She Was 104 Years Old

Death in This City of a Woman Who

Had a Remarkable Career

It is not usual for a person to live to be more than a hundred years old, but this morning a woman died in this city who had reached the very advanced age of one hundred and four. The woman was Mrs. Agatha Rabaza, who has been living for a great many years with her daughter, Mrs. Chas. McLane, 509 8th street southeast. Five generations lived under the same roof tree, Mrs. Rabaza being the head of the group. She was born at Port Mahon, on the Island of Monaco, but came to this country when her daughter was widowed by the explosion of a gun on board the U.S.S. Princeton. While she was still in Spain, she met Napoleon Bonaparte and conversed with the Empress Josephine. Her life, beginning as it did well back in the last century, was a varied one, and it was her custom for years to interest her friends and relatives with reminiscences of her youth and of the interesting people and things she had seen in her long life. Both physically and mentally she was remarkably active, but since the death of a granddaughter several months ago she has seemed quite broken, and it was realized that her life could not be prolonged much further.

The Funeral of Mrs. Rabaza

The funeral of Mrs. Agatha Rabaza,, who died Tuesday morning at the residence of Mrs. Charles McLane, No. 509 8th street southeast, at the age of 104 years, as stated in The Star, took place this morning, attended by a daughter of the deceased, aged 69 years; nine of her grandchildren, three great grandchildren and a large concourse of her friends and neighbors. The services were those of the Catholic Church, in which she was brought up, and were conducted by Rev. Father Sullivan of St. Peter's Church. The pall-bearers were four of her grandchildren and the interment was at Congressional Cemetery. The old lady had been a resident of the District over forty years, and was in many respects, as well as from her great age, a remarkable woman. Her memory up to and within a few weeks before her death was notable and her health had been excellent ever since she could remember. Since the death some months since of her granddaughter of Mrs. Heinline (widow of Thomas W. Heinline, who served as an engineer in the navy during the war), she seemed to grow weaker and without any apparent disease. Her death seemed to result from a final wearing out of the system.

Rabey, Susie d. 13 Aug 1859 1 yr. 4 mos. 27 days R26/113

Rabey. On the 13th instant, after a lingering illness, Susie, aged 16 months, 3 weeks and 4 days, youngest daughter of James and Margaret Rabey.

A flower bloomed upon my heart,
And shed its fragrance there;
And on its stem there closely hung
A bud of beauty rare.

And soon it hung its lovely head,
And drooped while yet it bloomed;
And from our hearts it passed away
To wither in the tomb.

It was in the latter month of summer,
And the blossoms decked each tree,
When Susie's spirit took its flight,
And left our home and me.

She was too pure a bud to stay
In this world of death and gloom,
So God has called our Susie away
To a land where all is bloom.

Dearest Susie thou hast left us,
We thy loss most deeply feel,
But 'tis God that hast bereft us,
And he can all our sorrows heal.

Deceased

We regret to learn that Carpenter John Rainbow, United States Navy, long and favorably known in this city, died at the Brooklyn Navy yard, N.Y., this morning at one o'clock.

The Evening Star, September 22, 1868

Funeral of John Rainbow, U.S.N.

The funeral of the late John Rainbow, carpenter U.S. Navy, took place yesterday afternoon from the residence of his nephew, Henry J. Bright, Esq., on 8th street east, near Pennsylvania avenue, and was attended by a large number of the friends of the deceased, among whom were many naval officers. Mr. Rainbow was one of the oldest warrant officers in the Navy, having entered the service nearly thirty-five years ago, and at the time of his death was stationed at the ordnance dock, near the Brooklyn Navy Yard. About six months since he was attacked with typhoid fever, from the effects of which he never recovered, but gradually sank until the morning of the 18th instant, when death put an end to his sufferings. At his own request his body was brought to this city for interment beside his mother in the Congressional Cemetery. The body was encased in a metallic coffin, on the lid of which was a silver plate inscribed, "John Rainbow, died Sept. 18, 1868, aged 57 years;" and the features of the deceased looked perfectly natural and lifelike. At the conclusion of the funeral services, which were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Harris, of Christ Church, the cortege moved to the Congressional Cemetery, six sailors acting as pall-bearers, and a detachment of marines composing the escort. There was quite a large concourse of carriages, and upon the arrival of the procession at the cemetery, the body was consigned to its last resting place in a grave adjoining that of the mother of the deceased. A volley was fired over the grave by the military escort, which so frightened one of the teams in attendance that at one time it was thought serious injury would result, but the horses were checked before any damage was done.

Gone home, to die no more.

Funeral services will be held at the late residence of the deceased, 615 L street southeast, at 2 p.m. Friday, May 2, after which placed in the receiving vault at Congressional cemetery. Relatives and friends invited to attend.

The Evening Star, May 7, 1902, p. 11

Funeral of Mrs. Raley

The remains of Mrs. Margaret Raley were taken from the vault at Congressional cemetery yesterday and interred in the family lot in the cemetery. Funeral services were held at the late home of the deceased Friday last by Rev. C.O. Isaacs of the Anacostia M.E. Church. The floral tributes were very beautiful.

Mrs. Raley was one of the oldest inhabitants of this city, having come here from Pennsylvania about eighty years ago. She married Mr. James Raley, who was one of the guards of the old penitentiary and who died four years ago. Eight children were born to them -- two boys and six girls, only two of whom survive her -- J.W. Raley and Mrs. M.E. Repetti. Among the grandchildren was W.T. Raley, with whom she made her home.

She became a member of the E Street Baptist Church over seventy years ago and was a devout Christian woman.

Biographical Directory of the United States Congress 1774-1989

A Representative from Pennsylvania; born in Carlisle, Cumberland County, Pa., June 12, 1810; pursued classical studies in the U.S. and Europe; attache of the American Legation in London; elected as a Democrat to the 26th Congress and served from March 4, 1839 until his death before the commencement of the 27th Congress to which he had been reelected; died in Baltimore, Md., October 17, 1840; interment in Ashland Cemetery, Carlisle, Pa.

National Intelligencer, Wednesday, October 21, 1840

We copy from the Baltimore Patriot of Monday evening the following account of the lamentable suicide of which a brief notice was published in our last:

"The Hon. William S. Ramsey, of Carlisle, Pa., a Van Buren member of the present Congress, and re-elected at the recent election, committed suicide at Barnum's Hotel, in this city, yesterday evening, about six o'clock. The deceased arrived in town on Saturday evening, and took lodgings as above; and, it is said, manifested nothing unusual in his behavior or appearance, up to five o'clock yesterday afternoon, at which time he made some inquiries at the bar of the Hotel relative to the time of the boats and cars leaving for Philadelphia. He then retired to his room, and in an hour afterwards the report of a pistol was heard. On entering the apartment the unfortunate man was discovered in a dying condition, speechless, and lying near the fire, with a pistol close at his side, and the blood flowing profusely from a wound in the right eye. The deceased was recognized by the Hon. Mr. Jenifer, of Maryland, who was attracted to the spot, and who sent for the Hon. Messrs. Carroll and Howard. A coroner's inquest was held over the body by Seth Pollard, Esq. when on examination, the ball was found to have entered the right eye, and to have penetrated nearly to the back of his neck. The verdict of the jury was: "Death by shooting himself with a pistol."

We learn that the deceased gentleman came to this city (Washington) in the train of cars on Saturday morning last; whence, it appears, he returned to Baltimore in the evening train. Whilst here, he purchased a pistol at one of the variety stores of this city, with percussion caps for it, and procured some bullets to be moulded.

The Washington Post, July 5, 1929, p. 3

Col. Randle Kills Self In California

Head of District Securities Company Was Widely Known

Body May Be Returned

Ulmo S. Randle, of Randle Station, Md., adopted son of Col. Arthur E. Randle, prominent Washingtonian whose body was found Wednesday after he had taken his own life with a sawed-off shotgun at a lonely spot on a friend's ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., left last night to take charge of the body. No funeral arrangements will be made until Randle reaches the coast, but it is presumed that the body will be brought back here for burial.

A native of Artesia Miss., where he was born on January 17, 1859, and a resident of Washington since 1885, Col. Randle had been active in the affairs of the District and of the Nation almost throughout his lifetime. In recognition of his many public services a town, a park, a street, a circle, and a school have been named for him here.

Col. Randle had carefully planned his death, according to testimony brought out at the coroner's inquest, Associated Press Dispatches from Santa Barbara revealed. These preparations, the dispatches said, included deposit of $1,000 in a bank to cover expenses of cremation. He also selected an urn in which the ashes were to be deposited before being strewn over the grave of his late wife. Testimony at the inquest was that Col. Randle had been in poor health for a long time and had threatened suicide a number of times, the Associated Press said.

Maintained Residence Here

Col. Randle, a widower, was president of the United Securities Co., here, made his home at Glendale, Md. and also maintained a residence at Randle Highlands, a community which he developed.

At the age of 14, after a grammar school education at Artesia, Miss., Col. Randle entered Shortridge Academy at Media, Pa., later attending the Hollowell Grammar School at Philadelphia, where he was awarded a prize scholarship to the University of Pennsylvania. He was a great-grandson of Col. John Randle, an officer in the Revolutionary War, and a descendent of Earl Randle of Chester, one of the first of the Anglo-Norman lords appointed to the Parliament of King John after the signing of the Magna Charta. Col. Arthur E. Randle received his commission, when he was appointed to the staff of Gov. Longino, of Mississippi in 1902.

Shortly before coming to Washington, Col. Randle was associated with his brother, Dr. William Henry Randle, of Philadelphia, who was commissioned by President Hayes in 1876 to stamp out the yellow fever plague in the South, and the two brothers spent several years in successful devotion to this task.

Col. Randle was the man responsible for the work of reclaiming the Anacostia Flats, which had been a serious menace to health in the southeast section of the District for many years. Later he developed Randle Highlands, Randle Cliff Beach, Congress Heights, Seabrook and Lincoln. He deeded many miles of land to the District for streets in his numerous developments.

Thanked By Wilson

During the World War, in 1918, Col. Randle offered the Government, without charge, the use of his properties for camp sites, and also returned to the Government the Liberty bonds he had bought. Acknowledging these patriotic offers. President Wilson wrote him, saying that although there was some doubt as to the ability of the Government to avail itself of the offer of property, "I will keep the offer in mind in case it should be necessary to avail ourselves of it, and in the meantime, thank you most warmly for making such a generous offer."

Col. Randle is also credited with having started, at a dinner in London in 1899, the movement to make Washington the most beautiful city in the world.

He retired from active business about a year ago. He was a member of the Washington Board of Trade, the Washington Chamber of Commerce, and the New York Chamber of Commerce.

The Evening Star, September 2, 1909

Washington's Great Future

Col. Arthur E. Randle Predicts Wonderful Growth

"Within the past seven years it has been realized that Washington is the capital of a nation of 80,000,000 hustlers, with all the ideas and ambitions of the other nations."

With the foregoing as his opening sentence, Col. Arthur E. Randle, who is sojourning at Bedford Springs, Pa., yesterday addressed a meeting of commercial travelers, taking as his theme "Washington, the Beautiful and Cultured."

"Washington is leaping forward for first place among the capitals of the earth." Col. Randle continued. "It is not merely a place for Congress to meet, but a great national city. In a few years I expect to see the city cover every inch of the land between Pennsylvania avenue and Benning, along two miles of the highlands with commanding views of Washington as those to be had from Arlington and the Soldiers' Home. I intend to make of Randle Highlands what Brooklyn is to New York city.

Referring to general conditions, Col. Randle said, "a great tidal wave of prosperity is now arriving--1907 was a year of panic; 1908 was the presidential year, which is always a season of depression; 1909 marked the discussion of tariff legislation, which held trade in restraint. But now the coast is clear and within the next twelve months the high water mark of national prosperity will be reached from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to Mexico. And as the nation grows in 1910, so will its capital.

"Washington is keeping pace with the country. When the nation has 100,000,000 population, Washington will be spread over the entire District of Columbia."

Col. Randle, accompanied by Mrs. Randle, drove in a carriage from Cumberland, Md., to Bedford Springs Monday night by moonlight, a distance of thirty miles, in five and a half hours.

Title to Avenue Property

United States Realty Company Buys Office Building

Deeds transferring the title to the large building at the northeast corner of Pennsylvania avenue and 7th street were placed on record today. The new owner of the United States Realty Company, A.E. Randle, president, and the offices of that company are located in the building. The building itself is some five stories high with a main entrance from the broad plaza formed by the juncture of Pennsylvania avenue, C street and Louisiana avenue, and known as Market space. On each side of the entrance are towers which are carried above the roof of the main structure and provide two additional stories. The building is built of stone and brick and, occupying as it does a location at the intersection of important thoroughfares, it is one of the conspicuous business points of the city.

It is in addition one of the oldest sites of the kind, as it has been from its earliest years a center of much of the commercial life of the city. Prior to the purchase of this property by the United States Realty Company it was owned and occupied by the Central National Bank. The first floor on the level with the street, with its lofty ceiling and large openings and exposure on three sides, was admirably adapted as a banking office and was found to have the necessary facilities as well as being convenient of access during the years the bank was building up a successful business.

A year or so ago, when the bank was merged with the Bank of Washington, the building of the latter just across C street was occupied by the consolidated institutions. The offices on the first floor thus vacated were at once leased by the United States Realty Company, which was then greatly in need of better office facilities to accommodate its expanding business. The property was subsequently bought by the realty company, the upper stories being continued in use for general office purposes.

From this point of vantage in the city the realty company is able to receive its clients and friends who are interested in the opportunities which the company affords to those desiring homes. As is well known, this corporation has large holdings in the section through which Pennsylvania avenue extended passes. A recent purchase gives that company a frontage of about a mile on both sides of the avenue. From the elevated situation on the property on the hills which surround the city an extended view is afforded, and in addition to such a feature the residents enjoy the advantages which a height always has over a low-lying section of country.

This Is His Birthday

If Congress Heights is not celebrating today it is because the folks over there don't know that this is the birthday of Col. Arthur Emmett Randle. In 1859 in the own of Artesia, Miss., the future exploiter of big additions and subdivisions first opened his eyes and took a look around. Since that time he has been a very active person. He absorbed all the education obtainable at his home and at Shorledge's Academy at Media, Pa., and finished up at the University of Pennsylvania. His ambition to be a great lawyer was put aside owing to ill health, and he chose a business career. In 1890 he bought the John Jay Knox Farm which was ??? and christened Congress Heights. In the face of discouraging opposition he built the Capital railway from Congress Heights to the navy yard and operated it until it became a part of the system of the Washington Railway and Electric Company. From a farm Congress Heights has grown to a populous suburb under the guiding hand of Col. Randle. He and Mrs. Randle donated the ground and built the Episcopal Church, which is dedicated to the memory of Mrs. Randle's mother. For several years he has been engaged in the development of the property of the United States Realty Company, of which he is president.

Colonel Arthur E. Randle, founder of five important towns and communities in the District of Columbia and Maryland, is a native of Mississippi. He was born in Artesia, Mississippi, January 17, 1859, son of Henry Randle and Eliza C. (Lawrence) Randle. He was educated in the public schools of his home community until fourteen years old when he was sent to the Shortridge Academy at Media, Pennsylvania. He attended the Hollowell Grammar School at Philadelphia, and the University of Pennsylvania. He came to Washington in 1885 and has since made his home in the city or its immediate vicinity. He is a brother of the late Dr. William Henry Randle, of Philadelphia, who was appointed by President Hayes in 1878 to eliminate yellow fever in the South. His only sister was Mary F. Brothers, wife of the famous Southern surgeon.

Colonel Randle has given to the District of Columbia enough streets, free of cost, which if put in a straight line would extend from Washington to Baltimore. Washington has honored him by naming a town, a park, a street, a circle, and a school for him. His military title comes from his home State, Mississippi, he having been appointed colonel of cavalry on the staff of Governor Longino.

and Congress Heights, both in the District of Columbia; and Randle, Lincoln, and Randle Cliff Beach, in Maryland. In 1918, during the World War, he tendered to the government, free of cost, the use of his immense properties as a camp site. The colonel also returned to the government Liberty bonds, and at the same time presented to the churches in Congress Heights and Randle Highlands Liberty bonds. For these patriotic actions, President Wilson wrote Colonel Randle as follows:

The White House
Washington, 3 May 1918
My Dear Colonel Randle:

Your letter of yesterday, kindly transmitted to me by the Vice President certainly does you great honor and gives me, as it will give all who know it, great gratification.

I do not know that it will be possible for the Government to avail itself of your kind offer of the use of your landed property, but you may be sure that I will keep the offer in mind in case it should be necessary to avail ourselves of it, in the meantime thanking you most warmly for making such a generous tender.

I will act upon your kindness and return the five $50 bonds to the Treasury.

May I not again express my very deep and sincere appreciation of your loyal attitude.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
Woodrow Wilson

Col. Arthur E. Randle,

Randle Highlands
Washington, D.C.

Colonel Randle gave further patriotic service during the World War by inaugurating and conducting at his own expense the only celebration held in American in observance of the capture of Jerusalem from the Turks. Renting the Belasco Theater in Washington on Christmas Day, 1917, he presided over a great mass meeting of believers in all religions in observance of the event. Included among the speakers, were the late Rt. Rev. Alfred Harding, Episcopal Bishop of Washington; Father Thomas of St. Patricks Cathoic Church, Rabbi Abram Simon of the Jewish Synagogue; Rev. James Shera Montgomery, of Calvary Baptist Church; U.S. Senator James E. Watson and Gifford Pinchot, governor of Pennsylvania. On motion of Col. Randle a resolution was passed thanking General Allenby, commander of the British forces, for his great service to the Christian world. Letters to Colonel Randle were read from former President Roosevelt, President Wilson and Cardinal Gibbons. The cardinal, in his letter eulogized Col. Randle for his patriotic and generous action toward his fellow man and church. The letter follows:

Baltimore, Md., January 19, 1920

Colonel Arthur E. Randle,
Randle Highlands, D.C.

Dear Colonel Randle:

Well do I remember your visit to me and your invitation to join in the celebration on Christmas Day of the taking of Jerusalem by the Christians from the infidel Turk. Your origination and inauguration of this event and securing Belasco Theatre, at your own expense, for this celebration, is an act in your life that will send your name down to posterity with the honor and esteem of all Christian people. For six hundred years the Christians had been struggling to recapture the Holy City. Your celebration of this event when the Christians at last retook the Holy Land and marched, with bowed heads and prayer to the Sepulchre of our Saviour, was nation-wide recognized as a stimulant to the Church of Jesus Christ. And in this connection, I heartily agree with Col. Roosevelt and President Wilson in their praise of your patriotism in offering your large holdings in Washington free to the Government during the continuance of the war. The impulse which prompted you to donate to our Government its bonds, which were accepted and cancelled, was a true sacrifice for our country.

Although your offer to organize and equip a company and go with it as a private, to assist in the taking of Jerusalem was not accepted because this country was not at war with Turkey, and in this our dear President acted as he believed best, still I regret that you and the patriotic men who were willing to follow you, were not with Gen. Allenby when he entered the Holy City. It would have been a proud inheritance to America had she been able to assist in retaking of the Holy City.

Such patriotic men as you are an honor to the Nation, and I pray and ask the prayers of the Church, that your life may be spared for many years, and at last, in the Great Beyond, that you may enter among the Blessed for the good deeds you have done here on earth.

Sincerely yours,
James Cardinal Gibbons

Another letter that is a treasured possession of the Randle family is an autograph letter by General Allenby to U.S. Randle, fifteen-year-old son of Col. Randle, who followed General Allenby's campaign in Palestine and wrote a history of it. In the letter, General Allenby describes his capture of Jerusalem. It follows:

High Commissioner For Egypt

The Residency, Cairo

7th March 1924

Dear Sir:

I have received your letter of 11th February 1924, and learn with interest that you are writing a history of the campaign in Palestine, 1917. I wish your history all success, but I regret that I have not had time to write a descriptive letter at length. After a long preparation during the season of 1917. Beer Sheba was attacked and taken on the 31st of October; and Gaza fell a few days later. Thus the Turks lost the two strong places on their left (Beer Sheba) and their right (Gaza), and had to fall back. We pursued, through the plain of Philistia (or Canaan); occupied Jafa and Ludd; and drove them up the Judean Mountains, on to Jerusalem. On the 9th of December, the Turks left Jerusalem, retreated north, and Jerusalem surrendered. We entered the city on the 11th. During the campaign we fought in sandy plains, in marshes and in mud, and over rocky hills; enduring heat and draughts, cold and wet. Besides cavalry, artillery and infantry we used camel corps, riflemen riding camels, and airplanes.

The transport included automobiles, horses, camels, and donkeys. Of camels, we used 30,000 or 40,000; of donkeys, we used 2,000 or 3,000 in the mountains, where paths were steep and narrow. I thank you for the enclosures sent in your letter; and I send, herewith, my photograph as requested.

Yours faithfully,
Allenby, F.M.

U.S. Randle, Esq.
Care Arthur E. Randle,
Randle Highlands,
Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

Colonel Randle is a widower, and U.S. Randle is an only child. He maintains his residence at Randle Highlands and devotes all of his time to managing his own estate. He is a member of the New York Chamber of Commerce, the Washington Board of Trade, and the Washington Chamber of Commerce.

High recognition is given to Colonel Randle as a public benefactor in working for the reclamation of Anacostia Flats. This is given high testimony to in the following letter written by U.S. Senator Galliger to the secretary of the citizens Association of Randle Highlands:

United States Senate
Conference of the Minority
Washington, D.C.

John John, Esq.,

Secretary of the Citizens Association of Randle Highlands

My Dear Sir:

If time permitted I would accept your invitation to address you on the subject of the reclamation of Anacostia Flats.

To this work I have given much labor and thought; the many years that I was chairman of the district committee put me in contact with this great undertaking. The Anacostia Flats were a national disgrace; the sewerage of the city emptied into it, and its waters were covered with a green scum that caused it to be a breeding place for disease which impaired the health of residents of the District. There are mounds throughout the country under which rest victims of the Anacostia Flats. Many men in public life, and their families have had their health impaired by the malarial influences of this disgrace, which had its fatal end long after they had left Washington. The government made Manila and the Canal Zone sanitary, while right in our midst the Anacostia Flats remained a menace to public health.

A public spirited citizen of your town (Arthur E. Randle) organized a company to bring influences to bear to reclaim the Flats. This was an ingenious and successful plan, which acted as a fulcrum to lift up and raise these low lands from a death producing plot to high ground, that will in later years add to the beauty of our Capital. Interesting citizens throughout the various States in property in your section was a wise act, as citizens in the District of Columbia have no representation in Congress, but citizens outside the District have. Under their influence work soon began, and the Flats today are practically reclaimed, from the mouth of the Anacostia River up to and beyond Randle Highlands, and the balance of the work is being vigorously pushed and in a few years will be completed. This was brought about by the assistance of constituents of representatives throughout the country, as they had a direct and personal interest.

While chairman of the District of Columbia Committee I labored earnestly to assist in bringing about the great undertaking, and in this connection I wish to State that the founder of your town and Congress Heights rendered Congress invaluable services; his many years of faithful labor on this work has not been known, but the time will come when Arthur E. Randle has passed away, his name will be classed with that of Alexander R. Sheppard, as a public benefactor.

Yours sincerely,
J.H. Gallinger,
U.S. Senator

A History of the City of Washington, Its Men and Institutions

Arthur Emmett Randle comes from old revolutionary stock, which, in a measure, may account for the will and energy which infuses all the enterprises in which he becomes interested. Success of an unbounded degree has ever attended his efforts and none more notable than the founding and building up of that beautiful and model suburban town known as Congress Heights, which when purchased by Mr. Randle was a farm.

Mr. Randle is a son of Henry and Eliza C. Lawrence Randle, and was born in Artesia, Mississippi, on January 17, 1859. His maternal grandparents, Rev. Nathaniel Lawrence, an Episcopal clergyman, and Mary A. Rump Shuler, were residents of South Carolina. His father's parents were Wiatt Randle of Virginia and Sarah Tomplinson of North Carolina. A great-grandfather, Colonel William Randle, served with distinction and honor during the revolutionary war. Educated at public and private schools at Artesia. Mr. Arthur E. Randle later attended Shortledge's Academy at Media, Pennsylvania, and finished his education at the University of Pennsylvania. After leaving college, Mr. Randle, instead of following his ambition to be a lawyer, owing to his ill health at that time, took up in its place a business career, the crowning achievement of which will always stand as a monument to his memory as a man of resourceful energy -- the building up of that beautiful section of the District of Columbia known as Congress Heights.

The Washington Post, March 17, 1900, in commenting on the wonderful growth of Congress Heights said: "The growth of Washington can be seen in every direction. The northwest has mighty forces at work for that section, but Mr. Randle has been alone in building up Congress Heights. In 1890 when he bought John Jay Knox's farm, which he sub-divided and named Congress Heights, that section of the District was the most neglected around Washington, but by energy and unrelenting work he has placed it ahead of any other suburb of Washington. He built the Capital Railway during the panic, when its rival, the Anacostia road, had him engaged in a struggle, either in Congress over its charter rights, or before the Commissioners, with every conceivable obstruction, or in the courts with injunctions. For eighteen months the struggle continued, but Mr. Randle finally won, and when the great railroad consolidation took place in Washington, Mr. Randle sold his road for a large sum, with a guarantee of first-class service to his town, Congress Heights, over the great system of street railroads, so Congress Heights can now be reached over a $20,000,000 system of railways for one fare. In addition to this he secured an appropriation from Congress for a $21,000 school building, which is located in the center of his town, and is now occupied by five teachers and 250 scholars. He has the streets lighted, post office established, churches built, police protection, and a number of other improvements, which assures a great future for Congress Heights. He has fulfilled every promise made to Congress, the Commissioners, and the citizens."

Mr. Randle's latest enterprise is the development of East Washington Heights. This section of the country today is a wilderness -- not a house is on Pennsylvania avenue east of Minnesota avenue and it has no street railway facilities. Mr. Randle has acquired the controlling interest in the charter of East Washington Heights Traction Company and has been elected president of the same. Since acquiring control of the charter, Mr. Randle has secured from Congress the right to build an electric railroad across the Pennsylvania avenue bridge, which right the original incorporators of the company failed to obtain, and the charter was on the eve of being forfeited when Mr. Randle purchased the same. He has also bought large tracts of land along Pennsylvania avenue, which this road, when built, will develop. Mr. Randle donated the ground, and his wife, who was the daughter of the late Dr. Samuel H. Shannon, built the Episcopal Church at Congress Heights, dedicated to the memory of her mother, Esther Shannon, who was from Schuylkill country, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Randle's father was a cotton planter, and had a family of nine children. All except Mary Fredonia, John Shuler, Charles Clement and William Henry Randle died in infancy. The first named married Dr. O.C. Brothers, a retired physician in Mississippi. They had two children, O.C. Brothers, Jr., and Mary Lula Brothers, the latter marrying Thomas C. Kimbrough, an attorney. John Shuler Randle and Charles Clement Randle died when about thirty years old, neither of them being married. William Henry Randle is a physician in Philadelphia, and inter-married with Mellie Lippincott Harmer, daughter of the late A.C. Harmer, who at the time of his death was the Father of the House of Representatives, having been in Congress for about thirty years. Dr. Randle has only one child, Elizabeth Harmer Randle. Mr. and Mrs. A.E. Randle have no children.

Mr. Randle is a Democrat and still retains his citizenship in Mississippi, where he has been repeatedly urged to run for Congress. Governor Longino of Mississippi has recently appointed him on his staff as colonel of cavalry. He is a member of the New York Chamber of Commerce and the Washington Board of Trade.

In Senate

The following message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Clarke, their Clerk:

Mr. President: I am directed to announce to the Senate, the death of the Hon. Christopher Rankin, late a member of the House of Representatives from the State of Mississippi, and that his funeral will take place tomorrow, at the hour of twelve o'clock.

On the motion of Mr. Williams, it was Resolved, That the Senate will attend the funeral of the Hon. Christopher Rankin, late a member of the House of Representatives from the State of Mississippi, tomorrow at 12 o'clock, and, as a testimony of respect for the memory of the deceased, they will go into mourning, and wear crape round the left arm for thirty days.

And then the Senate adjourned.

House of Representatives

After the reading of the Journal, Mr. Owen of Alabama, rose, and announced to the House the death of the Hon. Christopher Rankin, the Representative from the State of Mississippi, in the following terms:

Mr. Speaker: The painful duty of announcing to the House the death of the distinguished Representative of the State of Mississippi, has devolved on me. I do not, I cannot, attempt a panegyric on the memory of the deceased. His death is a national calamity. He was, sire, a statesman, a patriot and an honest man: his loss to his State is irreparable; his place here cannot easily be filled. Virtuous, philanthropic, and charitable, all who knew him were his friends--enemies he had none.

Whereupon, on motion of Mr. Owen, the House came to the following resolutions:

Resolved unanimously, That the Members of this House will testify their respect for the memory of Christopher Rankin, by wearing crape on their left arm for thirty days.

Resolved, unanimously, That the Members of this House will attend the funeral of the late Christopher Rankin, tomorrow at 12 o'clock.

Resolved, That a Committee of Arrangement be appointed, and that the Senate be notified thereof. And then the House adjourned till tomorrow at 11 o'clock.

The National Intelligencer, Friday, March 17, 1826

The House of Representatives assembled yesterday, according to adjournment, at 11 o'clock; when the Journal was read, and on motion of Mr. Campbell of Ohio, the House immediately adjourned.

Soon afterwards, the President of the United States (Adams) and the Heads of Departments entered the Hall, and took their seats on the left of the Speaker's Chair, in the circular space in front of the Clerk's Table. At half past eleven the coffin, containing the remains of the deceased Member, the lamented Rankin, preceded by the Sergeant-at-arms and Committee of Arrangements and followed by the pall bearers, was brought in and placed in the center of the Hall. At a quarter before twelve, the Senate, preceded by their Secretary and Sergeant-at-arms, with the Vice President of the United States at their head, entered, and took the seats reserved from them in front. Soon after which, the Judges of the Supreme Court, preceded by the Marshal, appeared and took their places.

The Rev. Mr. Post, Chaplain to the House of Representatives, then rose, and read the 15th Chapter of the 1st Epistle of Corinthians. After which he made a very solemn and appropriate address on the general topics incident to the occasion, in which he adverted in an affecting manner, to the peaceful death of the departed. He closed his remarks with an affectionate exhortation to all to prepare for this solemn event, which no man can avert or avoid. The address was followed by prayer, and then the procession was formed in the order usual on such occasions, and bent its way to the receptacle alike of greatness and humility. The body of the deceased was laid by the side of his peers, who preceded him in their arrival at the goal of life. His memory is embalmed in the affections of his friends, and the respect of all men.

Death of The Hon. Robert Rantoul, Jr.

We are sincerely sorry to have to announce to our readers the death of the Hon. Robert Rantoul, one of the Representatives from the State of Massachusetts.

Mr. Rantoul was in his seat in the House on Tuesday last, the 3d instant. At that time he appeared to be in usual health, with the exception of what he considered to be a small boil upon his forehead. On Wednesday morning the little sore was surrounded by erysipelatous inflammation, in consequence of which he was prevailed upon to remain in his room and procure medical advice. Thursday the disease seemed to be entirely arrested, and on Friday morning he felt very much better, and spoke confidently of returning in a day or two to his duties in the House. On Friday evening he became much worse; the erysipelas spread over the entire face, and his brain was evidently affected. On Saturday evening the left side became paralytic, after which he sank rapidly, and expired at about half-past 10 o'clock p.m.

Mr. Rantoul was forty-seven years of age.

At the desire of Mrs. Rantoul, (who, having notice of his illness, arrived in Washington on Saturday morning,) the remains of the deceased were taken to Beverly, (Mass.) Mr. Rantoul's late residence, on the 4 o'clock railroad train of yesterday, the Speaker of the House having designated Mr. Duncan and Mr. Goodrich, of Massachusetts, Mr. Cleveland, of Connecticut, and Mr. Eastman, of Wisconsin, to constitute the escort.

Obituary
On Thursday afternoon, the 11th inst. At his residence, on Capitol Hill, after a long and lingering illness, which he bore with singular fortitude and Christian resignation, Mr. Daniel Rapine, aged about fifty eight years, Postmaster of the House of Representatives of the United States.
" Sure the last end Of the good man is peace. How calm his exit! Night dews fall not more gently to the ground. Nor weary, worn-out winds expire so soft." -- Young
Mr. Rapine was born near Germantown, Pennsylvania, and came to this city soon after it was laid out. By profession, he was a bookseller, and by industriously following his vocation, amassed considerable property; of which, however, credulously believing in an imprudent friend, who became unfortunate, he lost the greater part.
In the year 1812, Mr. R. was chosen Mayor of this City, which office he filled to great satisfaction; but, in which capacity, his rheumatic affection took a firmer hold on him, and was one of the principal causes of terminating his life. He was early appointed a Justice of the Peace in and for Washington County, and, if there ever was a strictly impartial man, that man was Daniel Rapine. Neither the frowns and authoritative of the rich and high standing, nor the obsequiousness and servility of the poor and humble, received other than even handed justice through him. His most striking characteristics were mildness and charity; "innocence was seated on his brow, and the milk of human kindness flowed around his heart."
The writer of this from childhood, knew Mr. R. and can safely assert that he never knew him to flatter any one, nor disguise, on any subject, his real sentiments. As a friend, he was candid, sincere, and constant; as a man of business his integrity was undeviatingly and inflexibly correct; as a citizen, his honesty, industry, and sobriety, procured him the love and esteem of all; and as a father, he was kind, indulgent, and pious; which last transcendent virtue supported him in his late long and lingering illness, and has borne him, we trust to a happier and a better world, to receive the recompense of his worth.
He possessed his reason, uninjured, to the last; and, to a friend, a few days before his death, on being asked how he felt, replied, "I feel tolerably easy; for Providence kindly diminishes our sensibility as the strength of disease increases."
The loss of such a man to the city can only be appreciated by the want of another like him; and the greatest consolation to his interesting family, who have suffered an incalculable loss, will be found in their being accompanied in their mourning, by nearly the whole city, as with one voice. S.A.E.

There it remained, the business constantly growing, until May, 1901, when larger quarters being needed, Mr. Rau moved his establishment to its present location, at 524 12th street northwest. The establishment while occupying an unpretentious building, is filled with electrical appliances of all kinds, and there are few things needed in the shape of electrical fittings of machinery that cannot be found there. But only a small portion of the stock carried by the firm is at 524 12th street, the bulk of the stock and the larger machinery being stored in the storehouse of the firm in a building near the corner of 11th street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. A Large Wholesale Business The firm does a large wholesale business in electrical goods, in addition to the retail trade, and is ready on short notice to furnish any material that may be required in any class of electrical work. Mr. Rau also does electrical contracting, and has a force of twenty men steadily employed in installing electrical apparatus in buildings throughout the city. A feature is made of work that requires neatness and where great care must be exercised in order not to disfigure fine interiors. The firm has installed electrical work at the Soldiers' Home, in several of the large hotels and in numerous fine residences in the northwest section of the city. Last Saturday evening Suitland, a small village in Prince George's County, Md., was the scene of a murder. The victim was George Rawlett, a young man eighteen years of age, who has been learning the trade of blacksmithing in the shop in the village, owned by a Mr. Gray. Rawlett's home was in this city, where he had a widowed mother, whose only support he was. Shortly before the event Rawlett and his employer, Gray, left the blacksmith shop and went across the street to the little village store. While there four negroes entered, all evidently under the influence of liquor and in a quarrelsome mood. In a few minutes one of them named Sims, drew a revolver from his pocket and began flourishing it around his head. His companions undertook to disarm him, but he escaped them by running a short distance from the store. When about fifty feet away he turned and, facing the store, shouted: "I'm Going to Shoot to Kill and I don't care who goes under." He took deliberate aim at the crowd who were endeavoring to escape from the dangerous locality and fired. The bullet struck young Rawlett (who was watching the fracas from the store) squarely in the left temple and he fell without a groan, against his employer Gray, who was standing beside him, and then dropped to the floor, where he died almost instantly. Mr. Gray secured a revolver and started to capture the murderer, who had made his escape after firing the fatal shot. After a long chase the murderer was found hiding in a farm yard and

The body of the murdered man was brought to his home at the corner of 6th and H streets southwest. The deceased bore a good reputation among those who knew him.

The funeral of Geo. Rawlett, the young man who was shot and instantly killed by a negro in Suitland, Prince George's County, Md., last Saturday evening, took place yesterday afternoon from his mother's residence, corner of 6th and H streets southwest. Sheriff Robey, of that county, brought Simms, the colored man charged with the murder, and locked him up in the Marlboro jail. Last evening Officer Slack, of the Metropolitan police force of this District, arrested a colored man named Patrick Addison, who, it is charged, was engaged in the fight when Simms fired the fatal shot. Addison was surrendered to Sheriff Robey.
The Evening Star, September 30, 1887 Burial of a Newsboy Touching Scene at the Funeral of George Rawlett Who Was Murdered At Suitland
A sad and touching scene occurred on Tuesday last at the humble home of Geo. Rawlett, the boy who was murdered at Suitland last Saturday. The service of the Episcopal Church, of which his mother was a member, was read by Rev. Mr. Lee and a delegation of boys from the Newsboy's and Children's Aid Society, of which the deceased was a member, placed a cross of white flowers on the coffin, and then bore their dead comrade to his last resting place followed by his widowed mother.
After the death of his father, nine years ago, George helped his mother by selling The Evening Star until large enough to do other work. A year ago he was placed, by the Newsboy's and Children's Aid Society, with Mr. Walters, to learn blacksmithing, but was found to be too small, and so waited another year. He bore a good name, and his recommendations registered him in high terms.
At a meeting of the newsboys the following drawn up by a committee consisting of Benjamin Carrigo, Geo. R. Burns, Alfred Fauth, Edward Kelley, Arthur Thomas and John Plunkett, was unanimously adopted:
"At a meeting of the boys held at the house of Bennie Carrigo, 4 Essex court, it was resolved that we tender to the mother and little sister of our dead friend, Geo. Rawlett, our heartfelt sympathy for their loss."

For the Relief of Geo. Rawlett's Family

To the Editor of The Evening Star:

Your repeated kindness in distressful cases encourages me to ask a little space to make an appeal in behalf of the widowed mother and little sister of the late George Rawlett, who was murdered in Suitland lately. When I first came to this city his family occupied a small house in the rear of one in which I was living, and their good qualities were especially noticeable and commendable. George was then about ten years old, and ever on the alert to put in coals, split kindlings, clear off snow, or do anything else he could get to do, giving every cent he earned to his mother. When the family moved to another house I saw but little of them, except George, whom I used to meet selling papers. Then he drove a hill-horse, and at last went to learn the blacksmith's trade. Just two weeks before he was killed I chanced to meet him on a 7th street car, and he told me with much satisfaction of his progress and how he hoped soon to be able to entirely support his mother. Not long ago, Mrs. Rawlett got a severe fall from a street car, from the effects of which she is still suffering. If you will kindly take charge of the contributions, which I hope will be sent you, I will start the paper with $2.

Yours respectfully,
David S.L. Johnson

The Shooting of Young Rawlett

Spriggs, The Colored Prisoner, Says He Did Not Fire The Shot

Benj. Spriggs, the young colored man charged with the murder of Geo. Rawlett, the blacksmith's apprentice, near Suitland, about a week ago, is confined in the jail at Upper Marlboro, Prince George's County, Md., to await the result of the investigation by the grand jury. The prisoner's sister has retained Messrs. Earle and Pugh, of this city, and Mr. Merrick, brother of Judge Merrick, to look after her brother's interests. Mr. Pugh paid a visit to his client Saturday morning, and was informed by the latter that he was not guilty of the murder charged against him. Spriggs denied that he had a pistol in his possession on the day of the shooting. He said he left Washington about 7:30 o'clock Saturday evening to attend a concert given by his uncle in the country; that he drank some beer in the city; on his way to Maryland he drank beer at two places, and when he arrived at Suitland he met four men, with whom he went into the store. While in the store they got into a discussion about dancing. The discussion lasted about ten minutes and they left the store. The men wanted him to go with them. Two of them started ahead and he stayed behind. A minute or two later the firing commenced, but he did not know who did it. After the shooting was over and he was walking down the road he was arrested by two men and turned over to a special officer, and he was afterward taken to jail.

Convicted of Murder in the Second Degree

The trial of Benjamin Spriggs, colored, for the murder of Geo. Rawlett, was concluded at Upper Marlboro, Md., last evening with a verdict of murder in the second degree. The prisoner was sentenced to the penitentiary for seventeen years and six months. Spriggs killed Geo. Rawlett, seventeen years old, at Suitland, September 24, it will be remembered.

Secretary Rawlins, His Critical Condition

No Hopes of His Recovery: He is Baptized and Makes His Will

The Feeling in Washington

Sketch of The Secretary's Life

No event has called forth so many expressions of regret and sympathy from the citizens of Washington for years as the dangerous illness of General John A. Rawlins, Secretary of War. His patriotism, courage, strict integrity, earnest devotion to his duties, and uniform courtesy and gentleness have won for him the highest respect and esteem of his associates in military and civil life, and the love of the people in all stations.

A few days ago Secretary Rawlins was removed from his rooms on F street opposite the Ebbitt House, to the residence of General Giles A. Smith, one of his old companions in arms, Second Assistant Postmaster General, No. 6 Grant Place. Here he has had every attention. His physicians, Dr. D.W. Bliss, Surgeon General Barnes, and Professor Tyler, have been constant in their attendance while Drs. Norris and Cady, in addition, were present yesterday. Among those with the Secretary yesterday and last night were Senator Morton; General J.E. Smith, General O.O. Howard, Quartermaster; General Meigs, Adjutant; General Townsend, General Eaton, General Ekin, General Parker, of the Indian Bureau, General Dent, and Colonel J.W. Forney.

Notwithstanding the feeble condition of the Secretary yesterday morning, he signified his desire to make his last will and dictating the same to Colonel Parker, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, his confidential friend and companion, in the afternoon, at his request, Rev. Mr. Wilson, of McKendree M.E. Chapel, was sent for, who passed some time with him, during which the Sacrament of Baptism and of the Lord's Supper was administered.

During yesterday General Rawlins had a very interesting conversation with the Postmaster General, in which, with great clearness, he set forth his views on reconstruction and the condition of the Union men of the South, and the struggling people of Cuba. He spoke with great solemnity, and impressed all who heard him with profound sincerity. During his illness he has been visited regularly by all the members of the Cabinet in Washington, namely: Secretaries Robeson, Fish, Cox, and Cresswell.

In reply to a dispatch from the Secretary of the Navy, at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, informing President Grant of the dangerous condition of General Rawlins, the President telegraphed as follows:

Saratoga, Sept. 5 -- Tell Secretary Rawlins I leave here within an hour for Washington. U.S. Grant.

The next dispatch from Saratoga reads as follows:

Saratoga, Sept. 5 -- The President left here on the 5:50 train this afternoon, for Washington. He was to have left tomorrow, with his family, for Utica, to visit Hon. Roscoe Conkling, but the character of dispatches received today from Washington induced the President to write the following letter:

Hon. Roscoe Conkling -- My Dear Sir: It is with extreme regret that the continued and dangerous illness of Secretary Rawlins whose relations have been so intimate with me since the breaking out of the rebellion to the present day, compels me to forego the contemplated pleasure of a visit to your city tomorrow. I know that you and no other friends will appreciate the motive which calls me from a pleasure trip to the bedside of a comrade who has rendered such signal service to his country, and whose death will cast a gloom over the nation. The most recent dispatches scarcely have a hope that I may see him alive. I am, very sincerely yours. U.S. Grant.

The President left Saratoga yesterday afternoon with his family and arrived in New York on the evening train, when he proceeded to the residence of Mr. Corbin, where he left his family. He left New York for Washington on the train this morning and will reach here this evening at 5:15.

Secretary Rawlins gradually failed during the night and continued to grow weaker during the morning. At ten o'clock today he was perfectly conscious, but seemed to be growing dull and his physicians were fearful that his brain would soon become affected. His pulse ranged from 110 to 115 and he appears to be suffering more this morning than heretofore. The little nourishment which he is able to take, consisting of chicken broth, seems to have no effect. He has given up all hope of life, and is perfectly resigned. A coughing spell at intervals of about half an hour, arouses him for a short time, after which he sinks back and remains perfectly quiet. It is the opinion of his physicians that he may linger in this condition until tonight, though a sudden congestion of the lungs may take him off at any time. Dispatches are sent to Mrs. Rawlins at Danbury, Connecticut, every half hour, giving her an account of his condition. Secretaries Robeson and Cox, Postmaster General Cresswell, Gen. Sherman, Gen. Meigs, Sen. Swayne and Gen. Boardman were at the bedside of Secretary Rawlins today with his physicians, Surgeon General Barnes, Dr. Bliss and Dr. Cady.

Secretary Rawlings was born at Gilford in Davies county, Ill. on the 12th of February, 1831, and was a prominent member of the legal profession in that State until he entered the army in 1861, at which time he was very healthy, but in 1863 he contracted a severe cold from exposure in the field which brought on consumption, and since that time he has suffered frequently from hemorrhages. A few months since his physicians changed the manner of treatment to the inhalation of remedies, upon which he rapidly improved and in a few months gained several pounds of flesh. His diet consisted principally of raw beef and milk from which he derived much benefit. Enjoying better health for the past six months than for several years before until his return from his recent visit to his family in Danbury, Conn., when the excitement occasioned by travelling produced another hemorrhage, since which he has been rapidly sinking. His father and mother are both living at Galena, Ill. Mrs. Rawlins, his second wife, and the two children by his first wife are at Danbury, Conn. Mrs. R., who was confined several weeks ago, is too feeble to move, and what adds to her distress is the death of her infant a few days ago.

Secretary Rawlins, in politics, was formerly a Democrat, and was active in the support of the principles of that party, adhering to Mr. Douglas as their exponent, and was the candidate for Presidential Elector from the First Congressional District of Illinois on the Douglas ticket in 1860, and canvassed his district in its support, holding joint discussions in each county with the Republican candidate for Presidential Elector, Judge Allen C. Fuller. His party and personal friends awarded to him much credit for ability in these discussions. When the war came, which he had tried to avert, he promptly took his stand on the side of the Union, believing it to be the duty of every American citizen to support his country and to maintain in authority its constitutionally elected Executive, even to the laying down of his life, if need be; and with all his ability and influence he sought to make this the generally received view of others, especially of his own party, many of whom were timid about taking sides. A few nights after the firing on Sumter, a meeting of the citizens of Galena was held, and a prominent Democrat was called to the chair. He had begun to talk about "Republican responsibility for the war" and "compromises" when Hon. E.B. Washburne rebuked him by exclaiming, "Mr. Chairman, any man who will try to stir party prejudices at this time is a traitor." At the same moment Rawlins entered the hall, and loud cries called him to the stand. He advanced and made a speech lasting half an hour, ending with these words: "I have been a Democrat all my life; but this is no longer a question of politics. It is simply country or no country. I have favored every honorable compromise; but the day of compromise is passed. Only one course is left us. We will stand by the flag of our country and appeal to the god of battles."

A few evenings afterward Rawlins and Grant met at another war meeting, and Rawlins jestingly proposed to Grant that they should get up a company. "As you have seen service you shall be captain," he said; "and Rowley and I will toss up to see which shall be first lieutenant." On receipt of the news of the first Bull Run disaster, he commenced in conjunction with John F Smith (subsequently brevet major general volunteers) and J.A. Maliby to raise the Forty-fifth or "Lead-mine regiment," Illinois infantry volunteers; when in August he received from General Grant, with whom he had been acquainted from the time of his settling in Galena, and for whose house in that place he was the attorney), without having sought it, the tender of a position on his staff, which he accepted. The dangerous illness of Mrs. Rawlins (who had been long a sufferer from consumption, and was then at her father's Mr. Hiram Smith, at Goshen, New York) called him East, where he remained by her side until her decease, August 30th. With the severe personal affliction resting upon him he made arrangements for the care of the three children that she left -- a son and two daughters -- the eldest of whom was in his fifth year, and joined Gen. Grant on the 15th of September, at Cairo, Ill., as his assistant adjutant general, with the rank of captain, having been appointed such the 30th of the preceding month, and was with him from that time, in all his battles and campaigns and military operations in the field, until the surrender of the army of Northern Virginia at Appomattox Court House, Va., except about two months -- from the 31st of July, 1864 to the 1st of October following -- he was absent for the treatment of a severe bronchial affection he had contracted in the service.

The relations between General Grant and General Rawlins, personally and officially, were always of the most intimate, friendly, and confidential character. He was commissioned major and assistant adjutant general, to rank from the date of the surrender of Fort Donelson; was assigned in orders as assistant adjutant general and chief of staff, with the rank of lieutenant colonel, November 1, 1862; was appointed a brigadier general of volunteers, to rank from August 11, 1863; breveted major general of volunteers to rank from February 24, 1865, March 3, 1865, he was appointed chief of staff to the lieutenant general commanding, with the rank of brigadier general in the United States army; and was subsequently breveted major general United States army, to rank from March 13, 1865. In 1865, Congress created the title of general, which was bestowed on Lieutenant General Grant; at the same time General Rawlins was designated as chief of staff to the general commanding the armies.

The following letters show in some degree the high opinion Gen. Grant had of his Chief of Staff.

Headquarters Department of Tennessee, Vicksburg, Miss., July 21, 1863 -- Brigadier General L Thomas, Adjutant General of the Army -- General: I would respectfully recommend for gallant and meritorious services, and for extreme fitness for command corresponding to the increased rank the following promotions, to wit:

Here follows the list of officers recommended for promotion, including Lieutenant Colonel Rawlins. He then adds:

Lieutenant Colonel John A Rawlins has been my Assistant Adjutant General from the beginning of the rebellion. No officer has now a more honorable reputation than he has; and I think I can safely say that he would make a good corps commander. This promotion I would particularly ask as a reward of merit.

I am, General, very respectfully your obedient servant. U.S. Grant, Major General

Washington, D.C., April 4, 1864 -- Hon. Henry Wilson, Chairman Committee on Military Affairs -- Sir: I would most respectfully but earnestly ask for the confirmation of Brigadier General John A. Rawlins by your honorable body. General Rawlins has served with me from the beginning of the rebellion. I know he has most richly earned his present position. He comes the nearest being indispensable to me of any officer in the service; but if his confirmation is dependent on his commanding troops, he shall command troops at once. There is no department commander near where he has served that would not most gladly give him the very largest and most responsible command his rank would entitle him to. Believing a short letter on this subject more acceptable than a long one, I will only add that it is my earnest desire that General Rawlins should be confirmed; that if he fails, besides the loss it will be to the service and to me personally, I shall feel that by keeping with me a valuable officer because he made himself valuable, I have worked him an injury. With great respect, your obedient servant, U.S. Grant, Lieut. Gen., U.S.A.

Headquarters Armies of the United States, City Point, Va., February 23, 1865 -- Dear Washburne: Enclosed I send you a letter just received from Colonel Duff, late of my staff. I should be delighted if an act should pass Congress giving the Commander of the army a chief of staff, with the rank of Brigadier General in the regular army. It is necessary to have such an officer, and I see no reason why the law should not give it. It would also reward an officer who has won more deserved reputation in this war than any other who has acted throughout purely as a staff officer. I write to you instead of Duff, knowing your present friendship for Rawlins, as well as myself, and because you are in a place to help the thing along, if you think well of it. U.S. Grant, Lieutenant General, U.S.A.

At the close of the war General Rawlins remained upon the staff of General Grant as chief, and upon the inauguration of General Grant as President, General Rawlins was nominated for Secretary of War and immediately confirmed. He at once entered upon the discharge of his duties, relieving Genl. Schofield. As Secretary of War he soon won the confidence and esteem of all having business with the department. He was an indefatigable worker, constantly at his post and ever zealous in the faithful discharge of his duties. Being thoroughly acquainted with the reconstruction laws, and having a practical knowledge of the requirements and conditions of the people of the South, he has worked hard to assist the President in carrying into effect the provisions of the Congressional enactments looking to the restoration of the southern States to the Union. With this experience he devoted himself earnestly to the work of reconstruction, and constantly urged the conciliatory policy recommended in General Grant's letters and official communications at the close of the campaign.

Later -- 3 p.m. -- Secretary Rawlins is still sinking, and his physicians think that he cannot live much longer. He is still conscious and during the day has frequently inquired if the President had arrived. Secretary Cox, Secretary Robeson, Postmaster General Cresswell, General Parker, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Surgeon General Barnes, General O.O. Howard, and General Swayne have been at his bedside during the day and a very large number of friends have called to inquire as to his condition.

Scenes and Incidents

This being the day appointed for the funeral obsequies of the late General John A. Rawlins, Secretary of War, Pennsylvania avenue was crowded from an early hour. The morning dawned beautifully, and throughout the day the weather was delightful, the heat of the sun being tempered by a refreshing breeze. The house tops, windows, porticoes, balconies, and footwalks along the route of the procession were packed with dense masses of spectators, among them being thousands of school children, the public and most of the private schools being closed for the day. The places of business along Pennsylvania avenue were closed; the stores and other buildings were draped in mourning and flags were at half-mast from all the prominent points.

At half-past 8 o'clock a.m., the carriages numbering about three hundred, assembled in front of Harvey & Marr's establishment, on F, between 9th and 10th streets, whence they proceed to the War Department, and were formed in line by Mr. Harvey Riley, of the Depot Quartermaster's Department.

Arrival of Troops

This morning two batteries of the 4th Artillery from Fort McHenry, near Baltimore, arrived on the early train, and marched to quarters in Corcoran's building opposite the War Department, first taking breakfast at a neighboring restaurant. These batteries are D and E, and each number about 60 men. Lieutenants Ledyard and Eckhart being the officers of the first named, and Col. Miller with Captains Ayeriot and Chester of the latter.

At the War Department

At the War Department the doors were opened before nine o'clock, but no one was admitted except the family and friends of the deceased; the President of the United States and the Cabinet; Heads of Bureaus, Senators and Representatives, members of the Diplomatic Corps, Officers of the Army, and employees of the War Department. Of the Army, there were present Generals Sherman, Humphreys, O.O. Shiras, Townsend, Ramsey, Eaton Crane, Ekin, Michler, Eaton, Williams, Meigs, and Dyer; Judge Advocate General Holt; Colonels Lee, Douglas, Sutherland, Audenreid, Dayton, and many others of less rank; Governor elect Walker, of Virginia; Mayor Bowen of Washington; Judge Grisham, of Indiana, and a few other distinguished persons.

The President accompanied by Secretary Fish, Attorney General Hoar, Postmaster General Cresswell, Acting Secretary Richardson and Assistant Secretary Otto, proceeded to the Navy Department, where they were joined by Secretary Robeson, and marched to the War Department, entering by the east door.

The Diplomatic Corps met at the War Department, in the room of Adjutant General Townsend. Among them were Mr. Edward Thornton, the British Minister; Baron Gerolt, Minister of the North German Union; M. Defosse, Belgian Minister; Senor Magalhaens, Brazilian Minister; A. Mazel, Minister from the Netherlands; Mr. Dantas, of the Russian Legation; Baltazzi Effendi, of the Turkish Legation, and a large number of secretaries and attaches of the various legations.

When the procession moved, among those present were Admirals Dahlgren, Lee, Goldsborough, Poore and Bailey, Commodores Harwood and Case, Capt.s. Shirk, Wyman, Simpson and Ammen, Commander Alden, Surgeon Williams, Majors Nicholson and Cash, of the Marine Corps and other Navy and Marine officers of lesser rank now on duty in this city.

The officers of the Navy and Marine Corps met at the Navy Department at nine o'clock, numbering about fifty, and took carriages in front of that department.

Mrs. Rawlins at the War Department

Mrs. Rawlins, wife of the Secretary, arrived here this morning on the early train and proceeded to Willard's Hotel, accompanied by Mrs. Hurlburt, her mother, and the three children of the Secretary by his former wife. At ten o'clock they reached the War Department, Mrs. Rawlins leaning on the arm of Commissioner Parker, the intimate friend of the late Secretary. Upon entering the room where the remains were, she seemed to be overwhelmed with grief. General Sherman very properly had the doors of the room closed after she and the other relatives of the deceased had entered. Besides those above mentioned there were present Mr. James Rawlins, brother of the General, Miss Sarah Rawlins, Mrs. Charles Hume, and Mr. and Mrs. T.L. Hume, cousins of the late Secretary. After the family had taken their last sorrowful look at the face of the deceased the doors of the room were thrown open.

Preparations for the Funeral

The President, Secretary Fish, Attorney General Hoar, Postmaster General Cresswell, Secretary Robeson, Acting Secretary Richardson, and Assistant Secretary Otto entered the room and passed around the coffin. They were followed by the officiating clergymen, Rev. Mr. Wilson, of McKendree Chapel; Rev. B. Peyton Brown, of Wesley Chapel; Rev. Dr. J.G. Butler, Chaplain of the House of Representatives and Rev. Dr. Wm. Hamilton. Then followed the members of the Diplomatic Corps, above mentioned; Drs. Bliss and Cady, the attending physicians of the deceased; Senators Cole and Spencer, Maj. McDonald, Reading Clerk of the Senate, Gen. Sherman, and the officers of the army as stated above.

The Funeral Service

All being in readiness, Rev. Dr. Butler, standing at the foot of the coffin, addressed the Throne of Divine Grace, as follows:

The Prayer

Great God! the God of our fathers, and the God and father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Thou art our King forever. We rejoice that Thou art the God of life and of death. We acknowledge thy hand in this painful dispensation, and reverently draw nigh to Thee in the name of Jesus, our elder brother, and beg Thee for his sake to have mercy on us. We thank Thee for the hope we have gathered around this coffin. Blessed be God for the hope inspired in us by the Gospels and the abundant consolations of these to Thy servants in their sorrow. We pray Thee to have the widow in Thy whole keeping and grant her Thy peace to enable her to bear her sorrows. We pray Thee that she may be sustained by Thine almighty hand. Thou art the Great Shepherd, care for these orphan ones, lambs of the flock. Be to them, in this time of the defencelessness and helplessness, a comfort and a consolation. Remember Thy servant, the President of the United States, give him wisdom and guide him and those associated with him in Cabinet Council. May those who bear rule in this land be guided by Thee and remember the account we must all render to

The Procession

The procession moved off in the following order: Battalion of U.S. Marines, under the command of Lieut. Colonel Haywood, four companies, numbering 120 men, commanded respectively by Lieuts Nokes, Young, Goodrill and Porter, headed by the fine band of the corps, numbering 28 pieces, led by Scala, and 14 pieces of field music. This battalion is the showy uniform of the corps and by their fine state of discipline, attracted much attention.

The Wallach School Building

At a special meeting of the Sub-Board of Trustees of Schools of the Third District, held yesterday afternoon, it was decided to make some demonstration, as the funeral cortege would pass the Wallach School Building. The building was accordingly draped in mourning, and as the procession passed the children of the various schools, numbering about 300, all dressed in white, were assembled on the terrace, and united in singing the following selection from the "Song Garden:"

The Soldier's Grave

Night winds are mournfully sweeping,
Whispering oak-branches wave
Where your loved ashes are sleeping,
Form of the true and the brave.
Silence reigns breathless around you,
All your stern conflicts are o'er,
Deep is the sleep that hath bound you,
Trumpet shall rouse you no more.

Sweet and serene be your slumber;
Hearts for whose freedom you bled,
Millions whom no man can number,
Tears of sad gratitude shed.
Never shall morn, brightly breaking,
Enter your chamber of gloom,
Till the last trumpet awaking
Sounds through the depths of the tomb.

At the Cemetery

At an early hour this morning the principal gateway of Congressional Cemetery was draped in mourning, as also the vault of the Blagden family, situated a few yards south of the gate on the main walk, in which the remains of the deceased were to be deposited. Long before the procession appeared in sight large numbers gathered about the cemetery and some were admitted, but the larger portion were kept out. Lieutenant Austin, with the officers of the Eight Precinct, kept the vicinity of the vault clear, while the officers of the Second Precinct, (Lieutenant Johnson,) being mounted, kept the entrance clear.

At the Tomb

At 12:15 the hearse was halted at the gate, and, preceded by the clergy, the pall-bearers, and the undertakers, Messrs. Harvey A. Marr, the remains were carried slowly to the vault--the band playing a dead march--by eight cavalrymen, where it was placed on the bier, the mourners following.

The Service At The Tomb

Just before the remains reached the vault of Mr. Thomas Blagden, Rev. S.A. Wilson, of McKendree Chapel, who attended the deceased in his last illness, read the burial services of the Methodist Episcopal Church as follows:

I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me, shall never die -- John xi, 25, 26.

I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another. -- Job xix, 25-27

We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord -- 1 Tim, vi, 7; Job 1,21.

The remains were then laid in the tomb, and Mr. Wilson continued the service by saying:

"Man that is born of a woman hath but a short time to live, and is full of misery. He

The Salute

As soon as the services at the tomb were over the usual honors were paid by the troops -- Col. Dupont's Battery firing three salvos from a point on Georgia avenue, west of the cemetery and the marines and artillery three volleys of musketry.

Departure of the Troops

The two batteries of the 4th artillery from Fort McHenry left in the 2:50 train this afternoon for Baltimore. The two batteries from Fortress Monroe will return tomorrow.

The Vault

In conversation with General Sherman yesterday, Mr. Harvey spoke of the crowded state of the receiving vault at the Congressional Cemetery, and suggested to the General that it would be well to endeavor to procure the use of one of the private vaults. General Sherman agreed with him, and wrote a letter, stating the circumstances, which he gave to Mr. Harvey, to be used as he saw fit. In company with Mr. Marr, Mr. H. visited Mr. Thomas Blagden, Esq. of this city yesterday afternoon, and that gentleman at once proffered the use of his commodious private vault, which was used for the reception of the remains of the illustrious dead, as above stated.

The body of Secretary Rawlins (late of Gen. Grant's staff) is still in the public vault at the Congressional Cemetery, but a few days since, Gen. Bust of the Late Secretary Rawlins--

A Cast Taken by M. Fisk Mills

Yesterday Messrs. Harvey & Marr, the undertakers, who had charge of the arrangements of the funeral of the lamented Secretary Rawlins, erected before the entrance of the tomb an arch formed of American flags and heavily draped in mourning. Mr. Fisk Mills, arrived at the cemetery grounds about two o'clock p.m., and preparations were made to obtain a cast of the face of the deceased. The burial case was taken from the vault and placed under the arch already formed, and the lid being removed, he proceeded to take the cast. The body and coffin trimmings were covered with cloths to prevent their being soiled. A coating of sweet oil was rubbed over the face, and a composition of plaster of paris and other ingredients was mixed, and while soft was spread over the face. In a little time this became quite hard, and was lifted off, giving a very fine cast of the features of the deceased. The operation was very successful, Mr. Mills being greatly pleased, saying that it was "very sharp," and would enable him to make a correct likeness of the deceased. The coffin lid was reset in cement and the remains replaced in the vault. The manner in which a cast will be taken is as follows: The mould as taken from the face will be prepared, and then filled with liquid plaster. This becoming hard, the mold will be taken off, the superfluous plaster cut away, and a facsimile of the face presented. It is the intention of Mr. Mills to make first a bust and then a statuette of the late Secretary.

Drops Dead At Office Soon After Arriving

Frank Kellogg Raymond, Department of Interior Clerk, Succumbs

Frank Kellogg Raymond, clerk in the supply division of the Interior Department, dropped dead this morning soon after reaching the office from his home at 147 Randolph place northwest. His death, it is believed, was due to an attack of heart disease.

Because of a confusion of names, it was reported that Frank K. Raymond prominent in Masonic and insurance circles, had died. The deceased, who was about sixty years old, was a native of Indiana. For a number of years he was court reporter in Topeka, Kan., and later in Ponca City, Okla.

In 1898 he came to this city and served as secretary to Judge Ryan, assistant secretary of the Interior Department, later accepting a position as clerk.

About ten years ago while Mr. Raymond was in this city, it is stated, his first wife and child were found unconscious from illuminating gas in the family home near San Francisco. The child died and Mrs. Raymond was sent to a hospital. Later the wife recovered. She is said to be residing in Wichita, Kan.

Married Second Time

Mr. Raymond married a second time and resided at 147 Randolph place. They have no children. The deceased was a member of Centennial Lodge, F.A.A.M., and was popular.

He was employed in the supply division a number of years and was regarded as a capable clerk and kind-hearted friend. A brother is employed in the pension office.

Coroner Nevitt gave a certificate of death from natural causes. The body was taken to an undertaker's establishment and arrangements for the funeral will be completed later.

Funeral of Capt. Raynor

Pythian Rites Over Remains at Congressional Cemetery

Funeral services over the remains of Capt. Edward Raynor, who died Friday afternoon of heart failure, were held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the residence of his son-in-law, Capt. William H. Davis, 704 H street southwest. The ceremonies were conducted by Rev. C.C. Meador, pastor of the Fifth Baptist Church, and were largely attended. The officiating pallbearers were chosen from the membership of Harmony Lodge, No. 21, Knights of Pythias. The interment was made in Congressional cemetery.

Captain Raynor was well known among the shippers of the Atlantic coast and the Chesapeake bay. He was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., and devoted his younger days to operating coastwise vessels from New York to the Chesapeake bay and its tributaries. When the civil war broke out he sailed to this city, and engaged in a variety of occupations. At the close of the war he engaged in the fishing business and subsequently took up the trade of boat building, which he was compelled to give up a short time ago on account of physical infirmities.

The Evening Star, February 11, 1896

Death of E.J. Rea

Edward J. Rea, a prominent and popular member of the Association of Eccentric Engineers died this morning of pneumonia. He was active and well known in the Knights of Labor and had held every office in Eccentric Engineers' Assembly 4806, at his death was recording secretary of that organization. He lived at 629 F street northwest and for years had been engineer of the Baltic building. He was widely known in labor circles and will be greatly missed.

The Evening Star, February 13, 1896

Honors to the Late Mr. Rea

A special meeting of the Eccentric Engineers' Association was held last evening to take action in reference to the death of Mr. E.J. Rea, who was one of the most active members of that body. Many persons not connected with the Eccentric Engineers, but prominent in the labor cause, were also present. Appropriate resolutions were unanimously adopted.

The resolutions were seconded by President James F. McHugh of the Federation of Labor. Speeches were also made by W.G.H. Simmons, master workman of District Assembly No. 66, K. of L.; Secretary Arthur Keep of the Federation of Labor Messrs. Trainor, Worden, Lawson, Holmes, Cuff and Dougherty.

Arrangements for the Funeral

The funeral arrangements, in which are also included those for the burial of Mrs. Rea, who died a few hours after her husband, are that the members of the Eccentric Engineers' Association shall assemble at Speare's undertaking establishment and escort the remains of the deceased engineer and his wife to Typographical Temple, where the services will be conducted by Rev. Alexander Kent, pastor of the People's Church.

The pallbearers will be selected from among prominent members of the Federation of Labor and D.A. 66, K. of L.

Many handsome floral tributes have been sent by different societies of organized labor as mementos of respect, and will be placed on the graves.

The Rea Obsequies

The funeral of E.J. Rea, a well-known Knight of Labor, and his wife, who died within a few hours of each other Tuesday, took place yesterday afternoon from Typographical Temple. Services were conducted by Rev. Alexander Kent of the People's Church, who preached from the text, "They were lovely in life, and in death they were not divided."

Representatives from many labor organizations were present. The remains were placed in adjoining graves in Congressional cemetery. It is now thought that the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rea, who, it was feared a couple of days ago would die, is somewhat better and may recover.

Read. On Tuesday, April 29th, 1884, William Read, late of Montgomery county, Maryland, died suddenly in Washington city. His funeral services were held in St. Andrew's church, Corcoran street, and his remains were laid in the Congressional Cemetery.

Mr. Read was born in New Castle, Delaware, April 24, 1823. He was appointed cadet at the Military Academy at West Point, July 1st, 1840, graduated July 1st, 1844, was breveted as second lieutenant in the Sixth Infantry, July 6th, 1844, and in the same year placed on frontier duty at Fort Smith, Arkansas. In the war with Mexico in 1846 and 1847, he served as second lieutenant in the Fifth Infantry, being engaged on the march through Coahula, in 1846, at the siege of Vera Cruz, in March 1847, and on the Arisaba expedition in 1848. In 1850 he resigned his commission as first lieutenant in the Fifth infantry to accept the professorship of natural and experimental philosophy in the Military Academy of Kentucky, near Frankfort. During the administration of President Pierce he was appointed to examiner of patents in Washington, and subsequently entered the firm of Munn & Co., solicitors of patents, as patent attorney. Mr. Read's legal abilities were of a high order, and, as applied to his specialty, gained for him a reputation as patent lawyer second to none in the city. His services during a long association with the firm, lasting almost up to the hour of his death, were in the highest degree eminent and valuable. Mr. Read may be said to have inherited his legal talent. His great-grandfather, George Read, held the office of Chief Justice of the Province of Delaware under the Crown, was a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and a framer of the Constitution of the United States. His grandfather and father were able and distinguished lawyers, first in rank at the bar of their state.

By his many warm personal friends, Mr. Read will long be remembered for the sweetness of his nature and the peculiarly gentle and endearing traits of his character.

Found Lifeless in Bed

Sudden and Unexpected Death of Rear Admiral Rearick

Rear Admiral Peter A. Rearick, U.S.N. (retired), was found dead in bed about 8 o'clock this morning at his home, No. 904 East Capitol street. He was a victim of heart trouble. The admiral, who was about 63 years of age, retired at his usual hour last night in apparently excellent health, and he had not been ill for a long time. He leaves a widow and four daughters, the latter being Mrs. C.W. Freeman of Baltimore and Mrs. G.T. Woodward, Mrs. C.H. Weaver and Mrs. H.A. Austin of Washington. Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed.

Appointed From the District

Admiral Rearick was born in Maryland. He entered the naval service in 1860, being appointed from the District of Columbia. He was made third assistant engineer, and assigned to duty on the Crusader of the North Atlantic squadron. He served on the Housatonic in the Gulf squadron in 1862, and in 1863 served on the South Atlantic station.

In that year he was promoted to the grade of second assistant engineer. The following year, while serving on the Britannia, on the North Atlantic station, he was promoted to first assistant engineer. He saw duty on the ironclad Dictator near the close of the war, and in 1866 was assigned to special duty at Washington. From 1867 to 1869 he was on the Powhatan, flagship of the Pacific squadron. He served on the Saco of the European fleet from 1870 to 1872, returning in the following year to Washington, for duty at the navy yard.

In the latter part of 1873 he was assigned to the Colorado, on the North Atlantic station, and served on that vessel one year. The same year he was made chief engineer. From 1875 to 1876 he served on the North Atlantic station, on the Ossipee. He was on the Essex in 1877, and the next year was assigned to the South Atlantic station, serving there until 1881. The latter year he was placed on duty with the receiving ship Franklin. The next year he was ordered to the Asiatic station and assigned to the Juniata.

In 1886 he returned to the United States and was placed in charge of the stores at the Norfolk navy yard on which duty he remained until 1889. He was assigned to the Pacific station in the latter year, and served in various capacities at different stations until his retirement, February 17, 1900, with the rank of rear admiral.

She looked like one too pure to live,
 To bright and beautiful to die.
 There she was lovely in this life
 But she is lovelier, fairer now,
 Since God has wiped her tears away
 And set a crown upon her brow.
 The death pangs round no more her heart,
 Her spirit is unfettered now,
 The withering fire of decay
 He more shall blight her beautiful brow.

A Fatal Fall

Irving Reed's Death Results From Effects of Accident

Irving Reed, twelve years old, son of William R. Reed, who lives at No. 712 8th street southwest, met with a fatal accident about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon while playing in the street with a number of companions. The boys were engaged in a game known as "kick the stick," and Irving slipped on the wet pavement and fell. His head struck the curbstone and he was unable to get up. Several of his badly frightened companions went for assistance, and among those who collected on the street was Policeman Jennings. He called for the patrol wagon, intending to send the boy to the hospital, but when the wagon arrived life was extinct, and the body was taken to the home of the lad's parents. Dr. Hammett was summoned to the house, but he could do nothing. Coroner Carr gave a certificate of death in accordance with the facts stated.

John Reed Found Dead

Employee of Washington Navy Yard, Seventy Years of Age

John Reed, seventy years of age, whose home was at 406 G street southeast, was found dead in the toilet room at the navy yard this morning about 7:30 o'clock. Mr. Reed was employed at the navy yard, and this morning he complained of being ill shortly after he reached there. His body was removed to the morgue and the coroner notified. As the death was due to natural causes, the coroner determined an inquest unnecessary. An undertaker took charge of the body and removed it to the late home of the deceased.

The Wawaset Disaster

Potomac River Steamer Burns With Great Loss of Life

On Saturday, August 9, 1873, Washingtonians were shocked by the news as told in The Evening Star of that date of the burning of the Potomac river steamer Wawaset and the loss of fifty lives, which occurred on Friday at Chatterson's Landing, in Prince George's county, Md. The steamer was entirely destroyed and was beached on the Virginia shore.

The origin of the fire on the Wawaset, which started in the engine room, was never learned. She was making her regular trip to the various wharves along the Potomac with about 110 passengers on board. When near Chatterson's Landing flames were seen issuing from the hold of the vessel, and before anything could be done to extinguish them the entire steamer was consumed, and nothing remained of her but a broken shaft and smokestack to mark the place where she went down.

An incident of the fatality was the loss sustained by Policeman Reed of South Washington, who lost his entire family by drowning.

Scenes At Chatterton

Our party started at once for Chatterton landing, and on the way several bodies were passed, which had floated ashore. Near Chatterton landing was found a grave containing two white children, a boy and girl. From the description of the clothing, this girl was thought to be the missing daughter of Mr. Reed.

A Full Description of the clothing, and number the graves, retaining a full record of such description corresponding to each grave, so that friends of the lost can have the bodies disinterred at their leisure. Just north of Chatterton landing was found a grave where, we were informed, were buried two children, a white boy and girl. From the description given of the girl, Mr. Reed, one of our party, thought it must be his little niece, daughter of Policeman Reed, and later in the day the children were uncovered, but Mr. Reed failed to recognize her, and the little children were covered over again.

The Evening Star, Saturday, August 9, 1873 The Life Preservers, were in the gangway, and could not be reached by reason of the smoke and flames. The wife of Mr. J.W. Reed, who was lost, was on the bow deck, and could no doubt have been saved, but for her alarm and anxiety about her children. It is believed that she jumped overboard with them. A Household Wreck. The Mrs. Reed who perished on the Wawaset was his second wife, to whom he had been married only about a year, and who at the time of her death was near confinement. The Evening Star, August 11, 1878 The Body of Mrs. Reed was brought in just above Chatterton. It was so much disfigured that it could only be recognized by the clothing and jewelry. Her brother, Mr. George W. Walker, and the brother of Mr. Reed were present, and after consultation it was deemed advisable to put the remains in a coffin and remove them to Mount Holly, King George county, for burial. Mr. Reed was very loath to consent to this, having promised to have it sent to Washington for burial with the children; but the body was in such a condition that he concluded not to do it now, leaving it for the future. It was placed in a wagon and started immediately off to its destination. The Evening Star, October 15, 1873 Reinterment of the Remains of Mrs. Reed A Victim of the Wawaset Disaster Police Officer Joseph W. Reed, who lost his wife and four children on the ill-fated steamer Wawaset has had the remains of his wife exhumed and brought to the city for burial. Funeral ceremonies were held on Saturday last, at King George county, Va., where the body was temporarily interred after the disaster, and the body arrived here on Monday night and was then in charge by Mr. R.W. Barker, undertaker, with whom Mr. Reed had previously arranged for the interment yesterday at 3 o'clock p.m. By some unfortunate misunderstanding between the undertaker and the sexton at the Congressional burying ground, however, the grave was not prepared, and the relatives and friends of the family who had assembled to witness the last rite were disappointed, and the interment was necessarily delayed again until 3 o'clock today, the remains in the meantime being placed in a vault. The Fatal Toy Pistol

Frank N. Reeder, aged 13 years, son fo Mr. Samuel Reeder, died last night at his father's residence, 1311 7th street northwest, of tetanus (lockjaw), the result of a wound inflicted by a toy pistol on the 4th of July. The pistol which shoots a diminutive blank cartridge, was accidentally exploded by a colored boy, and what appeared to be the was entered Reeder's left hand. It was supposed that it had all been extracted and that the boy would recover. About a week ago he was taken with spasms, and last night he died in the manner stated. It was then ascertained that a very small portion of the wad had been left in the wound. The very small percentage of cases like this which do result fatally, it is thought, indicates the presence of some poisonous substance in the cartridge. One physician, who had fifteen cases last year, succeeded in saving life in but two. In the case of young Reeder, it is probable that the was will be subjected to chemical examination.

Struck By Car

Albert Reese Sustains a Fracture of the Skull

Albert Reese, fifty-five years of age, who has been in the employ of the Capital Traction Company for several years, was struck by a street car last night and severely injured. It is stated that he had been enjoying a short vacation and was near the river front conversing with a number of friends. When he left them and started to go to his home, 552 M street southwest, he passed in the rear of one car and was struck by a car going in the opposite direction. Mr. Reese was thrown several feet from the car and injured about his head.

When Mr. Reese reached the Emergency Hospital the surgeons found that he had sustained a fracture of the skull and that his condition was serious. Relatives called to see him. When his brother visited the institution this morning the patient was unconscious.

Weep not for her, though death has set
His signet on her now;
And though the dew of death has wet,
That pure and snowy brew.

'Tis better thus to see her lie,
In calm, unbroken rest,
Than hear her breathe that troubled sigh,
And mark her heaving breast.

"None knew her but to love her."

The funeral will take place from the residence of her parents, 816 F street southwest, on Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. Friends of the family are respectfully invited to attend.

Funeral of W.H. Reese

Veteran of Civil War and Long Resident of Washington

Funeral services for William H. Reese, a Union veteran of the civil war, and a resident of the District of Columbia for the last forty years, whose death occurred Sunday evening, took place from the Reese home, 1118 G street southeast, at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Burial will be in Congressional cemetery.

Born in Delaware county, Pa., November 4, 1840, W.H. Reese received his education in the county schools and later engaged in business in Philadelphia. At the outbreak of the civil war he enlisted as a private in the 27th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry and served with that command until the close of hostilities in April, 1865, rising from the ranks to the Command of a company.

He was honorably mentioned for bravery by his commanding officers at the battle of Cold Harbor. Capt. Reese was wounded twice in this engagement, and again before the close of the war.

During his residence in Washington he was an active member of the Kit Carson Post, No. 2, G.A.R. He was one of the older commission merchants of the city. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Emma E. Reese, and a son and daughter, Archibald G. Reese and Miss Ada Elizabeth Reese.

Fatal Accident
Yesterday afternoon as a large freight train was passing Pennsylvania avenue, near the western side of the Capitol, a boy named Reeves attempted to get on a baggage car, but in the attempt falling under the wheels and the cars passed over him and cut his legs off at the hips. He was at once removed to the residence of his father, Leonard Reeves, living near the bridge on New Jersey avenue, and expired in about three hours. When taken out his limbs were mangled in a horrible manner, the legs holding together only by the skin. Constant apprehensions have been felt that an accident would happen in this locality--the boys quite often jumping on the passing cars to get a ride. Shot Himself in the Head
Sensational Suicide of Frederick Reichenbach This Morning
He Goes to a Secluded Spot in the Monument Grounds,
Lies Down on a Knoll Under the Magnolia Blossoms
And Blows His Brains Out
Affecting Letter to His Wife
"My Dear Wife: My whole life to you has been a life of deceit. You have been guilty of nothing wrong. God help you and the little ones and forgive me for what I am about to do.
Your loving husband,
Fred"
Such was the note that Fred Reichenbach addressed to his wife and put in his pocket before taking his own life this morning, which he did by shooting himself in the right temple with a "bull dog" revolver.
Frederick Reichenbach was well known in this city. He was one of the piano tuners here and was in the employ of the Knabe Company. He came here from Baltimore a number of years ago and married a daughter of Judge Plant.
His Composed Manner Before The Act
This morning he appeared at the Washington branch of the Knabe Piano Company on Market space and reported for duty as usual. He was unusually leasant to the young man in charge of the store, but the latter noticed something strange about Reichenbach's appearance and asked him:
"What's the matter?"
"Oh, nothing," was Reichenbach's reply. He took off his hat and coat and was ready to work. There were some tuning orders on the book for Alexandria and they were assigned to him. Taking the addresses on a piece of paper he put the slips in his pocket and left the store, going across to the south side of Pennsylvania avenue, but instead of going to the steamboat wharf or depot to go to Alexandria he walked as far as the Smithsonian grounds and from there he passed through the parks until he reached the monument grounds near the front entrance to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.
The Last Scene of All
Taking the path leading to the propagating gardens he wended his way along and around the fence. Then he walked some distance until he reached a large magnolia tree, where there is a little knoll above the marshy ground where the tide makes up. Under the magnolia blossoms he rested his weary form and placed his head on the green sod beside him. Then he crossed his legs and in a few seconds he had passed into the other world. He only fired one shot, but that proved sufficient and death must have ensued almost instantly.
The men at work in the gardens heard the shot, but they paid no attention to it, as there are gunners on the flats shooting birds almost every day.
The Body Discovered
Nearly half an hour afterward a colored woman who was making a short cut across the marshy path saw the body of the dead man and a pool of blood near his head. She hastened to a house near by and informed Miss Annie Sullivan of the ghastly find.
Word was at once sent to the propagating gardens and then the police were notified. When Lieut. Amiss and Officer Cross went with the patrol wagon for the body a number of persons had collected there, among them several persons from the White House. The revolver which had done the deadly work was lying on the ground near the body and there was enough to satisfy the officers that the man had committed suicide, but some one suggested that he had been beaten and then the officers searched his pockets for some evidence in the shape of a letter, with the result above stated. The body was placed in the patrol wagon and taken home to his wife and children at No. 1003 8th street northwest and Coroner Patterson was notified.
The Evening Star, April 7, 1890
Fred Reichenbach's Death
The Motive for His Rash Act Still a Mystery

An investigation of the facts concerning the death of Frederick Reichenbach from a pistol shot wound of the head, as published in Saturday's Star, showed plainly that it was a case of suicide. He purchased the revolver at Walford's store on Pennsylvania avenue Saturday morning, but when he wrote the farewell letter to his wife no one has yet learned.

Mrs. Reichenbach, wife of the unfortunate man, was terribly affected by the sad news and could not understand what drove her husband to commit such a terrible deed. His financial prospects were brighter than they had ever been before. He received a salary of $1,400 from the Knabe Piano Company and was also compensated for ringing the chimes in the Metropolitan Church. Recently there were several cases of typhoid fever in the family and Mr. Reichenbach's fear of taking the fever, his wife thinks, had something to do with the taking of his life.

Dr. Walter had been attending the deceased for some time before his death and he was unwell when he left home Saturday morning.

Coroner Patterson investigated the case and gave a certificate of death. The funeral took place this afternoon from his house and was private.

Criminal Court

A jury was then empanelled in the case of the U.S. vs. F.C. Reichenbach, for an assault upon Wilhelmina Letmate. The prosecuting witness went to the house of Reichenbach, abused him and his wife and daughter, wanted his own daughter away from that bawdy-house, etc. The defendant seized her to put her out and struck her, she says, when she resisted and struck him, making a good deal of noise at the time. This occurred in June last, at the house of Reichenbach, on 11th street.

The daughter of Mrs. Letmate was the only witness for defense. The mother objected to the beau she had at Reichenbach's, the daughter loved him and refused to give him up--hence all the difficulty. The daughter is quite a pretty and modest looking German girl, and had been brought on from Richmond this morning, whither she had escaped from the wrath of her parents.

The jury found the accused guilty of a single assault.

Submitted by family member:

FREDERICK CHRISTIAN REICHENBACH, JR. was born May 6, 1791 in Tilsit, Germany. He married Juliane Voight and had Friedricke, Mathilda, Edward, Laura, Bertha Julius, and August. After his wife died, between 1835-1840, he and sons Edward, Julius, and August came to the U.S. On March 16, 1840 he was naturalized at Philadelphia.

Frederick C. Reichenbach is listed in the 1846, 1847, 1848 and 1849 Philadelphia city directory as a piano maker at 12 S 7th street.

Frederick married a second time Catherine Kovatch who was from Bremin, Germany. They had ten children with only four surviving: Frederick, Florentina Alberta, William Frank and Charlotte. Frederick and Catherine were married Sept. 15, 1853 in Baltimore, Md. on their way to Washington, D.C.

In Washington they owned a piano store at 423 11th street northwest. His son Frederick was a piano tuner. In the Evening Star advertisement the store was listed as a piano wareroom, and Frederick as an instrument maker.

Frederick died July 1872 and is buried in range 31, site 191. Catherine ran the store until her death, October 1886, buried range 31 site 190.

Also buried there is Charlotte B. Reichenbach, Frederick's daughter who died Feb. 4, 1948. His son Frederick Reichenbach, died April, 1890. Grandchild Flora A. Reichenbach, died April 1948.

Great grandchild of Frederick, George Suter Reichenbach, and his wife Mary Katherine Reichenbach as are their daughter Doris Bennett and her husband Robert Bennett.

Reily. Departed this life, on the morning of the 1st instant, aged about 83 years, Mrs. Barbara Reily, relict of the late Major William Reily, an officer of the Fourth Maryland regiment of the Revolution.

This estimable, accomplished, and truly amiable lady, through a long life, was the friend of the friendless. An humble and pious Christian, she was a devout member for more than thirty years of the Methodist Episcopal Church in this city. Sincere in all her professions of love and friendship, she was actuated solely by the desire of doing good. She exhibited throughout life those estimable qualities of the heart that endeared her to all who knew her, and died, as she had lived, in the Christian's hope of immortality.

To her bereaved children her loss is irreparable. By her church her death will be piously regretted; and by the poor her memory will be cherished.

Her funeral will take place on Tuesday next, at 10 o'clock a.m., from the residence of her son, John H. Reily, on 12th street, to which the friends of the family are respectfully invited.

In personal affidavit made at Washington, D.C., March 23, 1818, before Buckner Thruston, of the District of Columbia, in connection with his claim for pension, William Reily stated that he served his country as an officer of the Revolutionary War for nearly nine years, as Lieutenant and Adjutant to Militia regiment in Baltimore in 1775; as Lieutenant in the Maryland Flying Camp in 1776; as Captain in 4th Maryland Regiment of Regulars in 1777, and he held this latter rank to the close of the war. Returned from Charleston by sea triumphant with the only regiment left out of eight which the State of Maryland had furnished for the South. Never received any compensation from the Government except a final settlement certificate which he finally had to dispose of, from necessity, from one-eighth its nominal value, on the supposition the Government would never redeem it. Letter from T.E. Reily, son of William Reily, to Hon. John B. Eaton, Secretary of War, dated February 21, 1831, refers to the fact his father's pension ($20 per month) was cut off by "some unaccountable error, or inimical design," on September 4, 1819, and asks that back pay due his father be granted his mother, Mrs. Barbara Reily, upon her application for pension, as the widow of Major Reily. S.208, approved February 9, 1853, "An Act for the Relief of Barbara Reily," required the Secretary of the Interior "to pay to Barbara Reily, widow of Captain William Reily, an officer of the Army of the Revolution, the amount of pension due him from the time he was last paid to the 4th day of March, 1820."

Will of William Reily, of Washington (dtd. July 13, 1821, probated July 31, 1824, Will Book 3)

To wife Barbara Reily, lot situated at northwest corner of Pennsylvania Ave., and 12th St., touching line of Robert King, together with dwelling house and kitchen standing on the ground; to maintain "our beloved daughter Susan" whom I hereby thankfully commit to her protection.

Sues For Maintenance

Mrs. Mae C. Reinburg Wants Husband to Support Her

After two unsuccessful attempts to secure an absolute divorce from her husband, Albert L. Reinburg, an employe of the bureau of engraving and printing, Mrs. Mae C. Reinburg today instituted a suit for maintenance against him. She declares he makes $10 a day and spends his money freely, while she and her daughter are in actual want of the ordinary comforts of life.

Mrs. Reinburg says she is threatened with eviction from her apartment for non-payment of rent, and is obliged to ask the court to be allowed to file her suit without a deposit for costs.

She claims she has been deserted by her husband and left in necessitous circumstances when she is entitled to his support.

Attorneys James B. Archer and John Lewis Smith represent the wife.

Naval Veteran's Remains Escorted to Grave by Marines

The funeral of Louis Reinburg, a naval veteran of the war, took place from St. Peter's Church this morning. It was largely attended by members of Kit Carson Post, No. 2, of the Grand Army of the Republic of which he was a member, and also by the employees of the division of the pension office, where Mr. Reinberg had served.

Mr. Reinburg served in the navy from 1856, when he entered as a "boy," to 1866 when he was discharged as mater's mate. The crowning event f his naval career was when, in February 1864, while an officer on the United States steamer Sabine, under the gallant Commodore Ringgold, he took pat in the rescue of a battalion of marines from the line-of-battle ship Vermont, disabled in a gale, for which act of gallantry he, together with the officers and crew of his ship, received the special thanks of Congress by joint resolution, March 7, 1864.

On this account the general commanding the marine corps tendered the deceased the unusual honor of an escort of a detachment of marines, who fired three volleys over the grave in the Congressional cemetery.

To Be Buried Here

Remains of Lizzie Macnichol to Be Brought to This City

Funeral From Her Father's House Tomorrow--

Sketch of Her Operatic Career

Lizzie Macnichol, whose reputation as an opera singer is national and whose former home was in this city, died Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock at Chocorna, N.H., of peritonitis. No aspirant for honors on the operatic stage ever won more friends and inspired more love for her womanly and generous traits of character than Miss Macnichol, who was especially well known in this city, where she was born and reared. Although always retaining her maiden name on the stage, she was married to Mr. Charles Louis Reitz, a merchant of Baltimore and an amateur musician.

Rapid Development of Disease

Miss Macnichol was never in more perfect health than she was a few days before her death. This morning her parents, who live at 105 C street southeast, received a letter from her husband, which was written last Thursday evening, saying that his wife was not feeling well. There was no thought that her illness was at all dangerous at that time. But she developed peritonitis, and on Saturday morning word was received here by telegraph that she was critically ill. She grew worse steadily until evening, when she died. She had been at Chocorna for some weeks, and since her stay there had enjoyed several mountain trips with her husband, and her family here suppose she contracted the disease that resulted fatally through overexertion in this way last week.

A Heroine at a Fire

A short time before her illness Miss Macnichol had played a heroic part on the occasion of the burning of the new home of the Runnells family, near Chocorna. This elegant mansion had been fitted up at great expense, and at the time only the family servants were there. The alarm of fire reached the hotel in which Miss Macnichol was stopping, and she and her husband at once repaired to the scene of the disaster to render whatever assistance was in their power. Miss Macnichol showed great presence of mind during the conflagration, and largely through her direction and personal efforts much of the valuable contents of the house was saved from the flames. She became the village heroine on that occasion. While some reports from Chocorna trace her illness from the excitement on the day of the fire, her family here do not believe it was in any way connected with the disease which later developed.

It was with the greatest regret that the news of Miss Macnichol's death was received here, where she had lived since her childhood. Her talent and beauty of person and character had endeared her to an unusually large circle of friends.,

Her Musical Career

Early in life she gave evidence of having a contralto voice of remarkable sweetness and of unusual scope. Her musical training was begun under the direction of Dr. Kimball. She sang at different times in many of the churches of this city and later filled an engagement in one of the Brooklyn churches in order that she might be under the tuition of Sig. Agramonte. She then went to Philadelphia, where she made her debut in the part of Lazarillo in "Maritana," at the Grand Opera House. This was in 1888, and was her first appearance in opera, and, although entirely new to the stage, she achieved an immediate and pronounced success. This engagement was with the American Opera Company, with which she continued for some time. In 1890 she joined the Emma Juch Opera Company and was with it during three seasons. She then joined the Hinrichs Opera Company and played a summer engagement in Philadelphia and New York.

Her Success in Opera

Her success in heavy opera was signal and her ambition led her to devote her time to the highest class of music, for which her natural talents and education fitted her. The public demand for light opera and attractive offers she received for such engagements caused her, in 1894 to make her appearance in "Rob Roy" as Flora MacDonald, in which she won decided success. She next came here with the Grau Metropolitan English Opera Company, and later joined the Castle Square Opera Company. Her popularity contributed very largely to the success of that operatic organization. When the company appeared here at the Lafayette Opera House and the Columbia Theater she was the drawing attraction that guaranteed well-filled houses at all times.

Miss Macnichol's first husband was Franz Vetta, the well-known Quaker basso, who died five years ago. Three years later the widow married Chas. Lois Reitz of Baltimore, who had been with her in the north since her engagement was closed for the summer.

Her father, mother, five brothers and two sisters reside in this city, her death being the first that has occurred in her immediate family.

There are many incidents that indicate the sympathetic and generous nature of the deceased opera singer, who appears never to have been appealed to in vain. She was noted for her acts of kindness to struggling opera singers, and was as popular among the chorus as among the managers.

To Be Buried Here

The remains of Miss Macnichol will be brought to this city tomorrow morning, and the funeral will take place at 4 o'clock from her parents' home, 105 C street northeast. The interment will be in the Congressional cemetery, and will be private.

Repetti, Gaetano	b. 1821 – d. 18 Jun 1904	83 yrs.	R107/210
The Evening Star, June 14, 1925
Some Musical History
Gaetano Repetti was born at Genoa in 1820, was trained in the art of music from childhood, and played in bands and orchestras in Italy. He came to the United States and to Washington in 1843, enlisted in the Marine Band, and made his home in a house on Seventh street southeast, between G and I. He remained in the Marine Band till some time in the Civil War, when he helped recruit and organize in the military camp, part of whose site is Lincoln Park, a band for service in the Union Army of the Potomac.
That band served with troops in the field, but what its name and service were the Rambler does not know. Not long before the end of the war, Gaetano Repetti was a member of Ford's Theater Orchestra, and then later joined the orchestra of the Theater Comique, later Kernan's Lyceum, and now, after many changes, The President Theater. He retired from music and went into business in southeast Washington.
Soon after enlisting in the Marine Band, he bought the frame house, No. 527 Sixth street southeast, and two of his children, Henry Repetti of the Marine Band and Miss Anna, are living there. It is one of the old and comfortable homes of the street.
Gaetano Repetti married Miss Lena Dilgers at New York. She was German born, and the bride and bridegroom came to the Sixth street home. There all their children were born. In the Star, Monday, June 20, 1904, was this death notice: "On Saturday, June 18, 1904 at 2 p.m at his residence, 527 Sixth street southeast, Gaetano Repetti in the 84th year of his age. Funeral from his late residence, Tuesday, June 21, at 2 p.m.
Of the sons of Gaetano the Rambler remembers Joseph, William, John, Henry, Albert and Frederick. All the boys studied and practiced music except Frederick. He is now Dr. Frederick Repetti, 811 L street northwest. Joseph is with the Capital Traction Co. and Albert has been a clerk in the post office for 24 years.
Henry enlisted in the Marine Band, November 20, 1896, when Francuilli was the leader, and with 18 months more service will be able to retire. William and John Repetti, who played in band and orchestra, are dead. There were several daughters. Ida Repetti married Dr. T.V. Ward, Minnie married Walter English and Kate married Michael Gallagher.

Mrs. H.M. Reynolds Dies; Was in Accident

Mrs. Ellen M. Reynolds, 65, wife of Harry M. Reynolds, an electrician at the Capitol, died Wednesday in Providence Hospital. She was injured in an automobile accident near Booth Corners, Pa., two months ago and failed to recover.

A life long resident of Washington, she made her home at Stanton Manor Apartments, 644 Massachusetts avenue N.E. She was an active church worker and a member of St. Mark's Church. A past matron of Martha Lodge, No. 4, O.E.S., she was particularly interested in the affairs of the Masonic and Eastern Star Home.

Besides her husband, she leaves a son, Charles S. Reynolds, a civil engineer here, and a brother, William M. Heinline.

Services were to be held at 2 p.m. today in the Lee funeral home, with burial in Congressional Cemetery.

Injuries Are Fatal

Dr. Reynolds Dies in Casualty Hospital This Morning

Struck By An Automobile

Accident Happens Soon After Dr. Reynolds Alights From Car

Employed in Pension Bureau

Dr. Elmer R. Reynolds, sixty-one years of age, who had been employed as a clerk in the pension office during the past twenty years, and who was prominent in literary and patriotic circles was struck by an automobile near the intersection of 3d and C streets northeast about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and fatally injured, his death occurring soon after at the Casualty Hospital.

The funeral will occur tomorrow afternoon, with interment in Congressional cemetery. The arrangements have not been completed.

The accident occurred only a few hundred feet from Dr. Reynolds' home, 318 Maryland avenue, but it was not until about two hours after he was injured that the members of his family were advised of the occurrence. Mrs. Reynolds and her children hurried to the hospital as soon as they learned of it, and several of them remained there until the death occurred, which was about 1 o'clock this morning.

William H. Wyman, thirty-nine years old, who conducts an automobile repair shop at 5th and C streets northeast, was in the automobile that caused the fatal injuries. He was taken to the ninth precinct police station, to be held until a jury of inquest passed upon the accident. Acting Coroner Glazebrook gave permission for the removal of the body to an undertaking establishment this morning instead of having it removed to the morgue. He arranged for the inquest to be held at the morgue at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Story of the Accident

Dr. Reynolds was on his way home from the pension office at the time the accident occurred. He boarded a street car on G street in front of the office, and just before the car reached the intersection of 3d and C streets he alighted. Witnesses told the police that Dr. Reynolds was engaged in conversation with another passenger on the platform and that he continued the conversation after he alighted from the moving car, his back being toward the automobile, which was going east, the direction in which the car was moving. It was also stated that the operator of the automobile had lessened the speed of his vehicle and was blowing his horn to advise pedestrians and others of his approach. After the automobile struck Dr. Reynolds, the police were told, it moved only about eighteen inches. The injured man was unconscious when picked up, and, as stated, was conveyed to the Casualty Hospital. It was ascertained by the hospital physicians that the injured man had sustained a compound fracture of his skull, and that he was suffering from cerebral hemorrhage and internal injuries.

Dr. J.R. Wellington, chief of staff of surgeons at the hospital, and Dr. W.P.C. Hazen, Dr. Reynolds' family physician, performed an operation to relieve the pressure upon the brain, but the condition of the patient was so serious that the operation was of no benefit, the patient remaining unconscious until death claimed him. Mr. Wyman stopped his automobile as soon as the accident occurred, as already stated, and remained to do what he could for the injured man. Mr. Frederick T. Mitchell, who happened to be near 3d and C streets when the accident occurred, assisted Mr. Wyman to remove the injured man to the hospital. Acting Coroner Glazebrook was consulted by the police and members of the family of the deceased this morning, and it was at the request of the latter that he directed the removal of the remains to the undertaking establishment instead of to the morgue.

Statement by Eyewitness

One witness to the accident -- Reuben M. Harlow, a former policeman -- tells a story of the affair entirely different from what some of the other witnesses stated to the police. He denies that Dr. Reynolds left the car before it had come to a stop, and places the blame upon the man in the automobile for the accident.

"The automobile came along C street by the side of the car." Harlow told a Star reporter this morning, "and it killed the first man who alighted from the car. Dr. Reynolds left the car from the front platform after the car had come to a stop and the horn of the automobile was tooted in his face. Had the automobile kept a safe distance away from the side of the car or had it been stopped when it appeared that the car was going to stop at the crossing the accident would never have happened."

Harlow said he was riding on the car at the time the accident happened and witnessed the affair. One woman passenger on the car, he said, came near fainting and she would have fallen had not the conductor caught hold of her. He is anxious that the police shall find as many of the passengers as possible and have them at the inquest as witnesses.

Dr. Reynolds' Literary Career

Dr. Reynolds was born at Dansville, Livingston county, N.Y., sixty-one years ago, being a son of Dr. and Mrs. Allan Reynolds. He served in the 5th and 12th Wisconsin Light Infantry from 1861 to 1865, and has since taken an active interest in the affairs of the Grand Army of the Republic, having been commander of Lafayette Post. He was also a member of the Sons of the American Revolution; the Society of Beaux Arts, Senlis, France; of the American Historical Society of Dallas, Tex.; the Royal Geographical Society of Copenhagen, Denmark, and Lisbon, Portugal, and the Virginia Historical Society of Richmond. The doctor was the founder and first secretary of the Anthropological Society of this city.

Dr. Reynolds was the author of the "Prehistoric Remains in the Valleys of the Potomac and South Shenandoah," which was translated into Italian by Prof. Rodolfo Lanciani of the Royal University of Rome and published in Ravenna in 1883. He also wrote the eulogy of Count Ercalani and the "Memoir of the Pre-Columbian Shell Mounds of Newberg, Md., and the Shell Fields of the Potomac and Wicomico Rivers." In 1889 he wrote "The Mystic Castle of Carbonek," a serial romance, published in Wisconsin.

Wins Recognition

His work won him distinguished recognition abroad, where he was so well known as Chevalier Reynolds, King Humbert having in 1887 knighted him Chevalier and Knight Companion of the Royal Order of Italy (the crown of Monza). He also received a bronze medal from Don Carlos, King of Portugal; a similar recognition from the Royal Academy of Lisbon and a collection of autographs of the sovereigns of England, Russia, Denmark and Greece from the King of Denmark. His special interest, however, was in his membership in the Society of American Authors. Chevalier Reynolds, as many of his friends in the United States knew him, it is said, was one of only three American-born citizens upon whom King Humbert bestowed honors.

Mrs. Reynolds and five children, four sons and a daughter, survive him. One son is Mr. B.A. Reynolds of New Orleans. He came here Monday to spend his vacation with his parents, and saw his father for a short time yesterday morning before the latter went to his place of employment. The other sons are A St. P., Frank A., F.H. and E.R. Reynolds, jr. His daughter is Mrs. P.W. Guilford.

Poison Proves Fatal
Coroner Decides Mrs. Grace Reynolds Committed Suicide
 Mrs. Grace Reynolds, thirty-two years old, who was taken to the Casualty Hospital from her home, 127 E street northwest, a week ago and treated for mercury poisoning, died last night about 8:30 o'clock. When taken to the hospital it was said she had swallowed the poison by mistake.

Coroner Nevitt was told today that she had taken the poison with suicidal intent. Last Saturday she went to a drug store and purchased the poison. She became ill and was sent to the hospital.

There was an apparent improvement in her condition the next day, and it was thought she would recover, but a change for the worse followed. Coroner Nevitt gave a certificate of death by suicide.

The Funeral of James K. Rice, a well-known resident of South Washington and a prominent Odd Fellow, who died of pneumonia on Thursday last, after an illness of six days, took place yesterday afternoon from the Sixth street Presbyterian church, and was largely attended. Rev. Mason Noble, the pastor, conducted the service. Columbia Lodge, No. 10, U.H. Ridenour, marshal; Mount Nebo Encampment, No. 6, A.H. Stockman, marshal, and the Uniformed Patriarchs, Commander Edward Dunn, preceded by Repetti's band, attended the funeral and escorted the remains to the Congressional Cemetery, where the interment was made, the funeral services of the order being conducted at the grave by Chaplain Charles C. Collison. Two members from each of the bodies above named acted as pall-bearers.

Mrs. Julia E. Rice Dies at Garfield

Wife of Doctor on Hospital Staff Expires After Week's Illness

Mrs. Julia E. Rice, 31 years old, wife of Dr. E. Clarence Rice, jr., died in Garfield Hospital yesterday after an illness of one week. Her husband is a pathologist at Garfield Hospital and is the son of Dr. E. Clarence Rice, sr. well known chiroprapist of this city.

Mrs. Rice was a graduate of Eastern High School and of George Washington University and was a member of the Chi Omega Fraternity.

She was active in Sunday school work of the old Iowa Avenue M.E. Church and later in the Hamline M.E. Church, after the merging of the two parishes.

Mrs. Rice was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. George Ruff, 1411 Decatur street. Funeral services were conducted at the parents' home this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Joseph T. Herson, pastor of Hamline M.E. Church, and Rev. Harry Evaul, former pastor here, officiated. Interment was in Congressional Cemetery. Special services were conducted by the Chi Omega Fraternity preceding the other rites.

Death of a Well-Known Printer

Mr. Thomas Rich, one of the best known printers in the District, died at his residence, on 9th street, near E, yesterday afternoon, of a dropsical disease which has confined him to his room for about four months. He was in the 55th year of his age. Mr. Rich was a native of this city, and learned the art of printing here. He was for thirty-four years a member of the old Columbia Typographical Society, and also a member of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, from its formation to the day of his death, and was for a number of years the presiding officer of both of those associations. He probably was a member of more secret orders than any man in the District, holding his membership in Federal Lodge of Masons, Washington Lodge, Grand Lodge, Mt. Nebo, and Grand Encampment of Odd Fellows, Calanthe and Grand Lodge of Knights of Pythias, the Red Men, Brotherhood of the Union, Heptasophs, and Druids. In nearly all of these organizations he had filled the position of secretary or scribe, and had represented the encampment branch of Odd Fellows in the Grand Lodge of the United States. For a number of years he was a clerk in the city post office, having previously served in the Mexican War. He was a man of the strictest integrity, and while president of the Typographical Union during the agitation of the exciting question of admitting colored printers into the Union, he, by his important rulings, gained the respect and good will of both parties in the controversy. His funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon, and the interment will be made at the Congressional Cemetery.

Funeral of the Late Thomas Rich

Yesterday afternoon the funeral of Thomas Rich (whose death was mentioned in Saturday's Star) took place from his late residence, No. 506 9th street northwest, and was attended by a large concourse of relatives and friends of the family; in fact by the largest gathering of people which has taken place at the funeral of a private citizen for a long time in this city. The remains were placed in a black walnut coffin, covered with fine black cloth, heavily mounted with silver mountings, bar handles, and the emblems of the several orders and societies of which deceased was a member. On the lid was a heavy scroll plate, inscribed "Thomas Rich, died September 10, 1875, in the 55th year of his age." The services of the Presbyterian church were conducted by Rev. J.C. Smith and Rev. Joseph Kelly, of the Fourth Presbyterian church, at the house, after which the cortege was formed and proceeded to the Congressional cemetery, in charge of Mr. Anthony Buchly, undertaker. The pall bearers were: On the part of the Grand Lodge I.O.O.F., P.G.M.R., Finley Hunt; Grand Encampment, P.G.P. Thomas Greer; Uniformed Patriarchs, Gr. Rep. William R. McLean; Mount Nebo Encampment, No. 6, Patriarch M.W. Leese; Washington Lodge, No. 6, Jennings Paul; Calanthe Lodge, No. 11, K.P., J.W. Hayes; Grand Council, I.O.R.M., W.M. Stelle; on the part of the printers' organizations, William M. Belt; Auxania Circle Ancient Order of Druids, A.E.L. Keese. All of the societies of which deceased was a member were out in full numbers and marched to the cemetery, the sidewalks all the way being thronged with young and old. The services of the several orders were conducted in an impressive manner, and, notwithstanding the immense throng, the best of order prevailed.

Richards, a newspaperman of the old school and former press agent, died yesterday at Casualty Hospital of cancer of the throat. Funeral arrangements have not been completed. The deceased is survived by his wife and one son, Frank B. Richards, jr, a member of the reportorial staff of the New York Evening Telegram Mr. Richards was born in New York city about fifty five years ago. One of his first newspaper assignments was on the New York Sun. He became famous as a newspaper correspondent during the Spanish-American war, when he was sent to Key West to take charge of the New York Sun press dispatch boat. On one occasion while scouting around on this boat, which formerly had been a fruit steamer, several shots are said to have been fired at the craft from Admiral Sampson's flagship, which mistook it for a Spanish boat. He knew the true story of the Schley-Brooklyn loop off Santiago, but did not testify in the naval inquiry. Mr. Richards was well known not only in New York, but as manager of the old Duquesne Theater in Pittsburgh, and later the Grand Opera House in Chicago. He worked for a decade on Washington newspapers, but was last employed in the publicity department of the Roosevelt pre-convention campaign, being forced to retire on account of failing health. He was for a number of years press agent for Nell Burgess, who won fortune and fame with the old favorite play "The County Fair." In "The County Fair" Mr. Richards developed, with the producer, many new stage effects, among which was a horse race Between seven and eight years were spent by Mr. Richards in traveling with Nell Burgess. The play finally returned to Boston where it ran for one year. At one time he was press agent for Lotta Crabtree, a star of many years ago. Miss Crabtree, known as "Lotta" to thousands of theatergoers, was a sister of Mrs. Nell Burgess. Mr. Richards was responsible in large measure for her early popularity.

Commander W.A. O'Meara of Potomac Post, No. 11, G.A.R., of which deceased was a member, has issued an order of regret and calling upon all members of the post to attend the obsequies.
The death of James H. Richards came suddenly about 11 o'clock Saturday night, he being found dead in his chair. He was one of the oldest residents of East Washington, having been born in the District October 1, 1836. He was for many years identified with the business interests of the city, his father having been one of the pioneers in the manufacture of brick. The son succeeded his father and carried on the business for nearly forty years, retiring about five years ago, after which he devoted himself to real estate interests.

He was an enthusiastic Odd Fellow, having been elected chevalier of that order some years ago. He also occupied a high place in the fraternal order of Red Men, and was a member of the Grand Army. He was one of the minutemen of 1861. Under the late Dr. McKim of Capitol Hill, who was captain of Company C of the District National Guard. Mr. Richards served as first lieutenant, and for the last fifteen years he had held the presidency of the Volunteer Firemen's Association.

His wife, Mrs. Ellen D. Richards, four sons, William J. Fulton, George and Henry, and three daughters, Adelaide, Nellie and Mrs. Keith, survive him.

The Evening Star, August 5, 1892
In Memoriam

The lives of men are more widely known than those of women, hence more widely missed. "When this mortal shall have put on immortality." Are they as much missed? Go to the home where the light of a mother's love has become a memory, where the actual mortal presence has passed away forever; how soon you understand that "Sorrow for the dead is the only sorrow from which we seek not to be divorced."

The faithful, devoted, sorrowing husband loves to let his heart bleed afresh as he recalls the tender, gentle, loving affection of her who has gone; or, perhaps, he silently longs for the kindred soul, fearing that his sorrow may escape in the naming it. The distressed and grateful children, though some may be fathers and mothers how, make you conscious that a guiding hand has lost its power, but that the guiding spirit shall be a "pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night" to lead them and theirs to that brighter land.

Who can estimate the worth of a pure Christian life, especially if it be that of a Christian mother? Ages to come will yield fruit gathered from seed sown today, though her church, her neighbors and a few dear ones only may have known her.

On Sunday, the 31st of July, 1892, Mary Alice (Stewart) Richards, wife of Mr. Alfred Richards of this city, passed from death unto life. The deceased was born September 10, 1843; her years were not measured by days, but by deeds. A devoted member of the Catholic Church, she was not only Catholic in name, but Catholic in spirit. No creed confined her charity, for hers was a charity that turned from her door no human being who craved her aid or sympathy; in His name the suppliant was ministered unto her charity was a boundless love for her fellow-man, and giving was but the smallest of its fruits. Her suffering brought not anguish to her brow, for one who saw her only during her last days said touchingly, "She is lovely in her patient suffering." Her candle burned brightly for all, but shone brightest in her family. Would that thousands of stepmothers could learn from her the secret of that loving Christian patience by which she bound to herself not only her own six children, but the two families of her husband's children (he having been twice previously married) mingled their tears upon her grave and blessed the day that she became to them a mother. We cannot comfort a sorrowing heart for its loss; no human spirit can supply the place of a spirit that has gone, for the living we should mourn.

It has been said that death is like passing southward through the Mount Cenis tunnel in early spring; you leave the cold, frozen land and enter the darkness only to come forth into the beautiful, warm, flowering Italy.

The transition of this Christian was greater, she left her suffering, pain and care to rejoice in a higher, purer and holier love, for the mantle of the Crucified was upon her, and Death robbed of its terrors was transformed into a winged messenger of light, bearing her spirit to the God who gave it.

Funeral of the Late Thos. A. Richards

The funeral of the late Thos. A. Richards, an old and esteemed citizen of this city, who died last Thursday, at his late residence, No. 1016 New Jersey avenue southeast, took place yesterday morning, at 9 o'clock, from St. Peter's church, Capitol Hill, solemn requiem mass being said, after which the Rev. M.P. Sullivan paid a feeling tribute to the character of the deceased. Mr. Richards has long been identified with the business interests of this section, but of late years has lived a retired life. He is mourned not only by his widow, son, and daughter, but also by a large circle of relatives and friends, who followed his remains to their last resting place in the Congressional cemetery. Honorary pall-bearers were Messrs. Jos. Z. Williams, Wm. McGinnis, Alex. W. Eaton, T.B. Cross, jr., Wm. H. Teachum, and Geo. R. Repetti. Active pall-bearers were Messrs. W.A., Chas. S., and Arthur, sons of Mr. Alfred Richards, and Wm. H., J. Fulton, and Geo. G., sons of Mr. J.H. Richards.

In Memoriam

Mr. T.A. Richards, who died recently in this city, was 72 years old, and was a native of Charles County, Md. At a very early age he made Washington his home. He was actively engaged in business in this city for the greater part of his life as a member of the well-known firm of A. & T.A. Richards, from which he retired twenty years ago. This firm at its dissolution was regarded financially as one of the strongest in the District. Mr. Richards was truly an honest man, and all who dealt with him had confidence in him. He was a man of excellent business qualities and became the owner of considerable real estate. Kind and generous in all his impulses, quiet and unostentatious in his manners, he died as he lived, without an enemy, but with many friends, who can bear witness to his unsullied life and character, and to his uniform gentleness and kindness. He leaves a widow, one daughter, and one son.

Richards. On Friday, January 6, 1882, at 2:55 a.m., of consumption, Thomas L., beloved husband of E. Webster Richards, in the 30th year of his age.

A kind and devoted husband, a loving father, a dutiful son, an affectionate brother, a generous and hospitable friend has gone from this world of care and sorrow to the abodes of everlasting bliss. To our imperfect understanding and human reasoning, it seemed that he must not die, as his prospects for usefulness and happiness were bright and most promising. Death is sad at all times, but doubly so when it falls upon the young husband and father, breaking up happy associations and blasting bright hopes and plans for the future. And it is right that our hearts should ache and our eyes fill with tears at the thought of separation from him we loved, but we should sorrow not as those without the Christian hope. God, in His wise providence, has seen fit to summon him, and to His will we must reverently submit, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, Blessed be the name of the Lord."

Funeral from the residence of his father, Thomas A. Richards, 1016 New Jersey avenue southeast, on Monday, January 9, at 9 o'clock a.m. Requiem mass at St. Peter's church.

Richardson, Leora M.	d. 12 Aug 1884	49 yrs.	R95/316

Submitted by: Bruce Richardson, Buffalo, Minnesota, great-grand nephew of Leora's husband James, August 28, 2004

Little is known of Leora, yet a modicum of information in the historical record survives for her husband, James C. Richardson, which helps shed a ray light, albeit a dim one, on Leora's life. James' birth father, Robert Little of New Jersey, died young and his mother, Catherine Perrine, subsequently remarried to Francis Richardson, whose surname James adopted.

James and Leora were married in Monroe, Green, Wisconsin on Christmas day in 1852. A daughter, Elmira, was born to them two years later in 1854. The 1860 Federal Census shows James as a "daquerian artist," which is a very early photographer. Records indicate that he continued that profession in Decorah, Iowa during the years of 1862-1869. Another daughter, Arloa, was born to them in 1866 while in Iowa.

The 1870 Federal Census, interestingly, shows the family now living in Prarie Du Chien, Wisconsin living next door to Leora's brother Ira Cady and family. James and Ira are employed in "Water Elevator Manufacturing." Come 1880, we find James and Leora and daughter Arloa some forty miles to the East now living in Boscobel, Wisconsin with the multi-talented James employed as a "mechanic." He is also a local officer in the Masonic Order and a Justice of the Peace.

A restless spirit brought James, Leora, and Arloa in June of 1883 to Washington D. C. where they resided at 215 4 1/2 St. NW. Little more than a year later in August of 1884, Leora succumbed to uterine cancer and died at a too young age of 49. James, per the 1890 City Directory, reverted to his early trade of carpentry and daughter Arloa as a teacher. In 1891 James and Arloa removed to Tacoma, Washington where Arlora married Frank Harshberger, a lawyer and president of a mining company, while James resumed carpentry work.

Thus and so we know not enough about Leora M. Richardson, and can only imagine and surmise the joys and sorrows of her life that ended so prematurely in that summer of 1884. Her body lies in prestigious ground, and, pray tell, her soul resides in heaven above.

Fatal Accident

Another of those distressing accidents, resulting from the careless handling of firearms, took place yesterday, by which an estimable young man was instantly hurried to another world.

About 6 o'clock yesterday evening, Mr. Richardson, a printer—a nephew of Mr. William Carey Jones—went to the room of his friend, Albert Bargle, and to sport picked up a revolver, knife and single-barreled pistol, and flourishing them in the air advanced upon Mr. Bargle, reciting some mock heroic verses from one of the poets. He elevated the revolver in the direction of Mr. B. who attempted to get hold of it and in so doing the pistol was accidentally exploded, the ball taking effect in Richardson's stomach, and in less than half an hour he was a corpse.

These facts were stated before Justice Donn by Mr. M.C. Watkins, who as present at the time. The most perfect good feeling existed between the two young men, as was proven by the concurrent testimony of Mr. Watkins, Messrs. Charles P. Dimitry, and P.B. Foster.

The young men had made arrangements to lodge at Mr. Fill's, in order that they might be frequently together, and Mr. Richardson had that afternoon left his former residence to occupy a room at Mr. Fills.

Mr. Bargle appeared to be greatly distressed by the calamity and anxiously awaited an examination. He was waited on by Messrs. Ward and Sessford, of the Auxiliary Guard, and went with them to the central guard house, where the examination was held by Justice Donn, W. Lenox, Esq., appearing for Mr. Bargle. The statements of the gentlemen named, two of whom (Messrs. Watkins and Dimitry) were in the room at the time proved that the death was the result of accident and the Justice released Mr. Bargle on his own recognizance to appear at any future examination if one should be deemed necessary.

Richardson. In this city on the 23d inst., William A. Richardson, in the 43d year of his age.

Father!

I see no more that love-lit brow
 No more that beaming smile—
 That loved one's form, it moulders now,
 Far from a weeping child.
 Though long we mourn, yet still our hearts
 Melt, melt in loving tears;
 The husband, father, friend, has gone—
 Death in our hearts appears.

Cold love but call one moment back
 Of life's fast-fleeting breath,
 Or, warm the clay which moulders now
 In the cold arms of death.
 O then I'd use that power divine
 And wake the life again—
 Recall my father from the grave;
 But no! the wish is vain.

The dead when once on death's dark sea
 The soft gales waft them o'er,
 To you bright land, far, far away,
 Bright Canaan's happy shore.
 No more their spirits wander back,
 No more in sorrow roam
 But upward, upward wing their flight
 To dwell with Christ and home.

They're vain, the tears of sorrow now,
 And vain the deep-drawn sigh;
 He dwells with God's bright angels now,
 No more, no more to die.
 Where tears no more shall silent fall,
 Nor streams of sorrow pour,
 Where sick and sorrow, pain and death
 Are felt and feared no more.

The Evening Star, December 1, 1915, p. 9
James H. Ricketts Dies In Ninety-Seventh Year
Veteran Bookbinder and Grape Culturist Succumbs at His Home on G Street
James H. Ricketts, ninety-seven years old, veteran bookbinder and grape culturist, whose gray beard, thirty-eight inches long, and white hair to his shoulders, distinguished him on Washington streets, died early this morning at his home, 628 G street southeast. On retiring last night he was in his usual good health, having read the papers with his accustomed interest. Funeral services are to be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the residence.
Mr. Ricketts was born at Old Bruige, N.J., in 1818. His family migrated to Indiana, settling at Greencastle where De Pauw University is now situated. Young Ricketts ran away from home going to New York, where he learned the trade of bookbinder. He then went to Newburg, N.Y., and opened a shop of his own. He did work for the West Point Military Academy library, and for many years made the register books for the use of visitors at Washington's headquarters at Newburg.
Interested in Grape Culture
Bookbinding was Mr. Ricketts occupation, but his avocation was grape culture. He had an extensive vineyard at Newburg, where he experimented over a long period of years, bringing out during that time more than seventy new varieties of grapes, one of which became famous as a wine grape. His specialty was hybridizing different species, crossing them while in bloom. His work has been extensively reviewed in publications issued by the Department of Agriculture.
Worked in G.P.O.
Mr. Ricketts came to Washington thirty-five years ago to accept a position in the government printing office, which position he held until five years ago. In 1901 he and his wife believed at that time to have been the oldest couple in the District, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Mrs. Ricketts died in 1905.
In the rear of his home on G street the veteran grape culturist had a little vineyard 50 x 100 feet, where he devoted the last years of his life to his hobby, cultivating grapes and vegetables.
Two sons, Eugene K. Ricketts and Edmond L. Ricketts, and a daughter, Mrs. Josephine Painter, are living.

O'er the beautiful bright eyes,
For the soul that made them lovely
Has returned unto the skies.

Called him while his heart was pure;
We are glad He did not leave him
All life's troubles to endure.

We are glad, and yet the tear drops
Falleth, for, alas, we know
That our fireside will be lonely,
We will miss our darling so.

Ridley, Major J.C.

d. 27 Jun 1837

The National Intelligencer, June 28, 1837

At 3 o'clock on Tuesday morning, at Gadsby's Hotel, Major J.C. Ridley, of Granville county, North Carolina. Major Ridley arrived in this city on Saturday last, on his way home from Mississippi, and, with the intention of proceeding directly on his journey, went on board the steamboat, where, feeling too unwell to endure the fatigue of travelling, he returned to the hotel. The best medical aid the city affords was called in -- one physician being in attendance through the whole of his brief illness, and two others having been called in as consulting physicians.

The friends of the deceased in North Carolina will have the melancholy satisfaction of being assured that nothing was left undone, in the power of human aid, to turn aside the shaft of the destroyer. The disease was beyond the skill of the physician.

The Funeral will take place at Gadsby's Hotel at 9 o'clock a.m. this day (Wednesday). Gentlemen from North Carolina, and citizens generally, are respectfully invited to attend.

Rites for John Ridout To Be Held Tomorrow

District Supreme Court to Pay Signal Honor of Adjournment for Funeral

Funeral services for John Ridout, well known Washington attorney and secretary to Justice Hitz of the District Supreme Court, who died at Maryland University Hospital in Baltimore early yesterday morning, will be held at the chapel of the Church of the Covenant, at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Rev. Dr. Charles Wood will officiate.

Interment will be at Congressional cemetery. Pallbearers will be friends of Mr. Ridout.

Because of Mr. Ridout's long service of nearly forty-five years at the bar, Chief Justice McCoy and his associates on the bench of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia will do him signal honor. Actual adjournment of court--done in recent years only upon the death of a member of the bench--will be taken on the day of the funeral. The justices will attend the services in a body.

Justin Morrill Chamberlin, president of the Bar Association, and five other prominent members of the bar today made formal announcements in the various branches of the court of the death of Mr. Ridout, and paid tribute to his sterling qualities, to his legal attainments, and especially to that characteristic for which he was best known--his gratuitous service to young lawyers in straightening out legal perplexities.

Each member of the court in response to the announcements made complimentary remarks of the dead lawyer. Justice Gould, who had known Mr. Ridout longer than any other member of the court, spoke of his first meeting with Mr. Ridout when the justice was admitted to practice in 1884. At that time, he said, Mr. Ridout was regarded as an authority on real estate law and had always been considered "a storehouse of precedents." No lawyer spent more time at the courthouse than did the deceased, Justice Gould stated. It was fitting that death should overtake him while engaged in trying a case.

Justice Hitz spoke feelingly of the death of his former secretary, and especially referred to his willingness to aid the younger members of the bar. The court remarked that when he first began to practice law he was frequently the beneficiary of this trait of Mr. Ridout.

Mr. Ridout was sixty-eight years of age. He suffered an attack of cerebral hemorrhage while pleading a case before Judge Duncan in the circuit court of Baltimore county at Towson, Md., Tuesday morning. He was removed to Baltimore and died early yesterday morning.

Last Rites for John Ridout

Funeral Attended by Many Members of the Local Bar

Funeral services for John Ridout, well known Washington attorney, who died in a Baltimore hospital Wednesday morning, following a paralytic stroke, were held yesterday afternoon at the chapel of the Church of the Covenant, Rev. Dr. Charles Wood, officiating. Interment was at Congressional cemetery.

The funeral was largely attended by members of the Washington bar and of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, which adjourned out of respect to Mr. Ridout's memory. Pallbearers were Fulton Lewis, Frank E. Cunningham, William A. Lee, Raymond B. Dickey, L. Gibbon White and George C. Gertman.

Death of a Washington Business Man

A Well-Known Citizen Expires After a Short Illness

In the death of Mr. Wm. R. Riley this city loses one of its substantial citizens. His death occurred yesterday at his late residence, No. 7 Iowa circle. Mr. Riley had reached the advanced age of seventy-five years. He was, however, a man of active habits, and while not exactly vigorous, yet he was seldom ill. His last sickness lasted only six days. On Monday just a week ago he was taken sick in his office in the Riley building, 9th and E streets. He was removed to his residence and by Thursday pneumonia developed which resulted in his death at 1 o'clock yesterday. He had planned to leave for Florida today where his wife was staying. Mrs. Riley was at once informed of the illness of her husband and reached home Saturday morning. Mr. Riley had spent practically all his life in this city. He came here with his father from his birthplace in Accomac, Va., when only four years of age. When quite young he entered a dry-goods' house as a clerk, and when still a young man he became the owner of the store in which he had started in life as a clerk. The same business ability which marked his early career enabled him to amass a considerable fortune. He was identified with a number of the substantial business enterprises of the city. He was the founder of the Arlington Fire Insurance Company, and a director in that company at the time of his death. For a number of years he was one of the directors of the Washington Gas Light Company. He established the West End Bank and until recently was the president. He was a member of the old city council, was connected with Columbia Lodge of Odd Fellows, and was an active member of Ascension Church. Six children survive him, two sons and four daughters.

The funeral services will be held at the Church of the Ascension Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock, and Rev. John H. Elliot will officiate. The interment will be in the family lot in Congressional cemetery.

The Evening Star, January 26, 1893The Will of William R. Riley

The will of the late Wm. R. Riley was filed today. He leaves his property to his wife, Elizaeth B. Riley, expressing the desire in any disposition she may make that house 1125 14th street shall become the property of his daughter, Fannie R. Collins. It directs that square 415 and sub 1, square 391 known as Fox and Lambell's wharf, shall not be sold or disposed of except by direction of his sister, Ann R. Riley, and that the rents and profits be paid to her and Laura C. Riley during the life of the first named, and at her death or by her direction during life the property is to be disposed of and the proceeds divided between the heirs of his father, Thos. R. Riley. The wife is named as executrix.

Personal Sketches -- District of Columbia, p. 264

William Robinson Smith Riley, president of the West End National bank, Washington, D.C., was born in Accomac county, Va., July 19, 1817, but when seven years of age was taken to Washington by his parents. Here he received his education, and from 1839 until 1889 was one of the most extensive dry goods merchants of the city, but in the latter year relinquished trade to assume the presidency of the bank named above. For two years he served the city as a member of the council under Mayor John W. Maury's administration and proved himself to be as efficient in city government as he was in his own business. In 1863 Mr. Riley married Miss Elizabeth King Reid, daughter of William Reid, of Norfolk, Va., and to this congenial and felicitous union have been born eight children, of whom six grew to maturity, viz.: Fanny, wife of Dr. Charles Read Collins, of King George county, Va.; Robinson, of Washington, D.C.; Ellen Robinson Riley, Elizabeth Reid Riley, Ida Blackstone Riley, and Charles Reid Riley.

The Evening Star, March 22, 1890New National BanksRecent Additions to the City's Fiscal InstitutionsThe Men Who Manage ThemThe West End and the Traders Bank Already Opened—The Lincoln Bank About to Begin Business—Sketches of Promising Business Concerns

For a long time the need of a bank in the western section of the city has been sharply felt by the business interests of that neighborhood. The demand of business men for banking facilities nearer at hand than those afforded by the banking houses in the vicinity of 15th street resulted in the establishment of the West End national bank. Until recently there has been no bank between 15th street and Georgetown, and the business men of the interlying district have been compelled to lose much valuable time in going back and forth for the transaction of business. The idea of establishing the new bank first started last September. It was gradually worked up and the bank was formally organized October 16, 1889. The new bank opened its doors for business January 76, 1890, in its present temporary quarters, 1908 Pennsylvania avenue. The building on the corner of 19th street is being greatly improved and fitted up as a model banking house. It is rapidly approaching completion and will soon be occupied by the bank as its permanent quarters. This will give it much needed additional room for its business which has been increasing steadily and rapidly, making the success of the new institution a foregone conclusion. Mr. William R. Riley is president of the bank, Mr. George A. McIlhenny, vice president, and Mr. Chas. P. Williams, cashier.

President Riley

Mr. Wm. R. Riley, the president of the West End national bank, has been so long connected with Washington And the business interests of the city that he stands in no need of an introduction here. For many years Mr. Riley has occupied a place in the front ranks of representative businessmen and his name has been connected with almost all of the movements looking to the advancement of the city and its general welfare. He was not born in this city but in Virginia, though his family came here when he was seven years of age and he has made this his home ever since. He was educated in the schools of the District though his schooling did not extend over a very large number of years. When he was still quite a boy he entered the dry goods business with Anthony Holmead, who was a prosperous merchant a half century ago. As was largely the custom the, Mr. Riley made his home with his employer, but he left when he was of age to go into business for himself at the northeast corner of 8th street and Market space. He afterward moved to the center of the block, where he remained until about twelve years ago, when he built the Riley building at the corner of 9th and E streets. Recently he built a handsome residence on Iowa circle and retired from active business altogether, intending to devote himself simply to his various interests. He had no intention then of entering the banking business, but he was waited on by a committee from the new bank, who requested him to take charge as its first president. This he finally decided to do. In ante bellum days Mr. Riley represented the seventh ward in the city councils for a number of years. He was one of the originators and is now a director in the Arlington fire insurance company and is also a stock holder and director in the Bank of the Republic. He has been a director in the Washington and Georgetown railroad company for the last fifteen years and for the last ten years a director in the Washington gas light company. He was also one of the organizers and is now a large stockholder in the Corcoran fire insurance company. In matters spiritual Mr. Riley is a member of the Episcopal church and for a quarter of a century he has been known as one of the firmest pillars of Ascension church.

Oh, how sudden was the summons,
When the word came he was dead;
Time was too short to say farewell
To the one we loved so dear.
 Son and Brother

We shall find our treasurers, one by one,
Lost links from love's broken chain,
And the tender touch of the pierced hand
Will reclasp them once again.

Fold her, Father, in Thine arms,
And let her henceforth be
A messenger of love between
Our human hearts and Thee.

The Congressional Globe was the official organ of Congress from the time of President Jackson until 1874, when it was superseded by the Congressional Record. It was Andrew Jackson who brought John C. The Evening Star, December 22, 1874 In Memoriam -- Fell asleep, after a few hours' illness, on the 20th of December 1874, in the 28th year of his age, Jefferson Rives. It is seldom that one dies so young and so universally beloved. Nor is this wonderful, for death does sometimes wither the flower in the first blush of its beauty, and life rarely exhibits so much of loveliness to win regard. His heart was as broad as the humanity he bore, gentle in its sympathies and thoroughly unselfish. A truer friend never breathed; a more loving brother, husband, and son it has not been our privilege to see. Earnest in spirit, he was indefatigable in effort. He possessed in a remarkable degree long suffering, patience, while his temper was amiability itself. He was very like his illustrious father -- like him in physical frame, but more so in the largeness of his soul. We knew him well, and do not believe that he ever failed to alleviate the sorrows or the sufferings of others to the best of his ability. He has fallen asleep in the beauty of his early manhood, and the memory of his loving, gentle, and sympathetic spirit will linger near us long after the echoes of our footsteps, who bear him to his last home, have died away. He was a zealous Mason, and evinced his devotion to the order by a faithful discharge of duty. His Masonic virtues are fresh in the heart of the brotherhood; and now that his working tools are laid aside, they will throw the evergreen on his grave, and treasure with ceaseless tenderness his deeds of kindness to each and all of them.

A Friend.

Sudden Death of Jefferson Rives

The many friends in the District of Mr. Jefferson Rives, were shocked yesterday evening to hear of his sudden death. He had been in his usual health up to yesterday, when, after a short drive, he repaired to his bathing room and took a cold bath. Feeling no bad effects therefrom, he, as usual, walked out and proceeded to Clark's drug store on Pennsylvania Avenue, between 4 1/2 and 6th streets, where he engaged in conversation with some friends, remaining in their company until the afternoon, when he returned to his home on C street between 3d and 4 1/2 streets. About 1 o'clock p.m., he complained of a slight pain in the stomach but thought nothing of it, remarking that it would soon pass away. About this time Dr. N. Lincoln, who had been attending Mrs. Rives for illness, called in on a professional visit, and a friend who was with Mr. Rives, advised him to call in the physician, but he laughingly replied that he would not trouble the doctor for so trivial a matter, at the same time, thanking his friend for the interest he manifested. After Dr. Lincoln left, conversation was resumed, but it was noticed that Mr. Rives was drowsy at intervals, his eyelids would drop, and he would doze a moment, then arouse and continue the subject of conversation as bright as if nothing was the matter. About 2 o'clock p.m. his friends left for home and an hour afterwards was hastily summoned by a messenger to see Mr. Rives, who was seriously ill. Servants were dispatched for physicians and for the relatives of the family. Drs. Wall and Briscoe arrived promptly, but found they were too late. When Dr. Lincoln came Mr. Rives was unconscious, and remained so until near 4 o'clock p.m., when he died. The report of his death rapidly spread on the streets later in the day, and caused general sorrow among his friends; many of whom having been with him in the early part of the day, could hardly credit the information. Mr. Rives was the youngest son of the late John C. Rives, and was a member of the firm of Rives & Bailey, proprietors of the Congressional Globe office. He was in the twenty-eighth year of his age and about two years ago married the daughter of ex-Governor Vickers, of Maryland, and soon afterwards purchased the fine residence on C street, between 3d and 4 1/2, from Dr. J.C. May, where he has since lived. Deceased was of a noble and generous nature, which, with his endearing social qualities, won him hosts of friends. He was a member of Federal Lodge, No. 1, F.A.A.M.; Eureka Chapter, No. 4, R.A.M., and Washington Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templar, of the latter of which he was treasurer. The funeral arrangements have been placed in charge of Mr. A. Buchly, undertaker, and when completed will be announced to the public.

The Evening Star, December 22, 1874

The funeral of the late Jefferson Rives whose sudden death was mentioned in yesterday's Star will take place at 12 o'clock tomorrow from his late residence, No. 314 O street northwest and will be attended by representatives from Federal Lodge, No. 1, F.A.A.M., Eureka Chapter, No. 4, R.A.M., and Washington Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templar, of all of which orders deceased had been a member, being treasurer of the last named. The religious service will be conducted by Bishop Pinkney, of Epiphany church; assisted by Rev. Dr. Addison, of Trinity Church, and the remains will be placed in the family vault in Congressional Cemetery.

The National Intelligencer, December 23, 1874

The funeral of the late Jefferson Rives took place from the residence of deceased on C street, today at 12 o'clock p.m. The numerous friends of the family availed themselves of the propitious weather to be present, and the streets in the neighborhood, were thronged with visitors to take a last look at the remains, which were attired in a black suit of broadcloth and laid in the north parlor in the rich walnut casket covered with fine black cloth, and mounted with silver Masonic emblems and bar handles. On the top was a silver plate on which was engraved "Jefferson Rives, of the Congressional Globe, born July 4th, 1847, died December 20th, 1874." At the head of the coffin was a beautiful floral monument of white japonadas and roses, and on the foot was laid a large Maltese cross of the same kind of flowers, and wreaths were laid on the coffin with the lamb skin apron and the Knight Templars sword, belt, and helmet, which belonged to the deceased. Many of the old resident friends of the family were present, among whom were the venerable Mr. Caton, so long connected with the "Globe" office as cashier; W.W. Corcoran, Wm. Gunton, Dr. Blake, Mr. Blair, Mr. Masi, and many others. At 12 o'clock Bishop Pinckney and Rev. Dr. John Elliot arrived, and soon after the family - among whom we noticed ex-Governor Vickers of Maryland (father of Mrs. Rives) -- descended the stairway and took seats around the coffin. Bishop Pinckney, assisted by Dr. Elliott, then recited the beautiful burial service of the Episcopal church. Federal Lodge, No. 1; Eureka Chapter, No. 4; Washington Commandery, No. 1; with full delegations of Columbia, No. 2, and other commanderies; Mathres Lodge of perfection, ancient and accepted Scottish-rite; and Evangelist Chapter, No. 1, Rose Croix Knights, A.A.S.R., were out in full numbers -- all in appropriate regalia peculiar to the several Masonic orders, of which deceased was an honored member. At the close of the service the coffin was removed to the hearse by the following pall-bearers: From Washington Commandery, K.T. - Thomas L. Hume, E.G. Davis, W.G. Brock, James P. Willett. From Eureka Chapter - Wm. B. Reed, E.B. McGrotly. From Federal Lodge - John Bartlett and John Crowley, under the direction of Mr. Anthony Buckley, the undertaker, the Knights being in line in front of the dwelling, and with swords at a present. Lieutenant Kelley, with his force of reserves preserved good order, and presented any unseemly pressure from the crowd. The chimes of the Metropolitan church played solemn dirges as the procession moved off towards the Congressional cemetery, where the impressive burial services of the Knights Templars and blue lodge was recited at the family vault of the deceased. At some future time the remains will be removed to the Rives family tomb at the country seat, and be laid by those of the father and mother of the deceased.

The Death of Mr. Rives

At a meeting of the Columbia Typographical Society of Washington, held last evening, April 11, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas the unerring will of Almighty God has stricken down the noble form and stilled the generous heart of him who has ever been the printers' kindest and most faithful friend;

And whereas in the death of John C. Rives his country must mourn a severe loss, this community lament the fall of one of the most worthy ornaments, and our society be deprived of its firmest supporter, whose life furnishes a bright example of sterling worth, of the success of industry, enterprise, and virtue, and whose ennobling disinterested acts of public and private munificence present all the characteristics of a man worthy our study and imitation; Therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Society, while submissively yielding to the decree of Omnipotence, feels with unfeigned sorrow the sad necessity which has bereft us of our old and well-tried benefactor.

Resolved further, That to the family of the deceased, who mourn the loss of such a kind and affectionate father, we offer our most sincere condolence.

Resolved further, That as an humble testimonial of esteem, we will assemble at the Government Printing Office Square, at one o'clock, on the 13th instant, to attend his funeral; and also that a copy of these resolutions be communicated to the family of deceased.

The Funeral of Mr. Rives

The funeral of the late John C. Rives took place at noon today from his late residence, near Bladensburg and was attended by an immense concourse of persons, among whom were many prominent officials, members of Congress, etc. For the convenience of the many persons who desired to attend the funeral at the residence, carriages were in attendance at Jackson Hall, (Globe Office) this morning, and large numbers were brought into requisition for this purpose.

The corpse, which had been embalmed by Dr. Holmes, looked very natural, and was attired in a plain black suit. The coffin was of fine mahogany, covered with black cloth furnished with plain but heavy silver mountings, and a silver plate on the top, bearing the name and age of the deceased. On the coffin was placed a handsome wreath of flowers.

The services at the house were conducted by Rev. Dr. Pinkney, of the Church of the Ascension, (Episcopal) and Rev. Dr. Smith, of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, of this city, after which, the corpse was placed in the hearse, the following acting as pall-bearers -- George W. Riggs, Esq, Hon. Jacob Collamer, Senator from Vermont; Hon. Justin S. Morrill, Representative from Vermont; Michael Caton, Esq., connected with the Globe for many years past; Francis P. Blair, Esq. formerly the partner of Mr. Rives; Lambert S. Tree, Esq. of the city post office; Hon. L. Powell, Senator from Kentucky; Hon. Robert Mallory, Representative from Kentucky; and the cortege, composed of an immense number of carriages, proceeded to Congressional Cemetery.

At the Government Printing Office the cortege was joined by the Columbia Typographical Society and Bookbinder's Association, which followed the remains to the cemetery.

The remains are not to remain here permanently, but will be removed to his place near Bladensburg, where they will be placed in a massive granite sarcophagus in a vault which is now being built there. Mr. Rives some time since ordered two cases to be cut from solid stone, in one of which he wished that his remains should be placed, and in the other those of his wife. The work has been done in the stone-cutting department north of the Patent Office, and the case for Mr. Rives is nearly finished. It measures 8 feet 4 inches in length, 3 feet 5 inches in breadth, and is 2 feet 1 inch deep, and in the clear to 7 feet 3 inches long and 2 feet 1 inch broad. A massive slab, about 6 inches thick is to cover the case and on this is to be cut the name with date of birth and death of the deceased.

The excellent arrangements for the funeral were under the direction of Mr. Samuel Kirby, the undertaker.

The Franklin engine house bell, and other bells, were tolled during the day as a mark of respect for the deceased, and both Houses of Congress adjourned over today for the same cause.

Rives. Suddenly, June 24, 1885, John C. Rives, aged 36 years. Funeral Friday, June 26, at 12 m., from No. 811 Jefferson place.

Sudden Death of Dr. John C. Rives

Yesterday afternoon Dr. John C. Rives was found dead in his room at the Emmet hotel, corner of Delaware avenue and C street. Dr. Rives had been staying at the Emmet for some time and had been in ill health recently, suffering from rheumatism of the heart. He was last seen alive on Tuesday evening, when he retired early, and not making his appearance next day, Mr. O'Brien, the proprietor of the Emmet, became alarmed and sent a servant to the room. Looking over the transom the servant saw Dr. Rives lying on the floor near the foot of the bed. Lieut. Kelly was notified and the room was entered when it was found that the doctor was dead. The body was cold and he had evidently been dead for several hours. His two brothers—Wright and Frank Rives—were sent for and had Mr. W.R. Speare take charge of the body. Dr. Rives was the youngest son of the late John C. Rives, and was born on the Rives estate, in Maryland, in 1859. He studied medicine and graduated, but a severe attack of rheumatism so enfeebled him that he never entered into active practice. His oldest brother, Jefferson Rives, died on C street some years ago in the same manner, being found dead in a bathroom. Dr. Lachlan Tyler assisted the coroner, Dr. Patterson, in an autopsy this morning, and found that there was besides a diseased condition of the heart, deep congestion of the lungs, an inflamed condition of the stomach, and symptoms of Bright's disease. There being no evidence of death from other than natural causes, a certificate for a burial permit was given by the coroner, who decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The death had probably occurred as he was preparing for bed on the night before.

Rives. At 5 o'clock yesterday morning, the 31st of March, after an illness of a few hours, Mrs. Mary Ann Rives, wife of John C. Rives, Esq., Editor of the "Globe," in the 43d year of her age.

Mrs. Rives was a lady of the most estimable qualities of head and heart. She was self-educated, but well educated, and she devoted all the means which her energy and talent gave in her early years to bring comforts within her widowed mother's house. When fortune added ampler means, she gave to all who had claims upon her generosity with a liberal hand. No one was ever more alive to the nobler affections, nor evinced it more strongly than she in that kindred circle when the less just and benevolent are apt, through indulgence, to grow neglectful. The strong sympathies of Mrs. Rives made her domestic duties the sources of her happiness.

Mrs. Rives was religious, and this consoled her amid apprehensions, caused by the state of her health, and which too truly anticipated the sad result. This, too offers all the consolation that can be given to her afflicted husband and the seven young children she has left to his care.

The funeral will take place to-day, at 4 o'clock, at Mr. Rives' residence where his friends will attend.

Yesterday, James Roach was buried from the boarding house and restaurant of John Vanskiver, Seventh street, near the market. The deceased came to Washington about a year ago, and was employed as a baggage agent by the Alexandria omnibus proprietors. He made many friends in a very short time, and had good prospects before him, but was taken ill with consumption, and his means were soon exhausted. His landlord, without the least expectation of remuneration, had him under his care several months, and treated him as one of this family, Friday morning the poor fellow felt himself so well that he went into the sitting room where he remained a short time, and returned to his chamber and died in a few hours.

His death being made known, a number of persons who were his first acquaintances here joined together to give him a decent burial. He was laid out in a full suit of black cloth, placed in a mahogany coffin, and was conveyed to the Congressional Cemetery, followed by a long line of coaches and private conveyances containing the friends who had not deserted him in the time of his distress.

A Discouraged Workman's Attempted Suicide

Starving a Family on the "Short Time" Principle

Suffering of a Man Injured in the Public Service

His Wife at the Point of Death

This morning, between 6 and 7 o'clock, Mr. James Roach, an employee for a long series of years of the ordnance department of the Navy Yard, who resides on 7th street, between E and G southeast, attempted suicide by cutting his throat with a razor, but fortunately did not succeed in making a serious wound. Mr. Roach, some years since, by an explosion in the yard in which two or more men were killed, was badly injured and the sight of one eye was entirely destroyed and the other affected, but he retained his position to the present time and maintained his family, a wife and eight children, on his wages. In consequence of the small appropriation made he, with other workmen who had been on "half time," was recently placed on "quarter time," by which he could earn on an average, but on which to support himself and large family. In consequence of this condition of affairs, together with his eyesight having become very bad, he has recently been much depressed in spirits, and for a few days past the family have been fearful that he was losing his mind. This morning when he arose he seemed to be unusually affectioned to his wife and children, and after kissing them he went up stairs, when his wife followed him, and reached the room, but not before he had time to make a quick cut across his throat with a razor. Mrs. Roach immediately fell in a spasm and the others of the family gave an alarm, which brought in the neighbors. Dr. W.H. Roberts dressed the wound on Mr. Roach's neck, finding, although it extended entirely across the neck, that no arteries had been reached, and the wound was not serious. Mr. Roach, on being questioned, would only answer "Times are bad," indicating that his mind was dwelling on that subject.

The Mother's Life in Danger

Mrs. Roach, who has 8 children, had a number of spasms--caused by the excitement--and being in a delicate situation her condition is looked on as much more precarious than that of her husband. The family have the sympathy generally of the residents of East Washington, among whom they have many friends, and it is to be hoped that some means will not only be taken to improve their condition but the condition of others who are suffering from the same cause.

A Third Attempt at Suicide

Saturday afternoon, James Roach, an employee in the ordnance department at the Navy Yard, attempted to commit suicide at his house, No. 522 7th street southeast, by cutting his throat with a pocket knife, and inflicted a painful but not dangerous wound. He is supposed to be partially insane, and has been much depressed on account of his inability to support his family well, having been obliged to work on half-time. This is his third attempt in a few months past.

Accidental Death

Illuminating gas ended the life, yesterday afternoon in a room at 212 D street of Patrick Roach, fifty-four years of age, a veteran of the late war. He was known to be alive at 11 o'clock in the morning; three hours later the dead body was found. According to Mrs. Mary Jackson, the landlady, Roach had occupied a room at her house for about three months past, but he was of such a reserved disposition that she knew but little concerning him, except his name. He was a man of exceptionally steady habits, was always in his bed early at night, and seemed not to be on intimate terms with worry of any character. He was not engaged in business, but had an income sufficient to support him. Every indication is that Roach's death was accidental. The coroner this afternoon is investigating the occurrence.

Ex-Senator Roach

Died of Cancer in New York City

Was Born and Spent His Early Manhood in Washington, Then Went to Dakota

Former Senator William Nathaniel Roach of North Dakota died in New York yesterday. He was a member of the Senate from 1893 to 1899. The cause of death was cancer, from which he suffered for a long time. His treatment in New York was supposed to greatly benefit him and a month ago it was announced that he was out of danger. He had been confined to bed for ten months.

Mr. Roach was born in this city September 25, 1840. He was educated in the public schools and later attended Georgetown College. In 1861, when he had hardly completed his course in college, he was given a clerkship in the quartermaster's department of the Union army, which he retained throughout the war. At the close of the war he returned to this city and entered the National Metropolitan Bank and when the Citizens' National Bank was organized he became its cashier.

Removed to Dakota

In 1879 he removed to what was then Dakota territory, where he was interested in mail contracts for a number of years. He also took up land and developed a farm. He was elected mayor of Larimoe four years after his arrival in the territory and held that office until 1887. He was a member of the territorial legislature of the session of 1885 and was democratic candidate for governor at the first state election, and was defeated by John Miller. He was renominated at the next election and was again defeated.

On the 20th of February, 1893, after thirty-three days of balloting, he was elected United States senator upon the sixty-first ballot, receiving twenty-three democratic, seventeen populist and ten republican votes, against forty-two Republican votes cast for H.F. Miller, Republican. He took his seat March 4, 1893.

At the expiration of his term in March, 1899, he remained in Washington, where he was interested in several matters pending before the Court of Claims.

Mr. Roach's first wife was Miss Liebermann of this city, who died nearly fifteen years ago. Two years ago he married Mrs. Verona Pollock, widow of Alexander L. Pollock. He left one son and a daughter, the son being engaged in the practice of law in New York.

The remains will arrive in Washington tomorrow afternoon, accompanied by his widow and her sister, Mrs. J.P. Finley, wife of Captain Finley of the army, and will be carried to the residence of his sister-in-law, Miss Ella F. Larkin, 1229 O street. Funeral services will be held at St. Patrick's Church at 10 a.m. Wednesday. The interment will be at Congressional cemetery.

Prominent Citizens Attend Services at St. Patrick's Church

Interment at Congressional Cemetery

Prayers were said this morning in St. Patrick's Church over the body of the late Senator William N. Roach, who died in New York last Sunday and over whose remains funeral services were conducted in that city yesterday morning. The interment was made in Congressional Cemetery.

The services in New York city were conducted at St. Ignatius' Church, Amsterdam avenue and 84th street, and consisted of a high mass of requiem conducted by Rev. Fathers Healy, Ennis and McKernon. The first named was one of Mr. Roach's boyhood instructors. The attendance included many New Yorkers who had known Senator Roach during his political career. The body was borne from the church directly to a train and arrived in Washington yesterday evening. It was then taken to the residence of Mrs. Roach's sister, Miss Ella F. Larkin, No. 1229 O street northwest.

A congregation of notable size gathered at St. Patrick's Church this morning to attend the Washington services. It included a great number of persons with whom the deceased had been associated in his youth--former schoolmates, his early employers and business associations. Among these were Messrs. H.S. Thyson, J.T. Burch, Charles W. Handy, Nicholas H. Shea and Tolbert Dyer, with whom Mr. Roach attended the old Washington Seminary on F street between 9th and 10th streets. Senator Pascoe, former Senator Matthew C. Butler and Senator Goman attended as representatives of the United States Senate. The relatives present included M. Roach's widow, formerly Mrs. Verona L. Pollock; Miss Larkin, Miss Pollock, M. J. Edward Roach, brother of the deceased; Ms. J.E. Roach and Miss Roach.

Acolytes, robed in blue and red, and carrying a crozier and candles, met the casket at the church door, with Rev. Father Dolan, an assistant at St. Patrick's, who was to conduct the service. Ms. Roach walked behind the coffin, leaning on the arm of Mr. D.I. Murphy, an old friend of the deceased. There was no sermon, only the simple prayers for the dead, which Senator Roach's church provides for services to follow the ordered funeral ceremonies. Father Dolan was assisted, however, by Rev. Father Gaynor. At the close of these prayers the body was taken to Congressional cemetery and interred.

The honorary pallbearers included Senators McCumber, Hansbrough, Clark, Heitfeld, Jones, Blackburn, McLaurin and Gorman.

Ex-Senator Roach

Being Treated by X-Ray -- Hope for His Recovery

From the New York Journal

Ex-United States Senator William A Roach, who three months ago was believed to be dying from a malignant growth which seventeen physicians pronounced incurable, is improving.

The three physicians who have charge of his case say that he may yet recover. The senator is confident of his recovery, and in his home, the Huntington, No 218 West 112th street, the certainty of death has given way to hope.

The case is so curious that it may yet be known in medical annals as "the strange story of Senator William Roach." Last November an operation was performed upon him for an internal tumor. He left the hospital and was able to move about the house with assistance, but in the spring it became evident that there was a renewed growth in the affected part.

Despairing of the efficacy of the knife, Dr. Robert T. Morris and Dr. J.J. Edward Stubbert ordered X-ray and static treatment.

"He cannot live forty-eight hours unless this is done," they said. The great machine was placed in his room at the Huntington and electric treatment was given daily, the wire springs of the bed acting as conductors. A tube was inserted in the incision made by the former operation, and through this the X-ray was applied to the affected part. The apparatus was so regulated that while it gave forth a strong light there was no heat.

The attempt was being made to dry up the tumor which the surgeons had failed to remove thoroughly with the knife. Gradually the dangerous symptoms have been lessened, and at last there is genuine ground for hope.

Mrs. Roach from the first assisted the physicians in the daily treatments, which require delicate skill and the utmost nicety of perception. She has been her husband's nurse by day and night, and to her, in no small degree, the doctors say, is his improvement due.

Mrs. Roach was the widow of A.L. Pollock, consul at Salvador, who died there of yellow fever. Singularly it was Dr. Stubbert who attended him in his last illness. Mrs. Roach's three children are Channing Pollock, who is on William A. Brady's business staff and is the author of the novel "Behold the Man;" John Pollock, who is with the "Under Southern Skies" company, and Miss Kate Pollock, who recently won a scholarship in St. Agnes' School. Mrs. Roach is well known in Washington society.

Of the sick man Senator Morgan of Alabama said: "No man ever left the Senate more respected. We all loved him."

He has been unwaveringly patient in his long and trying illness.

Crash Causes Death

Electric Car Rushes Down Incline

Breaking of Chain Works Disaster on Capital Railway

Killed and Injured

Car No. 4 on the Capital Railway line became disabled about 9:30 o'clock last night at the top of the asylum hill by the breaking of a chain attached to the brake and the car ran down the hill at a frightful rate of speed crashing into an Anacostia horse car at the foot of the hill, smashing a trolley pole and awning post and finally coming to a stop at Nichols and Howard avenues. One passenger was killed and about three dozen people were more or less injured. Some of them were seriously hurt, and one or two may die. Motorman Arthur Shelly did all he could with the electric current, and when the bottom of the hill was reached and an accident could not be avoided he jumped from the platform and escaped injury. Conductor J.W. Werner remained aboard until the collision occurred, but also escaped injury.

As soon as the accident happened there were telephone messages sent in all directions for doctors and ambulances. The police reserves were called out, and in a short time the wounded were being cared for either in the hospitals or at their homes. Some few were kept in houses near the scene of the accident and were given medical treatment.

Crowded With Passengers

The Capital Railway Company uses the overhead trolley system south of the Anacostia bridge. When car No. 4 left Congress Heights, some minutes after 9 o'clock last night, there were many passengers aboard, including men, women and children. Many of them had spent the day in the woods and were returning home. Just after passing the gate of the government hospital for the insane passengers on the car heard a rumbling noise, but just what it was they, of course, did not know. The motorman understood very well what the trouble was, and gave the conductor a signal of warning. The car was then going at terrific speed, and the conductor made his way to the rear platform and used every effort to apply the brake, but was powerless to check the car. When the passengers realized that a smash-up was unavoidable they began jumping from the runaway vehicle, and in this way several were injured, while others managed to escape unhurt. Driver Roger Barker of the Anacostia street car line had his car on the turntable, near Douglass Hall, and had not finished turning the car, when his attention was attracted to the electric car, then thundering down the hill. While he believed that the saving of his horses and car was impossible, he made an effort to get the animals loose. An instant before the crash came he deserted his team and jumped to the sidewalk, reaching there in time to save his life.

Witnessed the Destruction

Standing there on the sidewalk the driver saw his car demolished and his horses so frightfully cut up that that it was necessary to end their sufferings soon afterward. The heavy electric car jumped the track just before the switch and turntable were reached, but did not clear the little horse car. This vehicle was struck on the end, and so great was the force that it was smashed and splintered and thrown in a mass on the sidewalk. The fatally injured horses were also thrown on the pile of debris. Moving on as if it were going to tear through the houses on the street the electric car struck the curbstone and an iron trolley pole about the same time. This changed the course of the runaway, and instead of going through it continued along the line of the curb, taking an awning post from in front of W.E. Gale's drug store and finally stopping at Howard avenue. Here the collapse of the car was almost complete, and the passengers were imprisoned by the falling of the roof and uprights.

Driver Barker of the Anacostia line and Conductor Werner, who had gotten off the damaged car at the last minute, were among the first to begin the work of rescuing the passengers. Women and children in the car were screaming and shrieking. Some of the passengers had received broken legs, arms or ribs; some had been cut about the head and body, while still others had received internal injuries which caused severe suffering and endangers their lives.

Adds to the Horror

The sight of blood on so many of the victims added to the horror of the situation, and frightened some of the women and children

Chain Did Not Break

Allegation of Witness to Capital Railway Accident

Says the Car Was Overcrowded

Also That Conductor and Motorman Both Jumped Off

The Coroner's Inquiry

The body of the man killed in the accident on the Capital railway last night was removed this afternoon to the undertaking establishment of J.W. Lee, No. 332 Pennsylvania avenue, where an inquest was held by direction of Coroner Carr. There were several witnesses in attendance who had not been summoned among them a man who was interested in the operation of the brake on the car. The jury was composed of Alfred W. Wilson, Charles W. Downing, John Garner, Daniel C. Frahey, J.T. Fleishhamer and Edward R. Plant.

Deputy Coroner Glazebrook was the first witness examined. He performed the autopsy. He told of the many bruises he found about the man's head and body, as well as on his legs, and said that his pelvic bones were crushed. His bladder was ruptured, and death, he said, resulted from hemorrhage following the infliction of injuries.

Braxton L. Mohler, 511 6th street southeast, testified that he went over to Congress Heights last night in company with Mrs. Baldwin. They remained until the pictures were shown and started home about 9:30 o'clock. The car came at a moderate rate of speed for a while. Before the conductor finished loading the car he was told not to take any more passengers. A man not on the car seemed to be guiding the movements of the people. Just after the car started the speed, witness thought, was about eight or ten miles an hour.

When the last start was made the car was making a more rapid rate. When a down grade was reached the car was going at about 20 or 25 miles an hour, and when the asylum hill was reached witness realized that the car was beyond the motorman's control.

Number of Passengers

"I should say there were between 140 and 160 people on the car," said witness. "The passengers were packed in and out like sardines."

The witness said the claim had been made that the chain on the brake broke.

"That," he said, "is false, for the brake worked all down the hill."

Near the top of the hill, he said, the conductor "quietly jumped" and near the foot of the hill the motorman got off.

"Did you say both the motorman and conductor left the car before the collision occurred?" asked a juror.

"Yes, sir," he answered, "and a lady asked me why the conductor had left the car. I told her I thought he had been pushed off, as I did not want to alarm her."

What Examination Showed

Witness said he understood that an examination of the car made after the accident occurred showed that the chain under the car had broken. This may be true, he said, but he was positive that the brake worked down the hill.

Witness said he thought if the motorman and conductor had remained on the car they could have stopped it at the bottom of the hill and avoided the serious accident. There were seven women on the rear platform, and in witness' opinion no one touched the rear brake.

Conductor Wersler was called in and witness said he was not the man to whom he (witness) had referred as the conductor of the car.

Motorman's Testimony

Arthur Shelby, motorman, was also examined. He testified that when the car was half way down the hill the chain brake broke, and witness gave the conductor three bells. As soon as he did so the rear brake was applied.

The car, he said, was going slowly when the chain broke, but it was going fast by the time the rear brake was applied."

The car, he said, was going slowly when the chain broke, but it was going fast by the time the rear brake was applied."

"Did you have single or double brake?"

"Single brake."

Witness said he thought there were about seventy-five passengers on the car last night. He thought the car had a seating capacity of about forty.

Witness had not concluded his testimony when the Star's report closed.

Victim of Capital Railway Accident--Others Injured

Thomas W. Roberts, whose serious condition resulting from Sunday night's accident on the Capital Railway Company's tracks in Hillside was mentioned in Wednesday's Star, died at Providence Hospital about 4 o'clock the same afternoon. Frederick Winkleman of 419 G street southeast, a machinist at the navy yard, was also seriously injured, and it is believed he cannot recover. While most of the other victims of the accident are doing well it was reported this morning that two of them in addition to those mentioned were still suffering severely.

Coroner Carr was notified of Mr. Roberts' death late yesterday afternoon. In view of the fact that an inquest had been held in the case of Franklin C. Hismer, the first to die, he concluded that another inquest would be unnecessary. A certificate of accidental death was given, and Undertaker Nalley removed the body to the late home of the deceased, No. 124 Pierce street, Anacostia. His funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. Roberts, who was nearly sixty years of age, had been in the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad for more than twenty years. Many years ago he was stationed at Benning, but was transferred to Anacostia because of the importance of the latter station.

As heretofore published in The Star, Mr. Roberts was standing on the front platform of the car at the time of the accident. His friend, Mr. Jackson, jumped and was not injured. Just after the accident happened Mr. Roberts was conscious and recognized a little girl who was on the car and who spoke to him after she had been rescued from the wreck.

The deceased leaves a widow and four married daughters, Mrs. N.L. Allen, Mrs. Everett Davis, Mrs. Charles Miller and Mrs. Glenwood Allen.

Mr. U.S. King of the injured passengers has been discharged from the Eastern Dispensary, while Mr. Barker is still there. His injuries are serious, but the doctors think he will recover.

Guy Latimer, who was also seriously hurt, is still in the Emergency Hospital, but is believed to be on the way to recovery. Mr. R.H. Bowman was able to go home from the hospital yesterday.

Anacostia Happenings

Funeral of Thomas W. Roberts, Victim of Capital Railway Accident

The funeral of Thomas W. Roberts, who died at Providence Hospital Wednesday evening from injuries received in the street railway accident near Anacostia Sunday night, was held yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock from his late residence, 114 Pierce street. The services were conducted by Rev. George Bowman, formerly of the Anacostia Baptist Church, assisted by Rev. E.W. Bliss, the present pastor of the same church. The pallbearers were Messrs. John Miller, --- Shoemack, James W. Bartley, George F. Pyles, James Hailey and J.W. Tolson. The interment was in Congressional cemetery.

The deceased, who was widely known throughout this section, was years of 59 age. He was a native of Virginia, having been born in Spotsylvania county. He served throughout the late war as a private in the southern army, was in many engagements, including both battles of Bull Run, and received but one slight wound. He was much esteemed by the officials in authority over him, as he was by the people of Anacostia, where he had resided during the past 25 years. He leaves a wife and four daughters, the latter being Mrs. Edward Davis of Washington, Mrs. Charles Miller of the same place and Mrs. Glenwood Allen and Mrs. Lemuel Allen, both of Anacostia.

The Evening Star, April 14, 1892

Dr. William E. Roberts, a son of the late Dr. John M. Roberts, a well-known physician of East Washington, died at his residence, No. 715 G street southeast, yesterday afternoon, quite suddenly. The deceased was a native of the Navy Yard section and was well and favorably known throughout the District. He studied medicine under his father, one of the best known physicians of ante bellum days, and during the war was a surgeon in the United States service, attached to the hospital in East Washington, and for a time had charge of the Emergency Hospital. He was for about 25 years a member of Christ P.E. Church. He survived his wife, a daughter of the late Henry Naylor, some years and his immediate family consists of two daughters and a son. Dr. Roberts was attacked with paralysis of the heart about a year ago and had been in feeble health since then. He was out walking about an hour before the fatal attack.

Mrs. Roby's Death

Mother of Attorney Mullowney Victim of Paralysis

Mrs. Amanda L. Roby, mother of Assistant District Attorney, A.R. Mullowney, died at the Portner Flats yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock. Mrs. Roby was a lovable and charitable woman, whose loss will be regretted by a host of friends. Mrs. Roby was the widow of the late Major George W. Roby, one of the victims of the Ford's Theater disaster of several years ago. He died several weeks after the collapse of the building from injuries received by being precipitated from one of the upper stories to the ground. Since the death of her husband Mrs. Roby had not enjoyed good health, and about a month ago her son, Mr. Mullowney, engaged apartments at the Portner, thinking the change would be restful and beneficial to her. She had been in her new home only about a week when she was stricken with paralysis. For ten days before her death she was unconscious.

The deceased was 65 years old and leaves two children, Mrs. Annie L. Bertrand, a daughter, and Mr. Mullowney. The former lives in San Francisco, and cannot reach here in time to attend the obsequies.

The funeral, which will take place tomorrow afternoon, will be private. The interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

Suicide of E.W. Robey

Crazed By Insomnia, He Cuts Throat With Razor

Told Friend He Had Not Been Able to Sleep for Two Weeks

Ernest W. Robey, thirty-five years old, the sole support of an invalid mother and two unmarried sisters, who reside at 321 10th street southeast, committed suicide this afternoon. He cut his throat with a razor while at his place of employment, the shop of Warren M. Whyte, galvanized iron cornice maker 304 13th street northwest. The young man had a severe fall some time ago and during the last two weeks he had suffered from insomnia.

"I haven't been able to sleep for two weeks," he told one of the workmen in the shop this morning, although giving no intimation that he contemplated taking his life.

Terrible Gash in Throat

Frank Daley of 911 25th street northwest was working in the shop with Robey and he had occasion to go to the upper floor for material. When he returned he missed Robey. A few minutes later he found the young man in a shed in the rear of the shop. There was a terrible gash in his throat and life was almost extinct.

The ambulance from the Emergency Hospital was called and Robey was hurried to the hospital. When the institution was reached, however, it was found that Robey was dead. The body was placed in the hospital morgue and the coroner notified. Later in the day the coroner gave a certificate of death, and the body was prepared for burial.

Regarded as Good Mechanic

Robey was sober and industrious and was regarded a a splendid mechanic. His father, Thomas Robey, who was a bricklayer, died many years ago and the son has since remained at home and supported his mother and sisters. Mrs. Robey had a fall several years ago which resulted in a fracture of her hip, and she has been unable to walk since that time.

During all the years she has been an invalid her son has cared for her, seeing that she got all the comforts she needed. His untimely death proved an unusually severe shock to her. Friends of the deceased think he was driven to a condition of mental irresponsibility by his inability to sleep.

Death of Nehemiah Robey

Had Been a Resident of District Over Fifty Years

Nehemiah Robey died yesterday morning at his residence, No. 303 Harrison street, Anacostia, aged 72 years. He was one of the oldest and most widely-known citizens of this part of the District. Born in Fairfax county, Virginia, Mr. Robey came to Anacostia over fifty years ago. He acquired considerable property in Anacostia. During the civil war, and for some time before and after, he was employed in the Washington navy yard as a machinist. In later years he conducted a small grocery business and gardening in this locality. He married in Anacostia. For over forty years Mr. Robey had been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, being connecting at the time of his death with Harmony Lodge, No. 9, of which he was a past grand.

A widow and eight children survive him. The latter are Mrs. M.E. Ash, Mrs. O.V. Pitcher, Mrs. Annie Alder, Miss Emma J. Robey and Messrs. J.R., W.H., Benjamin F. and Thomas E. Robey. Funeral services over the remains of the deceased will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Second Baptist Church, corner of 4th street and Virginia avenue southeast. The pastor, Rev. E. Hez Swem, will officiate. Mr. Robey had been an attendant at this church for some years. Harmony Lodge, No. 9, I.O.O.F., of Washington will be represented at the funeral.

The interment will be made at the Congressional cemetery.

Robey. Suddenly on Monday, August 6, 1888, Reese Robey, beloved husband of Ludy Robey aged 35 years.

Thou hast gone where only bliss sincere is known,
Gone where to love and to enjoy are one;
Yet take these tears, mortality's relief,
And, 'till we share your joys forgive our grief;
These little rites--a stone, a vase resolve;
'Tis all that's left a loving wife to give.

Funeral will take place from his late residence, 242 4 1/2 street southwest, Thursday, at 2 o'clock. Relatives and friends invited to attend.

The Evening Star, August 18, 1911, p. 2
Puzzled By Suicide
Motive for Self-Destruction of R.A. Robey Mystifies
Girl Admits Quarrel
But Declares Misunderstanding Was Not A Serious One Best Man That Ever Walked
Miss Marie Rodier Unable to Explain Deed of Sweetheart.
Drank Muriatic Acid
"The best man that ever walked in shoe leather."

Marie Rodier the young girl for whose sake Robert A. Robey, an eighteen-year-old newspaper employe, committed suicide this morning, uttered this appreciation of her suitor, broke into hysterical sobbing and was for a long while unable to discuss the tragedy.

She finally said that she could not understand the motive that prompted him to take his life, and declared that their quarrel--to which has been ascribed his self-destruction--was not of enough seriousness to explain the act, and was not due to any refusal by her to become his wife.

Miss Rodier is a telephone operator employed at the Union station, a position she owes to W.G. Robey, stationmaster, father of the suicide. She was interviewed this morning at her home, 1853 9th street.

At first she said that there had been no quarrel between herself and young Robey and that his suicide was an unexplainable to her as to everybody else. Afterward she admitted that they had disagreed over some trifling matter, nothing that she could regard as sufficient to move him to self-destruction.

Left Note Addressed to Her

A letter left by young Robey and addressed to her, she said, had not been delivered to her, and she knew nothing of its contents. The suicide's father, she believed, must have taken possession of it.

The mother of the young girl said Robey had been coming to her home to see her daughter for more than a year, and that she had never known them to have a quarrel.

"He was a fine young gentleman," said Mrs. Rodier. "I liked him very much."

"The other night he came to me in the dining room and asked me how I would like to lose another daughter," said Mrs. Rodier. "I told him that both he and Marie were too young yet to get married."

Relatives of the young man say he was not engaged to be married to the young lady. He was in love h=with her, however, and her refusal to be his sweetheart, it is said, caused him to become despondent.

He wrote several notes before he took the deadly muratic acid that ended his life this morning at 1:30 o'clock at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Eleanor Walker, at 614 I street southeast. One letter was addressed to his father and another to Miss Rodier.

The notes were found on a table in the death room.

Robey, employed in the pressroom of a local newspaper, was away on vacation recently. He had arranged to spend the time at Colonial Beach, but his father says changed his mind.

This morning, after he had written the messages to his father and Miss Rodier, he swallowed the poison. Suffering intense agony, the dying youth's outcry was heard by Cleveland Smallwood, who abides in the I street house, and G.H. Moore, a neighbor.

Smallwood and Moore procured an automobile and made a quick run to the hospital with the young man. At the hospital the physicians found life extinct.

The body was placed in the hospital morgue, where it was later viewed by Coroner Nevitt. The coroner gave a certificate in accordance with the facts.

Policemen Jukes and Allen of the fifth precinct went to the house shortly after Robey had been taken away. They took possession of the message that had been left for Miss Rodier. The envelope was sealed and they did not open it.

Undertaker J. William Lee took charge of the body today. After it had been prepared for burial it was taken to the house of his grandmother, Mrs. Walker. The funeral will be held from the house Monday morning. Interment will be at Congressional cemetery.

Robinson, one of the oldest residents of the District, died this morning at the residence of his son-in-law, Joseph S. Stettinius, on I street, near 6th. He was 79 years of age. Capt. R. was a soldier of the war of 1812, and was a sergeant at the battle of Bladensburg. He resided for many years on 7th street, between G and H, but for the last few years lived in the eastern part of the city. For many years he was one of the lumber inspectors of the city, and under the old corporation was a commissioner, fulfilling in every position his duties to the letter. He was one of the oldest Odd Fellows in the District--a member of Central Lodge, No. 1, and the Grand Lodge--and for a number of years was the janitor of the hall on 7th street. Both of these bodies make arrangements this evening for his funeral.

The National Intelligencer, October 10, 1822

In this city on the 5th inst., Mr. Seth Robinson, aged about 32 years. He was a native of Maine but emigrated to this place many years since. He embraced the Christian religion at an early period in his life and lived in happy enjoyment of the same till he was called home. It will not be deemed by those who knew him best any exaggeration to say that he justly ranked amongst the best of men. He has left a disconsolate widow and two children to mourn their irreparable loss.

His languishing head is at rest
 Its thinking and aching are o'er
 His quiet immovable breast
 Is heav'd by affliction no more.

The Evening Star, February 8, 1877

Serious Accident to Foreman Robinson

About 8 o'clock last evening, as the Hook and Ladder company were responding to the alarm of fire turned in from box 43, Mr. Thomas H. Robinson, the foreman of the company, attempted to mount the truck as it was passing near the corner of 3d street and Indiana avenue, when he lost his footing, and falling, the rear wheels passed over him, breaking his leg and otherwise severely bruising him. He was taken to the drug store of Butler & Claridge, on the corner, where Dr. G.L. Magruder attended him, and decided to have him conveyed on a stretcher to his residence, on 3d, near East Capitol street. A cot bedstead was procured from the truck-house, and four members of the fire department, assisted by two officers of the police force, conveyed the injured man to his home. In the meantime, Dr. S.A.H. McKim, the family physician of the injured man, had been telegraphed for, and soon arrived at the residence. The knee-joint of Robinson's right leg was badly dislocated, and the ends of the bone shattered, while the flesh was terribly lacerated. The wounded man exhibited the greatest fortitude, and showed no signs of the agony he was suffering. The broken limb was set and the wounds sewed up by the physicians above named, and although the patient suffered acutely during the night, he was more quiet this morning, and the physicians are hopeful that the leg may be saved. The dislocated limb has been restored to its position.

The Evening Star, February 15, 1877

Amputation of Foreman Robinson's Leg

It will be remembered that on Wednesday night, the 7th inst., as Mr. Thomas H. Robinson, foreman of Hook and Ladder company, No. 1, was attempting to jump on the truck as it was on the way to a fire, he fell and one of the rear wheels passed over and fractured his right leg. Mr. Robinson was attended at the time and has been attended since by Drs. G.L. Magruder and S.A.H. McKim at his residence near the corner of 3d and East Capitol streets. It was thought until a few days ago that he was getting along quite well. Yesterday, however, there were evidences that lock-jaw was about to supervene, and last night it was determined that his only chance of recovery was amputation. Dr. Elliott was called, and, after consultation with the attending physicians, it was deemed advisable to have the leg amputated between the hip and knee. The operation was accordingly performed, and Mr. Robinson remained in a precarious condition during the night and this morning his condition was still regarded as critical.

P.S.--Lock-jaw fully set in this afternoon and the physicians fear the worst.

Death of Fireman Robinson

We regret to state that Mr. Thomas H. Robinson, foreman of Hook and Ladder Company No. 1, who was run over by the truck on the night of the 7th instant, died this morning about 2 o'clock from lockjaw, which resulted from his injuries. It was stated in yesterday's STAR that Mr. Robinson's right leg had been amputated. Had the operation been performed sooner he might have survived, but lockjaw had set in, and the treatment failed to afford relief. He was conscious until only a short time before his death and communicated with the family and his friends by writing, (his jaws being tightly locked,) and during the afternoon he conversed in the same way with Rev. Dr. Deale, of Waugh chapel, M.E. church, who had been sent for, and it is believed that he died fully resigned to his fate. Mr. Robinson was a native of the Capitol Hill section of the city, and for many years was an officer at the jail. Subsequently he became a member of the metropolitan police, in which force he served some time, and was severely wounded in the hand while making an arrest. He next was appointed a private in the paid fire department, and was attached to Columbia Company, No. 3. From this position he was promoted to the foremanship of the Hook and Ladder company, the duties of which he performed in a very satisfactory manner. Mr. Robinson was for many years an active member of Columbia Fire Company, No. 1, of the old volunteer department, and possessed every qualification for an active and efficient fireman, being at all times as cool and collected as he was brave and daring, with a full appreciation of the responsibility resting on him. He was a member of Syracusians' Lodge, No. 10, Knights of Pythias, and Metropolis Lodge, No. 16, of Odd Fellows. Chief Engineer Cronin has been daily looking after the sufferer and attending to his wants since the accident. He was 45 years old, and leaves four orphan children. The funeral services will be held at Waugh chapel, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The Evening Star, February 19, 1877

Funeral of Foreman Robinson

The funeral of the late Thomas H. Robinson, foreman of the Hook and Ladder company, who died on Friday morning last from lock-jaw, resulting from the injuries he received when the truck of the Hook and Ladder company ran over his right leg on the night of the 7th inst., took place yesterday afternoon from Waugh (M.E.) church, corner of 3d and A streets northeast, and was attended by a large concourse of people, embracing many of our leading citizens. The number in and about the church was estimated by some at about 5,000. The remains were laid out in a handsome rosewood casket, with silver plate containing the name and age of the deceased, silver trimmings and handles, and the insignia of the Odd Fellows and, Knights of Pythias. Long before the hour for the funeral a continuous line of friends and acquaintances visited the residence to take a last look at one who in every position of life was faithful to his duty, and was never known to have had an enemy. At a few minutes to 3 o'clock the Fire Commissioners in a body, a detail of firemen, headed by Chief Engineer Cronin, a large delegation of the Old Columbia Fire company, marshaled by J.P. Barrett, Metropolis Lodge, No. 16, I.O.O.F., H.C. Stevens marshal; Syracusians Lodge, No. 10, Knights of Pythias, A.M. Sprague marshal, arrived in procession, headed by Repetti's band, and formed open lines from the residence to the church, and the corpse was borne to the church between these lines, followed by the family and immediate friends of the deceased. There were several floral ornaments on the lid of the casket, and the regalia of the Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias. The pall-bearers were: Joseph Parrish, of No. 1, and L.P. Lowe, of No. 5; Alex. McKenzie and E.H. Gray, of Syracusian's Lodge, No. 10, K. of P., and A. Duvall and J.T. Green, of Metropolis Lodge, No. 16, I.O.O.F. The services in the church were commenced by the choir singing the hymn "Hark from the tombs;" after which prayer was offered by Rev. M.L. Hawley, and he followed by reading an appropriate selection of Scripture. The sermon was preached by Rev. J.S. Deale, the pastor of the church, who, in the course of his remarks, alluded to the perilous duties of the firemen, at the conclusion of the sermon, took a last look at the remains, and passing out the procession reformed and marched to Congressional Cemetery, where the services of the church were conducted by the clergy, the Odd Fellows' service by acting Chaplain Bawsel, and the Pythian service by Past Chancellor W.H. Hines.

Illness Is Fatal To Mayer Official

Harry Theodore Roche Had Been Connected With Furniture Firm Since Youth

Taken suddenly ill Sunday, Harry Theodore Roche, 54, of 4538 Cathedral avenue, secretary and general manager of Mayer & Co., died early this morning in Sibley Hospital. He had been connected with the furniture concern since early youth and was part owner of the store. Death was due to peritonitis.

Members of Mr. Roche's family said he complained of pains on arising Sunday and became steadily worse until yesterday, when he was taken to the hospital. His condition began to improve until a sharp turn at 1 o'clock this morning. He died at 2:30 a.m.

Born in Washington the son of Patrick Henry and Emma I. Roche, Mr. Roche was educated in the public schools here and attended business college.

He entered the Mayer organization in 1895 and remained with the company throughout his life, gradually rising until he became a junior partner and general manager.

Recently he had taken an active interest in the work of the National Recovery Administration and was a member of the committee studying a furniture code. He was a leader in the Retail Furniture Association.

Mr. Roche was well known in civic circles and was a member of the City Club and Manor Country Club. He also was active in Masonry, being a member of Almas Temple Shriners; Columbia Commandery, Knights Templar; Lafayette Royal Arch Chapter and Hope Lodge F.A.A.M. Masonic rites will be held at the funeral. Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed, but it was said the services probably will be Saturday.

Surviving Mr. Roche are his widow, Mrs. Frances C. Roche; and three sisters, Mrs. Alice Lee Yarnell of Iowa City, Iowa; Mrs. Albert Bealf of Providence, R.I., and Miss Elsie Roche, who lived with her brother.

Rodgers, Midshipman Frederick The National Intelligencer, April 9, 1828 The Norfolk papers of Monday, received yesterday by the Steamboat Potomac, convey to us the following afflicting information. It will be received by all our readers with sincere sympathy; but by those of this city and elsewhere, who personally know the respected parents of one of the unfortunate youths, it will be received with heartfelt sorrow: From the Norfolk Herald Most Lamentable Occurrence It is with a feeling of deep sorrow that we announce the following occurrence, which has cast a gloom of sadness over our whole community: On Saturday forenoon, the following young gentlemen, midshipmen in the U.S. Navy, viz: William J. Slidell, Frederick Rodgers, Robert M. Harrison, and Bushrod W. Hunter, manned a sail boat, and proceeded down the river, as they had been accustomed to do, for recreation and practice. The wind was blowing fresh; but when they had proceeded about three miles down it became flawy, with intervals of dead calm. It was after one of these intervals, that a sudden and very heavy flaw of wind struck the sails, when the boat capsized, filled and instantly sunk, carrying down with her Mr. Slidell, who never rose. Mr. Rodgers and Mr. Harrison cheered each other for some time, but, exhausted by cold and fatigue, the former sunk, and the latter soon shared his fate. Poor Hunter was on the eve of following his illfated companions, when an East river schooner, then beating down, picked him up, nearly in a state of insensibility, and put back with him to the Navy Yard, where, with proper care, he was in a little time restored to health. Immediately on the receipt of these distressing particulars, Com. Barron ordered boats down to drag for the bodies; but they have not yet been found. Mr. Slidell was from New York, and brother to the lady of Captain M.C. Perry. Mr. Rodgers was 16 or 17 years of age, and son of Com. Rodgers. Mr. Harrison was son of Robert M. Harrison, Esq. Commercial Agent at St. Bartholomews. They were young men of the finest promise, and much caressed in the circle of acquaintance to which they had found a ready introduction in this place. The National Intelligencer, April 12, 1828 The body of Midshipman Rodgers having been recovered and brought to the City, his funeral will take place this afternoon, at half past three o'clock, from the residence of his father. The friends of the family are respectfully invited to attend, without further notice.	d. 5 Apr 1828	17 yrs.	R56/151 than two months after the command devolved upon him a treaty of peace was concluded with that Power, on terms dictated by him and Colonel Lear.

In 1812, the command of a squadron was given to him. He dashed into the European seas, made a number of captures, most of which he from necessity destroyed, returning triumphant after an absence of more than three months. At the time he sailed, a number of the enemy's vessels were on our coast, greatly exceeding the Commodore's squadron in force. These he successfully evaded, and, by drawing them off in pursuit of him, enabled a great number of our merchant vessels, with valuable cargoes, to return in safety to our ports. One of the effects of this cruise was to save millions to our merchants and to our Government.

When the British army marched upon Baltimore, Commodore Rodgers acted a distinguished part in the defense of that city. Many believe that Baltimore would have been surrendered but for the seasonable aid of the force under his command.

After the war, he was appointed Commissioner of the Navy, and presided over that Board for several years. He was mainly instrumental in making regulations which have conduced to the economy of the naval service. He was offered the appointment of Secretary of the Navy, but declined it. Having acted as President of the Board of Navy Commissioners about ten years ago, the President invited him to take command of the Mediterranean squadron, mentioning considerations, inducing him to do so, highly honorable to the Commodore. He accepted, and his flag was hoisted on board the North Carolina ship of the line of which D.T. Patterson, Esq. Was appointed Captain.

He cruised in the Mediterranean seas nearly three years. He had much intercourse with the commanders of other naval Powers, and was held by them in high estimation. The ship was particularly distinguished for her fine condition at all times, and the high state of discipline maintained on board. The Commodore, his accomplished Captain, and this noble specimen of American naval architecture, were objects of universal admiration. Returning to the United States, he was again appointed President of the Board of Navy Commissioners, and continued to discharge with great fidelity and zeal the arduous duties of that station, till his constitution was literally worn out, and his mind exhausted, in the service. He then retired—made a trip to England in the hope of recovering his health, and was there received with those kind affections which were gratefully remembered till his last moments.

Of his personal character, it may be added, that, though of quick temper, he was noble and generous in his disposition. He was a Patriot in reality. Though stern in his appearance, he was particularly distinguished for his humanity. The story of his noble and successful exertions to save two young ladies from the massacre at Francois—his sublime efforts to rescue a poor old negro woman floating upon a cake of ice down the Susquehannah, which were also crowned with success, must be told as characteristic incidents of his life, when these brief outlines of his character shall be filled up by faithful History.

Who's Who In the Military

Born near the present Havre de Grace, Maryland in 1773, Rodgers was the son of John Rodgers, a Scotsman who had emigrated to American about 1760 and who, after serving as a colonel of militia in the Revolution, founded one of the most celebrated naval families in U.S. history. After spending some 11 years in the merchant service the younger Rodgers entered the navy as second lieutenant aboard the Constellation in March 1798 and in June went to sea on her under the command of Capt. Thomas Truxton. He served as executive officer of the ship during her victorious engagement with the Insurgente on February 9, 1799. He was rewarded by being promoted the next month to captain, the first lieutenant to be raised to this rank in the newly reorganized United States navy. After a period of routine duty and a leave of absence he returned to active service in 1802, commanding the John Adams in the squadron sent out under Commodore Richard V. Morris to reinforce the blockade of Tripoli. In May 1803 he captured the Mashuda attempting to run the blockade. In June 1803 he was briefly acting commander of the squadron after the departure of Morris and before the arrival of Commodore Edward Preble. He returned home in December 1803 but rejoined the Tripolitan squadron in the summer of 1804 in command of the Congress. In May 1805 he succeeded Commodore James Barron in command of the squadron, and in June he completed a treaty with Tripoli abolishing the payment of tribute. In September Rodgers exacted a similar agreement from the bey of Tunis and then returned home. From July 1807 to February 1809 he commanded the gunboat flotilla and the naval station at New York, and he was then transferred to command of the Home Squadron. On May 16, 1811, while cruising off Cape Henry aboard the frigate "President," he engaged what proved after a 15-minute fight to be the smaller British sloop "Little Belt" and inflicted heavy damage and many casualties. The action, coming after the "Chesapeake-Leopard" affair, was commended by his superiors and made him a popular hero. During the War of 1812 he was the ranking active officer of the navy, and again he performed effectively, particularly against British merchant shipping. Aboard his flagship "President" he commanded squadron patrols sweeping the Atlantic from the Indies to the Cape Verdes, making four such cruises before the end of war. In 1815 he was chosen by President James Madison to head the newly established Board of Naval Commissioners (the other commissioners being Commodores Isaac Hull and David Porter). He retained the post until 1837, except for the period 1824-1827, when he was again on sea duty in command of the Mediterranean Squadron from aboard the "North Carolina." He was senior officer of the navy from 1821, and in 1823 he served for a short period as secretary of the navy. He resigned as a naval commissioner in May 1837 and died in Philadelphia on August 1, 1838. His younger brother, George Washington Rodgers (1787-1832), was also a naval officer.

The National Intelligencer, April 12, 1848
To the Editors

Gentlemen: The following extract from the Baltimore American is a very modest Obituary of a gallant young Officer, as much mourned by his companions in arms as any of our fallen heroes in this unhappy war. It is enclosed to you with the request that you will afford it a place in the National Intelligencer in honor of a brave youth who was the very idol of his corps. His friends have been greatly touched by Baltimore hospitality, which they met with in their melancholy journey; and certainly such sympathy does so much honor to human character that it should be held up as an example. S.

"The remains of Lieut. Alexander Perry Rodgers, of the 4th Infantry, son of the late Commodore John Rodgers, of the Navy, arrived yesterday morning from Norfolk, and were transferred, under a guard of honor, to the depot on Pratt street.

"Lieut. Rodgers was in his 21st year, and had just graduated at West Point when he was ordered to join Gen. Scott's column in Mexico. He was engaged at the siege of Vera Cruz, and in the battles of Cerro Gordo, Contreras, Molino del Rey, Churubusco, and Chapultepec. In the last of these engagements he commanded a company in the storming party, until he was killed by a ball through the forehead, when within ten feet of the batteries. He was the officer referred to with so much feeling in Mr. Kendall's account of this battle, as so 'beautiful in death,' with a smile of triumph on his face, and his sword so firmly clenched that it was difficult to remove it from his grasp. His remains were brought from Mexico by the United States ship Germantown, and they are under the charge of his brother, Lieut. C.R.P. Rodgers, of the Navy, to their final destination in the family vault at New London.

"The friends of the deceased beg leave to make their public acknowledgments to Mr. Jacob I. Cohen, Vice President of the Philadelphia Railroad Company at this point, and to Mr. Robert A. Taylor, and Mr. Falls, of the Baltimore Steampacket Company, for their courtesy and liberality in affording free transportation to the remains of a gallant officer. Their warm thanks are also tendered to Messrs. John Stewart & Son, who with great public spirit volunteered a hearse and their personal services on this occasion."

Will of John Rodgers, Capt. In the U.S. Navy of Washington, D.C. (dtd. Sept. 29, 1823, probated Aug. 14, 1838, Will Book 5)

To wife, Mineva Rodgers, all property and debts; due the [Mr.] Duvall's at N.Y., about $236; Mr. Burnett, of Georgetown, $15; small sum to Mr. Bacon, grocer; small sum to Mr. Jones, grocer; small sum to Mr. Gunton, apothecary; small sum to Mr. Cana, grocer, small sum to Mr. Prout, storekeeper; Dr. Causin, a small sum.

After a period of routine duty and a leave of absence he returned to active service in 1802, commanding the John Adams in the squadron sent out under Commodore Richard V. Morris to reinforce the blockade of Tripoli. In May 1803 he captured the Mashuda attempting to run the blockade. In June 1803 he was briefly acting commander of the squadron after the departure of Morris and before the arrival of Commodore Edward Preble. He returned home in December 1803 but rejoined the Tripolitan squadron in the summer of 1804 in command of the Congress. In May 1805 he succeeded Commodore James Barron in command of the squadron, and in June he completed a treaty with Tripoli abolishing the payment of tribute. In September Rodgers exacted a similar agreement from the bey of Tunis and then returned home. From July 1807 to February 1809 he commanded the gunboat flotilla and the naval station at New York, and he was then transferred to command of the Home Squadron. On May 16, 1811, while cruising off Cape Henry aboard the frigate "President," he engaged what proved after a 15-minute fight to be the smaller British sloop "Little Belt" and inflicted heavy damage and many casualties. The action, coming after the "Chesapeake-Leopard" affair, was commended by his superiors and made him a popular hero. During the War of 1812 he was the ranking active officer of the navy, and again he performed effectively, particularly against British merchant shipping. Aboard his flagship "President" he commanded squadron patrols sweeping the Atlantic from the Indies to the Cape Verdes, making four such cruises before the end of war. In 1815 he was chosen by President James Madison to head the newly established Board of Naval Commissioners (the other commissioners being Commodores Isaac Hull and David Porter). He retained the post until 1837, except for the period 1824-1827, when he was again on sea duty in command of the Mediterranean Squadron from aboard the "North Carolina." He was senior officer of the navy from 1821, and in 1823 he served for a short period as secretary of the navy. He resigned as a naval commissioner in May 1837 and died in Philadelphia on August 1, 1838. His younger brother, George Washington Rodgers (1787-1832), was also a naval officer.

The National Intelligencer, April 12, 1848
To the Editors

Gentlemen: The following extract from the Baltimore American is a very modest Obituary of a gallant young Officer, as much mourned by his companions in arms as any of our fallen heroes in this unhappy war. It is enclosed to you with the request that you will afford it a place in the National Intelligencer in honor of a brave youth who was the very idol of his corps. His friends have been greatly touched by Baltimore hospitality, which they met with in their melancholy journey; and certainly such sympathy does so much honor to human character that it should be held up as an example. S.

"The remains of Lieut. Alexander Perry Rodgers, of the 4th Infantry, son of the late Commodore John Rodgers, of the Navy, arrived yesterday morning from Norfolk, and were transferred, under a guard of honor, to the depot on Pratt street.

"Lieut. Rodgers was in his 21st year, and had just graduated at West Point when he was ordered to join Gen. Scott's column in Mexico. He was engaged at the siege of Vera Cruz, and in the battles of Cerro Gordo, Contreras, Molino del Rey, Churubusco, and Chapultepec. In the last of these engagements he commanded a company in the storming party, until he was killed by a ball through the forehead, when within ten feet of the batteries. He was the officer referred to with so much feeling in Mr. Kendall's account of this battle, as so 'beautiful in death,' with a smile of triumph on his face, and his sword so firmly clenched that it was difficult to remove it from his grasp. His remains were brought from Mexico by the United States ship Germantown, and they are under the charge of his brother, Lieut. C.R.P. Rodgers, of the Navy, to their final destination in the family vault at New London.

"The friends of the deceased beg leave to make their public acknowledgments to Mr. Jacob I. Cohen, Vice President of the Philadelphia Railroad Company at this point, and to Mr. Robert A. Taylor, and Mr. Falls, of the Baltimore Steampacket Company, for their courtesy and liberality in affording free transportation to the remains of a gallant officer. Their warm thanks are also tendered to Messrs. John Stewart & Son, who with great public spirit volunteered a hearse and their personal services on this occasion."

Will of John Rodgers, Capt. In the U.S. Navy of Washington, D.C. (dtd. Sept. 29, 1823, probated Aug. 14, 1838, Will Book 5)

To wife, Mineva Rodgers, all property and debts; due the [Mr.] Duvall's at N.Y., about $236; Mr. Burnett, of Georgetown, $15; small sum to Mr. Bacon, grocer; small sum to Mr. Jones, grocer; small sum to Mr. Gunton, apothecary; small sum to Mr. Cana, grocer, small sum to Mr. Prout, storekeeper; Dr. Causin, a small sum.

The Evening Star, March 23, 1963
Jules Rodier, 91, Dies; Ex-Aide at White House
Jules A Rodier, who went to work at the White House as one of six employees and stayed for nearly half a century, died Tuesday in Prince Frederick, Md., his home for the last 12 years. He was 91. He joined the White House telegraph office in 1900, working in the attic of the mansion itself. But soon a large first family -- the Teddy Roosevelt's and all their children--made a separate staff office necessary. During those early days, Mr. Rodier recalled, there was but one telephone, and whoever was nearest when it rang answered, from domestic help to the President himself.
An expert at decoding confidential messages, Mr. Rodier was an invaluable aide during two world wars and other international crisis and the death of President Harding. President Roosevelt offered him a life-time extension of service in 1941, but he retired under President Truman in 1949. Since then, however, he had attended nearly every White House Christmas party as the oldest living White House employee.
Perhaps a portent of his long career at the Executive Mansion came when he was 10 years old. He shook hands with President Garfield then, the first of 14 Presidents he was to meet.
A native of Washington, Mr. Rodier attended District schools and in 1885 went to work as a Western Union messenger boy, where he learned Morse code, advancing to telegraph operator. He worked at the United States Capital Western Union office from 1890 to 1900. A master of the Masonic Naval Lodge No. 4 in 1908, he remained active in Masonry until a few years before his death.
He was the White House office chess champion and a fisherman. After his retirement, he moved to Chesapeake Bay, where he remained an avid angler. He traveled to Europe with his eldest grandson nine years ago. He leaves two sons, Donald E., of Atlanta, Ga., and John M., of Springfield, Md.; a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth R. Portner, of St. Leonard, Md., and five grandchildren. Services will be at 11 a.m. tomorrow at the Gawler Funeral Home, Wisconsin avenue at Harrison street, with burial at Congressional Cemetery.
History of the Naval Lodge, No. 4, F.A.A.M.
Jules A. Rodier, Master in 1908, was born in Washington, D.C., November 6, 1871, and attended the public schools through the sixth grade when, due to poor health, he was unable to continue his education. He later became a messenger for the Western Union Telegraph Company and when nineteen years of age became a telegrapher at the U.S. Capitol. After completing ten years at the Capitol he was transferred to the White House where he was head telegrapher up to the time of his retirement in 1949, having served under the administration of nine Presidents. In addition to his telegraphic duties at the White House he also served as a Code Expert. He was married to Miss Bessie B. Otterback November 9, 1905, and of this union there were three sons and one daughter, Jules B., Donald E., John M. and Mary Rodier. Brother Rodier was raised in Naval Lodge November 28, 1902; exalted in Washington Naval Chapter, No. 6, R.A.M., February 17, 1903, and served as High Priest in 1911. He was a member of St. John's Episcopal Chapel, the Columbia Athletic Club and the Anglers Club. He is now living with his daughter at St. Leonard, Maryland.
p. 245: In August 1953 the Master recognized Past Master Jules A. Rodier, who had recently returned from an extended tour in many European countries with his 13 year old grandson. Brother Rodier gave a talk on his interesting experience abroad.

Young Man Commits Suicide

Unexplained Act of Louis Rodier at Riverdale, Md.

A message was received by the police of the ninth precinct at an early hour this morning telling of the suicide, at Riverdale, Md., of P. Lois Rodier, whose parents live at 332 H street northeast. Rodier, who was a photographer, twenty-three years old, ended his life by shooting himself through the head. The deed was committed on the porch at the home of Mrs. McLeod, where, it is stated, Rodier had visited Mrs. Helmsen, her granddaughter. Magistrate Dahler was summoned to the house and he directed that the body be removed to the undertaking establishment of Mr. Gasch, in Bladensburg. An inquest will be held there tonight.

Persons interested in Rodier and the occupants of the house where the deed was committed declined to discuss the affair today. It is said that Rodier called at the house early in the evening and expressed a desire to see Miss Helmsen's brother, that he was told Mr. Helmsen would not return home until late and that he returned about 11 o'clock and, failing to gain admission, killed himself. Rodier had been in business at Culpeper, Va., recently.

Developed At Inquest

Reasons Assigned for Suicide of Philibert L. Rodier

An inquest held over the body of Philibert Louis Rodier yesterday afternoon developed the circumstances under which the young man committed suicide at the door of the home of Miss Hazel Helmsen at Riverdale, Thursday night. A letter written by the young man before he left Culpeper, Va., where he was in business, was read to the jury. It was addressed to the press, and was as follows:

"Lost love is the cause of this mad act. I pick the home of the one I have loved as my place of self-destruction. While I am a little behind with my work, I have the brightest outlook I have ever had since in business for myself. The past year has been one of continual unhappiness and blues. Inhuman as I am I can't express my love for my mother and father. Both have treated me as a baby on account of my affliction, but their love can't console.

"This is all I have to say.

Respectfully,

"Philibert Louis Rodier."

The funeral of the young man took place this afternoon from the home of an uncle, 75 Seaton street northwest. On account of the illness of Mrs. Rodier the body was not taken to the family home on H street northeast.

Druggist's Suicide

Dr. William Grant Roe Takes His Own Life

Ill-Health Attributed as the Cause--Coroner Certifies That Death Was Self-Inflicted

"Suicide by Shooting" was what Coroner Nevitt wrote on a death certificate this morning after he had viewed the body of Dr. William Grant Roe, the druggist, who carried on business at 1034 7th street northwest and 1801 Vermont avenue. Dr. Roe killed himself at his 7th street store about 9 o'clock this morning. The bullet from the weapon entered his right temple. Ill-health is the cause attributed for his unusual conduct. Dr. Roe reached the store but a few minutes before he fired the fatal shot. He remained in the store, apparently looking about to see if everything was in order, and, walking out the back door, he entered a narrow passageway leading to the toilet room. He went thence to a room on the second floor and got the weapon, and, returning, stretched himself upon the floor of the narrow passage, aimed the revolver at his right temple and pulled the trigger. Life was no doubt extinct before the smoke of the weapon had died away.

The clerk who was on duty in the store at the time ran in the direction whence the sound came, and finding the dead body of his employer on the floor, went to a neighbor and summoned assistance. Second precinct policemen responded, and the coroner reached the store before 10 o'clock. This official heard statements of several persons and issued the certificate stated.

Had Threatened Suicide

Dr. Roe had frequently discussed the question of suicide with friends. His manager had discussed the matter with him and had succeeded, as he supposed, in persuading the druggist out of his purpose. More than two years ago Dr. Roe threatened to kill himself, and several times since then he spoke of the subject in a way which indicated that he had not abandoned the idea. He was in bad health, it is stated, suffering from a nervous disorder. In June of this year he married Miss Sadie Marie Trazzare, daughter of Mr. Thomas Trazzare, the carriage maker at 456 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J.C. Nicholson. Dr. Roe recently spent a little time on the eastern shore of Maryland, and had been living at the home of his father-in-law, 720 4th street southeast, since his return to the city. The deceased was thirty-seven years old. He came here fifteen years ago from Illinois and was doing a prosperous business. He had no financial troubles, his friends say, and was making preparations to visit Europe. An undertaker took charge of the body and removed it from the store to prepare it for burial.

Veteran of the Late War Who Suffered for Years

Andrew B. Rogerson, late captain of volunteers from the state of Illinois, a clerk in the Indian office since June, 1869, and a member of Lincoln Post, G.A.R., died at his residence, 606 A street southeast, November 9, at 12:30 p.m. He leaves five sons. His wife died thirteen years ago in March, and since then he had held his family together in the homestead.

His case had been a most remarkable one, it is said. It is doubtful, his friends say, if there is another human being in this city who has lived through the physical suffering and weakness that he has. He is described as having been a walking skeleton. Only last Thursday he appeared as usual at his desk in the Indian bureau, but was so weak that he could stay only a short time.

His memory of details was very remarkable, and his signature affixed to official papers within a few days is as firm and clear as it ever was.

The day before he died he wanted to go to the office, and was dressed as usual by his sons for the journey, but he proved to be too weak, and said so. A few hours later he drew his last breath.

His sense of honor was illustrated some years ago, when confined to his bed for some weeks, from which no one thought he would ever arise. His pay was stopped and the support of his family exhausted his means. The clerks of the Indian bureau, learning the fact, made a contribution to keep up his life insurance, etc. The first payment the captain received on his return to the office he used to return every cent of that contribution, this at a time when all expected every day would be his last.

Rohleder, Fredrick	d. 6 Sep 1872		R95/200
The Evening Star, September 9, 1872 A Man Shot Dead While Gunning For Ortolan On Saturday last three residents of South Washington, named Frederick Rohleder, W.H. Deckman and Conrad Weitzell, crossed the river, near the Long Bridge, for the purpose of shooting ortolan in the marshes at Gravelly creek. They had a boat, in which Deckman and Weitzell remained to load the guns while Rohleder waded in the marsh and fired as the birds appeared. He had fired off one barrel of a gun, and handed it back to be reloaded. Deckman put in the charge, and in letting down the hammer of the reloaded barrel accidentally pulled the trigger of the other one, when the gun exploded and the entire charge entered the neck of Rohleder below the ear, inflicting a frightful wound, severing the carotid artery, from which Rohleder died almost instantly. The body was drawn into the boat by his terrorstricken associates, who conveyed it to the 1st precinct station, where he remained for a short time, and was subsequently removed to the residence of the mother of the deceased, on Virginia avenue. An inquest was held yesterday by Dr. Patterson, coroner, and a verdict of accidental death was rendered. Deckman and Weitzel, who had been retained in custody, were then discharged.

 Petite and charming his dainty feet,
 As lovely a son as every you meet.
 Our Joseph

Better than beauty of form and face,
 Joseph a soul hath the whiteness of grace
 Now with the angels His dwelling place
 Our Joseph.

Unto her beautiful sinless breast
 Mary hath folded him safely in rest,
 One of her lambkins she loveth best,
 Our Joseph.

Dear little Joseph, seraphs delight
 In robing the spirit in garments white,
 About thee a heavenly hallowed light.

Crushed to DeathA Little Boy Under the Wheels of a Car

Joseph Ronspies, aged nine years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ronspies, the former a special policeman, living at No. 1125 George avenue southeast, was almost instantly killed by Anacostia car No. 18, George Fenton, driver, about 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning.

The little boy had, with his mother and sister, two years older than himself, attended the Sunday school at St. Peter's Catholic Church, and was returning home on car No. 21, Benjamin Newton, driver. The car stopped at the corner of Georgia avenue and 11th street in order to allow Mrs. Ronspies and her children to alight. The little boy stepped in the wrong direction from that which he would have taken, and just as he did so Car No. 18, George Fenton, driver approached from the opposite direction.

The boy at once started to cross the inside track, but at almost the first step the horse attached to the car struck the boy and knocked him down. Fenton applied the brake as quickly as possible, but not before one of the front wheels of the car passed over the poor little fellow's body, breaking six of his ribs and also injuring him internally.

The unfortunate sufferer was picked up tenderly and carried into the drug store of Mr. Rywell, near by, where efforts were made by Dr. T. L. Chewith to do something to relieve his sufferings, but without avail, and death occurred within a few moments afterward.

Fenton immediately gave himself up to the police authorities, and Mrs. Ronspies declared that the driver was not to blame for the accident and he was released from custody. The body was moved to the home of the boy's parents, and then for the first time since the accident occurred the mother gave way to her grief and became utterly prostrated. The suddenness of the bereavement also unnerved the father, and his expressions of sorrow were pitiable to hear. Kind friends prepared the body for burial and the remains were placed in the little crib which in life had been the boy's place of sleeping.

Coroner Hammett, who was notified of the occurrence, called at the house during the afternoon, and after an investigation decided that the affair was entirely accidental and that an inquest was unnecessary.

The funeral will take place Wednesday afternoon, and the services will be conducted by Rev. M.P. Sullivan.

Asa W. Root m. Emma Frances Toner in Washington, D.C., b.a. 1868 in Washington, D.C., d. March 28, 1928 at age 61 in Washington from a heart attack complicated by chronic nephritis.

Asa W. Root was named for his uncle who died during the Civil War. After the death of his mother, Asa lived with various relatives but spent more time with his father in Washington, D.C. After his marriage to Emma Toner he moved back to Bolivar. In the mid 1890s he owned and operated a carriage and wagon repair shop in Bolivar. In 1907 he moved to nearby Wellsville where he worked for the Doty Wagon Company.

In 1908 Asa Root moved to St. Louis, Missouri with his brother, George, and George's family to seek better employment. Asa's wife, Emma, and their children did not accompany him. Emma Root suffered from rheumatic heart disease and feared she could not withstand the rigors of travel and the climate change. She remained in Wellsville with their two surviving children. (A third child was a stillbirth.) When Asa did not come back, Emma, a devout Roman Catholic, did not consider divorce. She experienced financial difficulties while in Wellsville. Her husband's relatives provided her with the necessary funds to return to her family in Washington, D.C. where her father was a clerk at the State Department. For the remainder of her life Emma Root lived with her sister, Caroline Toner, at 1814 Ingleside Terrace. They jointly owned the house. Caroline Toner was a school teacher. She taught J. Edgar Hoover. Emma Root is buried in the Congressional Cemetery in Washington.

Interment private (New York papers please copy). The Evening Star, December 22, 1912, p. 1 War Veteran Killed By Chevy Chase Car Henry L. Rose of the Surgeon General's Office, War Department, Is Victim Henry L. Rose, sixty-five years old, veteran of the civil war and for more than forty years a clerk in the surgeon general's office, War Department, was struck by a street car on the Chevy Chase electric line last night shortly before 10 o'clock and killed almost instantly. He lived only a few minutes, expiring while being brought to the city on the car that struc him. The accident occurred between Rayond and Shepherd streets, in Montgomery county, between Chevy Chase Circle and the lake. He was struck by an inbound car in charge of Charles Sanger, motorman, and Buford Kenney, conductor. Could Not Stop in Time Motorman Sanger told the police at Chevy Chase loop, where the body was brought, that he saw the form of a man on the track when his car was a short distance away and he brought the car to a stop as quickly as possible, but it did not stop until after the forward truck had passed over him. When Mr. Rose was taken from beneath the car he was still breathing. When the loop was reached the victim of the accident was dead. Mr. Rose was apparently on his way home when he was struck. Policemen on duty at the loop saw him last night when he boarded a street car and went in the direction of Tilden street, Md, where he resided and he was only a short distance fro home when he was killed. Police Notify Son The police notified his son Leonidas B. Rose, at his home, 2963 Tilden street, where his father also resided. George Runnells, assistant superintendent of the morgue, took the body to the morgue. Lieut. Hartley, night chief of detectives, notified Sheriff Clifford L. Howard of Montgomery of the accident. The sheriff said he would make an investigation today. It is possible that the body will be returned to Chevy Chase and that an inquest will be held today or tomorrow.	d. 21 Dec 1912	65 yrs.	R85/304

The deceased is survived by his wife and six children. He was a hospital steward about the close of the war and accepted a position in the War Department shortly after leaving the army. He was a native of New York city. During his long service in the department Mr. Rose had received many promotions, and some time ago he was made chief clerk in the Army Medical Museum.

Funeral of Henry L. Rose

Victim of Unavoidable Accident on Electric Line

The funeral of Henry L. Rose, who was killed by a car on the Capital Traction Company's Chevy Chase line, late Saturday night, will be held from the residence 2963 Tilden street northwest at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Services will be conducted by Rev. Benjamin Clayton, and interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

Montgomery county officials this morning notified the Washington authorities that no inquest over the body was deemed necessary, as it appeared that the death of Mrs. Rose was an unavoidable accident. The body, which was taken to the District morgue Saturday night, was turned over to an undertaker, who prepared it for burial.

Mr. Rose was for many years attached to the office of the surgeon general of the army and was employed in the Army Medical Museum. He is survived by his wife and six children, George, Leo B. and Frank Rose, and Misses Mazie, Helen and Lael Rose, the former a teacher in the public schools.

Rose. On Friday, April 20, 1883 at 2:20 p.m. after a long and painful illness which she bore with Christian fortitude, Mary J. Rose, beloved wife of Adam L. Rose.

A light from out our household is gone,
The voice we loved is still
A place is vacant in our midst,
That never can be filled.

Our loved one has departed,
Our home is wrapt in gloom;
I wonder not that we are broken hearted,
When tears of sorrow reach the tomb.

Her spirit has departed;
 Angels come with eager love,
 Beseachingly they bear it
 To their bright home above.

Several long months of suffering
 The flesh did sorely try;
 Thou hast gone at last, dear mother,
 God's kingdom to enjoy.

In Memoriam

Died April 20, 1883, after a long illness, at her residence, 1008 Georgia avenue, Mrs. Mary J. Rose, wife of Adam L. Rose. Mrs. Rose, whose maiden name was Reid, was born in Culpeper county, Va. Her parents died when she was only seven years old, at which time she went to live with her uncle, Dr. Mark Reid, under whose affectionate and intelligent training she grew to womanhood. She has lived in Washington 389 years. She was baptized 35 years ago in the fellowship of the 2d Baptist church of this city by Rev. Mr. Tyndale. Mrs. Rose possessed many excellent traits. She was a woman of quiet manner but of earnest spirit. She had much decision and force of character and independence of judgment. Her attachments were strong and sincere. Hence her death creates a sad vacancy in her well ordered home and in the large circle of her relatives and friends. Her devotion to her family was exceptional. She seemed to live for her loved ones. A little more than two years ago she was sorely afflicted in the death of her only son, just in the bloom and buoyancy of young manhood, and from that grief she seemed never entirely to have recovered. Her death was preceded by a wasting and painful illness of eight months. Everything was done for her that the best medical skill could devise, or the tender, faithful, untiring affection of her devoted husband and daughters could suggest; but human skill and affection were powerless to restore. But though her body yielded, her spirit triumphed. She bore her sickness with fortitude and resignation. For her death was robbed of its sting and the grave of its victory. Her last moments were full of peace and were radiant with foregleams of the coming glory.

Rose, Rebecca Gideon	d. 9 Feb 1838		R39/8

The National Intelligencer, February 13, 1838

On Friday, February 9th, at her residence in Centreville, Fauquier county, (Va.) Mrs. Rebecca Rose, wife of Dr. Benjamin F. Rose, and youngest daughter of Jacob Gideon, Esq. of this city, in the 25th year of her age. Her disease was a lingering consumption, which had been undermining her constitution for the last two years. In spite of every effort which professional skill, incited by conjugal affection could employ, it continued to prey upon her frame until she was so far reduced that her death was expected, from hour to hour, for weeks past. Thus brought to look the King of Terrors deliberately and directly in the face, the faith and resignation of this young wife and mother, beloved by a circle of friends, and about to be cut down in the prime and promise of her days, did not fail; but, on the contrary, her deportment was such as to adorn that profession of Christianity which she had made during the last eight years of her life. Perfectly conscious of her situation, she expressed no fear of the grave; but, with a serenity truly Christian, she made a deliberate disposition of her earthly concerns, even to the arrangements of her funeral; repressed the anxiety and soothed the distress of her grieving husband and parents; called her household round her bed, and gave them her parting advice, and bade a loving farewell to her two little children; and, in the very struggle and agony of dissolution, breathed out expressions of religious hope and confidence.

Funeral from his late residence, 2963 Tilden street northwest (Connecticut avenue extended), Tuesday, Dec. 24 at 2 p.m. Relatives and friends invited to attend. Interment private (New York papers please copy). The Evening Star, December 22, 1912, p. 1 War Veteran Killed By Chevy Chase Car Henry L. Rose of the Surgeon General's Office, War Department, Is Victim Henry L. Rose, sixty-five years old, veteran of the civil war and for more than forty years a clerk in the surgeon general's office, War Department, was struck by a street car on the Chevy Chase electric line last night shortly before 10 o'clock and killed almost instantly. He lived only a few minutes, expiring while being brought to the city on the car that struc him. The accident occurred between Rayond and Shepherd streets, in Montgomery county, between Chevy Chase Circle and the lake. He was struck by an inbound car in charge of Charles Sanger, motorman, and Buford Kenney, conductor. Could Not Stop in Time Motorman Sanger told the police at Chevy Chase loop, where the body was brought, that he saw the form of a man on the track when his car was a short distance away and he brought the car to a stop as quickly as possible, but it did not stop until after the forward truck had passed over him. When Mr. Rose was taken from beneath the car he was still breathing. When the loop was reached the victim of the accident was dead. Mr. Rose was apparently on his way home when he was struck. Policemen on duty at the loop saw him last night when he boarded a street car and went in the direction of Tilden street, Md, where he resided and he was only a short distance fro home when he was killed. Police Notify Son The police notified his son Leonidas B. Rose, at his home, 2963 Tilden street, where his father also resided. George Runnells, assistant superintendent of the morgue, took the body to the morgue. Lieut. Hartley, night chief of detectives, notified Sheriff Clifford L. Howard of Montgomery of the accident. The sheriff said he would make an investigation today. It is possible that the body will be returned to Chevy Chase and that an inquest will be held today or tomorrow.	d. 21 Dec 1912	65 yrs.	R85/304

The deceased is survived by his wife and six children. He was a hospital steward about the close of the war and accepted a position in the War Department shortly after leaving the army. He was a native of New York city. During his long service in the department Mr. Rose had received many promotions, and some time ago he was made chief clerk in the Army Medical Museum.

Funeral of Henry L. Rose

Victim of Unavoidable Accident on Electric Line

The funeral of Henry L. Rose, who was killed by a car on the Capital Traction Company's Chevy Chase line, late Saturday night, will be held from the residence 2963 Tilden street northwest at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Services will be conducted by Rev. Benjamin Clayton, and interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

Montgomery county officials this morning notified the Washington authorities that no inquest over the body was deemed necessary, as it appeared that the death of Mrs. Rose was an unavoidable accident. The body, which was taken to the District morgue Saturday night, was turned over to an undertaker, who prepared it for burial.

Mr. Rose was for many years attached to the office of the surgeon general of the army and was employed in the Army Medical Museum. He is survived by his wife and six children, George, Leo B. and Frank Rose, and Misses Mazie, Helen and Lael Rose, the former a teacher in the public schools.

A light from out our household is gone,
 The voice we loved is still
 A place is vacant in our midst,
 That never can be filled.

Our loved one has departed,
 Our home is wrapt in gloom;
 I wonder not that we are broken hearted,
 When tears of sorrow reach the tomb.

Her spirit has departed;
 Angels come with eager love,
 Beseachingly they bear it
 To their bright home above.

Several long months of suffering
 The flesh did sorely try;
 Thou hast gone at last, dear mother,

In Memoriam

Died April 20, 1883, after a long illness, at her residence, 1008 Georgia avenue, Mrs. Mary J. Rose, wife of Adam L. Rose. Mrs. Rose, whose maiden name was Reid, was born in Culpeper county, Va. Her parents died when she was only seven years old, at which time she went to live with her uncle, Dr. Mark Reid, under whose affectionate and intelligent training she grew to womanhood. She has lived in Washington 389 years. She was baptized 35 years ago in the fellowship of the 2d Baptist church of this city by Rev. Mr. Tyndale. Mrs. Rose possessed many excellent traits. She was a woman of quiet manner but of earnest spirit. She had much decision and force of character and independence of judgment. Her attachments were strong and sincere. Hence her death creates a sad vacancy in her well ordered home and in the large circle of her relatives and friends. Her devotion to her family was exceptional. She seemed to live for her loved ones. A little more than two years ago she was sorely afflicted in the death of her only son, just in the bloom and buoyancy of young manhood, and from that grief she seemed never entirely to have recovered. Her death was preceded by a wasting and painful illness of eight months. Everything was done for her that the best medical skill could devise, or the tender, faithful, untiring affection of her devoted husband and daughters could suggest; but human skill and affection were powerless to restore. But though her body yielded, her spirit triumphed. She bore her sickness with fortitude and resignation. For her death was robbed of its sting and the grave of its victory. Her last moments were full of peace and were radiant with foregleams of the coming glory.

The National Intelligencer, February 13, 1838

On Friday, February 9th, at her residence in Centreville, Fauquier county, (Va.) Mrs. Rebecca Rose, wife of Dr. Benjamin F. Rose, and youngest daughter of Jacob Gideon, Esq. of this city, in the 25th year of her age. Her disease was a lingering consumption, which had been undermining her constitution for the last two years. In spite of every effort which professional skill, incited by conjugal affection could employ, it continued to prey upon her frame until she was so far reduced that her death was expected, from hour to hour, for weeks past. Thus brought to look the King of Terrors deliberately and directly in the face, the faith and resignation of this young wife and mother, beloved by a circle of friends, and about to be cut down in the prime and promise of her days, did not fail; but, on the contrary, her deportment was such as to adorn that profession of Christianity which she had made during the last eight years of her life. Perfectly conscious of her situation, she expressed no fear of the grave; but, with a serenity truly Christian, she made a deliberate disposition of her earthly concerns, even to the arrangements of her funeral; repressed the anxiety and soothed the distress of her grieving husband and parents; called her household round her bed, and gave them her parting advice, and bade a loving farewell to her two little children; and, in the very struggle and agony of dissolution, breathed out expressions of religious hope and confidence.

Sudden Death

Judge Robert Rose, who has been for years a resident of this city, and recently connected with the law firm of Black, Damon & Co., was found dead in his lodgings, at 512 Thirteenth street, yesterday evening. Deceased was a native of Virginia, about sixty five years of age. Coroner Potter after examining the body, concluded it was unnecessary to hold an inquest, as death resulted from natural causes--age and exhaustion of the system.

Fell Dead on Street

Sudden Death of Levi Rosenbaum This Morning

Was Apparently in Good Health When He Started for Market --

Funeral Arrangements

While on his way to market at about 7:30 o'clock this morning Levi Rosenbaum of 101 11th street southeast dropped to the pavement at the corner of 11th and G streets southeast and expired a moment later, without regaining consciousness. The body was conveyed to a nearby store, and with the view that life might not be extinct, a doctor was summoned from the Casualty Hospital. When he arrived, however, he found that the man had been dead for some time. The body was removed to the morgue, but was later turned over to an undertaker to be prepared for burial. Acting Coroner Glazebrook gave a certificate of death from natural causes.

The funeral will be held Monday at 2 o'clock from his late residence. Rev. William M. Ferguson, pastor of Wesley Chapel, with which the deceased had been connected for many years, will officiate. The interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

Mr. Rosenbaum was in unusually good spirits this morning, before he left his home. Yesterday he went on an excursion down the river and Mrs. Rosenbaum stated that he was bright and cheerful all the time. He arose early this morning and started for market shortly after 7 o'clock, saying that he desired to get the marketing over before the heat of the day. The announcement of his death was a great shock to his relatives and friends.

Native of Germany

Mr. Rosenbaum was born at Frankfort, Germany, in 1828, and was, therefore, over seventy-eight years old. In 1858 he came to this country and settled in Maine, where he entered the dry goods business. On September 26, 1855, he was married in Searsport, Me., to Miss Mary Hesler Dodge, who survives him. Last September they celebrated their golden wedding in Wesley Chapel, and a large number of friends were present to congratulate them on their many happy years of wedded life.

Thirty-eight years ago Mr. Rosenbaum came to this city, and in 1870 he entered the census bureau, staying there as long as the taking of the census at that time lasted. He was also in the office for the census for 1880, 1890 and 1900. In the intervening years between the census work he was employed at Lansburgh & Bros.' store, occupying a responsible position with the firm for many years.

For thirty-five years Mr. Rosenbaum has been prominently connected with Wesley Chapel, and he was the leader of the singing and of the Sunday school for much of that time. He was for many years a trustee of Wesley Chapel, and at the time of the golden wedding celebration in the church, the congregation presented tokens to show the esteem with which he was regarded. He was also a member of the Goodwill commandery of the Knights of the Golden Cross.

His wife, one son, William A. Rosenbaum of New York, and one daughter, Mrs. S.E. Adams of Westboro, Mass., and four grandchildren, Miss Clara M. Ellis, Andrew Adams, William L. Rosenbaum and Barbara Rosenbaum survive him.

Fatal Accident

On Saturday afternoon last an accident occurred on the Eastern Branch, by which Mr. Charles Ross, a ship carpenter, formerly of Baltimore, lost his life. It appears that he was standing upon the shore, preparing to go upon a gunning excursion with a Mr. Burdine. In pushing off the skiff in which the guns were lying, the pole used for the purpose struck the lock of one of the guns and discharged it, the whole load entering the side of Mr. Ross, and causing his death in about thirty minutes. An inquest was held at night, and a verdict of accidental death returned. The statement in the Sun is incorrect.

To Heaven celestial bliss;
She was too sweet, too fair by far,
For such a world as this.

She has gone, where joy eternal reigns
Around her Maker's throne;
Where death nor sorrow can invade
The world's eternal home.

A lovely rose so sweet and fair,
A while on earth she bloomed,
When death's cold grasp, its tender stem
Laid silent in the tomb.

Thus quickly faded that fair flower,
To you but briefly given;
That flower that bloomed so sweet on earth,
Now sweeter blooms in Heaven.

The music of her mirth,
Will never more make glad the heart,
Around her parent's heart.
A Friend.

Gen. Wm. T. Rossell Dies at New Brighton

Former Engineer Commissioner of the District --

Burial to Be Made Here

Brig. Gen. William T. Rossell, U.S.A., retired former Engineer Commissioner of the District of Columbia, and later chief of engineers of the Army, died at his home, at New Brighton, N.Y., Saturday night on the seventieth anniversary of his birthday. His body will be brought to this city for burial in the Congressional cemetery.

Gen. Rossell was from Alabama and was a star graduate of the United States Military Academy in the year of 1873. His entire service was in the Engineer Corps in which he reached the grade of brigadier general in August 1913. He was attached to the District government for four years, from November 1, 1889, first as assistant to the Engineer Commissioner and then as Engineer Commissioner. He was retired for age October 11, 1913 while holding the office of chief of engineers of the Army. In 1882 he was married to Miss Jean Graham Ellis, a daughter of Gov. A.W. Ellis of North Carolina. Three daughters and four sons survive him. A fifth son, Daves, was killed in the fighting at Verdun.

Dies on 70th Birthday

Gen. Rossell Served in War with Four Sons, One Killed at Verdun

Brig. Gen. William Trent Rossell, U.S.A. retired, died on Saturday night at his home, 7 Phelps Place, New Brighton, S.I., on the seventieth anniversary of his birth. In the late war he offered his services to the Government and was made a member of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, of which he had been President from 1909 until his retirement in 1913.

General Rossell was married in 1882 to Miss Jean Graham Ellis, a daughter of former Governor John W. Ellis of North Carolina. Four of his five sons served in the world war, the youngest, Davis, being killed near Verdun.

Col. Rossell To Be Relieved

In view of approaching retirement, Col. William T. Rossell, Corps of Engineers will shortly be relieved of his duties in the third New York district by Col. Frederic V. Abbott, now stationed at Boston. Col. John Mills stationed at Newport, R.I. will assume temporary charge of the Boston engineer district.

Rossell In Charge As Head Of Bureau

Succeeds Gen. Bixby as Chief of Engineers of the Army

Promoted To The Rank of Brigadier General

Former Engineer Commissioner of the District Signally Honored. Retires in October

Brig. Gen. William T. Rossell this morning relieved Brig. Gen. William H. Bixby at the War Department of the duties of chief of engineers of the army. There were no special ceremonies connected with the transfer of the office. Gen. Rossell subscribed to the regulation oath of office and received the officials of the bureau, including all the engineer officers on duty there. These officers at the same time took official leave of Gen. Bixby, who made the introductions to the new chief. No other changes are expected to follow the induction of Gen. Rossell for the reason that his incumbency will continue only until October 11 next; when he will be transferred to the retired list on account of age.

No one yet has been selected as permanent chief of engineers from that date. Col. Dan C. Kingman is next in line of promotion with Col. William M. Black, formerly Engineer Commissioner of the District second in line. Lieut. Col. William L. Sibert, one of Col. Goethals' chief assistants on the Panama canal, who stands number eighteen in the corps, has strong backing for the prospective vacancy.

Col. Goethals is eliminated from the field of possible appointees only because of the general belief that his great work on the Panama canal is to be recognized in some other way, possibly by appointment as a major general of the line.

Gen. Rossell's Record

Gen. Rossell is quite well known to the citizens of the District through his former service with the District government. He is from Alabama, and was graduated number two in the class of 1873, in which Gen. Bixby was the star member. The new chief of engineers reached the grade of colonel of engineers in February, 1908, and was the senior officer of that grade when promoted to his present office. He served five years with troops, part of the time in the capacity of captain of a company and instructor, and for a while as commanding officer of the Engineer School of Application in its formative stage. He also served four years (1876-80) as instructor and assistant professor of civil and military engineering at the West Point Military Academy. He was a member of the lighthouse board when it was dissolved, and had charge of the principal lighthouse district and the lighthouse general depot, Staten Island, for five years from 1901 to 1906.

He served as assistant to the Engineer Commissioner of the District of Columbia for one year and as Engineer Commissioner for two years (1890-1893). He was the senior member of the engineer department fortification board, and of the New York harbor line board for the past four years; a division engineer in the supervision of river and harbor districts for six years, and an active member of the Mississippi river commission for six years (1906-1912), part of the time its acting president. Most of his other service was devoted to important river and harbor work in various parts of the country.

Commended by Gen. Bixby

In retiring voluntarily four months ahead of his allotted time, Gen. Bixby made a strong and successful plea for the promotion of Col. Rossell to the vacancy. "If careful attention to duty," said Gen. Bixby, "and valuable services under all assignments of past duty are to be considered as meriting retirement as a brigadier general, I consider Col Rossell especially entitled to such reward.

"Repeatedly and almost constantly ever since his graduation he has been called upon to take charge of work requiring qualifications more than ordinary, and in all cases the response has been prompt and full, even when already burdened with more than one man's proper allowance of work.

"Considering the duties which have fallen to him, the thoroughness with which they have been performed and the less than average recompense which he has so far received from the government for the same, his promotion to brigadier general at the present time would not be more reward than the promotion of officers in the regular service at the present time to the grade of lieutenant colonel or colonel.

"His ability, efficiency and faithfulness to duty have always been such that, had he been originally assigned to the infantry or cavalry service, I feel sure that he would have been promoted several years ago to a brigadier generalship, with good chances of being considered now for a major generalship."

Col. Kingman May Head Engineers Of The Army

Brig. Gen. Rossell Will Go On Retired List In October

Secretary Garrison is authority, for the statement that a chief of engineers of the army will be appointed shortly to succeed Brig. Gen. William T. Rossell, who will be transferred to the retired list on account of age October 11. Although not officially admitted, there is good reason for the belief that Col. Dan C. Kingman, the senior colonel in the corps, may be promoted to the vacancy. . . .

Death of a Venerable Citizen

Mr. Andrew Rothwell, a resident of this city for over sixty years past, died at his home, No. 633 I street northwest, about 12 o'clock last night, aged 82 years. Mr. Rothwell was a native of Pennsylvania, a printer by trade, and when a young man came to this city and worked at the case for several years in the office of the National intelligencer. He was elected collector of taxes of this city about the year 1842 and served as such six or eight years, and was then elected to the city councils, after which he was again, in 1854, elected collector and served another term. From early manhood he was a member of the Baptist church, and was foremost in every effort to advance the interests of the church and the cause of religion. For many years he was connected with Columbian College, being for a long time the treasurer of the board of trustees. He was one of the founders of the E street Baptist church (then the Third church) in 1842, and was probably the last of the constituent members. Mr. Rothwell raised a family of nine children--Mrs. T.B. Bown, Mrs. A.C. Richards, Mrs. G.L. Sheriff, Mrs. Henry Johnson and Mrs. J.S. Slater, three unmarried daughters and a son, George, who died about ten years ago. About a year ago he was stricken with paralysis, from which he never fully recovered. Before his death he made all the arrangements for his funeral, expressing his desire for certain of his ministerial friends--among them Rev. Dr. Samson, now of New York--to officiate. His funeral will take place from the E street Baptist church Thursday afternoon.

The Funeral of the Late Andrew Rothwell

The funeral of the late Andrew Rothwell took place from the E street Baptist church this afternoon. Rev. Dr. Samson, of New York, officiated, assisted by Rev. Drs. Hill, Faunce, Meador and Schute. The pall-bearers were Messrs. William Fletcher, J.T. Little, E.W. Dennison, J.J. Darlington, F. Stickney, John T. Given, E. Haines, Albert W. Wilson, Clemenet W. Howard, and Rev. Dr. Welling, president of Columbian University. There were present a large number of citizens, including the trustees of Columbian College and members of the various organizations of which he was a member. The choir during the services sang "Why Do We Mourn Departing Friends?" "If Jesus be My Friend," and Warren's quartet, "Rock of Ages." The interment was made at the Congressional cemetery.

Andrew Rothwell's Will

Requests to Members of His Family and Others

The will of the late Andrew Rothwell, filed with the register today, bears date February 7, 1877, and to it is annexed a condicil bearing the same date. The will makes over his library to his children, to be disposed of as they may determine. To his daughters Eliza, Emily and Fannie all the household furniture and the family residence, and also premises No. 610 I street as tenants in common. To his daughters, Mary Ann Richards, Susan B. Sheriff and Martha W. Johnson, lot 7, square 452, and the 7th street store. Out of moneys arising from the settlement of life policies $500 is set apart as a trust fund, the interest to be used to purchase books for the library of the Sunday school of E street Baptist church. The remainder of the moneys realized from stocks, policies, etc., is to be applied to the payment of debts, the surplus to be divided equally among the children. The houses owned by the deceased in Bates' Alley, 2d and 22d streets, in this city, and seven lots in La Crosse, Wis., are placed in the hands of the executors in trust to be disposed of, the proceeds to be divided equally among the children. To George L. Sheriff and Andrew R. Brown is left the 6th street property in trust for the daughter, Anna M. Slater. A.C. Richards, George L. Sheriff and Andrew R. Brown are named as executors. In the codicil the testator directs that the money due Anna M. Slater be paid to the executors and by them held in trust for the beneficiary, and devises to them lot 2, square 484, for the same purposes as the other property was devised to them. In this codicil A.C. Richards and G.L. Sheriff are designated as executors.

Richard Rothwell Dead

Veteran Soldier and Prominent in the Masonic Order

Mr. Richard Rothwell, one of the oldest residents of the District of Columbia died at his home, No. 28 9th street northeast, shortly after 12 o'clock last night in the eighty-fourth year of his age.

Mr. Rothwell was a native of Manchester, England, and came to this country when twenty-eight years of age. Landing at Baltimore with his wife and four children, he went into business in that city, but was not successful. He then came to this city and was employed on the Capitol building when the wings for the Senate and House were added, and his ability as a stone carver soon won him recognition, and as a result much of the fine carving on the House and Senate wings was done by him. After this he engaged in the contracting business and aided in building the National Museum, the vaults of the treasury building and other structures.

Mr. Rothwell was a member of Columbia Commandery, No. 2, K.T.; Burnside Post, G.A.R., and National Lodge, No. 12, F.A.A.M. He was also a member of the Masonic Veterans' Association. He leaves four daughters and two sons--Miss Lillie Rothwell, Mrs. William Wagner, Mrs. J.H. Peake, Mrs. S.J. Richardson, William Rothwell and Daniel Rothwell.

William Rothwell Is Dead

Well Known Master Plumber Succumbs to Bronchial Asthma

William Rothwell, seventy years old, a master plumber, engaged in the plumbing business in this city for the last forty-five years, died at his home, 24 9th street northeast, Wednesday evening, of bronchial asthma. Funeral services are to be held at the family residence tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Interment is to be private.

Born in England in 1845, Mr. Rothwell migrated to this country with his parents when he was five years old. He had lived in Washington since that time. About forty-five years ago he opened a plumbing and gas fitting business on Capitol Hill, where the Congressional Library now stands. At the time of his death he was engaged in the plumbing business on 18th street northwest.

Mr. Rothwell was a charter member of Washington Council, National Union.

A widow, three sons and two daughters survive him.

Roux, Charles The Evening Star, November 24, 1858 Death By Poison Yesterday morning, a man named Rue or Roux died, suddenly at an Italian boarding house in the Fifth Ward. Our information, received from an officer, is, that the evening previous he took laudanum, which caused his death. We have not been able to ascertain whether it was taken purposely to commit suicide but it was generally supposed that it was. Upon inquiry this morning we learned that the coroner had not been notified, and no inquest had been made.	d. 23 Nov 1858		R72/68

Royall, Anne The National Intelligencer, October 2, 1854 Royall. Yesterday morning, the 1st instant, Mrs. Ann Royall at a very advanced age. Her funeral will take place this afternoon at 3 o'clock from her late residence on B street north, Capitol Hill where her friends and acquaintances are respectfully invited to attend without further notice. The Evening Star, October 2, 1854 Mrs. Anne Royall Dead This venerable and eccentric lady died at her residence on Capitol Hill, in this city, yesterday morning. She must have been well nigh 90 years of age. Ever since the publication of the famous history of her peregrinations throughout the country, fighting the Presbyterians, she has made her residence here, first editing the "Huntress," and subsequently living on its proceeds published by others in her name. For the last four or five years she has been out and about very little, owing to her increasing infirmities. When about, however, her tongue went as before—always so as to attract a crowd of wanderer's around her. Vehement and violent in her antipathies, and the expression of them, she was equally warm in her friendship for those she favored, ,though from her peculiar was of manifesting her liking's, few, indeed, courted her affectionate regards. To the hour of her death she preserved all the peculiarities of thought, temper, and manners, which at one time rendered her so famous throughout the land. The Evening Star, October 3, 1854 The Late Mrs. Anne Royall This eccentric woman whose death we noticed yesterday was aged ninety two years, as appears by the Sentinel, which says that she originally edited the Paul Pry, afterwards changed to that of the Huntress. She was the authoress of several volumes entitled the "Black Book," a narrative of travel throughout the United States, and criticisms of individual character. She was a woman of considerable literary attainments, and benevolence, and of strict integrity, although somewhat peculiar in her views. Her husband having been a captain in the army of the revolution, she, as his widow drew a pension of forty dollars a month. About six months ago she announced, after recovering from a severe attack of sickness, that she felt as strong and healthy as she did at any former period of her existence. However, she then trembled with age, as might naturally be expected. But she is gone, after a long period of active life, during which her name has become familiar especially among visitors to the metropolis, many of whose portraits, painted in her usual graphic style, adorned the "gallery" of the Huntress. Mrs. Royall was born in Virginia, and at an early age, was stolen by the Indians, with whom she continued until she had seen fifteen summers in the western part of that State. After her release, she met with Captain Royall, who became her husband; and then it was that she first acquired the rudiments of an English education, having graduated, as it were, in the free school of nature. Captain Royall removed to Alabama, and, as a planter, dispensed his ample hospitalities. She had a half-brother, Col. Butler, of Ohio, who acted a prominent part in the late war with Great Britain. He afterwards served in the legislature of Indiana, and, but a few years since, died in Cass county, in that State. The Evening Star, May 13, 1911 Monument is Dedicated to Mrs. Anne Royall Pioneer Woman Publicist Honored Fifty-Seven Years After Her Death Fifty-seven years after the close of the life of Anne Royall, known as the pioneer woman publicist, a newspaper writer and author of books of travel in the United States, several scores of men and women, mindful of the sterling qualities of her character, her love of the Union and her warm defense of Freemasonry in the days when it was bitterly assailed, gathered around her grave in Congressional cemetery to dedicate a rugged granite monument to her memory. Dr. Fred Gowing of Philadelphia delivered the principal address. He stated that Mrs. Royall had established in this city, in 1831, her first newspaper, a weekly, known as "Paul Pry," and her second, known as "The Huntress," in 1835, among the first papers published in the District of Columbia. He also referred to her travel throughout the country and the numerous works on travel written by her. Reference was also made to ehr as the champion of Freemasonry in the dark days of its early history in the United States. Mrs. Porter Delivered Address Mrs. Sarah H. Porter, the biographer of Mrs. Royall, whose book aroused an interest in her life and writings, also delivered a brief address, in which she spoke with appreciation of the aid and encouragement received from various sources in carrying out the project which resulted in the erection of the monument. This cooperation of J.T. Earnshaw, the superintendent of the cemetery, had proved, she said, especially helpful. Dr. E.M. Gallaudet presided and made the introductory remarks. Miss Rose Standish Sliney sang a humn, "The Eternal Right," and Rev. Herbert Gallaudet pronounced the benediction.	b. 1769 - d. 1 Oct 1854	85 yrs.	R26/194

The monument was raised largely through the personal efforts of Ralph L. Hayes of Philadelphia, who was custodian of the funds for its erection and among the personal contributors.

It is a rugged granite stone with polished face and top. It bears the inscription "Anne Royall, Pioneer Woman Publicist, 1769-1854. I pray that the union of these states may be eternal. Erected in appreciative recognition by a few men from Philadelphia and Washington.

To perpetuate the memory of Mrs. Anne Royall, the pioneer newspaper woman of this country, a stone was dedicated yesterday by a number of her admirers over her grave at the Congressional Cemetery. Funds for the memorial were raised largely through the efforts of Ralph L. Hayes of Philadelphia.

Dr. Fred Gowing of Philadelphia delivered the principal address of the afternoon. He stated that Mrs. Royall organized the Paul Pride here in Washington in 1831 which was succeeded by the Huntress in 1835. These two papers were among the first to be published in this city.

Mrs. Sarah H. Porter, the biographer of Mrs. Royall spoke briefly. A hymn was sung by Miss S. Sliney. Dr. E.M. Gallaudet of Gallaudet College presided. Among those present from Philadelphia were William Dick, G. Ekings, William J. Moran, Ralph L. Hayes and Dr. Fred Gowing.

Anne Royall Monument

Memorial in Congressional Cemetery to Be Dedicated May 12

Arrangements have been completed for the dedication of a monument to Mrs. Anne Royall in the Congressional cemetery. Brief exercises will be held on the afternoon of the 12th instant at 5 o'clock at the grave. Dr. E.M. Gallaudet will preside, and an address will be delivered by Dr. Fred Gowing. The originator of the movement, which has resulted in the erection of the monument is Ralph Hayes of Philadelphia, who has had the cooperation of people of that city and of Washington.

More than fifty years have passed since Mrs. Royall was laid to rest after a career which was more than usually stormy. Through her books, descriptive of her travels in various portions of the country, and as the editor of two newspapers published in this city, Mrs. Royall had opportunity to express her views in regard to public men and measures, and also of a good many men and women who were not in public life.

As an insurgent in politics and religion, she disagreed with much of the current opinion of the day from the period of the early thirties to the close of her life, and she did not hesitate to say so with much vigor of language, often not free from personalities of an irritating character.

It is recognized, however, by those who are familiar with her aims in life that she was honest and sincerely attached to the country of her birth. It is in recognition of sterling qualities of head and of heart as well as of her strong and devoted patriotism that a tribute is to be paid to her memory.

Stone to Mark Grave

Memorial to Anne Royall, Traveler, Author and Newspaper Editor

The grave of Anne Royall, traveler, writer and newspaper editor, is to be marked by the erecton of a memorial stone. For more than fifty years the mound in Congressional cemetery indicating the place where the body of Anne Royall was laid to rest has been unmarked.

Attention was recently called to this circumstance as well as to the events in the life of Mrs. Royall, especially since the publication of Miss Sarah H. Porter's book, giving an account of the stormy career of this rather remarkable woman. It has been decided by some who have become acquainted with the story of a life which was given up for the most part to unselfish effort in behalf of the people of the country of her birth that it would only be deserved -- if tarty -- tribute if some memorial should be placed at the grave.

It has been decided to erect a plain and unpretentious gravestone, and arrangements will be made to hold some time in the early part of the coming month a service at the grave.

Miss Sarah Harvey Porter, M.A., a teacher in Columbian College for Deaf Mutes at Kendall Green, has written a life of Anne Royall, one of the strangest characters that ever walked the earth, and, during the first third of the nineteenth century, the most widely known woman of the country. In Washington, the scene of her greatest and longest activity, Mrs. Royall has the reputation of being a shrill-tongued and wicked old infidel, beggar and blackmailer, who was convicted by a jury of being a common scold and narrowly escaped an official ducking in the Potomac. This was in 1829. The accusation was brought by persons connected with a small Presbyterian congregation which worshiped in an enginehouse near Mrs. Royall's dwelling on Capitol Hill, but Miss Porter believes that the real instigators of the prosecution were prominent men living both in and outside of Washington, and that the motive was to punish Anne Royall for her attacks upon them in her "Black Book," which was very widely read in those days, and devoted a great deal of attention to the fight over Masonry and the United States Bank. Among the chief accusers were two clergymen of Washington, who also figured in the Peggy O'Neill scandal, which broke up President's cabinet, in which Mrs. Royall took an active part.

The Peggy O'Neill Storm

You will remember that John H. Eaton, a senator from Tennessee and afterward Secretary of War, married Peggy O'Neill, the beautiful daughter of a tavern keeper, whom the wives of his official associates refused to receive. Vile charges were made against her character by a Washington clergyman, and President Jackson caused a searching investigation to be made. The evidence presented to sustain he charges was of a trivial character, and President Jackson, being convinced that it was false, threw himself into the social quarrel, invited Mrs. Eaton to receive for him at the White House, gave dinners in her honor, threatened to expel a foreign minister who snubbed the tavern keeper's daughter; sent his nephew's wife back to Tennessee because she sided with the cabinet ladies; induced Mr. VanBuren, his Secretary of State, to give a dinner for Mrs. Eaton, to which the ministers of all the principal powers and their wives were invited, and endeavored to force Washington society to accept a woman whom he believed to have been basely slandered. But, "by the Eternal," the hero of New Orleans ran up against something that he was powerless to overcome. The wives of he cabinet compelled their husbands to resign rather than associate with Peggy O'Neill-Eaton, and the greatest social cyclone that ever occurred in Washington whirled that unfortunate woman into oblivion.

Conviction of Mrs. Royall

Mrs. Royall naturally was in the most of the storm; she had a great deal to say on that subject in the papers, and her defense of the wife of the Secretary of War was another reason why she should be punished.

Her first examination resulted in her discharge from arrest on the ground that there was no law in the District of Columbia under which she could be punished for her alleged offense. Whereupon Chief Justice Cranch of the Supreme Court of the District discovered an antiquated English statute which would answer the purpose; a ducking school was made at the navy yard by his orders and Anne Royall was brought to trial on an indictment of three counts. 1. For being a public nuisance; 2. For being a common brawler; 3. For being a common scold. Fifteen witnesses were summoned, among whom were George Waterston, librarian of Congress, and Mr. Timms, doorkeeper of the Senate. Three judges sat in the case and the jury brought in a verdict of guilty; but the court dared not impose a punishment that was unknown to America, although public clamor demanded it, and instead of using the ducking stool, sentenced Mrs. Royall to pay a fine of $10 and placed her under bond to keep the peace. The Secretary of War and the Postmaster General signed the bond, and Mrs. Royall continued the publication of her paper without interruption.

Search for the Facts

Miss Porter, who has made an enviable reputation in literature and original investigation, has spent an unusual amount of labor and pains in searching for the facts in Anne Royall's life, which is full of mysteries. "Ancient records of the District of Columbia, of five states and of more than a score of cities have been scanned carefully," she says in her preface; "many libraries and bookshops have been ransacked; correspondence has been carried on with secretaries of the Masonic lodges and local historians. * * * Every line of Mrs. Royall's voluminous works has been read, and oral tradition has been sifted with care. My research has covered several years. The result is the discovery of biographical material which seems to show that Mrs. Royall was really far less black than she had been painted."

Miss Porter quotes the late Dr. Spofford of the Library of Congress, who said of Mrs. Royall: "That she was regarded as a horrid creature is most true. But it is equally true that Anne Royall had many friends wherever she went, and that she was not without unkindness and even charity. The world's judgment of erratic persons who become prominent in any age is apt to be severe, but a more impartial judgment holds in fair balance the good and evil in human character and refuses to condemn too harshly the struggling and industrious woman who in a ruder age than ours conquered adversity and ate her hard-earned bread to the sweat of her brow."

Miss Porter gives us a fascinating picture of a strange woman. She writes with sympathy, but with a clear judgment of the proprieties. She says that Anne Royall was probably one of the first persons in the United States to whom the word "crank" was applied. John Quincy Adams described her as a "virago errant, in enchanted armor." Amos Kendall said of her: "She had a tolerable education, much shrewdness and respectable talent; she procured her subsistence by publishing books in which she praised extravagantly those who bought her books or gave her money, and abused without measure those who refused or in any way incurred her displeasure."

Sketch of Mrs. Royall's Life

Miss Porter says that this is unjust, and believes that Mr. Kendall was prejudiced, because more than once in the newspapers Mrs. Royall exposed plans of the Jackson administration which he wished to have kept secret. "No ferret was ever keener after rats," she says, "than Mrs. Royall on the scent of political plots."

Miss Porter has gathered a great deal of interesting information concerning this remarkable woman, of whom very little was known before. She was born Anne Newport, June 11, 1769, in Maryland. Her father was William Newport, over whose life a mystery hangs and who was believed to have been an illegitimate son of a British sovereign. The child was brought up in a frontier cabin among wild flowers and wild beasts and wild men, and when she was very young married Capt. Royall, formerly of the United States army, of Sweet Springs, Botetourt county, Va., where she lived in happiness for sixteen years and met some of the first people of the country. They found this backwoods girl of brilliant mental attainments, generous of disposition, joyous of nature and careless of the world. Her husband died in 1813 and left her all of his property, but a nephew disputed the will, and after ten years of litigation succeeded in depriving her of the estate on the ground that she and Capt. Royall were never legally married.

After her husband's death and while the estate was in litigation, Mrs. Royall spent her time in traveling through the country and writing her impressions of the places she visited. Miss Porter says she was an observant traveler. She visited every important town and city in the United States, and her impressions and descriptions are published in ten volumes. She was a pioneer woman journalist -- not the first woman journalist in the United States, but the earliest in Washington.

During thirty years of her active career as a writer there was not a famous man or woman in the country whom she did not interview. She met and talked with every man who became President of the United States, from George Washington to Abraham Lincoln, inclusive. Miss Porter gives a list of men that she interviewed. She also gives a list of towns and places she described, which covers seven printed pages, and a list of persons she discussed in her books and in her papers, which covers forty-six pages, beginning with the Adams family of Massachusetts, and ending with Mrs. David Yulee, wife of a United States senator from Florida. Included in this list is the name of every person who was in any way prominent socially, politically or otherwise in the United States from 1823 to 1847.

Aided by the Masons

After the decision of the court depriving her of an income Mrs. Royall was financially assisted by the Masons. This was due to her active interest in the case of William Morgan, who disappeared mysteriously from Genesee county, in New York, in 1826, and whose disappearance was attributed to the Masons. Anne Royall was not a person to remain neutral in a great agitation like that which followed the Morgan case. Her traditions and convictions were all on the side of Masonry, and she plunged into the controversy with intense zeal and energy. Recognizing the force and usefulness of her pen the Masonic fraternity employed her to travel throughout the country to defend their threatened cause, and she spent several years in that work. Then she came to Washington, and printed "The Black Book" which was very largely devoted to the defense of Masonry and to attacks upon the Calvinistic denominations, which were then arraigned against Masonry, which Mrs. Royall considered to be the noblest institution on earth. Although the Roman Catholic Church is and always has been more determined in its opposition to Freemasonry and all other secret societies than the Protestant sect, Mrs. Royall reserved her fury for the latter. This singular inconsistency is attributed to the influence of Father William Matthews, a Washington priest, who was her closest friend during her residence in this city, and the only human being besides herself who knew the history of her father, William Newport. "In his day Father Matthews kept many a secret for the nobility of England and the aristocrats of Maryland."

Publisher of Yellow Journal

After settling down in Washington Mrs. Royall published the first "yellow journal" ever known in the United States -- the prototype of a class of muck-raking publications and so-called "society papers" which now disgrace the profession of journalism, which deal exclusively with the weaknesses and vices and the mistakes of men and women and cater to a vicious craving for scandal. But Miss Porter insists that she was not a blackmailer; that she refused to invade the homes and private lives of ordinary citizens; that she refused to publish scandals that she did not believe to be true; that she confined her attacks to persons in public life and to those who were guilty of wrong and hypocrisy. She was merciless in her attacks upon humbugs and hypocrites, particularly among the clergy and men who made a pretense of piety that their conduct did justify and were prominent in religious affairs.

From the first number of "Paul Pry," her original paper, to the last issue of "The Huntress," her second publication, covering almost a quarter of a century, there was not a political battle or an official scandal in which Anne Royall did not have her say. And Miss Porter says: "She hit, too, with uncommon frequency, and always near the bull's-eye. Her pages contain much to offend a critical taste. Much that her admirers could wish could never be printed, but, liked or disliked, her bitterest enemies must admit that her utterances never lacked point. * * * The local news in both 'Paul Pry' and 'The Huntress' was confined almost exclusively to the different departments of the government. She made frequent tours through the departments, spotting corrupt officials who in her judgment ought to be removed for the good of the service. * * * Mrs. Royall's manner of presenting her arguments was often abominably offensive. Anything more disagreeable than portions of "The Black Book" and some of the earlier numbers of 'Paul Pry' would be hard to find in print. * * * Her papers and books reached every town and village of the United States. They were read alike by friend and foe. They influenced the most important class of any age in any country. * * * Patriotism was the ruling passion of her life. The preservation of the government was a part of her very existence."

What Anne Royall Sought

Miss Porter enumerates the main causes for which Anne Royall fought, as follows:

Entire separation of church and state in letter and spirit.
 Exposure and punishment of corrupt officials.
 Sound money.
 Public schools everywhere, wholly free from religious bias or control.
 Freemasonry.
 Justice to the Indians.
 Liberal immigration laws.
 Sunday transportation of mails.
 Internal improvements.
 Territorial expansion.
 Liberal appropriations for scientific investigation.
 Just tariff laws.
 No nullification.
 States rights in regard to the slavery question.
 The abolition of flogging in the navy.
 Betterment of conditions of wage earners.
 Free thought, free speech and a free press.
 Good works instead of long prayers.

Miss Porter's researches for "The Life of Anne Royall" began in 1904 and can hardly be said to have ended, for she hopes that the publication of her book may bring out additional material now hidden away, perhaps, in some farmhouse attic or under dusty volumes of somebody's grandfather's library.

Stricken and Died

Mr. Frederick W. Royce a Victim of Apoplexy

Widely Known, Highly Esteemed

Famed as a Telegraph Operator and Electrician

Sketch of His Career

Mr. Frederick W. Royce, inventor, electrician and veteran telegraph operator, was stricken with apoplexy this morning shortly after 9 o'clock in front of the city post office building, and died a few minutes after having been taken to the Emergency Hospital. Mr. Royce was one of the most widely known residents of the District, having lived here for more than forty years. He was also known to all of the older telegraphers in the country, having had an interesting experience as an operator in the ante-bellum days.

Mr. Royce's sudden death was a distinct shock. Some years ago he was not in the best of health, but lately he had improved and often spoke of enjoying better physical conditions than he had known for a long time past. He seemed perfectly well when he left his home at 1141 12th street this morning to go down town to his temporary office in the Kellogg building on F street. Mr. Royce was engaged with Mr. Charles Moore in working on some mechanical devices the two had in mind, and was giving much of his time to the matter.

Having some business which demanded his attention at the post office, Mr. Royce walked from his office to that building. When in front of the structure he reeled and fell to the pavement. Assistance was speedily summoned, and the ambulance from the Emergency Hospital arrived within a few minutes. Mr. Royce was unconscious. He was hurried to the hospital, but was in a dying condition before the institution was reached. Coroner Nevitt viewed the remains and gave a certificate of death from apoplexy. Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed. A son of Mr. Royce, Mr. Frederick Royce, jr., who is the New England traveling freight agent of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, with headquarters in New York has been telegraphed for.

Mr. Royce was sixty-one years old. His wife, who has been quite ill for some time past, is now in a serious, almost critical condition, and may not recover. Aside from the son mentioned, Mr. Royce leaves one other boy, Morgan Royce, and a married daughter, Mrs. Joseph C. Latimer.

Showed Wonderful Speed

One of the first men to send a message on the old printing telegraph instruments, Mr. Royce became the most expert of telegraphers in the country engaged in that feature of the service. He was long renowned as a sender of press telegrams, and had often attained a maximum speed of sixty words a minute, or 3,600 words an hour. This was twice as fast as the Morse instruments could be operated then, and was faster than can be sent nowadays, even with the approved appliances and the use of typewriters in receiving. The old printing telegraph machines have gone out of service almost entirely now, on account of the protests made against the character of the messages, the long strips being unwieldy for newspaper matter and difficult to file by mercantile concerns.

A native of Delaware, Mr. Royce went from Wilmington to Albany, and New York city, and thence to Baltimore, following his profession as an operator. He came to Washington about 1858 from the monumental city. In Baltimore he was one of the youngest and withal the most expert of the operators employed by the House Printing Telegraph Company, which together with the New York and Washington Printing Telegraph Company, was absorbed by the American Telegraph Company.

Career in Washington

It was when this deal took place that Mr. Royce came to this city, serving with the American company in its old quarters on Pennsylvania avenue, near 4 1/2 street. The printing telegraph instrument was then in its heyday. The sending apparatus consisted of a key-board resembling that of a typewriter. As the keys were pressed the letter was recorded by the companion machine at the other end of the circuit.

In 1866 the American Telegraph Company, which, after having absorbed the Morse company, was swept up by the Western Union Company. Mr. Royce then came into the employ of the latter company and remained with it until 1890. By that time he had engaged in a number of business enterprises. The printing system of telegraphy had practically become obsolete, too. So, when, in 1890, a fire in the New York office of the Western Union Company destroyed the companion instrument of the printing circuit between Washington and Baltimore, Mr. Royce finally severed connection with telegraphic work.

He devoted himself in assisting Mr. Moore with his work on what is now the Mergenthaler linotype, or typesetting machine, in use in nearly all of the larger newspaper offices. He also became senior member of the firm of Royce & Marean, electrical contractors, continuing in that business until the dissolution of partnership about two years ago.

Genial and Popular

Mr. Royce was a man of happy disposition. He possessed a fund of anecdotes of the earlier days of telegraphy, when all the printing telegraph operators in the country were known to each other. He was with the American Telegraph Company when the Washington office was managed by Mr. A.B. Talcott, the venerable electrician of the Capitol and former superintendent of the District fire alarm system. Mr. Royce married Miss Laura Davis, whose father was a prominent grocer of the capital city for many years.

Unquestionably Mr. Royce was one of the most noted telegraphers of his day. He worked with a number of men who have since become famous. A little incident is told of the visit of former Governor Bullock of Georgia to the telegraph offices in this city a number of years ago. The manager was showing the distinguished southerner every attention, and, taking him to where the printing telegraph instruments were introduced him to Mr. Royce.

Why, hello, Rufe, said the latter, rising eagerly from his chair.

He had been associated with the governor in earlier days.

Last Rites Performed

Funeral Services Over Remains of Mrs. Laura Virginia Royce

Mrs. Laura Virginia Royce, widow of Frederick W. Royce, died at her residence, The Gladstone, R street, at 3:15 a.m. Saturday last, and funeral services were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock, the Rev. Luther B. Wilson, pastor of Foundry Church, officiating. Mrs. Royce had been an invalid for the past few years, and while her death was not unexpected, it is believed to have been hastened by that of her brother-in-law, Mr. John L. Durham, which occurred Wednesday last, his burial preceding Mrs. Royce's death by but a few hours.

Mrs. Royce was a woman whose gentleness and sweetness of character endeared her to all who knew her. Her long illness was borne by her with uncomplaining patience and unwavering courage, and her death was as peaceful as had been her life. Three children survive Mrs. Royce, Mrs. Joseph S. Latimer, Frederick D. Royce and Morgan Royce.

Those who served as pallbearers at the services this afternoon were Messrs. George H. Evans, Joseph S. Latimer, Fred D. Royce, Morgan Royce, Harry A. Latimer and Lee D. Latimer.

Death of a Respected Citizen

We regret to announce the death, after three weeks of painful illness, of another well-known and highly respect citizen of Washington,--Mr. George R. Ruff. Mr Ruff was more particularly known in the eastern section of the city, where he has resided for the last thirty years, but he had a large circle of friends in other sections. He capably represented the old sixth ward of Washington for a number of years in the boards of aldermen and common council, and was also at times a member of the board of trustees of the public schools. For forty years past he has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, filling the various positions of steward class leader and trustee, with credit to himself and the church. It is understood that B.B. French Lodge of Masons, of which he was a member, will attend in a body at his funeral which takes place tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from his residence.

Death of Mr. John A. Ruff

Brief Sketch of the Career of a Well Known Citizen

Crape at the main entrance of the Central National Bank announced today to the depositors and the public generally the sad news of the death of Mr. John A. Ruff, the cashier of the bank. Mr. Ruff has been for so many years connected with this bank and prior to that with his own bank that he is widely known in financial circles. His death was a surprise to all except those who knew him intimately.

Two weeks ago he was at the bank and, as far as a casual glance showed, he was in the enjoyment of good health. He had, however, been in poor health for the past six months, but was able to be about and to attend to his duties until some ten days ago, when he was confined to the house. His attending physicians found that the action of the heart was impaired, one of the effects of dyspepsia, from which he had been a great sufferer. In spite of all that skill could do to help him he gradually grew worse and finally passed away at 5 o'clock yesterday at his residence, 2033 P street.

Mr. Norment, the president of the bank, called a special meeting of the board this morning and in appropriate terms announced the death of Mr. Ruff and paid a tribute to his sterling qualities of heart and mind. Resolutions were adopted expressive of the loss which the bank had sustained by this death.

Mr. Ruff was in his sixty-ninth year. He was born in Harford county, Md., and came to this city early in life and became interested in the banking business. He was the president of the Washington City Savings Bank, which failed in 1873, and in connection with the failure of that institution he lost his private fortune. The run on the bank was occasioned by some needless excitement, but it was met firmly by the bank officials and dollar for dollar was paid on all deposits. After the failure of the bank Mr. Ruff organized the Central

National Bank, of which he was made cashier. In this responsible position he performed the duties which devolved upon him with great ability.

In his personal relations Mr. Ruff had that courtesy of manner, that consideration which endeared him to a large circle of friends. Mr. Ruff was one of the founders of the Metropolitan M.E. Church at the corner of 4 1/2 and C streets, and was a member of the board of trustees. He leaves two sons, Mr. A.B. Ruff, assistant cashier of the Central National Bank, and W.H. Ruff, a lawyer, and one daughter. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Metropolitan Church. Rev. Dr. Corey will officiate. The interment will be at the Congressional Cemetery. The pall-bearers will be the directors of the Central National Bank as follows: Samuel Norment, James L. Barbour, William B. Webb, H. Browning, B. Charlton, William E. Clark, O.T. Thompson, J.L. Edwards, Levi Woodbury, W.K. Mendenhall and Andrew Gleason, also Mr. Samuel Fowler, the representative of the trustees of the Metropolitan Church.

Mr. John A. Ruff's Funeral

Impressive Services at the Metropolitan M.E.

Church This Afternoon

The funeral of the late John A. Ruff, for many years the cashier of the Central National Bank, took place at the Metropolitan M.E. Church, 4 1/2 and C streets, this afternoon, and the occasion drew together a large congregation, embracing many leading citizens of all nationalities and denominations. The remains were incased in a cloth-covered silver-mounted casket, which was covered with floral ornaments, and, preceded by his pastor, Rev. Dr. G.H. Corey, and Undertaker Barker, it was borne from the residence, No. 2033 P street, about 1:30 o'clock. The immediate family and interested friends followed and the church was reached at 2 o'clock. While the corpse was borne up the aisle by six young men as the active pall-bearers, preceded by the honorary pall-bearers, the organist, Prof. James Caulfield, played a low dirge on the organ. The honorary pall-bearers were the directors of the Central National Bank; Samuel Norment, James L. Barbour, William B. Webb, H. Browning, B. Carlton, W.E. Clark, O.T. Thompson, J.L. Edwards, Levi Woodbury, W.K. Mendenhall and Andrew Gleason, also Mr. Samuel Fowler, the representative of the trustees of the Metropolitan Church.

They, as were the immediate family, seated in front and in and about the pulpit were a number of floral tokens. As the coffin was laid in the front of the altar the choir--Mrs. Gibson, Mrs. Zeh, Messrs. Atkinson and Lapham--sang "Come Unto Me," by Darks. Prayer followed; and then the hymn "Asleep in Jesus," by Bradbury, was sung. Rev. Dr. Corey, after reading appropriate selections of Scripture, made a short address, in which he spoke of the beautiful character of the deceased. The hymn "Nearer, My God, to Thee," was sung and the body was removed to the hearse and the cortege formed, many private carriages being in the line, and proceeded to the Congressional cemetery, where the interment was made.

Mr. Ryland Ruff, son of Mr. John A. Ruff, died yesterday at his father's residence, No. 1004 Massachusetts avenue, in the 31st year of his age. Mr. Ruff was one of the best known young men in the city, and was highly esteemed. For several years he held the place of principal bookkeeper at the Washington City savings bank, and for the past three years has been connected with the money order division of the general post office. His health, which was never strong, failed him utterly a few months ago, since which time he had been confined to his home. The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon at half past 2 o'clock from his father's residence, 1004 Massachusetts avenue. This is the third death this week among the clerks of the general post office.

Death of an Aged Lady

Mrs. Sarah J. Ruff, widow of George R. Ruff, one of the oldest residents of East Washington, died this morning, in the house where she was born. Mrs. Ruff was a lifelong member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which her parents were also members, and her memory took in the lives and services of some of the most celebrated members and ministers of that church in Washington. She resided on Capitol Hill with her son-in-law, Madison Davis, assistant postmaster, during the last twenty years of her life, and she died at his house. Her illness was only of short duration. She leaves two daughters, one of them being Mrs. Virginia M. Davis, the other Mrs. Miriam Small, the wife of Mr. J.H. Small, and a son, Mr. George R. Ruff of the Post Office Department.

Death of Senator Rusk, of Texas

We have intelligence of this sad event; by a gentleman who left Nacogdoches, the late residence of Gen. Rusk, on the 30th ult. He arrived on the Joseph Holden, from Alexandria, yesterday, and has called in to tell us that he was present at the funeral of Gen. Rusk on that day.

It is more painful to add, that Gen. Rusk committed suicide, by shooting himself through the head with a rifle on the 29th.

The event caused great consternation and grief. The town was clothed in mourning for the loss of this distinguished man, under such terrible circumstances. No cause is assigned for the dreadful deed, and we shall wait with intense anxiety for a development of the causes which overthrew so fine a mind, and broke down so lofty a courage, as have through life made Thomas J. Rusk a man of mark and promise. There are few men in the whole Union more widely esteemed, or with fairer prospects of advancement to the highest posts of ambition. To the South and Southwest, he was a true, outspoken, earnest, indefatigable, laboring friend, and his death will be their great loss. We have neither words nor space to enlarge upon the theme. The news is too sudden and startling and there is no reason to hope that it is not too sadly true. -- N.O. Picayune, Aug. 4th

The Evening Star, August 13, 1857

The Death of Senator Rusk

The extra which follows, from the Nacogdoches (Texas) Chronicle of July 30th, confirms the melancholy news of the death of Senator Rusk:

Gen. Rusk has, ever since the death of his lady, suffered under a mental depression, which, at times, bore him down beneath its weight. He has, to a great extent, secluded himself from society, and lately that despondency has been more marked and apparent to those familiar with him. A severe illness, from which he was just recovering, had prostrated him for weeks, and he was suffering greatly from a rising on the back of his neck.

On yesterday evening, about two o'clock, his family, hearing the report of a gun and the fall of a body, ran to the spot, and found him lying dead upon the ground, behind the gallery at the back of the house, with a rifle under him. A coroner's jury was summoned, from whose verdict we extract the following:

"The cause of his death was a gun-shot (rifle) wound on the forepart of the head, inflicted from a rifle gun held in his own hands and discharged by himself."

No further clue can be given to this mystery. No papers or writings of the same day have been found, except a letter addressed to a gentleman in New Orleans, ordering a tombstone for his wife with this inscription: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Let the people mourn the loss of a man who on the field of battle, and in the councils of the State and nation, has proved himself to be worthy the proud place already accorded him the affections of the people.

A duplicate of this extra, (says the New Orleans Picayune,) sent us by a correspondent in Nacogdoches, contains the following hasty postscript:

"An inventory of all his property was found in a portfolio, and the value of the same divided by the number of his children. He was buried this evening with Masonic honors. An obituary address was delivered by the Hon. W.B. Ochiltree, which will appear in the next Chronicle, along with the full evidence in the matter."

The Picayune adds:

"These comprise all the circumstances that have reached us of Gen. Rusk's death. They betoken premeditation, and show a disturbed and disordered condition of mind. Great, indeed, must have been the afflictions, and sore the trials, which could drive into such a state of despair a man of heart so brave, and understanding so solid, and a temper so serene, as were those of Senator Rusk."

Russ, Benton Russ. Suddenly on Sunday, July 3, 1904, Benton Russ, beloved husband of Anna Russ. Funeral from his late residence, No. 9 9th street southeast Tuesday, July 5 at 3 o'clock. He was at his home, No. 9 9th street southeast when he committed the deed. He was in his sleeping apartment on the second floor and the other members of the family were in the dining room. While Mr. Russ had been unable to get much sleep and had been made nervous, he had said nothing to his family which would give them an idea that he contemplated taking his life. Having been away from the jail on is month's leave he returned only a few days ago and attended to his duties until Friday night, when he became too sick to stand the strain any longer. Saturday morning and again yesterday he reported sick. He left home shortly after dinner yesterday and rode down the river on the steamer Macalester, hoping the outing would bring the much needed sleep. Several times earlier in the season he had taken this trip and each time he seemed much refreshed upon his return. His trip yesterday, however, did not bring desired results. After reaching home he partook of supper with his family and remained about the lower floor with them until after 9 o'clock when he went upstairs and entered his bedroom. The door was closed and without writing a farewell message or making such preparations for death as suicides frequently make he sat upon a chair and fired the fatal shot. So sudden did death claim him that his body did not fall from the chair. Mrs. Russ and the children hurried to the room when they heard the report of the pistol and although they were satisfied that life was extinct a physician was summoned. Dr. Hudson, one of the jail officials, reached the house shortly after the deed was committed and assisted the family in the matter of making preparations for the funeral. Resided in Washington Fifty Years Benton Russ, or Capt. Russ, as he was known in connection with his employment at the jail, was seventy years old. He was a native of Maine, but had lived in this city nearly half a century. For about forty years he held the position of deputy warden of the jail and during all these years had assisted at executions. He was a man who was particularly well liked and had a host of friends. All his life he had been regular in his habits and during the past few years had been the constant companion of a friend with whom he took long walks every night in order to induce sleep. He had witnessed many changes in the prison during the years he was connected with the institution and had been urged for the wardenship several times, but each time the appointment went to some other person. Arrangements have been made for the funeral to take place tomorrow afternoon from the family home. Services will be held at 3 o'clock and the remains will be interred at Congressional cemetery. The Evening Star, July 6, 1904, p. 5 Last Tribute of Respect Remains of Deputy Warden Russ Interred in Congressional Cemetery Warden Harris and the guards at the District jail paid a last tribute to the late Deputy Warden Benton Russ yesterday afternoon, when funeral services were held at the family home, 9 9th street southeast. A handsome floral remembrance with "Forty years' faithful service" as the inscription was sent by the jail officials, and eight employees of the prison acted as pallbearers. They were Capt. E.S. Succumbs to Shock and Worry Caused by Storm

Mrs. Alta S. Russell, who, with her friend, Mrs. Minnie Nokes, was blown against an electric light pole in front of the Raleigh Monday, March 2, by the high wind, as mentioned in The Star of that date, died at her home, 732 3d street southeast, about 2:30 o'clock this morning, probably as the result of the shock and of worry about her friend, who she thought had been severely injured. Mrs. Russell was forty-eight years old and a widow, and two sons, George and Charles B., with one daughter, Mrs. Ruth Dooley, survive her.

Funeral services will be held at her late residence Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when the members of Dorcas Rebekah Lodge, No. 4, I.O.O.F., of which she had been an active member for several years, have been requested to assemble for the performance of the Rebekah rites. The interment will take place in Congressional cemetery.

Mrs. Nokes, who was believed to be seriously injured, has since recovered and called upon Mrs. Russell previous to her death.

Engine Explodes, Four Are Injured

Condition of Others Said To Be Critical*

Big Service Engine Blows Out Cylinder Head -- Cause of Accident Not Yet Determined

Four men, two white and two colored, were injured shortly before noon today, when the cylinder head of one of the big service engines in the cellar at the department store of S. Kann, Sons & Co. blew out. Alexander Craigie, one of the two white men, died soon after being taken to Emergency Hospital, and the injuries of the remaining three were pronounced to be critical.

Harry Russell, forty-seven years old, first assistant engineer, residing at 501 N street southwest.

William Stark, colored, twenty-five years old, fireman, residing at 60 P street northwest.

Benjamin Archer, colored, thirty-eight years old, fireman, residing on Ainger avenue, Garfield.

Store Is Crowded

The store was crowded with shoppers when the accident occurred. The noise of the explosion, followed by the sound of steam escaping, attracted general attention.

W.L. Mothershead, chief engineer in charge of the plant, was on the first floor of the building. He hurried to the basement, and, making his way through the clouds of steam escaping from the severed pipe, reached a valve in the supply pipe and cut off the flow. On the floor were the four men who had sustained injury. Craigie being unconscious.

Detective Calls Firemen

Detectives Boyle and Springmann happened to be just outside on the 8th street side of the building. Boyle hastened to the quarters of No. 14 engine company and gave the alarm, while Springmann entered the store and rendered assistance there.

Craigie Found Dying

Dr. Ready, in charge of the Emergency Hospital ambulance, which was summoned, realized at a glance that Craigie was dying, and that Russell was in a very serious condition. He had them hurried to the hospital.

The other patients were assisted into the automobile patrol wagon from the first precinct, and a few minutes later were in the emergency room at the hospital. One was able to walk from the wagon to the emergency room, but it was necessary to carry the other on a stretcher.

All the physicians on duty at the hospital were summoned and relatives of the patients were notified.

Two companies of the fire department were sent to the scene of the accident. Their services were not needed, however. The only damage was to the engine, and this, it is said, may not amount to more than $1,000.

Members of the firm kept in close touch with the hospital making frequent inquiries regarding the condition of the patients.

Coroner Nevitt said this afternoon he would hold an inquest over the body of Craigie. The cause of the accident has not been determined. The machinery has been regularly inspected, it is stated.

Inquest On Victim Of Explosion Yesterday

Jury Finds Accident Was Unavoidable -- Three of Injured Men Dead, Fourth May Die

"Death resulting from an unavoidable accident" was the verdict of a coroner's jury sitting at the morgue today in the case of Alexander Craigie, oiler at S. Kann, Sons & Co.'s establishment who died as the result of burns and scalds.

Dr. Francis J. Ready, resident physician at the Emergency Hospital, testified that Craigie died an hour after reaching the hospital: Alexander Russell, engineer, at 6:30 o'clock last night, and William Stark, colored, a fireman, at 6 o'clock this morning. Benjamin Archer, the other colored employe injured, is likely to die today, the witness said.

Due to Broken Crosshead

The accident was due to the crosshead at the end of the piston rod of the engine breaking and not to the cylinder head blowing out. The piston, relieved of this check, broke the inlet valve and knocked out a portion of the cylinder head. This was the testimony of W.L. Mothershead, chief engineer at the store, and of Frank Vermillion, inspector of steam boilers of the District. Mr. Vermillion stated that he found no structural defects in the broken piece of the engine. He said that at the last inspection of the plant it was found to be in excellent condition. Mr. Mothershead submitted as evidence the report of the inspector for an insurance company, dated March 4, 1914. The report stated that everything connected with the boilers and engines was in good condition then.

Several witnesses testified that the accident was one which could not have been anticipated. The jury consulted only a few minutes before absolving every one from blame in connection with the accident. Today's inquest and the findings of the jury will make it unnecessary to hold a separate inquest over each of the victims of the accident.

John H. Russell Dies at Home of Daughter

Veteran Resident of Washington Has Passed Away After Long and Useful Career

John H. Russell, one of the oldest and best known citizens of Washington, died this morning at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Alice R. Joyce, 626 East Capitol street, after a long illness.

Mr. Russell was born in Charles county, Maryland in 1816. When he was twenty-one years of age he came to Washington and had resided here ever since. He was active in politics, being always a staunch Democrat. He represented the old Sixth ward in the city council under the administration of Mayors Magruder, Wallach and Bowen. His health failed twenty years ago and since that time he has been an invalid.

Mr. Russell is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Alice R. Joyce and Miss Jennie Russell, of Washington, and a brother, Charles H. Russell of Virginia. Funeral services will be held at St. Joseph's Church, corner of Second and C streets northeast, Thursday morning at 9 o'clock.

And The Bullet Passed Through Young Russell's Heart

This morning, about 11 o'clock, in the house of Mrs. S. Sanders, No. 404 6th street southwest, W. Russell, and 14-year-old stepson of Gen. F. Wheaton of New Orleans, was shot through the heart and killed by a companion about the same age, named Harry Adams, the grandson of the Rev. Mr. Phillips of East Washington.

About 10 o'clock this morning young Adams called at Gen. Wheaton's office under the National Hotel, and asked him to allow Willie to go out and play with him. Gen. Wheaton consented, and the two boys played together until near 11 o'clock when they went to Mrs. Sanders house, where Mr. Wheaton and his stepson occupied a room. They entered the basement door and had walked upstairs to the first landing. They were examining a small "Rob Roy," 22-caliber revolver, when the weapon was accidentally discharged, the bullet passing through Willie Russell's heart. After the shot was fired, the injured boy picked up the weapon which his frightened playmate had dropped on the floor, and put it in his pocket. He started to the door, but returned and ran to Mrs. Riever's, who caught him in her arms. "I'm shot," said the little fellow, as he placed his hand on his breast over the heart, where the bullet had entered, and a minute or two later he expired. The boy who accidentally discharged the weapon ran to Gen. Wheaton's office, and told him that he had accidentally shot Willie. Gen. Wheaton hurried home and hastily sent for a physician. Drs. Chamberlin and Marsteller were summoned, but the wounded boy died before they reached the house.

Before he died, young Russell stated that the shooting was purely accidental. After notifying Russell's stepfather Adams went to his home on New Jersey avenue southeast, where he was found by Officer Breen. He was terribly excited and overcome with grief. He handed to the officer a pearl-handled revolver, from which he said the fatal shot was fired. He said Adams and he got their revolvers and were going out in the country to shoot. When they entered Russell's house he (Adams) snapped his revolver while showing it to his companion, and did not know it was loaded. He was taken in charge by the police.

The revolver taken from Russell's pocket after he died was found to be loaded, but had not been fired. Coroner Patterson was notified, and Adams will be held until the case is investigated.

Willie Russell's Death

Shooting--A Tearful Scene at the Inquest

Coroner Patterson this morning held an inquest at Lee's undertaking establishment, 332 Pennsylvania avenue, over the remains of Willie Russell, the 14 year old stepson of Gen. F. Wheaton, of New Orleans, who, as stated in yesterday's Star, was shot through the heart and killed by a companion, Harry Adams, eleven years old, the grandson of the Rev. Mr. Phillips, 401 New Jersey avenue southeast. The following jury were summoned: Robert Hoy, W.R. Bryant, W.C. Cox, Edard Flaherty, John Barnes, and Charles Polkinghorn.

The Testimony

The first witness was Miss Mary Smith, who resides at 404 6th street southeast, where the shooting occurred. She stated that about 11 o'clock yesterday morning she heard a pistol shot in the hallway; the door of her room was open and she stepped out and saw smoke and two little boys, both of whom were near the front hall door. One fell on his knee and said he was shot, and at the same time he put a pistol, which he held in his hand, in his pocket. To the question of what was the matter, the other boy said that they were playing with the pistols and one was accidentally discharged. At the same time he came toward her, and the boy who was shot rose from his knees and followed saying: "Yest, it was accidental." He then staggered, and the first boy caught him in his arms, and then he fell to the floor. He lived but a short time, his stepfather arriving just before his death.

Miss Josephine Winston, a colored girl, living in the house, testified that she was down stairs in the kitchen, and when she heard the pistol shot she ran upstairs and when she got in the hall she heard Willie Russell say "I'm shot." She also heard him say that he was shot accidentally. She was told to go out and get a police officer, and Harry Adams ran out to tell Willie's father. When Harry returned, some time afterwards, with an officer, he was crying, and said that the deceased was his best friend.

Harry Adams' Story

Harry Adams was then questioned, and although at times his voice was choked with emotion, he told his story in a straightforward, manly way. He is a bright-looking boy, and his mother, who stood by his side, with a handkerchief covering his eyes, while he told his story, said that he was only eleven years of age. Harry said: "Will and I were playing together, and Will went up to the house to see his pistol and I went along. When I got there I wanted to show my pistol to Will, and when I took it out of my pocket it went off. It must have become cocked in my pocket, I don't know how and it went off without my knowing it. When Will was shot I asked the ladies in the house if they wanted me to go after Mr. Wheaton, and I went to his office and told him, and then I said that I could not stand it and went home." In reply to a question, he said he meant that he felt so badly. He said that they did not intend to go out into the country. They went up to the hosue to see the pistols. His uncle had given him the pistol several weeks ago.

Mrs. Adams said that she never knew Harry to carry the pistol. His uncle had given it to him as a pretty toy some time ago, and she had the loads withdrawn and had laid it away. She did not know that Harry had taken it. In reply to a question Harry said that he had loaded the pistol himself that morning.

Miss Cleo Smith, who lives in the house where the shooting occurred, corroborated the facts of the shooting as given by the other witnesses.

No further witnesses were called. Gen. Wheaton accompanied by ex Representative R. John Ellis and the father of Mrs. Adams, and others were present, but as they knew nothing further than the facts already before the jury they were not examined.

The Verdict.

The jury rendered the following verdict: "That the said Willie Russell came to his death from a pistol shot wound in the left chest inflicted with a pistol held in the hands of Harry Adams, aged 11 years. From the evidence we believe the shooting to have been purely accidental, and without malice or intent to do bodily harm."

Sudden Death of Dr. Russell

The many friends of Dr. W.R. Russell will be pained to learn of his sudden death this morning of rheumatism of the heart. Dr. Russell has suffered much from gout for several years past, but it has been confined to the limbs until recently. Last week he was suddenly attacked with the disease in his breast, but recovered after two day's confinement. He was ordinarily well during yesterday and made his professional calls and retired feeling fatigued and chilled. This feeling, however, soon yielded to sleep. He aroused his wife about 2 a.m. and remarked that he must leave her. Before she had a chance to inquire as to the meaning of the remark he breathed heavily two or three times and was dead. He has in his eighteen years of practice in this city won a host of friends, who will greatly regret their loss.

Funeral Ceremonies

The funeral of the late Major Wm. W. Russell took place yesterday at noon from the residence of his brother, on D, near Third street. Many officers of the Navy and prominent citizens were in attendance. A silver plate upon the coffin in which the remains were placed bore the simple inscription, "Major Wm. W. Russell, Paymaster, United States Marine Corps, died October 31, 1862, aged forty-two years." The beautiful funeral service of the Episcopal Church was read by Rev. Mr. Smith, assistant pastor of the Epiphany. The following named gentlemen acted as pall-bearers; Commanders Wise and Bankhead, U.S.N., Majors Doughty and Nicholson, U.S. Marine Corps; Messrs. Moran and McNairy, of the Navy Department, and Messrs. A.S.H. White and Malcolm Seaton on the part of the citizens. The veteran Colonel Commandant of the Marine Corps also participated in the solemn ceremonies. The corpse was borne to the Congressional Burial Ground, preceded by two companies of United States marines, under command of Capt. Lucian L. Dawson, of the Marine Corps, accompanied by the full Marine Band, and followed by the relatives and friends of the deceased. The funeral service was concluded at the grave, and appropriate military honors were paid to the remains.

W.W. Russell Dies; Retired Diplomat

William Worthington Russell, 84, retired diplomat and native of Washington, died Saturday night at his home, 2900 Connecticut avenue N.W.

Born December 3, 1859, Mr. Russell was the son of the late Maj. W.W. Russell, once paymaster of the Marine Corps, and Virginia Fletcher Russell of Alexandria, Va.

He attended the old Rockville (Md.) Academy and the Naval Academy, graduating in 1881. Later he studied engineering and was in the railroad business before entering the diplomatic service.

In 1895 he was appointed secretary of the American legation at Caracas, Venezuela, service until 1904. Mr. Russell was then appointed secretary of the legation and charge d'affaires ad interim at Panama. The same year he was appointed, Minister to Columbia, later serving in the same capacity in Venezuela, the Dominican Republic and Siam, now Thailand.

Decorated by the French government with the Legion of Honor in 1907 for handling French interests in Venezuela, Mr. Russell also was honored by the Venezuelan government. He retired in 1927.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Grace C. Russell; two sons, Lt. William W. Russell, III, and Kidstone C. Russell, both in the Army, and a daughter, Virginia A. Russell.

Funeral arrangements are being made by the William Reuben Pumphrey funeral home, 7557 Wisconsin avenue, Bethesda, Md.

Engine Explodes, Four Are Injured

Condition of Others Said To Be Critical*

Big Service Engine Blows Out Cylinder Head -- Cause of Accident Not Yet Determined

Four men, two white and two colored, were injured shortly before noon today, when the cylinder head of one of the big service engines in the cellar at the department store of S. Kann, Sons & Co. blew out. Alexander Craigie, one of the two white men, died soon after being taken to Emergency Hospital, and the injuries of the remaining three were pronounced to be critical.

Craigie, who was an assistant engineer, resided in Brentwood, Md. The three men under treatment at Emergency Hospital are:

Harry Russell, forty-seven years old, first assistant engineer, residing at 501 N street southwest.

William Stark, colored, twenty-five years old, fireman, residing at 60 P street northwest.

Benjamin Archer, colored, thirty-eight years old, fireman, residing on Ainger avenue, Garfield.

Store Is Crowded

The store was crowded with shoppers when the accident occurred. The noise of the explosion, followed by the sound of steam escaping, attracted general attention.

W.L. Mothershead, chief engineer in charge of the plant, was on the first floor of the building. He hurried to the basement, and, making his way through the clouds of steam escaping from the severed pipe, reached a valve in the supply pipe and cut off the flow. On the floor were the four men who had sustained injury. Craigie being unconscious.

Detective Calls Firemen

Detectives Boyle and Springmann happened to be just outside on the 8th street side of the building. Boyle hastened to the quarters of No. 14 engine company and gave the alarm, while Springmann entered the store and rendered assistance there.

Craigie Found Dying

Dr. Ready, in charge of the Emergency Hospital ambulance, which was summoned, realized at a glance that Craigie was dying, and that Russell was in a very serious condition. He had them hurried to the hospital.

The other patients were assisted into the automobile patrol wagon from the first precinct, and a few minutes later were in the emergency room at the hospital. One was able to walk from the wagon to the emergency room, but it was necessary to carry the other on a stretcher.

All the physicians on duty at the hospital were summoned and relatives of the patients were notified.

Two companies of the fire department were sent to the scene of the accident. Their services were not needed, however. The only damage was to the engine, and this, it is said, may not amount to more than $1,000.

Members of the firm kept in close touch with the hospital making frequent inquiries regarding the condition of the patients.

Coroner Nevitt said this afternoon he would hold an inquest over the body of Craigie. The cause of the accident has not been determined. The machinery has been regularly inspected, it is stated.

Inquest On Victim Of Explosion Yesterday

Jury Finds Accident Was Unavoidable -- Three of Injured Men Dead, Fourth May Die

"Death resulting from an unavoidable accident" was the verdict of a coroner's jury sitting at the morgue today in the case of Alexander Craigie, oiler at S. Kann, Sons & Co.'s establishment who died as the result of burns and scalds.

Dr. Francis J. Ready, resident physician at the Emergency Hospital, testified that Craigie died an hour after reaching the hospital: Alexander Russell, engineer, at 6:30 o'clock last night, and William Stark, colored, a fireman, at 6 o'clock this morning. Benjamin Archer, the other colored employe injured, is likely to die today, the witness said.

Due to Broken Crosshead

The accident was due to the crosshead at the end of the piston rod of the engine breaking and not to the cylinder head blowing out. The piston, relieved of this check, broke the inlet valve and knocked out a portion of the cylinder head. This was the testimony of W.L. Mothershead, chief engineer at the store, and of Frank Vermillion, inspector of steam boilers of the District. Mr. Vermillion stated that he found no structural defects in the broken piece of the engine. He said that at the last inspection of the plant it was found to be in excellent condition. Mr. Mothershead submitted as evidence the report of the inspector for an insurance company, dated March 4, 1914. The report stated that everything connected with the boilers and engines was in good condition then.

Several witnesses testified that the accident was one which could not have been anticipated. The jury consulted only a few minutes before absolving every one from blame in connection with the accident. Today's inquest and the findings of the jury will make it unnecessary to hold a separate inquest over each of the victims of the accident.

John H. Russell Dies at Home of Daughter

Veteran Resident of Washington Has Passed Away After Long and Useful Career

John H. Russell, one of the oldest and best known citizens of Washington, died this morning at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Alice R. Joyce, 626 East Capitol street, after a long illness.

Mr. Russell was born in Charles county, Maryland in 1816. When he was twenty-one years of age he came to Washington and had resided here ever since. He was active in politics, being always a staunch Democrat. He represented the old Sixth ward in the city council under the administration of Mayors Magruder, Wallach and Bowen. His health failed twenty years ago and since that time he has been an invalid.

Mr. Russell is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Alice R. Joyce and Miss Jennie Russell, of Washington, and a brother, Charles H. Russell of Virginia. Funeral services will be held at St. Joseph's Church, corner of Second and C streets northeast, Thursday morning at 9 o'clock.

And The Bullet Passed Through Young Russell's Heart

This morning, about 11 o'clock, in the house of Mrs. S. Sanders, No. 404 6th street southwest, W. Russell, and 14-year-old stepson of Gen. F. Wheaton of New Orleans, was shot through the heart and killed by a companion about the same age, named Harry Adams, the grandson of the Rev. Mr. Phillips of East Washington.

About 10 o'clock this morning young Adams called at Gen. Wheaton's office under the National Hotel, and asked him to allow Willie to go out and play with him. Gen. Wheaton consented, and the two boys played together until near 11 o'clock when they went to Mrs. Sanders house, where Mr. Wheaton and his stepson occupied a room. They entered the basement door and had walked upstairs to the first landing. They were examining a small "Rob Roy," 22-caliber revolver, when the weapon was accidentally discharged, the bullet passing through Willie Russell's heart. After the shot was fired, the injured boy picked up the weapon which his frightened playmate had dropped on the floor, and put it in his pocket. He started to the door, but returned and ran to Mrs. Riever's, who caught him in her arms. "I'm shot," said the little fellow, as he placed his hand on his breast over the heart, where the bullet had entered, and a minute or two later he expired. The boy who accidentally discharged the weapon ran to Gen. Wheaton's office, and told him that he had accidentally shot Willie. Gen. Wheaton hurried home and hastily sent for a physician. Drs. Chamberlin and Marsteller were summoned, but the wounded boy died before they reached the house.

Before he died, young Russell stated that the shooting was purely accidental. After notifying Russell's stepfather Adams went to his home on New Jersey avenue southeast, where he was found by Officer Breen. He was terribly excited and overcome with grief. He handed to the officer a pearl-handled revolver, from which he said the fatal shot was fired. He said Adams and he got their revolvers and were going out in the country to shoot. When they entered Russell's house he (Adams) snapped his revolver while showing it to his companion, and did not know it was loaded. He was taken in charge by the police.

The revolver taken from Russell's pocket after he died was found to be loaded, but had not been fired. Coroner Patterson was notified, and Adams will be held until the case is investigated.

Willie Russell's Death

A Coroner's Jury Render a Verdict of Accidental Shooting--A Tearful Scene at the Inquest

Coroner Patterson this morning held an inquest at Lee's undertaking establishment, 332 Pennsylvania avenue, over the remains of Willie Russell, the 14 year old stepson of Gen. F. Wheaton, of New Orleans, who, as stated in yesterday's Star, was shot through the heart and killed by a companion, Harry Adams, eleven years old, the grandson of the Rev. Mr. Phillips, 401 New Jersey avenue southeast. The following jury were summoned: Robert Hoy, W.R. Bryant, W.C. Cox, Edard Flaherty, John Barnes, and Charles Polkinghorn.

The Testimony

The first witness was Miss Mary Smith, who resides at 404 6th street southeast, where the shooting occurred. She stated that about 11 o'clock yesterday morning she heard a pistol shot in the hallway; the door of her room was open and she stepped out and saw smoke and two little boys, both of whom were near the front hall door. One fell on his knee and said he was shot, and at the same time he put a pistol, which he held in his hand, in his pocket. To the question of what was the matter, the other boy said that they were playing with the pistols and one was accidentally discharged. At the same time he came toward her, and the boy who was shot rose from his knees and followed saying: "Yest, it was accidental." He then staggered, and the first boy caught him in his arms, and then he fell to the floor. He lived but a short time, his stepfather arriving just before his death.

Miss Josephine Winston, a colored girl, living in the house, testified that she was down stairs in the kitchen, and when she heard the pistol shot she ran upstairs and when she got in the hall she heard Willie Russell say "I'm shot." She also heard him say that he was shot accidentally. She was told to go out and get a police officer, and Harry Adams ran out to tell Willie's father. When Harry returned, some time afterwards, with an officer, he was crying, and said that the deceased was his best friend.

Harry Adams' Story

Harry Adams was then questioned, and although at times his voice was choked with emotion, he told his story in a straightforward, manly way. He is a bright-looking boy, and his mother, who stood by his side, with a handkerchief covering his eyes, while he told his story, said that he was only eleven years of age. Harry said: "Will and I were playing together, and Will went up to the house to see his pistol and I went along. When I got there I wanted to show my pistol to Will, and when I took it out of my pocket it went off. It must have become cocked in my pocket, I don't know how and it went off without my knowing it. When Will was shot I asked the ladies in the house if they wanted me to go after Mr. Wheaton, and I went to his office and told him, and then I said that I could not stand it and went home." In reply to a question, he said he meant that he felt so badly. He said that they did not intend to go out into the country. They went up to the hosue to see the pistols. His uncle had given him the pistol several weeks ago.

Mrs. Adams said that she never knew Harry to carry the pistol. His uncle had given it to him as a pretty toy some time ago, and she had the loads withdrawn and had laid it away. She did not know that Harry had taken it. In reply to a question Harry said that he had loaded the pistol himself that morning.

Miss Cleo Smith, who lives in the house where the shooting occurred, corroborated the facts of the shooting as given by the other witnesses.

No further witnesses were called. Gen. Wheaton accompanied by ex Representative R. John Ellis and the father of Mrs. Adams, and others were present, but as they knew nothing further than the facts already before the jury they were not examined.

The Verdict.

The jury rendered the following verdict: "That the said Willie Russell came to his death from a pistol shot wound in the left chest inflicted with a pistol held in the hands of Harry Adams, aged 11 years. From the evidence we believe the shooting to have been purely accidental, and without malice or intent to do bodily harm."

Sudden Death of Dr. Russell

The many friends of Dr. W.R. Russell will be pained to learn of his sudden death this morning of rheumatism of the heart. Dr. Russell has suffered much from gout for several years past, but it has been confined to the limbs until recently. Last week he was suddenly attacked with the disease in his breast, but recovered after two day's confinement. He was ordinarily well during yesterday and made his professional calls and retired feeling fatigued and chilled. This feeling, however, soon yielded to sleep. He aroused his wife about 2 a.m. and remarked that he must leave her. Before she had a chance to inquire as to the meaning of the remark he breathed heavily two or three times and was dead. He has in his eighteen years of practice in this city won a host of friends, who will greatly regret their loss.

Funeral Ceremonies

The funeral of the late Major Wm. W. Russell took place yesterday at noon from the residence of his brother, on D, near Third street. Many officers of the Navy and prominent citizens were in attendance. A silver plate upon the coffin in which the remains were placed bore the simple inscription, "Major Wm. W. Russell, Paymaster, United States Marine Corps, died October 31, 1862, aged forty-two years." The beautiful funeral service of the Episcopal Church was read by Rev. Mr. Smith, assistant pastor of the Epiphany. The following named gentlemen acted as pall-bearers; Commanders Wise and Bankhead, U.S.N., Majors Doughty and Nicholson, U.S. Marine Corps; Messrs. Moran and McNairy, of the Navy Department, and Messrs. A.S.H. White and Malcolm Seaton on the part of the citizens. The veteran Colonel Commandant of the Marine Corps also participated in the solemn ceremonies. The corpse was borne to the Congressional Burial Ground, preceded by two companies of United States marines, under command of Capt. Lucian L. Dawson, of the Marine Corps, accompanied by the full Marine Band, and followed by the relatives and friends of the deceased. The funeral service was concluded at the grave, and appropriate military honors were paid to the remains.

Mr. William Rutherford, one of our most skillful marble workers and gravestone cutters, it will be seen by advertisement elsewhere, has opened a new yard a few doors west of the STAR office. Mr .R. has on hand a great variety of specimens of his work which are well worthy of inspection by those in quest of monuments of head stones.

Curious

In removing the monuments from the Methodist graveyard, on Fourteenth street a few weeks since, one of them -- a large spiral monument -- crumbled to pieces, but left intact the die which had been inserted bearing the inscription thereon. The monument was cut from sandstone, the popular material used for that purpose in ancient days; but the die was of a more durable character, and at the time is as substantial as when it was first inserted in the main shaft. This die is now in front of Mr. William Rutherford's marble works on E street, between Sixth and Seventh, and bears the following inscription "Sacred to the memory of the Rev. Daniel Southall, minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in the State of North Carolina. He was born of religious parentage in Amelia county, Virginia, August 9, 1768, and became a member of the Virginia and North Carolina Conference in the year 1789; located in 1797, and departed this life on the 1st of October, 1830, in the sixty-third year of his age." As this ancient relic has been purchased by Mr. Rutherford with the view of effacing the inscription and working the slab up for sale, it is to be hoped that some friend or relative of the Rev. Mr. Southall may be yet living and will purchase the same for the preservation of such a valuable memento of the deceased of his church.

Due to Natural Causes

Autopsy Shows Opium Did Not Cause Miss Ryan's Death

An autopsy performed yesterday afternoon by the deputy coroner of the District of Columbia showed that the death of Miss Annie M. Ryan of Casualty Hospital yesterday morning was the result of uremic poisoning. Physicians reported yesterday that the patient had symptoms of opium poisoning, but the autopsy failed to show that medicine she had taken had contributed to her death.

Coroner Nevitt gave a certificate of death from natural causes. Miss Ryan was a daughter of John T. Ryan, molder in the navy yard. Funeral services will be held at the home of Miss Ryan Monday orning at 11 o'clock. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

The National Intelligencer,
The Late Rev. Wm. Ryland

At a meeting of the Official Members of the Wesley Chapel Station, held in the Church on Monday evening, January 19, 1846, on motion Charles W. Boteler, Sen., was called to the chair, and Benjamin E. Gittings appointed secretary, to take into consideration the propriety of paying due respect to our departed friend and brother, the Rev. William Ryland, when the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas in the dispensation of Divine Providence the Rev. William Ryland, late Chaplain of the United States Navy, and for many years a laborious, successful, and zealous Minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has been removed by death from our midst; and whereas we having esteemed him as one of our most efficient Ministers, and feeling much indebtedness to him (as a station) for the services he rendered us in the establishment and erection of Wesley Chapel, and also for the interest he manifested in the general welfare of the whole Church, be it:

Resolved, That while we bow with humble resignation to this afflictive dispensation of Divine Providence, we cannot but regret that Christianity has lost one of her best advocates and Methodism one of her brightest lights.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with his afflicted family in their bereavement.

Resolved, That the Rev. N. Wilson be respectfully requested to preach a sermon, suitable to the occasion, in Wesley Chapel.

Resolved, That the Official Body of this Station (with such of the members as may be disposed to join them) attend the funeral of our departed friend and brother in a body, from the Chapel, at 12 o'clock M. Wednesday, (this day) which takes place at his late residence near the Navy Yard.

Resolved, That the Intelligencer and Union, of this city, and the Baltimore Sun be respectfully requested to publish the proceedings of this meeting.

Columbia Historical Society, Volume 4

William Ryland, who was pastor of Ebenezer in 1827, was one of President Andrew Jackson's intimate friends. He was born in 1770, and died in 1846. His tomb in Congressional Cemetery is among the most noticeable in the older part of that beautiful home of the dead, and is side by side with those of his wife and of his niece, Joanna Ruff, aunt of the late George R. and John A. Ruff, well-known citizens of Washington. Mr. Ryland was one of the greatest orators of his day. He always spoke with impassioned earnestness, but never lacked in dignity. He was very liberal, although a very strict economist. A story has been told of him which finely exhibits both these traits. Two ladies had called at his house to solicit aid in some charitable undertaking they were interest in, when, waiting at the door, they overheard Mr. Ryland reproving his servant for throwing away a small piece of a partly used candle. The ladies looked at each other in some astonishment, and one remarked to the other that it would be useless to apply to such a man for the aid they were seeking; but after some hesitation they decided to try, and were very much pleased to receive a large contribution. One of the ladies then told Mr. Ryland of what they had heard, and expressed some surprise that he could attach importance to the waste of a piece of candle, and yet give away his money so liberally. "Madam," said he, "it is by the exercise of such economy that I am able to be generous."

Among his many acts of liberality was the donation of the ground upon which Ryland Chapel in South Washington--named in his honor--now stands.

When General Jackson became President of the United States in 1829, he appointed Mr. Ryland Chaplain in the Navy--his duties being among the sailors and marines of the navy yard and the marine barracks--and this office he held until the day of his death. During this time he was also a member of the United States Colonization Society, an institution that has had among its members some of the greatest men in the land. Mr. J. Ormond Wilson, the present secretary of that society, informs me that its records show that Mr. Ryland was not content with the mere honor of membership; he was very active in endeavoring to have the society fulfill loyally its high function. Among other things, it seems he succeeded in having a rule adopted which forever prohibited the sale or manufacture of intoxicants within the territory of the Society's colony of Liberia.

Previous to his appointment in the Navy, Mr. Ryland had filled the office of Chaplain of the United States Senate, to which position he was re-elected four times, and of Chaplain of the House of Representatives, which he held for one term.; and in both of these places he acquired the respect, the confidence, and the personal regard of the entire membership of those great bodies.

His residence during his chaplaincy was on Eighth near G Street southeast, opposite the marine barracks--the building is still standing, being now known as No. 715 Eighth Street southeast--and here General Jackson was a not infrequent visitor. It is said that the President had such faith in his loyalty and good judgment that he would sometimes consult him on important matters of state. Although having great influence with Jackson, and being often called on by persons who had something to ask of the Administration, Mr. Ryland was very careful to avoid everything which would tend to make him appear officious; and while he did exert his power on many occasions where he felt it to be proper, it is a fact bearing the strongest evidence of his ability and his high sense of propriety, that he was never refused. The venerable Judge James Lawrenson, so well known in this city up to his death a few years ago, once told me that it was a common saying in Washington in General Jackson's day, "If you want to have anything done by the President, even after Congress and the Cabinet have all failed, go to Billy Ryland."

When Mr. Ryland entered the ministry in 1802, a friend of his who was engaged in the tobacco business in Baltimore bantered him on the subject, being sure that he would soon repent of the step and retire. He said: "Now, Ryland, I am so confident that you will not continue in this thing, that I promise to send you a hundred of my finest cigars every year you remain a minister." For forty-four years the promise was faithfully kept. It is said that General Jackson enjoyed many of the cigars, although he very much preferred a corn-cob pipe.

Albert M. Ryon Dies From Motor Cycle Fall

Son of Police Sergeant Had Secured Machine Only a Short Time Ago

Albert M. Ryon, nineteen years old, son of Police Sergt. O.C. Ryon, of the fifth precinct, died at Providence Hospital this afternoon as a result of injuries he sustained last night about 8 o'clock when he was thrown from his motor cycle near Pennsylvania avenue and 30th street southeast.

Last night the young man, who was employed as oiler at the District sewage disposal plant, left his home at 314 1st street southeast, to enjoy a ride in the country. When near Pennsylvania avenue and 30th street his wheel struck a stone and skidded to the side of the road.

Ryon was thrown violently to the road. He sustained a broken collarbone, cuts on his head and internal injuries. J.E. Molton of Pennsylvania avenue and 28th street took the injured man to the hospital.

Sergt. Ryon had opposed the idea of his son getting the motor cycle, saying he feared the young man would meet with a serious accident. The son had had the motor cycle only a short time before he was hurt. Coroner Nevitt gave a certificate of accidental death.

Richard Nelson Ryon, Court Official, Dead

Special Correspondence of The Star

HYATTSVILLE, March 2, 1914

Richard Nelson Ryon, clerk of the circuit court of Prince Georges county, died at his home, at Cottage City near this place, Saturday evening about 7 o'clock. Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at the family residence, Rev. Francis E. McManus, rector of Trinity Church of Upper Marlboro, officiating. The interment will be in Congressional cemetery, Washington. The pallbearers will be W.S. Hill, cashier of the First National Bank of South Maryland, of which Mr. Ryon was vice president; former State's Attorney M. Hampton Magruder, former County Treasurer C.A.M. Wells, James C. Rogers, T. Howard Duckett and Joseph Haas. Following the Episcopal Church service at the house the remains will be placed in charge of Birmingham Lodge, No. 189, F. and A.M. of Beltsville, Prince Georges county, for which the deceased was a member.

His Political Success

No man was better known in Prince Georges county than Richard N. Ryon, and his popularity was shown by the fact that he was elected as county treasurer, register of wills and clerk of the circuit court as a republican in a county supposed to be normally democratic. He was a candidate upon four occasions and his only defeat was in 1905, when C.A.M. Wells beat him for county treasurer by a majority of thirteen votes. Mr. Ryon was several times mentioned as the republican candidate for Congress from the fifth congressional district. He was a close personal and political friend of Gov. Goldsborough, the latter frequently consulting him as to conditions in the party in this section of Maryland. It is believed the governor never made an appointment in Prince Georges county without requiring an indorsement of the applicant from Mr. Ryon.

Born in Prince Georges County

Mr. Ryon was born in Croome, Nottingham district, in 1865, and was the son of William S. and Christiana Ryon, both of whom are dead. His early educational training was received in the public schools of his native county. He later attended the Maryland Agricultural College, and during his sophomore year was compelled to return home, fire having destroyed his father's place. He engaged in farming at Croome, and followed agricultural pursuits for four years. In 1895 he was elected register of wills, defeating T.B. Middleton of Spaulding's district by 350 majority. He served as register of wills four years, and in 1899 was elected county treasurer, defeating his democratic opponent by 113 votes. He served four years, and in 1905 was the republican candidate for treasurer, but was defeated as stated, by C.A.M. Wells, democrat, by a majority of thirteen votes.

In 1890 he married Miss Effie C. Low of Croome, the marriage taking place in Baltimore. In 1905 Mr. Ryon removed to Bladensburg district and erected a home in Cottage City, just outside the corporate limits. His wife and two children, Mrs. R.V. Kellogg and Roland R. Ryon, survive him.

Rites for Clerk of Prince Georges County Held at Cottage City

HYATTSVILLE, Md., March 3, 1914

Funeral services for Richard Nelson Ryon, clerk of the circuit court of Prince Georges county, who died at his home in Cottage City, near this place, Saturday evening, were held this morning at his late residence. Although regular meetings of the commissioners' and orphans' courts and the various official boards were scheduled for today in Upper Marlboro, the courthouse was closed and no business was transacted. The First National Bank of Southern Maryland, of which the deceased was vice president, also was closed.

Rev. F.E. McManus, rector of Trinity Church, Upper Marlboro, read the Episcopal burial service, and the body was turned over to the officers and members of Birmingham Lodge, A.F. and A.M. of Beltsville, Prince Georges county, who conducted services at the house and at the grave in Congressional cemetery, where interment was made. The pallbearers were W.S. Hill, M. Hampton Magruder, C.A.M. Wells, James C. Rogers, T. Howard Duckett and Joseph Haas.

Death of Capt. Ryther

Captain E.A. Ryther, a well-known steamboat and railroad man, died at his residence, No. 1016 Georgia avenue (near the navy-yard), yesterday, in the 53d year of his age. Captain Ryther was a native of Vermont, but came to the District about thirty-five years ago. He first became known to the public by his connection with H.A. Weeden in the Citizens' line of omnibuses. Subsequently he established a livery stable on B street south, Capitol Hill, which he gave up to accept a position on the Orange and Alexandria Railroad as a conductor, and he filled this position for some years. Although he made a popular and efficient conductor, he preferred steamboat life, and a number of years before the war he took charge of one of the steamers on the Potomac, and for several years was actively engaged in steamboating; the last Washington boats he was in charge of being the Lady of the Lake and the W.W. Coit. He took command of a steamer running between Philadelphia and Cape May; but only retained it for a season, when he returned to Washington and became the agent of the Alexandria and Fredericksburg Railroad, with his office on Pennsylvania avenue, near 6th street. From this position he retired a few months since to accept a partnership in the Arlington Brewery, which he retained up to the time of his death. When the new form of government for this District went into effect in 1871, he was a candidate for the House of Delegates, and was defeated by but a few votes. Capt. Ryther was one of the most popular men of the day, being generous to a fault. He was always brimful of anecdote and fun, and was the life of whatever circle he happened to be in, always having a fresh anecdote to tell or yarn to spin. For several years past he has been in ill health having frequent hemorrhages. His funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. C.D. Andrews, of Christ church, officiating, and the interment will be made in the Congressional Cemetery.
