth's Col. Benjamin Lincoln, but his godfather was President George Washington. Benjamin was only two when his mother Polly died and he spent most of his childhood either with his grandmother in New Hampshire or in boarding school.  The National Intelligencer, October 2, 1832 This morning, after a very short illness, Benjamin Lincoln Lear, Esq. This sudden and melancholy event will cast a deep gloom over all who knew our esteemed fellow citizen.  Mr. Lear was a highly respectable member of the Washington Bar, where his talents and sterling worth had endeared him to all his professional associates, and secured to him honor and success.  In the various relations of life, as a son, a husband, and a citizen, Mr. Lear faithfully discharged all his duties. His amiable manners, his high-toned honor and benevolence, formed a character seldom surpassed, and placed him high in the confidence of his fellow citizens, who will long and affectionately cherish his memory.  His friends and acquaintances are requested to attend his funeral, which will take place this day, at 12 o'clock, from his late residence.  The Members of the Washington Bar are requested to attend at the City Hall this morning at 10 o'clock, to make arrangements to attend the funeral of their late lamented associate, Benjamin L. Lear, Esq.  The National Intelligencer, June 22, 1816 Fourth of July At a meeting of the Committee of Arrangement for the celebration of the approaching Anniversary of American Independence, it was determined that Benjamin Lincoln Lear, Esq. be invited to pronounce a public Oration on the occasion; and that William S. Radcliff, Esq. be invited to read the Declaration of Independence, prior to the delivery of the Oration. The Committee have ascertained, that the gentlemen named will comply with the requests made of them.  Will of Benjamin L. Lear, of Washington Co., D.C. (dtd. June 27, 1832, probated Nov. 9, 1832, Will Book 4) To mother Mrs. Frances D. Lear, and to wife Louisa, equally, all furniture, plate, property and effects in my dwelling house excepting legacies stated.. To mother Frances D. Lear, all ground held by John and James Williams under lease, at rent of $78/72/yearly; my pew in St. John's Church, and debt due to me from that church, being originally $200; to her all debts due me from the estate of Capt. Robert Henley, and interest in deed of trust from him to William D. Henley and myself t secure that debt; $760 debt of his estate from Jan. 1, 1819, and $333 lent him while at Charlestown, as charged in my account Book B, with interest; with taxes paid on his lots (other than occupied by me, on which is the dwelling house), ever since 1817; I occupied the house on Lot 15 in Square 75; watch that was my honored father's with his seal and the watch he gave me, at her death to my cousin George W. Storer's children. To cousin Miss Mary Lear Storer, all property in Portsmouth, at her death to Lincoln Lear Storer, the son of my cousin George W. Storer; to her all articles of furniture and plate in my possession which belonged to my grandmother; to Lincoln Lear Storer the two lots of ground owned by me in Square 70 in City of Washington. To cousin George Washington Storer, my gold watch with chain and seal, to be worn by him and given to his son Lincoln Lear Storer. To Mrs. Lucy Chamberlain, the use and occupation of the dwelling house in Portsmouth which she now occupies ... as compensation for her kind and faithful services to my grandmother and all the family. My houses in Square 169, opposite the War Office, and house in Square 225 on Pennsylvania Ave., may be reserved from sale, because I consider them the most valuable part of my property; last held by John and James Williams, after death of mother, to wife. To wife Louisa Lear, during her life, all residue of estate, and all rents owing. Exrs.: Col. George Bomford; Capt. John D. Henley; William D. Lines On the lamented death of Mrs. Benj. Lincoln Lear
List! 'Tis the dirge of a soul that is fled, And In! the processions, in solemn array, Moves slowly along to the place of the dead, With the relics of one that is passing away.
But why should I weep? Perhaps it is one, Who has outlived each tie that Chad bound him; And cares worn and aged, Forsaken and lone, He joy'd that his feeble existence was done, To escape from the solitude 'round him.
On no! -- 'Tis the hearse of Maria -- who died In youth, with her relatives near her, With husband, and mother, and friends, by her side, And all that to life could endear her. Beloved, and loving, with a youthful heart, How awful is the mandate to depart!
But yesterday I saw her, newly wed, The smile of love and joy upon her brow, The lily garland twined around her head, As cold and pale as her poor body now.
And now they bear her in funeral gloom, To her cold cheerless mansion -- to the tomb? But 'tis her anguish'd friends, not her I weep; The virtuous know of joys beyond the tomb; And she will waken from her transient sleep, To meet, in other worlds, a brighter doom.

Lear, Tobias d. 11 Oct 1816 54 yrs. R28/14

Tobias Lear was born in 1762. From 1786 he was the private secretary of George Washington and resided at Mt. Vernon as a member of the family and tutor to Mrs. Washington's grandchildren. He received $200 per year. He published "Observations on the River Potomack, The County Adjacent and the City of Washington" in 1793. He was present at Washington's bedside on his death and arranged his funeral. He received 360 acres in the will of George Washington. In 1802 he served as U.S. Consul to Santo Domingo and in 1804 as Counsel General at Algiers. In his later years he was a clerk at the War Department. He committed suicide October 11, 1816.

The National Intelligencer, August 2, 1814

Tobias Lear, has, we learn, been appointed by the President to the office of Accountant of the War Department, vice William Simmons removed.

The National Intelligencer, October 12, 1816.

In this city yesterday, suddenly, Col. Tobias Lear, Accountant of the Department of War. His private life was exemplary and he had filled various public stations under successive administrations with deserved reputation. His loss is deeply lamented by his family and friends.

Dictionary of American Biography

September 19, 1762 - October 11, 1816. Consular Officer. Son of Colonel Tobias Lear and Mary (Stilson) Lear; born at Portsmouth, N.H. His father was a prosperous shipmaster, and later a farmer. Tobias Lear graduated at Harvard in 1783, and traveled and studied in Europe. This led to his engagement as Private Secretary to General George Washington after his retirement to Mount Vernon in 1785, which position he held seven years, endearing himself to Washington and his family and becoming a life-long friend. While at Mount Vernon he published "Observations on the River Potomack, the Country Adjacent, and the City of Washington" (1793), probably the earliest separate monograph on the District of Columbia.

In 1790 he married Mary (Polly) Long of Portsmouth N.H., who died in 1793. He then went abroad carrying letters of introduction from Washington and Jefferson; returned in 1794 and settled in Alexandria, Va. Was elected President of the Potomac Canal Company in 1795, and that year married Frances (Bassett) Washington, a niece of Martha Washington and the widow of George Augustine, Washington's nephew. After her death, he married Frances Dandridge Henley, another niece of Mrs. Washington. In 1799, when war was imminent, Washington appointed him his military secretary, with rank of Colonel, and Lear remained with him until his death, and received a substantial legacy from him.

In 1801 he was appointed by President Jefferson as Consul at Santo Domingo, a difficult and dangerous post at that time. After General LeClerc, sent by Napoleon, took possession of the island, Lear was forced to return to America. He was then named Consul to Algiers, with power to negotiate a treaty with Tripoli and adjust affairs with any of the Barbary rulers. He was tactful and well suited for this work. He made a treaty with Morocco, kept peace with Algiers, and adjusted affairs with Tunisia.

Since the loss of the "Philadelphia", 300 prisoners had been held at Tripoli. A treaty had been discussed for two years, when suddenly, in June 1805, Lear signed an agreement with the Pasha acceding ransom for those American prisoners. This treaty was upheld by the Government, but became a political issue. Opponents of the administration felt that in view of the fleet being in the Mediterranean and land operations in progress under William Eaton, Navy Agent to the Barbary States, no money should have been provided. It is not known why he made this hasty treaty; perhaps because of seemingly groundless fear of the naval officers for the safety of the prisoners, because of his own "passion for peace", or because he felt certain of securing liberal terms at that time. He remained in Algiers until the beginning of the War of 1812, at which time the Dey, expecting the United States to be defeated by Great Britain, gave him summary orders to leave.

Arriving in Washington under the cloud of the ill-timed treaty with Tripoli, Lear found his diplomatic career at an end. He was made accountant for the War Department, and on October 11, 1816, he committed suicide, leaving no explanation of his deed.

Ely, Selden Marvin, "The District of Columbia In The American Revolution and Patriots of the Revolutionary Period Who Are Interred in the District or In Arlington," Columbia Historical Society, Vol 21, pp. 128-154

The remains of Tobias Lear, the private secretary of George Washington and foreign emissary, repose in Congressional Cemetery. Some reports include Lear as worthy of Revolutionary honors. He came of a patriot family and a "Tobias Lear" signed a petition to the State Committee of Safety from Portsmouth, N.H., May 5, 1777. Reliable biographies give the date of his birth September 19, 1762, and this would make his age such as to cast doubt on his signing the petition. The signature is probably that of his father, Capt. Tobias Lear, Sr. The career of Tobias Lear, Jr., seems to have begun after he was graduated from Harvard in 1783.

The Evening Star, May 3, 1907, p. 1  Washington Man Killed  Louis Ledden Shot By George Garrett, Colored  Deed Believed by Officials to Have Been Deliberate --  Story of Alleged Joint  Alexandria, Va., May 3, 1907 Louis Ledden, a Washington paperhanger, thirty-four years of age, was shot and killed yesterday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock in an alleged "dope" joint at Rosslyn, Alexandria county, by George Garrett, colored, who resides at 1832 11th street northwest, Washington. Immediately after the shooting Garrett gave himself up to Deputy Sheriffs Howard Field and J.H. Collins, and is a prisoner in the Alexandria county jail charged with murder. The remains of Ledden were this afternoon turned over to Undertaker McCarthy of Washington and prepared for burial. Coroner Ashton of Alexandria county held an inquest at 7 o'clock last night, and after the examination of three witnesses the jury gave a verdict to the effect that Ledden came to his death from a gunshot wound from a pistol in the hands of George Garrett. The pistol was of a .32-caliber pattern, and the bullet entered to the right of the median line and shattered a portion of the breastbone. Ledden lived about five minutes after the fatal shot had been fired. The inquest was held at the house where the tragedy occurred, and the first witness to testify was Hillman Hemphill, colored. He claimed that the two men were playing "soldier," when the pistol is supposed to have gone off accidentally. Margaret Burnstein, alias Margaret Langdon, of Washington, stated that she did not witness the shooting, but heard the report of the gun, when Claude Evans came in and said: "Beat it." After which she secured her coat and left the premises. The substance of the testimony of Claude Evans was that the men were friends. Interview Denied  A Star reporter called at the county jail this morning for the purpose of seeing the alleged murderer, but was informed that strict orders had been elft to allow no one to see Garrett. It is supposed that the object of this is to prevent any one giving cocaine to the accused. It is stated that Garrett claims the killing of Ledden was purely accidental. The inquest developed but little information, but the county authorities are firm in their belief that the murder was a deliberate one. In less than two hours after the murder the following persons were taken into custody and are being held as witnesses: Margaret Burnstein, alias Margaret Langdon, twenty-four years of age, who resides at 2021 Sherman avenue northwest; Bessie Kemper, colored, forty-two Rummage court southeast; Hillman Hemphill, colored, 13th and C streets northwest; John Sedgwick, colored, 2730 P street northwest; Dr. William Phillips, 152 W street northwest. Scene of the Killing  The establishment where the murder took place was formerly operated as a saloon, and is within a short distance of Aqueduct bridge. There has been considerable talk, it is said, concerning the place of late, which is alleged to be frequented largely by Washingtonians. The utmost secrecy is said to have been observed, and patrons were required to push a bell on the gate and afterward give a countersign, which is said to have been "G."

Name	Birth/Death	Age	Range/Site

It is also asserted that patrons after being admitted and who asked for cocaine were promptly ejected, as the word of the house is said to have been "junk." For this reason, it is claimed, it has been utterly impossible for the county officials to get any information against the alleged "joint."

A short time ago the grand jury of Alexandria county investigated an article published in a county paper concerning the place, but failed to return any presentments owing to insufficient evidence.

The weapon with which the murder was committed was found today under the rear of the house where the deed was committed.

Lee, Anna Bell	d. 13 Aug 1909		R93/E-3

Lee. On Friday, August 13, 1909, at the residence of her parents, Anna Bell, the beloved and youngest daughter of Samuel and Julia A. Lee.

'Twas eventide when the Master's voice
Called softly, "Come and rest;
My suffering child, come now and lay
Thy head upon My breast."

She smiled and sweetly answered "Yes,
My mind on Thee is stayed;
And though through the valley of death I walk,
With Thee I'm not afraid."

Safe through that valley deep and dark
He led her all the way;
All through that dark and dreary night,
To everlasting day.

Then through the pearly gates she swept,
Forever with Him to dwell.
"Well done," He whispered, "forever wear
Thy crown of immortelles."

Funeral from her parents' residence, 809 4 1/2 street southwest, Tuesday, August 17, at 2:30 o'clock p.m., thence to Fifth Baptist Church, E street between 6th and 7th streets southwest. Friends and relatives invited. Interment at Congressional Cemetery.

Once again the reaper, with silent tread,
In the still, gray dawn of day;
Has entered our midst, without warning or fear,
And taken our boy away.

Taken him just in manhood's pride,
Just when he seemed most dear;
Just when the laurels he strove to win
Shone on his brow so clear.

But we know he is safe in that beautiful land,
Free from all sorrow and care,
Where so many loved ones, we scarce them can count,
Were waiting to welcome him there.

And some day again, though we know not when,
But 'twill be an endless joy.
Where face to face, at that great white throne,
We'll meet our darling boy.

Dorothy Vandegrift Lee; Longtime D.C. Civic Leader

Dorothy Vandegrift Lee, 85, who had been active in conservation and civic associations here for many years, died yesterday at her home, "Lee Haven," on Newark Street N.W.

Her late husband, Cazenove Gardner Lee, a genealogist who died in 1945; founded the Society of Lees of Virginia. Mrs. Lee was one of the first directors of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation (now Association) which raised funds to restore Stratford Hall, the Lee birthplace in Virginia.

Mrs. Lee had her husband's "Lee Chronicle" published in 1957. She gave his historical books and papers to the Alexandria Library.

Born in Wilmington, Del., she was a graduate of Vassar College. She provided storage space in her basement for many of the books collected for the Vassar book sales here.

For many years Mrs. Lee was a trustee of the National Parks and Conservation Association. She also had been an honorary vice president of the Audubon Naturalist Society of the Middle Atlantic States and a member of the Wilderness Society and Chesapeake Bay Foundation.

Six years ago, she was a delegate to the International Union for the Conservation of Nature held in Kenya.

A member of the National Trust for Historic Preservation and the historical societies of Virginia and Delaware, Mrs. Lee was a former member of the Committee of 100 on the Federal City.

Mrs. Lee led a drive to raise funds for building the Cleveland Park Library, was active in the Cleveland Park Citizens Association and edited the booklet, "Cleveland Park."

She leaves two sons, Richard H. and Lewis V., of Greenwich, Conn.; a daughter, Mrs. Walter Mahony of Bedford, N.Y.; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held at 4 p.m., Sunday at the home, 3542 Newark St., N.W. The family suggests expressions of sympathy be in the form of contributions to the Robert E. Lee Memorial Association, Stratford Hall, Stratford, Va.

Coroner Will Hold Inquest Wednesday to Fix Responsibility

The captain said he heard the noise caused by the wheel of his boat striking against something and it was his opinion that a board or log had been struck. He was surprised when he heard later that a boat had been struck and its occupants thrown. Capt. E.S. Randall, president of the Randall line of steamers, was an interested spectator. Attorneys Brandenburg & Brandenburg were in attendance as the legal representatives of the widow of the victim of the accident, while Attorney John E. Taylor, secretary of the Capital Yacht Club, was on hand looking after the interests of the club and owner of the tender. The hearing was not concluded when this report closed.

Went Over the Course

Before the taking of testimony was begun the coroner, deputy coroner and jurors were taken on the police boat over the course followed by the steamers Pentz and Randall Sunday night. Coroner Nevitt took his position in the pilot house and pointed out the places of interest to the jury. He explained how the steamers are in the habit of coming into the slips from near the arsenal under one bell and how it is necessary for them to make turns from the channel in order to reach the wharves. Then the party visited the Randall wharf at the foot of 8th street and the jurors were shown the position of the pilot house on the steamer Harry Randall. They were also shown the wreck of the little naphtha launch on which Lee was riding at the time the collision occurred. Russell Dean, pilot of the police boat, pointed out the spot opposite the power house of the Capital Traction line where the body of Lee was found.

The witnesses were excluded from the room. Capt. Randall's request that Capt. Barker be permitted to remain in the room was refused. Deputy Coroner Glazebrook, the first witness examined, told of the result of the autopsy. He told of bruises on the left arm and hip of the deceased and of the cut over the right eye. There was no fracture of the skull. His death, the witness stated, was due to drowning.

Inspector Wright's Testimony

Charles W. Wright, 423 Hanover street, Baltimore, United States local inspector of hulls of steam vessels, testified that he was present by direction of the Department of Commerce and Labor. Witness presented a copy of rules concerning the carrying of lights of different craft. He read one paragraph to allow that the words steam vessels and steamers meant any vessel propelled by machinery.

Dr. Nevitt then asked the witness to inform the jury of the laws governing lights on vessels, more particularly about the boats entering port.

The witness stated that the accident will be investigated by the inspectors and he preferred not to state any opinion or say anything which would have any bearing under the subsequent investigation that is to be made.

Coroner Nevitt explained to the witness that he would have to require him to answer any question which might have a bearing upon the case under investigation.

"Then," said the inspector, "you would better ask specific questions."

Witness then explained how steamboats make landings and told of the precautions that are necessary. He explained that a lookout is required in the day and lights at night.

The Right of Way

"Has a steamer the right of way over a sailing vessel or small craft?" the coroner asked.

"A sailing vessel," he answered, "generally has the right of way."

Asked about what effect the towing of a sailing vessel would have, the witness said the answer might involve an opinion. He explained that a towing steamer shall have certain lights. The vessel that is being towed is required to have a green light on the starboard side and red light on the port side, and the lights are to be arranged in the manner prescribed in the regulations.

Witness said he knew of no law or rule that will permit a motor boat to navigate without a light. Motor boats of fifteen tons or more are required to have certain officers in charge and also have to be inspected. Boats under fifteen tons do not come within the provisions of this law. The lookout of boats, he stated, is required to be near the bow of the vessel at a place other than the pilot house. The use of a searchlight in entering port is not required by law, but is optional with the owners. The only thing he knew of bearing upon the question of searchlights is a resolution of the board of inspectors which advises care in their use.

The pilot or master of a vessel, the witness stated is to be governed by the conventions in the matter of the sailing of his vessel. He is never justified in being negligent, but is supposed to act upon his best judgment.

When a towing vessel is being overtaken by a team vessel the latter is expected to signal by whistle what side he is going to take. The towing vessel is supposed to answer, and if there is any apparent reason why the approaching vessel cannot pass in safety the towing vessel is supposed to make known these conditions by several sharp blasts of the whistle.

Examination of Wrecked Craft

Witness said he visited Cumberland's boathouse this morning and examined the wrecked naphtha launch. He said the boat had been damaged mostly aft. It had the appearance of having been sunk. He found in the shoe under the stern post and end a hole which was apparently there for the use of a ruder. He failed to see any indication of a rudder having been used on the boat. There was nothing to show that there had ever been any rudder attachments to the boat.

"What is the condition of the hull of this boat?"

"At present?" asked witness.

"Yes," said the coroner.

"It's very bad."

Witness gave it as his opinion that prior to the accident the hull of the tender was seaworthy for the waters of this part of the Potomac if it had been properly manned and had the necessary steering apparatus.

"What do you mean by properly manned?"

"One man could have run it."

He said he had been in a boat where one man managed the machinery and steered the boat with a rudder. Witness read several sections of the laws and regulations regarding the movements of vessels and the lights they are to carry.

"Should a boat of the kind which you inspected this morning have carried a light after dark" the witness was asked.

"Undoubtedly she should," was his answer.

Witness said he understood that the bureau of navigation had issued a circular containing rules to govern just such boats as the one he inspected this morning. There is no exception to the rule which requires the carrying of lights between sunset and sunrise except in case of row boats, and there are rules governing them.

Juror Walker wanted to know where lights would be placed on such a boat, and he said on either side. Towing vessels, he said, are required to have two white lights, one above the other, on the stern end.

Mr. Taylor asked if it were necessary for the naphtha launch to have lights if the stern of the boat were under the bowsprit of the sailing vessel and practically covered by the latter.

The witness said he knew of no exception being made under the law.

"I will say," said the inspector, "that it was an unskillful way to tow a vessel."

Royal E. Burnham's Evidence

Royal E. Burnham, 103 C street southeast, testified that he was well acquainted with Edward G. Lee and was in the tender of the Mist with him Sunday night. The witness, who was still suffering from the nervous shock, testified that he got in the tender somewhere near Giesboro Point. He got in the tender at the request of Lee, who wanted him to sit in the stern of the tender to weight it in order that the wheel would work better in the water. Witness explained how the tender was fastened to the Mist, and said the bowsprit of the sailing yacht about covered the tender.

"This," he said, "made the combination, to all intents and purposes, one boat."

The distance between the bow of the Mist and the stern of the tender was about one foot or eighteen inches. He said that the bow line of the tender was fastened to the bowsprit of the Mist. The boats had passed the lower arsenal point when the men on the Mist told them a steamboat was coming. Witness then let out the line enough to put the boats about five or six feet apart. He did this because he anticipated the swells from the steamer might affect the tender. The steamer passed all right, the witness stated, and he then proceeded to rearrange the ropes as they had been fastened before. He did shorten the line. This was rendered necessary because there was no steering apparatus to the tender and the sailboat had to be depended upon to do the steering.

Witness said his friends on the sailing yacht called to him that there were three more steamers coming up the river, and he again let out the towline. The steamer Pentz he stated, passed between the yacht and the wall, and the sea made by it was very heavy. Witness grabbed hold of the bobstay of the yacht and called to Lee to shut off the steam, but why he did not witness could not say. The towline was broken when the Pentz passed. When witness saw the steamer Randall he shouted to people aboard to stop, but the boat did not stop. Witness swam to the yacht and was saved. Mr. Bright, he said, then jumped overboard and tried to save Lee.

When witness realized the danger he called to Lee to jump. Witness said the engine of the tender kept going and he had no means of steering the boat after the tow line snapped. There was an oar in the boat, the witness stated, and it had been used for steering. Witness said he knew nothing about running an engine, but Lee did. He knew the boat before the motor was put in it. It was new last summer and the motor was put in it a week or ten days before the accident occurred. Witness said he is a member of the Capital Yacht Club and the yacht is the club's property. He understood that the tender was owned by the Bright Brothers. Witness was unable to give any idea as to the distance between the Pentz and Randall.

Lights on the Mist

In response to questions propounded by Juror Raymond, the witness said there were running lights on the Mist, a red light on the port side and a green light on the starboard side. There were no lights displayed on the tender.

"Did the steamers blow their whistles?" the coroner asked.

"I didn't hear any," was the response of witness.

He thought the Randall was about forty feet from the tender when he first saw the steamer. The tender was then going directly toward the steamer, and the accident, he thought, occurred about 200 feet from the sea wall. Witness said the Pentz was going at a good speed when it passed within about fifty feet of the tender. The steamer Randall, he said, seemed to be going at full speed. He said the tender was entirely seaworthy and had been used successfully with an oar used for steering purposes.

In response to a question by Capt. Randall the witness said that the occupants of the tender had no control over the steering of the boat and depended wholly upon the steering of the Mist.

Edward A. Cumberland

last time when they appeared in the harbor.

E.P. Nussbaum, one of the party on the Mist, was also examined. He told of the accident and heard somebody call to Lee: "Lookout for the paddle." Witness said he assisted in getting Burnham out of the water, and Mr. Bright went overboard and endeavored to save Mr. Lee. Witness said the boats were making good time when they entered the harbor, but he hardly thought they were going at full speed.

At 1:40 o'clock the coroner announced that a recess would be taken until 3 o'clock. Coroner Nevitt stated that he will make an effort to finish the taking of testimony this afternoon, although there are a number of witnesses to be examined.

Verdict of the Jury

Lee's Death An Unavoidable Accident

Witnesses Examined at Coroner's Inquest After

The Star's Report Closed Yesterday

"Unavoidable accident" was the verdict of the coroner's jury rendered yesterday afternoon in the case of the river accident last Sunday night, in which Edward G. Lee lost his life.

After The Star's report closed yesterday afternoon additional witnesses were examined and Coroner Nevitt said he thought it was useless to have other witnesses called to repeat what had already been said. He asked counsel representing the widow and owner of the boat if they had additional witnesses they desired to call. He explained that he had no desire to cut the proceedings short or to deprive the different interests of the benefit of the testimony of any witness, they might desire the jury to hear. Counsel suggested several names and the witnesses were called and sworn. Members of the jury expressed themselves as being satisfied that there had been testimony enough heard to enable them to reach a just conclusion after these witnesses were examined and the case was submitted without the hearing of the testimony of the twenty or more additional witnesses. It required less than two minutes time for the jurors to reach the conclusion stated, and the case was finished so far as the coroner was concerned. The verdict met with the general approval of the men who are interested in the steamboat business, and who realize the difficulties that are encountered by pilots in dealing with small craft on the river after sundown, upon which the proper lights are not displayed.

Capt. Barker's Testimony

After the Star's report closed yesterday Capt. James T. Barker, who was master of the steamer Harry Randall last Sunday, testified that he knew nothing of the accident until after the boat reached the wharf. He did hear the crash of the wheel striking the boat and asked the quartermaster what he thought of it. The latter replied that he thought the wheel had struck a log or plank. Witness said he saw nothing of the dinky or fender but did see the schooner-rigged yacht. It was not until after he passed the latter craft that he noticed she had her signal lights, green and red out. He saw no stern light. Witness said he saw the main sail of the yacht up. At the time he passed the yacht his boat was running under one bell.

"Were there any other boats about the river?" the coroner asked.

"The Samuel J Pentz was ahead of me," was Capt. Barker's response.

"How far was the Pentz ahead of you?"

"I should judge about 500 yards," the witness responded. "She passed us below Buena Vista."

Witness said he saw the sails because of the reflection of the lights from the city. At the time he heard the crash passengers on the boat were singing and talking and he heard no outcry uttered by anybody on the boat. The engine, he stated, was stopped at least 100 yards below the sailing yacht. Witness said he was not requested to throw the searchlight along the river until after he had landed his 640 passengers and taken his boat out to make room for the landing of the Arrowsmith. Capt. Barker said he had a man on the "lookout" on the Sunday night trip. He said he had been in the steamboat business since 1862.

Engineer Kersey's Statement

Charles P. Kersey, engineer on the steamer Randall, testified that he was in the engine room at the time the accident occurred, and was not in a position from where he could see out on the river. The first he knew of the accident was after the boat reached the dock. Then somebody came to him and said the steamer had run over a small craft on the river. Witness said he came to a full stop about three minutes before the landing was made. This was an unusual thing to happen, but witness could not tell why it was done. Afterward he got an order to proceed under one bell.

Philandes George, deck mate on the steamer Randall, was sworn and asked what he knew of the accident.

"All I know," he said, "is that a boat ran into us."

"Could you see from where the small boat came?" he asked.

"She looked as if she came from about the bow of the yacht."

Witness said, there were two men in the boat at the time. One of them looked as if he wanted to get out of the bow and the other jumped overboard. He said he was unable to get through the crowd on the boat to notify any of the officers of what had occurred until after the boat was docked. the steamer he stated, was running under the bell at the time the accident happened.

Quartermaster Wise's Evidence

Charles P. Wise, quartermaster on the steamer Randall, testified that he was steering the Randall Sunday night. He saw the sails of the Mist, but did not see any lights. Witness said he saw the sails when he was about 300 yards distant. He heard a crash when the steamer was abreast of the yacht. Witness said that the Pentz was quite a distance ahead of the Randall at the time the accident occurred.

Chapman Slye, who was "lookout" on the steamer Randall Sunday night, testified that he was on the hurricane deck in front of the pilot house upon the trip up the river. The witness said he saw the yacht and thought the steamer was thirty or forty yards from her. He saw the signal lights on the yacht. It was the opinion of witness that the boats were a safe distance apart.

Randolph J. Eckloff, 608 A street northeast, testified that he was a passenger on the steamer Harry Randall Sunday night when he noticed the small launch, which seemed to have been driven from the swells of the steamer Pentz. Witness heard an appeal come from the small launch. As well as he could hear the man in the small boat he thought he said: "Look out there." Then he heard somebody on the boat: "You look out there, or you'll get into the wheel of the boat!" Witness heard the crash, but could not see what happened because the boat was moving. He said he attracted the attention of a number of passengers to the affair. Witness saw one man jump from the small craft. He did not call the attention of the officers of the boat to the accident as he took it for granted that they knew of it. Witness said he had a conversation with Capt. Barker, in whom he has the greatest confidence, and the latter assured him that he did not stop because he knew nothing of the accident. He declared most emphatically that he did not believe the steamers had indulged in any racing on their way up the river.

Other Witnesses

Charles Karr, 815 G street northwest, a passenger on the hurricane deck of the Randall Sunday night testified that he heard the crash and surmised that a yawl boat had been struck. Witness saw a struggling in the water. He could find nothing to throw to him. Witness said there was plenty of room for the steamer to pass the yacht, but not for the small tender. One of the passengers told him of the accident but he thought the crew of the Randall knew nothing of the accident. Witness said he had had considerable experience on the river, and thought there was an unfair division of space on the part of the steamer Sunday night. Mr. Karr said he saw the necessary lights on the yacht.

Daniel H. Fowler, a clerk in the Southern railway office, was on the yacht Grace at the time of the accident. He told the jury of the arrival of the several steamboats Sunday night and heard somebody ask: "Are you all right, George?" Witness told of the assistance he rendered, and said the search light was turned on by Capt. Barker after the passengers had left the boat.

"Were the steamers Pentz and Randall racing?" witness was asked.

"They were close together," he responded.

Robert Bruce Atkinson, living at 940 French street, was the last witness examined. He was a passenger on the steamer Harry Randall Sunday night, but was unable to add anything to the testimony that had already been given.

Death of a Well Known Citizen

Mr. Henry Lee, the well-known undertaker for over half a century, a resident of South Washington, died last evening at his residence on Maryland avenue between 4 1/2 and 6th streets, in the seventy-first year of his age, of paralysis of the heart. Mr. Lee was a native of Virginia, but had lived here since reaching his majority;. Settling in what was then known as the "Island," his business prospered so that he removed his undertaking establishment to Pennsylvania avenue, near 3d street. He gave the business his personal attention until about five years ago, when he turned it over to his sons, who established a branch of the business on Capitol Hill. Two of Mr. Lee's daughters were efficient teachers in the public schools of the fourth district, in which they graduated. Mr. Lee was one of the leading members of the Sixth Presbyterian church, and for years was an active Odd Fellow. Under the old corporation he was for several terms a member of the board of common council.

MARGUERITE DU PONT LEE

Member of Du Pont Family Died Saturday After Brief Illness

Mrs. Marguerite La Motte du Pont Lee, 73, member of the prominent Du Pont family of Delaware, who died Saturday in Homeopathic Hospital, was buried yesterday in Congressional Cemetery. Funeral services were held at the home of her son, Cazanove G. Lee, Jr., 3542 Newark street.

Mrs. Lee was the daughter of the late Eleuthere Irenee du Pont and the late Charlotte Shephard Henderson du Pont. Her parents died when she was a child. For many years Mrs. Lee had lived at the Powhatan Hotel. Her death followed a week's illness.

Lee, Marguerite DuPont, Virginia Ghosts, Berryville, Va., Virginia Book Company, 1966, Preface

Marguerite duPont Lee was extraordinary. Exceptionally warm hearted and sympathetic, she had also a keenly inquiring mind and a strong will. She was a rebel against the complacent acceptance of conventional ideas, and she was, incidentally, a serious student of psychic phenomena.

She was born in 1862, the daughter of Eleuthere Irenee duPont and Charlotte Henderson. Her father was the resident manager of the DuPont powder mill on the Brandywine near Wilmington, Delaware. Her mother, a Virginian in all her family connections, was the daughter of Archibald Henderson, the long-time commandant of the Marine Corps.

Marguerite duPont was born into the Establishment, but the DuPont Company of her youth was not a vast impersonal corporation. As manager of the powder mill, her father worked among the employees and knew them all by their first names. He lived near the plant, and the children's playmates were the children of the mill-hands who lived just across the road. Thus, Marguerite grew up in familiar contact, not only with the elite but also with the industrial working class.

Eleuthere duPont and Charlotte Henderson both died in 1877, leaving five orphans in their big house, which was actually the property of the DuPont Company. After the second funeral, Alfred duPont, their uncle, came to tell the children that the family council had decided to parcel them out one by one among their relatives. He found them armed to defend their home and fireside: Anna (17) held an axe; Marguerite (15), a rolling pin; Alfred (13), a shotgun; Maurice (11), a pistol; Louis (9), a bow and arrow. Uncle Alfred was impressed, and the youngsters kept their castle.

But there were some constraints which even Marguerite's strong will could not overcome. She was unquestionably the best skater on Brandywine Creek, but the boys would not let her take part in their hockey games. Too rough for girls, they said. They probably knew that she would be as fierce a competitor as any of them but they never allowed her to prove it.

For all her tomboyishness, Marguerite was a girl, and a beautiful one at that. Soon there were beaux calling on her, and at the age of eighteen, she chose to marry a thirty year old Virginia cousin, Cazenove Gardner Lee. She became an ornament to the society of Washington, where her husband was a lawyer. She spent her summers at "Menokin," a Lee family summer home on the outskirts of Alexandria, near the Virginia Theological Seminary. There, over the years, she entertained a long succession of Seminarians, and thus gained an extensive acquaintance among the Episcopal clergy.

In the later years of her marriage, Mrs. Lee became an aggressive campaigner for women's rights, as did many another Washington society matron.. She marched in the great Washington parade for Woman's Suffrage.

Casenove Lee died in 1912. At fifty, his widow found social life empty and unsatisfying. Her sons, Cazenove Gardner Lee, Jr., and Maurice duPont Lee, were already graduated from Cornell, and were well launched on careers in the DuPont Company. Mrs. Lee sold her fashionable residence on New Hampshire Avenue, and built a settlement house in the slums of old Georgetown. There she conducted a kindergarten, a boys' club, and various classes for the mothers of the neighborhood. At the same time, she devoted herself to less evident private benefactions, and to an endless correspondence with editors, clergymen and public authorities.

When Mrs. Lee freed herself from the demands of the social round in order to give her time to social service work in Georgetown, she also freed herself from the tyranny of fashion. A simple shirtwaist and skirt became her uniform. When she could no longer find what she wanted in the stores, she made her own clothes on her own sewing machine, and always in the same unchanging style. She depended on an old cobbler in Alexandria for a continuing supply of high button shoes, but when he died, she had to yield on that point.

After ten years in Georgetown, Mrs. Lee turned over her settlement house to the Salvation Army, and retired to a suite in the Powhatan Hotel. From there, she continued her private charities and her correspondence, but she also found time to indulge her interest in psychic phenomena, and to collect the stories that make up this book. She was Virginian enough to know that the stories were largely legendary, but at the same time, she was prepared to believe that underlying them, there was some genuine, inexplicable psychic manifestation.

Mrs. Lee died in 1936. Her spirit remains a strong presence among those who knew her.

Ludwell Lee Montague.

A Representative from Virginia; born at "Leesylvania," in Prince William County, Va., January 20, 1761; pursued English and classical studies in private schools; attended William and Mary College, Williamsburg,

TOMB OF RICHARD BLAND LEE, IN CONGRESSIONAL CEMETERY.

Va.; member of the State house of delegates 1784-1788; elected to the 1st through 3rd Congresses (March 4, 1789 - March 3, 1795); unsuccessful candidate for reelection in 1794 to the 4th Congress; again a member of the State house of delegates 1796 and 1799-1806; moved to Washington, D.C., about 1815; appointed by President Madison in 1816 commissioner to adjudicate claims arising out of the loss or destruction of property during the War of 1812; appointed by President Monroe in 1819 judge of the Orphans' Court of the District of Columbia and served until his death in Washington, D.C., on March 12, 1827; interment in the Congressional Cemetery.

Born to Henry (Light Horse Harry) and Lucy Grymes Lee. Educated by tutors at Chantilly and at the College of William and Mary graduating in 1781. He sat in Virginia's General Assembly as a delegate from Loudoun County and, in 1789, was the first person elected from the northern Virginia district to the new federal Congress. He was elected to the 1st - 3rd Congresses. He lost his seat in 1800 for supporting Jefferson and Hamilton's proposal that the federal government assume the debts of the states to strengthen the role of the federal government. For their votes in favor of the proposal, Richard Bland Lee and fellow Virginian, Alexander White, received the good news that the new capital would be built at the juncture of the Potomac and Anacostia Rivers.

After his initial successes, Richard Bland Lee fell into poverty and disrepute as a result of his brother's (Light Horse Harry Lee) financial misdealings and investment disasters. He was forced to sell the Sully Plantation to Francis Lighthorse Lee (son of Richard Henry Lee) in 1808 and retired first to Alexandria and then Washington. His pleas to President Madison resulted in a position on the commission which settled claims of property damage in the War of 1812. Later he was appointed judge of the District's orphan court.

The National Intelligencer, March 13, 1827

At his residence, in this City, yesterday afternoon, about four o'clock, Richard Bland Lee, Esq. aged 65 years. After suffering a severe and painful illness of many weeks duration, he finished his course with the resignation of a philosopher and the hopes and consolations of a sincere Christian. An affectionate family, and a large circle of attached friends, lament his death.

Mr. Lee was a Member of the First Congress of the United States from the State of Virginia, and served in the House of Representatives for several years. He was, in that important public service, a contemporary of Mr. Madison, and enjoyed his friendship and esteem, of which, in later days, he received distinguished marks. He was a man of great public virtue, of honorable principles, and of talents of a high order.

With the early history of this City, to which he removed his residence from Virginia, about twelve years ago, his name is or ought to be intimately connected: for he had a material agency in fixing the Seat of Government where it now stands, on the banks of the Potomac. Ever since his removal to this place, he is known to all of us to have been an active and public-spirited citizen.

As a Judge of the Orphans' Court for this county, which office he has held for several years, he has distinguished himself as an able and faithful Magistrate, the protector of the widow and the orphan, and the equitable administrator of the laws.

Whoever knew Mr. Lee well was his friend: if he had an enemy on earth, it was because that enemy knew him not.

The friends and acquaintance of the deceased are invited to attend the Funeral, without further notice, from his late residence, tomorrow (Wednesday) morning at 10 o'clock.

Dick Lee, Handler of Game Cocks, Succumbs in Hospital

Dick Lee, for many years a handler of game cocks and well known in sporting circles, died yesterday at the age of eighty-two years. He had been taken to the Washington Asylum Hospital by the board of charities, being in a condition of starvation. His body has been turned over to a sister for burial.

Lee lived in a little cabin on the Anacostia road, opposite East Washington Park. There he had an old race horse, a gift from "Mars" Cassidy; a dog and some game fowl. He was compelled finally to eat his game chickens in order to ward off starvation, and when the last one had been eaten, with no more food and no money with which to buy it, Lee is said to have starved slowly to the point of death.

Without warning he went, no sad good-by.
No last farewell, there was no one nigh.
For the reaper came, in the hush of night.
And made dark our home, that was so bright.

We loved him so, we did not know
That soon, so soon, he would have to go.
We could not see, ere another morn.
How crushed our hearts, how sad, how forlorn.

And our faith is stronger, our love more pure.
Our loss, so deep, less hard to endure.
For we know that Christ led him all the way
Through that darkened valley to that perfect day.

pp. 372-373: Theodorick (5th gen.), the fourth son of Henry Lee (4) [Henry (3), Richard (2), Richard (1)] and Lucy Grymes, his wife, was born on the 3d of September, 1766; died on the 10th of April, 1849, at Eckington," the county seat, near Washington, of his son-in-law, Joseph Gales. Of Mr. Lee, his granddaughter writes: "Theodorick Lee was a gentleman in the highest sense of the word; conspicuous for benevolence and truth of character, and strong practical sense; of fine, intellectual countenance, with most kindly expressive dark gray eyes. He was given to agricultural pursuits, and was possessed of a fair fortune ... He married Catherine Hite, of Winchester, the youngest of the three daughters of Mr. John Hite of that place; like her sisters, Miss Hite was not only distinguished for intelligence, and beauty of person, but possessed unusual accomplishments for that day, having acquired a thorough knowledge of French and music. Mr. John Hite, her father, was the son of Jacob Hite and grandson of Baron Jost Hite, of Germany, who came to this country during the Revolutionary war, and settled on a large tract of land in Pennsylvania; his son Jacob moved to Berkeley county, Va., and purchased 3,000 acres of General Charles Lee; later he sold this property and removed to South Carolina, where subsequently some of the family was massacred by the Indians . . . The first wife of Jacob Hite was a sister of President Madison's father."

Theodorick Lee had one son and three daughters:

Carline Hite, married Samuel Purviance Walker of Baltimore
John Hite
Sarah Juliana Maria, married Joseph Gales, Jr.
Catharine Hite, married Dr. George May.

Death of "Bill" Lee

Noted Washington Character, Who Boasted of Military Achievements

The passing of another Washington character is noted. William H. Lee, more familiarly known as "Bill" Lee, was buried late yesterday afternoon at Congressional cemetery, the services being held at Lee's undertaking establishment. For thirty-five years past "Bill" Lee has been a familiar figure on the streets of this city, and he was known by nearly all the old residents because of his quaint ways and his vivid imaginings. During recent years he propelled a hand-cart about town and peddled brooms.

Lee imagined he was the commander of a battery of artillery which consisted of fifty guns, and in consequence of this belief he always wore a sort of uniform decorated with what he termed medals of honor. These medals consisted of tobacco tags and other articles that had a bright surface. Bill never tired of telling of the important part his big battery played in "the battle of Cumberland, Md.," and the "seige of Alexandria, Va." He related the details of each affair minutely and described with pride the part he had taken in them. At the "siege of Alexandria," he said, he wielded his big and terrible sword and cut off the heads of nearly 200 of the enemy. When asked who were the enemies he encountered there he always replied:

"They were a mixture of foreigners, anarchists and Indians, and they were tough fighters."

At the "battle of Cumberland," Lee said his battery mowed down two thousand of the enemy who attempted to take the place and to capture Washington. Several years ago Lee hired himself to building contractors in this city to guard houses in course of construction at night. He dignified his position as watchman by having made a big white metal badge inscribed "watchman," which he wore on his blue uniform, which he had made especially for him to give him "extinction," as he expressed it.

Withal Bill Lee was a good-natured, harmless man and had many good friends who liked to hear him tell of his experiences with his battery. He was also charitable and never hesitated to divide his small earnings with any one who he thought needed the money more than he did. He had no bad traits and was generally well thought of by all who knew him. He was about fifty-three years of age and was born and reared in Washington.

His Death Sudden

Coroner to Ascertain the Cause of William J. Lee's Demise

An autopsy will probably be held at the District morgue today by Deputy Coroner White to ascertain the cause of the death of William J. Lee, who died suddenly last evening at his boarding house, 416 5th street northeast.

Mr. Lee was a telegraph operator about thirty-eight years of age. He had occupied a room at the home of William B. Rock for the past two months. Yesterday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock he went home, and while on the pavement in the front of the house he told several children he was ill and that he had suffered a sun stroke. He entered the house and laid down on his bed.

A short time later Mr. Rock arrived at his home. When told that his boarder was ill he went to the room. Dr. G.T. Safford was later called to the house. After administering treatment, he ordered that the ambulance of the Casualty Hospital be summoned to remove Mr. Lee to the hospital. He died, however, before the ambulance arrived. The body was later taken to the morgue.

Mr. Lee had a brother, George Lee, who is a train dispatcher at the Union station. He is said to have been at one time private secretary to a number of government officials. Photographs, including those of Roosevelt and Fairbanks, were found in his room. These he told friends, had been presented to him by those officials.

Lee, Hon. Zaccheus Collins b. 1805 - d. 26 Nov 1859 53 yrs. R27/170

Lee. At eight minutes before 5 o'clock this morning, at his residence in the city of Baltimore, in the 54th year of his age, the Hon. Zaccheus Collins Lee, Judge of the Supreme Court of that city. This melancholy event will sadden many hearts in Washington, where Judge Lee had long resided before his removal to Baltimore. He was a gentleman of high integrity and honor, of a kind heart, of fine talents, and had acquired an extensive reputation as an eloquent and effective public speaker. For some months before his death, his health had been impaired; but the immediate illness which proved fatal was of only a few days' duration. He has been taken from us in the prime of life, and in the midst of a career of public usefulness, to the deep affliction of his bereaved family and friends, and the regrets of the community of which he was an esteemed and honored member.

The Evening Star, November 29, 1859

The Funeral of Judge Lee was largely attended in Baltimore yesterday, and the remains were brought to this city for interment in the Congressional cemetery. Judge Lee prior to his death expressed a desire to be buried by the side of his mother in this cemetery and the request has been complied. The remains were accompanied to this city by the Rev. Dr. Cummins of Baltimore (formerly of Trinity church in this city) by whom the funeral services were performed.

Lee. On Friday, August 13, 1909, at the residence of her parents, Anna Bell, the beloved and youngest daughter of Samuel and Julia A. Lee.

'Twas eventide when the Master's voice
Called softly, "Come and rest;
My suffering child, come now and lay
Thy head upon My breast."

She smiled and sweetly answered "Yes,
My mind on Thee is stayed;
And though through the valley of death I walk,
With Thee I'm not afraid."

Safe through that valley deep and dark
He led her all the way;
All through that dark and dreary night,
To everlasting day.

Then through the pearly gates she swept,
Forever with Him to dwell.
"Well done," He whispered, "forever wear
Thy crown of immortelles."

Funeral from her parents' residence, 809 4 1/2 street southwest, Tuesday, August 17, at 2:30 o'clock p.m., thence to Fifth Baptist Church, E street between 6th and 7th streets southwest. Friends and relatives invited. Interment at Congressional Cemetery.

In the still, gray dawn of day;
Has entered our midst, without warning or fear,
And taken our boy away.

Taken him just in manhood's pride,
Just when he seemed most dear;
Just when the laurels he strove to win
Shone on his brow so clear.

But we know he is safe in that beautiful land,
Free from all sorrow and care,
Where so many loved ones, we scarce them can count,
Were waiting to welcome him there.

And some day again, though we know not when,

Dorothy Vandegrift Lee; Longtime D.C. Civic Leader

Dorothy Vandegrift Lee, 85, who had been active in conservation and civic associations here for many years, died yesterday at her home, "Lee Haven," on Newark Street N.W.

Her late husband, Cazenove Gardner Lee, a genealogist who died in 1945; founded the Society of Lees of Virginia. Mrs. Lee was one of the first directors of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation (now Association) which raised funds to restore Stratford Hall, the Lee birthplace in Virginia.

Mrs. Lee had her husband's "Lee Chronicle" published in 1957. She gave his historical books and papers to the Alexandria Library.

Born in Wilmington, Del., she was a graduate of Vassar College. She provided storage space in her basement for many of the books collected for the Vassar book sales here.

For many years Mrs. Lee was a trustee of the National Parks and Conservation Association. She also had been an honorary vice president of the Audubon Naturalist Society of the Middle Atlantic States and a member of the Wilderness Society and Chesapeake Bay Foundation.

Six years ago, she was a delegate to the International Union for the Conservation of Nature held in Kenya.

A member of the National Trust for Historic Preservation and the historical societies of Virginia and Delaware, Mrs. Lee was a former member of the Committee of 100 on the Federal City.

Mrs. Lee led a drive to raise funds for building the Cleveland Park Library, was active in the Cleveland Park Citizens Association and edited the booklet, "Cleveland Park."

She leaves two sons, Richard H. and Lewis V., of Greenwich, Conn.; a daughter, Mrs. Walter Mahony of Bedford, N.Y.; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held at 4 p.m., Sunday at the home, 3542 Newark St., N.W. The family suggests expressions of sympathy be in the form of contributions to the Robert E. Lee Memorial Association, Stratford Hall, Stratford, Va.

Coroner Will Hold Inquest Wednesday to Fix Responsibility

The captain said he heard the noise caused by the wheel of his boat striking against something and it was his opinion that a board or log had been struck. He was surprised when he heard later that a boat had been struck and its occupants thrown. Capt. E.S. Randall, president of the Randall line of steamers, was an interested spectator. Attorneys Brandenburg & Brandenburg were in attendance as the legal representatives of the widow of the victim of the accident, while Attorney John E. Taylor, secretary of the Capital Yacht Club, was on hand looking after the interests of the club and owner of the tender. The hearing was not concluded when this report closed.

Went Over the Course

Before the taking of testimony was begun the coroner, deputy coroner and jurors were taken on the police boat over the course followed by the steamers Pentz and Randall Sunday night. Coroner Nevitt took his position in the pilot house and pointed out the places of interest to the jury. He explained how the steamers are in the habit of coming into the slips from near the arsenal under one bell and how it is necessary for them to make turns from the channel in order to reach the wharves. Then the party visited the Randall wharf at the foot of 8th street and the jurors were shown the position of the pilot house on the steamer Harry Randall. They were also shown the wreck of the little naphtha launch on which Lee was riding at the time the collision occurred. Russell Dean, pilot of the police boat, pointed out the spot opposite the power house of the Capital Traction line where the body of Lee was found.

The witnesses were excluded from the room. Capt. Randall's request that Capt. Barker be permitted to remain in the room was refused. Deputy Coroner Glazebrook, the first witness examined, told of the result of the autopsy. He told of bruises on the left arm and hip of the deceased and of the cut over the right eye. There was no fracture of the skull. His death, the witness stated, was due to drowning.

Inspector Wright's Testimony

Charles W. Wright, 423 Hanover street, Baltimore, United States local inspector of hulls of steam vessels, testified that he was present by direction of the Department of Commerce and Labor. Witness presented a copy of rules concerning the carrying of lights of different craft. He read one paragraph to allow that the words steam vessels and steamers meant any vessel propelled by machinery.

Dr. Nevitt then asked the witness to inform the jury of the laws governing lights on vessels, more particularly about the boats entering port.

The witness stated that the accident will be investigated by the inspectors and he preferred not to state any opinion or say anything which would have any bearing under the subsequent investigation that is to be made.

Coroner Nevitt explained to the witness that he would have to require him to answer any question which might have a bearing upon the case under investigation.

"Then," said the inspector, "you would better ask specific questions."

Witness then explained how steamboats make landings and told of the precautions that are necessary. He explained that a lookout is required in the day and lights at night.

The Right of Way

"Has a steamer the right of way over a sailing vessel or small craft?" the coroner asked.

"A sailing vessel," he answered, "generally has the right of way."

Asked about what effect the towing of a sailing vessel would have, the witness said the answer might involve an opinion. He explained that a towing steamer shall have certain lights. The vessel that is being towed is required to have a green light on the starboard side and red light on the port side, and the lights are to be arranged in the manner prescribed in the regulations.

Witness said he knew of no law or rule that will permit a motor boat to navigate without a light. Motor boats of fifteen tons or more are required to have certain officers in charge and also have to be inspected. Boats under fifteen tons do not come within the provisions of this law. The lookout of boats, he stated, is required to be near the bow of the vessel at a place other than the pilot house. The use of a searchlight in entering port is not required by law, but is optional with the owners. The only thing he knew of bearing upon the question of searchlights is a resolution of the board of inspectors which advises care in their use.

The pilot or master of a vessel, the witness stated is to be governed by the conventions in the matter of the sailing of his vessel. He is never justified in being negligent, but is supposed to act upon his best judgment.

When a towing vessel is being overtaken by a team vessel the latter is expected to signal by whistle what side he is going to take. The towing vessel is supposed to answer, and if there is any apparent reason why the approaching vessel cannot pass in safety the towing vessel is supposed to make known these conditions by several sharp blasts of the whistle.

Examination of Wrecked Craft

Witness said he visited Cumberland's boathouse this morning and examined the wrecked naphtha launch. He said the boat had been damaged mostly aft. It had the appearance of having been sunk. He found in the shoe under the stern post and end a hole which was apparently there for the use of a ruder. He failed to see any indication of a rudder having been used on the boat. There was nothing to show that there had ever been any rudder attachments to the boat.

"What is the condition of the hull of this boat?"

"At present?" asked witness.

"Yes," said the coroner.

"It's very bad."

Witness gave it as his opinion that prior to the accident the hull of the tender was seaworthy for the waters of this part of the Potomac if it had been properly manned and had the necessary steering apparatus.

"What do you mean by properly manned?"

"One man could have run it."

He said he had been in a boat where one man managed the machinery and steered the boat with a rudder. Witness read several sections of the laws and regulations regarding the movements of vessels and the lights they are to carry.

"Should a boat of the kind which you inspected this morning have carried a light after dark" the witness was asked.

"Undoubtedly she should," was his answer.

Witness said he understood that the bureau of navigation had issued a circular containing rules to govern just such boats as the one he inspected this morning. There is no exception to the rule which requires the carrying of lights between sunset and sunrise except in case of row boats, and there are rules governing them.

Juror Walker wanted to know where lights would be placed on such a boat, and he said on either side. Towing vessels, he said, are required to have two white lights, one above the other, on the stern end.

Mr. Taylor asked if it were necessary for the naphtha launch to have lights if the stern of the boat were under the bowsprit of the sailing vessel and practically covered by the latter.

The witness said he knew of no exception being made under the law.

"I will say," said the inspector, "that it was an unskillful way to tow a vessel."

Royal E. Burnham's Evidence

Royal E. Burnham, 103 C street southeast, testified that he was well acquainted with Edward G. Lee and was in the tender of the Mist with him Sunday night. The witness, who was still suffering from the nervous shock, testified that he got in the tender somewhere near Giesboro Point. He got in the tender at the request of Lee, who wanted him to sit in the stern of the tender to weight it in order that the wheel would work better in the water. Witness explained how the tender was fastened to the Mist, and said the bowsprit of the sailing yacht about covered the tender.

"This," he said, "made the combination, to all intents and purposes, one boat."

The distance between the bow of the Mist and the stern of the tender was about one foot or eighteen inches. He said that the bow line of the tender was fastened to the bowsprit of the Mist. The boats had passed the lower arsenal point when the men on the Mist told them a steamboat was coming. Witness then let out the line enough to put the boats about five or six feet apart. He did this because he anticipated the swells from the steamer might affect the tender. The steamer passed all right, the witness stated, and he then proceeded to rearrange the ropes as they had been fastened before. He did shorten the line. This was rendered necessary because there was no steering apparatus to the tender and the sailboat had to be depended upon to do the steering.

Witness said his friends on the sailing yacht called to him that there were three more steamers coming up the river, and he again let out the towline. The steamer Pentz he stated, passed between the yacht and the wall, and the sea made by it was very heavy. Witness grabbed hold of the bobstay of the yacht and called to Lee to shut off the steam, but why he did not witness could not say. The towline was broken when the Pentz passed. When witness saw the steamer Randall he shouted to people aboard to stop, but the boat did not stop. Witness swam to the yacht and was saved. Mr. Bright, he said, then jumped overboard and tried to save Lee.

When witness realized the danger he called to Lee to jump. Witness said the engine of the tender kept going and he had no means of steering the boat after the tow line snapped. There was an oar in the boat, the witness stated, and it had been used for steering. Witness said he knew nothing about running an engine, but Lee did. He knew the boat before the motor was put in it. It was new last summer and the motor was put in it a week or ten days before the accident occurred. Witness said he is a member of the Capital Yacht Club and the yacht is the club's property. He understood that the tender was owned by the Bright Brothers. Witness was unable to give any idea as to the distance between the Pentz and Randall.

Lights on the Mist

In response to questions propounded by Juror Raymond, the witness said there were running lights on the Mist, a red light on the port side and a green light on the starboard side. There were no lights displayed on the tender.

"Did the steamers blow their whistles?" the coroner asked.

"I didn't hear any," was the response of witness.

He thought the Randall was about forty feet from the tender when he first saw the steamer. The tender was then going directly toward the steamer, and the accident, he thought, occurred about 200 feet from the sea wall. Witness said the Pentz was going at a good speed when it passed within about fifty feet of the tender. The steamer Randall, he said, seemed to be going at full speed. He said the tender was entirely seaworthy and had been used successfully with an oar used for steering purposes.

In response to a question by Capt. Randall the witness said that the occupants of the tender had no control over the steering of the boat and depended wholly upon the steering of the Mist.

Edward A. Cumberland

last time when they appeared in the harbor.

E.P. Nussbaum, one of the party on the Mist, was also examined. He told of the accident and heard somebody call to Lee: "Lookout for the paddle." Witness said he assisted in getting Burnham out of the water, and Mr. Bright went overboard and endeavored to save Mr. Lee. Witness said the boats were making good time when they entered the harbor, but he hardly thought they were going at full speed.

At 1:40 o'clock the coroner announced that a recess would be taken until 3 o'clock. Coroner Nevitt stated that he will make an effort to finish the taking of testimony this afternoon, although there are a number of witnesses to be examined.

Verdict of the Jury

Lee's Death An Unavoidable Accident

The Star's Report Closed Yesterday

"Unavoidable accident" was the verdict of the coroner's jury rendered yesterday afternoon in the case of the river accident last Sunday night, in which Edward G. Lee lost his life.

After The Star's report closed yesterday afternoon additional witnesses were examined and Coroner Nevitt said he thought it was useless to have other witnesses called to repeat what had already been said. He asked counsel representing the widow and owner of the boat if they had additional witnesses they desired to call. He explained that he had no desire to cut the proceedings short or to deprive the different interests of the benefit of the testimony of any witness, they might desire the jury to hear. Counsel suggested several names and the witnesses were called and sworn. Members of the jury expressed themselves as being satisfied that there had been testimony enough heard to enable them to reach a just conclusion after these witnesses were examined and the case was submitted without the hearing of the testimony of the twenty or more additional witnesses. It required less than two minutes time for the jurors to reach the conclusion stated, and the case was finished so far as the coroner was concerned. The verdict met with the general approval of the men who are interested in the steamboat business, and who realize the difficulties that are encountered by pilots in dealing with small craft on the river after sundown, upon which the proper lights are not displayed.

Capt. Barker's Testimony

After the Star's report closed yesterday Capt. James T. Barker, who was master of the steamer Harry Randall last Sunday, testified that he knew nothing of the accident until after the boat reached the wharf. He did hear the crash of the wheel striking the boat and asked the quartermaster what he thought of it. The latter replied that he thought the wheel had struck a log or plank. Witness said he saw nothing of the dinkey or fender but did see the schooner-rigged yacht. It was not until after he passed the latter craft that he noticed she had her signal lights, green and red out. He saw no stern light. Witness said he saw the main sail of the yacht up. At the time he passed the yacht his boat was running under one bell.

"Were there any other boats about the river?" the coroner asked.

"The Samuel J Pentz was ahead of me," was Capt. Barker's response.

"How far was the Pentz ahead of you?"

"I should judge about 500 yards," the witness responded. "She passed us below Buena Vista."

Witness said he saw the sails because of the reflection of the lights from the city. At the time he heard the crash passengers on the boat were singing and talking and he heard no outcry uttered by anybody on the boat. The engine, he stated, was stopped at least 100 yards below the sailing yacht. Witness said he was not requested to throw the searchlight along the river until after he had landed his 640 passengers and taken his boat out to make room for the landing of the Arrowsmith. Capt. Barker said he had a man on the "lookout" on the Sunday night trip. He said he had been in the steamboat business since 1862.

Engineer Kersey's Statement

Charles P. Kersey, engineer on the steamer Randall, testified that he was in the engine room at the time the accident occurred, and was not in a position from where he could see out on the river. The first he knew of the accident was after the boat reached the dock. Then somebody came to him and said the steamer had run over a small craft on the river. Witness said he came to a full stop about three minutes before the landing was made. This was an unusual thing to happen, but witness could not tell why it was done. Afterward he got an order to proceed under one bell.

Philandes George, deck mate on the steamer Randall, was sworn and asked what he knew of the accident.

"All I know," he said, "is that a boat ran into us."

"Could you see from where the small boat came?" he asked.

"She looked as if she came from about the bow of the yacht."

Witness said, there were two men in the boat at the time. One of them looked as if he wanted to get out of the bow and the other jumped overboard. He said he was unable to get through the crowd on the boat to notify any of the officers of what had occurred until after the boat was docked. the steamer he stated, was running under the bell at the time the accident happened.

Quartermaster Wise's Evidence

Charles P. Wise, quartermaster on the steamer Randall, testified that he was steering the Randall Sunday night. He saw the sails of the Mist, but did not see any lights. Witness said he saw the sails when he was about 300 yards distant. He heard a crash when the steamer was abreast of the yacht. Witness said that the Pentz was quite a distance ahead of the Randall at the time the accident occurred.

Chapman Slye, who was "lookout" on the steamer Randall Sunday night, testified that he was on the hurricane deck in front of the pilot house upon the trip up the river. The witness said he saw the yacht and thought the steamer was thirty or forty yards from her. He saw the signal lights on the yacht. It was the opinion of witness that the boats were a safe distance apart.

Randolph J. Eckloff, 608 A street northeast, testified that he was a passenger on the steamer Harry Randall Sunday night when he noticed the small launch, which seemed to have been driven from the swells of the steamer Pentz. Witness heard an appeal come from the small launch. As well as he could hear the man in the small boat he thought he said: "Look out there." Then he heard somebody on the boat: "You look out there, or you'll get into the wheel of the boat!" Witness heard the crash, but could not see what happened because the boat was moving. He said he attracted the attention of a number of passengers to the affair. Witness saw one man jump from the small craft. He did not call the attention of the officers of the boat to the accident as he took it for granted that they knew of it. Witness said he had a conversation with Capt. Barker, in whom he has the greatest confidence, and the latter assured him that he did not stop because he knew nothing of the accident. He declared most emphatically that he did not believe the steamers had indulged in any racing on their way up the river.

Other Witnesses

Charles Karr, 815 G street northwest, a passenger on the hurricane deck of the Randall Sunday night testified that he heard the crash and surmised that a yawl boat had been struck. Witness saw a struggling in the water. He could find nothing to throw to him. Witness said there was plenty of room for the steamer to pass the yacht, but not for the small tender. One of the passengers told him of the accident but he thought the crew of the Randall knew nothing of the accident. Witness said he had had considerable experience on the river, and thought there was an unfair division of space on the part of the steamer Sunday night. Mr. Karr said he saw the necessary lights on the yacht.

Daniel H. Fowler, a clerk in the Southern railway office, was on the yacht Grace at the time of the accident. He told the jury of the arrival of the several steamboats Sunday night and heard somebody ask: "Are you all right, George?" Witness told of the assistance he rendered, and said the search light was turned on by Capt. Barker after the passengers had left the boat.

"Were the steamers Pentz and Randall racing?" witness was asked.

"They were close together," he responded.

Robert Bruce Atkinson, living at 940 French street, was the last witness examined. He was a passenger on the steamer Harry Randall Sunday night, but was unable to add anything to the testimony that had already been given.

Mr. Henry Lee, the well-known undertaker for over half a century, a resident of South Washington, died last evening at his residence on Maryland avenue between 4 1/2 and 6th streets, in the seventy-first year of his age, of paralysis of the heart. Mr. Lee was a native of Virginia, but had lived here since reaching his majority;. Settling in what was then known as the "Island," his business prospered so that he removed his undertaking establishment to Pennsylvania avenue, near 3d street. He gave the business his personal attention until about five years ago, when he turned it over to his sons, who established a branch of the business on Capitol Hill. Two of Mr. Lee's daughters were efficient teachers in the public schools of the fourth district, in which they graduated. Mr. Lee was one of the leading members of the Sixth Presbyterian church, and for years was an active Odd Fellow. Under the old corporation he was for several terms a member of the board of common council.

MARGUERITE DU PONT LEE

Member of Du Pont Family Died Saturday After Brief Illness
 Mrs. Marguerite La Motte du Pont Lee, 73, member of the prominent Du Pont family of Delaware, who died Saturday in Homeopathic Hospital, was buried yesterday in Congressional Cemetery. Funeral services were held at the home of her son, Cazanove G. Lee, Jr., 3542 Newark street.

Mrs. Lee was the daughter of the late Eleuthere Irenee du Pont and the late Charlotte Shephard Henderson du Pont. Her parents died when she was a child. For many years Mrs. Lee had lived at the Powhatan Hotel. Her death followed a week's illness.

Besides her son here, she leaves another son, Maurice du Pont Lee of Greenwich, Conn., and a brother, Maurice du Pont of New York City.

Lee, Marguerite DuPont, Virginia Ghosts, Berryville, Va., Virginia Book Company, 1966, Preface

Marguerite duPont Lee was extraordinary. Exceptionally warm hearted and sympathetic, she had also a keenly inquiring mind and a strong will. She was a rebel against the complacent acceptance of conventional ideas, and she was, incidentally, a serious student of psychic phenomena.

She was born in 1862, the daughter of Eleuthere Irenee duPont and Charlotte Henderson. Her father was the resident manager of the DuPont powder mill on the Brandywine near Wilmington, Delaware. Her mother, a Virginian in all her family connections, was the daughter of Archibald Henderson, the long-time commandant of the Marine Corps.

Marguerite duPont was born into the Establishment, but the DuPont Company of her youth was not a vast impersonal corporation. As manager of the powder mill, her father worked among the employees and knew them all by their first names. He lived near the plant, and the children's playmates were the children of the mill-hands who lived just across the road. Thus, Marguerite grew up in familiar contact, not only with the elite but also with the industrial working class.

Eleuthere duPont and Charlotte Henderson both died in 1877, leaving five orphans in their big house, which was actually the property of the DuPont Company. After the second funeral, Alfred duPont, their uncle, came to tell the children that the family council had decided to parcel them out one by one among their relatives. He found them armed to defend their home and fireside: Anna (17) held an axe; Marguerite (15), a rolling pin; Alfred (13), a shotgun; Maurice (11), a pistol; Louis (9), a bow and arrow. Uncle Alfred was impressed, and the youngsters kept their castle.

But there were some constraints which even Marguerite's strong will could not overcome. She was unquestionably the best skater on Brandywine Creek, but the boys would not let her take part in their hockey games. Too rough for girls, they said. They probably knew that she would be as fierce a competitor as any of them but they never allowed her to prove it.

For all her tomboyishness, Marguerite was a girl, and a beautiful one at that. Soon there were beaux calling on her, and at the age of eighteen, she chose to marry a thirty year old Virginia cousin, Cazenove Gardner Lee. She became an ornament to the society of Washington, where her husband was a lawyer. She spent her summers at "Menokin," a Lee family summer home on the outskirts of Alexandria, near the Virginia Theological Seminary. There, over the years, she entertained a long succession of Seminarians, and thus gained an extensive acquaintance among the Episcopal clergy.

In the later years of her marriage, Mrs. Lee became an aggressive campaigner for women's rights, as did many another Washington society matron.. She marched in the great Washington parade for Woman's Suffrage.

Casenove Lee died in 1912. At fifty, his widow found social life empty and unsatisfying. Her sons, Cazenove Gardner Lee, Jr., and Maurice duPont Lee, were already graduated from Cornell, and were well launched on careers in the DuPont Company. Mrs. Lee sold her fashionable residence on New Hampshire Avenue, and built a settlement house in the slums of old Georgetown. There she conducted a kindergarten, a boys' club, and various classes for the mothers of the neighborhood. At the same time, she devoted herself to less evident private benefactions, and to an endless correspondence with editors, clergymen and public authorities.

When Mrs. Lee freed herself from the demands of the social round in order to give her time to social service work in Georgetown, she also freed herself from the tyranny of fashion. A simple shirtwaist and skirt became her uniform. When she could no longer find what she wanted in the stores, she made her own clothes on her own sewing machine, and always in the same unchanging style. She depended on an old cobbler in Alexandria for a continuing supply of high button shoes, but when he died, she had to yield on that point.

After ten years in Georgetown, Mrs. Lee turned over her settlement house to the Salvation Army, and retired to a suite in the Powhatan Hotel. From there, she continued her private charities and her correspondence, but she also found time to indulge her interest in psychic phenomena, and to collect the stories that make up this book. She was Virginian enough to know that the stories were largely legendary, but at the same time, she was prepared to believe that underlying them, there was some genuine, inexplicable psychic manifestation.

Mrs. Lee died in 1936. Her spirit remains a strong presence among those who knew her.

Ludwell Lee Montague.

A Representative from Virginia; born at "Leesylvania," in Prince William County, Va., January 20, 1761; pursued English and classical studies in private schools; attended William and Mary College, Williamsburg,

TOMB OF RICHARD BLAND LEE, IN CONGRESSIONAL CEMETERY.

Va.; member of the State house of delegates 1784-1788; elected to the 1st through 3rd Congresses (March 4, 1789 - March 3, 1795); unsuccessful candidate for reelection in 1794 to the 4th Congress; again a member of the State house of delegates 1796 and 1799-1806; moved to Washington, D.C., about 1815; appointed by President Madison in 1816 commissioner to adjudicate claims arising out of the loss or destruction of property during the War of 1812; appointed by President Monroe in 1819 judge of the Orphans' Court of the District of Columbia and served until his death in Washington, D.C., on March 12, 1827; interment in the Congressional Cemetery.

Born to Henry (Light Horse Harry) and Lucy Grymes Lee. Educated by tutors at Chantilly and at the College of William and Mary graduating in 1781. He sat in Virginia's General Assembly as a delegate from Loudoun County and, in 1789, was the first person elected from the northern Virginia district to the new federal Congress. He was elected to the 1st - 3rd Congresses. He lost his seat in 1800 for supporting Jefferson and Hamilton's proposal that the federal government assume the debts of the states to strengthen the role of the federal government. For their votes in favor of the proposal, Richard Bland Lee and fellow Virginian, Alexander White, received the good news that the new capital would be built at the juncture of the Potomac and Anacostia Rivers.

After his initial successes, Richard Bland Lee fell into poverty and disrepute as a result of his brother's (Light Horse Harry Lee) financial misdealings and investment disasters. He was forced to sell the Sully Plantation to Francis Lighthorse Lee (son of Richard Henry Lee) in 1808 and retired first to Alexandria and then Washington. His pleas to President Madison resulted in a position on the commission which settled claims of property damage in the War of 1812. Later he was appointed judge of the District's orphan court.

At his residence, in this City, yesterday afternoon, about four o'clock, Richard Bland Lee, Esq. aged 65 years. After suffering a severe and painful illness of many weeks duration, he finished his course with the resignation of a philosopher and the hopes and consolations of a sincere Christian. An affectionate family, and a large circle of attached friends, lament his death.

Mr. Lee was a Member of the First Congress of the United States from the State of Virginia, and served in the House of Representatives for several years. He was, in that important public service, a contemporary of Mr. Madison, and enjoyed his friendship and esteem, of which, in later days, he received distinguished marks. He was a man of great public virtue, of honorable principles, and of talents of a high order.

With the early history of this City, to which he removed his residence from Virginia, about twelve years ago, his name is or ought to be intimately connected: for he had a material agency in fixing the Seat of Government where it now stands, on the banks of the Potomac. Ever since his removal to this place, he is known to all of us to have been an active and public-spirited citizen.

As a Judge of the Orphans' Court for this county, which office he has held for several years, he has distinguished himself as an able and faithful Magistrate, the protector of the widow and the orphan, and the equitable administrator of the laws.

Whoever knew Mr. Lee well was his friend: if he had an enemy on earth, it was because that enemy knew him not.

The friends and acquaintance of the deceased are invited to attend the Funeral, without further notice, from his late residence, tomorrow (Wednesday) morning at 10 o'clock.

Dick Lee, Handler of Game Cocks, Succumbs in Hospital

Dick Lee, for many years a handler of game cocks and well known in sporting circles, died yesterday at the age of eighty-two years. He had been taken to the Washington Asylum Hospital by the board of charities, being in a condition of starvation. His body has been turned over to a sister for burial.

Lee lived in a little cabin on the Anacostia road, opposite East Washington Park. There he had an old race horse, a gift from "Mars" Cassidy; a dog and some game fowl. He was compelled finally to eat his game chickens in order to ward off starvation, and when the last one had been eaten, with no more food and no money with which to buy it, Lee is said to have starved slowly to the point of death.

Lee. Suddenly on Thursday, January 2, 1930, Robert Edward Lee, beloved husband of Emma Lee (nee Slater), and eldest son of the late Samuel and Julia Lee, aged 58 years. Funeral from his late residence, 215 4th st. s.e., on Monday, January 6, at 2 p.m. Relatives and friends invited to attend. Interment at Congressional Cemetery.

Without warning he went, no sad good-by.
No last farewell, there was no one nigh.
For the reaper came, in the hush of night.
And made dark our home, that was so bright.

We loved him so, we did not know
That soon, so soon, he would have to go.
We could not see, ere another morn.
How crushed our hearts, how sad, how forlorn.

And our faith is stronger, our love more pure.
Our loss, so deep, less hard to endure.
For we know that Christ led him all the way
Through that darkened valley to that perfect day.

pp. 372-373: Theodorick (5th gen.), the fourth son of Henry Lee (4) [Henry (3), Richard (2), Richard (1)] and Lucy Grymes, his wife, was born on the 3d of September, 1766; died on the 10th of April, 1849, at Eckington," the county seat, near Washington, of his son-in-law, Joseph Gales. Of Mr. Lee, his granddaughter writes: "Theodorick Lee was a gentleman in the highest sense of the word; conspicuous for benevolence and truth of character, and strong practical sense; of fine, intellectual countenance, with most kindly expressive dark gray eyes. He was given to agricultural pursuits, and was possessed of a fair fortune ... He married Catherine Hite, of Winchester, the youngest of the three daughters of Mr. John Hite of that place; like her sisters, Miss Hite was not only distinguished for intelligence, and beauty of person, but possessed unusual accomplishments for that day, having acquired a thorough knowledge of French and music. Mr. John Hite, her father, was the son of Jacob Hite and grandson of Baron Jost Hite, of Germany, who came to this country during the Revolutionary war, and settled on a large tract of land in Pennsylvania; his son Jacob moved to Berkeley county, Va., and purchased 3,000 acres of General Charles Lee; later he sold this property and removed to South Carolina, where subsequently some of the family was massacred by the Indians . . . The first wife of Jacob Hite was a sister of President Madison's father."

Theodorick Lee had one son and three daughters:

John Hite
Sarah Juliana Maria, married Joseph Gales, Jr.
Catharine Hite, married Dr. George May.

Brother of Richard Bland Lee, uncle of Robert E. Lee, father-in-law of Joseph Gales. Remained a farmer all of his life.

Death of "Bill" Lee

The passing of another Washington character is noted. William H. Lee, more familiarly known as "Bill" Lee, was buried late yesterday afternoon at Congressional cemetery, the services being held at Lee's undertaking establishment. For thirty-five years past "Bill" Lee has been a familiar figure on the streets of this city, and he was known by nearly all the old residents because of his quaint ways and his vivid imaginings. During recent years he propelled a hand-cart about town and peddled brooms.

Lee imagined he was the commander of a battery of artillery which consisted of fifty guns, and in consequence of this belief he always wore a sort of uniform decorated with what he termed medals of honor. These medals consisted of tobacco tags and other articles that had a bright surface. Bill never tired of telling of the important part his big battery played in "the battle of Cumberland, Md.," and the "seige of Alexandria, Va." He related the details of each affair minutely and described with pride the part he had taken in them. At the "siege of Alexandria," he said, he wielded his big and terrible sword and cut off the heads of nearly 200 of the enemy. When asked who were the enemies he encountered there he always replied:

"They were a mixture of foreigners, anarchists and Indians, and they were tough fighters."

At the "battle of Cumberland," Lee said his battery mowed down two thousand of the enemy who attempted to take the place and to capture Washington. Several years ago Lee hired himself to building contractors in this city to guard houses in course of construction at night. He dignified his position as watchman by having made a big white metal badge inscribed "watchman," which he wore on his blue uniform, which he had made especially for him to give him "extinction," as he expressed it.

Withal Bill Lee was a good-natured, harmless man and had many good friends who liked to hear him tell of his experiences with his battery. He was also charitable and never hesitated to divide his small earnings with any one who he thought needed the money more than he did. He had no bad traits and was generally well thought of by all who knew him. He was about fifty-three years of age and was born and reared in Washington.

His Death Sudden

Coroner to Ascertain the Cause of William J. Lee's Demise

An autopsy will probably be held at the District morgue today by Deputy Coroner White to ascertain the cause of the death of William J. Lee, who died suddenly last evening at his boarding house, 416 5th street northeast.

Mr. Lee was a telegraph operator about thirty-eight years of age. He had occupied a room at the home of William B. Rock for the past two months. Yesterday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock he went home, and while on the pavement in the front of the house he told several children he was ill and that he had suffered a sun stroke. He entered the house and laid down on his bed.

A short time later Mr. Rock arrived at his home. When told that his boarder was ill he went to the room. Dr. G.T. Safford was later called to the house. After administering treatment, he ordered that the ambulance of the Casualty Hospital be summoned to remove Mr. Lee to the hospital. He died, however, before the ambulance arrived. The body was later taken to the morgue.

Mr. Lee had a brother, George Lee, who is a train dispatcher at the Union station. He is said to have been at one time private secretary to a number of government officials. Photographs, including those of Roosevelt and Fairbanks, were found in his room. These he told friends, had been presented to him by those officials.

Lee, Hon. Zaccheus Collins b. 1805 - d. 26 Nov 1859 53 yrs. R27/170

Lee. At eight minutes before 5 o'clock this morning, at his residence in the city of Baltimore, in the 54th year of his age, the Hon. Zaccheus Collins Lee, Judge of the Supreme Court of that city. This melancholy event will sadden many hearts in Washington, where Judge Lee had long resided before his removal to Baltimore. He was a gentleman of high integrity and honor, of a kind heart, of fine talents, and had acquired an extensive reputation as an eloquent and effective public speaker. For some months before his death, his health had been impaired; but the immediate illness which proved fatal was of only a few days' duration. He has been taken from us in the prime of life, and in the midst of a career of public usefulness, to the deep affliction of his bereaved family and friends, and the regrets of the community of which he was an esteemed and honored member.

The Evening Star, November 29, 1859

The Funeral of Judge Lee was largely attended in Baltimore yesterday, and the remains were brought to this city for interment in the Congressional cemetery. Judge Lee prior to his death expressed a desire to be buried by the side of his mother in this cemetery and the request has been complied. The remains were accompanied to this city by the Rev. Dr. Cummins of Baltimore (formerly of Trinity church in this city) by whom the funeral services were performed.

pp. 466-467: Zaccheus Collins (6th gen.), the second son of Richard Bland Lee (5) [Henry (4), Henry (3), Richard (2), Richard (1)] and Elizabeth Collins, his wife was born the 5th of December, 1805, and died at Baltimore, the 26th of November, 1859. Mr. Lee was educated at the University of Virginia; studied law under William Wirt, and practiced his profession at Baltimore. He was a prominent member of the bar of that city; was considered an effective and eloquent speaker; he served as United States District Attorney from 1848 to 1855; was Judge of the Superior Court of Baltimore from 1855 to the time of his death. He was married, on the 15th of June, 1837, to Martha Ann, daughter of Thomas C. Jenkins, of Baltimore; she was born the 5th of April, 1819 and died the 16th of April, 1864. They had only two children:

Richard Henry

Mary Elizabeth, born the 5th of November, 1840; has been twice married; first on the 26th of December, 1861 to William B. Perine, of "Homeland," Baltimore county, Md., and had a daughter, Martha Lee Perine, born the 19th of September, 1862, and died the 27th of April, 1891; Mr. Perine died in May, 1863, and his widow was married, secondly, on the 15th of August, 1867, to Bernard John Cooper, Post Captain of the English Navy, who died on the 26th of July, 1889, leaving three children: 1, Mary Elizabeth Lee, born the 11th of December, 1868; 2, Mary Frances Donelan Lee, born the 23d of September, 1870; 3, Bernard John Lee, born the 26th of September, 1873. Mary Frances D.L. Cooper was married, at Rome, on the 6th of June, 1894, to Don Guisepppe, second son of Marquis Patrizi, Standard Bearer of the Holy Church; he was born on the 27th of December, 1872. Drown in Tidal Basin

William D. Leissler, Jr., Meets Tragic Fate

Went Bathing With Friend

William D. Leissler, jr., night clerk of Congress Hall Hotel and for about a year proprietor of the cigar stand there, was drowned in the tidal basin shortly before 7 o'clock last night while bathing with Russell Johnson, a friend. The young men went to the basin shortly after 6 o'clock, and, after procuring a boat, decided to take a bath. They had been swimming about for a short time when Leissler called to his companion that he intended to swim to a small motor boat anchored near. A moment later he started, and just as he was about to reach the boat he was seen to suddenly rise in the water and throw up his hands. He sank immediately and did not rise thereafter.

Recovery of Body

The alarm was given at once and the harbor precinct notified. The crew went to the scene and in a short time recovered the body by the aid of grappling hooks.

Leissler was twenty-two years of age. He was the son of William D. Leissler, an employe of the bureau of engraving and printing and president of the Plate Printers' Union. He attended the McKinley Manual Training School until a year ago, when he decided to take charge of the cigar stand at the Congress Hall Hotel. The venture was a successful one, it is said, and some time ago the young man was asked to take the place of night clerk. He was popular and had a wide circle of friends.

The funeral services will in all probability be held at the family residence, 320 South Capitol street, but arrangements have not been completed.

Death of Rev. J.H.M. Lemon

Rev. J.H.M. Lemon, who for nearly fifty-three years was an honored member of the Baltimore annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died at his residence New Year afternoon. He had been failing for some time, but his illness did not take a serious turn until last Friday, when he gradually began to sink into a painless death.

During his long and active pastorate he numbered among his charges in this city Gorsuch, Ryland and Union Churches, and for the past several years was chaplain of New Jerusalem Lodge, F.A.A.M., and at the time of his death was a member of the quarterly conference of the Metropolitan M.E. Church, where his funeral will take place Saturday at 2 p.m.

Remains of Rev. J.H.M. Lemon Consigned to the Tomb

The funeral of the late Rev. J.H.M. Lemon, whose death occurred last Thursday afternoon at his residence, 629 G street southwest, took place this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the metropolitan M.E. Church. Nearly all the Methodist ministers of the city and a large number of friends of the family were present at the services, and the members of New Jerusalem Lodge, No. 9, F.A.A.M., attended in a body. The services at the church were conducted by Rev. Dr. Frank M. Bristol, the pastor, assisted by Rev. Dr. W.H. Chapman and Rev. Alexander Bielaski. The principal eulogy was delivered by Rev. Dr. George V. Leech, who had been a warm personal friend of Mrs. Lemon. Dr. Bristol also made a short address.

The remains were interred in Congressional cemetery with full Masonic honors. The rites at the grave were conducted by Worshipful Master George W. Smith of New Jerusalem Lodge. The pallbearers were selected from among the Methodist ministers of the city and consisted of Rev. Page Milburn, Rev. A. Bielaski, Rev. T.E. Copes, Rev. J.E. Amos, Rev. Dr. L.B. Wilson and Rev. C.O. Isaac.

Rev. Mr. Lemon had been for many years a minister of the gospel in the Methodist Episcopal Church. During his active service as a preacher he had been pastor of several Methodist churches, including Gorsuch, Ryland and Union. At the time of his death he was a member of the quarterly conference of Metropolitan Church. For several years past he had been chaplain of New Jerusalem Masonic Lodge.

Lenox, Capt. Peter Lenox. Died in this city, at 8 o'clock on Monday evening, the 3d instant, after a protracted and painful illness, Peter Lenox, Esquire, in the 62d year of his age. His friends, acquaintances, and fellow citizens generally, are invited to attend his funeral, from his late dwelling near the Potomac Bridge, on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.	b. ---	-----------------------------	---------	---------------

In the death of Mr. Lenox, our city, as well as his immediate family, has sustained a severe loss. By a long course of active and successful enterprise, he had become so identified with our various interests, and such was his integrity and judgment, his energy and perseverance, and such his zeal in carrying forward whatever tended to the improvement of the city, that he had gained the universal confidence of his fellow-citizens. His opinions were regarded with great respect, and exerted a powerful influence both in private and in our public municipal councils.

The life and character of Mr. L. present some extraordinary traits, and such as are worthy the consideration of those who would make their way in the world by their own exertions. He was born in Williamsburg, Va., in 1770, and resolved at an early age on procuring a liberal education. As he had no patrimony, he first acquired the means of sustaining himself for a few years, and then entered a public school at Richmond, in his native State, but the feeble state of his health soon compelled him to relinquish his design, and to enter upon a more active employment. Thirty-eight years since, he came to this city, destitute of property and without friends, but by a course of almost unexampled diligence and frugality, and a spirit of well regulated enterprise, he acquired a large and valuable estate. Aware of the advantages of knowledge, and still cherishing the love of learning, his first object was to educate his children, to accomplish which he spared no pains. By nature he was endowed with a high order of intellect, and had he been placed in circumstances favorable to its cultivation, he would have held a distinguished rank among the first men of our country. He had uncommon strength and precision of judgment; was prompt and energetic in action, and in every thing manifested decision of character. In all his transactions of life he sustained the character of a punctual, honest man.

W.B. Bryan, "The Beginnings of the Presbyterian Church in the District of Columbia," Columbia Historical Society (April 11, 1904), Vol. 8, pp. 43-66.

Peter Lenox owned a lot in the square bounded by F and G and 10th and 11th. He probably supported the first Presbyterian church (St. Andrew's) located in the same square.

Clark, Allen C., Walter Lenox, The Thirteenth Mayor of the City of Washington, (5/16/1916), Vol. ??, p. 167

... Walter Lenox came from Scotland and settled in Williamsburg, Virginia, at the time the seat of the royal government.

Walter Lenox, the grandfather, married Miss Carter, of Williamsburg. Of their children was Peter, born in the city named, 1771. The father lost most of his fortune consequent to the war of the American Revolution, and Peter, about 1802, came to the federal seat of government to find his fortune. He married Miss Margaret Wilkinson; they had a family fortune of thirteen children.

(Peter was ambitious of a liberal education. He had no patrimony. He acquired the means of support for a few years. He entered the public schools of Richmond. He was forced to relinquish his design because of feeble strength and engage in active employment.)

Peter Lenox was the foreman and then the Clerk of Works at the President's House. He was the Clerk of Works (Chief Carpenter) at the Capitol from October 31, 1817 to 1829. He had a lumber business and was early engaged in the building activities. The profit he progressively invested in realty and on the tax ledgers ultimately opposite his name were many squares and lots.

Peter Lenox was a lawmaker. Alternately and intermittently he sat in the local House of Lords and House of Commons. Of the First Chamber, 1804; of the Second Chamber, 1806, 1807; of the First, 1808; of the Second, 1810, 1811; of the First, 1812, 1813; of the Board of Aldermen, consecutively from 1826 to 1831, inclusive.

Peter Lenox laid aside the compass, the spirit-level and the saw, the emblems and implements of his peaceful crafts, and buckled on the sword when his country called for arms in 1812 and he was commissioned a Captain.

Peter Lenox lived until late in life on the south side of Maryland avenue near the Washington Bridge and at the corner of Tenth and E streets, northwest. He died at the first-named residence, Monday, December 3, 1832. He was accorded Masonic honors under the auspices of the Federal Lodge No. 1. Of him it is written: "By nature he was endowed with a high order of intellect, and had he been placed in circumstances favorable to its cultivation, he would have held a distinguished rank among the first men of our country. He had uncommon strength and precision of judgment; was prompt and energetic in action, and in every thing manifested decision of character. In all his transactions of life he sustained the character of a punctual honest man." His portrait has him as a large man of intellectual caste, with the compass and the other instruments of his livelihood. His wife's portrait pictures her as a beautiful woman with a lovely child in her arms -- her thirteenth. His will, probated December 11, 1832, disposes of a large estate and attests his belief in the advantages of a higher education in this provision: "It is my desire that my two sons, William A. and Walter, shall pursue their classical and other studies and receive the best Collegiate education that the Country can afford" and made a charge upon the estate for the education and a maintenance until twenty-one years of age.

Walter Lenox (the 13th mayor) was born in the city of Washington, August 17, 1817. He was a bachelor of arts, Yale, 1837. ...

I.T. Frary, They Built the Capitol, Garrett & Massie, Richmond, 1940, pp. 159-161

The office of Clerk of Works, left vacant by the death of Lenthal, was not filled officially until 1815 when Shadrach Davis received the appointment. Little is known about him, but he seems to have been held in good favor by Latrobe and in ill favor by Commissioner Lane. As has been stated previously, the latter transferred Davis, in 1817, to a position at the President's House in pushing work to completion, while work at the Capitol under Davis had lagged.

Peter Lenox was a man of superior ability and good family connections. He was born in March, 1771, at Williamsburg, Virginia, where the Lenox family had lived since 1700 when their pioneer ancestor came to this country from Scotland. His mother was a Miss Carter, also of Williamsburg.

Walter Lenox, the father of Peter, had been well to do before the Revolutionary War, but had lost his property during that conflict, and the son came to Washington in 1792 with the hope of mending his fortunes. He secured a position as foreman on the President's House, and later was made Clerk of Works.

This position was held by him during the period of construction, prior to the War of 1812, and during the reconstruction made necessary by the vandalism of British soldiers.

The services of Lenox at the Capitol were evidently as efficient as before for he retained the position until the building was considered completed, in 1829.

Like others holding public office at the time, Lenox conducted outside business of his own, and succeeded in amassing a comfortable fortune by dealing in lumber. He built for himself a large, four story, brick house on Maryland Avenue, near the river.

Peter Lenox was a prominent citizen of the Capital City in its early days and, judging from his portrait, was distinguished in his personal appearance. He served at various times on the city council, was a successful investor in real estate, and received a commission as captain during the War of 1812. His death occurred in 1832.

Will of Peter Lenox, of Washington, D.C. (dtd. Nov. 25, 1832, probated Dec. 11, 1832, Will Book 4, pp. 163-170(164-172); O.S. 1619; Box 11)

The National Intelligencer, February 23, 1833

The death of the Hon. James Lent, of New York, occasioned yesterday a melancholy cause of interruption to the action of the House of Representatives on the various business before it, and especially of that assigned for that day, (on the affairs of the District,) for which, however, no doubt another day will be set apart by the House.

In the Senate

Some further remarks were made by Mr. Webster, Mr. Clayton, Mr. Clay, Mr. Foot, and Mr. Miller, when the bill was, on motion of Mr. Dudley, laid on the table, in consequence of a message from the House, announcing the death of the Hon. James Lent, a Representative from New York, and inviting the Senate to attend the funeral, tomorrow, at 11 o'clock.

The usual resolution was then adopted, and, on motion of Mr. Clay, it was Ordered, That when the Senate adjourns, it adjourn to meet tomorrow at one o'clock. The Senate then adjourned

In the House

... Mr. Hoffman rose and announced to the House the decease of James Lent, Jr., a member of the House of Representatives from the State of New York. After some appropriate remarks, Mr. H. submitted the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

1. Resolved, That the members of this House will testify their respect for the memory of James Lent, deceased late a member of this House from the State of New York, by wearing crape on the left arm for the remainder of the present session of Congress.
2. Resolved, That this House will attend the funeral of the late James Lent, tomorrow at 11 o'clock, a.m. and that a Committee be appointed to take order for, and to superintend the said funeral.
3. Resolved, That a message be sent to the Senate to notify that body of the death of James Lent, late a member of this House, and that his funeral will take place tomorrow at 11 o'clock.

The House then adjourned.

Funeral Services to Be Held Tomorrow

Funeral services over the remains of James C. Leonard, who died at the Providence Hospital Thursday night, will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at his home, 17 Fillmore street, Anacostia. The services will be held under Masonic auspices and conducted by Anacostia Lodge, No. 21, F.A.A.M. Interment will be made in Congressional cemetery.

Mr. Leonard who was in the sixtieth year of his age, was born in Newark, N.J. He left school to enter Company I of the 39th New Jersey Volunteers, with which he served until the end of the war. He was mustered out of service at Trenton, N.J., July 4, 1866. He participated in the battle of the Wilderness, before Petersburg, and in other important engagements. Following the close of the war he learned the trade of hatter. He came to this city about the year 1882 and in the following year was appointed to a position in the Navy Department. He only remained at that post for a short while and resigned to take a more responsible position in the Interior Department.

After remaining in that department for five years he resigned to enter business for himself in Anacostia, where he resided until the day of his death. He was United States government inspector of fuel in the District under President Harrison and President Cleveland. He was proprietor of the Anacostia Inn, the president of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association of the district of Columbia and the chairman of the congressional committee of the National Liquor League at the time of his death.

Mr. Leonard was a prominent Mason, having been a member of Anacostia Lodge, No. 21, F.A.A.M., and of Anacostia Chapter, No. 12, R.A.M. He was a director of the Uniontown Building and Loan Association and treasurer of the Anacostia Citizens' Association, besides being the chairman of the committee urging the reclamation of the Anacostia flats and a member of the Business Men's Association.

His wife and six children survive him.

Remains Placed in Vault at Congressional Cemetery

Funeral services over the remains of James C. Leonard, who died Thursday night at Providence Hospital, were held at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at his late home, 17 Fillmore street, Anacostia. The services were conducted by Anacostia Lodge, No. 21, F.A.A.M. The order had charge of the funeral.

The members of the lodge and of Anacostia Chapter, No. 12, to both of which the deceased belonged, assembled in the Masonic Hall in Anacostia and marched thence to the late home of the deceased. Seventy members of these two organizations were in line. The funeral services were also attended by nearly a score of the members of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association of this city. The members of the Masonic bodies present were marshaled by Edgar Balderston, the worshipful master of Anacostia Lodge.

The pallbearers, who were selected from the several organizations to which the deceased belonged, were as follows: George W. Bury and Charles W. Tolson, representing the Anacostia Citizens' Association; James McPherson and Isaac O. Gordon, Anacostia Chapter, No. 12, Royal Arch Masons; Frank T. Eno and James T. Harrison, delegated from Anacostia Lodge, No. 21, F.A.A.M., and George A. Davidson and John H. Miller, members of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association.

The floral tributes that surrounded the casket containing the remains were numerous. Among them were pieces from the National Liquor League of America; Anacostia Lodge, No. 21, F.A.A.M.; Anacostia Chapter, No. 12, Rohyal Arch Masons; the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association of the District, Co. C.H. Hutcheson of the staff of the governor of Georgia, John H. Gynn of Louisville, Ky.; Daniel Loughran, James P. Quinn and many others. Hugh Dolan, the president of the National Liquor League of America, was one of those who attended the funeral, coming especially from New York to do so. Relatives of the deceased from Brooklyn, N.Y., and Newark, N.J., the latter city being his birthplace, were also in attendance. The rites of the Masonic lodge were performed at the cemetery, where the remains were placed in the vault. They will be interred, probably, Tuesday next. Mr. Leonard was in his sixtieth year and was a veteran of the civil war. He had resided in the District since 1882. His wife and six children survive him. The latter are Mrs. Nellie Hutcheson, Misses Gertrude and Mattie Leonard, Messrs. Thomas, William and George Leonard.

William S. Leonard, one of Anacostia's business men, died yesterday in Providence Hospital, where he had been ill for the past week. He was taken suddenly ill while on his motor launch in the Anacostia river, and his condition grew steadily worse. His body was taken to his home in V street last evening. Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock at St. Teresa's Roman Catholic Church, of which he was a member. Interment will be in Mount Olivet cemetery.

Mr. Leonard was twenty-eight years old and had been in business with his brother at Good Hope road and 13th street southeast for a long time, continuing the business founded by their father. A few years ago he married Miss Annie Summer, also of Anacostia, who survives him. In addition, his mother, of Washington, two brothers, Thomas Leonard of Anacostia and George Leonard of the United States Army, and three sisters, Mrs. Mattie Bennett of Washington, Mrs. Gilbert Osterman of Wilmington, N.C., and Mrs. Edward Hutchinson of Atlanta, Ga., survive him. All of the family are in the city, having been summoned several days ago when Mr. Leonard's condition grew worse.

Levi, Agnes  The Washington Times, August 2, 1904  Mrs. Agnes Levi's Supposed Slayer Attempts Suicide  Henry Heuth, Trailed by Police, Cuts Wrist and Throat  Wounds Are Not Fatal  Believed to Have Procured Clothes at Mother's Home  Visited A Barroom  Henry Heuth, believed to be the murderer of Mrs. Agnes Levi, whose throat was cut from ear to ear at 1217 E Street northwest, at 10 o'clock last night, attempted suicide in an alley between L and M and Four-and-a-half and Sixth Streets southwest, shortly after 10 o'clock this morning. He was taken to the Emergency Hospital, where it is thought he will recover. The weapon with which Heuth sought to end his own life was a case knife, with which he cut his throat and wrist. The detectives were hot on his trail, and his attempt at suicide was due to fear of immediate arrest. Screams of Murder  Persons passing along E Street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth Streets northwest about 10 o'clock last night were startled by screams of "murder." Mrs. Roth, who lives in the house where the tragedy occurred, also heard the screams. Policemen Lewis and Williams and E. Martin, an employee of a nearby lunch room, ran to the scene. On the floor in the hall on the third story of the house they found an elderly woman lying in a pool of blood. The Emergency ambulance was called. The woman died on the way to the hospital. Investigation proved her to be a Mrs. Levi, who, with a man named Henry Leuth, many years her junior, occupied apartments in the house. Escaped in Underclothes  When Martin who was passing the house heard the screams, he stopped and then heard the sounds of a scuffle. Looking up toward the window, he saw a man, clad in his underclothing, step up in the window and pause, preparatory to jumping. When the man saw persons gathering in the street he fell back into the room. Martin rushed upstairs and as he got to the second floor he saw a man escaping at the back of the house. The two policemen then joined in the chase. The fugitive, however, escaped and eluded pursuit until this morning. Detectives were immediately put on the trail. About 9 o'clock this morning it was learned that Heuth had visited a barroom on First Street, between C and D Streets southwest, last night and again shortly after 5 o'clock this morning. He told the bartender that he was in trouble. It turned out afterwards that he had been to the home of his mother on D Street southwest. There, it is presumed he procured clothing, as he was fully dressed when at the barroom last night and this morning. Found in an Alley  Inspector Hartigan was on his way to Mrs. Heuth's house when the news reached him that Heuth had been taken. His attempt at suicide was made in an alley back of the house of a Mr. Bleber, for whom he worked. Officers Farquhar and Lester, who were the first to reach him had a struggle with him before they could get him into the ambulance. When Heuth reached the Emergency Hospital his wounds were dressed. Although suffering and weak from loss of blood he was found in no immediate danger. Heuth would make no statement. One of the cuts was across his wrist and the other across his windpipe. Had the cut on his throat been an inch further to the right or left it would have resulted fatally. The hospital physicians say, however, that unless complications develop Heuth will recover. Mother and Himself  Heauth, a carpenter by trade, and between thirty and thirty-five years of age, came to the E Street house about a month ago and rented three rooms for "his mother and himself." Mrs. Levi, who came to live there with him was a large woman, considerably older than he. The couple quarreled all the time, and frequently fought. Heuth drank often. He had been drinking before the murder occurred. Mrs. Roth, who lived on the floor above them, became acquainted with the ill-mated couple. She wrote letters for Mrs. Levi, who was uneducated and could not write. The letters went to her two sons, George Murphit, who is a merchant at Summit, Idaho, and William Murphy, a seaman on board the U.S.S. Columbia,	d. 1 Aug 1904		R145/C-1 which is now at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The police have heard nothing from these men. Mrs. Levi would never explain why her sons were named Murphy while she went by the name of Levi. She drew a pension of $12 a month.

Heuth's father lives at 631 Tenth Street northeast. His mother is separated from her husband.

His haunts were in the southwest section of the city for the most part where he drank a great deal, it is said, and was frequently seen about the barrooms in that section.

The Washington Times, August 3, 1904

Huth's Case Postponed Before the Coroner

Condition of Accused Man Not Such as to Permit of His Leaving Hospital

The condition of Henry Huth, the supposed murderer of Mrs. Agnes Levi, who was killed at 1217 E Street northwest, Monday night, caused the postponement of the Coroner's inquest, which was set for 10 o'clock this morning. Huth is now at the Emergency Hospital recovering from the wounds he inflicted upon himself with a case knife yesterday morning in his attempt at suicide. He is steadily improving, as neither the cuts in his throat nor those on his wrist were serious, but he was not able to leave the hospital this morning. The body of his alleged victim is still at the morgue.

Captain Boardman's men have been hard at work on the case, and as a result of their investigations a number of witnesses have been summoned. Among them there are some, who, it is said, will tell of threats Huth made against the woman he was living with, and one, at least, it is alleged, who heard him say yesterday morning, before he was found lying bleeding in the alley where he attempted to kill himself, that he was a murderer.

Relations of Huth called at the hospital last night, but were not allowed to see him. Huth is reported as doing very well.

Coroner's Jury Charges Him With Crime

Prisoner Starts to Make Statement, Witness Swears at Him

"We find that Mrs. Agnes Levi came to her death from a series of wounds on her throat inflicted by Henry Huth." This was the sense of the verdict rendered today by the Coroner's jury in the inquest into the death of the woman killed, supposedly by Huth, in a jealous rage, in their apartments at 1213 E Street northwest, August 1.

The inquest was held this morning in the new morgue building at Seventh Street and the river front. It was conducted by Acting Coroner Larkin W. Glazebrook.

Witnesses of the murder, and several who were present at the capture of Huth, gave testimony. A crowd of the curious was present.

Prisoner Smiles

The prisoner, handcuffed, and guarded by several detective and policemen, watched the proceedings smilingly.

At the conclusion of the testimony, Huth attempted to make a statement, but could not or would not talk loud enough to be heard. When the Acting Coroner asked him to speak louder he replied with a profane request that the Acting Coroner go to a place warmer than Washington on its hottest day.

Another dramatic incident occurred when Louis Blackeye and Ralph McKee identified Huth. Blackeye told of the killing of the woman, and McKee of the attempts of Huth to kill himself, when he found himself surrounded by the police and cut off from escape.

Swears at Prisoner

Blackeye is an Italian. He could not withhold his wrath and swore at the smiling prisoner as he identified him in broken English as the man who he said had committed the murder.

The first witness was Mrs. E.M. Roth, who lives on the floor above the apartments Huth occupied with the woman. She told of Mrs. Levi bringing up to her rooms a few pieces of broken bread and bacon, asking Mrs. Rother to save them for her. Mrs. Roth also told of frequent quarrels, and of threats made by the prisoner.

She was followed by Mrs. Mary Dunbar, who had been visiting Mrs. Roth at the time of the murder. Mrs. Dunbar told of the killing. She had heard the screams, the struggle, and the fall of a body, and opening a window shouted for the police. She knew little of the troubles of Huth and the woman.

Policeman Lewis' Testimony

Policeman Percival Lewis, one of the first to reach the dying woman, said he had been standing in front of T.H. Connors' saloon, when he heard the screams. He ran in the direction of the sound, and saw Huth standing on the sill of a window, looking as though he intended to jump into the street.

"The man," continued Lewis, "I later recognized as Huth. He wore only a pair of trousers, and an undershirt. He shouted that he had done it, and that the woman had compelled him to kill her."

Lewis said he ran upstairs and found the woman dying, in a pool of blood. About this time Mrs. Dunbar began to scream for the police. Huth dropped back into the room from the window sill, said the witness, crying as he disappeared:

"I was driven to this by a person from Philadelphia."

The policeman told of the summoning of the ambulance and the removal of the woman. He displayed the razor with which the murder was committed and described how he found it beside Mrs. Levi. He testified that Huth jumped over the back fence and escaped before the policeman could catch him.

Special policeman Mosley Williams, who was with Lewis, corroborated the latter.

Frank A. Winter, a painter, who lives in the house adjoining that in which the murder took place, was reading in his room when he heard the death struggle. He also saw Huth at the window but could not reach him.

He told of frequent fights between the couple; said that there had been a quarrel on the morning of the murder and another two weeks ago, when Huth had threatened to knock the woman on the head.

Louis Blackeye followed, telling of seeing Huth and of having heard him confess the killing. Later he found Huth in the rear alley, where Huth jumped over the fence and for the time escaped.

Huth is Convicted of Second Degree Murder

Jury Out Less Than Half an Hour,

Prisoner's Story of His Crime

Henry Huth, who killed his mistress, Agnes Levy, August 1, last, was yesterday convicted of murder in the second degree.

The verdict is practically a sentence of life imprisonment in the penitentiary. Huth was put on trial last Monday in Criminal Court No. 2, before Justice Gould and a jury. It was not, however, until Wednesday that a special panel was chosen to pass upon the innocence or guilt of the accused.

Huth said in his own defense he left his rooms early in the day on Saturday, July 30, in search of work. He was unsuccessful. When he returned in the afternoon Agnes Levy refused to give him anything to eat, telling him to go "get your eating where you spent the day."

On the day following, Sunday, Huth said he remained in the house and discussed their relations with the woman. However, he said, they did not quarrel.

On Monday, August 1, the day of the homicide, Huth said he again went to look for work. Failing to find employment, he returned to 1217 E Street in the afternoon. Again, Agnes Levy, he said, refused give him anything to eat.

He went out, and returned about 9:30 p.m. He again asked the woman for something to eat, he said, and she not only declined to prepare food for him, but also refused to allow him to do so.

A quarrel followed, which Huth said resulted in a struggle between them, in which he was kicked and painfully hurt by Agnes Levy. He suffered excruciating pain as the result of the kick. Huth testified, and in his agony he picked up an old "corn razor" from a box near him, and slashed the woman across her throat. She died in a few moments, and he left her there upon the floor.

The testimony in the case was closed yesterday about noon. After the arguments of counsel and the charge by Justice Gould, the case was submitted to the jury about 5 p.m. After remaining in the consultation room for less than an hour, a verdict of "Guilty of murder in the second degree" was returned.

The Government was represented by Assistant District Attorneys Charles H. Turner and James M. Proctor, and the accused by E. Scott Douglass and C.L. Baker.

Found Dead in His Bed

Well-Known Builder the Victim of

Acute Gastritis

James F. Lewis, a retired builder, was found dead in his bed at his home, No. 811 O street northwest this morning. Coroner Nevitt visited the house this afternoon, made an investigation and gave a certificate of death from acute gastritis.

Mr. Lewis was in apparently good health when he retired last night. He failed to come down stairs this morning, and one of the servants in the house went to his room and discovered that he was dead. The deceased was fifty-four years old, and was single. He was born in this city and had spent most of his life in the house where he died. He was a son of the late Thomas Lewis, the well-known builder, who was killed a few years ago by being knocked down by a vehicle in front of the government printing office, just after he had left a street car.

Mr. James F. Lewis, the deceased, was associated in business with his father for many years and was one of the best-known citizens of the city in the section where he lived. His brother, Dr. S.E. Lewis, who lives at 1418 14th street northwest, was notified of the death soon after the discovery and he went to the house and took charge of affairs. Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

Announcement of her brother's death in The National Intelligencer of the same date (March 19, 1849)

In New Orleans, on the 31st of January, 1849, in the 25th year of his age, Daniel Baker Lewis, second son of Samuel W. and Mary Ann Winslow Lewis. He departed this life at peace with the world and in full confidence of a blessed hereafter. The deceased was for the last five years sergeant in company D, second regiment U.S. dragoons; served through the Mexican war, was wounded at the battle of Buena Vista, which, in connection with fever contracted in the country, caused his death. He was loved and respected by his officers and companions.

Will of Mrs. Mary M. Lewis

The will of the late Mary M. Lewis, widow of Thomas Lewis, filed today, leaves her daughter, Mary F., $2,000, a $500 bond of Washington Market Company, jewelry and household effects, 811 O street; son, Samuel E., $1,500 and portraits of his father and grandfather; daughter Marion J. Riggles, $1,500; son, James F., $500 bond and $1,500; sons, Thomas D., William C. and John S., each $1,500; grandson J.L. Riggles, her watch, and the balance to her daughter, Mary F. Lewis. Her son, Samuel E. Lewis is named the executor.

The will of Cornelius W. Smith leaves his estate to his wife Rebecca, who he names as executrix.

Says the Deceased Was of Unsound Mind

In the matter of the will of Mrs. Mary N. Lewis, recently deceased, who left an estate valued at $20,000, M.J. Colbert, on behalf of Mrs. Emma V. Dutton, has filed a caveat. It is alleged that Mrs. Lewis was of unsound mind when she made her will and that the will was procured through undue influence on the part of Samuel E. Lewis. It is petitioned that the probate of the will and letters of administration to Samuel E. Lewis be refused and that issues be drawn for a hearing before a jury. Mary F., Thomas D., James F., William C. and John S. Lewis and Marion J. Riggles are named as the surviving heirs.

Contest Over Mrs. Lewis' Will

Yesterday Justice Bradley in the Probate Court certified issues to be tried by jury as to the validity of the will of the late Mary M. Lewis, widow of the late Thomas Lewis. Mrs. Lewis left an estate valued at $20,000 and apportioned it by her will among her children other than Mrs. Dutton who filed a caveat alleging undue influence and want of testamentary capacity.

Lewis, Reeve d. 24 Jun 1858 R75/82

Lewis. On the 24th instant, from the effects of a wound inflicted by the hand of a ruffian on the night of the 27th of March, Reeve Lewis, aged 46 years. The funeral will take place tomorrow (Saturday) June 26th, at 10 o'clock a.m.

The Evening Star, June 25, 1858

Dead -- Mr. Reeve Lewis, who was shot on Capitol Hill last March, died yesterday afternoon from the wounds received on that occasion. The ruffians, who it is alleged committed the found deed which has terminated so fatally, will now have to be tried for a grave offence indeed. Among all the outrages which have disgraced our city during the last twelve months the infamy of this assassination stands out as the most ruthless and cowardly. It is to be hoped that such an example will be made, as villains of all grades will tremble at for many a long day to come. The deceased was a native of Philadelphia, and moved to Alexandria, Va., twenty years ago, where he resided some eight years and was highly esteemed by all who knew him for his moral worth. Twelve years ago he removed to this city, where he has resided since. His wife died about six weeks ago from the effects of a paralytic shock, and his seven orphan children are now left to struggle through the world without parental guidance.

Mr. L.'s funeral has been postponed until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

The Evening Star, June 26, 1858

The ball that killed Reeve Lewis was taken from the deceased yesterday by several physicians, who held a post mortem examination over the remains. It is a leaden ball of conical shape, and the size generally used in the pocket Colt's revolver. It had penetrated the hip bone at the joint, and a large piece of the joint was broken and completely detached from its place. Portions of the bone were imbedded in the flesh, and also had adhered to the ball so firmly that they were not removed by the operation of extracting it.

The Evening Star, March 29, 1858

Lawlessness Rampant!

Saturday night, the lawless gangs now organized in this city were out in full force, armed to the teeth, and for want of opportunities to come in contact with each other, they attacked harmless, inoffensive persons, without regard to age, sex or color, firing their guns and pistols at dwellings, etc., etc.

In the vicinity of Judge Douglas' residence and Wendell's printing office, at 11 o'clock, a gang formed and attacked dwellings and persons, fortunately doing no material damage.

Another gang formed near the fire on Third st., and ordered citizens who were going thither to assist, to turn back. One young man, named Lewis Keck, was ordered back; he started to run, when a shot was fired at him, the ball passing through his coat sleeve. Another, who ran down with a bucket, was ordered away, and, not moving so rapidly as the rowdies wished, one of them stepped out and presented a pistol, and to give an earnest of their villainous purposes, fired the ball between his feet!

The Metropolitan Hook and Ladder arrived near the fire with their apparatus, and were ordered to halt and go back, and they had to comply.

About half past 11 o'clock on the same night, as Mr. Reeve Lewis, master armorer at the Arsenal, and Mr. Isaac Entwistle; who is engaged in the heating department of the Capitol extension, were passing the corner of North A st. and First street west, they were suddenly assailed, without a word of warning, by two assassins. Lewis was knocked down and shot in the thigh, the ball entering some four inches, where it still remains; Entwistle received three balls upon his person--the first striking the ribs over the region of the heart, and providentially glancing from the bone. The other two balls entered the hip, where they yet remain, and he is considered to be in a most critical condition.

The Capitol police, hearing the cries of Messrs. Entwistle and Lewis, went to their aid and assisted them to their homes.

This murderous assault upon two sober, quiet citizens, has created much feeling among the residents upon Capitol Hill, and it will be seen that they have offered a reward of $250 for the apprehension of the assassins.

Last night a number of random shots were fired. A young man named Frazier, while passing along the street near Wendell's printing office, received a shot in the face, slightly wounding him.

A young man named Franklin was attacked Saturday night on the avenue, and stabbed in the arm. He said his offence was simply denying that he was a "Swyper." So we go.

The Evening Star, April 5, 1858

The Assassination Case

Capt. Klopfer and Officer McKenry on Saturday night arrested Charles Barrett, alias Squirly, and Henry Williams, both Baltimoreans, on charge of being the parties concerned in the attempt to assassinate Messrs. Isaac Entwistle and Reeve Lewis, on Capitol Hill, on the 27th ult. The examination took place before Justice Donn at the Central Guard house, and during it some curious developments were made. Carrico, the principal witness, is a watchman on the beat at the foot of the Capitol and in the neighborhood of the old Railroad Depot. He, it appears, saw the attack upon Messrs. Entwistle and Lewis, and saw Barrett fire at Entwistle. As a ruse to lull the suspicions of Barrett and compass his arrest, his confederate, Williams, was on Thursday night put on duty as a special police officer, under the joint resolution of the Councils passed the Monday previous.

The arrangements of the police having been completed, Captain Klopfer notified the Captain of the Guard, and he retained Williams for "special duty," and sent for Carrico.

Barrett, alias Squirly, who had been arrested, was then placed in the criminal dock for trial, in view of his thunderstruck companion, who was also jerked up for trial.

Carrico was then called upon to give his testimony, but so intimidated was he by the appearance of the desperate gang of Barrett's associates who accompanied him to the guard house that he refused to give testimony.

Capt. Mills remarked that it was a pretty state of things, when an officer, who had always been regarded as fearless, was afraid to give in testimony.

Carrico replied that he had a wife and children, who loved and depended upon him, and he was not quite ready to die and leave them.

A commitment to send him to jail for contempt of court was made out, and he was about being taken thither, when, the crowd having somewhat dispersed, he signified to Capt. Klopfer his reconsideration of his purpose not to testify. He accordingly gave evidence fastening the shooting upon the parties in custody. Afterwards he was placed upon a different beat, his former post being in the midst of Barrett and Williams' confederates.

The prisoners were held for further hearing, and yesterday they were fully committed for court.

The credit for the arrangements for the arrest of Barrett and Williams is due to Chief of Police Klopfer, and in carrying them out he was very efficiently aided by Officer McKenry, who, we may take this occasion to say, has on various other occasions shown himself a courageous and efficient officer.

Note: Charles H. Barrett was convicted of the murder of Reeve Lewis and sentenced to death. The day before his scheduled execution (Nov. 5, 1858) his sentence was commuted, by President Buchanan, to life in prison on the argument that the murder was not premeditated.

The Evening Star, July 6, 1858

The late Reeve Lewis, who died in consequence of a pistol-shot wound, received while walking with Mr. Entwistle, on Capitol Hill, as we recently record, left a family of young and helpless children. They are now fatherless and motherless. We are happy to learn that exertions have been set on foot whereby this bereaved family may be taken care of. A subscription has been handsomely commenced, and can be extended by application to James Adams, Esq., of the Bank of Washington.

The Evening Star, July 16, 1858

Mr. Isaac Entwistle. We are informed by a brother of this gentleman that some time before he was shot in company with the late Mr. Reeve Lewis, he received a letter signed "Regulators, alias Status Hose" stating that in case he failed to discharge some of the workmen employed under him in the Navy Yard and employ others in their stead, his life would be taken.

The Evening Star, March 4, 1880

Mr. Thomas Lewis, one of the leading builders of the District for many years, died yesterday afternoon at his residence, near the corner of 8th and O streets northwest, in the 68th year of his age. Mr. Lewis was a native of this city, and spent his entire life here, learning in youth the bricklaying business, and after working a few years as a journeyman he went into business on his own account, and being industrious and enterprising was very successful, having amassed considerable property. In ante bellum days he was prominent in the volunteer fire department, and during the war he served several terms in the common council and board of aldermen of the city of Washington as a representative from the old third ward. Under the Board of Public Works he became a street contractor, and was interested in the concrete pavements, and later devoted his attention to coloring brick, a business which has sprung up only in the past few years. He leaves a widow and 9 children. Mr. Lewis was a man of sterling integrity and had many friends in this community. His funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon.

The Evening Star, March 6, 1880

The funeral of Thomas Lewis took place from his late residence, 811 O street, this afternoon, and was largely attended. The services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Naylor, of the Metropolitan M.E. church, assisted by the Rev. F.S. Evans. The interment was made at the Congressional cemetery, and the pall bearers were Francis Mattingly, Alfred Richards, Thos. P. Morgan, Wm. H. Baldwin, Thos. B. Entwistle and Peter F. Bacon.

Mr. Thomas Lewis, the contractor for erecting the market, Corcoran Square (7th street between O and P northwest) under a recent agreement with a committee of citizens this morning commenced the excavation for the foundations of the building.

The Evening Star, August 12, 1872Savage Assault on Mr. Thomas LewisThe Assailants Sent to Jail

On Saturday, as Mr. Thomas Lewis, contractor for laying the concrete pavement on 9th street, was paying off his hands, a dispute arose concerning the pay due the colored men, during which some of the laborers attempted to take the cash box out of Mr. Lewis' possession, it is alleged, and, not succeeding, they beat him quite severely. He was taken to his residence on C street, between 8th and 9th, and the principal parties in the attack were arrested and carried to the fifth precinct station. Their names are Charles Brown, George Porter, James Gilmore, A. Robertson, and Charley Browers. They were arraigned this morning before Judge Stelle charged with an affray. Mr. Sabeil, the night watchman, testified that there was from two to five hundred negroes after Mr. Lewis, and witness attempted to go to his rescue, when the crowd turned on him crying out, "Kill him," "hang him;" witness got hold of Brown, and after a desperate resistance took him off the ground and turned him over to Officer Dailey; on returning to the relief of Mr. Lewis, Gilmore threw a paving stone from the opposite side of the street, and called on the crowd to kill witness, who started to arrest him when he ran, and witness fired two shots at him which brought him to a halt; after he had been secured, witness returned to the assistance of Mr. Lewis, and saw Charley Brown kick Mr. Lewis in the side; Gilmore had previously struck Mr. Lewis in the head with a brick, cutting it fearfully, Charles Brown and James Gilmore seemed to be the ringleaders, but the judge said it was a very serious affair, in which all seemed to be engaged and sentenced them all to six months in jail. Mr. Frank Closs, counsel for Charles Brown, gave notice of an appeal in his case.

The Evening Star, July 3, 1865Serious Accident

On Saturday, while Thomas Lewis, Esq., was superintending the work on a building he is erecting on D street, near the Bank of the Republic, some timber gave way and he was precipitated into the cellar below, and a large headstone which was being raised fell upon his left arm, breaking it near the wrist, crushing his hand, and severely lacerating the flesh. Mr. Lewis was conveyed to his home, corner of 9th and O streets, and Drs. Hall and Lindsley were called in and dressed his wounds. He suffered a great deal on Saturday, but rested easier yesterday. Mr. Lewis is a prominent and esteemed citizen, and will receive general sympathy in his mishap.

Licarion. On Monday morning, September 29th, 1884, Irene, beloved daughter of Hyacinth and Margaret Licarion, aged 5 years and 8 months.

The morning was bright, and balmy the air,
And yet our household was dark;
For the phantom of death had entered in
To quench life's flickering spark.

And Irene lay there with her golden hair
And blue eyes hollow and dim;
So patient she was, nor uttered a moan,
Nor shrank from the phantom grim.

I could only weep and fondle her hands—
O, waxen, thin hands were they;
And hover above her, so eager to catch,
The words she might have to say.

The Washington Times, August 15, 1905  Veteran Pension Office Clerk Passes Away  The Pension Office yesterday lost the services of one of its oldest clerks in the death of S.S. Lincoln, who had been in the office thirty-three years. Mr. Lincoln was eighty years of age. He was born in Maine in 1825. Mr. Lincoln served in Massachusetts Battery during the civil war. The funeral services will be held at Speare's undertaking apartments, 930 F street northwest, tomorrow morning. The Evening Star, August 15, 1905, p. 10  Silas Lincoln Dead  Union Veteran Who Served With Nims' Battery in Civil War  Silas S. Lincoln, a veteran of the civil war, formerly of Malden, Mass., but for the past twenty-six years a resident of Washington, and an employee of the bureau of pensions, died yesterday morning at his residence, 913 I street northwest, of general debility. Mr. Lincoln was born in 1825 in the state of Maine, but when quite a young man moved to Massachusetts, where for a number of years he was an officer of the state's prison at Charlestown. He was one of the original members of the famous Nims' Light Horse Battery of Massachusetts and served in that battery from July 30, 1861 to August 17, 1864. He fired two shots at the ironclad Merrimac during its fight with the Monitor in Hampton Roads, his battery at that time being stationed at Hampton, Va., awaiting transportation to Sip Island and the department of the gulf. In the following year he also sighted a gun whose shell, it is claimed, entered a port hole of the rebel gunboat Essex, when that boat ran the gauntlet of the upper Mississippi fleet at Vicksburg, Miss. Next to his old commander, Col. Ormand F. Nims, who survives him and who last year at the encampment of the G.A.R. in Boston, at the age of 84 years, marched every step of the route of the parade, Mr. Lincoln, the "old sergeant," as he was affectionately called, was the oldest member of that famous battery which, it is claimed, Generals Butler, Banks, Grover, Franklin and Claussan pronounced to be the best battery in the United States service. Sergeant Lincoln will be buried in the Congressional cemetery. The funeral services will be held at the undertaking establishment of W.R. Speare, 930 F street northwest, tomorrow morning. The Evening Star, August 17, 1905, p. 16  Funeral of S.S. Lincoln  The funeral of S.S. Lincoln of 913 I street northwest took place yesterday afternoon, services having been conducted by Rev. Dr. Bradford. Mr. Lincoln was a member of U.S. Grant Circle, No. 1, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, of which Mrs. Dell Fuller Wright is president. A number of the ladies of the circle were present, and Mrs. Emma J. Hawkes performed the flag service over the remains of the deceased

Lindsay, Adam

d. 7 Oct 1844

R35/5

Lindsay. On Monday, the 7th instant, Adam Lindsay, Esq. aged 80 years, a native of Scotland. The deceased migrated to this country in early life, and was amongst the first settlers of this city, in the prosperity and growth of which he ever manifested a lively interest. He represented with fidelity the inhabitants of the eastern section of this city in its councils for many years and is well known to amateurs in agriculture, horticulture, and the production of silk as one of the earliest patrons of these arts in this city.

The friends and acquaintances of the family are respectfully invited to attend his funeral on this evening, at two o'clock, from his late residence, near the Navy Yard.

Columbia Historical Society, Volume 4*

This gentleman had his residence on the southeast corner of Virginia Avenue and Seventh Street east, a very large brick building, formerly a store as well as dwelling, that is yet there. He was not a rich man, nor, for that matter, a very well educated one. But he was a member of the Board of Common Council of the city, and he was associated with William Prout, William Marbury, Samue N. Smallwood, and Timothy Winn in the building of the Anacostia Bridge. Mr. Lindsay, however, was largely known throughout the city by his having been infected with what was called at the time the Morus multicaulis craze. This matter is hardly remembered now; but as it is in a small way the counterpart of some of those gigantic mistakes committed by people in all parts of the world in their eagerness to make money (the Tulip craze, in England, for example), it is not unworthy of mention here.

Some gentlemen in New Jersey and Connecticut, being interested or about to become interested in the manufacture of silk, suggested in the newspapers the desirability of having silk-worms raised in this country instead of importing them. This suggestion led to a discussion of the business of silk-making, and soon the public got the idea that all the silk used in the country was to be of domestic manufacture, and that, therefore, the raising of the silk-worm was soon to be enormously profitable. Then people began to plant the white mulberry tree--the Morus alba multicaulis--on which the silk-worm feeds, and in an incredibly short time the raising of these trees and the production of silk-worms got to be almost a craze. Thousands of people from Maine to Georgia were spending their money in this way, many of them without any clear idea as to whether there was to be a market for their product or not, and wild visions as to the wealth that was to be thus acquired began to be everywhere prevalent. It is needless to say that many people suffered material loss from this delusion, some being even ruined by it.

Mr. Lindsay went into the thing enthusiastically; planted a large number of mulberry trees on the square bounded by Twelfth and Thirteenth and C and D Streets southeast, and seemed to seriously believe that he would soon be enormously rich. The net result of his venture, however, was a fine mulberry grove of no commercial value, and enough silk to be woven into a suit of clothes, which he always wore on extraordinary occasions with a great deal of pride. Mr. Lindsay left no children.

Grocer, west side 7th east between Virginia ave. and Navy Yard (Wash. Dir., 1834).

Veteran of Mexican and Civil Wars Expires Suddenly From Heart Trouble

William T. Lindsey, seventy-five years of age, dropped dead today in his home, 401 12th street southeast. Death was due to heart trouble. Coroner Nevitt was notified and gave a certificate of death from natural causes.

Mr. Lindsey arose from bed early this morning. Although he had been in ill health, he did not complain of feeling worse today. About 6 o'clock Mr. Lindsey was down stairs with his wife. He went to the kitchen to get a drink of water and as he entered the room he suddenly fell to the floor dead.

Mr. Lindsey was born in this city. He lived here until he was married and then moved to Parkersburg, W. Va., where he engaged in the machine business. He remained there for a number of years when he went to Baltimore. He served in the Mexican war as a fife boy He later served in the civil war, being aid-de-camp to Gen. Alger. He returned to Washington about twelve years ago.

For three terms Mr. Lindsey was commander of Wilson Post, G.A.R. of Baltimore, and for one term was its chaplain. Besides his wife, Mrs. Margaret Lindsey, five children survive him. The funeral arrangements have not been completed. The services will be under the G.A.R. and burial will be in Congressional cemetery.

Death of Harrison S. Linker

Mr. Harrison S. Linker, a prominent resident of East Washington, died at his residence, 401 8th street southeast, Monday night, after a brief illness. He was the proprietor of a shoe store at 8th and D streets southeast, and as a merchant enjoyed the highest confidence and respect. Before going into business Mr. Linker was for years librarian of the House of Representatives, in which position he made many friends among the members. He possessed executive ability of a high order, and during his earlier years took an active part in the politics of Philadelphia, his native city, where he was one of the three who issued the first call for volunteers at the outbreak of the war. He was a loyal and active member of the G.A.R., having joined Farragut Post a month after its institution. During his twelve years of membership he contributed much by his interest and energy to the success of that organization. He steadily declined any official honors at its disposal, but at the last department encampment he was elected a representative to the national encampment at St. Paul. A bookbinder by trade, and many years ago employed at the government printing office, he has continuously kept membership in the union of that craft. He leaves a widow, but no children. The funeral will be from his late residence tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Death Due to Accident

The funeral of Stephen Linkins, who died at the Emergency Hospital Tuesday afternoon, as the result of a fractured skull received by being struck by a Maryland car at the corner of 5th and K streets northwest, about 8 o'clock Monday night, will be held tomorrow afternoon. The services will be held at 2 o'clock at Nalley's undertaking establishment, 1239 11th street southeast, and interment will be made at Congressional cemetery.

An inquest was held at the sixth precinct station yesterday by Coroner Nevitt over Linkins' body, and after hearing the statement of several witnesses the jury decided that death was the result of an accident, and issued a verdict accordingly, exonerating the railroad company and its employees from all blame. Linkins was forty-five years old and resided with relatives at 601 1/2 4th street northwest.

R91/247The Evening Star, December 18, 1865Terrible Explosion at the ArsenalTen Men Killed! A Number Missing!Exciting Scenes*

At fifteen minutes to 2 o'clock this afternoon a terrific explosion was heard in the direction of the arsenal, shaking buildings in the very heart of the city, and soon it was ascertained that the explosion had taken place in a small building about 20 by 40 feet to the left of the main walk and near the large magazines.

This building was in charge of Sergeant Flint, of the Ordnance Corps, who had under him the following persons, who were engaged in sorting fixed ammunition, removing the cartridges:--Jeremiah Mahoney, Patrick Reardon, Marshland Whiteley, John Crane, James Moran, Michael McDermott, John Meehan, Martin Kyle, John Feely, Peter McGariehey.

Sergeant Flint had left the building about two minutes before the explosion, , some two dozen rounds of cartridges being then loose on the floor and the men had just placed on the benches two boxes of ammunition containing 8 rounds, making in all, as far as he could account for, but about 40 pounds of powder when the explosion took place and the building was in ruins and flames.

As soon as the explosion was heard, officer Weeden sounded an alarm of fire from box 17, which brought down steamers 2 and 3 and the hook and ladder, and in a little time large numbers of persons were around the grounds., but none were allowed to enter but the firemen and police.

Numbers of women and children were seen frantically running back and forth near the gates and making inquiries for their friends.

The guards were immediately doubled by Col. Benton (who was promptly on the ground) around the magazines and the workmen at once directed to leave.

In a short time, however, the fire in the material which composed the building and in a large pile of boxes was extinguished, preventing another building in which a large amount of ammunition was stored from taking fire.

The terrible scene, immediately after the explosion, was only equaled by the scene at the explosion in June 1864, some of the corpses being burned, blackened, and torn so as to expose the entrails, and none being recognizable from the features.

There were seven found dead. The following are known to have been killed:--Jeremiah Mahoney, Patrick Reardon, John Crane, James Moran, Michael McDermot, John Feely, Marshland Whitley, John Meehan and Peter McGariehey.

Mahoney's body was recognized by an account book in a pocket of his pants. Martin Kyle was taken out horribly burned and mangled, ,and was at once removed to the hospital.

James Lawler, who was near the building at the time was badly burned, and Charles Linn, a discharged one-legged soldier, who was sitting on the powder cart near by at the time, was so badly burned that he is not expected to live. He, with the mule and cart, were thrown a short distance, and the mule was also badly torn and burned.

The deceased, as well as the injured, have all been in the army and discharged, preference being given in employing men to those from the army.

Col. Benton was promptly on the ground and superintended the operations to stay the flames, and the 214th Pa. Regiment, on duty at the post, rendered valuable assistance.

P.S. John Crane is not dead, but severely burned about the head, hands and feet. One of his feet is badly injured by a splinter. Hopes are entertained of his recovery.

Surgeon Porter, of the arsenal, was promptly on the spot, and rendered efficient services assisted by Dr. Miller, of the Navy Yard, Dr. Croggon and Dr. Ford.

The Evening Star, December 19, 1865The Arsenal Disaster

The Coroner's Inquest—The Verdict of the JuryThe Officers of the Arsenal Exculpated From All Blame

This morning, Coroner Woodward summoned a jury on the bodies of the victims of the explosion at the Arsenal yesterday. The remains of Jeremiah Mahoney, John Meehan, and John Moran, which were each identified, and of Martin Kyle, Michael McDermott, and Marshland Whiteley, the remains of the three last not being distinguishable one from another, Charles Linn, the driver of the powder cart died yesterday afternoon from injuries received, and his body laid in the hospital.

Thomas Feely was instantly killed, both legs being blown off. His remains were removed last evening to his late residence, at the junction of P street and Rhode Island avenue, near 13th street. He leaves a family of small children, among them his son Tommy, who has been acting as Messenger to the Board of Aldermen for some time back. Patrick Readon and Peter McGariehey were also instantly killed. Readon's body was taken to his residence in Jackson Hall alley last evening.

John Crane was badly burned about the face, hands, and hip, and his foot was injured by a splinter. He is doing well under the care of Dr. Porter, in the hospital. James Lawlor was cut about the face with glass from the window. A leg was thrown on top of the magazine about a hundred yards distant, and the scalp of one of the parties was picked up near the gate today.

Linn's body will be buried by his brother-in-law, and those who are not claimed by their relatives, or which cannot be identified, will be placed in handsome coffins and buried from the Arsenal.

The Inquest

About 9 o'clock this morning, Coroner Woodward summons the following jury of inquest:--Frederick Whyte, George Wright, Thomas Taylor, John H. DeBille, Luther Martin, H.C. Elliot, George W. Lunt, George A. Cook, Humphrey H. Lemon, Andrew Cox, Mark E. King, Hiram Bauer.

Six of the bodies were wrapped in canvas (that is, what fragments remained of them) and placed in large boxes, the bodies being in such condition that it was impossible to place them in coffins and were taken to one of the frame buildings north of the old penitentiary building. At the floors of this building, before the jury was sworn a number of the relatives of the deceased gathered.

On the doors being opened for the jury the crowd, mostly females, rushed in, and frantic were the cries of "My poor brother," "father," etc. The bodies were limbless, every one had limbs off or broken, and in one case not half the body remained. In some cases the legs and arms were burned off to the socket. In this building the bodies were uncovered, and the jury sworn over each body.

Mr. John Sullivan identified the body of Jeremiah Mahoney. The body of John Meehan was identified by Mrs. Catherine Meehan, his mother, and his brother James. The body of John Moran, who resided on Union street, near the 6th street wharf, was identified by Patrick Shaloo and the wife of deceased, who is left with two small children.

The jury, after viewing these bodies, proceeded to the hospital where the body of Charles Linn, who died yesterday afternoon, where Mr. George H. Gates, his brother-in-law, and testified that he was from Philadelphia.

John Crane (who was badly burned about the face, hands, and hip, and injured in the foot), gave his evidence to the jury. He did not know what caused the explosion. The men all wore moccasins; never saw any smoking, and witness believes that it was accidental.

The jury, with the witnesses, proceeded from the hospital to the clerk's office, where the following evidence was taken:

Sergeant Wm. F. Flint (in charge of the building exploded) sworn—About two minutes before the explosion there were two boxes of K shot and 18 or 24 rounds in the building. There was a cart near by, and witness thinks that a box was let fall in unloading, causing the explosion. Every precaution was taken against accident when taking cartridges from fixed ammunition. The cart went there with a fresh supply to break up. It comes from the forts in all sizes; old ammunition. Witness has frequently opened the boxes and found the friction primers loose. Witness never heard that the times fuses were ordered to be thrown into the canal. The explosion was at the cart first; there were two explosions. There were ten men in the shed at the time. There was about a barrel of powder inside the building. Linn the teamster, was a sober man about 26, Mahoney about 30, Meehan about 27, John Moran was about 26, with a wife and two children.

Mr. Frederick Whyte testified he knew Linn and regarded him as a steady, sober, trustworthy man.

Capt. Curtis S. Barrett testified to the same effect. Witness thinks he smoked, but did not know that he carried a pipe.

John Daily sworn—Witness was about fifty yards away at the time, and fell on his face, and when he got up heard Linn moaning, and helped to get him away. Witness heard two explosions, the last one the loudest. The cart was being unloaded at the time. Witness had frequently seen friction primers loose in the boxes. Witness had seen barrels rolled contrary to regulations. Had seen loose caps among ammunition turned in from the forts. Had never seen any of the men intoxicated.

Wm. Summers sworn—Witness was about 40 yards off at the time and heard two explosions, the first from the cart or the door of the shed, the cart being backed up at the time. Witness saw the flame from the cart; the second explosion knocked him down.

Several other witnesses testified to the same effect.

Col. James G. Benton sworn—Witness was in his office at the time, and was soon on the spot, ordering the hose up. The building had been erected only about a month. It was made light that in case of an explosion there would be the last amount of resistance. There are between one and two thousand barrels of powder in the magazine. There are twelve buildings devoted to the laboratory purposes; four large magazines, three small ones, and two store houses. He had distributed the buildings in the best manner he could devise, placing the buildings east of the street that the sparks from steamers might not reach there. He had represented to the chief of ordnance that there was danger in such quantities, and he had ordered much of it away, but it had accumulated very fast. There is no loose powder in the Penitentiary building. Last year the chief of ordnance recommended to Congress the necessity of an appropriation for a magazine in the interior, and had repeated it this year. Had it not been for the marshy condition of the ground he could have distributed the buildings to better advantage. Witness visited the buildings ever day, and was careful to see that the floor was carpeted and the men had their moccasins.

The evidence being in, the jury proceeded to find a verdict in each of the seven cases:--That the said deceased, (naming him if one of the identified, or name unknown if otherwise,) while at work at the Arsenal, unloading fixed ammunition, (except in the case of Linn, the teamster,) was accidentally killed by the explosion of the same at about 15 minutes to 2 o'clock p.m. on the 18th instant, and that the jury are of the opinion that this accident was caused by the bad packing of the ammunition, it having been shown by the evidence that friction fuses have frequently been found loose in the boxes. It further appears that this ammunition has been received at the Arsenal from various sources and that no blame is attached to the officers of the Arsenal, it appearing to the satisfaction of the jury that stringent regulations for the government of the laboratory have always been fully and faithfully carried out and the deceased was a poor man and had no means. And the jury further recommend that a suitable magazine for the storage of powder be erected in some sparsely settled section of the country, the evidence showing that large quantities of powder and ammunition are on hand at the Arsenal for want of a suitable building for its reception.

A Representative from New Jersey; born near Johnsonberg, Hardwick Township, Warren County, N.J., December 3, 1763; moved with his father to Sussex County, N.J.; attended the common schools; entered the Revolutionary Army as a private in the First Regiment, Captain Manning's Company; promoted to Sergeant; member of the State general assembly 1801-1804; judge of the court of common pleas 1805-1821; sheriff of Sussex County in 1812; elected to the 15th and 16th Congresses and served from March 4, 1817 until his death in Washington, D.C. January 5, 1821; interment in North Hardyston Cemetery, near Franklin Furnace, Sussex County, N.J.

The National Intelligencer, Saturday, January 6, 1821

The painful duty again devolves on us of announcing the decease of a Member of the National Legislature. The Hon. John Linn, a Member of the House of Representatives from the state of New Jersey, died yesterday afternoon, aged about 57 years, after an illness of two weeks. He was a man of amiable character, and has left at home, where he was best known, as well as here, a large number of warm friends to lament his unexpected departure.

The National Intelligencer, Monday, January 8, 1821

The Senate did not sit on Saturday.

The House of Representatives met at the usual hour, when Mr. Southard, of New Jersey, announced the decease of his colleague, the late Mr. Linn.

Mr. Southard also moved the customary resolutions -- to attend the funeral of the deceased at 3 o'clock of the same day; to wear mourning crape one month, as testimony of respect for his memory; and lastly, to adjourn -

Body Recovered

Remains of Robert Linton to Be Brought Here Tomorrow

Mr. W.A. Linton of 532 4th street northeast received a telegram from Bay Ridge, Md., yesterday stating that the body of his brother, Mr. Robert M. Linton of this city, who was drowned in Chesapeake bay, near Arundel-on-the-Bay, the 13th instant, had been recovered. Mr. Linton left this morning for Bay Ridge to make the necessary arrangements for the shipment of the body to this city. It is expected that the remains will arrive here tomorrow, and interment will be made in the Congressional cemetery.

The deceased was thirty-five years old and unmarried. Four brothers and one sister survive him. Mr. Linton lost his life while out sailing with Mr. George Mathers, the artist. They were off Arundel-on-the-Bay when a squall arose, capsizing the boat and throwing the two men into the water. Mr. Mathers managed to cling to the upturned boat and drifted about the bay until 2 o'clock the following morning when he was picked up. Mr. Linton sank from view immediately after the accident. The efforts of the fishermen who have been dragging the bay since the drowning were rewarded yesterday, when, as stated above, the body was recovered.

Services Held at St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church

Funeral services were held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, on 23d street near Pennsylvania avenue, over the remains of Mr. Robert M. Linton, who was drowned in Chesapeake bay, near Arundel-on-the-Bay, the 13th instant. Rev. Alfred Harding, rector of the church, officiated. The interment, was made in Congressional cemetery. The officiating pallbearers were Messrs. Talbot O. Pullizzi [R67/232], William Donaldson, T.A. Mullett, William Gelston, Charles H. Holmead and Herbert Gelston.

Mr. Linton's body was recovered Wednesday by fisherman and was brought to this city this morning. He lost his life while out sailing with Mr. George Mathews, an artist of this city.

Paralysis Is Fatal To William A. Linton

Lifelong Resident of Washington Dies Without Regaining Consciousness

William A. Linton, a lifelong resident of Washington, died at his home, 532 4th street, yesterday afternoon about 5:45 o'clock. His death came suddenly following a stroke of paralysis which he suffered Friday night. He was sitting at home with the members of his family when stricken and he did not recover consciousness.

Mr. Linton was sixty-six years old. Many years ago he resided in the northwest section of the city and was employed in the government printing office. He gave up his position about fifteen years ago and later was in the coal business.

Mr. Linton was an enthusiastic member of the Washington Light Infantry in his younger days, and later in life he joined the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, the National Union and the East Washington Citizens' Association.

Took Active Part

At most of the meetings of the three organizations Mr. Linton participated in the proceedings, and his suggestions were usually adopted. He rendered valuable service to the Northeast Washington Citizens' Association, having served as chairman of a committee and member of the executive committee during most of the time he was a member.

He had appeared before the committees of both branches of Congress and discussed needed improvements or talked in favor of or in opposition to proposed legislation which was calculated to affect the northeast section.

He was a son of the late William A. Linton, who was familiarly known in this city as "Buck" Linton. He kept a restaurant on Louisiana avenue near 6th street and many members of Congress were his patrons.

Mr. Linton is survived by his widow, who was Miss Sallie Chichester, member of the Virginia family of Chichester, and three children -- William A. Linton, jr., Miss Julia Linton and Miss Eveline Linton. James Chichester, brother-in-law of Mr. Linton, came here from Richmond yesterday, arriving before the death of Mr. Linton.

Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed, but it has been decided to hold funeral services at the family home either tomorrow or Tuesday. Burial will be in Congressional cemetery.

Puddle and Mall as a Cornfield

The death of Adolphus F. Lipphard, which occurred at half-past 5 o'clock last evening, removes from this community another venerable citizen who has for many years been closely identified with the affairs and welfare of the District of Columbia. He passed away at his old home, 470 N street southwest, surrounded by relatives and friends.

Mr. Lipphard was born at Tuning, Denmark, in 1819 and immigrated to this country in 1837. Coming directly to this city he settled in Southwest Washington and has resided there ever since, a period of seventy years. His family took up its residence in the aged building on N street, which is one of the few remaining landmarks of old Washington, and he lived there continuously until the time of his death. For many years Mr. Lipphard conducted a wholesale leather and shoe mending establishment here, but owing to his advancing years he retired from an active commercial career about fifteen years ago.

Mason for Half Century

He was a veteran member of New Jerusalem Lodge, No. 9, F.A.A.M., having been affiliated with that Masonic body for more than fifty years, and being an honorary member at the time of his death. He had also been a member of the Society of Oldest Inhabitants almost from the time of its inception, and was active in the work of the organization up to a few years ago. He frequently expressed his keen disappointment and regret during his last hours because of his inability for the past two Fourths of July to attend the annual gatherings and reunions of the Oldest Inhabitants.

Mr. Lipphard was married while but a youth to Miss Lorraine Brunelle, the ceremony being performed in 1839 in the old arsenal structure at the foot of 4 1/2 street. His wife died three years ago. He was the father of fifteen children, only four of whom survive him, Messrs. William A. and Adolph F. Lipphard and Mrs. William D. Hellen and Mrs. Albert Anderson.

The funeral services, under Masonic auspices, will be held at the family residence, on N street, at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon and the burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Remembered Mall as Cornfield

When in a reminiscent mood Mr. Lipphard was wont to gather his children about him and tell of the time, yeas ago, when the now picturesque Mall, lying south of Pennsylvania avenue and extending from the Capitol to the White House, was a cornfield, with waving crop, when Pennsylvania avenue was "a mud puddle," and when it was necessary to cross over the James Creek canal on a log in lieu of a bridge.

The homestead at 470 N street southwest, in which he virtually passed his long life, was built of British brick, said to have been brought to Washington in sailing vessels from England as ballast. At the time of the British invasion of this city, in 1814 the homestead was only spared from the torch, it is said, because it had been converted into a temporary hospital for the use of the king's soldiers who were wounded in the fighting about Washington. The arsenal and nearly all the other buildings in that vicinity were destroyed by the invaders.

A dispatch announcing his death last Friday was received Saturday morning, and the father of the deceased, after consulting with the widow, immediately telegraphed to Columbus to have the remains interred there. This message was followed by a special delivery letter to a cousin of Mr. Lippard in Columbus giving detailed instructions. Funeral services for the Rev. John F. Lippard, who died in Columbus, Ohio, last Saturday, will be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the chapel in Lee's undertaking rooms.

The body of Mr. Lippard was brought to Washington at 10 o'clock last night. Only the immediate relatives of the deceased will be present at the services, which will be conducted by the Rev. Dr. Lynn, rector of Gorsuch M.E. Church.

It was at first intended to have Mr. Lippard buried in Columbus, where he has lived for the past twelve years and all arrangements had been completed for the funeral. The cortege was on its way to the cemetery when a messenger overtook the funeral party with a telegram directing that the remains be sent to Washington. The body was then taken direct to the station.

A.F. Lippard, the aged father of the deceased, resides at 470 N street southwest, and grief for his son caused him to reconsider the original plans and have the body brought to Washington.

The Rev. John F. Lippard was fifty-five years old and was a native of Washington. Until twelve years ago he made his home in this city. Since that time he has lived in Columbus. He was a spiritualist, and was known as the founder of the Soulist Church. His wife and six children live at 122 E street northeast.

Melancholy Occurrence

(From Our City Reporter)

Two Deaths By Drowning

We are sorry to record the death of two of our citizens, Mr. Conway Lipscomb and Mr. Thomas Jefferson Fletcher, who lost their lives last Thursday evening about sunset by drowning in the Potomac, not far from the Long Bridge. As we have taken some pains to obtain a correct statement of the circumstances which led to the death of these unfortunate men, and as we had an opportunity of hearing the evidence submitted on the Coroner's Inquest, we believe the following particulars to be true:

It appears that the deceased, with two other citizens, named C. Kemble and P. Bowen, left this city on Thursday morning, between nine and ten o'clock, to enjoy a day's fishing in the Potomac at Arlington. They remained there for several hours, and in the afternoon, being driven to take shelter at the Island Hotel from the rain, they afterwards determined, when the shower abated to divert themselves by swimming in the Potomac. It seems that all of them swam a considerable distance into the river, until they reached the wake of the steamboat Phoenix, which passed down the river while they were bathing. Before they left the shore, it is said that three of the party, Messrs. Lipscomb, Fletcher, and Bowen, made up a match to swim to the channel and back. While engaged in this imprudent amusement, to say the least of it, poor Lipscomb was heard to cry out for help, and it is supposed that he was seized with the cramp. Mr. Fletcher then swam to the assistance of his drowning companion, and succeeded in reaching him, when, unfortunately, he was so clutched by Mr. Lipscomb that they both sank together. Mr. Fletcher was heard by Mr. Kemble to exclaim that Lipscomb had clutched him. It appears, however, that Kemble and Bowen, being both very much exhausted, and afraid that they would lose their lives, did not go towards Lipscomb and Fletcher, and the latter sank together to the bottom of the river where there was about eight or ten feet water.

As there was no boat at hand, it took three quarters of an hour before one could be procured from a schooner near the Long Bridge. The bodies were then recovered, about thirty feet distant from each other, in about four feet depth of water; and it is presumed they had shifted their position by the falling of the tide. On the recovery of the poor sufferers from the water they were immediately taken to the Island Hotel, where, with the aid and under the direction of Dr. Buck, every effort was made to resuscitate the bodies, but all without effect -- Mr. McGrath humanely assisting the Doctor with all the help his house could afford.

A Coroner's Inquest was held yesterday before Thomas Woodward, Esq. and a jury, in view of the dead bodies, when numerous witnesses were examined. The verdicts were: That Conway Lipscomb was accidentally drowned while swimming in the Potomac on the 25th July, and that Thomas J. Fletcher was drowned while trying to rescue Conway Lipscomb from a watery grave.

It is a sad reflection that both the poor sufferers have left wives and children to mourn their loss. It was distinctly stated in evidence before the coroner's jury that the deceased were perfectly sober at the time they went into the Potomac, and had not been intoxicated during the day.

William Lipscomb, Contractor, Dies

Oldest Active Builder in Washington Passes Away at Age of 85

William Prince Lipscomb, president of the firm of contractors which bears his name, died at 3 a.m. today at his home, in the Ontario Apartments. He had returned from Florida about two months ago and had been ill only a short time.

He was born in King William County, Va., June 12, 1847. His father fought in the war of 1812 and Mr. Lipscomb when but 17 volunteered for the Confederate Army and remained in service until the end of the war.

In 1871 he came to Washington and entered the building trades. He was believed to be the oldest active builder in Washington and would have been 85 next Sunday. His company has erected some of the outstanding homes, embassies, churches and office buildings in the District of Columbia.

He had been first vice president of the District National Bank for many years. He was a trustee of Lynchburg College, Virginia, where he established a Bible chair in memory of the late Dr. Frederick D. Power.

He was member and trustee of the Columbia Heights Christian Church; a member of Benjamin B. French Lodge, No. 15, F.A.A.M., and a 32nd degree Scottish Rite Mason.

He is survived by his widow, Lulie K. Lipscomb, and two children, Helen Lipscomb Rea, wife of Capt. Everett Foster Rea, stationed at Fort Meade, Md., and George W. Lipscomb, a civil engineer with his father's firm. He also is survived by one grandson, Everett Rea and by a number of nieces and nephews.

Prominent Capital Contractor to Rest in Congressional Cemetery After Funeral at Home

William Prince Lipscomb, prominent Washington contractor and head of the William P. Lipscomb Co., who died early yesterday at his home in the Ontario Apartments will be buried in Congressional Cemetery tomorrow after funeral services at 2:30 p.m. at his home.

A resident of the District since 1871, Mr. Lipscomb was a member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia, and had been first vice president of the District National Bank for many years. He was born in King William County, Va., in 1847, and enlisted in the Confederate Army at the age of 17.

His company had built many of the outstanding embassies, homes, churches and office buildings in the city.

Besides his widow, he is survived by two children, Helen Lipscomb Rea, wife of Capt. Everett Foster Rea, stationed at Fort Meade, Md., and George W. Lipscomb, a civil engineer connected with the firm.

A History of the City of Washington, Its Men and Institutions.

W.P. Lipscomb, born in King William county, Virginia, is a scion of the stock that left England in the 16th century to make homes in wild America. He was educated in the old-field schools. Too young to go into the war of the sixties earlier than 1864, he volunteered at the age of seventeen and followed its fortunes to the close, at Appomattox. His father, Warren Lipscomb, Sr., now dead, and a widowed mother, Elizabeth Lipscomb, with seven children, with only a farm left for their support, and that ravaged by both armies, young William soon realized that what fortune there was for him pointed to other fields than the farm. He left home with a limited amount of cash in his pocket, walked to Richmond, Va., and in that city learned the carpenter's trade. He came to Washington in 1871, and secured employment with one of the prominent builders of the city. In 1873 he started business on his own account, and notwithstanding the odds against every new competitor, with limited means to withstand and live, he, in a short time, became one of the first among the builders and contractors. From the beginning his work was appreciated, he having gained the confidence and esteem of the general public by putting his own character and individuality into his work and business, which speaks for itself. Some of his buildings are: H.C. Perkins, Esq., 1701 Connecticut avenue; George W. McLanahan, Twenty-first and Q streets; the late Col. A.T. Britton, 1325 Sixteenth street; P.E. Chapin, Esq. 1735 Massachusetts avenue; Dr. Charles W. Richardson, 1317 Connecticut avenue; Dr. Z.T. Sowers; Capt. W.M. Folger, New Hampshire avenue, later owned by Admiral Sampson; Admiral Crosby, Connecticut avenue; Admiral Stanley, Connecticut avenue; Col. B.R. Russell, 1616 Eighteenth street; Major Thomas M. Gale, 2300 S street; Hon. J.J. Hemphill, 2108 Bancroft Place; Mr. Lyman Tiffany, 1705 Connecticut avenue; The Willard building, The Fendall building, and many others.

Mr. Lipscomb married Miss Lulie K. Wade, daughter of John Kirby and C.A. Wade, of Washington, and has two children, Helen Irene and George William. He is a member of the executive board of the Master Litchfield. On June 7th, 1880, Charles S. Litchfield, aged 42 years 2 months and 19 days. Funeral will take place from his late residence, 497 C street southwest tomorrow (Wednesday) at 3 o'clock p.m. Friends and relatives invited to attend.

The Evening Star, June 7, 1880

Instantly Killed

A Washington Man Fatally Struck by a Railroad Train

At 8:40 o'clock this morning a fatal accident took place at the depot of the Baltimore and Potomac railroad, by which a Mr. Charles Litchfield, a well known citizen, residing at No. 497 C street southwest, was almost instantly killed. Mr. Litchfield was a painter by trade and was at the time making arrangements to go to Alexandria and from thence to some point in Fairfax county to do a job of painting. He had just been placing some mixed paint and working tools in the baggage car and was about retiring when he was struck by a train and instantly killed. A coroner's inquest was called and the following jury were empanelled: James Small, L.M. Graves, N.H. Doherty, James B. Avery, Chas. H. Tyler, Wm. W. Swart, Samuel H. Bemar, A.P. Levitt, Geo. Holmes, S.W. Anderson, John A. Travis and A.J. Clarke.

John T. Roby, brakeman in the yard, testified that he was coming in with two cars; just as he was about to pass an engine which was taking water on the opposite track Mr. Litchfield stepped out from behind the engine and not more than 12 feet from his car. Witness called to him three times and put down the brakes. Mr. Litchfield stopped on his track, his eyes set on the accommodation train which was coming in from Baltimore. Witness did all he could to keep from hitting the man. The car struck him and he was dragged 10 or 12 feet. Other testimony was taken--one testifying that the distance he was dragged was greater. The man was almost instantly killed, his neck and legs being broken. The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the facts, and stated that no blame could be attached to the employees of the yard. "The jury respectfully suggest that the system of shifting cars and making up trains at depot, called 'shooting in,' should be remedied by preventing cars being moved on the arrival of incoming or departure of trains." Mr. Litchfield was 42 years of age. He was a member of Metropolis Lodge, I.O.O.F., the members of which took charge of his body.

The Evening Star, June 10, 1880

The Funeral of Charles Litchfield, who was killed accidentally at the B. and P. Railroad depot on Monday morning took place yesterday afternoon from his late residence, 497 C street southwest, and there was a large attendance of his relatives and friends, among them many of his fellow workmen in the railroad shops and a delegation of Metropolis Lodge, No. 16, I.O.O.F., of which he was a member. There were on the coffin a number of floral tributes. The services were conducted by Rev. L.M. Gardner, of Ryland Chapel, and the remains were taken to Congressional cemetery, where the interment took place--Messrs. Harmon, Lescallet, Graves, Stevens, Windsor and Ege being the pall bearers--and Chaplain Damond conducting the services of the order. An affecting incident took place at the grave--the youngest of the five children, as the coffin was lowered, feelingly saying, "Good bye, papa." Many who heard it were affected to tears.

Civil War Nurse Dies At Home Here

Mrs. Florence Lithgow, 91, Had Served Country for Half Century Since 1862

Mrs. Florence Pettigrew Lithgow, 91 years old, who for nearly a half century was engaged in active service of her country, begun as a nurse in the hectic days of 1862, in hospitals in Washington, died Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Theodore Michael, 3802 Military road, Chevy Chase.

Funeral services were conducted at St. Mark's Episcopal Church this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment was in Congressional Cemetery.

Volunteered for Service

When the call came for nurses to care for the wounded soldiers Miss Lithgow, who before her marriage was Florence Pettigrew, volunteered and was assigned in the old Armory Square Hospital. She served continuously through the last three years of the war.

It was during her work at the Armory Square Hospital that the romance with the late George W. Lithgow, who was in charge of the hospital dispensary, had its beginning terminating later in their marriage. Mrs. Lithgow remained as a nurse serving in a number of different hospitals until peace was declared.

Employed at Treasury

In addition to valiant service rendered as a nurse during the Civil War, Mrs. Lithgow was for 40 years employed in the redemption division of the Treasury Department, retiring at the age of 78 years.

Mrs. Lithgow was a charter member of the Army Nurses' Association and was an honor guest at the dedication of the new Red Cross building in this city.

She is survived by her daughter Mrs. Michael; three sons, Arthur A., William H. and Allen H. Lithgow; five grandchildren, eight great-grandchildren and two sisters, Mrs. Hiram Spear of this city, and Mrs. Eugene Lubber of Laurel, Md.

Littlefield, Ella d. 25 Nov 1910 41 yrs. R54/294

Littlefield. Suddenly on Friday, November 25, 1910 in Grafton, W. Virginia, Ella Littlefield (nee Garner) daughter of Thomas and the late Susan Garner. Remains at P.A. Taltavull's chapel, 443 7th street southwest. Services at chapel of Congressional Cemetery, Sunday, November 27 at 3 o'clock. Ladies of the I.O.M. Mt. Vernon Lodge No. 3 are invited to attend (Upper Marlboro papers please copy).

The Evening Star, November 27, 1910, p. 1

Drinks Carboic Acid

*Mrs. Ella Littlefield, Formerly of Washington, Commits Suicide
Cumberland, Md. November 26*

Mrs. Ella Littlefield who went to Grafton, W. Va. from Washington, D.C., about two years ago, committed suicide at the home of Mrs. Margaret Moore, 408 East Main street, Grafton, by drinking carboic acid. No cause can be assigned. Mrs. Littlefield had previously appeared to be in a most cheerful mood and last night she attended the theater. She left the room after talking to Mrs. Crowley, mother of Mrs. Moore, supposedly to retire, and soon after Mrs. Littlefield entered the parlor where Mrs. Moore was entertaining some friends and fell on the couch struggling in death agony.

Two physicians were called but she died in less than an hour. Mrs. Littlefield was about forty years of age and the possessor of a cheerful disposition. She had two sons, aged 22 and 20 years, in Washington, who have been notified.

Final Rites Held For Mrs. Ella Littlefield

Interment in Congressional Cemetery of Woman Who Committed Suicide in Grafton

Funeral services for Mrs. Ella Littlefield, daughter of Thomas and the late Susan Garner, who died at Grafton, W. Va., last Friday night from the effects of carboic acid, taken with suicidal intent, were held at the Congressional Cemetery Chapel at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. One of the priests of St. Dominic's Church officiated. The body arrived from Grafton Saturday morning and was conveyed to the undertaking establishment of P.A. Taltavull 443 7th street southwest.

Mrs. Littlefield was born near Upper Marlboro, Md. She was forty-one years old and had spent nearly all her life in Washington. Her father now resides at Upper Marlboro. Her mother died a few years ago. She married when eighteen years old, and was left a widow about eleven years ago. She is survived by two sons, Trayson Littlefield, aged twenty three, and Norman Littlefield, twenty-one years old, both residing on farms near Upper Marlboro.

No Know Reason for Suicide

When residing in Washington, Mrs. Littlefield made her home with Mrs. Helen Kyle of 1226 Water street southwest. Mrs. Kyle is unable to ascribe any reason for the suicide.

Mrs. Littlefield ended her life in a dramatic manner in the parlor of a loging house at Grafton conducted by Mrs. Margaret Moore, 408 East Main street. She had attended the funeral theater Friday night last with some friends. She left the parlor shortly after returning home supposedly to retire but returned to the parlor, where Mrs. Moore was entertaining some friends, and fell upon the couch, writhing in death agony. The doctors were called promptly, but she died in less than an hour.

Mrs. Littlefield was a member of the Ladies of Mount Vernon Lodge No. 3, I.O.M. of this city, members of which had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Littleford. On July 2d, 1886, Anna Littleford, wife of Thomas A. Littleford, aged 34 years, leaving six children.

They say that life is like a flower,
That blooms a few short days,
Perchance 'tis but a single hour,
It withers and decays.

This life was not unlike the bloom;
The fragrance that it shed
Dispenses, from the grave, the gloom
Tells us she is not dead.

The funeral will take place from 1331 K street southeast tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon, at two o'clock. Friends and acquaintances are invited to attend. (Southern Maryland papers please copy).

'Tis hard to break the tender chord
When love has bound the heart.
'Tis hard, so hard, to speak the words,
Must we forever part?

Dearest loved one, we have laid thee
In the peaceful grave's embrace,
But thy memory will be cherished
Till we see thy heavenly face.

Left us, yes, forever more;
But again we hope to meet thee
On that bright and happy shore.
God in His wisdom has recalled
The boon which He has given;
And though the body molders here
His soul is safe in heaven.
Gone, but not forgotten.

Death of Asbury Lloyd

Prominent Attorney and Former District Official

In the death of Asbury Lloyd, which occurred suddenly at his residence, 611 Florida avenue northwest, yesterday, Washington loses one who has been identified with the city's interest for a long period of years.

The deceased was a native of this city, born in South Washington. He was one of the sons of Wm. Lloyd, who was a prominent builder in his day. For several terms Asbury Lloyd was a councilman from his section of the city. Adopting the law as a profession, he studied and was admitted to the bar of the District and pursued the profession with zeal and success.

When a resident of the old fourth ward, Mr. Lloyd was, in 1862, elected a representative in the board of common council, and served with so much satisfaction to the people generally that he succeeded himself in 1863 and 1864, presiding over that body with much tact and ability the latter year. In 1865 he was elected to the board of aldermen, in which his brother, Thomas E. Lloyd, presided as a representative of the seventh ward. Asbury Lloyd served in this body till 1869.

Mr. Lloyd was a man of fine legal attainments and acted as counsel in many important cases during his career as an attorney. During the war he was appointed prize commissioner by President Lincoln.

To his family he was a devoted husband and affectionate father, to his friends he was faithful and true. A widow and one daughter, the latter the wife of Mr. Charles J. Ziegler, survive him.

Belva Lockwood, Lawyer, Dies at 85

Only Woman Who Ran for President and First to practice in Supreme Court

A Pioneer in Suffrage

She Fought Case of Cherokee Indians Against the Government and Won $5,000,000 Settlement

Mrs. Belva A.B. Lockwood, the first woman admitted to practice before the Supreme Court, a pioneer in the woman suffrage movement, and the only woman who was ever a candidate for President of the United States, died here today in her eighty-sixth year.

Mrs. Belva Anna Bennett Lockwood had herself told of how she became one of the first women in this country to fight for equal rights. A widow at 24 years of age, with a child, she was teaching school in her native town, Royalton, N.Y., at a salary of only $3 a week. Men teachers doing the same work were getting twice as much or more.

“I kicked to the school trustees,” she said, “I went to the wife of the Methodist minister. The answer I got opened my eyes and raised my dander. “I can’t help you; you cannot help yourself, for it is the way of the world.”

The apparent hopelessness of woman’s cause so aroused her that she fought for more than fifty years against the exclusion of women from the rights which men enjoyed. She fortified herself with a collegiate education at Genesee College in the days when higher education was rare among women, and for successive periods was Preceptress of seminaries at Lockport and Oswego, N.Y.

In each place she was a leader among the women’s societies, and when at the close of the civil war she removed to Washington she was determined to become a lawyer. In the meantime she married again, to the Rev. Ezekiel Lockwood, a Baptist clergyman in Washington, who died nine years later in 1877. Her first husband had been Uriah H. McNall, a young farmer of Royalton.

Soon after her second marriage she began to study at the National University of Law, and upon graduation, after spirited controversy, was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

“I have never stopped fighting,” she said. “My cause was the cause of thousands of women. I drew up a bill admitting women to the practice before the bar of the United States Supreme Court and had it passed.” This victory was widely acclaimed. She herself was the first woman to take advantage of the new law, and at the age of 49 was admitted to the highest court in the land. She won several notable legal battles, notably that of the Cherokee Indians against the United States Government, in which she secured a settlement of $5,000,000 for the Indians. During President Garfield’s administration she made unsuccessful application for the Brazilian mission.

Probably the most striking incident in her career then came in 1884 with the nomination by the Equal Rights Party of the Pacific Slope as a candidate for the Presidency of the United States. The nomination was renewed by the same party at a convention in Iowa four years later.

Mrs. Lockwood was a delegate to the Universal Peace Convention at Paris in 1889 and again in 1890 to the congress at London, where she read papers on arbitration and disarmament. She lectured throughout the country and until her last illness maintained a law office in Washington.

“Suffrage is no longer an issue,” said Mrs. Lockwood on the occasion of her eighty-fifth birthday. “It is an accomplished fact. Those States which have denied it to women will come around.”

Andrew Carnegie was asked several years ago to aid Mrs. Lockwood financially. A delegation of Washington citizens sought him as Mrs. Lockwood was dispossessed of her home and belongings by a ruling of the District Supreme Court at the age of 84.

It was then brought out for the first time how Mrs. Lockwood had received the retainer of the Cherokee Indians to fight their case for them in the Supreme Court. Many years before, when she had been practicing before the court of Claims, she became acquainted with a North Carolina Cherokee Indian named Jim Taylor, and he was so pleased with her work that he influenced a number of other members of his tribe to bring their cases. He proposed to bring to her claims of the Cherokee Indians against the United States Government, he and she to divide the fees equally. The agreement was duly recorded and for several years both Mrs. Lockwood and the Indian did well with the arrangement.

A year or two later Taylor died, and his heirs in going over his possessions found the copy of the agreement with Mrs. Lockwood. They filed suit to recover one-half Mrs. Lockwood's fee, and won their case against Mrs. Lockwood for $9,000.

With her arm broken in two places, Mrs. Belva Lockwood today returned to her home, 619 F Street northwest, from which she may soon be ejected. Mrs. Lockwood was injured Tuesday by falling from a chair on which she had climbed to light the gas. She was taken to the George Washington University Hospital. Dr. Charles S. White setting the broken bones.

Mrs. Lockwood was alone when she fell. An attendant who heard her cries summoned Dr. Robert S. Trimble. Later she was removed to the hospital.

Mrs. Lockwood was cited recently to show cause why she should not be compelled to surrender possession of her home and office. This building was recently sold at auction for taxes to the New England Casualty Company.

Eightieth Birthday Anniversary at Social Function

Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood was the honored guest at a reception given for her last night by the Women's National Press Association at the Arlington Hotel. The compliment signalized Mrs. Lockwood's eightieth birthday, and the occasion gave the club women of Washington an opportunity to unite in tribute to "her worth as a woman, her ability as a lawyer and her bravery as a pioneer."

Mrs. Ruth M. Griswold-Pealer, president of the Women's National Press Association, presided, and at the close of the general reception addresses were made to women prominent in the legal and club life of Washington and other cities. Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey, dean of the Washington College of Law, declared that "Mrs. Lockwood, by her legal acumen, persuasive arguments, convincing logic and forceful personality opened the gate which admitted her to an equal plane with the galaxy of eminent, counselors, and obtained for her recognition at the bar of that august Supreme Court of the United States.

Mrs. Lockwood an Exemplar

Miss Emma Gillette advised young women to follow Mrs. Lockwood's example and practice law, so that men could be met on equal grounds and the fight for votes won.

Other speakers were Miss Grace Pierce of the Syracuse College of Law, Mrs. Edward Fink, International League of Women's Press Clubs, Mrs. Clinton Smith, president of the District W.C.T.U., Mrs. Hannah Sperry, Mrs. Margaret Coope, Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood, Miss Susan Pollock and Rev. W.T. McKinney, the only man on the platform, who asserted that the time would soon come "when women will have all the rights and privileges of men." Several songs were contributed by Mrs. Ella H. Melvin.

Bouquet of Roses Presented

Mrs. Kittie Rose Pepper, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, presented to Mrs. Lockwood a bouquet of American beauty roses on behalf of the hostesses the evening. Mrs. Lockwood expressed her appreciation of the reception in a few but heartfelt, words.

Letters of regret were read from Ida M. Galloway, president general, Auxiliary United Spanish War Veterans; Mrs. R.B. Behrend, secretary of the Washington section, Council of Jewish Women, and others.

As a Little Girl She Could Walk a Rail Fence and Have a Dirty Face (From the Toledo Commercial)

Belva Lockwood is not a young woman. A constitutional requirement is almost half a century's experience before a person is eligible to the Presidency. Neither is she an old woman. To see and converse with her would impress you that she was on the hill top of life, gently on the decline, with a long distance from the three-score-ten. Yet there was no hesitation when she told me that in 1830, in the state of New York, county of Niagara, village of Royalton, Belva A. Bennett first saw the light. And her childhood remembrances, as she humorously put it, were of "a little dirty-faced girl on a farm, like A topsy, not afraid of snakes or rats or 'nothing'; as active as a boy and could walk rail fences for a mile and never drop off; in for anything and delighted to ride the horses after the cows; taught school at fourteen and married at eighteen." This is her early life as she summarily put it.

A Talk with Mrs. Lockwood--Political Reforms Proposed

Mrs. Lockwood as a Matrimonial Agent

Mrs. Belva Lockwood has returned to her home in this city from a prolonged lecture tour in the States of Pennsylvania and New York. She has a lecture on the political and social life of the city, and incidentally she discusses industrial reform, woman suffrage, and the temperance issue. All these questions form the planks in the platform of the party which she helped to organize last October in Springfield, Ill. The next convention of the new party will be held in this city on the 22d of February next, and Mrs. Lockwood yesterday told a Star reporter something about the aims and objects of this new organization, whose birth she had witnessed. The reporter found Mrs. Lockwood at work at her desk, but she was willing to be interrupted. The young lady who was seated on the opposite side of the desk busily engaged in writing stopped her work long enough to conduct two small children into the other room, and then returned to her pen and paper. The children, however, did not stay where they were put but promptly returned and Mrs. Lockwood smiled indulgently upon the youngest--a little girl--and asked her if she could not write out a pension application for the gentleman. Having been supplied with paper, the little one soon became absorbed in her clerical duties, and Mrs. Lockwood resumed her account of the rise of the new party.

Not After Offices

"We are not," she had said, "a political party in the sense that we are organized for the purpose of supplying candidates for offices. We may make no nominations at all for the next national campaign. Our platform of principles has not as yet been finally adopted, and that is one object of our meeting in this city in February. We want to complete our work and place ourselves right before the public. Our main object is industrial reform, and all other issues are subordinate to that."

"Not female suffrage?" asked the listener with surprise.

"Yes, female suffrage," was the unfaltering reply; and then she added, "the question of suffrage for women seems now to have reached a stage when it can take care of itself. In a great many of the States women now enjoy school suffrage, and in some this right is extended still further. Woman suffrage is, however, one of our planks, but, as I have said, the main thing is to supply a remedy for the existing industrial evils. We favor the Government owning and controlling the telegraph lines and the railroads. We believe that the Government should issue legal tender or gold and silver certificates in sufficient quantities to meet the wants of the people in carrying on the business of the country. There was hardly enough money last fall to move the crops and we believe that the Government should prevent any such scarcity in our circulating medium. We are of the further opinion that the Government should provide land for every worthy homeless family, and that this land should be paid for in moderate yearly installments. These are the principal features of our platform, although it includes such important topics as the abolition of the liquor traffic and the granting of woman suffrage."

To Draw From The George Party

"What parties will you draw from most largely?" asked the reporter, with considerable anxiety.

"Well," said Mrs. Lockwood, in a reflective tone, "I should say that we would gather strength from what is known as the George party. You know in these industrial questions we don't go as far as the anarchists, nor are we as extreme as the George men. There are a great many who can unite with us, because we occupy the most favorable ground."

"What candidates are spoken of in connection with the Presidential nomination?" inquired the listener.

"We may make no nominations at all," was the reply. "I don't know whether there are any members of the party who have Presidential aspirations or not. I know that I have not, although a good many people seem to think that my ambition is in that line. But it is a mistake. All we propose to do at the meeting in February is to complete the platform or declaration of principles."

Mrs. Lockwood said that she did not know how many States would be represented in the coming convention, but she assured the reporter that the new party did not propose to antagonize any of the parties now in existence.

Mrs. Lockwood As A Matrimonial Agent

The conversation finally drifted from the rather dry subject of politics into other matters, and finally reference was made to the published statement that she had received a letter from a man who asked her assistance in procuring him a wife. Mrs. Lockwood laughed heartily when the reporter asked her if she had complied with this request. She said that she had paid no attention to it, but shortly after the fact was published in the newspapers she received a letter from a woman living in Maryland who asked her to get her a husband, because she owned a farm and had no one to work it for her. Mrs. Lockwood remarked that soon after this letter arrived a man came to her and said he was out of work. "As he was young, and said that he understood farming," added Mrs. Lockwood, with a smile, "I sent him out after this woman, but with what result I have never heard. I have received a number of similar applications since then from both men and women, but, of course, I have made no response. It is singular," she added, in a pensive tone, "how many people want to get married and can't."

"And how many want to be free from the matrimonial bond and can't," ventured the reporter.

Mrs. Lockwood laughed and the young lady on the opposite side of the table giggled, and the reporter bade them both good day.

She Denies Having Retained Any of Frederick Henke's Pension Money

In the case of Frederick Henke agt. Belva A. Lockwood to recover about $500 which he claims is a portion of his pension money retained by Mrs. Lockwood, the defendant has filed her pleas, claiming that she is not guilty, and is not nor never has been indebted, as alleged. She files also an affidavit, in which she states that plaintiff's declaration and affidavit are wickedly and maliciously false in every particular, save that the plaintiff received the check for $1,220.20, which check was not in her possession over 15 minutes. She states that $1,000 was deposited in bank, and he has received every dollar, or its equivalent, and since has borrowed three small sums of money from her and become indebted to her for six months' house rent, and for a carpet, bedstead, etc. Of the balance of $212.20, she says $100 was received by plaintiff on deposit of the check for collection and $50 by defendant, and $50 more by defendant the following day for house rent, money loaned, etc. She says that plaintiff was, in July, ejected from her premises for non-payment of rent, and he broke the locks and hinges of the doors and did other damage to the property. She claims that the plaintiff is indebted to her to the amount of $35.

The Evening Star, March 9, 1880Mrs. Lockwood in a Maryland Court

A correspondent of the Baltimore Sun from Frederick, Md., March 8, says: Something of a sensation was produced at the court house in this city today by the appearance of Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood, of Washington, D.C., as counsel for the defence in the case of the state against three small boys, aged from 10 to 14 years, whose parents reside in Washington, and who are charged with the larceny of several articles from a car belonging to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company, at Point of Rocks, on the 5th of December last. Mrs. Lockwood's admission was moved by Mr. C.H. Eckstein. The court, Judge Lynch, merely stated that if no objection was made by any member of the bar the clerk should administer the usual oath. The court room was densely packed with spectators, included among whom were a large number of ladies, the elite of the city. The trial in which she is engaged is still in progress.

...Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood, of this city, was then introduced by Mrs. Stanton as "Lockwood versus the United States." The speaker read quite a length and carefully prepared paper, covering most of the points connected with the woman suffrage movement, and claiming to show that woman is morally and mentally man's equal, at least, and is capable of filling any station in life for which his physical organization is fitted. The education of females now is tending to a more practical and useful life than in the past. Female teachers in our public schools are of vast importance in the suffrage cause. Our girls are no longer educated with the idea of matrimony alone, and to be petted as doll babies, but they are taught the branches best suited for practical life. The speaker was frequently applauded, and at the close of her remarks she was handed a handsome bouquet. During the delivery of Mrs. Lockwood's address, Miss Susan B. Mrs. Lockwood at Marlboro

In the Circuit Court at Marlboro, Md., yesterday, Judge Magruder, presiding, gave his decision on the question as to whether Belva A. Lockwood, the well-known female Washington lawyer, should be admitted to practice at the Marlboro, Prince George's county (Md.) Court, she being then present as counsel in a pending case. The judge decided that she could not be admitted. Mrs. Lockwood when the issue was made some days ago, was not permitted to speak in her own behalf and filed a bill in the name of her attorney, B.B. Chew.

Judge Magruder on Woman's Rights

Judge Magruder, after referring to this brief, which showed that Mrs. Lockwood is a reputable lawyer of five years' practice in this city, rendered his decision, in the course of which he said: "God has sent a bound for woman. Man was created first and woman afterwards, and of a part of him. They are like the sun and the moon, moving in their different orbits, the great seas that have their bounds, and the eternal hills and rocks that are set above them and cannot be moved--[Just here a voice was heard to say, "How about Hell Gate?"] The judge waxed very warm at this interruption, but continued his remarks to the close.

Mrs. Lockwood's Stump Speech

Mrs. Lockwood had permission to use the court room from the president of the board of Commissioners, who have the control of all the public buildings in the town, and when the judge finished his remarks and had adjourned the court Mrs. Lockwood arose to address the members of the bar, when the judge again interfered and said she should not speak in the court room.

Mrs. L. was then invited to speak in the public square, which she proceeded to do, and was listened to by all the members of the bar and a large number of spectators, of which the judge was not an integral part. During Mrs. Lockwood's speech she was frequently applauded and the judge denounced for his action. The members of the bar and the citizens generally seemed to sympathize with Mrs. Lockwood's claim, she being a lawyer of good and long standing in the District of Columbia.

Mrs. Lockwood said the time had come when women were ready for open rebellion, and they would stop short of nothing but unconditional surrender. Referring to the refusal of the court to appoint Mrs. Dundore a constable she said that the constables generally disgraced themselves by getting drunk on other people's money, and she did not think that Mrs. Dundore could have done worse than some of the present officers. Marshall Douglas made some remarks after which the committee on the Paris exposition was announced as follows:--Belva A. Lockwood, Matilda Joslyn Gage, Dr. Mary Thompson, Marilla M. Ricker, and Elizabeth Boyston Harbert.

John Henry Logue, the marine who attempted suicide in the Marine barracks some weeks ago, as published in The Star at the time, died at the Naval hospital yesterday from the effects of his wounds. As stated at the time Logue had saved several hundred dollars while in the service, and when his last enlistment expired he intended going into business, but he was robbed of his money. He then took to drinking and wound up his debauch by shooting himself in the head one Sunday morning after he discovered that he had again enlisted. He shot himself with a Winchester rifle, the muzzle of which he put in his mouth. He had tied a string to the trigger and fired the weapon by attaching the string to his foot. Shortly after the breakfast bell rang at the marine barracks yesterday morning, and most of the marines had entered the mess-room, they were startled by hearing the report of a rifle fired in one of the sleeping rooms. Investigation showed that he shot was fired by one of their comrades, John H. Logue, who had attempted to take his own life. The weapon he used was found on the floor beside him. He had shot himself int he mouth. How he managed to accomplish this with a Springfield rifle, the weapon he had used, was a mystery until the gun was examined by one of the marines, who found a string tied to the trigger and the other end attached to his foot. Although so badly wounded, the sufferer was not unconscious. He was removed to the Naval hospital, where the surgeons found that he was probably fatally wounded. The interior of his mouth was torn in shreds, but the bullet, instead of entering his brain, as he had intended, passed into his neck and lodged near the spinal column. Logue is about 43 years old. He came here a few days go from Pottstown, Pa., and re-enlisted. He was discharged from te marine corps at Philadelphia about a month ago, and had seen about fifteen years' service. He had saved several hundred dollars, and when his term of enlistment expired he went to New York, intending to go into some business other than carrying a musket for Uncle Sam. While in New York he was robbed of all his money; so he came here and re-enlisted. He had suffered considerably from the effects of a spree and remained in his room Saturday. When his comrades left him in his room yesterday morning he appeared to be sick, but none of them thought of his attempting suicide. He has no relatives in this city.

Looney, Captain John

d. 16 May 1846

R40/44The National Intelligencer, May 18, 1846*

Died, at Fuller's hotel, on Friday morning, at a quarter past 8 o'clock, Captain John Looney, a member of the delegation representing the Cherokee Nation now in this city on business with the United States Government.

Captain Looney was the nephew of the celebrated chieftain Enolce, or Black Fox. He was about seventy years of age, and distinguished as a brave, honest, and good man. He has ever been a firm and unwavering friend to the whites, and to the civilization of the red race. During the war with the Creek Indians, he joined the Cherokee regiment which co-operated with the American army under the command of General Andrew Jackson, and at the battle of Tallodega he received a severe gun-shot wound from the enemy, and for which disability he had been allowed a pension for life by this Government; and after the treaties of 1817 and 1819 he removed with his family and many others of his people, to the new country acquired by the Nation from the United States, west, by virtue of the exchange of land which took place under the treaties mentioned. To the treaty of 1828 his signature will be found as one of the subscribing negotiators. He has held many conspicuous offices, posts of honor, and trust among his people; and, after the death of John Jolly, he was the only surviving legitimate chief in power under the "Old Settlers," or "Western Cherokees," when the Cherokee Nation from east of the Mississippi removed and arrived in their new country west, in the spring of 1839.

In the measures pursued for the preservation of peace, harmony, and brotherhood, and which led to the adoption of the Act of Union that made the Eastern and Western Cherokees again a united people under the present existing Government of the Cherokee Nation, Captain Looney, as a true patriot and friend to the prosperity and happiness of his people, acquitted himself wisely, and gained the full confidence of not only his own immediate constituents, the "old settlers," but also of the new emigrants from their ancient country east of the Mississippi. He has left a very worthy and respectable family and numerous friends to mourn his loss. For some days previous to his death he appeared to be conscious that he could not recover from his sickness; and, in a conversation on the subject, he remarked that he had fully made his peace with his Maker; and that he did not in the least fear to die, whenever it should please him to take his spark of life away; that the great and the powerful, the humble and the weak, were alike all doomed, sooner or later, to the same end, and he knew that death awaited all. C.D.

Drowned in the Potomac

Probable Suicide of a Son of Ex-Congressman Lord

Information was received here today that the body of H.W. Lord, the son of ex-Congressman Lord, and recently a clerk in the Patent office, was found floating in the Potomac by some fishermen. The men were ignorant and towed the body ashore at Currioman, a point near Beall's Landing, about 80 miles down the river, and buried it in the sand at high-water mark. The body was buried just as it was found on Wednesday, and today a colored boy who was with the men came to this city bearing a card taken from the clothing of the dead man with his name and address. It is supposed that he jumped from one of the river steamers some time between Sunday and Wednesday with the intention of committing suicide. An acquaintance met him on the Norfolk boat on Friday last, and he said then that he had that morning just come up from Norfolk. He had been drinking heavily since losing his place in the Patent office, and had evidently determined to take his own life. It was stated to a Star reporter that he had written to a friend in the Patent office declaring his intention to drown himself in the Potomac, but the person to whom such a letter was addressed could not be found.

Mr. Lord was a man 35 years of age, and came to this city about the time his father did, who represented the 1st Michigan district in the last Congress. He secured the place in the Patent Office where he has since been. He had a pleasing address and courteous manners, in this particulars greatly resembling his father.

The president of the Michigan Republican Association, Mr. B.A. Harlan, will leave tomorrow morning with an undertaker and remove the remains to this city. The mother of the deceased, who lives in Detroit, has been informed. His father, who was recently appointed receiver of the land office at Devils Lake, Dakota, is at his new post.

The Late H.A. Lord, Jr.

The remains of Mr. H.A. Lord, jr., which were found on the beach near King Capsico landing, Virginia, on Wednesday last, as stated in The Star, were brought to this city yesterday in charge of Mr. B.A. Harlan and Mr. Zurhorst, the undertaker. The body was so much decomposed that it could hardly be identified. The body was taken to the Congressional cemetery and temporarily placed in a vault.

Losano. On the morning of the 27th June, of dysentery, Isabella, aged 9 months and 15 days, youngest child of Matthew and Isabella Losano.

Weep not for little Bella
Her gentle spirit's fled;
She sweetly sleeps with Jesus
Among the silent dead.

She has gone from our circle,
And gone from ur earth;
She is dead, but in dying
She gains a new birth.

Past her sufferings, past her pain,
Cease to weep, for tears are vain
Calm the tumult of your breast,
She who suffered is at rest.

Losano. On August 25, 1898 at 10:15 p.m., Mathias Losano, at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Anna M. Downs, 601 9th street southwest. Funeral on Sunday at 3 p.m.

The Evening Star, August 27, 1898

Death of Mathias Losano

Veteran Member of Two Local Fraternal Organizations

Mathias Losano, whose death was announced yesterday as occurring August 25, at 10:15 o'clock p.m., was one of the oldest residents of Washington and a veteran Odd Fellow and Knight of Pythias. He passed away, at the hour stated, at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Anna Downs, No. 601 9th street southwest.

Mr. Losano was born on the Island of Minoca in Spain, about 76 years ago. He came to this country in 1837, landing at Philadelphia. He there learned a trade, that of tailor, but remained in that city but a few years. He afterward located in Washington, where he had ever since resided.

He opened a business place in the Willard Hotel block soon after reaching the city, but later his son, F.C. Losano, became associated with him, and the business was conducted under the firm name of M. Losano & Son until about one year ago, when the father retired, leaving his son in charge.

The deceased was a member of the local Odd Fellows' Veteran Association, and was also connected with Metropolis Lodge, No. 16, and Magenenu Encampment. He was one of the original members of the Knights of Pythias, becoming associated with the well-remembered founder of the order, Mr. Rathbone, in the formation of Washington Lodge, No. 1. He afterward affiliated with Mount Vernon Lodge, No. 5, with which he was connected at the date of his death.

Three children survive him. These are F.C. Losano and Mrs. Anna Downs, both of whom reside in this city, and Richard E. Losano, who is at present sojourning in Maine.

The funeral will take place tomorrow at 3 o'clock p.m. from the residence of Mrs. Downs, his daughter, at the number above given. Dr. C.C. Meador of the Fifth Baptist Church will officiate, and the services at the grave will be under the auspices of the Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias. The interment will be made at Congressional cemetery.

Death of Tasker Lovelace

Victim of Uraemia After Illness of Short Duration

Tasker Lovelace died at the Emergency Hospital last night after having been a patient there about five hours. He was taken sick on the steamer Columbia while returning from Alexandria. The doctors diagnosed his ailment as uraemia. He was unconscious when taken off the steamer and did not regain consciousness before he died.

The deceased was fifty-six years old and lived at the home of his brother near Benning. It is stated that he was an inmate of St. Elizabeth's Hospital for the Insane for a short time. Coroner Nevitt investigated the death this morning and gave a certificate in accordance with the diagnosis of the hospital physicians. A brother of the deceased took charge of the body.

Pennsylvania Railroad Brakeman Meets With Fatal Accident

Henry B.F. Lovell, twenty years old, who lived at 1005 4th street southeast and was employed as a brakeman on the Pennsylvania railroad, was run over in the New Jersey avenue freight yard about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and instantly killed. He was employed making up a freight train. He jumped from the car and landed on the main track in front of the moving train, with the result stated.

His badly mangled body was picked up by railroad men and removed to J. William Lee's undertaking establishment. Coroner Carr viewed the body this morning, and after hearing the circumstances decided that the death was due to accident, and deemed an inquest unnecessary. The deceased was unmarried and had been employed by the railroad company for about one year. His funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon, at which the Rev. E. Hez Swem will officiate.

Obituary

It rarely falls to our lot to record the death of one whose loss to the community and the profession, both military and civil, of which he was a distinguished member, is so deeply and widely spread as the untimely exit of Dr. Joseph Lovell, M.D., late Surgeon General of the Army. Cut down in the prime of life, in the full career of great usefulness, he has left a void in society, and in the military service of his country, which but few who may follow can adequately fill.

Dr. Lovell entered the Army in 1812, on the declaration of war with Great Britain, as Surgeon of the 9th regiment of United States Infantry. He served in the memorable campaigns on the Niagara frontier in 1813 and 1814. His patriotic devotion to the public service, and the faithful discharge of his official duties, soon distinguished him in the camp and in the field, among his brother officers, and in his profession. Promoted to the rank of Hospital Surgeon, he eventually was selected by President Madison, in 1818, to fill the important station of Surgeon General of the Army; a post which his talents, medical skill, and, above all, his great experience as a tried officer of the Medical Staff, eminently qualified him to fill with honor and great advantage to the public service.

In his social duties, the domestic circle, and as father, husband--all the ties which bind the Christian and the man to the obligations of the world--Dr. Lovell stood conspicuous. His bereaved family--eleven motherless and now fatherless children--who will attempt to depict their woe! Let other hands, at a more appropriate season, fill up the outline of the character and services of the lamented Lovell, now hastily and so briefly sketched.

Every mark of respect was paid to his mortal remains last evening at 4 o'clock, by his numerous friends, both Officers and citizens. We also noticed the President's family (Jackson), the heads of Departments and Bureaus, and the principal officers of the Government now at Washington. The Pallbearers were:

Maj. Gen. Macomb,	Commodore Rodgers,
Brig. Gen. Jones,	Commodore Morris,
General Towson,	Colonel Twiggs,
Colonel Wainwright,	Major Cross.

The Clergy, Medical Faculty, and Officers of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, present at the Seat of Government, followed the relatives of the deceased as mourners. We understand it was the wish of several volunteer corps of the District to have participated in paying the highest military honors to the deceased, if time and circumstances had permitted.

Funeral rites over the remains of Fred Henshaw Low, who died recently in the west, were held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Maurice Low, 1730 Connecticut avenue northwest.

Rev. Dr. Herbert Scott Smith, rector of St. Margaret's P.E. Church, conducted the services.

Mr. Low was an ensign in the Naval Battalion of the District of Columbia. Six sailors from the U.S.S. Puritan acted as bodybearers.

The honorary pallbearers were William P. Elliott, Antonio C. Gonzales, jr., John E. Briscoe, Dr. Harry A. Ong, Philip Lee Scantling and Dr. Thurston Wolf, all members of Mr. Low's college fraternity, Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

A detail of sailors from the U.S.S. Puritan, under the command of Lieuts. Dempf and Carmody, fired a naval salute at the grave in Congressional cemetery.

Lowe, Barbara A.	d. 29 Oct 1851	84 yrs.	R35/174
-------------------------	----------------	---------	----------------

Lowe. Suddenly at her residence in this city, on the morning of the 29th instant, of a hemorrhage of the lungs, Miss Barbara Lowe in the 85th year of her age. She has been a resident of Washington for the last forty years. This estimable lady was the grand aunt of the present Governor of Maryland, the Hon. E.L. Lowe, and through her long life maintained the character of a sincere and zealous Christian, a kind and indulgent mistress, and a useful member of society. Her heart was ever open to the calls of the suffering and afflicted, and her "pity gave ere charity began." Her life and death furnish a beautiful illustration of the influence of Christianity on the human heart. She died as she had lived, calm, resigned, and happy, leaving the world without casting one lingering look behind, and hailing the joys of that state of being to which the genius of Christianity had long directed her mind and heart with delight, as one tired of the sickening vanities of the world.

Her funeral will take place on this afternoon, the 31st instant, at 2 o'clock, from her late residence, at the corner of 4th street east and M street south, which her friends and those of her family are requested to attend.

Will of Barbara Lowe, of City of Washington (dtd. Jan. 17, 1848, probated Nov. 4, 1851; Book 6, pp. 419-420; O.S. 3210; Box 21)

To niece Barbara Woodward, all real property in City of Washington, consisting of two lots, a 2-story brick tenement, and outhouses; at her death to nephew David Lowe; to her and my sister Henry Dawson, all household goods to be divided between them; to her slaves; colored woman Mary to serve term of 2 years, colored woman Matilda Ward to serve 3 years, colored woman Cynthia to serve 7 years, negro man Tom to serve 10 years, then they shall be free; servant woman Maria shall be free at my death, and her children: Mary Anne, Elizabeth and Beverly, and children of Matilda: Lucy, Frederick and Frank, and children of Cynthia: Adelaide and her second child not yet named, shall serve niece Barbara Woodward until females arrive at 21 years of age then free.

Niece Barbara erect a small wooden shed or tenement in rear of my brick kitchen for use occupation of servant Maria and other servants when they become free and when sick, infirm and disabled.

The National Intelligencer, November 11, 1822

The Charleston papers inform us that Mr. Lowndes, previously to his departure for Europe resigned his seat in Congress and that the election is to take place on the 25th instant to supply the vacancy.

The National Intelligencer, Monday, January 20, 1823

An arrival at Charleston, in a short passage from Liverpool, brings the melancholy intelligence of the decease of the Honorable William Lowndes of South Carolina. He died at sea on the 27th of November, being on his way to Europe, whither he had been advised by his physicians to go as a last hope of benefiting his health. Mr. Lowndes was about 40 years of age; and the distinguished part he had acted in the councils of his country, during the eventful scenes of the last twelve years, had made him universally known to his countrymen as one of their most enlightened and virtuous fellow-citizens. It is not for us to pronounce the eulogy of this excellent public servant; but to speak of him, as we knew him, is a tribute which we ought not to withhold. The surest test and most honorable proof of his surpassing merit, was the respect which, during the most acrimonious periods, was rendered to him in the House of Representatives, and the undisputed influence he possessed in that body. To the endowments and acquirements of an accomplished statesman, he united private worth, as rare as it was estimable. Mild and modest, he was frank without rudeness-zealous without obtrusiveness; and his invariable candor always so tempered with gentleness, that he could not, with these qualities, fail to win the esteem of all with whom he acted, and rivet the influence which his talents commanded. We do not believe, indeed, that amongst the many able and excellent men to whom this nation, during its short history, has given birth, there has been one, who at so early an age, had acquired a reputation for the united excellencies of profound talents, of disinterestedness, and purity of character, equal to that which adorned the name of William Lowndes.

The funeral of Arthur Lucas, the eight-year-old Anacostia schoolboy, whose death occurred Tuesday afternoon at the Children's Hospital, following his removal to that institution the day previous, was held yesterday afternoon from the residence of his parents, at No. 62 Franklin street, Anacostia. The lad, who was the son of Office Arthur L. Lucas of the fifth precinct, was a pupil of the third grade and was regarded as a boy of exceptionally clever traits. His death resulted from an attack of cerebro spinal meningitis. Floral tributes from the pupil associates of the deceased testified to the esteem in which he was held.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. H.M. Geron, the pastor of the Anacostia Baptist Church, and several hymns were rendered by members of the choir of that church. The pallbearers, who were chosen from the school friends of the deceased, were Frank Hagan, Frank Feddon, Ralph Green, Willie Cornish, Raymond Garvis and Magruder Dent. The remains were interred in the Congressional cemetery.

Is Separated From Wife

Raleigh F. Lockett, who is employed as an inspector by the local office of the Adams Express Company, shot himself this morning in the breast at the Garrick Club, 1347 Pennsylvania avenue, the bullet entering the right side. It did not penetrate the heart, and there is hope of recovery. He was operated upon at the Emergency Hospital at 11:20 a.m., about twenty minutes after the shooting. He is the son of C.E. Lockett, manager of the F street branch of the express company, and a brother of Joseph E. Lockett, manager of the Columbia Theater.

The reason for the attempted suicide is said to be family troubles, Lockett having been for about two months separated from his wife, formerly Miss Gertrude Harlow of Alexandria, Va., and his two children.

Raleigh Lockett is about twenty-seven years of age. He has long been a member of the Garrick Club, although he has not been a regular attendant. Saturday he went over to Baltimore and took a boat for this city arriving by way of the Chesapeake bay and the Potomac this morning. A few minutes before 11 o'clock he entered the rooms of the Garrick Club, on the second floor of 1347 Pennsylvania avenue, in company with E.F. Brown and A.E. Beitzell. He was apparently in the best of spirits, and after chatting a few moments with Manager E.S. Doughty of the club went into the front room by himself and sat down in an arm chair near the window to read a morning paper.

Report of Revolver Heard

Those in the back room, about five minutes later heard the report of a pistol, and Mr. Brown remarked:

"They are beginning the Fourth of July celebration early."

It was thought at first that the noise had come from the street, but Mr. Beitzell, stepping into the front room, discovered young Lockett collapsed in his chair with a bloody wound in his breast and a smoking revolver in his hand.

"It is all over. It is all over. Telephone Joe," the wounded man gasped.

"What did you do this for?" asked Mr. Beitzell; but the only reply was, "It is all over."

Mr. Beitzell called Manager Doughty and the others in the back room, and Mr. Doughty immediately telephoned for the Emergency Hospital ambulance, and also notified Mrs. Lockett, the young man's mother at the DeSoto apartment house. Word was sent by messenger to Joseph E. Lockett, at the Columbia Theater.

Before the arrival of the ambulance Officer Wolfe of the first precinct, who had learned of the shooting, arrived and took charge of the arrangements for removing the young man to the hospital. Lockett was conscious when taken into the operating room, and continued to repeat, "It is all over."

A few minutes after he reached the hospital his father and his brother Joseph were at his side.

At a late hour this afternoon it was stated at the hospital that Lockett was still conscious, and that there had been no change in his condition. No operation has yet been performed, on account of the low vitality of the patient as the result of the loss of blood. That the bullet entered the lungs is stated by the doctors to be practically certain. They say he has an even chance of recovery, but a turn for the worse may come at any moment.

Mind Unbalanced

About five years ago Raleigh Lockett was married to the daughter of M.B. Harlow, a wealthy real estate man of Alexandria, Va., and until the past few months they lived in perfect harmony. Of late, however, it is stated, a disagreement arose, which resulted in Mrs. Lockett returning to the home of her parents with her two boys. For the past few days she has been residing with relatives in Laurel, Md. It is believed that Mr. Lockett brooded a great deal over this separation from his wife, and that his mind was slightly unbalanced as a result of the trouble. His brother Joseph said this afternoon that he knew of no other reason that would lead to his act.

Wife Asks for Separation

Mrs. Lockett has applied for a legal separation from her husband, and it is stated he has offered no objection to the proceedings.

For several years after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Lockett resided at 401 C street southeast. The house, it is said, was a present from the bride's father. When Mrs. Lockett, on the advice of her father, returned to her parents' home, Mr. Lockett took up his residence with his mother and sister in the DeSoto apartment house.

Young Lockett has a large circle of friends in this city, and is said to be very popular. It is stated that he is not a drinking man, and was not under the influence of liquor when he shot himself this morning.

The revolver which he used was a long-barreled, 32-caliber short. It does not shoot a large enough bullet to make a very deep wound, except at close range. The police believe the young man wished to shoot himself in the heart, but that in the excitement of the attempt he forgot to place the mouth of the barrel in the proper position.

That the act was intentional is taken for granted, both by the police and the young man's friends, in view of the fact that his remarks afterward all indicated that he wished to die.

Wants to Die

Mrs. Gertrude Lockett came to the city from Laurel, Md., this morning and called at the Emergency Hospital to see her husband, Raleigh F. Lockett, who attempted suicide in the front room of the Garrick Club, 1347 Pennsylvania Avenue, yesterday morning by shooting himself, as stated in yesterday's Star. The wounded man was in an unconscious condition when she reached the hospital, and was therefore unable to recognize her. Earlier in the morning he was conscious, and made several labored efforts to speak to his relatives, but, it is stated, he was suffering from a severe internal hemorrhage, and the blood was fast filling his lungs, making it impossible for him to speak. His condition became so serious that the physicians were compelled to give him an opiate before noon.

It was thought yesterday afternoon the condition of the patient would be such this morning that an operation might be performed and the bullet removed. The parents of the wounded man were given a ray of hope and were encouraged when they went home from the hospital last night. There were several turns noticed in the condition of the patient during the night, and at an early hour this morning it was realized that a hopeless fight was being made for him.

Tired of Life

The patient expressed no regret for his act, telling his relatives and friends that he had become tired of life and he wanted to die.

"I'm tired," he frequently remarked, "and all will soon be over."

His relatives sought the best surgeons and had all arrangements made for the removal of the bullet, but there came a change in the condition of the patient which rendered useless any operation. It was stated that the wife of the wounded man had not seen him since about two months ago, when she left him and went to Laurel to spend the summer, taking their two little children with her, but when she received the message telling of what he had done she hurried here this morning to see him.

Lockett lost consciousness without saying anything as to the cause of his rash act. His relatives surmise that he brooded over domestic troubles. Despite the fact that he and his wife had been separated since the last of April, it is stated, he seldom discussed his family affairs with his friends or relatives.

Shows Signs of Mental Worry

When he reached the city yesterday, it is stated, he went to the clubrooms and took a seat at the front window, saying nothing to those who entered the room and showing evidences of mental suffering. Those who entered the room while he was there noticed that he did not seem as if he wanted to converse with anybody, and they did not disturb him.

Members of the immediate family and a number of friends have been about the hospital most of the time since the wounded man reached there, all of them anxious to be of assistance. While he was conscious Lockett seemed as if the presence of his parents and brothers and sisters comforted him. He was especially fond of his brother, Joseph Lockett, the manager of the Columbia Theater, having requested that he be notified of the shooting when persons in the clubrooms went to his assistance.

Raleigh Lockett Passes Away While At Hospital

The death of Raleigh Lockett, who shot himself with suicidal intent, last Monday morning while in the rooms of the Garrick Club, occurred about 9:20 o'clock last night at the Emergency Hospital. The scene at the deathbed was a pathetic one. Mr. Lockett was conscious to the last, and it is said a complete reconciliation between the husband and wife, Mrs. Gertrude Harlow Lockett, occurred shortly before he died, when she went alone to his bedside and asked that he forgive her if there was anything she had done to offend. He made a feeble effort to put his arms around her, but sank back on the pillows. When she asked him if he were glad to see her he said: "I'm awfully glad," and she remained with him from then until the end.

His two-year-old son, hardly conscious of the tragedy that was being consummated, but realizing that something unusual was occurring, was placed near the dying man on the bed, and the faint smile of the father

Heart Attack Proves Fatal to Civilian Pilot of Yacht Mayflower

The first serious illness of his 74 years, yesterday was fatal to Capt. William Edward Luckett, for more than half a century a pilot on the Potomac River, and official civilian pilot of the Mayflower, the presidential yacht from the time it was put into commission until it was retired. He died of a heart attack at his residence 408 Sixth street southeast, yesterday afternoon.

Capt. Luckett complained of feeling ill early yesterday, and was treated at home by a physician. He was listening to baseball scores over the radio when he died. Only a moment before he had asked his wife to bring him a glass of water and then fell over on a bed while she was in an adjoining room.

Known as the "Grand Old Man of the Potomac" Capt. Luckett was affectionately called Capt. "Bill" Luckett by rivermen and notables.

Knew Many Notables

He became intimately acquainted with all Presidents from Roosevelt to Coolidge and knew President Hoover slightly. He also knew many visiting dignitaries who had been passengers on the Mayflower as he piloted it down the Potomac. Among them were King Albert of Belgium with whom he corresponded, Marshal Foch, Admiral Beatty and others.

A keen observer of men, Capt. Luckett could readily describe the personalities of the many famous persons with whom he was acquainted. King Albert of Belgium had been described by him as "very democratic and a royal good mixer" Likewise, he is said to have made comments on the traits exhibited by other notables.

During his many years of service Capt. Luckett had piloted practically every type of ship on the Potomac. He was pilot of the U.S.S. Olympic when it conveyed the body of the Unknown Soldier to Washington. He also piloted the cruiser Memphis when it brought Col. Charles A. Lindbergh here after the latter's famous transatlantic flight. Capt. Luckett several times had commented on the striking contrast of the two occasions, referring to the sadness and solemnity upon the occasion of the return of the Unknown Soldier and the gaiety existing when Lindbergh came here.

Capt. Luckett was born here December 29, 1854, and had resided here all his life. He was educated in the public schools and soon after being graduated from high school began as apprentice pilot.

Service in Navy

His knowledge of the river gained for him a pilot's license at the age of 20 years. His early service on the water included a brief period in the Navy.

He knew the river and its many landmarks so well that he never had to use a sounding-weight or a light of any sort in piloting ships on the darkest nights.

Capt. Luckett's first command of importance was the old excursion boat George Leary, which ran between Washington and Norfolk Va. Later he piloted the Mary Washington on her excursion trips to Quantico. Afterward he was captain for a number of years of the Washington, which plied between here and Norfolk.

Capt. Luckett's services were immediately sought when the Mayflower was put in commission. President Roosevelt was the first of the Presidents to make trips on her and Roosevelt children became great favorites of the veteran captain.

In later years Capt Luckett taught Quentin Roosevelt, who gave his life in France, many principles of piloting and navigation.

Capt. Luckett took the Mayflower down the river on her last trip after President Hoover had ordered the ship placed in retirement. His last official trip on the river was a pilot of the Nitro, bringing powder from the Virginia Capes to the Indian Head Proving Grounds about a month ago.

Capt. Lockett is survived by his widow, who was Miss Blanche Gertrude Adams, to whom he was married in 1895, and a sister, Mrs. William Grinder of Indian Head, Md.

Capt. Lockett was a member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia, the District of Columbia Society of Natives, was treasurer of the Southeast Washington Citizens' Association and active in the Masons, belong to the Andrew Jackson Lodge, Alexandria; the Knights Templar and Almas Temple of the Shrine.

Funeral services will be conducted in Gawler's chapel, 1750 Pennsylvania avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Thomas Turkington will officiate. Interment wil be in Congressional Cemetery.

Rev. ThomasTurkington will officiate. Interment will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Representatives of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia and other organizations of which Capt. Lockett was a member are expected to attend., in addition to many other friends he had made during his lifelong residence here.

Capt. Lockett's death resulted from a heart attack, the first serious illness he had suffering during his 74 years. In his long career of more than 50 years a pilot on the Potomac, Capt. Lockett had piloted practically ever type of ship, including the presidential yacht Mayflower and at various times had served as captain of a number of them. He was affectionately known to both rivermen and many notables as Capt. "Bill" Lockett.

Patients in District Hospital Under Treatment

Luddington is said to be a civil engineer from St. Louis, Mo., and his condition is regarded as serious. He came to Washington about two weeks ago and stopped at a local hotel. He was taken with a chill last Thursday and was removed to the George Washington University Hospital, where he has been under close observation and isolated from the other patients, under care of two nurses. When smallpox developed the health authorities made a careful examination of the patient and removed him last night to the smallpox hospital, the two nurses being placed under quarantine on the top floor of the nurse's home.

Funeral of William Luddington Takes Place From Smallpox Hospital

The funeral of William P. Luddington, formerly of St. Louis, who died early yesterday morning of smallpox in the smallpox hospital, took place shortly after noon today. The interment was made in Congressional cemetery and the funeral was in charge of the District health authorities.

Luddington was a civil engineer of St. Louis, and while on a business trip to New York city he determined to come to Washington to witness the inauguration ceremonies. He notified his wife to that effect, and she took the opportunity to visit her mother in Muncie, Ind. While there she became ill.

Luddington was taken to the smallpox hospital from the Columbian University Hospital last Wednesday, and his condition was said to be serious from the time of his removal. He had received word that Mrs. Luddington was ill in Muncie, and he refused to allow the authorities to notify her of his condition. Last Friday, however, the physicians were convinced that his chances for recovery were very slight and they wired Mrs. Luddington, who left her sick bed and came on to Washington. She stated that she had formerly been a trained nurse and insisted on going into the smallpox hospital and nursing her husband until the end, which was finally permitted by the health authorities.

William Luddington, of St. Louis, the Victim--Woman Sped Here From Muncie

After leaving a sick bed to come here and nurse her husband who had been stricken with smallpox, making the race against death from Indiana, Mrs. William Luddington got into Washington last night too late--her husband dying a few hours after she had reached his cot in the pest hospital.

Luddington who was a well-known engineer of St. Louis, came East on business and while in New York determined to come to Washington for the inauguration. He arrived Friday and was stricken Sunday. The doctors without his knowledge telegraphed for his wife, who was at Muncie, Ind.

A Civil Engineer

The cause of the dead man is fraught with more than ordinary interest. In his home city, St. Louis, Mo., he ranks as one of the leading civil engineers, and it was a combination of business and pleasure which in the first place brought him to the East.

After leaving home he determined to witness the inauguration of President Roosevelt, and came to Washington, arriving here on February 23. His wife was notified and she chose the opportunity to visit her mother in Muncie, Ind. On March 2, Mr. Luddington was in the midst of a Turkish bath when he was seized with a series of severe chills.

Becoming very ill, he was removed directly from the bath house to the George Washington University Hospital. From the first his case was regarded as suspicious, and both he and his nurses were placed in the isolated ward. More and more pronounced became the symptoms of smallpox, and three days later the patient was transferred to the past house.

In the meantime Mr. Luddington had received word that his wife was ill in Muncie, and despite the serious turn to his malady he refused to allow her to be alarmed by news of his condition. On Friday, however, the physicians were convinced that Luddington had not one chance in a thousand to recover, and without his knowledge telegrams were sent to his wife and his mother.

Watched Over Victim; Nurse Has Smallpox

Miss Edna Hensor Cared for William P. Luddington, Who Died, and Caught His Trouble

Devotion to duty, which led her to the bedside of a man suffering from smallpox, has resulted seriously for Miss Edna Henson, a nurse at the George Washington University Hospital. Late yesterday afternoon she developed symptoms of the disease and was taken to the smallpox hospital.

Miss Henson and Miss Mary Carey, both nurses in the hospital, were detailed to care for William P. Luddington, the prominent civil engineer from St. Louis, who was stricken with smallpox while here for the inauguration. At first the nature of Luddington's ailment was not known, but smallpox was suspected and the two nurses were isolated with him.

Luddington subsequently developed a full-fledged case of smallpox, and was taken to the smallpox hospital, where he died. Since then the two nurses and Luddington's wife, who also risked her life to go to his bedside, have been confined to the detention camp.

Dr. Fowler, who has charge of the smallpox patients, and who discovered symptoms of the malady in Miss Henson, said today that he anticipated she would have only a slight attack.

Mrs. Luddington and Miss Carey are nearing the end of their period of quarantine without developing any premonitory signs of the infection.

The Washington Times, March 23, 1905

Smallpox Break Out In Hospital

Two, Probably Three, Nurses Down With Malady

Ninety patients and the entire corps of nurses and doctors at the George Washington Hospital, in H street northwest, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, are under quarantine. Five nurses from the hospital are at the detention camp, near Eighteenth and D streets southeast, and two others are in the smallpox hospital.

Smallpox broke out yesterday afternoon in the ranks of the nurses, and a veritable epidemic of the dread disease is feared within the four walls of the George Washington University Hospital. Everyone in the institution, doctors, nurses, attendants, patients, and servants, is being vaccinated.

Traced to Luddington

All the cases are traced back to William P. Luddington, the St. Louis civil engineer, who developed smallpox while here to attend the inauguration, and who was admitted to the hospital and given treatment before the nature of his malady was discovered.

Luddington was taken ill in a Turkish bath on March 2, and carried directly to the hospital. On March 5, his ailment was diagnosed as measles and not until then was he placed in an isolated ward. Three more days passed, during which time Miss Edna Henson and Miss Mary Cary, two nurses, were confined to the same section of the hospital to attend Luddington. On March 8, Health Official officials were called in and without hesitancy pronounced Luddington's malady smallpox, and he was taken to the smallpox hospital. There he grew steadily worse until death ensued on March 12, only a few hours after his wife reached his bedside.

The Nurses Vaccinated

In the meantime, Miss Henson and Miss Cary were vaccinated and isolated on the top floor of the George Washington University Hospital. Miss Henson's vaccination did not "take," and, as stated in yesterday's Times, she was stricken with smallpox on Saturday and was removed to the smallpox hospital on Tuesday. Her case is pronounced a mild one and it is thought she will recover.

Miss Rebecca Blue, a special nurse, caring for a patient on the third floor, was taken sick Tuesday night. Three hours later the unmistakable eruptions of smallpox made their appearance and increased with each passing moment. Yesterday afternoon she was taken to the smallpox hospital. The patient nursed by Miss Blue has been constantly exposed to the danger of infection, and particularly so because weakened by other disease. Other nurses, doctors, and attendants have also been closely associated with Miss Blue, and subject to infection.

Miss Thompson Ill

Later yesterday Miss Thompson, another special nurse on the first floor was taken sick and as a precautionary measure she was sent to the detention camp. It was stated this morning that her ailment was almost certainly smallpox. The man patient who was under Miss Thompson's care and the patient's wife, have been quarantined on the first floor of the hospital.

When the Health Office was informed of the gravity of the situation at the George Washington University Hospital, Dr. Woodward and his assistant, Dr. Fowler, made a personal examination of all wards, and afterward drew up an agreement, which was signed by W.F.R. Phillips, the superintendent of the hospital. By the terms of this no new patients will be taken into the hospital and no one admitted to the institution for any purpose without the consent of the superintendent or of the Health Office. Patients not under strict quarantine may leave when the Health Officer has been notified so that they may be kept under observation. Entrance to the new portion of the hospital has been barred and the officer of the institution has been moved from the first to the second floor.

Although seven nurses had already been removed to the quarantine station and three of them subsequently taken to the smallpox hospital, other nurses and attendants at the George Washington University Hospital seemingly accepted the situation with fortitude until yesterday. Then, as one of the doctors expressed it, there was a veritable stampede.

It was all because of the discovery that two more nurses may have been exposed to infection from Mr. Luddington, who was in the hospital for three days before the virulent nature of his malady was discovered, or from one of the three nurses who are now under treatment in the smallpox hospital.

First Evidence of Panic

The resident staff at the hospital were positive in their statements last night that these two nurses, Miss Elizabeth Hazzard and Miss Mary Chase, were in no real danger. Their removal was characterized as the first evidence of panic since the epidemic began.

Yesterday afternoon, Miss Birdie B. Thompson, another nurse in quarantine developed marked symptoms of smallpox. She was promptly placed under treatment in the hospital, her case marking the third resulting from exposure to infection while in the line of duty.

As yet, there has been no class of nurses graduated from the George Washington University Hospital. The young women affected are all pupil nurses in the various classes. Nine have been taken to the detention camp and three from there to the smallpox hospital.

In Smallpox Hospital

In the hospital are Miss Rebecca Blue and Miss Edna Henson, of the class of 1906, and Miss Birdie B. Thompson, of the class of 1908. Those in the quarantine station, most of them having two full weeks yet to be spent under observation before all danger is past, are Misses Mary Cary, Mattie Henry, and Nanette Williams, of the class of 1906, and Misses Elizabeth Hazzard, Mary Chase, and Mary Grogan, of the class of 1908.

Mrs. Luddington, widow of William P. Luddington, whose case caused so much trouble and whose death occurred two weeks ago, will be released from quarantine next Tuesday.

No further cases were reported this morning among the nurses at the detention camp nor among the nurses and patients who are under observation on the first floor of the hospital.

Precautions Taken

The hospital authorities, realizing that the welfare of their institution depends upon prompt eradication of the disease have taken every possible precaution. The nurses and patients isolated on the first floor of the hospital are the only persons who might have come in contact in any way with any of the smallpox sufferers.

Dr. Phillips, superintendent of the hospital, stated last night that he was confident there would be no further trouble. Until the epidemic of fear and of small pox broke out there were twenty-nine pupil nurses in the classes at the George Washington University Hospital. The temporary loss of the services of one-third of the available assistants is one of the most serious phases of the situation in the hospital.

At the Health Office this morning it was reported that no new cases of smallpox had developed anywhere in the city. The quarantine imposed upon the workhouse following the discovery of a case of smallpox in one of the negro inmates two weeks ago was removed yesterday.

Leaps From Window; Life Crushed Out

E.F. Lusby, Adjudged Insane, Prefers Death to the Asylum

Edward F. Lusby, a lieutenant in the District of Columbia National Guards, twenty-eight years old and unmarried, who was employed as manager of a local clothing firm, yesterday committed suicide by jumping from a second-story rear window at his home, 431 M street northwest. The District authorities were preparing to send him to the Government Hospital for the Insane, a physician having certified to his insanity, when he ended his life.

Coroner Nevitt gave a certificate of suicide showing that Lusby was irresponsible at the time of the deed.

More than a month ago his relatives obtained papers from Sanitary Officer Sroufe and went through the formalities necessary to send him to the Government Hospital for the Insane. J. Barry Lusby, brother of the young man, who resides at 501 L street northwest and other relatives conferred and decided to send the patient to a private institution. He was sent to such an institution and only recently returned home.

Yesterday morning Sanitary Officer Sroufe completed arrangements for Lusby to be taken to the government institution and he would have been taken there about 1 o'clock had he not killed himself. Shortly before 12 o'clock the patient while alone in his room, raised the window and jumped to the brick pavement in the yard.

Relatives hurried to the assistance of the young man. They found his skull had been crushed and that he was practically lifeless.

Regimental officers of the 1st infantry, N.G.D.C., and officers and men of Company F, 1st Infantry, have been ordered to attend the funeral of Lieut. Edward F. Lusby. Col. Ourand, in company of the 1st Infantry was notified of the young lieutenant's death yesterday, and will be one of those to attend the funeral, which will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from Lee's chapel. Interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

Lieut. Lusby was regarded as one of the most efficient junior officers in the brigade and had won his commission by good service in the ranks. For a long time he was sergeant major of the 1st Infantry. His commission as second lieutenant was granted him just previous to the annual encampment at Harpers Ferry last year.

Death in East Washington

Mr. Wm. H. Lusby, an old citizen of East Washington, died at his residence, corner of 7th and G streets southeast, yesterday, aged about sixty years. Mr. Lusby was for many years foreman at the copper rolling mill in the Navy Yard, and subsequently the superintendent of the Congressional Cemetery, which position he resigned some eight years ago, and then went into the collection business. About four years ago he was attacked with dropsy, which compelled him to keep his room, and it yesterday terminated his life. Mr. Lusby leaves a son and two daughters, all grown. He was a communicant of Christ (Episcopal) church, and for several years a vestryman, and his funeral will take place from the church tomorrow afternoon. Mr. Lusby's daughter, Sophronia (a well known school teacher), has tenderly nursed him, and it is supposed from her close attention to him she contracted jaundice and blood poison, from which her death has been expected for several weeks. There is, however, a favorable turn in her condition, and this morning it was reported that there was good reason to hope for her ultimate recovery.

The Evening Star, June 4, 1883

The funeral of the late Wm. H. Lusby, whose death was mentioned in Saturday's Star, took place yesterday afternoon at Christ Episcopal church, and it was attended especially by the older families of the District. Mr. Andrews, during the services, spoke of the Christian fortitude of the deceased during his three years' of suffering, and referred feelingly to the devotion of the daughter of the deceased, whose health had broke down and who was lying at the point of death. The remains were taken to Congressional cemetery, of which he was formerly the superintendent, and interred.

Wash. Directory of 1873 shows William H. Lusby as Superintendent of Congressional Cemetery.

Young Lyle's Body Also Recovered -- Testimony of Another Eye Witness Given to the Coroner Proves Their Death Was Accidental

The bodies of Irving Lyles and Miss Catherine Canter, who were drowned Sunday while boating in the Eastern Branch, will be laid to rest, side by side, in Congressional Cemetery, this afternoon. Funeral services will be held in Emmanuel Episcopal Church at 5 o'clock, by the rector, Rev. W.G. Davenport. The bodies will be removed shortly before that hour from the homes of the bereaved parents, by the pall-bearers, who have been selected from the young men of the choir of Emmanuel Church. All these, because of his long connection with the choir, were intimate friends of Lyles. Miss Canter was also a member of the choir, which contains many other young ladies, and all will take part in the services.

The body of Lyles was recovered about 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning, by the crew of the police boat, who resumed their search for it at the break of day. The body was found not far from the point where the young people were seen to sink, and was taken to the Seventh street wharf and then removed to Nally's undertaking rooms. Later it was taken to his mother's home, 321 Monroe street, Anacostia.

An hour or so after Lyles' body had been taken home, Coroner Hammett visited Anacostia, saw the two bodies, and heard the statements of three witnesses to the unfortunate affair. He did not hold an inquest, as there was absolutely nothing to be gained by such a proceeding. To the coroner, James Martin, who undertook Sunday afternoon to rescue the young couple, made a statement, which differed very little from the interview with Martin in yesterday's Post. The coroner also took the statement of Mrs. Clay, of 1017 Twelfth street southeast, which was quite important.

She said that she and her husband had been boating on the river, and had gone toward the wharf at the foot of First street southeast. Mrs. Clay stated that she happened to be looking at the boat in which the young couple were rowing, and saw Miss Canter rise as if to change seats with Lyles. He rose slight, and that instant Miss Canter made a sudden grasp at Lyles, caught him by the shoulder, and then fell into the water, he following her a second later.

While Mrs. Clay's story does not agree in all of its details with the statement of Martin, her position was such that she could see all that happened, and after hearing her, Coroner Hammett issued certificates giving accidental drowning as the cause of death in each case. The giving of these certificates met with the general approval of the citizens of Anacostia, who were loth to believe that anything but an accident had caused the death of these two popular young persons.

The Funeral of Miss Bettie E. Lynch, teacher of Primary No. 3, in the fourth school district, will take place at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, from Ryland Chapel. The teachers of the district held a meeting this morning, when Mr. Champlin, of the district trustees, was called to the chair, and a resolution of esteem and respect for the deceased were passed, and the teachers decided to attend the funeral. The following is the resolution adopted:
Resolved, That by the death of Miss Bettie E. Lynch, the teachers of the Fourth school district have lost an esteemed friend and companion, and the public schools of Washington a zealous and efficient teacher, endeared to us by many qualities of mind and heart that ennoble the profession to which her young life has been devoted, and in the midst of whose active duties she has been so suddenly and prematurely taken from us. We tender to her family and friends in this sad hour of affliction our sincere sympathy, and we invite them to share with us the consolation afforded by the remembrances that her gentle spirit early "drew near unto Christ;" that her character was full of Christian graces, illustrated by devotion to her God, her home, and to the children given to her charge daily here with us, and in the Sabbath school.

The funeral of the late Miss Bettie E. Lynch took place at Ryland Chapel yesterday afternoon, and was largely attended. Among those present were the trustees and teachers and many of the pupils of the public schools of the fourth district. The exercises were conducted by Rev. Wm. Hamilton, who preached an earnest and affecting, though brief, funeral discourse, during which he referred to the pure Christian life of the deceased, which should be an example to all who knew her. Several large and beautiful wreaths of flowers were placed upon the coffin by the friends of the deceased. The following gentlemen acted as pall-bearers: Mr. Benjamin Lloyd, Mr. Atlee, Mr. Champlin, Mr. W.H. Wright, Mr. William Stevenson and Mr. J.E. Thompson. The Evening Star, December 9, 1878

The Funeral of James Lynch (formerly a justice of the peace) took place from his late residence on East Capitol street, yesterday afternoon, and was attended by a large concourse of the friends of the deceased, including many of the oldest citizens of the District. The services at the house were conducted by Rev. Richard Norris, (of Georgetown) formerly of Waugh Chapel, after which the cortege proceeded to Congressional Cemetery, where the remains were interred with Masonic honors--B.B. French Lodge and Washington R.A. Chapter, of which he was a member, being present.

The Evening Star, December 6, 1878Death of Mr. James Lynch

Mr. James Lynch, lately a justice of the peace, whose serious illness was noticed in last evening's Star, died this morning about 2 o'clock. Mr. Lynch was born in the northern part of Ireland in 1817, but came here when a boy with his father and family, and they settled on Capitol Hill. Mr. Lynch has ever since lived in that part of the city. He was, under the old regime, one of the auxiliary guard, and was regarded by many as the best officer on the force; subsequently, he was chief of the city police, and more recently a justice of the peace. He was for many years a member of the old Columbia Fire Company, and in the anti bellum days was connected with the Washington Light Infantry. He had been for a long time a mason of B.B. French Lodge. He was a man of string integrity, and was quiet and unobtrusive. He leaves a host of friends in the community.

The Evening Star, December 5, 1878Locals

Mr. James Lynch, formerly a justice of the peace, and for many years, under the municipal government, commissioner of the fifth ward, as also chief of the corporation police, is we regret to learn, lying very low at his residence on Capitol Hill, with but slight hopes of recovery.

The Evening Star, May 19, 1858Riotous Conduct

At four o'clock this morning the house of Mr. James Lynch, East Capitol street, between 1st and 2d streets, was assailed with a shower of stones, which did him considerable damage in the way of breaking windows, shutters, etc. Mr. L. has every reason to believe that this cowardly outrage was perpetrated by a gang of rowdies infesting that part of the city, who call themselves "The Rams," whose exploits, somewhat after the same fashion, we have frequently had occasion to bring to the notice of the police in this way. Their organization is well known to every police officer in the Fifth Ward, we take it for granted, as many respectable citizens are aware of the fact, and can identify most of its members. Is it not high time that the authorities should take some efficient step at least to hold them in check hereafter? Individuals of the same gang, it will be recollected, not long since essayed an outrage on Messrs. Houston and Barry, of the City Councils whose offense was having voted to establish the special police.

The Evening Star, July 19, 1900, p. 8Mrs. Jane LynchOne of Washington's Oldest Residents Passes Away

Mrs. Jane Lynch, who died on Saturday evening last, at her residence, No. 128 East Capitol street, and whose funeral took place yesterday afternoon, was probably the oldest native resident of Capitol Hill, having reached nearly the age of 85 years. Mrs. Lynch was born, reared and spent her entire life in the neighborhood of the Capitol, and until a few months ago was remarkable for her good memory, especially of the events which took place in her early life. She married Mr. James Lynch, for many years one of the corporation police, serving years as the chief of that body. She was about ten years of age when Lafayette visited this country, and as a pupil of a private school near 10th and G streets northwest, stood in the lines through which he passed. Her recollection of that event and many others was perfectly clear, and she leaves with her family the traditions of much of the early history, especially of the Hill. Of a modest, retiring disposition, she by her many acts of kindness endeared herself to a large circle of relatives and friends.

The National Intelligencer, August 13, 1829

In this city, on Tuesday, at half past 12 o'clock, Mrs. Sarah Rowen Lyndall. Mrs. L. was born in the city of Philadelphia, September 3, 1756, where she resided until a few years past, when she came to Washington to live with her son. Mrs. Lyndall was from early life a member of the Presbyterian Church, (say forty seven years,) and to her numerous acquaintance in religious and social life only can her many excellences be known and appreciated in their fairest light. She may literally be said to have fallen asleep in death, for she went off without a struggle, and in the perfect hope of a blessed eternity. Her funeral is proposed to take place at half past 4 o'clock, this afternoon, and the friends of the family are requested to attend the funeral from the house of her son, Mr. Thomas Lyndall, without further notice.

The National Intelligencer, November 11, 1834

On Sunday the 9th instant, Mr. Thomas Lyndall, in the 41st year of his age. The deceased was a native of Philadelphia, and for eighteen years had been the Master Ship Joiner in the Navy Yard of this city. As a mechanic, he was surpassed by none of his profession, and, during the entire period of his service, he discharged the important duties of his station with an ability and fidelity which won for him the highest commendations of the Navy Board, and the respect and confidence of the successive Commandants of the station. Thus faithful and intelligent in public employment, he was no less amiable, generous, and upright in domestic life and the social circle. Distinguished by such qualities, society and the social circle. Distinguished by such qualities, society and the public service sustain in his death no ordinary loss. His acquaintances are invited to attend his funeral, which will proceed this afternoon, at 3 o'clock, from his late residence near the Navy Yard.

Master joiner at Navy Yard; dwelling I south between 4 and 5 east (Wash. Dir., 1830).

Suicide of a Government Clerk
About 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, James M. Lyons, a clerk in the Surgeon General's Office, committed suicide at his residence on I street, between 13th and 14th streets northeast, by taking two officers of laudanum. After receiving his pay for the month of duty on Friday last he went to Baltimore, and while there purchased the laudanum, and returned on Saturday, shortly before committing the act, very much under the influence of liquor. Taking a seat on the sofa, he took the vial from his pocket, and asked his wife, who was beside him, "Shall I take this?" As on previous occasions he had threatened, when in liquor, to take his life, she regarded it as mere idle drunken talk, and simply remarked, "You are not going to make a fool of yourself." He then drank about half the poison, when she attempted to get the vial away from him, but he seized her with one hand, and holding her off, drained the vial of its contents. He then laid down, and was soon asleep, his wife thinking that what he had taken was a simple narcotic. A short time thereafter Mrs. Lyons noticed that he was turning black in the face, and called in some of the neighbors who endeavored to wake him up, using antidotes, but without success. A physician was sent for, but before his arrival, Mr. L. was dead. Dr. Patterson, the coroner, held an inquest yesterday morning, and the jury rendered a verdict that deceased came to his death from an overdose of laudanum, administered by himself while under the influence of intoxicating drink. He leaves a wife and four small children, three his own and one adopted. His widow is an invalid, and in indigent circumstances.

Suicide of William Lyons, Alleged Handbook Man

Given Up By Bondsman

Protested Innocence When Placed Under Arrest

Brooded Over His Trouble

Not Charged With Connection With Any of Those Apprehended

Saturday on Same Charge

"It was a Judas kiss you gave," wrote William Lyons, alleged handbook man in a letter to his wife only a short while before he ended his life in the witness room at the sixth precinct police station yesterday morning by hanging himself with his leather belt.

The letter he wrote to his wife while in the cell, and which was found near his body reads:

"I know this trouble has been instigated by you. This is what you meant by telling me that you were going to see the clerk of the court, not to get the cases settled, but to get me in trouble. It was a Judas kiss you gave me.

"I know you have done this to get rid of me. Well, I have lost everything, even my wife. May God forgive you as I have tried to do tonight. Good-bye."

Mrs. Lyons could not be seen by the police, but her friends declared her husband had done her a gross injustice in his last missive.

Gross Injustice Claimed

Persons who are familiar with the circumstances attending the arrest of Lyons declare Mrs. Lyons had nothing to do with causing his arrest. It is stated that Lyons, who had returned to the city only a short time ago, was seen in the vicinity of the Police Court building Saturday. Several persons who saw him, it is stated, reported his appearance to the bondsman and the latter caused the arrest.

Undertaker J. William Lee last night took charge of the body, removing it from the morgue to his place of business to be prepared for burial. Mrs. Julia A. Lyons, who rooms at 206 Indiana Avenue northwest was made ill by the shock of her husband's act.

Charged With Making a Handbook

Mrs. Lyons was arrested in August of last year with her husband, both having been charged with making a handbook on the races, and later they were accused of having tampered with a gas supply pipe

Husband and wife were put under $1,000 bond in the handbook case, while the charge of tampering with the gas pipe was nolle prossed so far as Mrs. Lyons was concerned. John J. Minahan, bondsman for the couple, procured a bailpiece from the Police Court Saturday morning for Lyons, having concluded to surrender him and release himself from the responsibility for his appearance in court.

Edward Johnson was named as the person to serve the paper. He found Lyons on Pennsylvania avenue and placed him under arrest, escorting him to the sixth precinct police station. Lyons who had been working as travelling agent for a coffee firm, was surprised when told that his bondsman had surrendered him, although he made no bitter complaint. He declared he had made no effort to run away, bond for his appearance having been given nearly a year ago, and it was not his fault that the Police Court had not tried the case.

"I was innocent of the charge," he is said to have asserted, "and that was probably why my case was not called"

Brooded Over His Trouble

Lyons did not sleep much Saturday night. He was held in the police station merely as an accommodation for the marshal's office, and would have been turned over to the deputy marshal at the Police Court this morning had he not committed suicide.

He was observed a number of times during the night, having been seen alive less than thirty minutes before his dead body was found suspended from the grating.

Lyons left this city some months ago and went to Canada. His idea was to work and get money enough to defend the charges that had been brought against him. When he returned he found employment with a coffee firm, and, he told the police Saturday, he was doing well.

His message to his wife, however, shows he thought she had told his bondsman he was here and that it was her fault he was arrested. After being locked up he brooded over his trouble, and about 6 o'clock in the morning his lifeless but warm body was found suspended from the grating. Lyons was not alleged to have had any connection with the several others who were arrested Saturday.

The Evening Star, July 20, 1910, p. 15

Suicide's Body Interred

Just Before Burial Coroner Receives Old Letter Written by Lyons

The remains of William Lyons, alleged handbook man, who committed suicide Sunday morning in the witness room at the sixth precinct police station by hanging himself with his belt, were interred this afternoon at Congressional Cemetery. The body had been at the undertaking establishment of J William Lee, 332 Pennsylvania avenue, since Sunday night.

Coroner Nevitt yesterday received a letter, dated June 7, in which Lyons explained his reasons for no longer having a desire to live. The handwriting was similar to that of the note the despondent man wrote only a few minutes before he took his life. Its transmission to the coroner was delayed by its having been turned over to a reporter before it was sent to the official.

The fact that Lyons wrote the letter so long ago indicated that his suicide was not prompted solely by his arrest. Mrs. Lyons is still confined to her home suffering from the nervous shock following the act of her husband.
