| Sudden Death of Judge Underwood | | | |
| Apoplexy the Cause | | | |
| Judge John C. Underwood, of Virginia, but recently residing in this city, died suddenly of apoplexy at his residence, 226 3d street, at 10 o'clock last evening. The deceased, who was a native of Herkimer county, New York, emigrated to Fauquier county, Virginia, some twenty-five or thirty years ago, where he married and settled. He was educated for the law, and divided his attention for some years between agricultural pursuits and the practice of his profession. On account of his well-known sympathy with the abolition movement and his support of Mr. Lincoln for the Presidency in 1860, he was compelled to leave the state. Mr. Chase, in 1861, secured his appointment as fifth auditor, and in 1864 President Lincoln appointed him district judge for the district of Virginia, which position he held at the time of his death. In 1865 he was elected U.S. Senator by the legislature in session at Alexandria, to succeed Mr. Carlisle, but was not admitted to his seat, owing to the reconstruction measures debarring Virginia from representation in Congress. He presided over the convention which framed the present constitution of Virginia. Latterly his name has been brought prominently before the public in connection with the McVeigh suits for the recovery of confiscated property--the Judge being the holder of this property and defendant in the suits. The circumstances of the late personal attack upon him in Richmond by McVeigh are well remembered, as they were detailed in The Star at the time. The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the Unitarian church, corner 6th and D streets, and the remains will be interred in the Congressional cemetery. The deceased, who was 63 years of age, left a wife and two children. | | | |

| The Evening Star, August 23, 1873 A Man Shot Dead Fatal Affray in a Bar Room Investigation by the Coroner Verdict "Justifiable Homicide" About half-past 4 o'clock, yesterday afternoon an altercation occurred in the southeastern section of the city between two men named James McCarthy and George B. Unkle, which resulted in the shooting and instant killing of the latter by the former. The statements made by the friends of the deceased last evening as to The Cause of the Affray were to the effect that Unkle, who was employed as a watchman on Barthelow's wharf by the Board of Health, has had frequently to pass by the grocery and liquor shop kept by McCarthy, and on several occasions alleges that he was insulted by a gang of roughs there, and that they went so far at times as to assault him by throwing stones at him. Unkle had complained to the police several times of this treatment, and asked that they keep an eye on the place, and even as late as yesterday morning had entered complaint, but being informed that it would be impracticable for the officers to remain constantly about the place for his protection, he replied that he would take his own course; that he had been assaulted the night before and was afraid of the crowd about there. About 4 o'clock p.m., yesterday, Unkle, who had been under the influence of liquor for some days, went to McCarthy's. Armed With A Revolver and commenced a conversation with McCarthy which led to an altercation, and drawing his pistol he shot at McCarthy, missing him. McCarthy sprang into a back room and caught up a double barreled shot gun loaded with a heavy charge of bird shot, and leveling it at Unkle discharged the contents of one barrel into his face. The whole load entered the right cheek, the parties being so near each other that the shot did not scatter much, and a large hole was blown into Unkle's face, who Fell Back Dead his head resting on the ground, and his feet elevated on the platform, in which position the body lay until removed by the police to the 1st precinct station house. As soon as McCarthy saw what he had done he hurried to the central guardhouse and offered to surrender. Lieut. Skippon directed him to Lieut. Gessford of the 1st precinct and McCarthy hastened there and surrendered himself when he was locked up. Officer Thomas Markwood took charge of the shop and premises of McCarthy. The Corpse was placed in a wagon and removed to the station, where a large crowd soon assembled to look at the dead man. The face presented a ghastly appearance, a large hole being blown into the cheek, showing the jaw bone and severing the veins of the neck. The clothing was bloody, and hair was clotted with blood. The body was laid out on a plank in the back yard of the station, where it remained all night. Unkle was about 25 years of age and unmarried, having lost his wife by death, but had two children living. He was a little hard of hearing, and is said to have been rather quarrelsome when under the influence of liquor. When removed his pistol was found in his pocket. James McCarthy is about the same age; he has been keeping a groggery for some time past in this place, his customers for the most part being brickmakers, both white and colored. He has a wife and four children living, all of whom visited him last night and brought his supper to him which he ate heartily of. Both the gun and pistol were secured by the police. The gun has one load in it, and the pistol, a Smith and Weston seven-shooter, has four loads in it. Soon after the affair occurred two young men named William Speller and Thomas Croggins appeared at the station-house and made statements to Lieut. Gessford, which that officer deeming of importance detained them both as witnesses. The Coroner's Inquest | | | |

This morning, Coroner Patterson held an inquest, the following jurymen having been summoned by Lieut. Gessford: Wm. Brown, Geo. A. Shekell, Benjamin Wade, J.A. McCauly, David Davis, Wm. Henry, Phillip Martin, John Watt, J.S. Morse, C.C. Veale, J.G. Stafford and R.A. Walker, the latter as foreman.

Drs. Hartigan and Leach made an examination of the body and afterwards sewed up the large gaping wound in the side of the face. Besides this wound there were a large number of perforations in the side of the neck and about the nose and eyes, made by the shot.

The first witness was George Weallacher, who testified that he saw deceased go into McCarthy's store about four o'clock, and afterwards heard some words and saw Unkle come out on the porch and draw out his pistol from a side pocket; saw Mrs. McCathy come out and push him backwards with a chair, and shut the door; this was after Unkle shot off his pistol; saw deceased shoot his pistol towards the inner door; after Unkle opened the door again he discharged his pistol into the house again; did not see McCarthy shoot, but heard the discharge of the gun and saw Unkle fall.

Andrew Ohman testified that he resides with the former witness; saw Unkle standing on the platform with his pistol, and saw him shoot once; this attracted witness' attention, and he heard the report of the guard and saw deceased fall; was not near enough to distinguish any words that were spoken.

Death of Senator Upham

We have the melancholy duty of announcing the decease of the Honorable William Upham, a Senator in Congress from the State of Vermont. For a year or two past he had been in delicate health, which declined rapidly since he came on to attend the present session of Congress, and he expired yesterday at his lodgings at the Irving Hotel in this city, aged about fifty-six years. The deceased was a man of strong mind and of very decided opinions, though he was of a retiring disposition, and seldom mingled in debate. He was a faithful representative of his State, and as assiduous in the discharge of his legislative duties as his infirm health would permit. The information of his death reached the Senate yesterday after that body had decided to adjourn over to Monday, but they immediately revoked that decision, and meet today to take order for paying proper respect to the remains of their deceased colleague.

The Remains of Charles Horace Upton, late U.S. Consul and Charge d'Affairs ad interim of the United States at Geneva, Switzerland, arrived in this city on Saturday last, and, in the presence of the family and a few intimate friends were yesterday at 2 o'clock p.m., placed in the family vault at the Congressional cemetery--Rev. Dr. Atkinson reading the solemn Episcopal burial service. The coffin in which the remains were transported across the ocean was of solid oak, highly polished, encased in a strong iron-bound chest-like case. On the coffin lay sundry beautiful floral offerings of friends. The deceased was well known in this city, resident for many years at what during the war became a noted eminence called "Upton's Hill." Mr. Upton was a native of Salem, Mass., where he was born August 2d, 1812 and in 1834 graduated at Bowdoin College. He subsequently removed to Virginia, where he was elected a member of Congress from the district embracing Fairfax county. In 1863 President Lincoln appointed him Consul to Geneva, where he served continuously to the date of his death, which, as already announced took place on the 18th ult., from disease of the heart. The deceased was a lawyer by profession, an accomplished gentleman, dutiful officer, a constant benefactor, ever ready to serve others, and highly respected by all who came in contact with him. He leaves a widow, (yet in Switzerland,) and one daughter, (Mrs. Throckmorton, near this city,) to survive him.

The National Intelligencer, March 4, 1842

At his residence in this city, yesterday morning, at about one o'clock, Samuel Upton, Esq. aged 58 years. Mr. Upton was for several years engaged in mercantile life in Boston, Mass.; from thence he removed to the State of Maine, and finally to this city. He was extensively known by those among whom he formerly resided as a man of enlarged and liberal mind, of excellent heart, and great devotion to the welfare of his country. He will be remembered by many whom he assisted in adversity, when his fortunes enabled him to obey the dictates of his benevolence. He will be cherished, too, in the affections of his scattered family, to some of whom this notice may be the first tidings of his decease.

His funeral will take place this afternoon at 4 o'clock, at his late residence in the Six Buildings, Pennsylvania avenue, where his friends are respectfully invited to attend.

| An Old and Wealthy Citizen Passes Away | | | |
| Geo. W. Utermehle, one of Washington's oldest and most respected citizens, died yesterday afternoon at his residence, on Capitol Hill, at the age of 74 years. He had probably, in the 57 years that he has lived here, done more to build up the city than any other man being at the time of his death the largest individual owner of property in the District. He was a native of Germany, and came to this city in 1832. He first learned the tailoring business here. He obtained his first capital in this way, opening a small merchant tailoring shop, and it was not long before he was the owner of considerable property of value. He made investments with good judgment that proved extremely profitable, and for many years he has been numbered among the wealthiest citizens of Washington. He had great faith in the future of the city and builded his fortunes on that basis. He soon became the most extensive builder of houses in the District, and row after row of buildings, offices, stores and dwellings went up in his name. He had the reputation of never making a mistake in enterprises of this kind. As a result of his enterprise and good management he has lately been paying taxes on fully 500 houses while his total wealth was estimated at $1,500,000. One of Mr. Utermehle's most notable operations was a heavy investment in government bonds at the beginning of the war which caused an increase in the public confidence to a large extent. In his business transactions he was strict but highly conscientious. He lived unostentatiously, and in a quiet way disbursed much for charity. He leaves a widow and two daughters, Mrs. Dr. L.M. Taylor and Mrs. Samuel Norment, of Washington. The funeral will take place at 4 o'clock. | | | |

| After several postponements, hearing was begun today before Justice Barnard and a jury in the Probate Court of the contested will case involving the estate of George W. Utermehle, deceased. The estate is said to be worth considerably more than $1,000,000. It is believed that the hearing, which is being held in the room of Criminal Court No. 2, will be in progress about seven or eight weeks. The caveator is Charles H. Utermehle, a grandson of the deceased, and the caveateers are Mrs. Mamie E. Norment, a daughter of George W. Utermehle; Dr. Leroy M. Taylor, a son-in-law of the deceased; Leroy M Taylor, jr., a son of Dr. Taylor, and Mildred and Dorothy Taylor the two little daughters of Leroy M Taylor, jr. It is alleged that in the making of his will coercion was brought to bear upon George W. Utermehle, and that at the time the paper writing purporting to be a will was executed. | | | |
| The caveator, Charles H. Utermehle, is represented by Attorneys R. Ross Perry, Wilton J. Lambert and D.W. Baker, while Attorneys A.S. Worthington, Thomas P. Woodward and Charles L. Frailey appear for the caveatees. The following were impaneled as a jury: Messrs. John H. Grove, Harry F. Dunkhorst, J. Hiram Johnson, T. Johnson Fletcher, John W. Danenhower, Augustus B. Bishop, Frank G. Noite, James E. Willet, Clarence E. Latimer, Charles H. Lavender, Charles J. Foote and Grant S. Kendrick. | | | |
| Justice Barnard ruled that the caveator should act as plaintiff, and therefore have the opening and closing. Accordingly, Attorney Perry began the proceedings with an explanatory address to the jury. | | | |
| He stated that George W. Utermehle was born in Germany in 1815 and moved to this country in 1832, when he was seventeen years of age. He married a Pennsylvania lady in 1836. Charles H. Utermehle, sr., the father of the caveator, and his twin sister, Rose M. Taylor, were born in 1839. Charles H. Utermehle, sr., was the only son of the testator, and he married in 1861, and died in 1867, leaving as his only son, the grandson of George W. Utermehle, the caveator in the case now on hearing. | | | |

Outlines Proposed Testimony

After detailing the movements of young Utermehle during the lifetime of his father. Mr. Perry announced that evidence would be produced to show that not only did the warmest personal feeling exist between grandfather and grandson, but that on several occasions the grandfather had specifically stated that he proposed making ample provision for the future of his grandson. According to Mr. Perry, at the time of the death of George W. Utermehle, the grandson was induced to desist from contesting the will upon the promise of the other heirs that upon his grandmother's death everything would be made up to him. Counsel added that it would be shown that not only was this not done, but that between the time of the death of George W. Utermehle and the death of his widow the large estate which she had derived from her husband had been so disposed of, under the control of her daughters, that a third share thereof only amounted in money to about $58,000. The Utermehle Will CaseHearing in the United States Supreme Court

In the Supreme Court of the United States yesterday afternoon the hearing in the Utermehle will case was finished.

George W. Utermehle died in December, 1889, leaving real property worth about $1,200,000. By a will all but one square of ground in the northeast, known as the "Young's law building," was left to his two daughters, Mrs. Rose M. Taylor and Mrs. Mamie E. Norment; the square of ground referred to being left to his widow, and the law building to his grandson, Charles H. Utermehle. In 1900 a petition was filed in the District Supreme Court by Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Norment, asking that the will of their father be probated as to real property. To this a caveat was filed by Charles H. Utermehle, alleging that the will was invalid because of mental incapacity of the deceased and undue influence and fraud alleged to have been practiced upon him.

In the District Supreme Court it was contended by Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Norment that the grandson was estopped to contest the will. This contention was sustained by the trial justice, and after being affirmed by the Court of Appeals was taken to the Supreme Court of the United States. The arguments were made on behalf of the grandson by Wilton J. Lambert and D.W. Baker, and on behalf of the caveatees by A.S. Worthington.

Murder

Just as we were going to press, we learn that a man named Utermuele, living in the Northern Liberties, murdered his wife this morning. We shall give our readers the particulars on Monday.

We learn that the woman murdered by Utermuele, was his mistress, Emeline Lackey. He is now undergoing an examination before Justice Smith.

The Evening Star, January 9, 1854

Inquest

On Saturday last, Coroner Woodward summoned a jury, to inquire into the cause of the death of Mrs. Emmeline Lackey. After examining all the witnesses that could be obtained, the jury returned the following as their verdict:

That the deceased had been for several months past, a woman of very dissipated habits; that she lived with Mena Uttermuhle, and that said Uttermuhle had been in the habit of ill treating her; that about two months since, he cut her head with an axe, and subsequently struck her over the head with a pair of tongs; that the deceased and said Uttermuhle had been in the habit of fighting, and that the neighbor had often heard blows and the cry of murder in the house occupied by them; and, in the absence of a physician to make a postmortem examination, (not withstanding every effort was made by the Coroner to obtain one) the jury believe from the evidence, that the deceased came to her death from intemperance, ill treatment and cruelty at the hands of said Uttermuhle.

The evidence before Justice Smith, at the examination of Mena Uttermuhle, who was suspected of being connected with the murder of this woman, elicited nothing very positive concerning the case. The Justice, however, did not feel at liberty to release the prisoner upon such evidence, and committed him to jail, to await the action of the grand jury.

It will be noticed, in the verdict of the Coroner's jury, that a physician could not be obtained to make a post mortem examination. No one need wonder at this, as it is an unpleasant job, for which the surgeon receives no pay.

The Evening Star, January 12, 1854

Died in Prison--Mena Utermuhle, who was sent to jail on suspicion of being concerned with the murder of Emeline Lacky, died in jail about 12 o'clock, last night. We understand that the Grand Jury had dismissed his case, but he was sick and unable to leave the prison. It is said he died of mania-a-potu.

The Evening Star, January 13, 1854

Inquest. The coroner yesterday held an inquest in the county jail over the body of Utermuehle. The evidence proved death by mania-a-portu and the verdict was rendered accordingly.

Utermehle. In the hope of a blissful immortality, on the morning of the 28th instant, Miss Nellie J. Utermehle, second daughter of George W. and Sarah Utermehle, in the 17th year of her age. Her funeral will take place from the residence of her parents, No. 425 Massachusetts avenue, today, the 29th instant, at 3 o'clock p.m., to which the friends of the family are invited to attend.

Sister, thou wast mild and lovely,
Gentle as the summer breeze,
Pleasant as the air of ev'ning,
When it floats among the trees.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber--
Peaceful in the grave so low;
Thou no more wilt join our number;
Thou no more our songs shalt know.

Dearest sister, thou hast left us;
Here thy loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that hath bereft us;
He can all our sorrows heal.

Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled,
There in Heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

Mrs. Utermehle's Gift

She Donates a Farm to Establish a Lutheran Home for Aged People

An important announcement was made by Rev. W.E. Parsons, the pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, to his congregation yesterday morning. He stated that Mrs. Sarah Utermehle, the widow of George W. Utermehle, had decided to present to the Lutheran church of this country the property known as Queen Chapel farm for the purpose of locating there a home for the aged. This generous gift will enable the Lutheran church to carry out the project contemplated for some years of establishing such a home. This farm containing twenty-seven acres is near the Ivy City property. As soon as possible the necessary buildings will be erected and all the arrangements will be made to carry out the objects of this gift. Mrs. Utermehle some time ago as a memorial to her husband had the interior of the Church of the Reformation beautifully decorated and refitted.

| Ut-Sin-Malikan, , From Jesse L. Paul (Date Unknown) UTE-SIN-MALE-CUN: ONE OF THE HEAD CHIEFS OF THE NEZ PERCE TRIBE AKA: UT-SIN-MALIKAN AKA: EUGENE MALLIKAN | b. 1793 - d. 26 May 1868 | 75 yrs. | R22/75 |

UTSINMALIKAN was born in the year 1793 and was a boy of twelve when Lewis and Clark came to the Northwest in 1805. The Lewis and Clark Expedition were on their last legs after crossing the Bitterroot Mountains located between Montana and Idaho. An early snow storm had hit the mountains in the fall of 1805. The expedition's rations were gone and there was no game to kill for food as the snow storm had driven the game to lower country. The expedition at this point was reduced to eating their horses. They were making their way down the mountain when Nez Perce scouts spotted the advance party of the expedition. The Nez Perce were camped on a prairie (near what is now the town of Weippe, Idaho) digging and gathering Camas Roots as part of their winter food supply. The Nez Perce Indians took the expedition in, fed them, and nursed them back to health.

During the time of the expedition's recovery, the Nez Perce and Lewis and Clark became very good friends. The Nez Perce were impressed with Lewis and Clark's medicine as they had helped heal some of the Nez Perce that were sick. Lewis and Clark were in return impressed with the Nez Perce culture and their cleanliness. The Lewis and Clark Expedition spent about thirty to forty-five days with the Nez Perce who helped them in preparation for getting their party down the Snake River and the Columbia River to the Pacific Ocean. Lewis and Clark left their horses, what was left of their supplies, their pack equipment and pack animals with the Nez Perce to take care of until the following spring when they planned to return. The Nez Perce cut down trees and made approximately six canoes for the Lewis and Clark Expedition. They escorted Lewis and Clark down the Clearwater River, down the Snake River to where the Snake River flows into the Columbia River. It was there that they introduced them to the Yakima Tribe of Indians. The Nez Perce told the Yakimas that the Lewis and Clark party were good people and asked them to take care of them and help them get down the Columbia to the Pacific Ocean.

Lewis and Clark and their expedition reached the Pacific Ocean sometime around mid-December. They stayed there until the next spring and around March began their trip back up the rivers to the Nez Perce country. When they returned in the spring of 1806, the Nez Perce helped them get their expedition back over the Bitterroot Mountains to Montana. All the equipment, supplies, animals and horses left there for the winter were in good condition and every horse left was returned. The Nez Perce gave the expedition gifts of robes and food and accompanied them to Montana, showing them the route over the Lolo Pass to near what is now called Missoula, Montana. At that point the Nez Perce returned home.

The Nez Perce were very intrigued with the white man's ways and his instruments. Lewis and Clark had survey instruments and equipment they had never seen before, also guns, rifles and steel knives. The Nez Perce were very much interested in learning more about the white man and in learning how to read "the book." The Book meaning the Bible.

In 1835 or 1836 Henry H. Spaulding, Marcus Whitman and their wives came as Presbyterian missionaries to the Northwest country. Reverend Spaulding and his wife settled in the northern part of Idaho in the Nez Perce country. Reverend Whitman and his wife went on over to the Palouse Indian country. Reverend Spaulding began teaching the gospel and the Word of God. The Indians wanted to learn about the higher power and were so interested that they sent a party of four Indian young men back to St. Louis to see about having the Bible printed in their language. They learned how to read and write in their native Nez Perce language. Once they had contacted the printer in St. Louis they had the four gospels of the New Testament printed in the Nez Perce language as well as hymn books. The Nez Perce began practicing the Presbyterian religion. Between 1835 and 1855 the Indians became Christians and followed the church. Most of these were Nez Perce Indians from the Kamiah and the Lapwai areas.

The white settlers began moving in and this was the cause of the United States Government wanting to enter into a peace treaty with the Nez Perce; to relinquish some of the land that the Nez Perce controlled so the white's could settle there. The Nez Perce at that time controlled a very large part of Northern Idaho, Washington and Oregon, about the size of the state of Maryland. After the 1855 treaty that land mass was reduced to around two million acres. Some of the stipulations in the treaty were that the United States Government would provide schools for the tribal people, put up a mill to grind wheat into flour, provide a saw mill, a blacksmith shop, and other farming equipment and implements for them. They also agreed to pay the Nez Perce for lands that they had signed over to the Federal Government. The Federal Government never paid them one cent of what was promised.

During the time period between 1855 and 1863 gold was discovered in Idaho in Perce near Weippe and gold miners began to come into the country. Again this land was reservation land and there was supposed to be no whites on the land of the Indians. The white settlers and the miners kept pushing the United States Government into negotiating another treaty with the Nez Perce; to further reduce the reservation so they could have the land for themselves. Consequently the 1863 treaty was negotiated. UTSINMALIKAN was a very big part of that treaty and spoke at the council in June of 1863 when they were negotiating that treaty with Judge Howell who was sent out from Washington, D.C. to represent the President. There were approximately five bands of Nez Perce Indians who did not want to negotiate this treaty; they were the Indians who lived along the Snake River and across the river into Oregon's Willamette Valley where Chief Joseph's band was from. They didn't want to be pushed onto a reservation on a small tract of land because the land they had was very amenable to their way of life and they had lived there for generations. They felt that they should not be required to move into Idaho with the rest of the Nez Perce.

The Nez Perce Indians did not have a leader chief, one chief who was in charge of all the bands. Each band had their own chief and each band honored the other band's chief and their rights. The Federal Government gave Chief Lawyer the designation of the Head Chief, a decision with which the other chiefs did not agree. Chiefs UTSINMALIKAN, Timothy, Jason and Lawyer were the four elder leaders of the band of Nez Perce in Kamiah and Lapwai. UTSINMALIKAN did not agree with the part of the treaty trying to force Chief Joseph and his band to come over from Oregon onto the Idaho side. He felt that Chief Joseph's wishes should be honored and that he should be able to remain on his land. The 1863 treaty was not signed by five of the chiefs. Those chiefs were: Chief Joseph, Chief White Bird, Chief Toohoolhoolzote, Chief Looking Glass, and Chief Paloose. These five chiefs probably controlled the majority of the Nez Perce Indian country and felt that they should not give up that country. Consequently they never did come to an agreement with the 1863 treaty even though the United States Government felt that they had a treaty with the Nez Perce's, which in reality was not true. As a result of this and after Congress ratified the 1865 treaty in 1867, there were still some issues to be resolved. In the early part of 1868 the Secretary of the Indian Bureau sent out a letter to Agent O'Neill, Indian agent at Lapwai, requesting that four chiefs come back to Washington, D.C. to finalize and renegotiate those differences. They requested that two chiefs come from the treaty side and two chiefs come from the non-treaty side so that there would be equal representation. Agent O'Neill did not comply with the request and instead sent back four chiefs that he felt would be willing to comply with the United States Government's request in resolving the treaty. Chief Lawyer, Chief Timothy, Chief Jason and Chief UTSINMALIKAN were the four chiefs sent back to Washington, D.C. They left in late March because of the weather. They rode horseback to Seattle, Washington and caught a ship from there and sailed around South America's Cape Horn and up to New York. They arrived in Washington, D.C. on May 12th or 15th of 1868. UTSINMALIKAN contracted typhoid fever enroute and complications of pneumonia set in due to his age. He was at that time 75 years of age. Nine days later he died in Washington, D.C. It is because of this trip and for this reason that he was buried in Congressional Cemetery.

UTSINMALIKAN and his wife had two sons and two daughters. One of those daughters was named Jane, her Indian name was Wa-lee-hoo. She married a Nez Perce named Jason Conditt whose Indian name was Tin-tin-ne-nay-klon-kan. Out of that marriage they had two children, one was named Lydia Conditt and a son named Homer Conditt. Lydia married my grandfather who was named Jesse Paul, who I am named after, and they had eleven children. My father Titus Paul and his younger brother who was the youngest of the family, Reuben Paul are the only two living descendants from Jesse and Lydia. From Titus there were three sons and two daughters of which all are living today. I have four children, two sons and two daughters of which two are in attendance today. From Reuben Paul there were three sons and one daughter, two of which are in attendance today plus Reuben's granddaughter. The descendants of this noble Nez Perce leader is now in its seventh generation.

From descendants, September 2004

Utsinmalikan was a signer of the 1855 and 1863 Treaties (however, he was not a Christian). In 1868 he traveled to Washington with 3 others -- Jason, Lawyer, and Timothy -- to oppose the fact that the U.S. Government wanted to divide the Nez Perce lands again. He was outspoken on this issue. According to his family history, tribal history and "Hear Me My Chiefs" by L.V. McWhorter, Utsinmalikan became ill and was shoved to his death from his hotel window while in his weakened condition.
