Horrible Death of Mrs. Phoebe Pacha

By the overturning of a lamp in the kitchen of the home of Dr. W. Lee White, on Minnesota avenue, last night, Mrs. Phoebe Pacha, fifty years old, a domestic in the house, was fatally burned. Following the accident she was removed to the Casualty Hospital, where she lingered between life and death until about 6 o'clock this morning, when she died. Coroner Nevitt will make an investigation this afternoon.

As Mrs. Pacha was the only one in the room when the accident occurred the details will never be known. John A Dalton, stable man for Dr. White, was asleep in the room adjoining the kitchen. When he retired to bed, shortly after 8 o'clock, he left Mrs. Pacha in the kitchen with a lighted lamp on the table. Between 10 and 11 o'clock he was awakened by a scream uttered by Mrs. Pacha. The cries were repeated in rapid succession and he hurriedly entered the kitchen.

Standing in the doorway leading from the kitchen to the outside air was Mrs. Pacha wrapped in flames. All her clothing was ablaze and she was screaming in agony. Dalton ran back to his room, pulled the bed clothing from his bed and wrapped it about her. That smothered the flames and Mrs. Pacha fell to the floor. Dalton then set to work to remove her clothing.

William White, son of Dr. White, attracted by Mrs. Pacha's cries, had meanwhile arrived and found the kitchen table in flames.

On its top was the overturned lamp and the oil from it was burning. Mr. White threw the lamp from the window and quickly extinguished the flames. Then he turned to give aid to Mrs. Pacha. Mrs. White, mother of the young man, also came to her assistance. When it was seen that she was severely injured he ran to a patrol box and notified the Anacostia police. They summoned the ambulance from the Casualty Hospital, and in the shortest possible time the vehicle reached the house and Mrs. Pacha was conveyed to that institution.

It was at once seen that her condition was serious and little hope was felt for her recovery.

There is only conjecture as to the cause of the accident. It is believed that Mrs. Pacha, tired from her day's household duties, sat down by the kitchen table and went to sleep. She possibly stirred while asleep and overturned the lamp. As her head and face were most severely burned, it is believed they came in contact with the lamp when it turned over.

Mrs. Pacha had been employed as a domestic by Dr. White for about two years. Her home was in Philadelphia, where she was well connected, it is said, but has no near relatives.

Guy Padgett's Case a Mystery

Guy E. Padgett was well known in labor and fraternal society circles. He was connected with the Maccabees and Odd Fellows, and attended a meeting of the latter organization last night. The cause of his rash act seems to be a mystery to his many friends. He had been despondent recently, but had given no reason for the change in his conduct. It is thought he returned home about midnight and went to his room. From there he went to the bath room, where his wife found his dead body this morning about 7 o'clock. Hoping that her husband was not dead, she summoned Dr. Mazzi. He found that life had been extinct some little time, and informed the coroner.

In Padgett's sleeping room was the bottle that had contained carbolic acid and an after-dinner coffee cup, from which he had taken the poison. Coroner Nevitt concluded that he swallowed the fatal dose in this room and was afterward able to reach the bath room and stretch his form upon the floor, where he waited for death to claim him.

The morning mail brought Mrs. Padgett a letter that her husband had mailed to her last night after leaving his lodge room. The note written by the despondent man to his wife, whom he had always called "Petie," reads:

"Good-bye, Petie. Forgive anything I have done wrong. Lovingly, GUY."

Inclosed in the letter was $100 in cash. The postmark on the envelope showed that it was mailed at 11 o'clock last night. Padgett was thirty years old. Four years ago he married Miss Louise H. Treiber. They were married at 309 New Jersey avenue southeast. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

J. Raymond Padgett, a printer, thirty-two years old, sustained a fracture of his skull as a result of a collision between his motor cycle and an automobile belonging to C.F. Larrabee, of 1514 21st street northwest on the east plaza at the Capitol last night shortly before 9 o’clock.

Padgett, it is stated, was hurrying to his home at 308 Pennsylvania avenue southeast to escape the rain and operated his motor cycle directly in the path of the automobile. The motorcycle was thrown some distance.

Scott Hamel, 2118 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, who was operating the automobile, took charge of the injured man and hurried him to Casualty Hospital. It was said at the hospital this morning that the injured man’s condition was critical. The chauffeur was taken to the sixth precinct police station and detained until the police could make an investigation. It was learned by the police that the accident was an unavoidable one so far as Hamel was concerned and he was released.

Suicide of Young Man Due To Domestic Trouble
Swallows Carbolic Acid After Failing to Effect Reconciliation With Wife
Coroner Nevitt conducted an inquest at the morgue today on the death of Valey Padgett, twenty-four years old, who drank carbolic acid last night while in front of the home of his father-in-law, John Grover, 1114 8th street southeast, and died an hour later at Casualty Hospital.

The coroner's jury reached the conclusion that the acid was taken with suicidal intent. Padgett who had been separated from his wife for about two months, was employed by the Capital Traction Company. Yesterday he went to the house of his father-in-law for the purpose of effecting a reconciliation with his wife.

Failing to see his wife, Padgett took a bottle of acid from his pocket and drank enough of its contents to make him unconscious. He was taken into the home of his parents, 819 L street southeast, and later to the hospital.

It was about 6:45 o'clock when he took the poison. His body was taken from the morgue this afternoon by an undertaker and prepared for burial.

the four steamboats in and at Capt. Page's building yard and wharves. The pretty and fleet William Selden is lying at the wharf ready for a new service, to which, we learn, she will be shortly put. The canny little spirits, the G.W.P. Custis, is very near completion; she bids fair to be a great favorite, and propelled, as she will be, by two powerful locomotive engines, one to each wheel, is supposed able to distance any thing of the moving kind in our waters. Her draught of water is only 19 inches. Next is the Union, a boat building with special references to the ferry business between Washington and Alexandria; she is to be able to accommodate farmers, marketeers, travellers with horses, carriages, etc., as well as the ordinary passengers between the two cities. She will be ready for launching early in May. The Union has the decided advantage of not requiring to be turned each time her direction is changed. And lastly comes the boat for which the name of the Richard Bayler has been mentioned. She is building for a company formed along the Rappahannock river, and is intended for the trade between Baltimore and Fredericksburg. Her keel has been laid down two hundred feet with thirty feet breadth of beam. She will have capacity for four hundred tons of cargo, besides ample accommodations for passengers. Her draught of water, with a full cargo, will not exceed four feet.

Mr. Page intends running his ferry boat Union from his own wharf, at the foot of Seventh street, which is, in fact, more central than Eleventh. With this view he is newly fitting up the large storehouse for the temporary accommodation of passengers waiting for the boat, as well as for the general purposes of a respectable hotel, for which it is very well calculated.

We repeat that the enterprise, boldness, and spirit displayed by Mr. Page are admirable, meriting the cheerful acknowledgment and "God speed" of all our citizens. He has within a comparatively short space of time changed a dreary, deserted spot into a busy neighborhood, not only giving to numbers of worthy artisans profitable employment, but commencing a new branch of industry here that might, and we trust will, terminate in being permanent and important. Once more, we say, he serves, though he might not need, the friendly encouragement of this community.

Death of Capt. George Page, The Well-Known Inventor

Many of the residents of the District will regret to learn that Capt. George Page, formerly a resident of this city, died at the residence of his son, in Baltimore county, on Saturday last, in the 74th year of his age. Mr. Page was the founder of the well-known firm of George Page & Co., founders and machinists, in Baltimore, about forty years ago. He possessed great energy, and through his ingenuity produced many machines, which he lived to see put into practical operation, and which have added very materially to the wealth of the country; among them the morticing machine, turning machine, envelope machine, and the circular saw mill. The latter was his greatest achievement and to its development and success the energies of his later business life were almost exclusively devoted. For many years he resided in South Washington, and carried on a windmill, as also machine works and streamboat building. The Virginia, Wm Selden, Champion, George Page, and Union were built by him. At one time he represented the 7th ward of Washington in the city councils. His remains arrived here today, and were interred in the Congressional cemetery.

The Will of Mrs. Maria C. Page

It will be remembered that Mrs. Page in April last bequeathed a large property to the Universalist society in this city. Mr. C.H. Armes, as attorney for the heirs-at-law, filed a bill in equity, claiming all the property on the ground that the bequests are illegal, having been made less than one month before Mrs. Page's death. Gen. T.T. Crittenden, W. Martin and Riddle & Padgett, for the society, demurred to the bill. Yesterday the demurrer was argued in the Equity Court, and over ruled.

The Will of Maria C. Page
Today before Judge Olin, in the Probate Court, the will case of Mrs. Maria C. Page, to which a caveat was filed on Saturday by Mrs. Lockwood, was heard. Gen. Crittenden appeared for Mrs. Smith, the executrix named in the will and Mrs. Lockwood for the caveators. The court dismissed the caveat.

_The Evening Star, May 9, 1877_

That Interesting Will Case, Editor, Star.

My connection with the “interesting will case” mentioned in your Saturday's issue was merely as amannis; Mrs. Maria C. Page, and not Mrs. H.M. Smith, dictating from a former will, while Mrs. Page was yet in comparatively good health, her death occurring suddenly of pneumonia, several weeks after the will was changed, although it was witnessed and signed but a few weeks before her death. The arrangements for the reception of the child by St. Vincent’s Orphan Asylum were made some time previous to her death, at which time I was requested to place her there, being at the bedside of Mrs. Page the last day of her life. It is due to Mrs. Helen M. Smith, a life-long friend of Mrs. Page, and who was absent from the city at the time, to state that she is a lady of independent means, and benefited in no way by the death of Mrs. Page. The Universalist Society of this city and the only son of the deceased are the beneficiaries.

Jane Z. Gilfillan.

The National Intelligencer, August 23, 1849

The friends of the late William Byrd Page, in their grief for his death, are soothed by the recollection of his virtues. He was the eldest son of William Byrd Page, of Fairfield, (Va.) a man whom his contemporaries justly regarded as the pattern of a Virginia gentleman of the old school. The same sincerity, uprightness, generosity, and urbanity which had characterized the father, were found also in the son. Mr. Page, the younger, was very early in life affected with deafness, which steadily increased, operating to impair greatly his usefulness to the community and to himself, while it unfitted him for that place in the social circle which his mind and manners eminently entitled him to occupy. But this affliction could not prevent his sterling merits and amiable demeanor from making their proper impression on all who knew him. Faithful in duty and an affectionate relation, he was ever prompt to perform any office of friendship or benevolence, at whatever inconvenience to himself. Truly indeed has a surviving friend remarked of him, that kinder heart than his never beat in a human breast.

Mr. Page was born in Frederick county, in Virginia, on the 14th of May, 1798, and died in this city on the 14th of August, 1849.

History of the Naval Lodge, No. 4, F.A.A.M.

Yelverton Peyton Page, Worshipful Master 1852 and 1856-1858, possessed one of the most interesting personalities in the history of the Lodge, and through a eulogy pronounced upon him by his intimate friend, Past Grand Master B.B. French, in 1863, we are permitted an insight into his life and character as fortunate as it is unusual. He was born in Washington, D.C., July 17, 1823, of parents noted for their integrity and worth and among the prominent citizens of the city. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as was also their son, and his early youth under the care of such parents promised to develop a character for goodness, truth and morality -- which promise was amply fulfilled. In early boyhood he was a page in the U.S. Senate, and became a favorite with many of the Senators. During the recess periods he devoted himself to study, and later became one of the most important clerks in the office of the Secretary of the Senate. He was initiated in Naval Lodge June 5, 1847; passed July 31, 1847, and raised August 2, 1847; exalted in Washington R.A. Chapter; made a Knight Templar May 11, 1853. Besides his service as Master he held various offices in Naval Lodge. In manner he was dignified, yet kind and courteous. As a Mason his charity was known throughout the jurisdiction; to him Freemasonry was not a mere shadow; it was a solemn and abiding obligation. In the Grand Lodge he stood high, and was bold and decided in the expression of opinions he considered right. He was elected Grand Master for the year 1863 while ill, and was installed in his home. In his address on that occasion he closed with the pathetic words: "You have summoned me in my weakness; you must sustain me by your strength." At this time he was apparently convalescing from an attack of pneumonia, and while he became better, he never regained his health, and died Sept. 26, 1863, while Grand Master of the District, and but forty years of age.

Dead

We regret to announce the death of Capt. Thomas Paine, U.S.N., whose illness was stated in yesterday's paper. Capt. P. was severely wounded during the war of 1812 in repulsing an attack upon the American gunboats near Savannah by the boats from a British squadron, by which he was permanently disabled for active service. He was a native of Georgia, but has resided for many years in Charleston, South Carolina.

Funeral of Capt. Paine

Capt. Thomas Paine, U.S. Navy, whose death in this city was noticed in the Star of yesterday was buried this afternoon in the Congressional cemetery. In compliance with a request that the utmost simplicity should be observed in his funeral, no military escort attended, and though a number of officers of the Army and Navy were present, they were not in uniform. He was attended during his illness by his daughter, and the family of Mr. Marshall Brown, at whose hotel he was stopping, and from whence the funeral took place. Capt. Ingraham was also with him at the time of his death, and received from him his instructions relative to his worldly affairs. His son arrived this morning and was present at the funeral. The funeral service of the Episcopal Church was performed, by Rev. Dr. Pyne, of St. John's church, in the parlor of Browns' Hotel, where a large company was assembled.

<td>Chas. Palmer, a resident of South Washington, was killed in a railroad accident at North Berwick, Mass., Saturday. Palmer was an employee of the Great Falls Ice Co., and was on his way to this city with two other employees of the company, in charge of twenty-four horses that were being brought here from the company's ice station on the Kennebec. He was missed from the train, and it is supposed that he fell off and was killed. A search was made for him but he could not be found. His body, which, it appears, was found afterward by the railroad people, will be brought to this city. He was a Swede about forty years old and had been in the employ of the company four or five years.</td>

<td>Palmer resigned his position some time ago as a result of bad health. For some time past he had been staying at 903 C street southeast, the home of a cousin, Mrs. Brady, while she visited in the country. Yesterday morning about 8 o'clock a little boy rushed into the home of Mrs. McDonald, an aunt of Mr. Palmer, at 303 11th street southeast, and told her that Palmer was very sick. She went to his bedside and at once called in Drs. Fredrick and Slattery.</td>

<td>Upon the arrival of the physicians a box of rough on rats was discovered on the mantelpiece. It has been there for some months past, and Palmer admitted that he had taken a dose of medicine, but denied that he had attempted suicide. Later in the day he was removed to Mrs. McDonald's house, on 11th street southeast, but he died in great agony shortly after arriving there. Palmer was a widower, having lost his wife six years ago. He leaves a boy eight years of age. He was member of American Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle, and that organization will arrange for the funeral.</td>

without being disturbed. In this room he remained until his groans again attracted the attention of Mr. Hammack, who sent for physicians and at the same time had Mr. Palmer removed to a better position in the passage. He was taken with convulsions, and after a relief from them he died before the physicians arrived. The physicians in attendance decided that the death was caused by disease of the heart. The deceased is not, as stated by a contemporary, Prof. William H. Palmer (Robert Heller) but an uncle of that gentleman.

Aged Resident Dead
Mrs. Martha Rowan Parham. Born in 1826
Mrs. Martha Rowan Parham, widow of Lieut. William J. Parham, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H.G. Forsberg, 626 F street southwest, at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Parham was one of Washington's oldest inhabitants. She had been in good health until about ten days ago, when she contracted a cold, which later developed into grip, the cause of her death.

The deceased was born in this city on the site of the patent office, in 1826. Her father was a marine artist, who came here from Newcastle, Del. She was educated in the public schools of this city. In 1844 she married Mr. Parham, who was at that time employed as a sculptor in Philadelphia. The marriage ceremony was performed in the old Fourth Presbyterian Church, near the corner of 9th and G streets northwest, which was demolished about ten years ago. Rev. John C. Smith, who was pastor of the church at that time, performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Parham was a member of the church from early girlhood until it was torn down. Her husband was also a member of the Auxiliary Guards of this city which was succeeded by the metropolitan police department.

Mrs. Parham was the mother of fourteen children, grandmother of fourteen and the great-grandmother of two. Only five of her children -- N.B. Parham of Pasadena, Cal.; Mrs. H.G. Forsberg of 626 F street southwest, widow of Capt. H.G. Forsberg of the District Militia; Alpha W. Parham of the detective bureau of this city; his twin brother, Omega Parham of Washington, and Mrs. Julia T. Garrett of 214 12th street -- survive her.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon at the residence of her daughter. Interment will be in Congressional cemetery. As yet the pallbearers have not been selected.

On Sunday evening, the 5th instant, in this city, after an illness of several weeks, General Daniel Parker. His friends and acquaintances are invited to attend his funeral from his residence on F street, at half past 3 o'clock this day (Tuesday), the 7th instant.

General Parker was a native of Massachusetts. He came to this city before the commencement of the late war, to fill the responsible post of Chief Clerk of the War Department. From this arduous office, in the times in which he filled it, and where his signal services and extensive capacity for business were justly appreciated by the administration of the excellent Madison, Gen. P. was transferred to the office of Adjutant and Inspector General of the Army, with the rank of Brigadier General, which he held to the year 1821. In late years he was again in the chief clerkship of the Department of War. In every public office he was distinguished by exemplary devotion to official duty. In his last painful illness he possessed all his faculties to the end, and met death with a fortitude and resignation to which human nature, however sustained by courage and piety, is rarely equal.

The National Intelligencer, Friday, November 25, 1814
Daniel Parker, late Chief Clerk of the War Department, has been appointed Adjutant and Inspector General of the Army.

Will of Daniel Parker, of City of Washington, D.C. (dted. March 26, 1846, probated April 10, 1846; Book 6, pp. 7-8; Box 18)
To my children Sarah Ann Hill and Charles Collins Parker, lots and land belonging to me on the south side of Market St. between Schuylkill, 4th and 5th sts., and on the west side of Schuylkill, 5th St., between Market and Barker sts. In the City and Co. of Philadelphia, Pa., adjacent to lots belonging to the estate of the late Zaccheus Collins, to be divided equally between them.

My daughter Sarah Ann Hill and her husband Clement Hill in contracting the most important of earthly obligations without seeking my advice or approbation …, I deem it unnecessary to consider them in this will.

Residue of estate, including a claim to part of the site of lands in the City of Little Rock, Ark., to my only son, Charles Collins Parker.

Chancery suit still pending against me in which Zaccheus Collins and his estate is bound for any deficiency on my part.

Wits.: Winfield Scott; Thomas Miller; Alexander S. Witherspoon.

Parker, George
The Evening Star, December 11, 1876
Death of Mr. George Parker
Mr. George Parker, for a long series of years one of the leading grocers of the District, died quite suddenly, about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, at his residence, corner of 4 1/2 and C streets, in the 77th year of his age, as is supposed from apoplexy. Mr. Parker was a native of Prince George's County, Md., having been born near Beltsville in the year 1800, and at 12 years of age he entered the store of the late Joseph Stettinius, and after a few years went into business for himself, on Market Space, and subsequently took in business with him his brother, Thomas Parker. Many of our now leading grocers -- Messrs. Jackson, Bryan, Browning, and others -- learned the business with this firm. The store, on Market Space, by the increase in business, became too small for them, and about thirty-five years ago they erected the fine property on the avenue, opposite the Metropolitan Hotel which was at that time regarded as the finest business place in Washington. The firm here, under the name of G. and T. Parker & Co., continued business until after the close of the war, when both the brothers being well advanced in years, they retired. Mr. Parker was identified with the business interests of the District generally, and for a long time was a director of the National Metropolitan Bank, and also a stockholder in the Alexandria Ferry Company. He leaves a wife and six children. He was a man of irreproachable character and a consistent member of Trinity (Episcopal) Church.

The National Intelligencer, December 13, 1876
The Funeral of the late George Parker, for many years a leading citizen of the District, who died suddenly on Sunday last, took place at 11 o'clock this morning from his late residence, corner of 4 1/2 and C streets. There was a very large attendance, especially of our oldest citizens, the Oldest Inhabitants' association being largely represented. The remains were encased in a handsome cloth-covered casket, with plate containing the name of deceased. There were on the casket many floral tributes of friends of the family. The service of the Episcopal church was read by Rev. Mr. Addison, of Trinity church, after which the remains were borne to the hearse and taken to the Congressional cemetery, where they were placed in the family vault. The pall-bearers were Dr. J.B. Blake, Col. J.G. Berret, Marshal Brown, ex-Mayor Wallach, Col. G.W. Phillips, J.W. Maury, Dr. J.M. McCulla and Lambert Tree. The funeral was under the supervision of Mr. R.F. Harvey.

Zevely: Old Houses on C Street,
Columbia Historical Society
What has been known as the Anderson House for several years, on the southeast corner of Four-and-one-half and C streets, was built by the late Jos. B. Bryan about 1843 for George Parker, whose residence it continued to be until his death in December, 1876. Mr. Parker will be remembered as one of the leading merchants, having with his brother, Thos. Parker, conducted a very extensive grocery business on Pennsylvania Avenue opposite Brown's (now Metropolitan) Hotel. Like the Coyle and May houses, it is built of brown stone -- i.e. the front -- with a width of 50 feet of more and three stories in height. Besides the main building it had many rooms in the extension, as also some in the basement. During recent years the eastern portion of it has been used for a separate dwelling.

The Parker family were numbered in past years among the wealthy residents of the city and their entertainments were a feature in social circles. There are no doubt some living here now -- belles and beaux of those days -- who can recall the brilliant gatherings in that house. The two younger sons of Mr. Parker are still living in Washington; also one of his daughters.

It should be noted in this record that what was formerly Four-and-one-half Street has by recent Act of Congress been changed to John Marshall Place by title -- i.e., from the City Hall down to C Street. But I assume that the old designation for houses I mention is allowable.

Mrs. Richard Emory Parker, of Old Maryland Stock, Passes Away
Funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Richard Emory Parker, whose death occurred Wednesday, after a lingering illness, at her home, 1634 Rhode Island avenue, were held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The funeral was attended only by close friends and relatives.

Before her marriage, Mrs. Parker was Miss Honoria Talbott Eubank, eldest daughter of Richard Eubank and his wife, former Susan MacKenzie Talbott. She was born in the old Talbott mansion near Laurel, Md.

In early life she was a noted belle of Baltimore and Richmond. When a young girl, with her mother and several younger sisters and brothers, she ran a blockade of northern gunboats in going to the Confederate capital.

Mrs. Parker is survived by her husband and six children—three sons, Eugene, Herbert and Claude Parker, and three daughters, Misses Corinne, Suzanne and Anita Parker.

Parker, James Walter | d. 12 Apr 1894 | R4/109 | Parker. Suddenly on April 12, 1894, James Walter Parker, son of the late Wm. T. Parker of the United States treasurer's office, aged 21 years. Funeral from late residence, 1403 Howard avenue, Mount Pleasant, Sunday, April 15, at 2 p.m. Interment at Congressional cemetery. (Philadelphia papers please copy). |

In Memoriam
James Walter Parker, aged 21, accidentally drowned Thursday, April 12, 1894, in the endeavor to rescue three of his companions from a capsized small boat on the Potomac, just above the Aqueduct bridge, Georgetown, D.C. He was a son of the late William T. Parker, who was a personal friend and trusted officer of the late Gen. F.E. Spinner when United States treasurer. The sympathies of all who knew Walter are greatly exercised for the loving invalid mother, who is almost inconsolable on account of this sad and sudden loss of her youngest son, who had been to her such a comfort and companion for so many years. He had a kind and loving disposition, which won for him the confidence and good will of all who became acquainted with him, and his business training was opening for him avenues toward an honorable success in life. He had on his person, when taken from the water, letters from two leading business firms in New York, closing engagements with him as traveling representative in the wholesale shoe business, over the receipt of which he had but a few hours before the accident been rejoicing, as it was going to afford him the opportunity he had been desiring of being able to render more assistance to his suffering mother. He left, as well as the mother, three sisters and two brothers to mourn his untimely death—Mrs. E.W. Parker, 1403 Howard avenue, Ms. Addie M. Shed, Mrs. Kate Cochran, Mrs. Georgie Steele, George T. Parker and Wm. W. Parker—all of whom live in this city, except the last named, who for some years has resided in Buenos Ayres, South America. Walter's body was laid in the grave near that of his father in the Congressional Cemetery, the funeral ceremonies being held on Sunday last.

Mr. Parker was the son of the late George Parker, one of the city's leading business men. The family home, at 4 1/2 and C streets, for years was noted for its hospitality. Mr. Parker was born at the old home when Washington was nothing more than a village, and watched the city grow to its present proportions. He was retired from the United States Army eleven years ago.

His wife, Elizabeth R. Parker; two sons, Robert E. and Charles L., and a brother, Frank, survive him. Services were held at St. Andrew's Church and interment was in the family plot in Congressional cemetery.

A Prominent Citizen Gone -- Death of Thomas Parker at the Age of 83 Years
Thomas Parker, a well-known and greatly esteemed citizen of Washington, died at his residence, No. 142 6th street northwest, yesterday morning, at the advanced age of eighty-three years. He was at one time a prominent business man, and for many years his brother George and himself conducted large grocery store on Pennsylvania avenue, opposite the Metropolitan hotel. Mr. Parker was a native of Prince George's county, Md., but in early life, when a mere boy, he came to this city, and clerking with his older brother entered into the copartnership with him, and the firm continued in business for nearly fifty years. Mr. Parker survived his brother several years, as also his family -- wife, son, and daughter -- and for some years past his household has consisted of his grandchildren and nephews and nieces. It is said he was one of those who drew Lafayette's carriage into Washington on his arrival here from Baltimore in 1824. He was the father-in-law of ex-Governor Charles P. Johnson of Missouri. His funeral will take place Saturday at 2 p.m. from his late residence.

Suicide--At noon today it was discovered that Mr. Wm. H. Parker, of California, who had been a guest at the National Hotel since early in the winter, had committed suicide the night before in his room by taking fifteen grains of morphine, a paper so marked had evidently contained it, and a spoon whitened by contact with morphine being found near him; hair about his mouth showed traces of it. His mind had been unsound evidently for some days. He leaves an interesting and greatly distressed daughter just grown, who was his companion at the National. No cause for this act of "feto de se" is known other than the condition of his evidently disordered mind. An inquest will be held this afternoon.

W.S. Parnell Killed By Runaway Horses

Wheels of Wagon Pass Over Body of Driver

When Animals Become Unmanageable

Run over by a wagon drawn by two runaway horses yesterday afternoon at 3d and R streets northwest, William S. Parnell, fifty-three years old, sustained injuries which caused his death before he reached the Casualty Hospital. Parnell, who resided at 347 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, was employed as driver for the Blue Line Transfer Company, and it was the team in his charge that killed him.

Parnell was driving his team to the company's stable shortly before 5 o'clock and was at 3d and R streets when his horses were frightened at a steam shovel that was being moved in the Baltimore and Ohio freight yard and became unmanageable.

Wheels Pass Over Stomach

The driver was thrown from his seat, falling directly in front of the wagon, two wheels passing over his stomach. Parnell was picked up and placed in an ambulance to be driven to the Casualty Hospital but death claimed him before the hospital was reached.

Parnell, it is stated, had been in the employ of the Blue Line Transfer Company a number of years. He is survived by his wife, brother and sister. It is probable the coroner will give a certificate of accidental death without the formality of an inquest.

Parry. On Friday the 10th inst. Mrs. Sidney Parry, wife of Capt. Stephen Perry, in the 60th year of her age, after a painful illness, which she bore with Christian resignation. She has left a disconsolate husband and four children to lament their irreparable loss. Her urbanity and philanthropy endeared her to all that knew her. She served as matron of the Washington Asylum for nearly three years, with a zeal that never flagged, and a fidelity that never changed. The numerous individuals that compose the Asylum expressed their unfeigned sorrow at her death.

James Louis Parsons

Few persons have figured more prominently in the growth of Washington, beautifying it and its adjacent towns than has James Louis Parsons, one of the leading builders of the national capital, with offices at 1425 New Jersey avenue. Mr. Parsons, originally from Louisa county, Virginia, is a son of Oswald L. and Susan H. Armstrong Parsons, and was born on March 19, 1847. His early education was acquired in the county school of his home. There he remained until he was nineteen years old, when he went to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and in the United States Quartermaster's Department learned the trade of a carpenter. Coming to Washington in 1873, Mr. Parsons worked for a few years as a journeyman and then went into the building business on his own account. The business gradually grew and expanded until it acquired its present far-reaching proportions, and many of the handsomest structures now in Washington erected by Mr. Parsons will stand for generations as a monument to the memory of one whose successful career is entirely and exclusively due to his own efforts and perseverance.

When but fifteen years old, Mr. Parsons responded to the call of his country and joined the Confederate Army at Gordonsville, Va., on July 25, 1862. Young Parsons was first under fire at the Battle of Cedar Run, and during the war he entered the quartermaster's department of the regular army, where he mastered the carpenter's trade, beginning his long and honored business career in this city in 1872.

The government, as well as scores of individuals of prominence, had implicit confidence in Mr. Parsons' integrity and good business judgment, and he served many times on boards of appraisal, when property was to be valued for condemnation or sale, notably when property for the Union station and Capitol Park extension was valued.

Mr. Parsons was president of the Master Builders' Association, a member of the Board of Trade and a director of the national Capital Bank. Essentially a man of domestic tastes and inclinations. Mr. Parsons was never so content as when surrounded by the members of his household.

He was twice married and is survived by his second wife, three sons and four daughters.

Patterson, Commodore Daniel Todd
b. 10 Mar 1785 - d. 25 Aug 1839

The National Intelligencer, August 26, 1839

We regret to announce that our esteemed fellow-citizen Commodore Daniel T. Patterson, of the United States Navy, and Commandant of the Navy Yard and Station in this city, expired on the morning of Sunday, the 25th instant, at a quarter past 8 o'clock, at his residence in the said yard, after a short but severe illness of about 30 hours.

His friends and acquaintances generally, and particularly the officers of the Navy and Army now stationed or who may be in Washington, are invited to attend his funeral, which will take place on Wednesday, the 28th instant, at 4 o'clock p.m., from his late residence at the Navy Yard.

The National Intelligencer, September 23, 1839

The Late Commodore Patterson.
(From the Louisianian)

Commodore Daniel T. Patterson was in the naval service about forty years, and was a midshipman in the Philadelphia frigate when she was lost on the Tripolitan coast in the year 1803. With her officers and crew he endured the evils of captivity in the capital of that barbarous country for about two years. At the conclusion of that war he was ordered to New Orleans with a naval force under Commodore Porter, destined to co-operate with the army for the protection of that capital against the designs of Aaron Burr, who was suspected of being engaged in a plot to dismember the Union.

At the epoch of the invasion of Louisiana by the English in 1814, the naval forces on this station were under the command of Commodore Patterson, and he greatly distinguished himself by his zeal, his courage, and the efficiency with which he aided the commander-in-chief in his plans for the defense of the country. In the memorable night attack on the English camp on the 23d December, 1814, the commodore commanded in person the schooner Carolina, which vessel having dropped down the river to the point of attack in the dusk of the evening, the enemy, not aware of her character, hailed her repeatedly without receiving an answer. When she had obtained her proper position, the voice of Patterson was distinctly heard from the shore, shouting to his crew -- "Give them this for the honor of America!" A close and terrible fire of canister shot followed, which scattered the enemy in all directions. They rallied, however, and, without being able to return the schooner's fire, they sheltered themselves as well as they could behind the levee, where they lay till they were again disturbed by the advance of our troops. The schooner then ceased firing.

Four days afterwards Commodore Patterson was abreast of the lines in the ship Louisiana, which had been purchased into the service, and manned with seamen impressed in the streets of New Orleans and when the British army advanced to the attack of our lines, she opened a terrible fire upon the columns, and materially aided in repulsing them.

After this abortive attempt to carry the lines, the seamen with their officers were placed at the batteries on shore. On the 8th of January, when the final attack was made, Commodore Patterson had command of a few heavy guns on the opposite side of the river, which were intended to play upon the enemy's columns whilst marching to the assault, which every one knew they threatened to make on that day. A strong detachment of British troops was transported across the Mississippi in boats and having routed the feeble band of militia under General David B. Morgan, stationed there for the defense of the battery, Commodore Patterson, having used the utmost exertions in vain to arrest the flight of the fugitives, was obliged to spike his guns and retire to this side of the river in order to preserve himself and his men from being made prisoners. The assault on the lines of General Jackson being repulsed in a most signal manner, the British evacuated their new position on the opposite bank the same night, and Commodore Patterson resumed his station the next morning, and continued to annoy the British camp with an incessant fire of his heavy guns till the end of the campaign. In public orders and private correspondence, General Jackson bestowed upon his friend, the commodore, the warmest praise for the zeal, activity, and ability with which he had acted during that trying period. Since the peace, Commodore Patterson has commanded American squadrons in various parts of the globe, and always kept up the efficiency of the ancient discipline and maintained with jealous exactitude the honor of the service. His original education had been of the kind best adapted to the vocation for which he was intended, and in after years he carefully improved his mind by study and observation. Like all men who pass their lives in the stirring scenes of the naval service, he was full of information and anecdote, which he knew how to detail with tact and propriety. He was of a most amiable character in private life, and has left a widow (sister to Carlile Pollock, Esq., of New Orleans) and a numerous family of children to deplore his loss.

Comm. P. was a native of Long Island, and at his death was about 58 years of age.

Born on Long Island, N.Y., March 6, 1786. Acting Midshipman on U.S. Sloop of War Delaware, June 11, 1799 to August 1800, appointed Midshipman, U.S. Navy, August 20, 1800 (warrant subsequently altered to take rank from date of his original entry, June 11, 1799). Was one of the Midshipmen retained in the Navy under the Peace Establishment Act of 1801. Attached to the U.S. Frigate Constellation, in the Mediterranean, from February 1802 to March 1803. On May 24, 1803, he was ordered to the U.S.S. Philadelphia, under Captain Bainbridge, sailing for the Mediterranean in July. On October 31st he was taken prisoner when the Philadelphia was stranded and captured by the Tripolitans. During the long imprisonment he and the other younger officers profited by the excellent tutelege of Captain Bainbridge and Lieutenants Porter and Jones. On June 3, 1805, the prisoners were liberated and he returned to the United States on board the U.S.S. President. On January 20, 1806, was ordered to report on board U.S.S. Franklin, under Captain Shaw, with whom he proceeded to New Orleans station. Commissioned Lieutenant January 24, 1807. On July 28, 1807, was ordered to New York to place himself under the command of Commodore John Rodgers at that station. Was ordered to New Orleans under command of Captain David Porter, March 21, 1808. From January 1810 to February 1811 was in semi-independent command of twelve gunboats stationed at Natchez and operating in the Gulf, which transferred most of the troops for the occupation of Baton Rouge in 1810. Commissioned Master Commandant July 24, 1813, and on October 18th was ordered to succeed Commodore Shaw in command of the Naval Station at New Orleans. In September 1814 he commanded the flotilla of gunboats that destroyed the fortifications of the pirate Jean Lafitte at Barataria Bay, La., capturing many guns, six schooners and several smaller craft. During 1814-1815 the naval forces under Commodore Patterson cooperated with General Jackson in the defense of New Orleans. Promoted to Captain February 28, 1815. He and his officers and men received a vote of thanks from Congress for their part in the Battle of New Orleans.

He was detached from station at New Orleans June 23, 1824, and ordered to Norfolk, and then to the U.S.S. North Carolina, to serve as Fleet Captain in the Mediterranean Squadron of Commodore John Rodgers. On October 21, 1825, he was assigned to command of the U.S.S. Constitution, also in the Mediterranean, and remained there until May 30, 1828. On July 26th he was detached from that vessel, having been granted unlimited leave.

On March 19, 1829, he was appointed one of the three commissioners of the U.S. Navy, effective March 13, 1829; served in that capacity until May 21, 1832, when he was ordered to the command of the Mediterranean Squadron. Was appointed to the command of the Navy Yard at Washington, D.C., March 1, 1836, remaining there until his death on August 25, 1839.

The Washington Post, April 26, 1936
Grave Marker Laid in Honor of 1812 Hero
Society Pays Tribute to Commodore Patterson in Local Rites
North Carolina delegates in the convention of the National Society of the Daughters of 1812, scheduled to begin here today, held memorial exercises at Congressional Cemetery yesterday afternoon for Daniel Todd Patterson, little known hero of the battle of New Orleans. A special marker placed on Commodore Patterson's grave was unveiled by his great-grand-daughter, Miss Elizabeth Pearson Patterson of Washington.

Commodore Patterson's ships stood off the British for several days, giving Andrew Jackson time to throw up fortifications at New Orleans from Mobile, where Jackson had expected the battle.
Before the War of 1812 Commodore Patterson was a noted pirate chaser. He reportedly captured six gun vessels and the operating base of Jean Lafitte, the "Terror of the Gulf."

At the ceremony yesterday afternoon addresses were made by Mrs. John Francis Weinmann, president of the national society; O. Max Gardner, former Governor of North Carolina, and Capt. William Dilworth Puleston, director of Naval Intelligence, U.S.N. Mrs. Sydney Perry Cooper, president of the North Carolina Society, directed the ceremony.

The national convention opens today and will continue through Wednesday. The formal opening services will be held at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church this afternoon in memory of members who have died during the past year. Members will then go to Washington Cathedral, where they will present the society's banner to Cathedral authorities.

Business sessions will get under way tomorrow morning at the Willard, the headquarters of the convention, with registration of the 500 delegates.

During the afternoon delegates will go to Baltimore, where they will present furniture to the National Park Service for use in the restoration of Fort McHenry.

Brig. Gen. R.P. Williams of the United States Marine Corps, and W.H. Drake Lester of the Department of Justice will speak before the convention tomorrow night. The annual banquet will be held Tuesday evening.

Early Naval Hero Will Be Honored
Exercises Are Planned for Commodore Patterson, 1812 War Veteran
Commodore Daniel Todd Patterson, U.S.N., who achieved fame at the Battle of New Orleans and in engagements with the pirates of Tripoli and later commanded the Washington Navy Yard, will be honored by the North Carolina Society, National Society, United States Daughters of 1812, at ceremonies at his grave in Congressional Cemetery next Saturday.

The exercises, to be held at 3 p.m., will consist of memorial services and the unveiling of a marker by the naval hero's granddaughter, Miss Elizabeth P. Patterson, 2339 Massachusetts ave nue, Brig. Gen. David D. Porter, adjutant and inspector of the Marine Corps, a great-grandson of Commodore Patterson, also will participate in the ceremony. Miss Patterson has been designated to christen the new destroyer Patterson, named for her ancestor.

Mrs. John Francis Weinman, president of the National Society, Daughters of 1812, will place a wreath on the naval hero's grave, while Mrs. Sydney Perry Cooper, State president of the North Carolina Society, will take a leading part in the tribute.

Former Gov. O. Max Gardner of North Carolina will delivery a short address. Another talk will be made by Capt. William Dilworth Puleston, director of naval intelligence, who will discuss the naval career of Commodore Patterson.

Other descendants of the commodore who will attend the exercises include Misses Mary and Harriet Winslow of this city and Carlile Patterson Winslow.

Among his many duties, Commodore Patterson commanded the Constitution and was in command of the Mediterranean squadron. He died at the Navy Yard here August 25, 1839.

Grave Marker Laid in Honor of 1812 Hero
Society Pays Tribute to Commodore Patterson in Local Rites
North Carolina delegates in the convention of the National Society of the Daughters of 1812, scheduled to begin here today, held memorial exercises at Congressional Cemetery yesterday afternoon for Daniel Todd Patterson, little known hero of the battle of New Orleans. A special marker placed on Commodore Patterson's grave was unveiled by his great-grand-daughter, Miss Elizabeth Pearson Patterson of Washington.

Commodore Patterson's ships stood off the British for several days, giving Andrew Jackson time to throw up fortifications at New Orleans from Mobile, where Jackson had expected the battle.

Before the War of 1812 Commodore Patterson was a noted pirate chaser. He reportedly captured six gun vessels and the operating base of Jean Lafitte, the "Terror of the Gulf."

Miss Patterson's Funeral
Miss Izora Patterson died Saturday afternoon at the residence of her parents, No. 751 10th street southeast. She was the eldest daughter of Mary J. and Robert T. Patterson. Her death was the result of a recent operation. Miss Patterson was at one time a singer in the choir at St. Teresa's Church. Up to the time of her death she was the leading soprano singer at Christ Church, Navy Yard, and was also a member of Electra Chapter, No. 2, Order of the Eastern Star, of Anacostia. A special meeting of Electra Chapter was held last evening in Masonic Hall, when arrangements were made for the funeral of the deceased member, it being decided that representatives of the chapter should attend in a body, and that the usual ritual be performed. Funeral services over the remains were held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from Christ Church. The interment was made in Congressional cemetery.

Patterson, Jane E. On Wednesday, August 14, 1901 at 4 p.m., Jane Elizabeth Paterson, widow of Alexander Patterson in her 64th year. Funeral from her late residence, 61 F street northwest, Friday, August 16 at 2 o'clock p.m.

Patterson, John Robert. On Wednesday, June 29, 1892 after a lingering illness, John R. Patterson, son of the late Robert Patterson of Juniata Co., Pennsylvania. Funeral from the residence of his mother, 52 B street northeast, Saturday, July 2 at 3:30 p.m.

Patterson, Joseph C. On Wednesday, the 25th instant after a lingering illness, Joseph C., youngest son of the late Joseph N. Patterson in the 6th year of his age.

Patterson, Joseph N. On yesterday, 25th instant, after a short illness, Joseph N. Patterson, Esq., clerk in the Post Office Department. His funeral will take place this afternoon at 3 o'clock from his late residence, north A street, Capitol Hill. The friends of the family are invited to attend.

Patterson, Lucinda H. On Sunday, April 8, 1900 at 1 o'clock a.m., Mrs. Lucinda Blaine, wife of the late Robert Patterson of Juniata Co., Pa. Funeral on Tuesday, April 10 at 2 p.m. from her late residence, 52 B street northeast. Interment private.

Fatal Dose of Acid

Clayton E. Paxson Takes His Own Life

Despondent because he had been out of work since the Christmas holidays, Clayton Elgin Paxson, twenty-one years old, who lived with his parents and sisters at 624 D street southeast, committed suicide last night by taking carbolic acid. His body was found in the shed in rear of the family home this morning about 6:30 o'clock by his mother. It was lying upon the floor of the shed, an empty bottle on which was pasted a carbolic acid label being found near by on the floor. Mrs. Paxson was greatly shocked by the discovery. She hurried to the house and notified her husband, Mr. Westwood F. Paxson, and the latter went immediately to the shed, only to find his son was dead. The presence of the carbolic acid bottle near his body and burns about his mouth told the story. Mr. Paxson was terribly agitated over the affair. His son had never intimated that he intended to commit suicide.

A note was pinned on the lapel of the young man's coat. On the envelope he had written enough to show that the note inside was intended to be read by his parents and sisters.

His Last Message

After writing "Nearer, My God to Thee" on the piece of note paper he told his last message, as follows:

"Forgive me, mamma, papa and sisters, for this rash act. I have been despondent because I could not find work and decided to end it all. I trust I will meet you hereafter."

The police were notified and an officer was sent to the house to take care of the body until the arrival of the coroner. That official gave permission for the removal of the remains from the shed to the house, and later Undertaker Lee prepared them for burial. The deceased had been employed in one of the department stores during the Christmas holidays, but, as stated, had been out of employment since then. He made several efforts to get work during recent months, but failed. He was about the house last night until after 8 o'clock. What he did after that time his relatives have not yet learned. It is thought he wrote the note while in the house with his parents and sisters and that he afterward went to a drug store and bought the poison.

No member of the family saw him when he returned home last night. It was not necessary for him to pass through the house to reach the shed, as there is a narrow alley at the side of the residence. Clayton, it is believed, tiptoed through this alley last night when he returned, and proceeded to the shed where his body was found. The fact that he was not in his room last night was not discovered until his mother found his remains this morning.

Coroner Nevitt visited the house later in the day and viewed the remains. He heard the statements of members of the Paxson family, and gave a certificate of suicide.

The funeral will take place Wednesday afternoon from the family house. The interment will be in Congressional Cemetery.

- Ex-Fire Chief Peabody and Mrs. Peabody Injured
- Wife is Likely to Die
- Burdened With Christmas Gifts, Couple Meet Accident
- Crew of Car is Arrested
- Motorman Unable to Avoid Catastrophe--
- Put on Brakes But Struck Pedestrians

Their arms laden with packages intended for Christmas presents, John J. Peabody, 73 years old, and his wife, Mrs. Mary Peabody, were struck by a southbound Takoma Park car at 9th and L streets northwest last night.

The couple were on their way from a shopping tour and were but a short distance from the family residence, on L street between 8th and 9th streets.

Mr. Peabody, formerly chief engineer of the District fire department is at Emergency Hospital, suffering with concussion of the brain. He also sustained cuts about the head and body.

Physicians at the hospital believe Mrs. Peabody has sustained a fractured skull. Her recovery is doubtful.

On Way Home
The accident happened shortly after 8 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Peabody alighted from a northbound car at the south side of the crossing at 9th and L streets, and had started in the direction of their home. The southbound car came along before they had crossed the tracks and struck them.

H.L. Hoffman, motorman on the Takoma Park car, tried to prevent the accident. He applied the brakes as soon as he saw the pedestrians and succeeded ins topping the car just after it had cleared the crossing.

Mr. Peabody and his wife had been knocked down however. About all the motorman and conductor, D.C. Keyes, could do was to assist the elderly couple.

Policeman Edward Kelly, detailed at headquarters, was near the scene when the accident occurred. He went to the aid of Mr. and Mrs. Peabody.

Mrs. Peabody was unconscious when picked up and carried to the porch in front of the Chinese laundry at the southwest corner of 9th and L streets. Mr. Peabody was in a dazed condition.

The auto patrol wagon from the second precinct was summoned. Policeman Bennett in charge. The quick trip from the station to the scene of the accident and back to the hospital was the means of getting the injured couple in the hospital without delay.

On the way to the hospital the husband regained his memories. He was able to discuss the affair with the policeman.

Crew of Car Ordered Arrested
Capt. Peck of the second precinct learned from the hospital that Mrs Peabody would probably die. He directed that the crew of the car be arrested or bonded for their appearance.

Mr. Peabody, a native of Washington is well known throughout the entire District. Many years ago he was chief engineer of the fire department.
He is a son of the late John Peabody, who sailed a big ship away from the port of Georgetown about the beginning of the century and, who was afterward an auctioneer in Georgetown.

He is a retired machinist, having learned his trade in the navy yard many years ago. He went west early in life and was employed on a railroad for several years.

He was a member of the Northern Liberty volunteer fire company, joining the organization in 1843. In 1857 he joined the Columbia fire company and later was instrumental in getting a paid fire department for Washington.

He is a member of the Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association and of Washington Lodge of Odd Fellows.

Mrs. Peabody was Miss Mary Hall of Virginia, of the well known family of that name in Virginia. The Peabody's originally came from Salem, Mass.

The Evening Star, January 2, 1911
Together in Death
Injuries Are Fatal to John J. Peabody and Wife Struck by a Street Car
Had Lingered at Emergency Hospital Since Christmas Eve Lifelong Capital Resident
Noted as a Fire Fighter and First Chief of the Paid Department
Long Navy Yard Employee

John J. Peabody and Mary J. Peabody, his wife, aged 79 and 73 years respectively, who were struck by a car at the corner of 9th and L streets northwest while returning home from a shopping tour Christmas eve, succumbed to their injuries within a few hours of each other. Mr. Peabody expiring at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and Mrs. Peabody at 1:50 o'clock this morning. Mrs. Peabody died ignorant of the fact that her husband was dead. Friends and relatives of the couple were at the Emergency Hospital, where the two had been since the accident, during the greater portion of last night.

The accident which caused the death of Mr. Peabody and his wife occurred shortly after 8 o'clock Christmas eve. They had been downtown to make some purchases. Alighting from a north-bound car, they started across the tracks toward their home, only half a square distant, when they were struck by a south-bound car.

Unable to Stop Car
H.L. Hoffman, the motorman, endeavored to stop the car as soon as he saw them crossing the tracks, but was unable to do so before they were struck. He and the conductor, D.C. Keyes, were taken into custody by the police, but were afterward released on bond.

All through the night following the accident Mrs. Peabody was unconscious, and her husband was only semi-conscious. It was thought at the time by the physicians in attendance that the recovery of either was extremely improbable, as each had received serious injuries to head and body.

Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed.

After hearing evidence of several witnesses regarding the accident a coroner's jury this afternoon declared that their death was the result of an unavoidable accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Peabody had been married more than fifty years, having celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last May. He was of New England stock, and both on his father's and mother's side descended from active participants in the revolutionary war. He was a son of Capt. John Peabody, who a century ago sailed a ship out of Georgetown and afterward settled there, subsequently removing to this city. He was born at what is now 1416 1 street.

intrepid fireman, and in more than one instance had a close call for his life. At the Baker's Hotel, Capitol-Library and Senator Benton fires his clothing was frozen on him, and at the last named he was frozen fast to the tree from which he had directed the stream. He resigned his membership in the Northern Liberties Company in September, 1855, and the same month he joined the Columbia Company on Capitol Hill, in a few months being elected first director or captain of the hose. In 1857 he was delegated to the fire department: in 1862 he became vice president of the company, and in May following president of the company; in June 1862, he was a delegate to a convention for organizing the volunteer fire department.

The councils gave power to reorganize the department and to select a chief engineer, and he was chosen to that position, entering on his duties December 20, almost immediately being in active service at a fire at 5th

With music strains so clear,
While angels sing to her she'll smile,
And be where God is near.

A Clerk's Suicide
Mr. James B. Peake Takes a Double Dose of Poison
A Tragedy That Caused a Sensation in Northeast
Washington This Morning -- After Taking Carbolic Acid
And Laudanum The Suicide Informs His Family Of It.
A sad suicide occurred today on 7th street northeast. At 10:45 this morning shrieks and cries were heard coming from house No. 222 7th street northeast, occupied by Mr. James B. Peake and his family. A policeman who was passing ran to the house and found that Mr. Peake had attempted to commit suicide by taking a large dose of carbolic acid and laudanum.

Physicians Could Not Keep Him
The policeman hastened for a physician and in the meantime Special Agent Key of the Humane Society, who happened to be in the neighborhood, arrived at the house. He also notified a physician and obtained a supply of sweet oil at a pharmacy, which was given in large quantities to the already dying man. The first physician to arrive was Dr. Marion Curtis, who was joined shortly by Drs. Strickler and Hazen. Every means known to the combined skill of the assembled physicians were used, but all failed to revive to any extent the dying man, and at 12 o'clock he expired.
Mr. Peake was a clerk in the third auditor's office, Treasury Department. He was about 40 or 45 years old and lived with his wife and four children in a comfortably furnished two-story brick house.

Told The Children

He did not go to the office this morning. He was about the house some time and about ten minutes before 11 o'clock he called one of his daughters and told what he had done.

His statement was so startling that the daughter could hardly believe it, but it took but a few seconds to discover that there was too much truth in his assertion. He became deathly sick and was apparently nearing his death when the alarm was given and the physicians were summoned.

The deceased was born in this city and was appointed to office several years ago as a Washingtonian. He held a $1,400 clerkship.

Trying Electricity

When it became know that Mr. Peake had taken the deadly drug the neighbors flocked to the house and crowded the room on which lay the unconscious man.

The doctors applied an electric battery after the neighbors had left the room, but the suicide did not regain consciousness before he died.

The bottle from which the fluid had been drank still contained a little of the mixture, which the doctors concluded was commercial carbolic acid and laudanum.

Mr. Peake, it appeared, did not tell what he had done until the poison had taken effect, and he was unconscious in a few minutes.

Coroner Patterson was notified of the suicide and he will probably inquire into the case later in the day.

The wife and children are almost prostrate with grief.

A Native of East Washington

The deceased was a native of East Washington, a son of the late John H. Peake. He was raised on 7th street east near the navy yard gate, and up to the commencement of the war he was a writer or clerk in the navy yard. He served as a member of the Washington Light Guard in the early days of the war. For many years after he was a writer in the navy yard and subsequently he was for some time out of steady employment. When the civil service law went into effect he took the first examination and passed so high up on the list that he was one of the first appointed to a vacancy in the Treasury Department.

What Is Said In The Office

There was no knowledge whatever in the third auditor's office today of the suicide of Mr. Peake, or even of his death. From statements made there it would seem that Mr. Peake has suffered for some time under severe domestic troubles, and that his financial condition is poor. He had, it would appear, a mania for investing in patent rights, and had a large number of small creditors, who besieged him every pay day.

The Evening Star, November 3, 1890

Funeral of James B. Peake

The body of Mr. James B. Peake, who committed suicide Friday, was buried with military honors yesterday afternoon. The religious services took place at the family residence, 222 7th street northeast, and the interment was in a vault at Congressional cemetery. The services were conducted by Rev. W.M. Furguson of the Fourth Street M.E. Church. A large number of friends were present, as were also members of Farragut Post, No. 16, and Union Lodge, No. 11, I.O.O.F. At the cemetery the ritual of the G.A.R. was read by Chaplain J.H. Bradford. The pallbearers for Farragut Post were Comrades Marbury Harris and Fred. Bibbins, and the representatives from Union Lodge were Messrs. John Hutchinson and L.S. Brooford.

Department Commander Urel of the G.A.R. was present with his staff, which consisted of Senior Vice Department Commander D.C. Faunce, Junior Vice Department Commander Farnsworth, Assistant Adjt. Gen. Keoh and Medical Director Howard. Post Commander George R. Cook was also present with his staff, Senior Vice4 Commander Capt. Riley, Junior Vice Commander H.H. Moler, Post Surgeon McKim, Adjutant Chris. Storm and Quartermaster W.F. Dove.

Peake. The remains of the late James B. Peake were removed from the vault at Congressional Cemetery and quietly laid to rest in the family lot November 27, 1890 at 12 o'clock.

A Month of Suicides

Seven Cases of Self-Destruction Here in October

... Eleven days later, on the last day of the month James B. Peake, a department clerk, drank about an ounce of a mixture of carbolic acide and laudanum. Peake had a good, comfortable home and a family, but he took the fatal dose and ended his life without giving any reason therefore.

_Funeral of J.H. Peake_

_Service Over His Remains Monday Afternoon_

_Rev. W.L. Devrives to Officiate_

J.H. Peake, formerly of the city, but for a number of years a resident of Cody, Wyo., where he established and was publishing the Cody Enterprise, died very suddenly at the residence of his father-in-law, Richard Rothwell, 28 9th street northeast, the morning of the 29th of November, as heretofore stated in The Star, Col. Peake was born in Portsmouth, Va., December 18, 1848, and was the eldest son of the late James T. Peak, one of the oldest residents of East Washington. Col. Peake was among the youngest volunteers in the civil war, having enlisted at the age of fourteen years, and served as an aid to General Custer. He was in the seven days fight in the Wilderness and afterward in Company G of the 40th United States Veteran Volunteers. He was honorably discharged at the end of the war, and went west, locating in Nebraska, where he owned and published in turn the North Platte Enterprise and the Lincoln Journal.

Relinquishing this work, he again returned to Washington as correspondent for several Nebraska and Colorado newspapers. At the earnest solicitation of Col. W.F. Cody, with whom he was closely associated he again went west, locating in Wyoming, where he established the Cody Enterprise and was elected a member of the city council. He also served as mayor of the city and was for several terms probate judge of the county, in which Cody is located.

_Prominent in Fraternal Circles_

Col. Peake was prominent in fraternal societies, as well as a prominent business man and publisher. He was a director in the Basin Oil Company and several mining companies in Wyoming, and was a member of the Masonic fraternity in this city and Cody, being a charter member of M.M. Parker Lodge, No. 27, F.A.A.M. of Washington and a Royal Arch Mason on Knight Templar, affiliaiting with Washington Commandery, No. 1, of this city. He was also a member of Farragut Post, G.A.R., and a charter member of the Bear Tooth Lodge of Elks of Red Lodge, Mont.

Col. Peake was considered a "western publisher," for in great measure Cody owes its magnificent growth, from a small village to a hustling railroad town of probably 8,000 population, to his uniring work on a newspaper which boomed the town from the beginning. Cody has all the modern conveniences of a city, and the government is now spending several millions of dollars in irrigating the surrounding land and employing several thousands of men. The city council of Cody passed and forwarded resolutions of sympathy and condolence to Mrs. Peake and other members of Col. Peake's family in this city. The Cody Business Men's Club forwarded similar expressions of respect, and letters and telegrams of condolence have been received from men of prominence in business and political circles in Iowa, Nebraska and Wyoming.

_Funeral Services_

Col. Peake's funeral will take place Monday at 2 o'clock p.m. from 28 9th street northeast, under the direction of M.M. Parker Loge. The Rev. W.L. Devries of St. Mark's P.E. Church and Rev. E.B. Bagby of Ninth Street Christian Church will conduct the service. The Masonic fraternity and the G.A.R. will be represented and hosts of friends are expected to attend.

Col. Peake's wife and one daughter, Mrs. C.D.Blaine of Cody Wyo., survive him. The latter was notified of her father's death and is expected to arrive in time to attend the services. Three brothers and one sister survive him. The latter are: W.C. Peake, contractor, and M.F. and C.P. Peake, who are employed in the government printing office, and Mrs. James F. Anderson, who resides on 9th street northwest. The interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

_The Evening Star, December 4, 1905_

Funeral services over the remains of the late J.H. Peake took place this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of his father-in-law, Mr. Richard Rothwell, 28 9th street northeast. The services were conducted by Rev. W.L. Davries, rector of St. Mark's Protestant Episcopal Church, and Rev. E.B. Bagby, pastor of the Ninth Street Christian Church. Mrs. C.D. Blaine, daughter of the deceased, arrived this morning from her home in Cody, Wyoming, and was present at the funeral. The pallbearers were chosen from Myron M. Parker Lodge, No. 27, of the Masonic fraternity, and Farragut Post, Grand Army of the Republic. They were Messrs. G.E. Lederer, S.F. Entitirten, Dr. A.K. Lind, R.W. Bowen, E.S. Christ and J. Eldredge Burns. During the services at the house the Masonic quartet sang "Abide With Me," "Lead, Kindly Light," and at the close of the service, "Nearer, My God to Thee." Many large and beautiful floral tributes were sent by the friends of the deceased, by the city council of Cody, Wyo. of which the deceased was a member some years ago. The Business Men's Interments in the Historic Congressional Cemetery Last Updated: 2/13/2015
Club of Cody also sent a large anchor of roses. The interment was in Congressional Cemetery. The services at the grave were conducted first by the representatives of Parker Lodge, and later by Farragut Post, G.A.R.

Soldier and Editor Won Fame in Peace
John H. Peake, Who Died Here, Achieved Honors as Well in War--
Launched Many Newspapers Upon Successful Career--

Came to this City When a Boy
By the death of John H. Peake, the famous soldier, scout, organizer, and editor, Washington has lost a citizen famous throughout the country. During his notable career he made his home in eight different States and founded five newspapers which survive him.

At the age of fourteen he came to this city with his father from Portsmouth, Va. In the early sixties, while a mere boy, he enlisted as a drummer in General Custer's cavalry, and served for two years in the civil war. He was wounded in the battle of the Wilderness and was continued to the hospital for three months after which he was honorably discharged from the service, but reenlisted as a volunteer in Company G, United States Veteran Infantry.

At the close of the war he went to North Platte, Neb., then a village of only 200 inhabitants, where he founded his first paper. Today his paper is read by over 35,000. Mr. Peake later sold his paper at North Platte, and started a sheet in Lincoln.

He returned to Washington shortly after his Lincoln adventure in the journalistic field, and accepted a position as division chief in the Interior Department, but his health began to fail and he resigned. Later he established a newspaper at Deadwood, S.D., in the Black Hills. He soon disposed of the Deadwood paper and began the Cheyenne Leader, which is today one of the leading journals of the West.

His health failed to improve, and he again returned to the East. He commenced business in Washington, but his health would not permit him to keep it up. He returned to the West, and started a newspaper in Cody, Wyo., the town famous as the namesake of "Buffalo Bill," who was a friend of Mr. Peake's. Six years ago Cody was a town of sixteen inhabitants; today, through the efforts of Colonel Cody and his Eastern newspaper assistant, it has grown to 3,000.

Mr. Peake came East in October for the last time, a victim of heart trouble. He was a member of Farragut Post, G.A.R.; Parker Blue Lodge, F.A.A.M.; Washington Chapter, Washington Commandery, No. 1; Bear Tooth Lodge, B.P.O.E.; Red Lodge, Montana, F.A.A.M.; Cody Business Men's Club, and the Shoshone Tribe, I.O.R.M.

The funeral will be conducted by Parker Blue Lodge. It will be held from the home of his father-in-law, Richard Rothwell, 28 Ninth street northeast. Interment will be at Congressional Cemetery. He is survived by a widow and daughter.

The Funeral of Mrs. Pendleton

The funeral ceremonies of the late Mrs. Pendleton took place yesterday afternoon at the residence of her mother, Mrs. Mills, Rev. Dr. Sunderland officiating. A large number of friends in the city, and from Baltimore, Alexandria, Georgetown, and Virginia were in attendance, among whom we noticed President Buchanan, Attorney General Black, Dr. Blake, Commissioner of Public Buildings, and Mayor Berrett. The Columbia Fire Company, of which Mrs. Pendleton was a liberal patron was present and joined in the procession which was one of the largest that has lately been witnessed in the city. The Columbia fire bell was tolled during the movement of the solemn cortege.

Hall of the Columbia Engine House

Capitol Hill, April 21, 1851

At a special meeting of the Columbia Engine Company, No. 1, held on the 18th inst, the following preamble and resolutions offered by Philip J. Ennis, were unanimously adopted:

Whereas the angel of death has again visited us and torn from our midst the esteemed Patroness of the Columbia Fire Company, Mrs. J.S. Pendleton; and whereas our deceased benefactress was no less endeared to us by her shining virtues than by her generous donations—possessing, as she did, in an eminent degree those queenly graces of mind and of heart which beautify and elevate the character of woman; and whereas it is meet and proper that we, who have been so often cheered by her smiles of encouragement, and so frequently the recipients of her liberal patronage, should lay an humble garland of affection upon her early tomb: therefore,

Resolved, That we have heard with feelings of deep and heartfelt sorrow, of the death of Mrs. J.S. Pendleton, who, living, was beloved by the members of the Company, and, dead, will still live in their grateful memories.

Resolved, That we tender to the surviving members of the family our sincere condolence in this afflicting dispensation.

Resolved, That as a mark of respect for the memory of our deceased patroness, the hall of the Company be draped in mourning for the space of thirty days, and that, as a further mark of respect, we attend the funeral in a body, in citizens dress; and that a copy of these proceedings be transmitted to the family of the deceased, and be published in the daily papers of this city.

James McDermott, Secretary of Columbus Engine Co., No. 1

Clipping from unidentified Washington newspaper, found among the Mills family documents and now in the possession of Robert Mills Evans:

Jacqueline, second child of Robert Mills, frequently spoken of in correspondence as lovely though extremely delicate, grew to be a beautiful woman, admired for the qualities enumerated below. She was mistress of several languages, and was at one time a confidential emissary between our government and France. President Buchanan stood, hat in hand, at the foot of her bed as she died. Her husband, Edward H. Pendleton, son of Senator George H. Pendleton, had died some time before.

Appendix 9: President Buchanan's Obituary of Jacqueline S. Mills Pendleton, Daughter of Robert Mills

Obituary (Communicated)

(Appeared in National Intelligencer, April 19, 1859)

Died in this city, at the residence of her mother, on the morning of Sunday, April 17, 1859, Mrs. Jacqueline S. Pendleton.
When the aged die, when those who for long years have been stricken by disease and worn out by infirmities, who have fulfilled the seeming end of their earthly existence, and have outlived even the hopes of their own hearts; when such die we bow in resigned submission to the appointment of an allwise Creator. When the infant dies, when the chill signet is set on the delicate lip of the being just budding into existence, we can almost rejoice that it hath seemed good to its heavenly father to take it back to his bosom from the evil to come, even at the threshold of this sinning and sorrowing world. When the sick and the wary hearted die, those whom lingering disease have worn and wasted, and in whom the life fountain hath for years been well-nigh dried up, whom bereaved affection and blighted hopes have caused to long for the grave as a quite resting place; when such die we can feel that, if prepared for a happier world, we may not grieve much that they have been called from this; but when the young, and the fair, and the happy die, when those who love all and are by all beloved, pass away to "the silent land of the sleepers": those to whom the glad sun and the green earth and the waving trees, and the gushing waters, all the creations of their God, are bright and beautiful; who love life itself, because life offers to them nothing that is not lovely; who are the center of anticipation and the embodiment of hope and whose smile is the sunlight of a happy home; when such, in the very bloom of life, in the very midst of a widespread usefulness, are suddenly snatched from the earth, the event falls upon us like a peal of thunder from a sunlit sky. We pause; we ponder. How strange that such should be taken, and that the aged, and the infirm, and the diseased, the sick of soul and the sick of life, should be forced to linger out an undesired and almost undesirable existence.

Jacqueline Pendleton sleeps with the dead. For brilliancy of intellect, for extent and variety of accomplishment, and for all those charms of social and personal intercourse which win attachment and admiration, she was one of the most remarkable women of her day; but yet more remarkable was she for that kindness of spirit, that benevolence of disposition, that clarity of heart and life which never wearies; that zeal to comfort the destitute, to console the wretched, to reclaim the abandoned, to relieve the oppressed, which never rests; remarkable for that same noble spirit which sent Howard into every prison of Europe "to take the gage of misery and distress," and which throughout this district has made her name a household word at many an humble hearth, in many an humble heart. Many such hearts will be darkened by her loss; many such which her smile hath lighted will long be lonely and desolate.

The close of her life was calm. Softly her pure spirit passed away to its far home; so softly that the exact instant of its flight could hardly be named. As quietly as the melting of a wave on the shore of a twilight lake, as noiselessly as the fading of a summer cloud or the sinking of a sunset zephyr was her gentle being yielded up on that morning of the hallowed Sabbath. And when the summer cloud henceforth comes over us, or the breath of evening sighs its melancholy song around, when we look on the flower withered, or the leaf faded, our departed friend, of whose fate they are the sad but fitting emblem, will be recalled to our thoughts; and the memory of her many virtues and her noble character will carry our aspirations upward to that better world where the cloud fades not and the leaf and the flower wither no more forever.

Penn. On December 24, 1904, Albert, beloved son of Mrs. Emma Penn.
No Christmas joys for us, dear brother
Now that you are missing from our home;
All is sad within our dwelling,
Lonely are our hearts today.

Hard we strove to keep thee with us,
But love and skill were all in vain;
Death has laid our darling brother

Penn, Dora E. d. 9 Feb 1903
22 yrs. 11 mos. 24 days
 Penn. On Monday, February 9, 1903, at 7:20 a.m., after a long and painful illness, Mrs. Dora E. Penn (nee Cadle), aged 22 years 11 months and 24 days.
Our darling sister, she has left us,
And we her loss most deeply feel!
She longed to stay;
We prayed for the same--
But God denied us all.
By Her Sisters

Her weary days are now all o'er,
And every night of gloom
Is lost in that delightful waking
Of bliss beyond the tomb.
Lonely the house and sad the hour
Since our dear Dora is gone;
But, oh, a brighter home than ours
In heaven is now her own.
Affliction sore long time she bore,
Physicians were in vain;
But death gave ease when God did please,
And freed her from all pain.
By Her Husband
Relatives and friends are invited to attend her funeral from her late residence, 319 L street southeast, Wednesday morning, February 11; thence to St. Peter's Church, where requiem high mass will be said at 10:30 a.m. for the repose of her soul.

Washington Evening Star, Feb. 25, 1867

Death of John P. Pepper

Yesterday morning, Mr. John P. Pepper, who has been long and favorably known to our citizens, died in the 72d year of his age. Mr. Pepper was born in Philadelphia, and came to this city in 1820, when he obtained employment as a marble worker on the Capitol, and subsequently for many years carried on business on Pennsylvania Avenue, at the corner of what is now known as Marble alley. He received the appointment of Superintendent of the Southeast Executive Building, (Treasury Department) which he held throughout the administrations of Presidents Jackson, Van Buren, Harrison, Tyler, and Polk. He was very popular and many years ago was elected to the Board of Common Council and since 1852 he has represented the Fourth Ward in the Council and Board of Aldermen at intervals until June last, when he declined a reelection (mention of his refusal in Evening Star, May 10, 1866). He was a man of great benevolence and in a quiet unostentatious manner often relieved the wants of the poor and afflicted. He has been a prominent member of the order of Odd Fellows for many years and will be buried tomorrow with the honors of the order. Columbia Lodge, Columbia Encampment and the Grand Encampment meet tonight to make arrangements for the funeral.

Washington Evening Star, Feb. 26, 1867

Funeral of Col. Pepper

The funeral of the late Col. John Patterson Pepper took place from his residence, on Pennsylvania Avenue, near ?? Street, and was very largely attended. The coffin was of black walnut, covered with black cloth, richly trimmed, on it was placed a beautiful cross of japonicas and evergreens and the encampment regalia of deceased. There was present a large number of our oldest citizens, including the members of the Oldest Inhabitants, and many members of the Councils. The services were conducted by Rev. R.J. Keeling, of Trinity (Episcopal) Church, after which the remains were borne to the hearse -- Mayor R. Wallach, Z.D. Gilman, Dr. R.F. Hunt, Dr. A. McDavis, P.C.P. Boss, of Columbian Encampment and W.O. O'Meara, of Columbia Lodge, acting as pall bearers -- and the procession proceeded to the Congressional Cemetery, where the remains were interred; Heald's Washington Brass Band, Columbia Lodge, No. 10, Columbian Encampment of Odd Fellows, following the remains to the grave.

The Evening Star, Saturday, September 21, 1867

Letters of administration de bonis non with the will annexed on the estate of the late John P. Pepper, were issued to Wm. B. Webb; bond $15,000.

Woman Commits Suicide
Gertrude Perkins Dies in Hospital from Dose of Poison
Gertrude Perkins, thirty-one years old, who occupied an apartment at 933 G street northwest, committed suicide late yesterday afternoon by swallowing poison.

She was found shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon suffering from the effects of the poison. The ambulance of Emergency Hospital was called and she was removed to that institution, where she died three hours later.

Coroner Nevitt made an investigation. He learned from a friend of the woman that Miss Perkins had telephoned to her but a short time before she took the poison and complained of being ill.

Rudolph Perkins, Reporter, Is Dead
Newspaper Man Succumbs Following Operation - Covered Courts for Years
Rudolph W. Perkins, 40 years old, court reporter for the Washington Post, died early this morning at George Washington University Hospital, following an operation for appendicitis. He was a native of Washington and was educated in the public schools.

He entered journalism with the old Washington Herald before it was taken over by the Hearst interests, when he went to the Post. Nearly all his reporting has been at the courthouse. When on the Herald Perkins covered Police Court and became famous for his human interest stories carried under the heading "Good Morning, Judge," from which he obtained the nickname of "Judge" Perkins.

He was the only son of the late James T. and Rosa W. Perkins, and is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Mabel W. Gordon and Mrs. Elsie Sandefur, and by an aunt, Mrs. Thomas M. Harvey.

Perkins served in the World War, and was a member of the Masonic fraternity, being affiliated with LaFayette Lodge, No. 19, and was a noble of the Mystic Shrine.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed, but probably will be held at the home of his sister, Mrs. Gordon, 22 Seaton place.

What did they say? Was my darling dead?
Closed forever those beautiful eyes?
Such as I thought, were the words they said,
I'll not believe it, though here he lies.
Can it be true that his soft, round cheek
No more will blush 'neath his loved ones' kiss?
Cannot he hear the low words I speak?
Death never came in such a guise as this.

Deaths by Accident
Two Railway Employees Killed Yesterday by the Cars
Verdict of the Coroner's Jury
The Railway Company Held Responsible in One Case
The Evidence Taken
Two men employed by the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad Company received fatal injuries on the company's tracks in this city yesterday. One of them was Milton Pettit, a brakeman, and the other was Thomas Landrigan, a machinist. The former was killed in the Anacostia freight yard, having jumped from the top of a moving car while the railroad men were making what is called a "running switch." He attempted to jump from one car to another and failed to make a long enough jump, as the engine was moving faster than he had supposed. This accident happened about 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning, and the injured man died a few minutes after he reached Providence Hospital.

Petit, who was twenty-seven years old, had been employed by the railroad company for more than ten years. He lived at No. 530 5th street southeast. A widow and two children survive him.

Machinist Landrigan was injured at the South Capitol street crossing about 11:30 o'clock last night. He met with the accident while crossing the tracks. A few minutes after he was hurt he was in the Emergency Hospital under treatment. Both legs had to be amputated, and he died this morning. He was 32 years old and was married, but had no children. His home was at No. 33 Virginia avenue southwest, only a short distance from where he received his fatal injuries.

Viewed by Coroner
Today both bodies were taken to the morgue, where they were viewed by Acting Deputy Coroner Ruffin. At noon Acting Coroner Glazebrook held inquests in the cases at the sixth precinct station, one jury hearing both cases. The jurors were W.J. Keith, John F. Kelly, Charles Brill, James Leon, George Gill and William Foster. Witnesses were examined and the jury returned their verdicts. In the case of Brakeman Pettit the jury found that his death was an accident, for which no one was responsible. Landrigan's death, the jury found, resulted from the use of a defective coupling. The jury blamed the railroad company for not having safety couplings on the cars.

The Evidence Submitted

H.C. Sparks, a locomotive engineer was in charge of shifting engine No. 146 yesterday morning between 11 and 12 o'clock when Pettit was killed. He testified that his engine was shifting cars at the time. Brakeman Pettit, he said, went back to the end car to let off the brakes. When he had done this and given the signal witness started his engine. He saw no more of him until he saw him lying between the rails. Car Inspector Downs waived him to make a stop, which was the first notice he had of the accident. Pettit, witness said, must have walked the entire length of the cars before the accident happened. The engine had cut loose from the cars. Witness had known the deceased for five years and knew him to be a sober man.

"Did you see from where he fell?" the witness was asked.

"No, sir," he answered, "but he appeared to have fallen from the top of the car."

Witness could not tell whether he stepped from the first or second car in rear of the moving engine. Witness left the office steps and did all he could for the injured man.

"On which side of the cars did he fall?"

"He didn't fall on either side. He fell beneath the cars and five of them passed over him."

Not Yet Dead

When witness first saw Mr. Pettit he thought he was dead, but an instant later he heard him groan and then everything possible was done for him.

"In making the running switch," said a juror, "was the engine pulling or pushing the cars?"

"The engine was pulling the cars," he answered. "It never pushes them."

Dr. Ruffin testified that he examined the body and found a great many minor bruises and wounds. There was also a compound fracture of the left leg. Death, he said, resulted from shock. He also described the injuries received by Landrigan. The dead man's legs had been amputated when he saw the body. As in the case of Landrigan, the body was covered with bruises and wounds. Death, in his case, was the result of hemorrhage and shock.

Harry Lowry, a telegraphers apprentice, who was in the Benning tower yesterday, testified that he saw Mr. Pettit on the last of the six cars. He heard the victim tell Mr. Oliver to cut the train and then he ran airing the cars. Witness said he saw Pettit make an effort to jump from the detached cars to the one attached to the engine. He did not succeed, but fell in front of the moving cars, and they passed over him.

Peter Oliver testified that he cut the cars. All the men on the train understood what was to be done, and witness received his signal from Pettit. He did not witness the accident.

<td>The funeral of Mrs. Eliza Peyton, who died suddenly Friday night at her home on Indiana avenue, in the 90th year of her age, took place today. She was a native of Calvert county, Md., and the relict of Craven Thompson Peyton, whom she married in Alexandria, Va., in 1813, and a cousin of the late Dr. John B. Blake. Her husband died while consul at Matanzas in 1821, leaving her a widow with four children and inadequate means of support. She opened a boarding house at the corner of 4 1/2 street and Pennsylvania avenue, which was for many years one of the most prominent boarding houses in the city. Among those who made her house their home were Robert Y. Hayne, Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, Hugh Lawson White, Benton, McDuffie, Gov. Miller, and Charles Sumner, who was then a member of the lower House. Mrs. Peyton accumulated a competency, and retired about thirty years ago to live privately in the house which she purchased on Indiana avenue. She was remarkable for her energy and self-reliance, and was much esteemed by a large circle of friends.</td>

Committed Suicide
Joseph I. Peyton Ended His Life With a Bullet
Mr. Joseph I. Peyton, a well-known patent attorney of this city, committed suicide shortly before noon yesterday at his home, 513 A street southeast. Despondency as a result of failing health is the only reason that can be given for his act, as he enjoyed a good practice and was not bothered by business or domestic troubles.

For some time past Mr. Peyton had made his home with a brother and two sisters on Capitol Hill. Of late he had been a sufferer from asthma and dyspepsia, and for several days past he had stayed away from his office and had kept pretty close to his room. He was in a rather melancholy condition of mind, but had said nothing to lead any one to think that he was contemplating suicide.

Shortly after 11 o'clock yesterday morning others in the house heard the report of a pistol, but thought it came from the street and paid no particular attention to it. About half an hour later Miss Alice Peyton had occasion to pass her brother's room and her attention was attracted by the sound of heavy breathing. She entered her brother's room, where a shocking sight met her eyes. Her brother was lying on the bed, which was saturated with blood. A gaping wound in his forehead and a revolver lying by his side told the story. At first the family thought it was an accident but further investigation showed that the unfortunate man had deliberately sought death. On the bed lay a small hand-mirror, which he had evidently used in taking aim with the pistol. He was not dead when his sister found him, though he was unconscious and a physician who was summoned in haste saw at a glance that nothing could be done to save his life. He lingered for about three hours without recovering consciousness. He left no note or other message to his family.

Mr. Peyton was 49 years of age and unmarried. He was a grandson of Mrs. Elizabeth Peyton, and came of a family that was prominent in the revolutionary period. He was a patent attorney and had an office in Room 11, 613 Pennsylvania avenue. He was at one time a member of the firm of Baldwin, Hopkins & Peyton, and subsequently retired from the firm and practiced alone. Of late he has attended to the patent business of the firm of S.S. White & Co.

Death By Drowning
David Pfeifer Writes Note and Commits Suicide
"Good-bye. It's All Over"
Jumps Into Muddy Water of Tidal Basin and Disappears
Dragging For The Body
Recent Arrest on Charge of Making a Hand-book
May Have Caused the Act
"Dear sister: Good-bye. It's all over."

David Pfeifer, forty-nine years old, who was recently arrested on a charge of having made a handbook on the races, wrote the foregoing message on a piece of wrapping paper, tucked it away under the sweatband of his hat and jumped overboard in the muddy water at the Tidal basin about 10:30 o'clock this morning. Mrs. L.E. Greenwell, the sister to whom the note was addressed, resides at 506 8th street southwest. She was advised of the affair at her home about noon, and was greatly affected.

"Why did he do it?" she moaned. "He was here this morning, but he never said a word about taking his life."

Many friends of the deceased knew him as Dave Fugitt, the name of his stepfather. For a number of years he had been a familiar figure about poolrooms and other similar places.

All Right at Breakfast
Dave Pfeifer was forty-nine years of age and unmarried. He occupied a room at the home of his nephew, 4 1/2 and K streets southwest, and took his meals at the house of his sister to whom he addressed the note. He was at the breakfast table this morning, as usual, and left the house shortly thereafter, not saying where he was going. The next his sister heard of him was when reporters called at the house and informed her that he had killed himself. It is supposed that Pfeifer proceeded directly from the house to the Highway bridge. He was seen walking along the wall about the tidal basin not far from the outlet, his hands behind him and apparently in deep thought.

A few minutes after he was seen on the wall he walked in the direction of the foot of 14th street. He walked across the grass, threw his derby hat under a bush and plunged, head first, into the muddy water.

"I could have saved him if I had had assistance," Michael Ready, who was working in the park near where Pfeifer jumped overboard, remarked, "but I had nothing to assist me and all I could do was to summon help."

Witnesses of Act
Thomas W. Abell, 416 G street southeast, and William White, whose home is at 480 Virginia venue southwest, also witnessed the affair, but they were on the opposite side of the basin. Park Watchman James O'Brien, another who saw Pfeifer before he jumped overboard, picked up the hat and found the note. He notified the police of the affair, and the crew of the police boat hurried to the tidal basin to drag for the body. Drivers and pedestrians who were on heir way through that portion of Potomac Park stopped to inquire why the basin was being dragged, and several of the curious ones said that they had known Dave, as they called him.

Less than a week ago Pfeifer was arrested by Lieut. Hartley, Sergt. Lee and Detective Grant and charged with having made a handbook on the races.

The arrest caused much surprise among those who play the races through he handbooks and among the makers of books themselves. There had been no apparent activity in the crusade for several weeks and it was though apparently that Prosecutor Given was giving his attention to the cases which had already been presene to he court and was using the officers to hunt for the witnesses in those cases.

The police and the prosecuting attorney, however, it is understood, were advised that an atempt had been made to revive the business and attention was immediately directed to the matter. The capture of Pfeifer was the result.

Placed Bets With Pfieffer
According to the police, they received information from persons who claim to have placed bets with Pfeifer, but who were not, in their opinion, fully paid off on their winnings. A pool was made up last July, and it is asserted by the authorities a lump of money was placed with Pfeifer by two men who were in the pool. The pool was placed on Wardine, a horse that was running well at Brighton Beach, with odds at 40 to 1. The pool won the bet, and the interested parties called for their money. There were several members of the pool, each anxious to get his money. The men who placed the bet maintained that the party with whom it was placed had "welched," and that they were unable to collect the winnings. The members of the pool were given promises, it is declared, and when they were not met the disappointed ones began to talk.

A jury trial was demanded by his counsel, Attorney Campbell Carrington, and bond in the sum of $1,000 was furnished for his appearance in the Police Court. Persons who were well acquainted with Pfeifer say he was in the gambling business practically all his life, having been connected with the backers of the policy game here many years ago.

Recovery of Body

The body of Pfeifer was recovered at 2:45 o'clock this afternoon by the crew of the police boat, near the spot where the man jumped overboard, and was taken to the morgue.

Mrs. Bertha Phillips
Mrs. Bertha Phillips, 40 years old, 331 7th street, employed as clerk in a 7th street store was taken suddenly ill this morning about 10 o'clock. She was taken to the store dispensary, where she died. Her death resulted from an attack of heart disease, according to a police report.

The Evening Star, April 17, 1882
Fatal Explosion of a Projectile
The Deadly Shell in a Rubbish Heap
Mr. George Phillips and Mr. John Stewart Killed
The neighborhood of 14th and D street southwest (near the long bridge), was thrown into a state of excitement about 8:45 o'clock this morning by a loud explosion which brought hundreds of people out of their houses to learn the cause of it. The report proved to be the explosion of a shell on an open lot belonging to the Capt. Gibson estate, just south of the commissary department, and the instantaneous killing of Mr. George Phillips, and mangled Mr. John Stewart in a most shocking manner, which must result fatally. The excitement was very great, everybody in the neighborhood running in that direction. A Star reporter was soon on hand and gathered the following particulars: D street between 14th street and the river, has never been graded and appears to be a sort of dumping ground, for all sorts of rubbish. About two weeks ago a colored man dumped a wagon load of rubbish near the rear of Mr. George Phillips home on D street, and among other things were three shells of different sizes. The largest was "an elongated, made for a rifle gun and which was about fourteen inches long and about six inches in width; another was of smaller size, though of similar pattern, and the third was round. These shells Mr. Phillips took inside his yard, where they have been lying ever since.

Breaking The Shell, Inspite of a Wife's Caution
This morning about 9 o'clock, Mr. Phillips, in company with Mr. John Stewart, took the largest of these shells out of the back lot, in the rear of his house, and with a short-handled axe commenced to strike it with the view of breaking it to pieces. Mrs. Phillips begged them not to do so, as she said it might be loaded and would do harm, which caution, however, was not heeded. A colored man named John F. Tabbs was the only spectator to the scene. He was seated on a box near Mr. Gibson's brick warehouse, some three rods from where the two men were striking the shell. Mr. Phillips had given it some blows, so Tabbs says, and he called out to them asking if it had a cap on it and Stewart replied, "Yes." Tabbs says he answered back, "For God's sake don't strike it. You'll both be killed." Some colored women were then talking with him, and he told them to run, as the shell might burst and kill them. The women started and ran behind a stable, and he (Tabbs) ran around the brick warehouse, where he was standing at the same moment, and had not got quite around when the shell exploded, making a loud report.

A Frightful Scene
He at once turned and saw the prostrate forms of Phillips and Stewart. He walked up towards them, and at this time other people were running towards the scene, and Phillips was dead a short distance from the place, with his brains scattered against a post in the fence and over the ground about them. Stewart's right leg was blown in pieces from the thigh down and the left broken between the foot and knee, and his left hand terribly mangled. In Phillips forehead was a hole large enough to admit the fist of a man and the entire brains were out and scattered on the ground. Dr. C.V. Boarman, whose office is at 1114 Maryland avenue, was summoned by some one, who notified him that his instruments might be wanting. He too had heard the explosion and repaired at once to the spot.

Stewart Conscious--His Account Of It
In a short time afterwards, Dr. C.M. Hammett came to the spot and finding Stewart still living, with Dr. Boarman holding with his thumb pressing against the femoral artery to prevent the loss of blood, he assisted in putting on a tourniquet, and thus released Dr. Boarman who had been in this unpleasant position for about fifteen minutes. Another tourniquet was placed upon his left leg to prevent the flow of blood, and by the use of hyperdemic injections Stewart was returned to consciousness and was able to speak. He said he struck the blow on the point of the shell which exploded it, but did not suppose it was loaded. The cap containing the fulminate was picked up by some one and showed plainly where the pole of the axe had flattened the lead of which it was made. Both bodies lay on the ground form some time until the police ambulance came and Stewart's marred body was removed to the Providence Hospital. All the physicians present state that it is not possible for him to recover. The dead body of Phillips was taken up by some of the spectators and carried into his house when the coroner was summoned.

Terrible Force of the Explosion
The shell flew in all directions and was picked up in fragments; one piece flew across the open lot and struck a large hole in the fence enclosing the commissary department. Pieces of Phillips' skull were picked up in different places, and bones from Stewart's legs were found strewn about. A good-sized hole was blown in the ground where the shell lay. No one know who the colored man was who dumped the shell with other rubbish were it was found by Mr. Phillips.

The Victims
Mr. Phillips leaves a wife and three small children. He was a laboring man, and was engaged on the new portion of the bridge now being made. He was about 36 years old. Mr. Stewart was a single man, brother of Captain William E. Stewart, the well-known fisherman and lived with his mother on F street between 9th and 10th streets southwest. He was about 40 years old, a laborer by occupation. A brother of Mr. Phillips who came upon the ground, fainted on beholding the mangled remains of his brother, and a niece of Mr. Stewart swooned away on coming to the spot where her uncle lay. The two remaining shells were thrown into the channel of the river by Mr. William Faunce, where they can do no harm.

Death of Stewart
Stewart died at 11:30 o'clock at the Providence Hospital

Phillips. On Thursday, October 25, 1894, George Phillips aged 40 years.
Mr. George W. Phillips died this morning at his residence, No. 2 Cooke place, West Washington. Mr. Phillips was probably one of the most widely-known citizens of the District. He had been identified with its business interests when the town was small, and later was connected with its official life during the most stirring and momentous periods of its history. At the time of his death Mr. Phillips was nearly eighty-five years of age, and for over two-thirds of a century he had been a resident of Washington. He was a native of Prince George's county, Md., and came here when a boy. Upon reaching maturity he entered the dry goods business, and for many years was engaged successfully as a wholesale merchant, with an establishment at 7th street and Pennsylvania avenue, where Saks & Co. are now situated, with stores also in Baltimore and Richmond.

During the administration of President Pierce, Mr. Phillips was appointed United States deputy marshal for the District, and it was in this capacity that he became universally known and extremely popular. He served as such through the administrations of President Buchanan, both terms of President Lincoln, both terms of President Grant, but resigned when the late Frederick Douglass was made marshall of the District, declining to continue in the position which Mr. Douglass proffered him. When Clayton McMichael was appointed marshal he offered Mr. Phillips the deputy marshallship, and it was accepted. He remained in office under Marshal Wilson during President Cleveland's first term, and was continued therein by Marshal Ransdell during President Harrison's administration, but soon resigned on account of his age. He has since been living a retired life with his wife, who was formerly Miss Susan Kneller of this city and his son, Mr. Samuel L. Phillips, the president of the Metropolitan Railroad Company, at No. 2 Cooke place. Another son, who survives him, is Mr. George R. Phillips, the general freight and passenger agent of the Washington and Mt. Vernon Railroad Company.

Zevely, Douglas, Columbia Historical Society, April 14, 1902
The row of houses on the north side of D Street, east of 3d, was originally known as Mechanics Row, the name originating, so I am told, from the fact that several mechanics started with a combined capital in the building of them for investment. Among others who occupied them as far back as 1850, was Mr. George W. Phillips, for many years deputy marshal of the District, and a well-known resident of Washington for 71 years, up to the time of his death in December 1895.

George W. Phillips was born in Prince George County, Md., and came to this city in 1824. After several years' experience as a dry goods clerk he established a business of that kind for himself at the corner of Seventh Street and Market Space, where the Saks stores are now located, and continued that occupation until three or four years before Franklin Pierce became President, by whom he was appointed Deputy Marshal of the District under Jonah D. Hoover. This office he continued to hold until 1893, with the exception of the period when Frederick Douglass was Marshal. From his early manhood and throughout his lifetime Mr. Phillips was a staunch Democrat, but he was not numbered among those who were inclined to show noticeable hostility to the Government. His widow is still living, having her home here with the older son (Samuel), who will be mentioned below; and the younger son, George R. Phillips, has also been a resident of the city since his childhood days.

... In 1855 and until after the Civil War, Third Street north from D to E was all vacant ground on both sides; also on E from Third to Second. The first house built on either side of Third was built by Deputy Marshal Phillips on the west side, just south of E.

Samuel Phillips, D.C. Pioneer Dies -- Practiced Law and Was Active in Early Street Railway Building

Samuel L. Phillips, eighty-four years old, a resident of Washington most of his life, died last night at his home, 1351 Massachusetts avenue southeast. He had been ailing for some time.

Mr. Phillips was born here in 1838. He attended Princeton University and after being graduated in law was admitted to the bar of the old Circuit Court of the District practicing law here until 1874.

He then became president of the Washington and Georgetown Railroad Company for a short period, later becoming connected with the Third Avenue Railroad Company of New York city, in the capacity of president of the company. During his management of that railroad it was not only rebuilt, but 30 percent dividends were declared every years on its capital stock.

Retired to His Farm

After a number of years Mr. Phillips resigned and retired to his farm near Rockville, Md., until 1894, when he was elected president of the Metropolitan Railroad Company of Washington and charged with devising and building the underground electric system which Congress ordered installed within one year on 9th street and within two years on F street northwest, under forfeiture, of its charter. This work was successfully completed within the time limits, and at his instance the stockholders sold the system to the present owners, the Washington Railway and Electric Company, at a net profit of $4,200,000.
Mr. Phillips at the time of his death was a director of the Washington Loan and Trust Company, the Arlington Fire Insurance Company, the Farmers' Banking and Trust Company of Rockville and the John Dickson Home.

He is survived by a brother and a niece, both of this city.

Mr. Phillips, realizing that he had not long to live, selected a list of pallbearers for his own funeral. This list included John Joy Edson, John B. Larner, Andrew Parker, William E. Edmonston and William King. Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the Church of the Nativity.

Zeverly, Doug, Columbia Historical Society, April 14, 1902
Before Mr. Taylor built his home there were two one-story frame buildings, on the lot adjoining, which were owned by Mr. Robert Beale, ... The other of these buildings was occupied by Mr. Samuel L. Phillips in 1860, when he commenced the practice of law. The home of the McCalla family adjoined these buildings, but in recent years a different style of house with a bay-window front, has replaced the original dwelling.

<td>John Phipps' Body Upright in River Feet Imbedded in Mud When Found by His Employer--Accident Is Belief Low tide in Eastern branch this morning uncovered the head of John Phipps, its white hair plastered over brow and ears by the receding waters. The corpse was standing upright, feet imbedded in the mud of the river's bottom. John Thayer, captain of the dredging machine, Black Nat, made the discovery. There was no mark of violence, nor was there anything to indicate that the man had been robbed. His money was intact. Two bottles of gin were in the pockets of his clothing. Phipps, who was sixty years of age, lost his life in the Eastern branch opposite the foot of 1st street southeast last night. Phipps had been employed on the Black Nat. His body was only a short distance from the craft. What the police regarded as a suspicious circumstance was the finding of the small boat belonging to the dredging machine on the shore, while the body was on the opposite side of the channel. It was learned from John Jackson, also employed on the Black Nat, that Phipps went ashore early last evening and was with him in a saloon as late as 7:30 o'clock. They separated at 4 1/2 and N streets. When Jackson and Phipps came ashore they left a dog on the machine. Their small boat was left on the shore about the foot of 1st street. It was there this morning, the dog in it, and there was no small boat near the dredging machine. How Phipps reached the boat the police were unable to learn this morning. Jackson did not take him there, but returned to his boarding house, 1st and P streets where he was all night, leaving the house to go to work this morning. Capt. Thayer found the small boat made fast on the shore this morning. He rowed it out to the dredge. The gleaming white hair of the dead man attracted his attention. When he had determined that the object in the water was the body of a man he notified the police. Later in the morning the body was removed to the morgue. Phipps probably hired a boy to row him to the dredge, it is believed by the police. The dog returned in the boat with the boy, they conjecture. Acting Coroner Glazebrook will make an investigation before giving a certificate of death. Probably he will conclude that Phipps' death was the result of accident.</td>

Truly can it be said that death hath taken one of the most esteemed and useful members of our community. Eleven or twelve years since she was left destitute with several small children. Her greatest care was to bring up her children aright. Towards her neighbors she was always hospitable, to the poor most kind and charitable. She endeared herself to all who knew her. In death she is mourned by her family and an extensive circle of friends. M.

Death of Sergt. Pierce
Sergt. Godwin Pierce, who was stricken with paralysis while on duty at the District building about three weeks ago, as published in The Star, at the time, died at his home, No. 417 11th street southeast, at 2:20 o'clock this morning. He was one of the officers who went on duty the day of the organization of the present police force, September 11, 1861. The only surviving originals now on the force are Lieuts. Kelly, Gessford and Vernon, and Private Gus Brown, who is detailed at the Free bridge in Georgetown.

Sergt. Pierce was a native of Philadelphia, having been born there sixty-eight years ago. Before the war he came here, and being a brickmaker by trade, he soon found employment as manager of Plant's brick yards. When the police force was organized he gave up the brick business for the baton, and has been a faithful officer during all these years. For about ten years he has been detailed at the entrance to the District building, and during his last absence many inquiries by people who had seen him there were made for him. He leaves a widow, two daughters, Mrs. Cleveland and Mrs. McKenzie, and a son. His funeral will take place from his late residence Friday, at 4 o'clock, and members of the Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association, of which he was a member, will attend the funeral. He was a member of Lebanon Lodge, F.A.A.M.

Veteran Police Officer Dead
Sergt. Godwin Pierce Was One of the Original Members of the Force
Sergt. Godwin Pierce, who for ten years had been on duty at the entrance to the District Building, died at his residence, 417 Eleventh street southeast, early Wednesday morning. He was stricken with paralysis three weeks ago while at his post of duty. The funeral will take place from the residence at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. It will be attended by a delegation of the Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association and Lebanon Lodge, F.A.A.M., both of which he belonged to.

Sergt. Pierce was one of the original members of the police force as organized in September, 1861. He was born in Philadelphia and came to Washington to work as manager of Plant's brick yards. He left the brick business to become a member of the police force. During his long term of service at the District Building he made many friends and he will be missed from his accustomed station at the door.

Will of a Former Policeman
Leaves Estate to His Children
The will of the late Godwin Pierce, who was a member of the Metropolitan Police force, dated September 18, 1895, with a codicil dated August 19, 1896, and filed yesterday, names George W. Pierce as executor. To each of his daughters, Annie Cleveland and Fannie McKenzie, is deeded a one-half interest in premises 417 Eleventh street southeast. To George W. Pierce, a son, is given all the moneys due the testator at the time of his death, not otherwise disposed of by his will, and the benefits from certain insurance policies and money to his credit in the National Bank of Washington. To Mrs. McKenzie the proceeds from a policy in the Metropolitan Insurance Company are bequeathed.

Only a Few Veterans Left
New policemen should take off their hats today whenever any of them meet these veterans: Lieut. John F. Kelly, Lieut. James W. Gessford, Lieut. Charles R. Vernon, Acting Sergt. Cornelius Noonan, and Privates Godwin Pierce, Caleb Sebastian, John J. Findley, and Augustus Brown. All these men are on duty except Findley, who is on the retired list, September 11, 1861, the Metropolitan Police force was started out upon its career, and this is the twenty-ninth anniversary of its organization. Its record will compare favorably with any, and will surpass many.

The Washington Post, September 11, 1887, p. 8
Over Twenty-Five Years of Service
Today is the twenty-sixth anniversary of the organization of the Metropolitan Police Force. The present members of the force who were included in the organization are: Lieuts. James Gessford, A.A. Greer, John F. Kelly, C.K. Vernon, Acting Sergeant Cornelius Noonan and Officers John T. Findlay, Godwin Pierce and Caleb Sebastian.

The Washington Post, April 13, 1897, p. 10
Police Department Notes
Returns from the police census are not all in yet, but it is stated that those from the Third Precinct indicate increased population over that of two years ago. Figures from the eighth show a decrease. Chief Clerk Sylvester predicts a general decrease from previous estimates.

Sergt. Godwin Pierce, whose post is at the District Building, and who was stricken with paralysis a short time ago, is reported to be improving, but his condition will not warrant a return to work for some time. He is one of the original members of the force, is very popular and much missed by those whose business calls them to the Commissioners' offices.

Station Clerk Albert R. Lamb, of the First Precinct, has just been married to Miss Serena Gray, of this city.

Police Privates I.S. Green and William Robey will shortly be retired, on account of physical disability.

Veteran of Civil War Dies
Passing of James S. Pierce, Aged 73 Years
Held Record of Continuous Service Under Government Since 1865.
Expert in War Department
James S. Pierce, a clerk in the War Department, with a record of continuous service under the government since the beginning of the Civil War, died yesterday morning at his late residence, 610 R street northwest. Mr. Pierce was seventy-three years of age. He was born at Gettysburg, Pa.

He had been ill for six weeks, and had recently submitted to an operation, from the shock of which he never fully recovered. Members of his family say that during the war he became ill and that since that time he had been troubled with the after effects of that sickness.

He enlisted in the Pennsylvania Reserves at the beginning of the war and saw much active service. He was at Bull Run and in the campaign around Richmond. At the time of the battle of Gettysburg he was ill in a Washington hospital and shortly afterward left the army on account of disability.

In the Ordnance Division

Owing to his expert knowledge of army matters he was soon afterward made a sergeant of ordnance at the arsenal in this city, and after serving there for five years entered the census office, where he was employed for a short while. From 1876 he had been an employee in the ordnance division of the War Department. He was well known to officials and clerks of the department. During his illness Gen. Crozier took much interest in his case and sent several messages to him.

The funeral will be held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock from the family residence on R street. No arrangements have been made for the services, but the pallbearers will be selected from Mr. Pierce's friends in the War Department. Gen. Crozier has given notice that as many clerks of the ordnance division who wish to attend the funeral may have sufficient leave.

His wife, two sons and two daughters survive Mr. Pierce.

Interments in the Historic Congressional Cemetery

Last Updated: 2/13/2015
The mother o’er the pillow bend
Pres’t by that brow of pearl,
But meet no more the rose-lipped kiss
Of her own baby boy.

Yet while the sorrowing tear drops fall,
Look parents far on high,
Where they cherub children, hand in hand,
Have met beyond the sky.

There bright ‘mid heaven’s eternal bowers,
Free from all toil and pain,
Bloom now thy lost unfading flowers,
Where ye shall meet again.

A Friend.

Biographical Directory of the United States Congress 1774-1989
A Representative and Senator from Maryland; born in Annapolis, Md., on March 17, 1764; pursued classical studies; studied medicine but did not practice; studied law, was admitted to the bar in 1786 and commenced practice in Harford County, Md.; member of the State constitutional convention in 1788; served in the State house of delegates 1789-1792; elected to the 2nd Congress, and served from March 4, 1791 to November of that year when he resigned, the question of ineligibility having been raised on account of non-residence; member of the Executive Council of Maryland 1792-95; again a member of the State house of delegates in 1795; one of the commissioners at London under Jay's treaty 1796-1804; attorney general of Md. in 1805; joint minister of Great Britain with James Monroe in 1806 and 1807 and minister-plenipotentiary 1807-1811; returned to Baltimore in 1811; served in the State senate; appointed Attorney General of the U.S. in the Cabinet of President Madison, and served from Dec. 11, 1811 to Feb. 10, 1814; wounded at the Battle of Bladensburg, Md. Aug. 24, 1814; elected to the 14th Congress and served from Mar. 4, 1815 to April 18, 1816 when he resigned; appointed by President Madison minister plenipotentiary to Russia with a special mission to Naples and served from 1816 - 1818; elected to the U.S. Senate to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Alexander Contee Hanson, and served from Dec. 21, 1819 until his death in Washington D.C. Feb. 25, 1822; interment in the Congressional Cemetery.

The death of Mr. Pinkney absorbs the attention of those whose public labors it is a part of our vocation to record. The deep interest which is felt on the occasion is attested by the Proceedings, yesterday, in the Senate and House of Representatives, and in the Supreme Court. We shall not attempt to swell the torrent by the addition of the tribute due from us to his public character. It shall be silently paid, leaving to other and abler hands the task of compiling a Memoir of this distinguished man, which shall be worthy of the subject.

William Pinkney, Attorney General in the Cabinet of President James Madison, was born on March 17, 1764 in Annapolis, Maryland, the son of Jonathan and Ann (Rind) Pinkney. When his father’s property was confiscated because of his Loyalist views during the Revolution, William, at the age of thirteen, had to withdraw from King William School in Annapolis. As a result of his education being cut short, he devoted the rest of his life to studies. He supported the Revolutionary cause and often served guard with the Continental troops.

Samuel Chase invited Pinkney to study law in his office. Will began his studies in February 1783 and was admitted to the bar in 1786. He then moved to Hartford County, Maryland where he began his legal practice. Pinkney was elected to the state convention which ratified the new Constitution in April 1788, although he personally voted against it. He served in the Maryland House of Delegates from October 1788 until 1792. In 1789 he advocated abolition of slavery. William married Ann Maria Rodgers on March 16, 1789. They had ten children including the author Edward Coate Pinkney.

William Pinkney was elected to the House of Representatives in 1790, but his election was disputed because he did not live in the district which chose him. After successfully contesting this challenge he decided not to serve. William was next elected to the state executive council in 1792, serving until his resignation in 1795. He was chairman of the council at that time. He was elected a delegate to the legislature from Anne Arundel County in 1795.

Recognizing his legal talent, President Washington appointed Pinkney along with Christopher Gore a commissioner under article seven of the Jay Treaty to settle the United States’ claims against Britain. He served for eight years in London, learning a great deal which added to his cultural and legal knowledge. Returning to the United States in 1804, he moved to Baltimore from Annapolis. The British soon began to condemn American shipping again, and Pinkney drafted a “Memorial to the Merchants of Baltimore, on the Violation of our Neutral Rights” in 1806.
In 1806 President Jefferson appointed Pinkney to aid Minister James Monroe in London to deal with the British Government in regard to reparations and impressment. They signed a treaty which did not bind the British, and Jefferson repudiated it. When Monroe left England, Pinkney remained as Minister in October 1807. Pinkney was then involved in the complications caused by the attack on the “Chesapeake” by the “Leopard.” He tried to get reparations from the British. In addition William tried to convince the British to withdraw the Orders in Council which interfered with American shipping. Pinkney finally broke off relations on February 28, 1811 convinced that war would soon break out. He returned to the United States shortly thereafter.

On December 11, 1811 President Madison named William Pinkney Attorney General in which office he served from January 6, 1812 until his resignation on February 10, 1814. He maintained an eminent position in the American legal profession. He also supported the War of 1812 in pamphlets published under the name of “Publius.” His resignation came when Congress was considering a bill requiring that the Attorney General reside at the capitol.

William Pinkney served as a major of the Maryland militia during the War of 1812 and participated in the Battle of Bladensburg where he was wounded in the arm. He was elected to the House of Representatives from Baltimore, serving in the Fourteenth Congress from March 4, 1815 to April 18, 1816. He resigned to accept appointment as Minister to Russia. He was to go to Naples first on a special mission to get compensation for losses sustained in 1809 when the Murat regime seized American ships. He was not able to gain the compensation. In Russia Pinkney was able to gain the recall of every Russian diplomat in the United States but was unable to negotiate a commercial treaty. He improved relations between Russian and the United States. He left Russian in February 1818 without receiving his recall.

Pinkney was elected to the United States Senate to fill the vacancy left by the death of Alexander Contee Hanson, serving from December 1, 1819 until his death in 1822. He favored the slave estates and was able to bring about the Missouri Compromise. His legal talents were expressed in his arguments in McCulloch vs. Maryland and Cohens vs. Virginia. He was renowned for his speaking abilities. William Pinkney died on February 25, 1822 in Washington D.C. and was buried in the Congressional Cemetery.

Bibliography:

William Pinkney, statesman. Born in Annapolis, Md., March 17, 1764; died in Washington, February 25, 1822. His father was an Englishman by birth and was a loyalist during the American Revolution. Young Pinkney showed his independent spirit as a boy by joining the patriotic side. Owing to the troubled state of the times, his early education was imperfect, but he made up for this deficiency by diligent application as he approached manhood. He first chose medicine as a profession, but becoming acquainted with Judge Samuel Chase, who offered to take him as a pupil, he began the study of law at Baltimore in 1783, and three years afterward was admitted to the bar. He practiced successfully in Harford county, Md., for a few years, and was sent from that district in 1788 to the State convention that ratified the constitution of the United States. In the same year he was elected to the house of delegates, in which he continued to represent Harford county till his return to Annapolis in 1792. His speeches in the legislature by his natural eloquence and his pure and felicitous diction won for him more than a local reputation. From 1792 till 1795 he was a member of the executive council of Maryland. In 1796 President Washington appointed him a commissioner on the part of the United States, under Jay's British treaty of 1794, to determine the claim of American merchants to compensation for losses and damages by acts of the English government. This was the beginning of his diplomatic career abroad. The particular service, involving the consideration of many nice questions of admiralty law, gave employment to Pinkney's best powers. He remained in England until 1804, when he returned home and resumed the practice of the law in Baltimore. The next year he was appointed attorney-general of the state of Maryland. In 1806 he was again sent to England as commissioner, jointly with James Monroe, to treat with the English government respecting its continued aggression, in violation of the rights of neutrals. When Mr. Monroe retired in 1807, Pinkney was left as resident minister in London, in which post he remained until President Madison recalled him in 1811, at his own earnest solicitation. On his return to Maryland he was elected a member of the state senate, and at the close of the year President Madison appointed him attorney-general of the United States. He was an earnest advocate of the war of 1812, and defended the policy of the government both by his pen and sword, being wounded at the battle of Bladensburg while leading a company of riflemen. In 1814 he resigned his post as attorney-general when the law was passed requiring that officer to reside at the seat of government. In 1815 he was elected to congress from Baltimore, but he resigned the next year on being appointed by President Monroe minister to Russia and special envoy to Naples. He remained abroad two years, but, feeling the want of his legal income, he resigned in 1818, returned to Baltimore, and resumed the practice of his profession. He was engaged in most of the chief cases in the supreme court of the United States during the next four years. In 1820 he was elected to the U.S. senate and took an active part in the discussion on the admission of Missouri into the Union. He continued also his labors in the supreme court, and while engaged in his double duties at the bar and in the senate he was attacked by the illness that terminated his life.

The Well-Known Musician Has a Fatal Hemorrhage

The Blood Gushed From His Mouth and He Fell as He Was Entering the Theater

Frank Pistorio, a well-known musician and for eight years leader of the orchestra at Harris' Bijou Theater, as stated elsewhere in The Star, fell in front of the stage entrance to the theater, on C street, this afternoon about 2 o'clock, overcome by a hemorrhage, and expired in a few moments. Deceased was one of the best known musicians of the city and was grand master of the Musical Union, K. of L. He was also a member of Lodge 15, B. and P. Order of Elks. His brother John, a member of the orchestra, was upstairs and hurried to his brother's side when he heard of the occurrence. He died in his arms.

The death was sensational in its character.

The musicians were on their way to the theater to play at the matinee. All of them had gone upstairs but the deceased. The stage carpenter, Louis Boyd, had just come down stairs to call the stage hands, when he met Frank. His face was deathly pale; and while he was speaking to him a stream of blood burst from his nose and mouth. He tottered a moment and fell into Boyd's arms, exclaiming: "I am dying, Louise; send for a doctor and take me home."

He was carried inside the stage entrance and messengers hurriedly summoned for the ambulance and a doctor.

Officer Herndon was passing at the time and rang for medical assistance. Dr. Graham answered the summons. He administered hypodermic injections of whisky, but to no avail.

Deceased was in the best of spirits just before his death and told Lew Newmeyer, a brother Elk, that he felt very well.

The hemorrhage came from the lungs and the crimson fluid dyed the surroundings. In life he had been a consumptive, and subject to attacks of this kind. The last one occurred last summer while he was playing at Riverside Park, and it left him so weak that his life was despaired of.

The body was removed to Harvey's undertaking establishment and later removed to his home, 618 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. He leaves a wife and daughter aged sixteen.

Frank Pistorio's Funeral

The funeral of the late Frank D. Pistorio will take place from the family residence, 618 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The remains will be placed temporarily in a vault at Congressional cemetery until the arrival of his sister, Mrs. W.R. Reynolds, who is now on her way from the west.

Frank Pistorio Buried

Funeral Services Attended Yesterday by Delegations From Various Bodies

The funeral services over the remains of the late Frank D. Pistorio were held yesterday afternoon at the late residence, 618 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. Delegations from the order of Elks, of the Lone Star Society and of the Capital Beneficial Association, of which organizations the deceased was a member, were in attendance, as well as many friends of the family. The floral tributes were beautiful.

Rev. Gilbert F. Williams, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, officiated, and made a short address.
The service of the Order of Elks was read, John Maxwell having charge, and being assisted by Thomas J. King, E.B. Hay, J. Cooper McGinn and others.

As the casket was being taken to the hearse the members of the orchestra formerly directed by the deceased played "Nearer, My God, to Thee." The body was placed temporarily in a vault in Congressional Cemetery, to be eventually interred in Mount Olivet Cemetery, alongside of the bodies of the father and mother of the deceased. The pall-bearers were Gordon, Don Harris, John Esputa, Louis Brooks, Richard A. O'Brien, Charles King, Lewis Newmeyer, Frank Davis and S.L. Daw, being representatives of the various organizations of which the deceased was a member.

Our father has gone to a mansion of rest,
From a region of sorrow and pain,
To the glorious land by the Deity blest,
Where he never can suffer again.

Why should our tears in sorrow flow,
When God recalls his own,
And bids them leave a world of woe,
For an immortal crown?

Then, let our sorrows cease to flow,
God has recalled his own;
But let our hearts, in every woe,
Still say, "Thy will be done."

Death of Col. Pitchlynn, Ex-Chief of the Choctaws

The Choctaw delegate, Col. P.P. Pitchlynn, who has been well known here for the last twenty-five years, died at his residence on C street last evening. His death will be severely felt not only by his family and the tribe he represented, but also by a large circle of friends who had learned to appreciate his worth as a man of high culture, broad and liberal views, and inflexible integrity. He was born in the country formerly owned by the Choctaws in Mississippi in January, 1806, became prominent in the councils of his people while yet young, was for many years their principal chief, and for the greater part of the time since 1853 has represented them at Washington.

The Ex-Chief of the Choctaws

Peter P. Pitchlynn, for many years the well-known delegate of the Choctaw nation at the seat of government, whose death Monday night was mentioned in yesterday's STAR, had been in failing health for the past two years, his disease being of a pulmonary nature. The most of the winter he had been confined to his room and latterly to his bed. In his younger days he was principal chief of the Choctaws and afterwards occupied the position of agent or delegate in this city, looking after their interests before the general government and making his home in this city, but at the breaking out of the war, removed to the Indian Territory with his family, and took an active part in the war, returning here in 1865 at its close. He married Mrs. Caroline Lombardy, a widow lady in this city, and daughter of the late Godfrey Eckloff, whom he leaves with four children -- three sons and a daughter. Prior to this marriage, he had reared a family in the Indian country, but they have died long since, with the exception of one daughter, who still lives in that country. Col. Pitchlynn emigrated as early as 1824 from Mississippi to the Indian Territory with his tribe, and being a man of superior native talent and good judgment, although with little or no education, he commanded the respect and confidence of his people, which he maintained up to the time of his death. Since the rebellion closed, he has been directing the prosecution of the Choctaw claim for payment of moneys adjudged by the United States Senate in March 1830, for lands sold the government in 1830, not a dollar of which the government has paid. He was a courteous gentleman of great dignity of bearing and commanded the respect of every one who knew him. He was a high Mason, being for many years a member of Washington Commandery, Knights Templar, and took the degrees with Gov. Sam Houston, of Texas, more than twenty years ago; an honorary member of the Consistory, 33d degree, Scottish rite, and for many years a personal friend of Gen. Albert Pike.

Col. Pitchlynn's Will

Legal Controversy Over the Estate of the Late Choctaw Chief

His Washington Wife and Her Children-
Applications to Probate the Will Here-
The Celebrated Choctaw Claim Involved in the Litigation

A side issue of the Choctaw claims case is now in the Probate Court, in which a petition has been filed asking for the probate of the will of the late Peter P. Pitchlynn. The decedent was a well-known chief of the Choctaw Indians, and for many years was the representative of his people at the seat of government. He married in this city, Miss Caroline M. Eckloff, who survives him with eight children, and his principal estate was his interest in the Choctaw claim, supposed to be in the neighborhood of $100,000. There was, however, no will offered for probate here, and there has consequently been no settlement of the estate. One of the sons, Thomas Pitchlynn, has some business relations with Robert Morrison and Thos. Q. Hildebrant, and on Dec. 16, 1886, he made and delivered to them a power of attorney making them his attorneys "in any matters arising out of the will of my father, Peter Pitchlynn, late of the District." This was accepted by them in the belief that there would be several thousand dollars coming to the son from the father's share in the claim. It is these gentlemen who are now, through Mr. John N. Oliver, petitioning for the probate of the will. The petition filed states that the deceased left a will, as is evidenced by

A Letter of Mrs. Pitchlynn
To her son, Thomas, dated May 30, 1887. This letter states:

"1st. That when the will of your father, Peter P. Pitchlynn, deceased, was executed, it was by him committed to the care and custody of John B. Luce, now deceased, with instructions to safely keep the same until the Choctaw net proceeds claim against the United States should be paid, if ever, to the Choctaw nation.

2nd. That after the death of the said Luce, the said will came into my possession as executrix, and was sent to Campbell Leflore, a lawyer in the Choctaw nation, where alone it could be probated according to law with instructions to have that done as the laws of the Choctaw nation require.

3d. That the testator by whom the said will was executed had no property, real or personal, within the District of Columbia to which the provisions of the said will could be applied.

4th. That the said testator was not a citizen of the United States, or of the District of Columbia, but was a citizen of the Choctaw nation, and had no residence or domicile in the District of Columbia, except such residence as he had acquired as an official representative of the Choctaw nation, charged with the duty of representing said nation in respect to its interests and claims against the government of the United States.

5th. That whenever there shall exist any property to which your father would have been entitled if he had lived, the will which you have demanded shall be produced in court (and which has been transmitted to Campbell Leflore for the purposes above stated), will be fully proved, and its provisions strictly complied with according to the known express wish and desire of your deceased father.

6th. That as I now remember the provisions of the said will, I am named as executrix therein, and the money which your father expected to realize and receive from the Choctaw nation (and he had no expectation of ever receiving any money from any other source) was directed by said will to be distributed as follows, to wit: After the payment of all just debts, one-third of the said estate was devised and bequeathed to me absolutely.

The Will Filed in the Choctaw Nation
A letter was also sent to Henry E. McKee, making inquiries for the will, the papers of Mr. Luce having come into his possession, but he replied that the will was not in his possession and never had been. A copy of his letter is appended, as also a letter from Miss Sophie C.M. Pitchlynn, stating from information that the will was in the Choctaw nation, and would be probated when there was any estate for distribution.

Statements of the Petitioners

The petition filed states that decedent, at the time of his death and for many years previous, resided in the city of Washington, District of Columbia; that he had married a resident of said city and District, Caroline M. Eckloff, and he had a large family of children, all of whom were born in said District, have resided here ever since their birth, and that neither they nor their father or mother ever resided anywhere else prior to the death of their father, and that the children and their mother have continuously resided within the jurisdiction of this court ever since the death of their father, and that none of them have any other residence, unless it be Thomas Pitchlynn, who resided here from his birth until within the past few weeks, when he left.

They state that the power of attorney was given them as above set forth, and charge that Caroline M. Pitchlynn, the executrix named in the will of said Peter P. Pitchlynn, has received a large sum of money belonging to said estate which ought to be administered according to the terms of said will and the law in this District; that Thomas Pitchlynn is entitled to a share of whatever money said Caroline M. Pitchlynn has so received, and that your petitioners and no one else have power and authority under said power of attorney to receive and receipt for said share which by the terms of said will is due and owing to said Thomas Pitchlynn. That the said Caroline M. Pitchlynn, the executrix named in said will, refuses to produce the same for probate and record, although she has been frequently requested so to do; and that said Caroline has had notice of the power of attorney from Thomas Pitchlynn to your petitioners. That by reason of the power of attorney aforesaid, your petitioners are interested in the affairs of Peter Pitchlynn, deceased, as attorneys at law and in fact of Thomas Pitchlynn. They, therefore, pray that she be cited to produce the will and probate it.

In the early 1830's when George Catlin painted Hat-choo-tuck-nee ("The Snapping Turtle"), familiarly called Peter Pitchlynn by whites, the future Choctaw chief had already become a figure of influence. Having eradicated polygamy in his tribe and stopped the liquor traffic, Pitchlynn had been rewarded in the 1820's with election to the Choctaw National Council. In that capacity, helped select new lands for his people when they were moved west of the Mississippi.

Of mixed white and Indian ancestry, Pitchlynn was well educated in both traditions and served as an effective liaison with the federal government. Impressive in his bearing -- "as stately and complete a gentleman of nature's making as ever I beheld," wrote Charles Dickens -- he became principal chief in 1860 and served as representative of his tribe in Washington after the Civil War. A gifted orator, Pitchlynn addressed the President and several congressional committees in defense of Choctaw claims. He died in Washington, D.C., in 1881 and was buried in the Congressional Cemetery, where the Choctaw nation placed a monument in recognition of his service and allegiance to his people.

Sophia Pitchlynn Dies; Was Choctaw Princess

Princess Sophia Pitchlynn, daughter of Peter Perkins Pitchlynn, chief of the Choctaw Indians, died yesterday in a local hospital. For many years her father represented the tribe in Washington.

At the outbreak of the Civil War, Chief Pitchlynn sought to keep the Choctaw group neutral, while he himself remained loyal to the Union. He was a friend of Andrew Jackson and Henry Clay and was spoken of highly by Charles Dickens in his "American Notes."

The Princess was brought to Washington when she was 7. She was known for her charities to the poor. At one time--1908--she maintained a chicken farm here, sending the fowl to the reservation in Oklahoma to improve the native breed. As the years went on she sold her property to aid relatives and friends.

Services will be held at 3 p.m. tomorrow at the S.H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street N.W. Interment will be in Congressional Cemetery, where the Princess' father is buried.

Choctaw Indian Princess Who Raises Fancy Chickens

It took a woman to make the poultry fanciers of the country sit up and take notice. They smiled patronizingly when Miss Sophia Pitchlynn made her first entry at a poultry show a few years back. But they don't smile now; they take off their hats instead. Miss Pitchlynn has shattered all the pet theories of the poultry fanciers of this country, the fundamental and indispensable one being that success in poultry raising could not be attained without giving the fowls a good run. Miss Pitchlynn's chicks have only a brick-covered space, about the size of an old-fashioned English billiard table, for exercise, and that too, in the very heart of Washington, at 1104 6th street northwest, where there isn't a bit of vacant ground within a mile.
She has been the only woman exhibitor in the important poultry shows of the last few years in this country who has carried off prizes over the heads of men exhibitors. She is now preparing to invade this field in England, and has already selected her birds and is caring for and perfecting them for transportation across the sea the coming season. She has just returned from a visit to her people, the Choctaw Indians, Miss Pitchlynn bearing the distinction of being an Indian princess, the daughter of a Choctaw chief.

Her chicken yard is but 21 by 40 feet, yet within the rows of coops lining the area and the court in the center in which the fowls run she raises between five and six hundred brown leghorns each year. Her ambition to produce the finest single-comb brown leghorn in the world bids fair to become a realization. If intelligent industry can accomplish it, it is a certainty.

No lazy person she declares can raise chickens successfully. She is up at daylight every morning the year round and goes at once to her coops. When she appears in her gown of blue her chickens flock around her and cackle their morning greeting. But let this charming fancier appear in another color and these wily "girls and boys," as she lovingly calls them, come out and eat, but are not talkative or demonstrative.

The Evening Star, November 8, 1876

Fatal Shooting Yesterday Afternoon

Three Men and One Woman

A shooting affair took place at house No. 617 Maryland avenue about 5 o’clock yesterday afternoon, which will probably result in the death of a young man named Behlinge, at the hands of one Thomas Pitchlyn. The difficulty arose about a woman. Pitchlyn, Behlinge, Ed. Wirley and two women were in the house, and the men were all more or less intoxicated, and it seems all were paying their addresses to the same female, the mistress of the house. An altercation arose, blows followed, and a desperate struggle ensued on the stairway leading to the second floor, in which Behlinge and Wirley took sides against Pitchlyn. Wirley was armed with a hatchet, but, fortunately, did no injury with it. Pitchlyn being closely pressed drew a seven-shooter, which he placed close to Behlinge’s person and fired three times. The three balls took effect in the abdomen and lungs.

Behlinge Fell and Pitchlyn Fled through the back window of the second story over the roof of a shed to the ground, running to 6th street, and across the reservation between 4 ½ and 6th streets, towards Louisiana avenue. An outcry was made and several men followed in pursuit. The two officers stationed at the Baltimore and Potomac depot were immediately apprised of the act, and started across the reservation to intercept the fugitive. They overhauled him, and when they came near, Pitchlyn halted and turned towards them with the pistol in his hand, and it was at first thought that he would resist, but Officer Amiss approached and he gave himself up, handing his pistol to the officer. He at once stated to the officer that he was on his way to give himself up, to police headquarters. Officer Hobbs, of the 1st precinct, arrested Wirley soon afterwards. One of the balls fired by Pitchlyn took effect in the breast and two in the abdomen of the unfortunate man.

Bad Company

The house in which the affray occurred is kept by James Lomax and his wife, and the two women present at the shooting were Mrs. Lomax and a mulatto woman named Mary Bell. Lomax is employed in a grocery store, but the females named bear rather bad names, and it is charged that Mrs. Lomax was the cause of the trouble. The house is a small frame structure, poorly furnished, and some of the rooms are unoccupied.

Behlinge, after the shooting, was placed on a bed made on the floor, and Dr. H.E. Leach and Drs. Ford and Brookheimer were called in to attend him. They pronounce his condition critical. The wounded man was conscious and turning once to Mrs. Lomax charged her with being the cause of his dying in such a place.

The Victim

is from New York, 24 years of age, and a stair-builder by trade, and has been engaged at work on the Corcoran building. Soon after the occurrence a telegram was sent to his brother, No. 225 28th street, notifying him that his brother could not live.

claimed from the first that the shooting was in self-defense, having been attacked by the two men. He is about the same age of the wounded man, and is a son of Col. Pitchlyn, former chief of the Choctaw Indians.
He is an educated man, and is well known and generally respected in the community. His son Thomas has been rather a wild youth, and is pretty well known in police circles.

In the Police Court This Morning
Thomas Pitchlyn was charged with assault and battery with intent to kill Mr. J.H. Behlinge. Mr. Birney stated that the wounded man was still living, but was not expected to recover, and he asked that a hearing be postponed to await the result of his injuries. The court so ordered. Pitchlyn, who was present in the audience room, was ordered to be placed in the dock, and was committed to jail. His countenance showed a serious and regretful look. Behlinge, it is thought, cannot possibly recover.

Condition of the Wounded Man Today
Mr. Connell, of the sanitary police, removed Mr. Joseph H. Belenge, who was shot by Thomas Pitchlyn, to Providence hospital at 11 o’clock today. His condition is critical, and the physicians say he cannot recover, although he appears easy today under opiates.

The Pitchlyn-Behlenge Shooting Affair
We have received a communication from Mr. James Lomax, at whose residence the young man Behlenge was shot Tuesday afternoon, denying that the men engaged in the affray fought about Mrs. Lomax, or that his house is in any way disreputable, as can be proved by Mr. Wirley, who boards in the house.

Officer Amiss this morning brought to the Police Court Isabella J. Bella and Virginia Lomax as witnesses in the shooting case which took place on the evening of the 7th inst. The latter is the wife of the proprietor of the house where the affray occurred. They were held in $200 bonds each to testify at the hearing. The condition of Belenge this morning is about the same as yesterday. The balls have not been extracted.

Accidently Shot
Mr. J.W. Plant met with a painful accident last week at his residence near Langley, Va. While a friend was handing him a loaded pistol it was accidentally discharged, the ball entering his body just above his hip, causing a serious and painful wound. He is at the house of his brother, Mr. J.T.K. Plant, and is doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

The Evening Star, March 31, 1873
Serious Accident to Mr. J.W. Plant
This morning, Mr. J.W. Plant, undertaker, while driving his new business wagon from the front of his residence, 7th street, between G and H, to his stable, was thrown out at the corner of H street and Bates' alley, and striking the pavement on his face, was knocked senseless. He was at once taken to his place of business, and Drs. Morgan, Palmer and Thompson summoned. A severe contusion was found over each eye, and his nose appeared to be broken. He was speechless for over two hours, and although not entirely out of danger at 2 o'clock, the physicians are of the opinion that he will recover.

Plant, Joseph T.K.
d. 7 Mar 1881
The Evening Star, March 12, 1878
The Funeral of Mr. J.T.K. Plant, a well-known citizen, who died yesterday morning, in the fiftieth year of his age, took place this afternoon from his late residence on E street, near 10th southwest, and was attended by the Grand Lodge and Franklin Lodge and delegations of other lodges of the Knights of Pythias. Mr. Plant was a native of this city, and for many years was a justice of the peace and notary public. In early life he was active in military matters connected with the American Rifles and President's Mounted Guard. After the war he commanded the Corcoran Zouaves for a time. He was connected at different times with a number of the beneficial orders in the District. Mr. Plant leaves a family of 11 children.

Plant testified in defense of Edwin Spangler, a stagehand at Ford's Theater. Plant was a dealer in furniture and a paperhanger, and had been engaged in cabinetwork at the time of the conspirators' trial. He lived at 350 D Street NW. Plant gave testimony about the condition of the locks on Boxes 7 and 8 in Ford's Theatre, which comprised the Presidential Box. He also testified about the hole in the door of Box 7. There was doubt concerning who made the hole--John Wilkes Booth or Edwin Spangler. If Booth had indeed made the hole, the question arose as to whether Spangler had any knowledge of it.

Man Who Piloted Federal Fleet Into Charleston Harbor To Be Buried

Funeral services for Commander Robert Platt, U.S.N., a veteran of the civil war and widely known in military circles here and throughout the country, who died late yesterday afternoon after a lingering illness following a stroke of apoplexy, will be held at his home, 411 B street northeast, tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, Rev. G. Freeland Peter, assisitant rector of Epiphany Episcopal Church, officiating. The interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

Commander Platt's death occurred at his home, and his one surviving daughter, Miss Harriet Platt, was at his bedside when the end came. Owing to his advanced age, physicians had entertained little hope for his ultimate recovery from the blood clot on the brain which had resulted from the stroke of apoplexy. He had been in an a last continuous state of coma for several weeks, and had not been able to speak.

The pallbearers will include Maj. Samuel H. Walker, Andrew Braid, Frank Walley Perkins, Frank Curtis, Lyman Cushing and Benjamin Calana.

Piloted Fleet Into Charleston Harbor

In the death of Commander Platt Washington's fast thinning circle of civil war heroes loses a member whose war record was characterized as "one without precedent" by the committee on naval affairs of the Senate in 1897.

Commander Platt bore the distinction and was known as the man who piloted the Federal fleet under Admiral du Pont into Charleston harbor in April 1863, taking the first fire of the Confederate shore batteries as he pointed the way in the small pilot vessel and sticking to his wheel after a shell had demolished the pilothouse and given him a severe concussion.

Commander Platt was born in North Carolina in 1835. Coaxed from his home by the call of the sea at an early age he spent his youth and early manhood in that maritime school which has given to this country so many of its gallant sea fighters.

Commander Platt Buried

Funeral Services Held at St. Mark's Episcopal Church

Funeral services for Commander Robert Platt, U.S.N., who died at his home, 411 B street northeast, Wednesday, were held at St. Mark's Episcopal Church, 3d and A streets southeast at 11 o'clock this morning, Rev. G. Freeland Peters, associate rector of Epiphany Church, officiating. Burial was in Congressional Cemetery.

When the civil war broke out Platt was a prosperous skipper plying along the south Atlantic coast and noted for his thorough knowledge of and familiarity with the southern coast and waters. Although greatly attached to his native state, Platt turned a deaf ear to tempting offers from agents of the Confederacy, and even the appeals of relatives and old associates were unavailing to induce him to abandon allegiance to the United States.
Some time prior to the outbreak of the war Commander Platt had been connected with the United States coast survey as first mate and executive officer of the Bibb, a small steamer in the service. His knowledge of those waters made him a valuable man to the naval forces operating against the harbors and seaport cities of the Confederacy. When the vessels of the coast survey were turned over to the revenue marine service as an auxiliary force to the navy, Platt's superior officers obtained for him an appointment as acting master and he remained on the Bibb until Admiral du Point appointed him an acting ensign in the navy, at the same time recommending that the Navy Department give him an appointment as acting master from the same date as his commission as ensign went into effect.

When the attack on Charleston harbor was being planned there were two other pilots in Admiral du Pont's squadron of higher rank than Commander Platt. The task of piloting the fleet into the harbor was assigned to him. In a letter to the Navy Department just before the attack Admiral du Pont wrote:

"Mr. Platt has been of great service in this squadron, is an educated and thorough seaman and is, moreover, to pilot the fleet into Charleston harbor, as I have reason to believe that his knowledge of the channel exceeds that of any of the pilots we have here, and for which perilous service he has patriotically volunteered."

For his skill, coolness and intrepidity in leading the fleet into the harbor under fire of the shore batteries Commander Platt was specially commended by Admiral du Pont. In acknowledgment of his services upon that occasion he was advanced to the grade of acting master, which rank was later changed to lieutenant (junior grade).

One of the captains of the fleet in an official report to Admiral du Pont on that occasion wrote:

"I am much indebted to Mr. Robert Platt for his cool and efficient pilotage of the vessels, which he continued to direct after a ball, touching the pilothouse immediately over his head, had given him a severe concussion."

Platt remained on duty with the blockading fleet until the termination of the war, when he was again assigned to the coast survey, on application of its chief Carlisle Patterson. The last few years of his service he was in command of the United States fish commission ship Fish Hawk, performing valuable service in connection with the propagation of food fish.

When promoted from acting master to master in 1878, by a special act of Congress, Commander Platt was placed on the rolls as "not in line for promotion." In 1897, however, after thirty-three years' service in the navy, and at the age of sixty-two years, Commander (then lieutenant) Platt was advanced one grade and retired, the Senate committee on naval affairs commending his work highly and reporting the bill for his promotion promptly and with strong recommendations for its passage by the Senate.

Commander Platt, when still a young man, was married in Salem, Mass., to a Miss Harriet E. Pitts, a member of a prominent Bay state family. Mrs. Platt died in this city July, 1898, since when his daughter and he have lived alone.

Commander Platt belonged to the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, and was a member of King Solomon's Masonic Lodge of Charlestown, Mass.

Gen. Alfred Pleasonton -- The Distinguished Cavalry Leader Died This Morning
Sketch of His Long Military Career
Lived as a Hermit During the Later Years of His Life -- Some Incidents In His Life
Gen. Alfred Pleasonton, the famous Union cavalry leader, and whose name is indelibly associated with the military glory of the Union from the days when he was a subaltern in the Seminole war to the surrender at Appomatox, died at 3 o'clock this morning of grip, complicated with dropsy, at his apartments in the Greason House, corner of 13th and E streets northwest. There were at his side when the end came his faithful colored nurse, Henrietta Rowan, and his private secretary, Mr. John Murphy.

A Hermit for Years
Gen. Pleasonton had lived at the Greason House for over twenty years, and eight years ago secluded himself in his rooms and never left them. Only a few of his old and intimate friends were ever admitted to his presence and he was almost as much a hermit as if he was on a lonely island in mid-ocean. No one ever knew the reason why Pleasonton immured himself within four walls. He had led up to the time his strange fancy struck him a life of conviviality and good fellowship. For years he never slept save when the sun was shining, spending his entire nights in the company of the men about town who dropped in at Charlie Godfrey's place, on 13th street, next to the corner of 19 street, where Johnson's saloon is situated. Godfrey, the proprietor, was Pleasonton's boon companion, and there was always a group of interested listeners around them eager to hear the remarkable reminiscences of which both men were masters. When Godfrey sold out to Tim Sullivan, Pleasonton transferred his companionship to him, and until Sullivan's death two years ago, the intimacy continued, Sullivan attending to the general's affairs and being one of the very few who ever say him.

Acts of Charity
At this time Gen. Pleasonton was not well off in a worldly sense, and lived on an allowance from his family. Three or four years ago, however, he came into a very handsome competency by the death of a brother and two sisters, but in no wise changed his mode of life. He began, however, to devote himself to acts of charity, and his sole occupation was in aiding needy persons whom he could assist. No publicity was ever given to his acts of kindness, and the only time his name has appeared in print in such connection was a couple of weeks ago, when in the published list of subscribers to a charitable fund was "Alfred Pleasonton, $50."

His only visitor in the recent past was the wife of Gen. Gibson of the army, who was his devoted friend. On his seventy-third birthday, which fell on the 7th of January last, Mrs. Gibson brought him a bunch of flowers, and he was overjoyed at this sweet remembrance of the anniversary.

The faded remnants of the flowers were on the table in the room where he died this morning. Once in a while he would see some old compadre from a distance, but to all others, except those mentioned and the members of the Greason family, to whom he was devotedly attached, he denied himself. His seclusion did not sour him in his intercourse with those dear to him. He was usually bright and entertaining, and never wearied talking over his army experiences, being especially fond of reciting those with humorous tante. His fund of personal stories about the famous men he had served with was immense, and of them all he seemed to regard Harney of the 2d Dragoons as the best soldier and the best friend he ever knew.

A Characteristic Incident
If there was one thing that Pleasonton hated worse than another it was to hear some one revile the men of the south for the part they took in the rebellion. He had fought them as hard as any one, and, while not admitting the right or justice of their course, had learned to respect their bravery and honor and their courage. One night in Godfrey's saloon, or early one morning, for it was an "all night" house, a man came in and proceeded to attack the character and courage of the southern soldiers. Pleasonton looked at him and gave a start of recognition. Arising from his chair he asked if the man knew him. The stranger said he did not. "I am Alfred Pleasonton," responded the general. "I had you drummed out of my camp for cowardice before Antietam. Get out of this place, sir." The man hung his head and hurried out.

Gen. Pleasonton has been in poor health for several years, and Henrietta Rowan had been his faithful nurse ever since Miss Alice Greason, who had attended him like a daughter, married Mr. James McCready, six years ago. His ear drums had been shattered by a cannon explosion during the war, and caused him great pain, so that his head and ears had to be dressed each night with a soothing ointment.
His Last Illness
About four weeks ago in removing the ointment he was chilled, and caught a severe cold, which developed into the grip. He had no physician, but on his condition growing worse, Dr. Lincoln was called in. The disease, coupled with dropsy, could not be overcome, however, and yesterday he passed a very bad day. He was quiet during the evening, however, and there were hopes that he was getting better. He went to sleep about 2 o'clock, and passed away peacefully in his slumber an hour later. Mr. Murphy telegraphed this morning to the nephews and nieces of the dead man and the arrangements for the funeral will be made when they are heard from.

Gen. Pleasonton was a man of strong religious convictions and Sunday night talked for a long time with his colored nurse, a woman of admirable qualities and an unusually bright mind for one in her position, over his faith in the Almighty and his gratitude for all His mercy. He expressed his conviction that his end was near and seemed happy to think his sufferings would be soon over.

Regret at the War Department
Adjutant General Ruggies was officially informed of the death of the great cavalry leader this morning by Major Guest, his grandnephew, and the news spread rapidly through the War Department. General regret was expressed and many of the older officers gave personal testimony to the gallant services performed by General Pleasonton during the war. Although he was brevetted major general for particularly meritorious services, General Pleasonton was but a major on the retired list at the time of his death. It is not usual to accord military honors at the funeral of an officer on the retired list except it is expressly requested by the family, and the same course will be followed in the case of General Pleasonton. In case those having charge of his funeral arrangements request it, the department will provide a military escort and pay the usual military honors at the grave.

His Long and Brilliant Career
Gen. Alfred Pleasonton was born in this city June 7, 1824. He was graduated at the United States Military Academy in 1844, served in the Mexican war and was brevetted first lieutenant for "gallant and meritorious conduct in the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma." He subsequently was on frontier duty with his company, and was commissioned first lieutenant in 1849, and captain in 1855. He was acting assistant adjutant general to Gen. William S. Harney during the Sioux expedition, and his adjutant general from 1856 until 1860 in the campaign against the Seminoles in Florida, and the operations in Kansas, Oregon and Washington. He commanded his regiment in its march from Utah to Washington in the autumn of 1861, was commissioned major of the 2d Cavalry in February, 1862, served through the Virginia peninsular campaign, became brigadier general of volunteers in July of that year, and commanded the division of cavalry of the Army of the Potomac that followed Lee's invading army into Maryland. He was engaged at Boonesborough, South Mountain, Antietam and the subsequent pursuit, engaged the enemy frequently at Fredericksburg, and stayed the further advance of the enemy at Chancellorsville, May 2, when Jackson's confederate corps was coming down the right flank of Hooker's army, and had already routed Howard's corps. Gen. Pleasonton, by his quick and skillful action, saved the army from a serious disaster. Ordering the 8th Pennsylvania Cavalry to charge boldly into the woods, in the face of the advancing host, he delayed Jackson's progress a few minutes--just long enough to throw into position all the artillery that was within reach. He ordered the guns loaded with grape and canister, and, depressed enough to make the shot strike the ground, half way between their line and the edge of the woods. When the confederate column emerged it met such a storm of iron as no troops could pass through. About this time Jackson fell, and before any new maneuvers could be undertaken darkness put an end to the day's work. He received the brevet of lieutenant colonel for Antietam in 1862, was promoted major general of volunteers in June 1863, participated in the many actions that preceded the battle of Gettysburg, was commander-in-chief of cavalry in that action, and was brevetted colonel 2d of July 1863. He was transferred to Missouri in 1864, drove the forces under Gen. Sterling Price from the state, and in March, 1865, was brevetted brigadier general in the United States army for gallant and meritorious conduct in that campaign and major general for services throughout the civil war. He resigned in 1868, was United States collector of revenue for several years, and subsequently president of the Terre Haute and Cincinnati railroad. In May, 1888 he was placed on the retired list with the ranks of colonel, United States army.

Generals in Blue
Alfred Pleasonton was born in the city of Washington on July 7, 1824, and attended the local schools before receiving an appointment to West Point in 1840. He was graduated from the Military Academy in 1844, ranking seventh in a class of twenty-five members. In 1846 he won the brevet of first lieutenant for gallantry in the Mexican War and served on the Indian frontier and in Florida against the Seminoles as an officer of dragoons, part of the time as adjutant to General William S. Harney. As captain of the 2nd Dragoons (renamed 2nd Cavalry in 1861 upon the reorganization of the army), Pleasonton commanded the regiment on its march from Utah to Washington in September and October. He served in the capital's defenses that winter, was promoted to major on February 15, 1862, was distinguished in the Peninsular campaign, and soon after was made a brigadier in the volunteers (July 18 to rank from the sixteenth). He directed a division of the Cavalry Corps in the Maryland campaign, at Fredericksburg, and at Chancellorsville. At the latter fight he assumed the entire credit for saving the Union army by magnifying the repulse of a Confederate patrol into the defeat of Stonewall Jackson's entire corps. He was, however, promoted to major general on June 22, 1863, after replacing General George Stoneman in command of the Cavalry Corps on June 7 upon the orders of Joseph Hooker. Subsequently, he directed ten thousand Union horsemen at Brandy Station, Virginia, in the biggest cavalry fight of the war -- an encounter which was said to have "made the Federal cavalry." But Pleasonton did not distinguish himself during the Gettysburg campaign. In February, 1864, he disapproved of the Kilpatrick-Dahlgren raid against Richmond -- an abortive affair which accomplished nothing save a long casualty list, including Ulrich Dahlgren, but which was enthusiastically supported by the administration. This lukewarmness, coupled with the fact that the new general-in-chief, U.S. Grant intended Philip Sheridan to command the Cavalry Corps, resulted in Pleasonton's relief from command on March 25, 1864, and banishment to the Department of the Missouri under the command of the recently exiled W.S. Rosecrans. Although again some of his claims were disputed, he performed creditably during Confederate General Sterling Price's Missouri raid in October. At the end of the war Pleasonton was brevetted major general, U.S. Army; his regular rank, however, continued to be that of major of the 2nd Cavalry. When the Regular Army was reorganized in 1866, he was offered the lieutenant colonelcy of the 20th Infantry, which he declined, presumably wishing to remain in the cavalry. This refusal left him subordinate to both his colonel, T.J. Wood, and lieutenant colonel, I.N. Palmer. Pleasonton had been a year ahead of Wood at West Point and two ahead of Palmer, and he had ranked Wood by seniority on the list.

Pleasonton, Alfred (1824-1897)

Thought by many to be a beau sabreur "the very ideal of a cavalryman" Alfred Pleasonton nonetheless proved ineffective at intelligence gathering and was eventually exiled to the Department of the Missouri for the balance of the war. A West Pointer (1844) from the nation's capital, he had been posted to the dragoons and had served in Mexico and against the Seminoles in Florida. In the former conflict he earned a brevet. His Civil War-era assignments included: captain, 2nd Dragoons (since March 3, 1855); captain, 2nd Cavalry (change of designation Aug. 3, 1861); major, 2nd Cavalry (Feb. 15, 1862); brigadier general, USV (July 16, 1862); commanding 2nd Brigade, Cavalry Division, Army of the Potomac (July 16 - Sept. 1862); commanding cavalry division, Army of the Potomac (Sept.-Nov. 1862 and Jan.-Feb. 12, 1863); commanding Cavalry Division, Right Grand Division, Army of the Potomac (Nov. 1862-Jan. 1863); commanding 1st Division, Cavalry Corps, Army of the Potomac (Aug. 3, 1861); major, 2nd Cavalry (March 3, 1855); adjutant general, USV (July 16, 1862); commanding District of Central Missouri, Department of the Missouri (July 24-Sept. 3, 1864); commanding District of St. Louis, Department of the Missouri (Nov. 21-Dec. 9, 1864); and commanding District of Wisconsin, Department of the Northwest (1865). After initial recruiting duty in Delaware, he commanded his regiment in Utah where he feared he would be left out of the war. His regiment was, however, transferred to Washington in the fall of 1861 and he attracted McClellan's notice the next year while commanding the regiment at army headquarters on the Peninsula. Following his service during the Seven Days he was made a brigadier and given a brigade in the newly organized cavalry division. By the battle of Antietam he commanded the army's cavalry and had earned a brevet for the unimpressive role of guarding the artillery and a little skirmishing along the center. His role in the aftermath of the campaign was even less auspicious. His reports of enemy activity were so unreliable—due to his failure to break Jeb Stuart's screen—that he earned the nickname, "Knight of Romance," for the deluge of paper he sent to army headquarters. He also f ailed to catch Jeb Stuart's cavalry in its second ride around McClellan's army. At Fredericksburg he commanded the cavalry division attached to the Right Grand Division. At Chancellorsville, the corps commander George Stoneman, in an effort to slight Pleasonton, left him with only one brigade to accompany the main army while he himself would get the glory in a major raid. The raid failed while Pleasonton earned laurels for his ordering the suicidal charge of the 8th Pennsylvania cavalry to buy time for the cavalryman to gather up a number of guns to hold a vital position, Hazel Grove, in front of Jackson's assault. While his role was overrated, he was nonetheless named to replace Stoneman. His command did fairly well against Stuart at Brandy Station, Aldie, Middleburg, and Upperville, with the Union cavalry beginning to hold its own against the Rebels. At Gettysburg he for some reason served more as a chief of cavalry at headquarters than as a corps leader. He failed to replace Buford's division on the left, which almost led to disaster on July 2. In the campaign as a whole he again failed as an Intelligence gatherer. Early the following year he opposed the Kilpatrick-Dahlgren Raid—rightly—but earned the enmity of his administration backers. In the March 1864 reorganization under Grant he was replaced by Philip H. Sheridan and later sent to Missouri where he performed creditably against Price's invasion, but he received little more credit than a brevet. His role was critical at both Westport and Marais des Cygnes. Mustered out of the volunteers on Jan. 15, 1866, he was a major general by brevet in the regular army but only a major in line rank. Disgusted by his future potential in the army, he resigned on Jan. 1, 1868, and held numerous minor governmental appointments and entered railroad ing.

Army officer. Born in Washington, D.C., on June 7, 1824, Pleasonton graduated from West Point in 1844 and was commissioned in the 2nd Dragoons. He served in the Mexican War, winning a brevet to first lieutenant at Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma, May 8-9, 1846. He was promoted to first lieutenant in September 1849, while serving on the frontier, and to captain in March 1855. He was on the staff of Col. William S. Harney from 1855, taking part in numerous Indian campaigns. In September 1861 he commanded his regiment, the 2nd Cavalry, in a march from Utah to Washington, D.C. He was promoted to major in February 1862, and after brilliant service in the Peninsula campaign he was appointed brigadier general of volunteers in July. He commanded a division of cavalry in the Maryland campaign, taking part in the battles at South Mountain, September 14, Antietam (Sharpsburg), where he was brevetted lieutenant colonel of regulars, September 17, and Fredericksburg, December 13. At Chancellorsville on May 2, 1863, he organized a cavalry and artillery defense that slowed Gen. Thomas J. Jackson's charge after his initial success over Gen. Oliver O. Howard's corps, enough to prevent an utter rout of the Army of the Potomac. On June 9, while reconnoitering Gen. Robert E. Lee's movements, he surprised Gen. J.E.B. Stuart's Confederate cavalry at Brandy Station, Virginia, and fought to a draw, largely with saber, one of the war's few mounted battles. Later in the month he was promoted to major general of volunteers, and at Gettysburg, July 1-3, he was in command of all the cavalry of the Army of the Potomac and won a brevet to colonel of regulars. Early in 1864 Pleasonton was transferred to Missouri, where in October he met the third invasion of the state by Gen. Sterling Price. He successfully defended the capital, Jefferson City, on October 8 and then joined his 6500 men with Gen. Samuel R. Curtis's 15,000 in the battle of Westport, actually a series of engagements around Kansas City. Pleasonton defeated a Confederate division at the Big Blue River on October 23 and two days later routed the remainder of Price's army at the Marais des Cygnes River in Kansas. In March 1865 Pleasonton was brevetted brigadier and major general; but reversion to permanent rank after the war placed him under former subordinates, and he resigned from the army in January 1868. During 1869-1870 he was a collector of internal revenue in New York, and in December 1870 he became commissioner of internal revenue. He lost that post in 1871, and from 1872 to 1874 he was president of the Cincinnati & Terre Haute Railway. In October 1888 he was placed on the army retired list as a major. He died in Washington, D.C., on February 17, 1897.

Death of Gen. Pleasonton
Gen. August J. Pleasanton died in Philadelphia yesterday after a lingering illness of pneumonia. He was born in this city eighty-six years ago and came of a distinguished family, his father, Stephen Pleasanton, having been associated with the national government for over half a century. The General graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1826. After practicing law in Philadelphia for some years, he enlisted in the Pennsylvania militia, and at the outbreak of the civil war was made commander of the home guard of Philadelphia, serving with distinction.

Gen. Pleasanton was the originator of the theory that the sun's rays, when passed through blue glass, were particularly stimulating not only to vegetation, but to the health and growth of animals. The theory attracted widespread attention, and produced "the blue glass craze," which was at its height in 1878. He wrote a work on this subject and delivered numerous lectures before scientific societies.

Obituary (From the Philadelphia Inquirer of April 23)

Died, at Washington, on Friday last, Mrs. Mary Pleasonton, wife of Stephen Pleasonton, Esq., and daughter of the late John Hopkins, Esq., of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. In the death of this estimable lady, her family has experienced a severe bereavement, and a widespread circle of friends an afflicting loss. It is the lot of few in this world to garner up such stores of affection and esteem as were bestowed upon her, and the lot of few so richly to deserve them. A peaceful self-possession of mind, a warm and generous heart, a sound discriminating judgment, a firm but affectionate sense of duty, regulated all her actions. The poor have lost in her a kind and sympathetic friend; the stranger, whom duty or pleasure brought within her sphere, a generous entertainer. Her hospitality was as unaffected and refined as her association was pleasing and instructive. Her intelligence of character is amply recorded in the minds of a large portion of the most distinguished of the land. Her peaceful virtues will ever be remembered with gratitude by the poor and humble. To the partner of her bosom and her surviving children, she has left a rich legacy of virtues to be cherished. May the remembrance of these in some measure soothe the anguish which her loss has occasioned! This humble memorial is the heartfelt tribute of a friend who, in a long course of years has witnessed what he has recorded and felt what he desires may not be easily forgotten.

Pleasonton, Stephen

Pleasanton. On the evening of January 31, Stephen Pleasonton, Fifth Auditor of the Treasury Department of the United States, in the 79th year of his age, after an illness of ten days. His friends and those of his family are respectfully invited to attend his funeral from his late residence, No. 38e west 21st street, at 12 o'clock on Saturday, to proceed to the Congressional Cemetery.

...(funeral of John W. Maury)

Among the Society there were the Pleasantons. Mr. Pleasanton held the office of 5th Auditor of the Treasury. He was as honest and upright a gentleman as ever served the country, exact in all his business transactions and with much judgment and bonhomie as could be found in very many. He was very often consulted and duly appreciated by the Administration and was intimate with most of the leading men of his day. He was not a bright man, but with his accomplished and handsome wife they had much influence in the intricacies of the Govt. and fro her beauty and sprightliness, had great power over the distinguished men by whom the Government was administered and were always well posted of what was going on. Mrs. Pleasanton had been a great belle and retained much of her beauty when We knew her. She had much to say in the various crises through which our Government passed through in the days of Madison, Monroe and Jackson, and had much to say and advice during the Administration of Mr. Adams. She was very clever and witty and with agreeable and kindly manner had an extensive influence over the counsels of the nation. They entertained charmingly at dinners and occasionally had a large party. They had a large family of two sons and four daughters and were very hospitable in the Society. Their domestic circle was charming. One of the daughters was imbecile, I believe the eldest. The Second married Col. [John G.] Watmough of Philadelphia, a Member of Congress, and the two remaining have never married -- both extremely clever, and the youngest extremely handsome when she first grew up and was very interesting and clever. They have always added to the society, and the liveliness of Sarra has always give a charm to the society she moved in from her wit and s即将性。The Sons -- the Eldest married in Philadelphia a very wealthy girl, and the 2nd Son, Alfred, was educated at West Point and greatly distinguished himself in the Mexican War & the Rebellion. He subsequently quited the army & after a short time was appointed by Genl. Grant to Assessor of New York. Here he gave great satisfaction and was advanced to the position of Solicitor in the Treasury of Washington. A difficulty arose between him and the Secy. of the Treasury relative to his duties and he retired by the order of the President, who caused him to be superceded. Mr. & Mrs. Pleasanton died within a short time of each other. Their day had gone by and the onward march of the Country and its extension of business caused the Light Houses which had been under his especial charge to be confided to a board & this department was accordingly taken out of his hands. But all were satisfied that it had been conducted with great economy and zeal for the public Service.

Mr. P. was a very Methodical Man and all his duties were carried on with great punctuality. It was observed that even in his daily walks he appeared to have studied both time and Method for at any precise moment of each day he was to be seen in almost the same place. He was a very kind hearted Gentleman with much dry humour, but was thought to be not a little nervous and excitable in the intercourse with those under him. He was of the medium height, very erect in his walk and somewhat emaciated. His clothes were worn very loose upon his person. His advancing age unfitted him to contend with the many who sought to dispose him from office, but his well earned reputation and scrupulous performance of his duties rendered his position impregnable and it was not until an Act of Congress was passed that he lost his place and employment in the Govt service which he had served for upwards of forty years. Mrs. Pleasanton had been described to me as very beautiful. When I knew her, she Retained many of the Marks and great vivacity of manner in Conversation. She was exceedingly kind and attentive to us and many was the pleasant hours we passed under her hospitable roof. They lived on the extreme of the West end of the city on 21st & F Street. It was, in fact, almost country and the domicile consisted of a two story double house of Brick with a small garden in front.

Before the note was received, John Graham, Chief Clerk in the Department of State, and two other clerks, Stephen Pleasanton and Josiah King, had thoughtfully planned to save the valuable public records of the State Department. Under the direction of Pleasanton, enough coarse linen bags had been purchased to hold the papers. Into these containers "The original Declaration of Independence, the articles of confederation, the federal constitution, many treaties and laws as enrolled, General Washington's commission as Commander-in-chief of the army of the Revolution...together with many other papers" had been carefully packed. The bags had been hung around the room so as to be ready at a moment's warning to be moved to a place of safety. Wagons, cart, and vehicles of all kinds were in such great demand for moving army provisions that it was difficult to find any means of transportation for the documents. Pleasanton, however, was a dependable man, and he found conveyances and took the valuable records to a mill about three miles beyond Georgetown, where he concealed them. After this patriotic task was performed, Pleasanton slept that night at the home of the Reverend Mr. Maffitt, about two miles from the mill. During the night Pleasanton remembered that the mill was not far from General Mason's cannon foundry, and since he expected that the British would destroy the foundry, he feared the enemy's close proximity to the mill would endanger the records. The next morning he was able to engage country wagons for transporting the national papers. He removed them from the mill and, on horseback, he attended them to Leesburg, Virginia, where he deposited them in a vacant stone house, thirty-five miles from Washington.

|                   | A man named William Plowman, a bricklayer, about 45 years of age, was picked up on the street yesterday in a sick and destitute condition and taken to police headquarters, where he had a succession of epileptic fits. He was attended by Drs. Elliot and Page. He is a native of this city, and it is reported that his wife died on Saturday last and this trouble coupled with almost total destitution from long sickness caused his prostration, which it is feared will prove fatal. Plowman died at police headquarters at 11 o'clock today. |

Plumsill. On Saturday, 27th May, 1877, 5:30 a.m. after a lingering illness, Thomas Plumsill, in the 86th year of his age. Funeral from his late residence, No. 525, 10th street s.e. on Thursday, 4 p.m., 29th instant.

The Evening Star, April 22, 1875

Locals

Mr. Stephen B. Plumsill (should be Thomas?), for many years a county constable and a well-known resident of the eastern part of the city, is lying very ill at his residence near the Navy Yard. Being about eighty years of age, and having been in bad health for several years, there is but little prospect of is recovery.

The Evening Star, March 2, 1874

Father and Son

Stephen B. Plumsill, threats of violence to Thomas Plumsill; an old citizen and county constable. The warrant charges that Stephen (son of Thomas) threatened to burn the old man's house, and to kill him, and complainant has reason to believe that he will either kill, maim, wound or do him some great bodily harm. Thomas Plumsill, a very decrepit old man, took the witness stand, and in a very feeble tone of voice testified that he is 79 years of age, and that his wife had recently died, and his son Stephen had tried to get rid of him so that he could get possession of the property. He had made threats to kill him and drag him out of the house after the burial of his mother; that while his mother was lying a corpse in the house, Stephen had stolen the keys out of her pocket, and had told the grave-digger to dig his mother's grave two feet deeper, as he would have his father laying on top of her in less than two weeks.; that Stephen had laid his plans to take possession of the house during the burial of his mother. He had been a drag and torment to him for the last forty-seven years, and was the worst man he ever saw in his life. He had lately on several occasions threatened to burn every house he owned to the ground if the property was not given to him.

Judge Moore, counsel for defendant, called Mrs. Sumner, a colored woman, who testified that Stephen had been boarding at her house since last July, his father having driven him from home, and he was afraid to go home, except during the absence of his father, when he would go to see his mother; that the old man had threatened to kill him if he came to his house after the funeral.

Old man, (interrupting.)--"Judge, there's not a word of truth in it. I'm a minister of the gospel, and wouldn't tell a falsehood for the world."

Judge Moore, (to witness.)--"Did you ever hear Stephen use threats against his mother?"

Here Judge Moore made a statement that Stephen was afraid of his father and others, who were trying to prevent him from getting possession of property which had been deeded to him by his father long ago, and before he came to his dotage, and asked that protection be given to him.

Court.--"It is not possible that any danger can be apprehended from this feeble old man. If there are any other parties who defendant is afraid of, he can bring charges against them, but as the case stands, defendant must give bonds in the sum of $200 to keep the peace to his father."

High Old Time at the Navy Yard

Two Auctioneers at One Sale

On Saturday afternoon quite an excitement took place on the Navy Yard, owing to the doings at an auction in that usually quite locality. On this afternoon constable Thomas Plumsill had advertised a sale of second-hand furniture to take place at the corner of Virginia avenue and Seventh street and at the appointed hour quite a number of persons, including some thirty or forty of "ye fair ladyes" of that section, gathered about the long rows of "chattels."

The sale commenced, and the bidding was quite spirited for a time, the prices ruling higher even than had been anticipated by the efficient salesman and his clerk. But the fondest hopes sometimes perish, and in this case the fond expectations "quick sales and small profits," were incontinently knocked in the head, in the midst of the bidding, two soldiers, belonging to the 88th Pennsylvania Regiment, who were intoxicated, made their appearance in the crowd and took quite an active part in the bidding, and it was not long before one of them by the name of Nuneville, claimed that a lounge had been knocked down to him. Much to the disappointment of the salesman, one soldier mounted the lounge and put it up for sale at the same time that a table sitting near by was being cried by the salesman, who being unable to proceed with the sale, expostulated with the men, and went to another portion of the stock and cried off several articles, in the hope that the soldiers would leave, but he was again mistaken, for when he returned and mounted a sofa and was about to sell it off, Nuneville jumped on the other end and commenced to rattle off in regular auction style, "Going at fifty cents, a half-a-dollar," etc. This was more than the patient auctioneer could stand, and to end the matter he gave Nuneville a heavy blow with his stick, knocking him into the street. Nuneville immediately was on his feet again, and put his hand to his breast, as if to draw a pistol, at which the crowd, auctioneer and all scattered suddenly in all directions.

The soldiers in the meantime had left the scene of the auction and proceeding to Justice Cull's procured a warrant for Plumsill's arrest, which they placed in the hands of officer Harbin. On the officer going to the place of sale to make the arrest the excitement commenced again, but after some little talk the case was ruled before Justice Murray for Monday morning, and the sale was concluded without further interruption.

On Monday morning there was quite a large crowd in attendance at the office of Justice Murray, anxiously waiting the result of the trial. After waiting some time the complainants not making their appearance, the case was dismissed.

Dr. Samuel B. Pole Dies of Infection

Prominent Specialist Expires After Two Operations Fail to Save Life

Dr. Samuel Boyce Pole, 38 years old, prominent ear, eye and throat specialist of this city, died of septicemia in George Washington University Hospital yesterday afternoon. He contracted the infection while operating on a patient about three months ago.

All available medical and surgical skill had been employed in an effort to cure Dr. Pole. He underwent two operations, one for the removal of the gall bladder, and had a leg amputated in another. The patient from whom Dr. Pole received the infection is said to have recovered.

Dr. Pole was a specialist on the staff of the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, and was also a member of the staff of George Washington University Hospital. He was vice president of the board of directors of the Professional Medical Building, at Eighteenth and I streets.

He was also prominent in Masonic circles, being a past master of Naval Lodge, No. 4, F.A.A.M., and Orient Commandery, Knights Templar.

Dr. Pole was a native Washingtonian and was graduated from the medical school of George Washington University.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Sarah Pole; a son, Samuel Boyce Pole, 3d, and a daughter, Patricia Pole; by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Boyce Pole of 216 Eighth street northeast; a brother, Russell Pole of Philadelphia, and a sister, Mrs. John McKinney of Hoboken, N.J.

Funeral services will be conducted at St. James' Episcopal Church, Eighth street northeast between B and C streets, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be in Congressional Cemetery. Masonic services will be conducted both at the church and at the grave.

Amputation Failed to Save Martyr to Profession After 11-Week Fight

Dr. Samuel Boyce Pole, well-known eye, ear and throat specialist, died yesterday afternoon of septicemia, which he contracted while operating on a patient three months ago. He was 38 years old and lived at 1836 Sixteenth street northwest.

The patient from whom Dr. Pole contracted blood infection has since fully recovered.

A gallant fight was waged against the disease, both by Dr. Pole and the surgeons who were attending him. For eleven weeks they fought to halt the spread of infection, but without success. Two operations were performed, one to remove the gall bladder and the other amputation of a leg.

The latter operation was performed at George Washington University hospital yesterday as a last resort. Not long afterward Dr. Pole died.

Martyr to Science

Dr. Pole, although comparatively young, stood high in the local medical world. His illness attracted the attention of virtually all physicians and surgeons here, who look upon him as being truly a martyr to his profession.

Dr. Pole was a specialist on the staff of the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat hospital, and also was a member of the staff of George Washington University hospital. He was a native of this city and a graduate of the medical school of George Washington University.

He is survived by his wife and two children, Samuel Boyce Pole, 3d., and Patricia Pole; by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Boyce Pole, 316 Eighth street northeast; a brother, Russell Pole of Philadelphia, and a sister Mrs. John McKinney of Hoboken, N.J.

Rites For Dr. S.B. Pole

Physician Died of Infection Received From Patient
The funeral of Dr. Samuel Boyce Pole, who died Thursday from infection received from a patient was held yesterday afternoon from St. James Episcopal Church, where he received his early religious training and served as choir boy.

Interment was at Congressional Cemetery, where the Naval Masonic Lodge, of which he was past master, officiated at services.

He is survived by a widow, Sarah LeStourgeon Pole, two small children, Samuel Boyce and Patricia LeStourgeon; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Boyce Pole; a brother, Russell Pole, and sister, Mrs. John S. McKinney.

History of the Naval Lodge, No. 4, F.A.A.M.

Samuel Boyce Pole, Master in 1918, was born in Washington, D.C., December 23, 1886; educated in the public schools, George Washington University Medical School, and did post graduate work in New York Eye and Ear Hospital. Following his internship in the District of Columbia hospitals he practiced general medicine for several years, later specializing in eye, ear, nose and throat ailments. He gave generously of his time and ability to the charitable institutions of Washington and was recognized as one of the outstanding younger physicians in the city. As a young man he was active in organizing and promoting activities for advancement of the youth of the city and accomplished much during his short span of years, dying at the age of 39. He was married to Miss Sarah LeStourgeon of Washington, March 15, 1919, and of this union there was a son, Samuel Boyce Pole III, and a daughter, Patricia L. Pole. Brother Pole was raised in Naval Lodge September 21, 1911; exalted in Washington Naval Chapter, No. 6, R.A.M., April 7, 1914; knighted in Orient Commandery, No. 5, K.T., November 2, 1914. He was a member of Martha Chapter, No. 4, O.E.S., American Medical Association, District of Columbia Medical Society, University Club, Charter member of Congressional Country Club and an active member of St. James Episcopal Church. He died September 24, 1925 and his remains were interred with Masonic honors in Congressional Cemetery.

Polk. On Sunday morning, the 9th inst., Josiah F. Polk, Esq., long a resident of this city, aged 68. He was much distinguished for integrity and his benevolence in manners. A gentleman of the old school, faithful and firm in his views of the Deity, and died calmly resigned to the will of God. His friends are invited to attend his funeral tomorrow (Tuesday) at 12 o'clock at Mrs. Bannerman's, Pa., ave., between 3d and 4 1/2 streets.

The Evening Star, October 15, 1860
The Late Josiah F. Polk
This gentleman was possessed of many rare qualities of mind and heart. If in the moral as in the natural world the silent and unseen forces have precedence and power, they feel that his character deserves more than a passing notice. Mr. Polk was the son of the late Gilliss Polk, of Somerset, Maryland. He was educated for the profession of his father and was engaged in its practice. He was twice elected to the Legislature of Maryland. Subsequently, having removed to Indiana, he filled various offices of great trust under Government. About the year 1829 he accepted the agency of the Colonization Society, and traveled through several States to advocate the claims of the Association. He was appointed to a position in the Census Bureau by Mr. Van Buren, and was afterwards placed in the office of the Second Auditor, where he remained from 1831 to 1855. He has since been engaged in revising the code of laws for the District, and was a Trustee of the Public Schools. At the time of his decease he was again engaged in the practice of his profession. Mr. Polk united great natural ability with an extensive erudition; he was a forcible and argumentative writer, and a deep and original thinker. Firm in his religious convictions, in all he said or did truth was his sole object. His disease was rapid and its termination sudden and unexpected. Mr. Polk's long residence in Washington had gained for him many friends, and it is believed he has not left an enemy behind him. Greatly beloved as he was his friends have many precious memories of him, but forbear to offer more than this praise of one who was truly "an honest man," "the noblest work of God."

Leaped To His Death
A Man Commits Suicide by Jumping
From the Long Bridge

The Evening Star, July 7, 1894

Interments in the Historic Congressional Cemetery  Last Updated: 2/13/2015
This afternoon about 1:30 o’clock a neatly dressed man, who was apparently under the influence of liquor, committed suicide by jumping into the Georgetown canal from the Long bridge. Persons on their way to the races noticed the man on the bridge, and several of them saw him when he made the fatal leap. He was dressed in what appeared to be a blue serge suit and straw hat, and carried a cane. Stopping on the bridge about 100 feet, or more from the Virginia end of the bridge, the man laid down his hat and cane, climbed to the rail, and leaped into the water below.

He disappeared from the surface of the water and nothing more was seen of him. In his hat was what appeared to be the name, “A Suhiz, 634 M street northeast,” and there was also a receipted bill made out in the name of John Farrell from John O’Flaherty, the tinner.

The hat and cane were picked up and taken to police headquarters, and the police notified. Policeman McNamara was soon on the bridge to investigate the affair, but he was unable to learn anything additional.

The police boat was soon near the scene of where the man committed suicide, and the members of the crew are dragging for the body.

The Evening Star, July 9, 1894

Suicide Identified

He Was a Brother of Robert P. Porter

Saturday afternoon, between 6 and 7 o’clock, members of the crew of the police boat recovered the body of the man who committed suicide earlier in the afternoon by jumping from the Long bridge, as printed in Saturday’s Star. As stated Saturday, there was a paper in his hat, on which was written “A. Suhlz, 624 M street northeast,” but there is no such place as M street northeast between 6th and 7th streets, and the police have not found any such person as A. Suhlz. This, it is thought, was put in the hat by the suicide to prevent identification as far as possible. But on his shirt were the letters “H.J.P.” and the initial “P.” was also on his handkerchief. The body was removed to the morgue, where it was identified yesterday as being the body of Henry J. Porter, who was a brother of Robert P. Porter, ex-superintendent of the census. The identification was made by Mr. T.W. Young, brother-in-law of the deceased. Several years ago the deceased held a government position here, but he left this city and went to Boston, returning here only a few months ago. He was about fifty years old. Recently he had been engaged as an insurance solicitor, and it is stated that he has been drinking. In addition to this, he had some trouble with his eyesight, and the fear that he might become blind, his friends think, caused him to end his life. Undertaker J. Wm. Lee took charge of the body soon after the identification, and word was sent to the deceased’s brother in Jersey City. The ex-superintendent of census, however, is just recovering from a severe illness, and will not be able to come here, although he telegraphed his relatives to take charge of the body. The funeral will probably take place tomorrow.

Albert W. Ports Dead

Had Been Rigger at Capitol More Than Forty Years

Albert W. Ports, 115 4th street southeast, for more than forty years a rigger at the United States Capitol, died shortly after 8 o'clock last night at the Casualty Hospital. He suffered from uraemic poisoning.

The funeral will be held at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the undertaking parlors of George P. Zurhorst, 2d and East Capitol streets southeast. Burial will be in Congressional cemetery. Rev. Dr. Weidly, pastor of the Church of the Reformation, will conduct the services. The pallbearers have not been selected yet.

Mr. Ports, who was sixty-five years of age, was taken ill yesterday, shortly before noon, while in his office at the Capitol. He was moved to Casualty Hospital.

Mr. Ports was born in Washington. He was regarded as one of the most expert riggers in the United States. On several occasions when the "Goddess of Liberty" which surmounts the dome of the Capitol was to be cleaned it was the task of Mr. Ports to erect a skeleton scaffold in order that the cleaners might reach the top of the statue. He was known to many of the older residents of Capitol Hill, as he had resided in Southeast Washington nearly all his life.

Mr. Ports had been a widower for many years. His son, who assisted him at the Capitol, died two years ago. He was a life member of Lebanon Lodge, No. 7, F.A.A.M. and Scottish Rite Masons.

Coroner Nevitt was notified of the death last night and will give a necessary death certificate.

Anecdotes of "Al" Ports, Known as the "Human Fly"

A man who had a strange claim to notoriety died in Washington the other week. He was Albert Ports, a professional rigger, a "human fly," and he often remarked that he was the only man who ever had his picture taken within kissing distance of the Goddess of Liberty. This he considered more of a distinguishing circumstance than the fact that he once fell from the dome of the Capitol and lived to tell the tale. Incidentally, he bore the scars of that accident to the grave. Ports was one of the best known and conspicuous of the old-time attaches of the Capitol, and rendered untold service to the government.

About five years ago an appropriation was made by Congress for the cleansing of the statue of the Goddess of Liberty, with which the dust and rains for many years had played sad havoc. The task of erecting a scaffolding around this distinguished female was almost super-human, but Albert Ports announced he could do it -- and he did. The statue weighs 16,000 pounds and the surface, therefore, is very considerable. The timbers of the scaffolding were hoisted up from the inside of the dome one at a time, and a huge framework erected around the goddess of "Indian" as she is frequently referred to. From the base line to the crest of the building is a good 307 feet while Miss Liberty stands 13 feet 4 inches in her bronze sandals. So to be able to scrub her aquiline nose the man with the brush must be suspended 326 feet in the air. Ports was the only man willing to undertake the feat, and he made good at it.

And this he accomplished thirty years after he had fallen from the dome. It was in August 1874, that Ports climbed into the dome and made his way out upon the "light" balcony. Crawling up on the railing, he leaned far over to examine the roofing directly under the balcony. This gallery, by the way, is composed of thirteen columns, emblematic of the thirteen original states, and Ports never quite decided whether the thirteen hoodoo was responsible for his fall or whether it brought him good luck and saved his life. Not long ago he was telling some friends in the architect's office of his experience, and he said:

"I was leaning way over and thought I had a good purchase. The city, like a great wheel, lay spread out beneath me. Suddenly, I don't know how or why, I lost my balance and plunged down, down, down. I seemed to be hours falling and I know I turned a complete somersault. As I shot into space I heard the frightened screams of my two assistants. Finally, I landed in a crumpled heap in the gallery above the first Interments in the Historic Congressional Cemetery order of columns. The other riggers told me afterward that they ran down the steps and climbed out on the balcony expecting to find little more left of me than a small grease spot. But I wasn't dead, nor even badly hurt and was already trying to untwist and untangle myself when they arrived. My men took me to the superintendent's office and the doctor that they called couldn't find anything more the matter than a badly broken wrist. He set the wrist, but, as you can see, it is badly maimed and discolored to this day. The doctor said that it wasn't his fault and I guess it wasn't. He wanted me to go home, and not fuss around any more, and give the bones a chance to mend, but I just had to finish that little job -- and finished it that day, too!"

Albert Ports' determination, his absolute fearlessness and reliability, made him vastly useful around such a building as the Capitol. He had a sort of free license about the place, and a little room in the basement of the building was his own particular office by a grateful government in recognition of years of faithful service. It was down a winding stairway, and when he had conducted his visitor into the queer shaped little cell, he had many amusing tales to tell and relics to display. In a curious closet which he delighted to open up, his overalls hung next to a fine black dress suit. His son, who for years assisted the father in his perilous business, was the big item and tenderness of the older man's life. When this son died a year ago, Ports was heartbroken, and went gradually downhill until his sudden death the other week. He was taken ill in the little room he called his "home," beneath the big white dome, and before many minutes was dead.

One of the exhibits Ports kept in his "home" was a bit of dark blue cloth that he said was part of the coat that "the man who walked off the dome, and didn't live to talk about it," had on at the time of the occurrence. Ports seemed to find a particular fascination in this story -- perhaps because of the similarity to his own case. His history of the affair is interesting.

"It was in March, 1875, the next year after my fall. Nobody ever found out whether this man fell or jumped from the dome. Not long before Blondin had made every one sit up and take notice when he had crossed Niagara on a tight rope. Maybe the stranger had this in mind, maybe he had it too much in mind.

"For several days before he had been wandering around the Capitol taking in the sights and talking to the workmen and guards. He said his name was John McMahon, and that he was studying to be a priest. So when he remarked that he believed he had more faith than Peter, and could walk upon the water nobody paid much attention to him. The Capitol always has been and always will be a place for cranks, and unless they get troublesome nobody bothers them.

"On the morning that the accident occurred McMahon climbed to the top of the dome. As far as we know, it was his first visit there, and it certainly was his last. Wallace Chapman, now a messenger in the architect's office, was then the guard on duty in the dome. He had to attend to some business in the lower gallery, and when he went down the spiral stairs he left the man standing on the gallery -- the one directly under the goddess and just over the tholus.

"A few minutes later, Chapman said, he was horrified to see a dark mass flying past him, and there being no flying machines visible in those days, he knew something had happened sure enough. In a minute he heard a crash, as the man's body hit the roof just over the tympanum of the east front of the building. I was working in that part of the building, and, following the excitement, rushed with some other employees to the place where the body was lying. John R. French, who was then the sergeant-at-arms, was the first one there, and he and Chapman dragged the body from where it was dangling over the pediment.

"Well, we carried the body down into the crypt. Every bone was broken, and to this day there are inch-deep dents in the facing of the copper where the poor fellow struck.

Ports always wound off this story with a bit of humor that he thought extremely neat. He declared that four other persons had "taken leaps for life from the dome, because two ceremonies of marriage had been performed at that sublime altitude.

When anything special or unusual happened at the Capitol Ports appeared to be always in evidence. One of his amusing anecdotes dates back to the year 1888, when a man blew in one windy morning and asked to be directed to the dome stairway. On being accommodated he commenced his upward journey and continued as far as the second balcony. There he proceeded to divest himself of his clothes, which he arranged in an exceedingly neat pile. When he accomplished the task entirely, and to his satisfaction he retraced his steps rapidly, and, as lightly and gracefully as a deer, leaped blithely into the rotunda. It was just the time of day when sightseers and visitors abounded, and his entrance was before quite a good-sized audience. The guards and guides were paralyzed with utter amazement, refusing to credit their own eyes, and no effort was made to stop the airy stranger. Reaching the exact center of the rotunda, he poised Mercury-like, his right hand pointing aloft. Perhaps he was indicating where his clothes might be found. Perfectly useless orders were shouted by confused guards. Meanwhile the stranger posed and pointed.
In those days a little curio souvenir stand was located in the rotunda. Its owner was a little old lady, a well-known character in her day. On this occasion she appeared to be the only one who had any presence of mind for, seizing a remarkable raincoat that she kept tucked away at the bottom of her stand, she ran to the poseur and promptly enveloped him in its ample folds. This weird statue that had no place either in rotunda or hall of fame was hastily conveyed to shelter and obscurity. Somewhat later he was returned to Ohio and to the asylum in that state from which he had escaped.

Painting the Great Dome

Extensive Work in Progress at the Capitol

The great dome of the Capitol is receiving a coat of white paint, nine painters being engaged in the work. These human spiders, as they climb about the dizzy-heightened structure, attract much attention from those on terra firma. The exterior of the dome was last painted nine years ago. One thousand gallons of white paint are required to cover the exterior alone. The main or old Capitol section of the building will also soon appear in a new spring dress of snowy white. Another force of painters is engaged in painting the interior of the dome.

The intricate rigging on the outside of the dome was erected by Head Rigger Albert Ports, who several years ago performed the startling feat of standing erect with folded arms on the shoulders of the statue of Freedom which surmounts the dome. Mr. Ports ascended to his perilous perch on the statue while installing a temporary system of electric lights for use during a national celebration.

Swallowed Carbolic Acid

George F. Ports Dies on the Way to Hospital

George F. Ports, thirty-eight years of age, whose address was given the police as 424 1st street southeast, committed suicide last night about 9:30 o'clock by swallowing carbolic acid. He called at the house of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Sarah Webush, 488 L street southwest, last night and talked with her, his conversation indicating he was in a despondent mood. Shortly after leaving her he swallowed the poison. Mrs. Webush heard groans coming from the side alley at her house, and when she went out to investigate found her son-in-law in a dying condition.

The police of the fourth precinct were notified, and called the Emergency Hospital ambulance. He died shortly before the hospital was reached and his body was kept in the hospital morgue until this morning, when it was removed to the undertaking establishment of George P. Zurhorst, 301 East Capitol street. It is said by relatives that domestic troubles caused him to take his life.
Ports was employed at the Capitol as a laborer under his father, Thomas Ports, who has had charge of the laborers there for nearly forty years. It is stated that he was separated from his wife and that only a short while ago his three children were sent to a local institution through proceedings in the Juvenile Court. Arrangements have been made for the funeral to take place at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The interment will be a Congressional cemetery.

Boy Boatman Drowns
Hundreds See Swells From Steamer Upset Boat

Eight-year-old George Ports was drowned in the Potomac last evening, while hundreds of persons, passengers on the excursion steamer Queen Anne, looked on powerless to aid.

Swells from the big side-wheeler swamped a rowboat occupied by the lad and a companion, Irving Binnix, eleven years old. Binnix succeeded in reaching the sea wall near by, but Ports sank.

The boys had no oars for their skiff and they propelled it around the harbor with a board, until the Queen Anne came up the channel. The skiff was only ten feet from the sea wall, across the channel from the wharves, and the boys watched the big boat sweep past without thought of danger.

Soon he swells came. They caught the light skiff and began to rock it and then to toss it in the air. It swept toward the wall, and one of the last of the huge waves dashed it against the stones. As it dropped back with the receding water it sank, carrying down both boys. Binnix afterward said he looked for his playmate, but he latter never rose.

Most of the excursionists watched as if fascinated the death-dealing waves bearing down upon the tiny rowboat, but some of the passengers ran to Capt. Charles Raley, who in turn notified the harbor police.

No time was lost in going to the rescue, but the crews of several boats worked for two hours with the drags before the body was recovered. Coroner Nevitt decided that an inquest was not necessary and permitted the body to be turned over to an undertaker.

Young Ports lived with his grandfather at 488 L street southwest, and his relatives are making arrangements for the funeral. Binnix lives in the same block.

Pote, Mrs. Susannah
On October 14th, Susannah Pote, aged 26 years
Weep not for her, though death has set
His signet on her now,
And though the dw of death has wet
That pure and snowy brow.
'Tis better thus to see her lie
In calm, unbroken rest,
Than hear her breathe that trouble sigh,
And mark her heaving breast.
Affection's hand will strew with flowers
The spot that marks her rest;
And hallowed still will be those hours,
Her gentle presence blest.
The funeral will take place tomorrow (Thursday) afternoon, at 2 o'clock, from her mother's residence, on D street, between 13th and 13 1/2. The friends of the family are respectfully invited to attend.

Louis A. Potter, 83, Dies In Hospital
Deceased Was Long Employe of Government Printing Office and Active Church Worker
Louis A. Potter, 83 years old, employed in the Government Printing Office here from 1894 to 1922, died in Providence Hospital today after a short illness. Death was due to pneumonia. He was visiting his daughter Mrs. A.N. Mason of Brandywine, Md., when he became ill and was brought here to the hospital.

Mr. Potter was long active in church circles here for 27 years serving as a member of the board of stewards of Epworth Methodist Episcopal Church South. He resided at 422 Eighth street northeast until shortly after his retirement from the Government service.

Born in Beaufort, N.C. Mr. Potter had a colorful career. Due to conditions in his home town following the Civil War, he went West and settled in Phillipsburg, Kans., where in 1871 he was married to Miss Ella R. Fish of Oswego, N.Y. His wife died last August.

Mr. Potter was elected to the State Senate of North Carolina in 1892, serving for two years. He is survived by three sons, Van A. Potter of New York, Charles H. Potter of this city, and Louis A. Potter, jr., of Charleston, W.Va., and two daughters, Mrs. Mason of Brandywine, Md., and Mrs. J.J. Rives of Harrisonburg, Va.

Funeral services will be conducted in the Epworth Methodist Episcopal Church South, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment will be in Congressional Cemetery.

The National Intelligencer, July 13, 1835
From the Alexandria Gazette, Obituary
Samuel Cheslyn Potter -- To eulogize the sacred dead has immemorial custom for its authority, and justice for its object.

If respect and affection be due to the high moral virtues of the living, they are not the less so to departed worth. Memory cherishes with fond delight the recollection of such virtues. They are dear to our feelings and sacred in our estimation.

If the loss of beloved and valued friends, who, like the seared leaf of autumn have lived out their season, scarce ever fails to excite painful emotion, how much more must we feel in contemplating the loss of one who had hardly attained the summer of life? To say that the subject of this memoir was pre-eminentely generous and frank—that he possessed moral courage and lofty honor—an entire stranger to every selfish consideration—warm and affectionate in manners—prepossessing and polished—talented and learned—possessing a heart ever ready to feel, and a hand equally ready to relieve the unfortunate; are truths which none will deny, but all who know him can truly aver. Samuel Cheslyn Potter is no more! and yet, but a little while ago, he was in all the pride and beauty of youthful manhood. But, he lives, and ever will live, fresh in the love and respect of his numerous friends, whose tears for his untimely end, while they embalm his memory, will consecrate his many noble and manly qualities. This brief tribute of respect is paid his memory by one who knew him well and loved him more. S.

C.M. Whalen Admits Shooting Playmate
Believed Revolver Was Unloaded When He Aimed at George W. Powell, Twelve Years Old
Charles Michael Whalen, sixteen years old, in whose home, at 923 Maryland avenue southwest, George W. Powell, twelve years old, 923 C street southwest, was shot and killed yesterday afternoon, told the police, they say, that he fired the shot, which ended his playmate's life.

When Detective Keck and police of the fourth precinct visited the scene of the shooting they were told that young Powell had accidentally shot himself while handling the revolver, but later in the day, the police stated, the Whalen boy admitted the shooting.

Boys Were Amusing Themselves
The two boys and a companion were in the house, Whalen's father, a Baltimore and Ohio railroad conductor, was at work, and Mrs. Whalen was visiting at the home of her brother, not far away.

Young Whalen procured the weapon from a trunk in a room on the upper floor, broke it and, he thought, removed all the cartridges, but it developed that one cartridge was left in the pistol.

Going to the kitchen, Whalen is said to have pointed the weapon at his companion, feeling certain it was unloaded. The trigger was pulled and the bullet entered Powell's head just above the right eye, killing him almost instantly.

Whalen Summoned Help
Whalen summoned a physician from Emergency Hospital and also notified police of the fourth precinct of the shooting. Then he ran to the Powell home and told Mrs. Powell of what had happened.

Detectives Mansfield and Tormey of the fourth precinct heard Whalen's version of the affair placed him under arrest and took him to the house of detention. Powder marks on the dead boy's face convinced Coroner Nevitt that the weapon was held close to Powell's face when the shot was fired. An inquest will be held at the morgue this afternoon.

Death Held Accidental
Coroner's Jury Returns Verdict in Shooting of George Powell
A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury at an inquest held at the morgue Friday in the case of twelve-year-old George W. Powell of 923 C street southwest, who was shot and killed by Charles M. Whalen, sixteen years old, at the latter's home, 923 Maryland avenue southwest, Thursday afternoon.

"We believe his death due to an accident, the result of children playing with firearms," was the verdict.

Thirty minutes before the shooting the boys were playing in the back yard of the Whalen boy. Mrs. Etta Burnett told the jury that she saw the boys enjoying themselves and did not imagine the noise heard as the discharge of a weapon.
The first intimation of the tragedy was when she heard the Whalen youth call, "For God's sake, won't somebody come to me?" She responded to his call.

Myles Spence, a thirteen-year-old companion of the other boys, testified that young Whalen took the pistol from a trunk, and pointed at him before aiming at Powell. He pulled the trigger, thinking the revolver empty. The shot caused Powell's death.

"He took three cartridges from the pistol and thought he had taken out all four," Spence testified.

Counsel for young Whalen declared he thought it unnecessary for his client to make a statement.

Lucien W. Powell, Artist Dies at 84 From Double Pneumonia
Long Internationally Known for His Paintings of Landscapes
Friend, Mrs. John B. Henderson, 87, Also Patient at Sanitarium

Lucien Whiting Powell, eminent Washington artist, whose paintings are to be found wherever landscapes are admired, died in the Washington Sanitarium in Takoma Park at 8:25 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Powell, who was in his eighty-fourth year, had been at the institution since September 1. Double pneumonia developed from a lingering illness and proved fatal. His wife, a son and two daughters were with him when he died.

By coincidence, another person dear to the famous artist was near him at the end. Mrs. John B. Henderson, capital social leader, now 87, a long-time friend and ardent admirer, who has been his patron for many years, is a patient at the sanitarium. She visited with Mr. Powell briefly yesterday. Both seemed to realize that the end was near and as Mrs. Henderson left she kissed her friend good-bye.
Arrangements for the funeral had not been completed this morning at the Washington home of Mr. Powell, 1923 G street. In addition to his widow, he is survived by Mrs. Jessie Lewis Heiskell of Washington and Mrs. Frances Millott of Windber, Pa., daughters, and Lucien Fitzhugh Powell of Washington.

Many of the artist's paintings are to be found in Washington, but a large number are distributed throughout the world. Permanent exhibitions are in the Public Library, Congressional Club, American University and Georgetown University, which has a holy land collection. Mrs. Henderson possesses about 200 of his paintings, which comprise the largest private collection.

"The Afterglow," a picture of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, now in the Corcoran Gallery, and his painting, "Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone River," which hangs in the National Art Gallery, are especially well known. The Atlanta Museum of Art has a collection of his paintings. London art brokers distributed Mr. Powell's work to such advantage that he said on one occasion that "the sun never sets" on his pictures.

Native of Virginia

Known as a resident of Washington, Mr. Powell was a native of Virginia, and much of his work was done at his home in Loudon County. He was born December 13, 1846, at Levinworth Manor, Va., the estate of his father, John Levin Powell.

At 17 he fought in the Confederate Army with his brothers and after the Civil War journeyed to Philadelphia to study painting under Thomas Moran, master of canyon pictures. His studies took him to New York, Paris and London, and in later years to Italy and the Holy Land. In his travels he added color to his work, but he always regarded himself as an American painter of American subjects.

President Roosevelt was one of the first to recognize the worth of his work and he became one of a group of admirers which in years to come were to include many prominent men and women in this country and abroad.

The Powell family is of Welch origin. The Llandgollen estate at Upperville, Va., was granted to the family by the King of England about 1770. There in the historic hunting region, the Powells entertained George Washington and Lafayette on the 10,000 acre estate. The artist's uncle, Cuthbert Powell, made it his home for many years, and today the house which Washington and Lafayette knew stands on 1,000 acres of the original tract.

Three years ago 85 members of the "Powell clan" gathered at the estate for a family reunion and the distinguished artist member delivered an address. Last spring the property passed from the family to the ownership of John Hay Whitney, the grandson of the former Secretary of State, and yesterday Mr. Whitney took his bride the former Miss Elizabeth Altemus of Philadelphia to the estate which he had obtained as a bridal gift.

Was Godly Man

Mr. Powell did not have good health as a youth but he overcame this physical handicap. On the occasion of his eighty-first birthday anniversary, he said in an interview that he had had "a very wonderful life."

He commented that he was a Godly man, "God," he said, "exists in color, in love and in goodness." Throughout his travels, he said, he had been impressed by "God's mighty work in mountains and sea, in all things showing His handiwork, in flowers and landscapes and His goodness added to all this."

The Evening Star, September 28, 1930

Lucien Whiting Powell, eminent landscape painter of the Capital, who died yesterday after a long illness, will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery Tuesday morning.

Funeral services for the artist will be conducted at his studio residence, 1923 G street, by Rev. Hugh T. Stevenson, pastor of Bethany Baptist Church, at 10 o'clock. Upon reaching the cemetery, the funeral cortège will be given a military escort and the artist, who was a Confederate veteran of the Civil War, will be buried with a soldier's honor.

A native of Virginia, where he had maintained a home in which he did much of his work, Mr. Powell attained a fame in the art world which is testified to by the presence of his canvasses in virtually every section of the world. His art training, begun at Philadelphia, where he went following the Civil War, carried him to New York, Paris and London and, in later years, to the Holy Land and to Italy. Among the artist's first prominent... patrons was President Theodore Roosevelt, while one of his staunchest friends and patrons was Mrs. John B. Henderson, who today owns the largest single collection of his works, some 200 paintings.

Mr. Powell was stricken and was taken to the Washington Sanitarium, September 1. Double pneumonia developed and the master of landscape painting died at 8:25 o'clock yesterday morning. It happens that Mrs. Henderson herself is a patient in the same sanitarium and she was one of Mr. Powell's last visitors.

The artist is survived by his wife: two daughters, Mrs. Jessie Lewis Heiskell of Washington and Oxon Hill, Md., and Mrs. Frances Millott of Windber, Pa., and a son, Lucien Fitzhugh Powell of Washington.

  Mrs. Lucien Powell, Widow of Painter, Is Dead at 77
  Had Long Been Active In Red Cross and Church Work
  Mrs. Lucien Whiting Powell, 77, widow of the widely known landscape painter whose work is contained in many private and public art collections, including the Corcoran Gallery of Art, died yesterday afternoon at her residence, 5437 Connecticut avenue N.W., after a brief illness.

  She was president of the Ladies' Morning Auxiliary of Epiphany Church, where she recently had organized a unit of the American Red Cross. She had been active in Red Cross and church work for many years, and was a member of the Association for Preservation of Virginia Antiquities.

  Until she was stricken with cerebral hemorrhage a short time ago, Mrs. Powell had been in excellent health. Only last summer she traveled alone to England and Scotland, returning a few days before the war broke out. She had accompanied her husband on travels throughout the United States and Europe and to Palestine.

  Mrs. Powell, before her marriage, was Miss Nan Fitzhugh, a member of one of Virginia's oldest families. She was born in Loudoun County, Va., and at the time of her death still owned Powellton, an estate near Upperville, Va.

  Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Francis August Millot of Windber, Pa., and Mrs. Jesse Lewis Heiskell of Kildaire, near Oxon Hill, Md.; one son, Lucien Fitzhugh Powell of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. William H. Wanamaker of Washington.

  Funeral arrangements are to be made today.

Funeral from his late residence, 221 Pennsylvania avenue, Friday, November 4, at 2 o'clock p.m. Relatives and friends invited.

_Died at Eighty-Five_

William A. Powell, a retired member of the police force, died this morning. He had suffered from rheumatism for a number of years and was retired several years ago. He was about fifty years old and went on the force about 1869. Since his retirement from the police force he has kept a restaurant on Pennsylvania avenue.

Sudden Death of a Seaman

Thomas Pratt, seaman in the United States navy for the last thirty-four years, died on Saturday evening last on board the U.S. steamer Triara, lying at the navy yard, in this city. He came on board after a season of liberty which had been given him late in the evening and laid down on the battle deck forecastle and commended to vomit blood stating that he had been beaten outside the yard. Yesterday the coroner held an inquest when the jury returned a verdict that deceased came to his death from exposure and intoxication.

Prediger, Henry Frederick

d. 28 Nov 1894

Prediger. On November 28, 1894, at 10:20 o'clock, Henry F., beloved husband of Mary Prediger, in the 61st year of his age.

Gone from earthy; yes, gone forever.

Tear-dimmed eyes shall gaze in vain;

We shall hear his voice, oh, never,

Never more on earth again.

Home is sad, O God, how dreary;

Lonesome, lonesome every spot;

Listening for his voice till weary;

Weary, for we hear him not.

He was thoughtful, loving, tender

With us, each and every one.

How he suffered, but is now rejoicing--

His joy in heaven has just begun.

Funeral on Friday, November 30, at 3 o'clock p.m., from his late residence, 1009 South Carolina avenue southeast. Friends are invited to attend. Interment at Congressional cemetery. (Alexandria, Va. papers please copy)

Prediger, Mary

d. 30 Nov 1901

58 yrs.

Prediger. On Saturday, November 30, 1901, at 6:50 o'clock, Mary Prediger, beloved wife of the late Henry Prediger,

Day by day we saw her fade

And slowly sink away,

Yet in our hearts we prayed

That she might longer stay.

I was weeping around her pillow,

For I knew that she must die;

I was night within my bosom,

It was night within the sky.

I have given love's last token,

I have parted back her hair

From off the marble forehead

And left the last kiss there.

By Her Sons

Funeral from her late residence, 1009 South Carolina avenue southeast, Monday, December 2, at 2:30 o'clock. Relatives and friends invited to attend.

Preston, Anthony
b. 12 Apr 1792 - d. 3 May 1843
R41/152
Preston. At Baltimore on the 3rd instant, Mr. Anthony Preston of this city. His friends and acquaintances are invited to attend his funeral this afternoon at 3 o'clock from his late residence on 9th Street opposite the 4th Presbyterian Church.

This brings us to the Fourth Church, so named because of the much-to-be-deplored method of numerically naming our churches. It was the fourth organized in the City of Washington, the corporation of Georgetown being a separate municipality. He was organized by a little company of 23 people from the Second Church, which had just lost its pastor, Dr. Daniel Baker, and had failed to call Dr. Danforth, whom some desired. The meeting for organization was held in the home of Jacob Gideon and his wife Mary, on 7th Street. They were the outstanding figures, not only of that early time, but for many years afterwards. He and Anthony Preston, another of the men of that early time were not members of the church when it was organized, but from the beginning they were strong friends of the church, both financially and by the influence of their personal standing in the community.

p. 129 -- Jacob Gideon and Anthony Preston, neither of them at the time of the organization of the church, members of it, but both of them soon in its membership, and then elected to the Eldership and serving the church with singular fidelity and loving zeal. They gave each $1,000 for the new building …

_The Evening Star, Sept. 2, 1854_

Melancholy Event

We have to record today the most melancholy event that has occurred in our midst for years. Mr. Charles Preuss, surveyor and companion of Col. Fremont in the discovery of the best route to California, is no more. Some four years ago he was sun-struck in California, which more or less afflicted his mind ever since. About a week ago the malady became worse, derangement fully appearing when he was kept at home, and carefully attended to. Day before yesterday he walked out, and went to the penitentiary, where he asked the keeper to furnish him with a room. The keeper put him off in a kind manner, when he left the building, and no trace of him could be found until last evening, when his dead body was found back of the farm of Clark Mills, Esq., near Bladensburg. In his insanity he wandered away from home and perished there. Mr. Preuss was one of the most scientific men in his profession, and bore a most excellent character. His last trip was with Capt. Williamson, surveying a route for the Pacific railroad, during which he was afflicted with an attack consequent upon the first injuries received. He was a Prussian by birth, we understand, and leaves a deeply-afflicted wife and family and numerous warm friends to mourn the melancholy event.

| Preuss, Mary Augustus | d. 16 Feb 1859 | 5 yrs. | R96/139 |

Preuss. On the morning of the 16th inst., Mary Augustus, youngest child of Gertrude and the late Charles Preuss, in the 6th year of her age. The friends of the family are requested to attend her funeral tomorrow (Thursday) afternoon at 2 1/2 o'clock.

_Alas! Alas! I did not think
Amid past days of deep delight
That ought could break the golden link
That then between us seemed so bright.
We little dream what time may bring--
The hart is a mysterious thing;
A change came over this gentle brow,
And we are lonely without thee now._

Priddy, Mary E.
In this city, on Saturday, October 27, 1883, after a few days of severe suffering, caused by burning, Mary E., daughter of E. Clifford and Eliza Priddy, aged 4 years and 2 months.

In the death of this sprightly and loving child a fond father and mother have been brought to grief, and a happy home rendered desolate by the loss of one child's brightest jewels. Little Mamie was loved by all who knew her, for truly she was bright and interesting, and many are the tears, coupled with those of her heart-stricken parents, over her sudden and ruthless death. Weep not, parents, for your little one is safely housed in her Father's house, free from pain and suffering, where it is your privilege to meet her and join in giving praise to Him who hath said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Oh! hushed is now her prattle,
Mute now her lisping tongue,
And cold the form of loveliness
To which you fondly clung.
Friend.

A fondly clung.

The surgeon in charge of the ambulance pronounced the stricken man dead, and his body was removed to the morgue. Coroner Carr was summoned and gave a certificate of death, and subsequently an undertaker took charge of the body and removed it to the late home of the deceased.

His History Interesting
Mr. Pritchard was 56 years old, and had an interesting history. He was born in Fredericksburg, Va., where he spent his earlier days and received his education. At the breaking out of the war he was a Union sympathizer, and on this account he soon fell into the hands of the southern soldiers, and was taken to Richmond, where he was held as a prisoner. He was subsequently removed to Salisbury, N.C., where he was kept in prison with John Minor Botts, whose name figures so prominently in the history of Virginia. He and Mr. Botts were always close personal friends. The Salisbury prison was unable to hold Mr. Pritchard. He escaped and made his way to this city and called on President Lincoln. Hand in hand the President and Mr. Pritchard walked... from the White House to the Treasury Department, and the latter was given a lucrative position. It was not long after this appointment that he joined the Home Guards and went on duty to defend the city from a possible attack on the part of the confederates.

His position in the Treasury Department was held for a number of years, during which time he was anxious to get an appointment in his native state. During the term of the late President Arthur he succeeded in getting an appointment as postmaster at Fredericksburg, Va., and although many years had elapsed since he left there he found many of his old friends in the town to welcome him. The few years that he served in this position he frequently referred to as among the happiest of his life.

Afterward he was made postmaster at Lynchburg. When his term of office expired, then he returned to this city and resumed his business of dealing in real estate, in which he was very successful. A few years ago he married Miss Newton, a daughter of a former commissioner of agriculture.

Sketch of Prison Experiences

Only a few weeks since the deceased wrote an interesting sketch of his experiences in prison and his escape from Salisbury. This sketch he had intended to send to one of the magazines, but had neglected to do so. The deceased leaves a widow and one child.

Death of Mr. John C. Proctor

Mr. John C. Proctor, for the past two years local editor of the Critic; died last evening at his residence, corner of W and Boundary streets -- near the head of 9th street. Mr. Proctor had been in ill health for some months past, and on the 3d of July was seized with a severe bilious attack, which a few days ago assumed a typhus form. He was born May 26th, 1833, in Cavetown, Washington county, Md. He was raised on a farm, and at 17 years of age went to learn the printing business on the old "Hagerstown News," finishing his trade in this city with Mr. Alexander, in the first ward. In 1856 he returned to Hagerstown, but came back to Washington in the early part the war, married and settled here. He was for a time a member of The Star's reportorial corps, and subsequently was employed by the Philadelphia Press, and by the Republican, Chronicle and Critic, of this city, filling the position of city editor of the Chronicle and Critic. Under Mayor Bowen he was the treasurer of the public schools, and many of our teachers will remember the strict and careful manner in which he discharged the duties. He was for sometime a clerk in the Pension office. He was faithful and conscientious in whatever position he was placed. As a newspaper man he was an untiring and intelligent worker, kind, obliging and generous in disposition, and strong in this friendships. He had many friends, both in and out of the profession, who will sympathize with his bereaved family -- a widow and five children.

The Late John C. Proctor

A Meeting of the proprietors and employees of the "Critic" was held last evening to take action as to the death of the late John C. Proctor, for several years the city editor of the "Critic." Resolutions were adopted eulogizing the deceased and expressing sympathy with the afflicted family.

The members of the press of the District held a meeting at the "Critic" office yesterday afternoon for a similar purpose, and Mr. C.M. Barton, of the "Chronicle," presided, and Mr. John B. McCarthy, of the Baltimore "Sun," was elected secretary. Several brief addresses on the life and character of the deceased were made, and resolutions were adopted paying an appropriate tribute to his memory, expressing sympathy with his family, and resolving to attend his funeral this afternoon at 4 o'clock in a body. The following committee to represent the press at the funeral was appointed: -- A.J Clarke, "Chronicle;" T.C. Grey, "Star;" C.J. Spencer, "Critic;" James McNabb, Baltimore "Gazette;" John B. McCarthy, Baltimore "Sun;" E.A. Jacobs, "Sunday Herald;" E.W. Ward, "Forney's Sunday Chronicle;" G.W. Alexander, "Sunday Gazette;" B.G. Lovejoy, "Sunday Capital;" T.J. Brashears, "Daily News;" Hugh Coyle, "Daily Telegram;" Louis Schade, Washington "Sentinel;" Werner Rupp, Washington Journal;" H. P. Godwin, "National Republican."

The Evening Star, July 15, 1876

The Funeral of the late John C. Proctor, city editor of the "Critic," took place from his late residence yesterday afternoon. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends of the deceased, among them a number of representatives of the press, some of our prominent men, and a committee of Columbia Commandery, K.T. The remains were encased in a casket, on which was placed wreaths and other floral tributes of friends. Dr. J.G. Butler, of the Memorial Lutheran church, conducted the service, during which he spoke of the character of the deceased. The cortege proceeded to the Congressional Cemetery, where the remains were interred. The following Six Knights of Columbia Commandery, No. 2, acted as pallbearers: Thomas Foster, Wm. Rothwell, Thomas Thompson and Joseph F. Barker. At the grave Dr. Butler performed the final service, and the Templar service was performed by W.S. Fletcher, Eminent Commander; Mathew Trimble, Generalissimo; T. Langley, Prelate; and S.R. Barr, Warden.

Lifelong Resident of Capital Succumbs

Mrs. Mary A. Proctor, Seventy-Seven. Descendant of One of City's Oldest Families

Mrs. Mary A. Proctor, seventy-seven years old, lifelong resident of the National Capital and descended from one of Washington's oldest families, died early this morning at her home, 942 Florida avenue northwest, where she had resided for nearly half a century. She was taken ill Christmas day with bronchial asthma. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.
Mrs. Proctor was born March 24, 1839, in the old first ward, only a stone's throw from where her mother was born in 1811. On her mother's side she was descended from one of Washington's oldest families, being the granddaughter of John Hines, a revolutionary soldier, who, as Johannes Heintz, immigrated to the United States in 1751, settling in the District of Columbia shortly after its selection as the nation's capital. Mrs. Proctor was a grandniece of Christian Hines, who in 1866 published his "Early Recollections of Washington City." On her father's side she was the great-granddaughter of Samuel Davison, who was commodore of the Pennsylvania state navy at the time of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Wife of Reporter for the Star

October 9, 1856, Mrs. Proctor was married to John C. Proctor of Hagerstown, Md., announcement of which appeared in The Star the following day. Shortly afterward Mr. Proctor became a reporter on The Star. He subsequently served as Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Public Ledger and city editor of the National Republican of this city.

Mrs. Proctor was a woman of a cheerful disposition and had a host of friends. She was one of the original members of the Memorial Lutheran Church and was a member of Cathedral Chapter, No. 14, Order of the Eastern Star.

A son and a daughter, John Clagett Proctor and Mrs. Albert E. Stephens, both of this city, as well as grandchildren and great-grandchildren are living.

Prophet | d. 16 Apr 1859 | 55 | R63/147

On Saturday last, a brave named "Pa-ser-ich-kwa," or Prophet, died at the Juniata House, in this city of pneumonia. He was one of the delegation of Winnebagoes with which the treaty has just been concluded by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Chas. E. Mix, Esq. Prophet was probably about 55 years of age and was a brave and active warrior. He was with the war party of Winnebagoes who under Wah-con-de-cor-ah took part with the whites in the Black Hawk war, and took that chief prisoner. His title of "Prophet" was given him by the whites, for what cause we are not informed. He was buried yesterday at the Congressional burial ground, and the funeral was numerously attended. The ceremony was simple and brief, and the slice of his brother chiefs better expressed their grief than language could have done. Among those present at the funeral we observed Senator Rice, Commissioner Mix, of the Indian Bureau, nearly all the clerks employed in that Bureau, the Superintendent. Agents and interpreters now in the city and a number of distinguished gentlemen connected with the General Government. This death will delay the departure of the Indians until tomorrow or next day, and they evince deep feeling on account of their loss having occurred so far from their homes.

<td>On Tuesday, a number of ladies and gentlemen of the Sixth Ward spent the day picnicing in Magruder's woods, over the Eastern Branch, and about sunset started homewards in two omnibuses, all in high glee and spirits. The driver of one of the buses drove at a rapid rate, and attempted to cut off some of the distance by taking a new road, when the wheels of the vehicle passed over a stump, jostling the driver from the box, and injuring him slightly, as also Mr. Crause, a musician, who was badly bruised about the head, and Mr. C. Prosperi, who was thrown forcibly on the ground, and one of the wheels of the bus passed over his left thigh, bruising it to such an extent as to confine him to his house. A colored man, who was lying on the top of the vehicle at the time, escaped being thrown off, buts child of Mr. Henry Bright was jostled out of the window of the carriage, and badly bruised in the face, as was also Mrs. Bright, who jumped out immediately after. The body of the omnibus became detached from the coupling, but rested on the springs, and the horses dashed off down the hill towards the bridge, the ladies screaming and some fainting at the time, and for a time the greatest consternation prevailed; but fortunately just before they reached the bridge, Lieut. Stanton, of the V.R.C., (a nephew of the Secretary of War,) seeing the horses without a driver, made a desperate effort, and succeeded in turning the lead horse, thus stopping the coach, when all inside were momentarily expected to be hurled into the branch just before them. Several others were bruised, among them Mr. W.A. Marks, Mrs. Hodges, Miss Alice Russell, Mrs. Marks, and Frank Walsh.</td>

Another Old Citizen Gone

Mr. Francis Prosperi died at his residence, No. 712 G street southeast, this morning, aged 84 years. He was born in Pisa, in the grand duchy of Tuscany, and came to this country on board the frigate Constellation in 1817, and had been in the service of the United States ever since as a musician, having been for a long time connected with the West Point band, and for the last 35 years a member of the marine band of this city.

The Evening Star, December 23, 1872

The Funeral of the Late Francis Prosperi, for many years attached to the marine band, took place from his late residence 712 G street southeast, yesterday afternoon, and was very largely attended. His remains were interred in the Congressional cemetery, followed by the full marine band and a company of marines, who fired the usual volley over the grave.

The Evening Star, December 26, 1872

The will of the late Francis Prosperi has been filed in the probate court. He bequeathes:

"To my sons James, Frederick, Charles, John, Francis, and Augustus, and to my daughters Aspacia Edwards, Julia Ann Terry, Ann Maria Cross, and Mary Elizabeth Walton, one dollar each, and the remainder of my estate to my beloved wife for her use forever."

Prosperi's Cornet Band

It is not generally known that this Band is a portion of the celebrated Marine Band, which is the case, Prof. Prosperi being at the head of the same. They give particular attention to engagements for playing at military parades, meetings, serenades, etc., when not on duty at the Barracks, and have ample supplies of new and old pieces, which they render with fine and satisfactory execution. All their instruments are of brass, and they are fast becoming a striking musical feature of the city.

Serenades last night

Prof. Prosperi's fine band were out again last evening on a series of serenades, their first being a musical compliment to a lady at Gadsby's Hotel, who received them with the encouraging smiles of woman, and her friends and "mine host" gave them a cordial welcome. Thence they proceeded to the residence of Capt. L. Towers, of the National Greys, where he and his family were waked up with sweet sounds, and the gallant Captain extended his hospitalities with a noble band. Returning, the band stopped in front of the house of Mr. B. Schad, and having played a few airs, were suddenly invited in to a splendid oyster supper, served up in alcoves, German form, where each party could enjoy themselves in their own way. It was a happy venue, and indeed the whole thee serenades were of gleeful interest. Mr. W. Harris sang Washington's Grave and Napoleon's Grave with fine effect, as he always does, and the various parties enjoyed the evening in a rich, musical and pleasant way.

The Evening Star, January 3, 1881

Prof. Fred. Prosperi, late leader of the orchestra of the National Theater died at his residence in East Washington yesterday morning from a throat affection. He was a member of the Marine band for thirty-four years, having entered the corps in 1840 at the age of six years. His father was a noted musician, and his brothers who survive him are attached to the Marine band. As a piccolo and flute player Prosperi was widely known. He was a fine violinist and good composer and arranger of music. He left the Marine band some years ago, when Schneider was made leader, a position which many thought should have been given to Prosperi from his long service and known musical ability. He leaves a wife and children. The funeral will take place from his late residence, No. 615 G street southeast, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Columbia Historical Society, Volume 4

In the very earliest days of the city, William Prout was one of the most conspicuous of our citizens. Besides being one of the original proprietors of the land constituting a large portion of the Navy Yard section, he was a gentleman of high character, and thoroughly identified with the advancement of his section of the city. He was born in 1753, was married to Miss Sarah Slater, of Prince George's County, Maryland, and died in Washington in 1823, leaving three sons--Jonathan, William and Robert, a clergyman, and two daughters, Mrs. Martha H. McKnight and Mrs. Henry Bradley. The dwelling of Mr. Prout is no longer standing. It was near the Eighth Street entrance of the Navy Yard.

William Prout gave the land where the present Christ Church stands. One of 19 landowners who signed the March 31, 1791 agreement to convey land for the federal city.

Major Pruden Ill

At Garfield Hospital Suffering From Organic Disease of Heart

Major O.L. Pruden, assistant secretary to the President of the United States, was removed today from his home, 604 Massachusetts avenue, to the Garfield Hospital. Major Pruden is suffering from an organic disease of the heart.

He is in a dangerous condition and it is believed by his friends that he cannot survive very long. He has been in poor health for several months and has steadfastly ignored the fact, and has remained away from his duties at the White House only during the last three or four days. This has greatly aggravated the original trouble.

Major Pruden Dead

Was Assistant Secretary to the President

Had Served at the White House for Twenty-Nine Years

Funeral to be Monday

Major Octavius L. Pruden, assistant secretary to the President, and a friend and adviser of many Presidents, all of whom liked and respected him, died at 3:12 o'clock this morning at Garfield Hospital, where he was taken about ten days ago. Death resulted from a complication of troubles, but the gravest was a heart affection. Major Pruden had not been in good health for several years, but declined to go away for a rest, although advised to do so by physicians and friends. He remained at his post at the White House up to about two weeks ago and performed his duties.

When he was taken sick he was roaming at the Arlington, but he was at once removed to the Garfield Hospital, where every care and attention was given him until the end came.

Mr. Chas. M. Hendley, his brother-in-law, came on from New York as soon as he received notice of the death and had the body removed to his house, 1216 L street northwest. Funeral services will be held at Trinity P.E. Church, corner 3d and C streets northwest, Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. R.P. Williams, the rector, officiating.

Widespread Sorrow

The genuine sorrow caused by the death of Major Pruden will be felt outside of Washington. His years of service at the White House had made him thousands of friends away from this city, who remembered him with affection and pleasure. His kindly disposition, conservative manner and open-hearted friendship, not only made him hosts of friends, but endeared him to those who came in contact with him. At the White House this morning there was a feeling of profound sorrow among the staff of men with whom Major Pruden worked. There was a test of the man, and among those who knew him intimately and were acquainted with his whole life there is nothing but regret at his death. "He was a noble, big-hearted fellow, full of kindness, thoughtful and considerate," was the way one of the men spoke of him this morning, and all the others felt the same way. In and out of the building many times a day, passing and repassing his co-workers and comrades, there was always the same genial, gentle thoughtfulness of those around him. If he ever felt bitterness to another it was never expressed, and when he did not speak good of a fellow-man he said nothing. This attitude characterized him in his dealings outside of the White House. In his family and in the circle of friends beyond official life he was found to measure well up to the full requirements of life.

Major Pruden's confidential work at the White House for many years naturally gave to him a retiring disposition during his official hours that followed him to some extent in his private life, but it in no way obscured those characteristics that made and retained friends for him.

His Long and Active Career

Major Octavius Longworth Pruden was born in Dover, N.J., March 29, 1842. From boyhood he was a good penman and this was one reason that led to his selection by President Hayes, in 1877, as assistant secretary in the preparation of nominations, social programs, data, etc. At the outbreak of the civil war Major Pruden enlisted as a private in a New Jersey regiment. He was later given a commission in a colored regiment, but did not care to accept it. He was soon after placed in the judge advocate general's office of the War Department in a clerical position, serving there until 1873, when he was detailed to the White House as a clerk. President Hayes, as stated, promoted him and assigned him regularly to the White House rolls as executive clerk. He had remained there ever since. He served four years in that capacity and twenty-five years as assistant secretary, and during all that period had taken to the Capitol the papers and messages of the Presidents. His was a familiar figure in the House and Senate. Until last December, Major Pruden had always copied the annual messages of the Presidents for presentation to Congress. His handwriting was so plain and perfect that so long as the custom existed of sending the President's message to the Senate in that form the work was done by Major Pruden. He copied and arranged the messages after they had been written by the Presidents.

Much of the social work of the White House--such as preparing the lists of guests to important functions, seating them at tables in the order of precedence, and such delicate things as this--was done by Major Pruden. Many a great dinner that required the most intimate knowledge of diplomatic etiquette and the precedence of seating at the table was arranged by Major Pruden. The cards at the plates bore the names in his handwriting. He did this for the dinner to Prince Henry given by President Roosevelt, and he did all these things, like everything else, well. Devotion and faithfulness to duty were among the virtues he possessed.

President McKinly appointed Major Pruden a paymaster in the regular army, with the rank of Major, in April of 1901, but because his duties would take him away from Washington, he declined the position and was reappointed to his old position, which he had vacated for only a short time.

Major Pruden's wife, who had been Miss Worrell of this city, died twelve years ago. He is survived by two children, Howard Pruden, his son, was recently appointed superintendent of mails in Porto Rico, and his daughter, Mrs. Eva Stratton, is a resident of this city.

Funeral of O.L. Pruden
Remains Placed at Rest Today in Congressional Cemetery

The funeral services over the remains of Major Octavius L. Pruden, late assistant secretary to the President, were held at 3 o'clock this afternoon in Trinity Episcopal Church, corner of 3d and C streets northwest, Rev. Richard P. Williams, the rector, officiating. The services consisted of the full Episcopal burial rites, and were largely attended. Music was furnished by a quartet from the church choir under the direction of Mr. William A. Kirkpatrick.

The remains were interred in Congressional cemetery, being followed to the burial grounds by the relatives of the deceased and a number of friends. The following were the honorary pallbearers: Mr. J.S. Stoddard, Mr. William H. Crook, Mr. Warren S. young, Mr. J.D. Franzoni and Mr. J.D. McChesney of Washington and Mr. Anson S.P. Segur of New York. Mr. Crook and Mr. Young were chosen from the White House staff. They had worked side by side with Maj. Pruden for many years.

There were many beautiful floral offerings, including pieces from the White House, one of the most elegant being from attaches of the executive mansion. The President also sent a magnificent wreath. There was a handsome wreath from Secretary and Mrs. Cortelyou, another from Col. Benjamin F. Bingham, floral tributes from Lafayette and Mount Vernon Masonic lodges and many others from private parties. The large piece from the attaches of the White House bore a card containing a photograph of the grounds as they looked when Major Pruden entered on duty at that place 29 years ago.

Mr. Howard M. Pruden, a son of the deceased, is superintendent of the mails at San Juan, Porto Rico, and owing to the unfortunate steamer service he could not reach Washington in time for the funeral.

Major Pruden's Estate
Letters of Administration Issued to His Son

Justice Barnard, in the Probate Court, today ordered that letters of Administration on the estate of the late Major Octavius L. Pruden, who was one of the secretaries to the President, be issued to Howard M. Pruden, son of the deceased.

The court was informed in a petition for the issue of the letters, signed by Howard M. Pruden and his sister, Mrs. Eva E. Strattan, that Major Pruden, who died the 19th instant, did not leave a will. The estate, it is said, consists of personal effects and jewelry and a policy of life insurance for $10,000. The heirs at law and next of kin are the son and daughter mentioned, they being of full age.

Maj. Pruden an Artist
The late Major O.L. Pruden, who was one of the assistant secretaries to the President and over whose grave in old Congressional cemetery summer plants in rich profusion bloom today, was an ardent lover of flowers and often lingered in the White House conservatory. Major Pruden was a water color artist of no slight merit and passed many hours in delineating on cardboard and canvas the flowers he loved best.

He had a taste for picturing even the simplest to the most ornate of beautiful blossoms, and excellent "counterfeit presentments" he produced. His fancy ran all the way from the modest golden dandelion to the embellished orchid. Both Mrs. Cleveland and Mrs. Harrison were ardent admirers of Pruden's handiwork, and to both of these ladies he frequently made presents of finely delineated floral pictures in water color.

Now Major Pruden
Assistant Secretary to the President Commissioned Made a Paymaster in the United States Army --
Sketch of His Career
The President, before leaving Washington today, signed the commission of Mr. O.L. Pruden, one of his assistant secretaries, to be a major and paymaster in the United States army.

The appointment of Mr. Pruden to this position will give gratification to a great many people in all parts of the country, and will be hailed with delight by citizens of Washington and public men generally. Probably no man holding a minor official position is so well known to public men as Major Pruden. He has been identified with the executive staff of the White House for nearly thirty years, and in that time has come in personal contact with the most prominent men of all parties in Congress and the various administrations.

Major Pruden has been trusted with the secrets of the White House since the days of Grant, and has received the confidence of every President. No one knows better than the newspaper men that Major Pruden has never betrayed the confidence, and yet he possesses the warm friendship of all the correspondents in the corps. He has always "played fair" with those who came for information and never misled an applicant for news.

In recent years Major Pruden has delivered the messages of the Presidents to Congress, and his figure has been a familiar one about the Capitol.

Major Pruden enlisted as a private in the 11th Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, in August, 1862. He served about two years at brigade and department headquarters, when he was discharged from military service to accept a civil appointment in the office of the judge advocate general of the army. He remained in this office until December 1872, when the resignation of General Horace Porter made a vacancy in the office of the President.

March 4, 1873, the beginning of the second term of President Grant, he was appointed executive clerk to the President, and held this office until the beginning of President Hayes' administration, when he was appointed assistant secretary to the President, which place he has held up to the present time.

Maj. Pruden Leaves the Army
The interesting announcement was made at the White House today that Major O.L. Pruden had resigned his position as assistant paymaster in the army and had been reappointed to his old position as assistant secretary to the President. Major Pruden will resume his duties at the White House without delay. His reappointment will be a general surprise.

When Major Pruden was appointed in the army and a vacancy was created at the White House the assistant secretaryship was offered to the late Adelbert Hay, who had accepted the offer. Mr. Hay's untimely death left the position unfilled and there was some pressure for it. As Major Pruden, for personal and business reasons, did not find the army to his liking he was appointed to fill the vacancy that had been made by himself.

Major Pruden's friends are congratulating him on his return to his old post which he filled so creditably for many years.

Telephoning in Mr. Pruden's Name

Some excitement was created at the Senate last Tuesday by a telephone message purporting to come from Mr. Pruden, the assistant secretary to the President, and to be addressed to Senator Peffer, stating that the President did not want the nomination of Mr. Glick acted upon the, and requesting Senator Peffer to have it passed over. The message was sent over the telephone located in the business office of The Evening Star. Inquiry soon showed that Mr. Pruden had not sent it, and that it was sent by a man who entered The Star office during a busy time of the day, and going to the telephone which is in a public place, rang up the sergeant-at-arms' office and sent the message in question. It is claimed that the man who sent the message was a Kansas man named Thurston, who was desirous of defeating the Glick nomination. His plans, however, failed.

A Sad Accident

A Son of Mr. O.L. Pruden Run Over and Killed in a Harvest Field

A sad accident occurred yesterday afternoon on a farm near Arlington, Va., resulting in the death of Willie Pruden, the sixteen-year-old son of Mr. O.L. Pruden, the President's assistant secretary. He has been for several days in a visit to a schoolmate named Bailey, on the farm of the latter's father near Arlington. Yesterday at about 3 o'clock the boys were out in an oat field where the harvesters were carrying the grain from the field. A wagon had just been loaded, young Bailey was on top holding the reins and trying to help Pruden climb up the slippery sides of the load. Both fell and the horses started off. The wheels of the wagon passed over Pruden's body and grazed Bailey's head. The former got up and walked to the house, about one hundred years away, telling the folks that he was hurt. He felt but little pain and was going up stairs when he fell and was carried to a sofa. He did not seem much injured and lay quietly talking to those around him while they were waiting for the arrival of a physician, when he suddenly, without a sound expired. The death was caused by an internal hemorrhage. The body was taken as soon as possible to the residence of Mr. Pruden, 317 11th street southwest. The funeral will probably take place on Monday. The deceased was a bright, quiet boy, well liked by all his companions, and advancing well in his school work.

Runaway Causes Death

Ernest Pruitt, Employed at Home for Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains, Killed

Ernest Pruitt, thirty-five years old, employed as driver at the Home for the Aged and Infirm, Blue Plains, opposite Alexandria, was killed in a runaway accident on the grounds of the institution this morning. George W. Hanes, plumber, at 1111 H street northwest, who was superintending plumbing work in a new building at the institution, witnessed the accident and took Pruitt to Casualty Hospital. Life was extinct when the hospital was reached, and the body was placed in the hospital morgue.

It is stated Pruitt, who was driving a horse attached to a heavy farm cart, dropped his lines and the horse ran away. He made an effort to regain the lines and was thrown from the shafts of the cart, one wheel of the vehicle passing over his body.

Witnesses to the affair say that Pruitt was thrown some distance into the air before he landed in front of the cart. Both his legs were crushed and he sustained internal injuries which caused his death.

Coroner Nevitt viewed the body and gave a certificate of accidental death. He deemed an inquest unnecessary.

Talbot Pulizzi, Amateur Actor, Retired Government Employe
Talbot Ogden Pulizzi, an amateur actor and retired Government employee, died Sunday at his home, 3912 Harrison street N.W., after a brief illness. He would have been 88 next month.

An amateur actor who specialized in Shakespearean parts, Mr. Pulizzi was a member of the old Lawrence Barrett Dramatic Club. He had appeared in numerous plays here. Until about five years ago, he annually recited the Gettysburg Address at the Fort Stevens Memorial Day ceremonies.

Mr. Pulizzi was the greatgrandson of Count Felizzi Pulizzi, a Sicilian nobleman, who with his family fled from Sicily in the late 18th Century. Count Pulizzi joined the Marines and became the third leader of the Marine Band, changing the band from a fife and drum corps to an instrumental organization.

Mr. Pulizzi's paternal grandfather, Maj. Venerando Pulizzi, was commandant of the Marine Barracks here, and his aternal grandfather, Ira Goodnow, was doorkeeper of the House of Representatives during the 37th Congress.

Mr. Pulizzi was the son of the late Army Capt Venerando T. Pulizzi, an escort to Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Pulizzi was born and educated in Washington. He was a Federal surveyor in Kansas as a young man. In 1888, he joined the Coast and Geodetic Survey. He was aboard the Hydrographer, a small Government boat that checked soundings and buoys on coastal waters of the East.

Friends in the survey named an island off the coast of Alaska for Mr. Pulizzi.

Mr. Pulizzi was employed in the Bureau of Chemistry of the Food and Drug Administration when he retired in 1933.

He was a member of the Corcoran Cadets and was a past chancellor of Rathburn Superior Lodge No. 29, Knights of Pythias.

Survivors are his daughter, Mrs. Joseph H. Bien, and his sister, Miss Blanche L. Pulizzi, retired principal of Janney School, both of the Harrison street address.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p.m. tomorrow in the Robert A. Pumphrey funeral home, Bethesda. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Death Follows a Fall

Venerando Pulizzi, who was alleged to be suffering from alcoholism and heart disease, was locked up at the first precinct police station yesterday afternoon. Shortly before 4 o'clock he fell from the iron bench in his cell and sustained injuries and shock which caused his death a few minutes later.

Mr. Pulizzi was 69 years old and lived at 2224 F street northwest. He was arrested about 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and charged with intoxication and disorderly conduct. Two hours after his arrest he was seen standing against the iron grating. He asked that he be released. Policeman Kleindinst advised him to take a seat and remain quiet. He did as advised, but had hardly reached the bench before he toppled over and fell to the floor. The patrol wagon was brought out and he was hurried to the Emergency Hospital, but life was extinct when the hospital was reached.

Acting Coroner Glazebrook made a partial investigation of the case last night. He was told that Mr. Pulizzi had been treated at the Emergency Hospital a number of times during the past two years. He decided that death was caused by heart disease, the fatal attack being hastened by the fall. He directed that the body be turned over to Undertaker Schippert.

The acting coroner completed his investigation of the case today, and gave a certificate of death from natural causes. The funeral of Mr. Pulizzi will take place from the chapel at Schippert's undertaking establishment, 2008 Pennsylvania avenue, at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The interment will be at Congressional cemetery.

Since Father in the grave must lie.

Dear father how you gaze on us
And struggle for your breath,
We never knew, our darling father,
How terrible was your death.

We thought him dying when he slept,
And sleeping when he died,
For when the morn came dim and said
And chilled with early showers,
His quiet eyelids closed, he had

Merchant of Washington, Dies

Beloved By Trade for Readiness to Aid Beginners

Native of New York But Lived Here Last 50 Years

E.J. Pullman, pioneer among local photographers, a resident of Washington for more than half a century, died at his apartment, 420 9th street, yesterday, where he had lived for the past twenty-five years over his photographic supply house.

Mr. Pullman came here when Washington knew virtually nothing about paved streets, trolley cars and concrete sidewalks. He was the oldest photographers in the city.

Beloved by the trade, there are scores of local photographers here who owe their start to him. Whenever a man wanted to start a business, his friends say, provided the applicant was of good bearing and reputation, all he had to do was to stock up at the expense of "E.J." as Mr. Pullman was known, and not worry about the money.

Born in New York

Born on the shores of Lake Erie in New York state. Mr. Pullman received his rudimentary education in schools of that state and a degree at Oberlin University, Ohio, where he later was a professor. After his arrival in Washington during the civil war crisis, he set up what is believed to have been the first photographic show in the city, and according to local photographers, sold the first camera brought to this city.

Later he studied law at the old National Law School, and was admitted to the bar, but never took up active practice. He devoted his time to research work in photographic lines and to the conduct of his business.

His first shop was located on the third floor of 935 Pennsylvania avenue. He stayed there for twenty-five years, removing to the present 9th street location.

Was Ill Four Months

For the past four months Mr. Pullman had been in ill health, and to friends and intimates the approach of the end was indicated. Mr. Pullman is survived by a widow, Mrs. Emma Pullman, who was his second wife, and two children by a first wife -- E.H. Pullman and Mrs. Olive Pullman Kefauver.

He was a thirty-third degree Mason of the United States jurisdiction and a member of the Mystic Shrine. Active in Masonic circles, he also was a civic worker and a member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants.

Funeral services will be conducted next Monday from Wright's undertaking establishment, at 10th and O streets. The funeral will be in charge of the Masonic fraternity.
Screams of fire from the third-story window of No. 935 Pennsylvania avenue about 6:30 o'clock this morning was the sensational beginning of a chapter of exciting incidents. Mr. E.J. Pullman, the well-known photographer, and his wife and daughter were in their apartments in the third story of the building at the time, and they escaped from the burning building with considerable difficulty and only after assistance had reached them. Mrs. Pullman had got out of bed but a few minutes before the fire started and her husband and daughter were still sleeping when her screams aroused them. Mr. Pullman was on the third floor, while the daughter, Miss Ollile Pullman, a young lady eighteen years old, was in her room on the floor above.

Where the Fire Started
The fire started in a small room on the third floor, where there was a quantity of ether and other chemicals, and it took but a short while for the flames to cut off the only avenue of escape.

Owing to the nature of the material in the photograph gallery and supply room it was evident that the inmates of the rooms above were in great danger, and Mrs. Pullman well understood her perilous position. After arousing her husband and daughter she screamed from the front window for help. Although so early in the morning it took but a few minutes for a large crowd to appear, but they seemed to be overcome by the condition of affairs in the burning building and Mrs. Pullman saw no evidence of an attempt on the part of those in the street to lend assistance. Seconds to her seemed as hours, but No. 2 Engine Company responded to a call for help before an alarm had been turned in, and just four minutes after they left the house an alarm was sounded from box No. 152.

Mr. Matchett Goes to Work
In the meantime the screams of Mrs. Pullman had attracted the attention of Mr. H.B. Matchett, the printer at 10th street and Pennsylvania avenue, who did such good work rescuing persons from the Star building fire, and he hastened to the scene of the conflagration. Arriving there he discovered that the crowd was doing nothing to help the imprisoned persons, and so he set at work without delay to rescue them if possible.

He went to Ellis' music store, adjoining the burning building, for the purpose of breaking open the door, so that he could get to one of the upper floors. "Don't do that," the crowd shouted, but the printer, seeing that the only means of doing any good, broke open the door and ran to the upper floor.

In a Perilous Position
By this time Mr. and Mrs. Pullman were at the front windows, with the flames only a short distance from them. It was getting warmer and warmer for them and in a short time Mrs. Pullman knew she would have to make a leap to the sidewalk if some one did not reach her. Such a leap meant sure death, but there was no other alternative. While the husband wife were at these windows the daughter was at the window on the floor above them. She, too, was in an exceedingly dangerous position. If she should leap she would have twelve or fifteen feet further to fall than would her parents, but the flames had reached her room and something had to be done, and there was but a short time in which to do it.

Miss Pullman's Rescue
Mr. Matchett proved her mascot, for he appeared at the window of the adjoining building and by stepping out on the fancy work of the building he reached over and took the young lady by the hand. It was a dangerous place and a critical moment, but she made the journey in safety and entered the Ellis building through the window.

Having succeeded in the rescue of the daughter, Mr. Matchett proceeded to the floor below to do what he could for the older people. Mrs. Pullman was at the window next to the Ellis building, while Mr. Pullman was on the sill of the middle window. No. 2 Engine Company had arrived. It seemed like half an hour to Mrs. Pullman before the life line was taken off the hose carriage.

Mr. And Mrs. Pullman Get The Line
The fireman with the line hastened through the door of the Ellis building, which Mr. Matchett had broken open, and between Mr. Matchett and the firemen the life line was handed to both Mr. and Mrs. Pullman.
They managed to fasten the line about their waists and were ready to jump or get away from the flames in the best possible manner, for by this time the heat was intense. At the window where Mr. Pullman was, the flames had begun to touch the moldings. He drew himself out on the window sill and closed the window behind him, hoping to be able to keep off the flames until a ladder could be raised upon which he could descend to the pavement.

A Jump for Life
"Don't jump," shouted the crowd, excitedly, but behind him the window glass was breaking from the intense heat and the flames were scorching his beard. He could stand it no longer, and in the absence of a ladder he made a leap for life.
Fortunately he did not go all the way to the sidewalk, but landed over the front door, where the sign, awning and cornice make a narrow landing. From there it was a comparatively easy task to reach the pavement.

A Pet Dog Saved
During the exciting and trying times, Mrs. Pullman did not forget to save her pet dog, which she handed across to Mr. Matchett, and although shouts of "Throw him out the window" were heard Mr. Matchett gently handed the canine in the window and again turned his attention to Mrs. Pullman.

Suspended By A Rope
The rope around her waist was securely fastened, as it must have been to hold her, for she is a heavy woman, weighing not far short of 200 pounds. The flames had about reached her, and in the absence of any better way of escaping them she dropped from the window sill and was held, suspended in the air by Mr. Matchett and the firemen. The rope was slackened as speedily as possible, until Mrs. Pullman was landed on the little portico over the windows. She was not badly injured, but the excitement was almost more than she could bear.

There being no further danger of loss of human life the minds of the crowd and firemen were at ease and the firemen soon had the building flooded with water and succeeded in confining the flames to the rooms occupied by the Pullmans. All of their rooms in the front part of the building were completely gutted, but, strange to say, several purses and ocket books in which there was money were found in the debris with the money not destroyed. Mr. John F. Sexton aided in the rescue of the Pullmans.

Howard Wright, a fireman, member of No. 6 company, did some good work in saving more than $3,000 worth of diamond jewelry, which he turned over to Mrs Pullman. On the third floor of the building were the offices and rooms of Messrs. Ira H. Johannes, manufacturing jeweler, and Charles B. Bacon, plate printer. In the former establishment the floor was wet, but no damage was done, while in Mr Bacon's considerable work was rendered valueless by the water.

Damage to Mr. Teel's Stock
With the exception of Mr. Pullman, the principal damage was done to Mr. Teel's furnishing store, on the ground floor. Almost the entire stock was soaked with water, which had been poured through the ceiling, and Mr. Teel moved about in the store beneath an umbrella answering questions and telephone calls. The damage to his stock he estimated at between $5,000 and $7,000, which is fully insured.

Mr. Pullman has lived in that building for twenty years nad has never had his place insured. The damage to his household effect sna dfurniture will amount to several thousand dollars, although he said today that he could not estimate the damage.

The building also suffered considerable damage although it is possible that none of the walls will have to be taken down.

Complaint Against the Fire Department
About the burned building loud complaints were made about the time of the arrival of the fire department and of the manner in which they worked after arriving there.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Pullman complain that the firemen were slow in reaching the burning building, and Mr. Pullman thought that the damage would not have amounted to more than $50 had the department made a prompt response and done effectual work. They also complained that the ladder was worked ineffectually and slowly and that it was partially raised and lowered several times before the firemen finally succeeded in getting it to the window, which was after they had jumped. Concerning Mr. Matchett's work they were loud in their praises, Mrs. Pullman declaring that he saved their lives.

Chief Parris and Mr. Pullman had a lively tilt over the affair, during which language more forcible than elegant was used and although it appeared at one time that their discussion would end in something worse, no violence was attempted.

What The Firemen Say
On the part of the firemen it is claimed that No. 2 company went out on a local at 6:40, and that truck C was on its way out of the house when the alarm sounded at 6:44.

The firemen think that they should not be condemned for what they did, as they do not think any time was lost or that their work was ineffectual. They claim credit for assisting Mrs. Pullman from the building, a s their life line was used and they were there to use it. In this connection they give Mr. Matchett credit for assisting them.
Chief Parris ordered the foreman of No. 2 Engine Company and truck C to have affidavits made concerning the work done at the fire and turn them over to him tomorrow.

Mr. E.F. Simpson, who saw the fire from its breaking out, said the engine company took a long time in getting to work, and it seemed to him at least ten minutes before a ladder was run up. An effort was made, he said, to put up a ladder at the rear, but the perfect network of wires prevented.

Sudden Death of Mrs. Pullman
Was It a Case of Suicide

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Pullman, the wife of Mr. E.J. Pullman, the photographer, residing at and doing business in the upper part of house 935 Pennsylvania avenue was discovered dead in her bed. It is supposed that her death was the result of suicide. Mrs. Pullman had attended the theater the evening before, and arose rather late in the morning, but with the exception of complaining of a slight headache and fatigue she was apparently in good health and spirits during the day. In the afternoon she retired to a bedroom upstairs and laid down telling her children, as was afterwards learned, not to disturb her. Mr. Pullman having a friend visiting him during the afternoon and with him for some time, and towards evening sent his youngest child, aged about 5 years of age, to call her mother. The little one returned, stating that she could not get into her mother's room. Mr. Pullman after a little time, went to the room and knocked and getting no answer, supposed his wife was asleep, and returned to the room below. In a half hour or so he went to the room again, and failing to get a response to his knocks and calls he pushed the door hard when the catch flew off and he went in. Here he found Mrs. Pullman lying dead with her face on the bed. She was holding a handkerchief in her hand, and her face, especially about the mouth was somewhat discolored. Dr. Patterson, the coroner, was at once sent for and noticed an odor of prussic acid, which is one of the elements of cyanide used in the photographer's art. Mrs. Pullman was a remarkably handsome woman, a twin-sister of Mrs. J. Orville Johnson and Lieut. M.A. Austin, of the police. She was about 37 years old and leaves two children, a boy of 9 and a girl 5 years of age.

Dr. Patterson, the coroner, today made an examination and came to the conclusion that death was caused by poison, but whether administered intentionally or not, there was no means of knowing. The circumstances point to the drug having been taken accidentally.

Raymond W. Pullman

Death has taken, in Raymond W. Pullman, one of the younger Washingtonians of exceptional usefulness in the community and of unusual promise for future value to the District. A resident here since infancy, he was thoroughly identified with Washington, knew it well, and loved it. After an active career in newspaper work, in the course of which he contributed to The Star's columns, he was appointed by the District Commissioners as chief of police, to which office he devoted himself with characteristic vigor and thoroughness. Maj. Pullman's selection to head the local police department was a departure from the ordinary course. It was justified, however, by his faithful and intelligent discharge of duty and by his adoption of progressive methods. He had difficulties, as has every man in such a position. But he met them courageously and solved them and Washington had confidence in his integrity and his capacity in every crisis. His death is a shocking loss. He fought bravely for his life, and his final message was characteristic of his devotion to a high ideal of conduct which he had unvaryingly observed in his comparatively short span of years.

Maj. Ray Pullman Falls Victim to Double Pneumonia
Youngest Police Chief Loses in Desperate Fight for Life

Maj. Raymond Wellington Pullman, youngest police chief in the history of Washington, lost a vigorous fight with double pneumonia and died at 8:05 o'clock last night.

Death came suddenly. It was preceded by two days of intense anxiety. Maj. Pullman had rallied during Sunday, and attending physicians were optimistic an hour before the end. A clot of blood formed in the lungs shortly before 8 o'clock, suffocation ensued and he died within fifteen minutes.

Funeral Tomorrow Afternoon

Six police captains will act as pallbearers at the funeral, which will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the Church of the Reformation, on B street between 2d and 3d streets southeast.

Maj. Pullman will be buried in uniform. Although the body will be placed in the church at 1 o'clock, the services will not commence until two hours later. During the interval, friends of the late police chief will be allowed to view the body.

Services will be conducted by Rev. John Weidley, pastor, assisted by Rev. Charles Wood, pastor of the Church of the Covenant. Policemen will form the official escort of the body during the procession from the church to the Congressional Cemetery, where interment will be made.

Officers and members of the Home Defense League have been requested to attend the services by Director Odell S. Smith.

The pallbearers will be Capts. Flathers, Williams, Hartley, Lord, Judge and Falvey.

At his deathbed were his parents, a few friends and Drs. Wilbur H.R. Brandenburg and Henry F. Sawtelle. Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle, head of the women's bureau of the police department, was at his home, 55 Ivy street southeast at the time.

Was Ill Eight Days

During the severe weather of Saturday week. Maj. Pullman took a trip to New York city and suffered a cold, which eventually led to death. On Monday, following his return, he was confined at his home with influenza. Later in the week, double pneumonia developed.

At noon, Saturday, Maj. Pullman told the physicians at his bedside that he believed he could not hold out much longer. Dr. James Kilroy informed him that all outside assistance had been given and that the fight rested with himself.

Throughout Saturday night and Sunday he battled with death. His only losing fight, it was said, while he was a police chief, was his last one.

Commissioner Brownlow was immediately informed of Maj. Pullman's death. Less than an hour had elapsed before he was at the District building, straightening the details of the administration for the carrying on of police business.

Took Up Duties April, 1915
At the age of thirty-two, Maj. Pullman was appointed chief of police. He assumed office on April 1, 1915, succeeding Maj. Richard Sylvester, coming direct from newspaper work.

During his tenure of office, some of the most difficult problems in Washington's history of police administration confronted the youngest police chief.

War came, bringing its problematic issues of public protection during the absence of fighting men. The only triple murder in the history of Washington was committed, and cleared up, although it involved possible complications with China. A madman murdered a girl, terrorized Washington and was captured by the police, under Maj. Pullman's guidance, in a week's time. Radicalism broke out, the assassination of a high cabinet official was attempted. Race hostility spurted into a flame and was smothered. Prohibition came and brought in its wake bootleggers and lawbreakers to be accounted for.
National attention was attracted when Dr. Theodore T. Wong and two assistants, representing the official educational delegation from China to the United States, were murdered in January 1919. Maj. Pullman sent detectives to New York, brought back the murderer, and worked for several days before securing a confession. The confession and evidence gathered by the police department secured conviction. During this work Maj. Pullman was assured of the cooperation of the Chinese legation, thus avoiding the think ice of international complications.

The vigorous attacks of the police department upon the bootlegging traffic brought praise from many quarters and blame from a few. Some criticism was made for the placing of too many policemen on the "bootleg cordon" around the city of Washington.

It became known at a later date, although it was not generally circulated, that the strength of the "bootleg cordon" and anti-whisky runners' guard was exaggerated and that the numbers were overestimated. Maj. Pullman did not deny the reports, but it was declared at the time, by men in positions to know, that no serious defect was felt by the placement of the guards on the roads leading to the District. The criticism could have been swept aside in an instant, it was declared, by the production of actual statistics showing the number guarding the District line.

First Woman Policeman

It was under the administration of Maj. Pullman that Washington saw the first women policemen. Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle was placed in charge of a bureau for the particular attention to the prevention of crime among the sex. The idea since has been followed in many large cities throughout the country.

The automobile also came into its greatest prominence as an aid to police work during the recent administration. During the race riots and the chase for the "maniac" streets were combed by automobiles. Under Howard Fisk and automobile auxiliary of the police department was organized, and from the police headquarters machines were directed to every section of the city on the slightest disturbance, from the centralization points at the various points.

Maj. Pullman entered police work with a theoretic knowledge of police administration. During his term he added practice to theory, and took up the scientific study of social conditions.

Home Defense League

Crime prevention formed one of the basic topics of his work. This was principally evidence in the formation of the Home Defense League for the auxiliary protection of the city during the war. This branch was also called into service during emergencies following the war, and it was under this branch that the automobile squadron of the police department was organized.

During pressing emergencies he was at the scene of trouble. He worked often until midnight and 1 o'clock in the morning and followed up with an early appearance at police headquarters.

For his men and the public evidence of his thoughtfulness, was brought to the front several times. When Congress was considering a raise in pay for the policemen, it was Maj. Pullman who was its strongest supporter.

Came Here When Two Years Old

Although born in Virginia, Maj. Pullman lived practically all of his life in Washington, his parents having removed to this city from their farm in Fairfax county when he was two years old.

He was graduated from Business High School in 1903, having been captain of Company E of the High School Cadets, editor of the Business High School paper and publisher of the first issue of the Orange and Blue, the school's annual. After graduation he was for a time a teacher in the public night schools and served about two years as a teacher in the Jefferson and Greenleaf schools.

His first business experience was in the advertising and business office of a local printing company, where he remained about six months, leaving to take a position as a reporter on a Washington paper.

Later he was chief of publicity and in charge of the office of information of the forest service under Gifford Pinchet. He handled the publicity for the White House conference on the care of dependent children during the last Roosevelt administration; directed a syndicate letter describing the duties and manner of administering governmental departments, and was Washington correspondent for several large out-of-town newspapers.

Appointment a Surprise

Maj. Pullman's appointment to the position of superintendent of police came as a complete surprise to members of the force, his name not having been mentioned in connecting with the position until his name had been decided upon by the District Commissioners as successor to Maj. Richard Sylvester, retired.

It was urged by disappointed candidates for the position that Maj. Pullman's lack of police experience would militate against him, not knowing he had long displayed an interest in civic and police affairs and had studied police systems of this and other countries, and today his superior officers look upon him as having made an excellent commanding officer.

In his administration he succeeded in largely increasing the size of the force which, it is stated, was the smallest of any large city in the world. He also succeeded in getting increased pay for members of the force.

Having served as captain of high school cadets, Maj. Pullman possessed knowledge of the military side of life which enabled him to take an active part in military matters while the war with Germany was in progress. He held frequent conferences with men high up in war counsels and, it is stated, valuable suggestions he made were adopted, one of them being the protection of the District water supply.

Studied Traffic Problems

Early in his police administration Maj. Pullman gave increased interest to traffic problems, working to reduce street accidents, and succeeded in interesting his entire command in such problems. He revised the practice of holding frequent meetings of his officers, and made effective numerous changes in administrative methods.

Maj. Pullman also revived target practice in the department, anxious to have every member of the force able to take care of himself in cases of emergency, planned a course of instruction in first aid work and imparted information on methods of having his men keep physically fit.

It is believed no other police official in this or any other country gave so much time to his official duties as did Maj. Pullman. He was constantly in communication with officials of the department, seldom relinquishing his work until long after midnight and frequently answering calls after retiring. On occasions of public functions, big fires or interesting investigations of police problems, he was much in evidence, working with his men and taking part in the work of questioning prisoners in more important cases.

Fought "Dry" Law Violators

Maj. Pullman waged a relentless war on violators of the liquor and gambling laws, and appointed a vice squad to look after instances of immorality. The work of this squad was supplemented by the woman's bureau, a branch of the service which has operate din an effort to protect young girls and women.

Throughout the period of the war with Germany, Maj. Pullman, it is stated, taxed his physical condition to the limit. He was up early and late, and, it is stated, spent as much time assisting agents of the federal government as he did to his own department. It is thought his strenuous work during that period, coupled with the fact that he has since enjoyed no lengthy vacation, made it easier for his last attack of illness to gain so strong a hold on him and preventing him from making a successful fight against it.

Mr. Brownlow's Tribute to Raymond W. Pullman

"If there ever was a man who sought to serve wholeheartedly his community it was Raymond W. Pullman."

This was the tribute paid the superintendent of police today by Louis Brownlow, chairman of the board of Commissioners.

Commissioner Brownlow, who counted Maj. Pullman as one of his closest personal friends as well as an associate official, said he was too grief-stricken to express properly his high regard for the former head of the police department.

"I have never known a man in public life," said the Commissioner, "who was as sincere and conscientious in the conduct of his office as was Maj. Pullman."

On Duty Day and Night
"During the long months in which the United States was at war Maj. Pullman, regardless of his own comfort, worked night and day with his men in protecting government officials, guarding federal property and in performing countless other tasks incident to the war."

"It is doubtful if the head of any police department ever faced in five years problems such as were placed upon the police department of the National Capital during the war and in the days that have followed. And through this trying period Raymond Pullman directed his men in a way that will stand out in the history of the Washington police."

"His death is a distinct loss to the police department and to the city, which he served so faithfully."

Message to the Police

The following message from Commissioner Brownlow to the members of the force was printed in the morning police bulletin:

"It is my sad duty to announce the death of Maj. Raymond W. Pullman, who for nearly five years has commanded the metropolitan police force of the District of Columbia."

"A courageous officer and efficient administrator, a loyal friend and a Christian gentleman, has gone to his reward."

The Evening Star, February 23, 1920

Words of Sympathy From Other Cities

The first message of sympathy received from an outside police department came from Chief F.C. Roach of Jacksonville, Fla., an officer of the International Association of Police Chiefs, of which Maj. Pullman was third vice president. It read: "Please tender to the bereaved family and the city of Washington my sincere sympathy at the death of Maj. Pullman, whose death is recorded in a morning paper. See that a floral offering is purchased in the name of the International Association of Police Chiefs."

Commissioner Brownlow received the following message from F.H. Bugher, former deputy police commissioner of New York:

"I was shocked to hear of Maj. Pullman's death. Please express to his relatives my deep sympathy for them in their great sorrow. The citizens of Washington have lost an honorable and fearless public official. Please advise time and date of funeral."

The Evening Star, February 23, 1920

High Tribute Is Paid By Attorney Laskey

"Mr. Pullman was an energetic, progressive and clean public official," Mr. Laskey said. "His devotion to duty cost him his life, and I am in a position to know that his administration of his important office was highly efficient."

"The community which he served so well has suffered a distinct loss in his untimely death."

Faithful, Efficient, Says Mr. MacFarland

"No one ever served the National Capital more faithfully," declared Henry B.F. MacFarland, former District Commissioner, speaking of Maj. Pullman. "He was a most conscientious, energetic and effective superintendent of police. His death is a great loss to the community."

Throngs Attend Funeral Services For Maj. Pullman

With scores of local and national government officials, representatives of local organizations and officials of leading associations of the city, together with hundreds of friends in attendance, funeral services for Maj. Raymond W. Pullman, chief of police, are being held this afternoon at the Church of the Reformation, on B street between 2d and 3d streets southeast, under the auspices of the police department. It was in this church that Maj. Pullman was once Sunday school superintendent.
Six police captains are pallbearers. A police detail in charge of Inspector Francis E. Cross is in charge. The detail consists of four captains, two lieutenants, eight sergeants and 120 privates. Rev. John Weidley is officiating at the services, assisted by Rev. Charles Wood pastor of the Church of the Covenant.

At a meeting of Kallipolis Grotto yesterday afternoon a message of condolence to the family was adopted and a floral tribute sent. Maj. Pullman's father, P.R. Pullman, is past monarch of the grotto.

Quartet Sings at Services
In compliance with a request made by Maj. Pullman when he realized that death was coming, the funeral services included singing by James K. Young, Milton J. Fillius, Ambrose Durkin and Edward L. Hutchinson. Durkin and Young are employes of the police department, the latter acting as special personal clerk to Maj. Pullman during several years past.

Hundreds of messages and scores of floral contributions were received at the Pullman residence yesterday and today.

Among the messages was a telegram from the President of the United States. It was addressed to Mr. and Mrs. P.R. Pullman, and read: "The news of your son's death came as a shock to me, and Mrs. Wilson and I unite in assuring you of our deep sympathy in your great loss."

Commissioner Brownlow today received a telegram from Richard Sylvester, former superintendent of police, whom Maj. Pullman succeeded in office.

Maj. Sylvester asked Mr. Brownlow to express his feeling of sympathy at the death of the young police chief. He is now at Wilmington, Del.

Another message was from Mgr. C.F. Thomas, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, who wrote of Maj. Pullman as an upright man as well as a capable police official.

Other letters of sympathy were received by the Commissioners from Italian Consul Salvatore Floria, Representative Anderson H. Walters of Pennsylvania and A. Brylawski, local theater man.

 Came to Pay Last Honor
During the two hours from 1 o'clock until the opening of services, while the body was lying in state in the church, the pews were filed with friends and admirers of the late police chief, who came to pay last respects.

A wire reached this city last night from Boston expressing the regret with which the news of the death of Maj. Pullman was heard by high officials of motion picture companies. William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Business, declared that the death of Maj. Pullman, "ended a career which was essentially and typically American."

Mr. Brady appointed the following committee to attend the funeral today: Adolph Zukas, Lewis Selznick, Harry M. Crandall, John C. Flinn, Charles C. Pittjohn, Oscar A. Price, Frank B. Wilson, Frederick H. Elliott and Jack S. Connolly.

District building employees were notified this morning that in case any one wished to attend the funeral leave of absence would be granted from 2 o'clock on. Officials of the departments of the District government met at the church at 2 o'clock and attended the funeral in a body.

 Flags at Half-Staff
At the request of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, flags on business houses throughout the city were at half-staff this afternoon as a tribute to the memory of Maj. Pullman. The association also sent a huge floral piece as a tribute. A meeting of the board of governors on Thursday is expected to take additional action.

The District of Columbia Police Court adjourned shortly after noon today out of respect to the memory of Maj. Pullman.

The Associated Charities is represented at the funeral by Dr. George M. Kober, George H. Wilson and Secretary Walter S. Ufford.

The active pallbearers are Capts. Flather, Williams, Lord, Falvey, Hartley and Judge. The honorary pallbearers include: Secretary of War Baker, Secretary of the DNavv Daniels, Secretary of the Interior Lane, Judge F.L. Siddons, Commissioners Brownlow and Kutz, Maj. Oliver P. Newman, Ben L. Prince, Robert W. Woolley, Conrade H. Syme, John E. Laskey, Paul Wooton, Ralph Burton, Charles F. Nesbit, A. Bruce Interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

Garrison Pays Tribute to Pullman as Comrade

The advisory council of the President's Own Garrison, No. 104, Army and Navy Union, of which Maj. Raymond W. Pullman was an honorary member, met last night at the garrison in G.A.R. Hall and adopted resolutions to the memory of Comrade Pullman. Tribute to his fidelity to duty, patriotism, loyalty and stanch friendship was paid, emphasis being laid upon the fact that "Comrade Pullman, like a soldier, died in the line of duty, deserving of all the honors and commendation as representative citizen, and who by his unceasing efforts contributed to the peace and good order of the National Capital in the war period, holding in check, through his police, the nation's enemies resident here or in the city." The advisory council consists of Capt. J. Walter Mitchell, Capt. William J. Peak and Lieut. W.B. Doron, U.S.A.

Resolutions on Death of Maj. Pullman Voted

Resolution of condolence and sympathy for the parents of the late Maj. Raymond W. Pullman, superintendent of police, were adopted at a meeting of present and former police reporters of local papers, held yesterday afternoon at the police headquarters press room.

A copy of the resolutions will be sent to the parents of Maj. Pullman and a copy to the District Commissioners, with the request that it be filed with the municipal records as a portion of Maj. Pullman's administration documents.

Attendants at this meeting had been in close personal touch with the chief of police during emergencies. A floral tribute to the memory of Maj. Pullman was ordered. E.C.R. Humphires of The Star presided and offered the resolutions which were adopted. Capt. J. Walter Mitchell of the Herald acted as secretary. Among those attending were: B.N. Timmons of teh Post, E.J. Duffy of the Times, R.H. May of the Herald, V.F. Callahan of the Times, F.L. Sartwell of the Post, James Norbert Doyle of the Times, Daniel S. Ring of The Star, Robert L. Pritchard of the Times, Philip A. Orme of the Post, James F. Ring of the Herold and Gorman M. Hendricks of the Post.

Police Court Adjourns As Mark of Respect

On motion of Assistant District Attorney Ralph Given at 12:30 today the Untied States branch of the Police Court was adjourned as a mark of respect to the memory of Maj. Pullman, late superintendent of police, and the court officials and attaches are attending the funeral in a body, having met at 2d street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Mr. Given, in making the motion, said:

"It seems to me that it is no more than proper that as an evidence of the honor and respect in which we held the late superintendent of police that this court should adjourn.

"Although we may have differed as to his administrative policy in some points, his work as the head of the police department stood out eminently as a guiding hand of a Christian gentleman, who advocated justice and right, administering the duties of his office without fear or favor, and to the best interests of the community. I feel that in the death of Raymond Pullman the community has sustained a serious loss and the police department a more serious loss.

"As a police official his services to the community were equally valuable as if he had sacrificed his life on the battlefield."

Judge McMahon in ordering the adjournment of the court said: "I agree with the assistant district attorney in all that he has said. Maj. Pullman was a capable official and a true friend. He rendered to the city a service that will brighten the pages of the history of the police department. I feel that he gave up his life in the incessant discharge of his duty as he saw it."

Shortly after the adjournment of the United States branch, Judge Hardison adjourned the District branch. He declared that he wished to take this action as a tribute to the memory of a man who stood high in the regard of the community and whose character as a man of integrity, fidelity to duty and diligence as a police chief was known throughout the city.
Memorial exercises for the late Raymond Pullman, superintendent of police, were held by the faculty and alumni of Business High School yesterday afternoon. The meeting was attended by the upper classes. Brief talks were made by Allan Davis, principal who presided; Arthur C. Houghton, vice president of the alumni association; Dr. A.L. Howard, for the faculty; William Weston and Mrs. Arthur Houghton. Maj. Pullman was a member of the class of 1902 and captain of Company E cadets in his senior year.

Maj. Pullman, superintendent of police, suffering from an attack of double pneumonia, last night was still making a fight for recovery. Several times during the day his attendants thought Maj. Pullman could live but a few minutes. He responded, however, to the powerful stimulants administered by attending physicians.

At noon yesterday the patient's condition was such that he told one of the surgeons he felt that he had lost his fight against death.

For a few minutes it appeared to the surgeons that the end was not far off. Not only were the patient's lungs affected, but his heart action was weak and his breathing labored.

Early last night the patient's color was somewhat improved and he seemed to be a trifle stronger, and shortly before midnight it was said he had lost practically no ground since late afternoon.

Police surgeons who have been in attendance since it became known that Maj. Pullman was suffering from pneumonia, spent the greater part of yesterday at the Pullman home. It was arranged that one or more of them would be on hand throughout last night.

William P. Eno, director of the Home Defense League, was host at a reception at his home, 1771 N street northwest, last night, in honor of Maj. Raymond W. Pullman, chief of police, and Mrs. Arthur Spingard, director of women's work of the police department. The reception was to introduce Mrs. Spingard and her aids to the men and women of Washington who are interested in local welfare problems.

Among the guests were Judge Anne Selleps, first woman judge of the District Juvenile Court, and Mrs. Susie Root Rhodes, first woman head of the District playgrounds department. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw made a brief address on the recognition of women, Mrs. Frances M. Ehle assisted Mr. Eno in receiving the guests.

Maj. Raymond W. Pullman is today observing the completion of his first year as superintendent of Washington’s police department. The occasion was not overlooked by his friends, many of whom called at his office to extend congratulations. The District Commissioners also were among those to proffer felicitations. During his term of office Maj. Pullman has inaugurated many changes in the administrative machinery of the department.

He has planned and put in operation a course in first-aid work, revived revolver practice, worked out a new system of reports on every assignment given in the detective bureau and revived the weekly conferences with commanding officers of precincts.

Under his direction the department has given increased attention to traffic problems, while every man on the force has been permitted to confer with the head of the department concerning any matter of interest which he might wish to lay before the major and superintendent.

Major and Superintendent of Police, advising the Lodge of the arrest of -----, colored, whom they had every reason to believe was the murderer of Past Master Charles A. Stockett. A wire reached this city last night from Boston expressing the regret with which the news of the death of Maj. Pullman was heard by high officials of motion picture companies. William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the...
Motion Picture Business declared that the death of Maj. Pullman "ended a career which was essentially and typically American."

Mr Brady appointed the following committee to attend the funeral today: Adolph Zuker, Lewis Selznick, Harry m. Crandall, John C. Flinn, Charles C. Pittijohn, Oscar A. Price, Frank R. Wilson, Frederick H. Elliott and Jack S. Connolly.

District building employees were notified this morning that in case any one wished to attend the funeral, leave of absence would be granted from 2 o'clock on. Officials of the departments of the District government met at the church at 2 o'clock and attended the funeral in a body.

An Interesting Washington Marriage
Most of our twenty thousand readers in this city will be gratified to learn, that a day or two since our old and universally known fellow citizen, Mr. Levi Pumphrey, led to the hymenial alter Mrs. Ellen Sweeting, the widow of the late Henry Sweeting. Mr. Sweeting, it will be remembered; was for many years the kind and popular host of the Virginia House, on C street, next to the livery stable which friend Pumphrey has kept in that quarter for, perhaps, a quarter of a century or so. We are sure this excellent couple have the heartiest wishes of their many friends and acquaintances in Washington and the surrounding country, for long years of happiness as man and wife.

Found Dead Today
Sad Ending to Ida Suit's Short Career
Daughter of James Pumphrey
Asphyxiated in a Disreputable House This Morning
Inquest Necessary
A woman clad in her nightdress, with a heavy robe thrown carelessly about her walked into the fourth precinct police station this morning about 6 o'clock and notified the officer on duty that there was a dying woman in Belle White's house of ill-fame, on B street. Illuminating gas, she said, had rendered the woman unconscious and a physician was wanted. Dr. Child was soon found and although he worked on the asphyxiated woman, he failed to get her in a condition in which she showed any signs of life. Later in the day Sergeant Daley learned that the woman was Ida Suit, a divorced woman, daughter of James W. Pumphrey, the retired livery stable keeper, who lives at 477 C street. She was about twenty-eight years old and handsome.

During her younger days Ida Pumphrey was not only handsome, but was well proportioned, and her neat figure made her an unusually attractive woman. Several years ago, it is said, she married Arthur Suit, and was afterward divorced from him. Since then she has lived at her father's home. She was a young woman of a lively disposition, and it was suspected by some of her acquaintances that her mode of life would bring her to a sad ending sooner or later.

Last evening while the snow was falling and the wind blowing there came a knock on the door of Belle White's gilded palace and this unfortunate woman and a male companion were ushered in and shown a room on the upper floor. The man who was with her was a comparatively young man of heavy build. He wore a light suit of clothes and his general appearance gave the impression that he was a German.

It was early in the evening when the couple appeared at the house and the man left some time about midnight. Before he left the house, he was asked to pay the room rent, which he did not do, but told the proprietress that the woman would pay the bill. When the couple reached the house they appeared as if they had been drinking, the woman being worse off than her companion, but this caused no uneasiness, for it is a frequent occurrence for such people to be under the influence of liquor. For this reason no attention was paid to the woman, and it was not until 6 o'clock this morning that Belle White knew there was something wrong.

Found Dead

The odor of escaping gas then attracted her attention and when she went to the room she found the woman in her night robe lying across the bed. In the room there was a bottle of whisky, only a small portion of its contents having been removed. There was a gas stove in the room that had been used early in the evening, but there was no light in the stove and the gas was turned on.

Such was the condition of affairs when the proprietress of the house reached the room.

As already stated, the police were summoned, and Dr. Childs was soon at the woman's bedside.

Clue to Identity

When he had determined beyond doubt that the woman's life was extinct the police looked about the room for evidence of identity, and found pinned to the collar of her undergarment a pawn ticket. This Sergt. Daley took to Burnstine's pawn shop, and there he learned that the woman had pawned an article of jewelry under the name of "Annie Suit," and her residence was given as 477 C street.

When the officer called at the house and saw the woman's mother she exclaimed: "That's my daughter Ida."

She went to the house in South Washington, where she identified the body of the dead woman as that of her daughter.

Undertaker J. William Lee was sent for and he took charge of the body and removed it to his establishment on Pennsylvania avenue. This was done by direction of the coroner, and an autopsy is to be made at 4 o'clock.

A rumor to the effect that foul means had been employed in the case was set afloat in police circles, but the investigation made by the officer failed to reveal anything of this nature.

The identity of the man who went with the woman to the house is not known, but in police circles this afternoon it was stated that the man is probably a prominent merchant.

The Evening Star, January 4, 1895

The Suit Case

In the case of the woman, Ida Suit, who was found dead in the house of Belle White on B street southwest, yesterday as published in yesterday's Star, the autopsy showed that death resulted from the inhalation of gas. Coroner Hammett decided that an inquest was unnecessary and gave a certificate of death.

|                    | James W. Pumphrey, long a prominent and active business man of Washington, died this morning at 8:50 o'clock at his residence, 477 C street, after a short illness, Mr. Pumphrey was a native of Washington, born here September 12, 1832, and had lived here all his life. He was connected with the livery business for many years, and an important incident in his career for which he was in no way responsible, was the circumstance that from his stables on C street northwest John Wilkes Booth engaged the horse upon which he rode to the rear of Ford's Theater prior to the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln and on which he afterward escaped into Maryland, where he met his death.

The spurs which John Wilkes Booth wore on this expedition were borrowed from Mr. Pumphrey, although the latter had no knowledge of the purpose for which the assassin intended to employ them. For some time after this tragic event Mr. Pumphrey was under surveillance, and was not relieved until after the trial and conviction of the parties who were accused of association with John Wilkes Booth in the assassination. At the end of these trying times Mr. Pumphrey, who had already been acquitted by the courts, was also acquitted in popular estimation and continued for many years in his original business.

He was active, energetic, and very charitable in each and every walk of life. He had during life many friends which he continued to hold until his end.

Booth Alone Responsible

While Mr. Pumphrey was identified in a striking manner with the great closing tragedy of the civil war, he always held, and his views were believed; that the idea of assassination arose in the mind of Booth alone, and that all the others who were accused of participation in that sad event were influenced by that peculiar and erratic character. He exhibited the deepest sympathy for Mrs. Surrat, whom he regarded as wholly innocent of participation, and it is said he sat mounted on his horse for hours waiting in the hope of having the privilege of carrying President Andrew Johnson's reprieve to Mrs. Surrat, then imprisoned and afterward executed at the arsenal in this city.

Mr. Pumphrey often told his friends that his only connection with the Lincoln conspiracy was that he lost his horse. Booth had taken from the Pumphrey stables the horse which he rode to Ford's Theater, which was waiting for him, and on which he rode away to Maryland; and it is said the horse was afterward killed by Harold, Booth's companion, after escaping into Maryland, to avoid detection and capture.

Mr. Pumphrey was for some time under arrest, in common with almost everybody that knew anything about, or had any possible connection with this incident of American history, but, as stated, he was at the time, and has since been, absolved of all connection with that lamentable occurrence.

Mr. Pumphrey will be buried from his late residence, 477 C street northwest, on Monday, but the hour has not yet been fixed. He leaves a widow and six surviving children, one son, Mr. Perry Pumphrey, and five daughters.

Funeral of J.W. Pumphrey

Services Held at Family Residence Late This Afternoon

The remains of James W. Pumphrey, long a prominent and active business man of this city, whose death occurred Friday morning at his home, 477 C street, were buried this afternoon in the Congressional cemetery. The services at the house took place at 3 o'clock and were conducted by Rev. Richard P. Williams, pastor of Trinity Episcopal Church, 3d and C streets northwest. The pallbearers were Messrs. J.M. Hill, J.J. Burn, Thomas Watson, William Lee, and two representatives of the Oldest Inhabitants' Association.

Mr. Pumphrey, who was a native of Washington, was born September 12, 1832, and has lived here all his life. He has been connected with the livery business for many years. Mr. Pumphrey's wife and six children -- one son, Mr. Percy Pumphrey, and five daughters -- survive him.

Mr. Pumphrey's Gas Economizer

How He Was Victimized by a New Invention

James W. Pumphrey, the well-known livery stable man, of No. 485 C street, was put on trial before the Police Court today on the charge of fraudulently obtaining gas from the Washington gaslight company by conducting gas to his stable otherwise than through a meter.

John P. Meyers, an employee of the gas company, testified that when he went to take the state of Pumphrey's meter he found a rubber pipe attached to it, which conducted the gas around instead of through the meter. Mr. Pumphrey's counsel said they did not deny that this was a truthful statement, but the defendant would explain the whole matter. Mr. Pumphrey said that he had been troubled with a leaky pipe. He sent for a plumber, who refused to remedy it, saying it was the gas company's business to do so. Mr. Pumphrey complained to the gas company, who put in a new meter, but the pipe still leaked. Afterwards a man, giving his name as Dougherty, came along and claimed to have an invention that would save twenty-five per cent of the gas bills. He called his invention a "governor," and Mr. Pumphrey allowed him to put one in; but the gas meter is kept in a box, and Mr. Pumphrey said he had not seen it since the "governor" was attached. It was this invention which the gas company complained against. "I can hardly believe that Mr. Pumphrey--a business man--would undertake to cheat the gas company in this way," and Judge Snell, "and his explanation shows that he has been the victim of a practical joke. The case may stand suspended for one week, that Mr.
Pumphrey may settle the matter satisfactorily with the gas company.

Police Probing Death
John Pumphrey Aged 74 Years, Succumbs to Injuries
Coroner Nevitt, assisted by Detective Berman of police headquarters, is making an investigation of the death of John Pumphrey, seventy-four years of age, who died today at his home, 1340 11th street southeast, of injuries sustained August 23.

Pumphrey, who was employed as a watchman at a new building at Champlain and Euclid streets northwest, was found unconscious in a ditch near the building, the morning of August 23, by Robert Smart of 1010 7th street southeast and Thomas Boswell of Grant road. He was at the bottom of the ditch, which was about fifteen feet deep.

Pumphrey was given treatment and revived sufficiently to say he had fallen into the ditch. He was taken to his home. It was not until today, however, when his death occurred, that the police were notified of the accident.

The National Intelligencer, January 14, 1853

Criminal Court

The Court has been engaged for the better part of two days in the trial of John Long, for an assault with intent to kill Rezin Pumphrey. The case was given to the Jury yesterday afternoon. It appeared from the evidence that the two parties had met in a house near the mill where Pumphrey worked as miller. That whilst in it some altercation ensued between them. After this, Pumphrey left the house shutting the door behind him, to go to his mill. Very shortly afterwards Long followed, but soon returned, saying he had knocked down Pumphrey, using an epithet, and they would now see who was the best man; and that Pumphrey was lying dead in the road. Long then went away, and Pumphrey was soon found lying apparently lifeless on the ground near the mill with a dreadful fracture on the left side of his head, a pool of blood under him, and a stone with blood on it lying near his person. On examination by medical men a large portion of the wall of the cranium was found broken in, so as to considerably expose the brain. Th ewonder is that Mr. Pumphrey could survive at all.

At the close of the Court last evening the Jury had not rendered their verdict.

The Shooting at the Navy Yard

The Evening Star, February 24, 1858

The shooting affair at the Navy Yard, in which Mr. Rezin Pumphrey was wounded; was more extensive than at first reported. It occurred in front of Bean's restaurant, Odd Fellow's Hall. From the best authority we can obtain, it appears that a man came to the door of the restaurant and fired three shots at some persons on the pavement, and went in again. Mr. Pumphrey was slightly wounded, as we stated yesterday; and also George Hineline. A young man named H. Williams was badly wounded in the face and neck with small shot. Efforts are making to discover and arrest the person who did the deed.

The Evening Star, December 10, 1897

A Painter's Fatal Fall
Roberte A. Pumphrey's Death Results From an Accident
Was at Work at a Second-Story Window and Dropped to the Pavement—Skull Fractured

Robert A. Pumphrey, a painter, thirty-four years old, met with a fatal accident while working at No. 44 S street northwest, about 9:45 o'clock this morning. He fell from the second-story front window to the iron porch below fracturing his skull and breaking his left arm. The police ambulance happened to be in the vicinity of the house where the accident occurred, and the victim was taken to Freedmen's Hospital. He died just as the hospital was reached.

The deceased lived at No. 338 Armory street southwest with his wife, but had no children. His father was in the painting business in this city more than thirty years ago, and two of the victim's brothers survive him.

Pumphrey was working on a house owned by Mrs. M.L. Hoover, and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. F.L. Hampton. About two weeks ago Mrs. Hoover met the painter on the street, and his appearance caused the belief on her part that he was in need of work. The lady offered him work and he willingly accepted. Two days after he went to work painting four houses for Mrs. Hoover, and the latter was pleased with the work to such an extent that she advanced him money with which to care for his family.

This morning when he appeared at the house ready for duty, Mrs. Hoover noticed an improvement in his dress, and she was more pleased than ever to see that the man to whom she had given employment had not thrown away his earnings.

Heard a Noise

He went to the second story of the Hampton residence and started to paint the front window. Mrs. Hampton was in the dining room in the basement at the time, and a few minutes after Pumphrey ascended the stairs she heard a peculiar noise.

"What's that noise?" she was asked by her colored maid.

"Nothing, I guess," was her answer.

Thinking, however, that there was something wrong Mrs. Hampton went to the front door, where she witnessed the shocking sight of the dying man lying on the sidewalk directly in front of her house. Blood was streaming from his mouth and nose. Mrs. Hampton's screams aroused persons in the adjoining houses, and her maid went out to make the dying man as comfortable as possible. About this time the police ambulance in charge of Driver Oliver stopped in front of the house. Two sick patients in the ambulance were taken out and seated on a doorstep and the vehicle was soon on its way to the hospital with the injured painter.

When the doctors at the hospital pronounced the man dead the wagon turned away and the body was taken to the morgue.

Coroner Notified

Coroner Carr was notified of the accident, and he had the police of the eighth precinct make an investigation. It is likely that no inquest will be held.

A woman clad in her nightdress, with a heavy robe thrown carelessly about her walked into the fourth precinct police station this morning about 6 o'clock and notified the officer on duty that there was a dying woman in Belle White's house of ill-fame, on B street. Illuminating gas, she said, had rendered the woman unconscious and a physician was wanted. Dr. Child was soon found and although he worked on the asphyxiated woman, he failed to get her in a condition in which she showed any signs of life. Later in the day Sergeant Daley learned that the woman was Ida Suit, a divorced woman, daughter of James W. Pumphrey, the retired livery stable keeper, who lives at 477 C street. She was about twenty-eight years old and handsome.

During her younger days Ida Pumphrey was not only handsome, but was well proportioned, and her neat figure made her an unusually attractive woman. Several years ago, it is said, she married Arthur Suit, and was afterward divorced from him. Since then she has lived at her father's home. She was a young woman of a lively disposition, and it was suspected by some of her acquaintances that her mode of life would bring her to a sad ending sooner or later.

Last evening while the snow was falling and the wind blowing there came a knock on the door of Belle White's gilded palace and this unfortunate woman and a male companion were ushered in and shown a room on the upper floor. The man who was with her was a comparatively young man of heavy build. He wore a light suit of clothes and his general appearance gave the impression that he was a German.

It was early in the evening when the couple appeared at the house and the man left some time about midnight. Before he left the house, he was asked to pay the room rent, which he did not do, but told the proprietress that the woman would pay the bill. When the couple reached the house they appeared as if they had been drinking, the woman being worse off than her companion, but this caused no uneasiness, for it is a frequent occurrence for such people to be under the influence of liquor. For this reason no attention was paid to the woman, and it was not until 6 o'clock this morning that Belle White knew there was something wrong.

Found Dead
The odor of escaping gas then attracted her attention and when she went to the room she found the woman in her night robe lying across the bed. In the room there was a bottle of whisky, only a small portion of its contents having been removed. There was a gas stove in the room that had been used early in the evening, but there was no light in the stove and the gas was turned on.

Such was the condition of affairs when the proprietress of the house reached the room.

Clue to Identity
When he had determined beyond doubt that the woman's life was extinct the police looked about the room for evidence of identity, and found pinned to the collar of her undergarment a pawn ticket. This Sergt. Daley took to Burnstine's pawn shop, and there he learned that the woman had pawned an article of jewelry under the name of "Annie Suit," and her residence was given as 477 C street.

When the officer called at the house and saw the woman's mother she exclaimed: "That's my daughter Ida."

She went to the house in South Washington, where she identified the body of the dead woman as that of her daughter.

Undertaker J. William Lee was sent for and he took charge of the body and removed it to his establishment on Pennsylvania avenue. This was done by direction of the coroner, and an autopsy is to be made at 4 o'clock.

A rumor to the effect that foul means had been employed in the case was set afloat in police circles, but the investigation made by the officer failed to reveal anything of this nature.

The identity of the man who went with the woman to the house is not known, but in police circles this afternoon it was stated that the man is probably a prominent merchant.

The Evening Star, January 4, 1895
The Suit Case
In the case of the woman, Ida Suit, who was found dead in the house of Belle White on B street southwest, yesterday as published in yesterday's Star, the autopsy showed that death resulted from the inhalation of gas. Coroner Hammett decided that an inquest was unnecessary and gave a certificate of death.

| James L. Pumphrey, the one-time wholesale candy clerk of this town, who committed embezzlement and was chased around four states for twenty months, plead guilty before Acting Judge Bundy in the Police Court today and was sent to jail for six months. |
| The original charge of embezzlement against the man was nolle prossed and one of petit larceny substituted in its place. |
| "I suppose I must take my medicine," said Pumphrey as sentence was passed. He refused to discuss his long flight. |
| Pumphrey was a trusted employee in the wholesale establishment of Carl G. Mueller, at 336 Pennsylvania avenue. In October, 1907, an investigation revealed a shortage of several hundred dollars. |
| During the investigation Pumphrey skipped. He was subsequently charged with embezzling between $30 and $40, and a warrant was sworn out for his arrest October 30, 1907. From that date until arrested in Baltimore yesterday morning Pumphrey dodged all the central office men. He was trailed into various parts of Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia, eventually falling into a trap set for him a day or so ago in Baltimore. Detectives Evans and O'Dea did the trick. |

rear of Ford's Theater prior to the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln and on which he afterward escaped into Maryland, where he met his death.

The spurs which John Wilkes Booth wore on this expedition were borrowed from Mr. Pumphrey, although the latter had no knowledge of the purpose for which the assassin intended to employ them. For some time after this tragic event Mr. Pumphrey was under surveillance, and was not relieved until after the trial and conviction of the parties who were accused of association with John Wilkes Booth in the assassination. At the end of these trying times Mr. Pumphrey, who had already been acquitted by the courts, was also acquitted in popular estimation and continued for many years in his original business.

He was active, energetic, and very charitable in each and every walk of life. He had during life many friends which he continued to hold until his end.

Booth Alone Responsible
While Mr. Pumphrey was identified in a striking manner with the great closing tragedy of the civil war, he always held, and his views were believed; that the idea of assassination arose in the mind of Booth alone, and that all the others who were accused of participation in that sad event were influenced by that peculiar and erratic character. He exhibited the deepest sympathy for Mrs. Surrat, whom he regarded as wholly innocent of participation, and it is said he sat mounted on his horse for hours waiting in the hope of having the privilege of carrying President Andrew Johnson's reprieve to Mrs. Surrat, then imprisoned and afterward executed at the arsenal in this city.

Mr. Pumphrey was for some time under arrest, in common with almost everybody that knew anything about, or had any possible connection with this incident of American history, but, as stated, he was at the time, and has since been, absolved of all connection with that lamentable occurrence.

Mr. Pumphrey will be buried from his late residence, 477 C street northwest, on Monday, but the hour has not yet been fixed. He leaves a widow and six surviving children, one son, Mr. Perry Pumphrey, and five daughters.

Funeral of J.W. Pumphrey
Services Held at Family Residence Late This Afternoon
The remains of James W. Pumphrey, long a prominent and active business man of this city, whose death occurred Friday morning at his home, 477 C street, were buried this afternoon in the Congressional cemetery. The services at the house took place at 3 o'clock and were conducted by Rev. Richard P. Williams, pastor of Trinity Episcopal Church, 3d and C streets northwest. The pallbearers were Messrs. J.M. Hill, J.J. Burn, Thomas Watson, William Lee, and two representatives of the Oldest Inhabitants' Association.

Mr. Pumphrey, who was a native of Washington, was born September 12, 1832, and has lived here all his life. He has been connected with the livery business for many years. Mr. Pumphrey's wife and six children -- one son, Mr. Percy Pumphrey, and five daughters -- survive him.

Mr. Pumphrey's Gas Economizer
How He Was Victimized by a New Invention
James W. Pumphrey, the well-known livery stable man, of No. 485 C street, was put on trial before the Police Court today on the charge of fraudulently obtaining gas from the Washington gaslight company by conducting gas to his stable otherwise than through a meter.

John P. Meyers, an employee of the gas company, testified that when he went to take the state of Pumphrey's meter he found a rubber pipe attached to it, which conducted the gas around instead of through the meter. Mr. Pumphrey's counsel said they did not deny that this was a truthful statement, but the defendant would explain the whole matter. Mr. Pumphrey said that he had been troubled with a leaky pipe. He sent for a plumber, who refused to remedy it, saying it was the gas company's business to do so. Mr. Pumphrey complained to the gas company, who put in a new meter, but the pipe still leaked. Afterwards a man, giving his name as Dougherty, came along and claimed to have an invention that would save twenty-five per cent of the gas bills. He called his invention a "governor," and Mr. Pumphrey allowed him to put one in; but the gas meter is kept in a box, and Mr. Pumphrey said he had not seen it since the "governor" was attached. It was this invention which the gas company complained against. "I can hardly believe that Mr. Pumphrey--a business man--would undertake to cheat the gas company in this way," and Judge Snell, "and his explanation shows that he has been the victim of a practical joke. The case may stand suspended for one week, that Mr. Pumphrey may settle the matter satisfactorily with the gas company.

Coroner Nevitt, assisted by Detective Berman of police headquarters, is making an investigation of the death of John Pumphrey, seventy-four years of age, who died today at his home, 1340 11th street southeast, of injuries sustained August 23.

Pumphrey, who was employed as a watchman at a new building at Champlain and Euclid streets northwest, was found unconscious in a ditch near the building, the morning of August 23, by Robert Smart of 1010 7th street southeast and Thomas Boswell of Grant road. He was at the bottom of the ditch, which was about fifteen feet deep.

Pumphrey was given treatment and revived sufficiently to say he had fallen into the ditch. He was taken to his home. It was not until today, however, when his death occurred, that the police were notified of the accident.

Criminal Court

The Court has been engaged for the better part of two days in the trial of John Long, for an assault with intent to kill Rezin Pumphrey. The case was given to the Jury yesterday afternoon. It appeared from the evidence that the two parties had met in a house near the mill where Pumphrey worked as miller. That whilst in it some altercation ensued between them. After this, Pumphrey left the house shutting the door behind him, to go to his mill. Very shortly afterwards Long followed, but soon returned, saying he had knocked down Pumphrey, using an epithet, and they would now see who was the best man; and that Pumphrey was lying dead in the road. Long then went away, and Pumphrey was soon found lying apparently lifeless on the ground near the mill with a dreadful fracture on the left side of his head, a pool of blood under him, and a stone with blood on it lying near his person. On examination by medical men a large portion of the wall of the cranium was found broken in, so as to considerably expose the brain. Th ewonder is that Mr. Pumphrey could survive at all.

At the close of the Court last evening the Jury had not rendered their verdict.

The Shooting at the Navy Yard

The shooting affair at the Navy Yard, in which Mr. Rezin Pumphrey was wounded; was more extensive than at first reported. It occurred in front of Bean's restaurant, Odd Fellow's Hall. From the best authority we can obtain, it appears that a man came to the door of the restaurant and fired three shots at some persons on the pavement, and went in again. Mr. Pumphrey was slightly wounded, as we stated yesterday; and also George Hineline. A young man named H. Williams was badly wounded in the face and neck with small shot. Efforts are making to discover and arrest the person who did the deed.

A Painter's Fatal Fall

Robert A. Pumphrey's Death Results From an Accident

Was at Work at a Second-Story Window and Dropped to the Pavement--Skull Fractured

Robert A. Pumphrey, a painter, thirty-four years old, met with a fatal accident while working at No. 44 S street northwest, about 9:45 o'clock this morning. He fell from the second-story front window to the iron porch below fracturing his skull and breaking his left arm. The police ambulance happened to be in the vicinity of the house where the accident occurred, and the victim was taken to Freedmen's Hospital. He died just as the hospital was reached.

The deceased lived at No. 338 Armory street southwest with his wife, but had no children. His father was in the painting business in this city more than thirty years ago, and two of the victim's brothers survive him. One of them drives a bakery wagon and the other is in New York.

Pumphrey was working on a house owned by Mrs. M.L. Hoover, and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. F.L. Hampton. About two weeks ago Mrs. Hoover met the painter on the street, and his appearance caused the belief on her part that he was in need of work. The lady offered him work and he willingly accepted. Two days after he went to work painting four houses for Mrs. Hoover, and the latter was pleased with the work to such an extent that she advanced him money with which to care for his family.

This morning when he appeared at the house ready for duty, Mrs. Hoover noticed an improvement in his dress, and she was more pleased than ever to see that the man to whom she had given employment had not thrown away his earnings.

Heard a Noise

He went to the second story of the Hampton residence and started to paint the front window. Mrs. Hampton was in the dining room in the basement at the time, and a few minutes after Pumphrey ascended the stairs she heard a peculiar noise.

"What's that noise?" she was asked by her colored maid.

"Nothing, I guess," was her answer.

Thinking, however, that there was something wrong Mrs. Hampton went to the front door, where she witnessed the shocking sight of the dying man lying on the sidewalk directly in front of her house. Blood was streaming from his mouth and nose. Mrs. Hampton's screams aroused persons in the adjoining houses, and her maid went out to make the dying man as comfortable as possible. About this time the police ambulance in charge of Driver Oliver stopped in front of the house. Two sick patients in the ambulance were taken out and seated on a doorstep and the vehicle was soon on its way to the hospital with the injured painter.

When the doctors at the hospital pronounced the man dead the wagon turned away and the body was taken to the morgue.

Coroner Notified

Coroner Carr was notified of the accident, and he had the police of the eighth precinct make an investigation. It is likely that no inquest will be held.

Another Old Citizen Passed Away
Death of Mr. John Purdy

Mr. John Purdy, for over 50 years past a resident of this District, died last evening at his residence on 4 1/2 street, near the City Hall, in the 78th year of his age. Mr. Purdy was born in Annapolis, Md., December 27, 1803, and learning the trade of house painter in Baltimore, he came to this city in 1823. He was soon on the road to affluence and became one of the leading men in his business in the District. He invested largely in real estate, purchasing nearly the entire square bounded by Pennsylvania avenue, 1st, 2d and B streets northwest, in which is Purdy's court. He, in early life, became connected with the old Patriotic Bank on 7th street. Finally he bought all its stock and property and for some years was the president of the bank. Some fifteen years ago he became interested in the manufacture of glass, and erected the works on 25th and N streets, but this enterprise was a failure. Under this reverse his mind gradually gave way, and his health commenced to fail. For hears he has needed the constant attention of some one, and has been frequently seen in our streets on the arm of a colored servant. Mr. Purdy was married twice, first to Miss Christopher in 1824, and second to Miss Sarah Crane of this city, in 1864. He leaves three children, all by his first wife, viz.: Mrs. Dr. W.F. Wallace, Mrs. Jas. E. Thompson of this city, and Mr. John Purdy, jr., who lives in Pensacola, Fla. He was a member of Washington Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templar, Lebanon Lodge, No. 7, F.A.A.M., Columbia R.A. Chapter, No. 1, and the Masonic Relief Association. He was also vice president of the Oldest Inhabitants. His funeral will take place next Tuesday.

The Evening Star, July 27, 1881
The Funeral of John Purdy took place yesterday afternoon from his late residence, on 4 1/2 street, near the City Hall, and was attended by many of the oldest residents of the District, including the Oldest Inhabitants' Association, Lebanon Lodge, No. 7, Columbia R.A. Chapter and Washington Commandery of Masons. The services of the Unitarian church were conducted by Rev. Rush R. Shippen, who delivered a brief eulogy on Mr. Purdy, and the Templar services followed, conducted by W.J. Stephenson, E.C. of Washington Commandery--the Masonic choir, led by Mr. Robert Ball, furnishing the music. The remains were borne to the hearse by Mr. J.J. Barnes, on the part of the citizens; Mr. George B. Clark, on the part of the citizens and Columbia Chapter; Robert Ball and Dr. J.B. Blake, of the Oldest Inhabitants' Association; Peter H. Hooe and C.C. Duncanson, of Washington Commandery, Knights Templar, No. 1, and Past Masters Wm. Middleton and Andrew Glass, of Lebanon Lodge. The cortege proceeded to the Congressional cemetery, where the remains were interred in the family vault.

The Inwood Times, November 2003
Mr. Purdy A Man of Heart
June 20, 1921 - October 28, 2003
By Janice Barrett

Every one has a story to tell and Mr. Purdy was not an exception. The following is Mr. Purdy's account of his life as he communicated to me one spring's morning. Mr. Purdy grew up around the Navy Yard in South East Washington, D.C. As a young boy he was placed on a work farm where he learned how to take care of his needs. Mr. Purdy said that the farm taught him how to wash clothes and clean. Later in life Mr. Purdy moved to the State Institution called Rosewood. Some time after moving out of Rosewood he married and had two sons and a daughter.

Mr. Vincent Purdy moved into our community on June 29th, 1980. He worked for Inwood House for quite a number of years. Mr. Purdy helped many of the residents throughout this community and earned some extra money by utilizing his talents of cleaning and doing laundry. At the time, Mr. Purdy's abilities were badly needed by some of the tenants. Once Mr. Purdy cleaned your apartment you knew that it was in ship shape. He was very particular about which cleaning product he would use whenever he tidied up an apartment. He would always inform a person to buy Mr. Clean or Spic & Span. Mr. Purdy told a lot of tenants that he was a Mr. Clean.

Mr. Purdy was a man of heart. He was a special man and the residents are really exceptional people for having known him. Vincent Purdy taught me the value of everyone's life. Through having known him I learned about respecting all of the residents at Inwood regardless of their disability. He also taught me that all people have feelings and it does not matter where you are or who you are in life.

Mr. Vincent Purdy was a good man and he will be missed.

Purviance, John H.

The National Intelligencer, November 7, 1820

Died, yesterday morning, after a long indisposition, John Henry Purviance, Esq. aged 48, of the Department of State, where he had, discharged responsible duties for several years. Mr. P. earlier in life, filled various stations abroad, of a public character, in all of which he invariably acquitted himself with credit, and to the satisfaction of the government. His private virtues and amiable deportment insured the esteem of a large circle of friends here and elsewhere, who will learn his decease with deep regret.

His funeral will take place this afternoon at 3 o'clock, from the house of Mrs. Blake, on Pennsylvania avenue, which his friends are invited to attend without further notice.

As recorded in the diary of John H.B. Latrobe: John Purviance was a prominent practitioner (attorney) in those days, a learned man, a man of precedents, of untiring labor, with no pretensions as a speaker, but so honored for his honest truthfulness as to have collected around him as valuable a clientele as was possessed by any other one of the profession.

John Henry Purviance, son of Samuel and Catherine Purviance, never married. He was well educated (presumably in the schools of Europe since no record has been found as to his attending schools in America) and was employed as early as 1794 as secretary and interpreter for the State Department, accompanying James Monroe to France.

That he was associated with the State Department from that time until his death is fairly obvious. Just exactly what this association was, however, is not always clear. While many of his papers, and a number of diaries are maintained in the Purviance Papers by the manuscript department, Duke University, there are not sufficient documents to cover the entire period. That he was a close intimate of many in the foreign service is made clear and he traveled extensively to and from the continent on various missions. There are several memoranda in his handwriting of interviews with Monroe and representative of the French government concerning treaties with the United States as it related to France and to Spain; and negotiations for keeping the Mississippi open to American shipping. A number of Monroe's rough drafts of speeches or letters remain in the collection. Some mystery surround some of the documents. In 1796, at Monroe's request, he compiled a series of memoranda explaining the difficulty in obtaining cash for a draft for $120,000 sent to Monroe by the U.S. Treasury. While not specifically stated, it would appear that the money was to be paid to Napoleon's brother.

There is correspondence addressed to him from Fowler Skipworth, the American Consul-General at Paris. During 1801 and 1802 he was back in the United States but was exerting every effort to again be sent abroad, apparently for his health. He solicited the support of a number of influential friends in this regard and the State Department records disclose a petition signed by many such in his behalf. He succeeded in this and served as Secretary of Legation in London from 1804 to 1810. There is on file a considerable amount of correspondence between he and Monroe during this period. There are also four letters addressed to him by the American painter, John

Description
Choctaw Chief known as "the Eagle of the Choctaws". He served with Jackson through the perils of the Pensacola war and died from diphtheria while on a mission to Washington. His service to the U.S. was recognized, and he was buried with funeral honors. The monument over the grave of Push-Ma-Ta-Ha, known as the White Man's Friend, is similar in design to the Congressional cenotaph.

The National Intelligencer, Tuesday, December 28, 1824

At Tennison's Hotel, on Friday last, the 24th instant, Pooshamataha, a Chief of the Choctaw Nation of Indians, distinguished for his bold elocution and his attachment to the United States. At the commencement of the late war on our Southern border, he took an early and decided stand in favor of the weak and isolated settlements on Tombigby, and he continued to fight with and for them whilst they had an enemy in the field. His bones will rest a distance from his home, but in the bosom of the people he delighted to love. May a good hunting ground await his generous spirit in another and a better world. Military honors were paid to his remains by the Marine Corps of the United States, and by several uniformed companies of the militia.

A distinguished warrior of the Choctaw Nation. (The Choctaws were one of the Five Civilized Tribes, and lived originally in southern and central Mississippi, extending east into Georgia, always friendly with the Whites. They numbered 25,000.)

Push-Ma-Ta-Ha was born about 1764. He was a War Chief and great hunter at 20 years. Had a battle with the Cherokees west of the Mississippi and was defeated; escaped, and made his way to a Spanish settlement, where he lived for five years, when he went back to his own tribe, and carried on repeated warfare with the Creek Indians. He spent years in avenging himself on his enemies, the Cherokees, at whose hands he had suffered his first defeat. This action was in accordance with the established Indian tradition and sense of honor, and not due to any vengeful disposition on his part.

In the War of 1812 he was the first to lead a party against the British and their Indian allies (Creeks and Seminoles), and joined the southern army, with 500 of his own warriors. He took part in 24 battles, and served directly under General Jackson in his Pensacola campaign, winning his admiration for his leadership and skilful discipline of his wild warriors.

Major P. P. Pitchlynn, Chief of the Choctaws and a wealthy trader among them, held a council in 1823, and on July 4th gave a big dinner in honor of Colonel Ward, a government Agent, to which Push-Ma-Ta-Ha was invited, and at which he was presented with a horse, as it was considered he was getting too old to walk long distances. They exacted from him a promise that he would never sell the horse. When he appeared at the next meeting without the horse, he was reproached for disposing of the animal contrary to his promise. He confessed that he had lost the horse betting on ball-play, of which he was very fond, but stoutly maintained that he had kept his promise never to "sell" it.

In 1824 he was a member of a deputation sent to Washington to visit the President, for the purpose of strengthening the friendship between the Choctaws and the American people. He at that time paid his respects to Lafayette, who was then on his return tour of the United States. He died while on that mission, on December 24, 1824.

The National Journal of December 28, 1824, contained a notice of his death and funeral in substance as follows: Died, at his lodgings at Tennyson's, Thursday night, about 12 o'clock, in his 60th year, Push-Ma-Ta-Ha, one of the Choctaw Delegation now at Washington on business with the Government. He died of croup, in spite of the best medical skill employed in his behalf. He was ill only one day. He was buried on Saturday with military honors, performed by the Marine Corps, by direction of the Secretary of the Navy, assisted by captain Mauro's and Captain Dyer's companies of Volunteers. Christian ceremonies were conducted by Rev. Mr. Hawley. There was a procession of at least 2,000, and General Jackson, who knew him personally, paid his last respects to his memory, as did many others of both Houses of Congress, and members of the Government. His last words were: "When I am dead, let the big guns be fired over me", and they were, as a mark of respect to the man.

Push-Ma-Ta-Ha was one of the three great chiefs of his Nation, noted specially for his powers of oratory and his military prowess. He was not of distinguished family, and was always poor, living by hunting. He was brave and generous, kind to the needy and hospitable to the stranger. Though uneducated himself, he saw the necessity for improving his own people, and gave $2,000 of his annuity for 15 years towards the support of the school system. After his death the President sent a medal to the oldest surviving son (he had five children), as a testimony of respect for a warrior whose attachment to the Government had been unshaken throughout his life. As he himself said, his skin was red, but his hands and his heart were white, unstained by the blood of Americans.
He was also called "The Eagle" and "The Indian General", for his bravery and his talent for discipline.

He makes this possible by buying in big lots, and, having five stores, he must necessarily buy five times as much as the average grocer, which means car-load lots are proportionately lower prices. His new store will be devoted to the wholesale trade as well as retail, and those desiring to lay in a supply of "good things" for Christmas will find it to their advantage to visit this new store. Mr. Pyles is a thorough believer in newspaper advertising, and things the columns of The Star are especially productive of good results.

Drowning of Mrs. Pyles
Sad Accident at Marshall Hall Last Night
Wife of a Physician Perishes in Presence of Husband and Parents

Mrs. Maud Pyles, the wife of Dr. W. Leroy Pyles of the Providence Hospital staff of physicians, was drowned about 8 o'clock last night off the wharf of the steamer Charles Macalester at Marshall Hall. Mrs. Pyles fell off the wharf while attempting to hand a small valise to her husband, who stood upon the deck of the boat as the vessel lay at the landing. She dropped into the river between the wharf and the side of the steamer, and immediately a cry of horror arose from those who witnessed the accident. Mr. George Roberts of the geological survey, who was standing nearby, jumped into the river to save Mrs. Pyles, but she never arose to the surface. At a late hour this afternoon her remains had not been recovered.

Witnessed by Husband and Parents

Mrs. Pyles death was witnessed by her husband, her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. John Berry of 202 9th street southeast; her fourteen-year-old sister, and many other persons who were either standing upon the wharf or upon the boat.

Mrs. Pyles, with her sister and her mother, went to Marshall Hall on an early boat yesterday morning to spend the day. The arrangement had been made whereby Dr. Pyles and his father-in-law should make the trip later in the day and return with the three ladies on the night boat. Mrs. Berry and her two daughters carried out their program, and in the evening went to the wharf to meet the boat, which arrived at 8 o'clock. Dr. Pyles and Mr. Berry, who were among the passengers, told Mrs. Pyles and the other ladies when the boat had landed, that they intended to remain aboard until the return trip, and would not come ashore.

When the ladies were informed of this Mrs. Pyles stepped forward with a small valise in her hand and leaning over toward the boat attempted to pass it to her husband, remarking that she wished to stay on the grounds during the hour the boat would remain. Dr. Pyles stood upon the upper deck of the Macalester, about six feet above the wharf. He reached over to secure the valise, but the intervening distance was too great and he was unable to do so. Mr. Berry also attempted to reach it, but was likewise unsuccessful.

Slips Into the Water

Mrs. Pyles thereupon gave a little spring upward with the idea of placing the valise which was in her outstretched hand, within reaching distance of those on the deck. Instead of falling back upon the wharf, her foot slipped and she dropped into the water with a splash that attracted the attention of many people in the vicinity. Mr. Roberts was standing nearby, and he at once jumped to the rescue, but was unable to locate Mrs. Pyles, and all that could be saved was the hat of the unfortunate woman. As Mrs. Pyles fell into the river, Mrs. Berry screamed and started as if to jump in after her, but she was prevented from doing so by her young daughter.

Dr. Pyle and Mr. Berry hurriedly ran from the boat to the wharf and assisted in the effort to rescue Mrs. Pyles. Lanterns were procured, as it had become dark, and several of the rescuers were lowered to the piles of the wharf in their attempt to locate the body, but all their endeavors were unavailing. The grief-stricken relatives of Mrs. Pyles insisted upon remaining at the hall all night, and quarters were offered them by Captain Blake, which were accepted. The Macalester, with the remaining passengers, returned to the city.

Harbormaster's Action

Harbormaster Sutton and a crew left for the scene aboard the Lovie Randall at 1 o'clock this morning to drag for the body. On board the boat was Mr. J.T.D. Pyles, father-in-law of the young woman who was drowned. The police crew dragged for the body all day, but up to the time the Macalester left for Washington it had not been recovered.

Mrs. Pyles was about twenty-three years of age and was married to Dr. Pyles about two years ago. They lived at 224 11th street southeast. Mrs. Pyles was a handsome woman and very popular with a large circle of friends on Capitol Hill and in other sections of the city.
