Faithful, Mary E. The Evening Star, February 4, 1920, p. 2 Crime Prompted By Desire to Wed Robbery Alleged Motive for Perrygo's Murderous Attack on Mrs. Faithful Desire to obtain funds to wed Miss Mabel Hill, seventeen years old, was given by Edgar Randolph Perrygo, also seventeen, of Oxon Hill, Md., as the motive for his attack on Mrs. Emily Faithful, sixty-three, and subsequent robbery, in an alleged confession obtained by the police. Mrs. Faithful was attacked in her home at Alabama avenue and 10th street, Congress Heights, yesterday afternoon, and beaten on the head with an iron bar. She is at Casualty Hospital suffering from a fractured skull. Physicians are unable to hold out any hope for recovery. Nurses at Casualty Hospital, on examining Mrs. Faithful's clothing today, discovered $2,470 sewed up in the skirt. Three hours after the attack yesterday Perrygo was under arrest as the alleged assailant. When first questioned, he denied any knowledge of the affair. Five hours later, according to the police, he admitted his guilt. Perrygo's first excuse for having committed the deed, police declare, was that he was suffering from the effects of a drink given him by an unidentified man on the street. Later his explanation contained a statement of an intended elopement with Miss Hill, who resided not far from the Perrygo farm. He admitted, according to the police, that it was lack of finances which prompted him to commit robbery. With plans made for the elopement, he went to the city yesterday morning to get a marriage license, the police say he told them. Before reaching the marriage clerk's office, he declared, he became ill on the street and was given a drink by a stranger. He then told of proceeding to Congress Heights, picking up an iron bar about eighteen inches long on the road to Mrs. Faithful's home, where he was going to get the money. He partly concealed the bar up his sleeve and partly in a pocket of his rain coat, at the time he entered the Faithful home, according to the alleged confession. When the Attack Occurred The attack occurred some time after Mrs. Faithful had admitted Perrygo to the house, police declare. He was known to Mrs. Faithful. She was reputed continually to have several thousand dollars in her possession. Perrygo sat in the kitchen. He was introduced to William Collins, who occupies rooms on the upper floor of the Faithful house with his wife. Collins had been detained at home yesterday on account of the illness of his wife. On his way to perform an errand he was introduced to Perrygo. Shortly after his return to his rooms the attack was made. Collins and his wife heard Mrs. Faithful moaning. He investigated. Due to this response the assailant missed nearly $1,800 concealed in a pocket of Mrs. Faithful's belt. Another pocket was slashed and its contents extracted. Detectives later recovered $50, which the prisoner is said to have admitted taking, a number of the bills being cut by the knife. Collins dodged a blow aimed at him and returned for his pistol. He started in pursuit. The assailant escaped. Policeman Frank Hughes of the eleventh precinct took up the chase, following the trail in the direction of Prince Georges county and back to the city, ending at the home of a brother of the intended bride, in Southeast Washington, where Perrygo was arrested. Perrygo was closeted with Inspector Grant and several detectives at police headquarters until 9 o'clock last night before he broke down. This occurred when Miss Hill was brought to headquarters. Learning that the girl whom he was to marry was nearby, he told the story of the affair, begging the officers not to question her. The Evening Star, February 6, 1920, p. 20 Mrs. Faithful Dies Result of Injuries Edgar R. Perrygo, Her Alleged Assailant, Now Is Charged With Murder Mrs. Emily Faithful, sixty-three years old, who was beaten into insensibility with an iron bar in her home at Alabama avenue and 10th street, Congress Heights, Tuesday afternoon, it is charged, by Edgar Randolph Perrygo, seventeen years old, who resided at Oxon Hill, Md., died at Casualty Hospital shortly after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Following her death, police of the eleventh precinct preferred a charge of murder against the youth.	b. 1864 - d. 7 Feb 1920	63 yrs.	R8/185

Say Portion of Money is Missing

No additional moeny taken from Mrs. Faithful has been recovered. Relatives of the dead woman feel certain that all the money she had on her person when she was attacked has not been recovered, and the police are continuing their investigation with a view of locating additional funds.

Young Perrygo was well known to the Anacostia police. He had been a newsboy in that section, it is said, and had a host of friends. A little less than a year ago he purchased an automobile for $200. It developed that the car was a stolen one, and Detective Fred M. Cornwell took possession of it for its owner.

The young man remained in ignorance of the death of Mrs. Faithful until about 10:30 o'clock this morning, when Capt. W.T. Anderson of the eleventh police precinct visited his cell and told him.

"I kind of expected it," sobbed the prisoner, and as he sat in the cell crying he was asked by the police captain if he thought he would be able to undergo the ordeal of appearing at the inquest this afternoon. He responded in the affirmative.

At the house of detention, Mabel Estelle Hill, seventeen-year-old sweetheart of the alleged slayer, was apparently unaffected by news of the death of Mrs. Faithful. She is said to have made no comment when told of the death.

This morning Miss Hill was taken to police headquarters, where she was photographed and further questioned, but no additional information was obtained from her. Inspector Grant, chief of detectives, directed that she be taken to the morgue to be present at the inquest.

Funeral services for Mrs. Faithful will be held in Congress Heights Baptist Church at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Mrs. Faithful is survived by her husband, William A. Faithful, and a son, James A. Faithful.

Retired Captain of Police Expires

William F. Falvey Was Commander of No. 7 Precinct Five Years

Capt. William F. Falvey, 78, one of the best known officers of the Police Department prior to his retirement 12 years ago, died about 10 o'clock last night at his residence, 311 Tenth Street northeast, after an illness of two weeks. At the time of his retirement Capt. Falvey was commander of No. 7 precinct, a post which he had held for about five years.

Fellow officers on the force knew Capt. Falvey as one who was always ready to work for the advancement of the men under him. He was popular on the force, to which he was appointed in October of 1884. A native of Boston, Capt. Falvey joined the Marine Corps as a drummer boy, and later was placed in charge of field music at the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

Upon leaving the service, Capt. Falvey came to Washington to become a policeman. He won a steady advancement on the force.

In addition to his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Blake Falvey, Capt. Falvey is survived by a son, William F. Falvey, jr., and three daughters, Mrs. Annie Hughes, Mrs. May Vinson and Mrs. Laura Norris, and nine grandchildren. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Former Police Captain To Be Buried Tomorrow

*Funeral Services for William F. Falvey,
Who Died Saturday, to Be Held at Home*

Funeral services for William F. Falvey, 78, retired police captain, who died Saturday night, will be held at his home, 311 Tenth street northeast, tomorrow at 2 p.m. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Capt. Falvey, an instructor in music at the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis before entering the Police Department, was one of the best known officers on the force prior to his retirement 12 years ago. He had been ill only a short time.

A native of Boston, Capt. Falvey joined the Marine Corps as a drummer boy, and was later promoted to the post at Annapolis. He left the service in 1884 and was appointed to the Washington police force. He won steady advancement, and at the time of retirement was in charge of No. 7 precinct.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Blake Falvey; a son, William F. Falvey, jr., and three daughters, Mrs. Annie Hughes, Mrs. May Vinson and Mrs. Laura Norris, and nine grandchildren.

Capt. Falvey, a native of New York State had been with the Police Department about 39 years.

In addition to his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Blake Falvey, Capt. Falvey is survived by a son, William F. Falvey, jr., and three daughters, Mrs. Annie Hughes, Mrs. May Vinson and Mrs. Laura Norris, and nine grandchildren.

The Evening Star, May 22, 1894

Damage Awarded

On the 13th of June 1892, a little four-year-old son of Police Sergt. Sm. F. Falvey fell or was thrown from a car of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company near 3d street and Indiana avenue. The little fellow's left leg was so badly crushed by a wheel of the car that it became necessary to amputate the limb above the knee. Later, Sergt. Falvey instituted a suit against the road, claiming $30,000 damages. The case has been on trial before Judge Cole and a jury since Friday last. This morning the jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $3,750.

The child, accompanied by its mother and sister, was riding in one of the open summer cars of the road, and was seated on the inner side of the car. In getting down from his seat it appeared that the little fellow fell between the rail attached to the seats to the track below, and a wheel passed over his leg. It was contended by the plaintiff that the car was really a dangerous one, in that its seats projected over the body of the car. And hence, that when the child attempted to get down from his seat there was nothing to prevent him from plunging through to the ground below.

The National Intelligencer, Friday, January 20, 1826

The last mail from the West brought us news of the death of the Hon. Patrick Farrelly, one of the Representatives in Congress, from the State of Pennsylvania. He died at Pittsburg, being on his way to the Seat of Government, when his illness arrested him. Mr. F. was a member also of the two last Congresses, and of course, though he had not attended at this session, is well known to us, and a majority of the members of both Houses of Congress. He was a man of strong natural intellect, and; from all accounts, perhaps the best Greek and Latin scholar in either House. He was a native of Ireland, and was educated for the Catholic priesthood. Arriving in this Country, he preferred the practice of the law, in which, we believe, he was pretty successful. His age, at the time of his death, must have been upwards of fifty years.

Capt. Faunce Succumbs

Was One of Oldest Rivermen and Fishermen in This Section

Capt. Chris. Faunce, one of the oldest rivermen and fishermen in this section, died Friday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Hahn, at Virginia Highlands, Va., after a short illness. His funeral will take place from the residence of Mrs. John Murray, 307 11th street southwest, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock and the interment will be in the family lot in Congressional Cemetery.

Capt. Faunce had reached the age of eighty-one years, but was active and as well able to attend to business as could a man half his years. For over a half century he had operated fishing craft on the river, and his store of information regarding Potomac fish and their habits was unexcelled by any one in the city.

Christmas day, it is stated, he was up and about the home of his daughter. Last summer he was in command of the schooner Virginia.

His death was directly due to an ailment from which he had suffered for years.

Report Discredited

Capt. Faunce's Friends Confident of His Safety

The report that Capt. Chris. Faunce of the sloop Albatross was lost with his vessel in the ice off Occoquan bay is generally discredited by the friends of Capt. Faunce along the river front. A letter received by his brother, Capt. "Pote" Faunce, from Woodbridge, Va., states that Capt. Chris. had been fishing in Occoquan, and that in the blow Sunday night the boat was carried out into the river in the ice, and nothing has been heard from the boat or its master since.

Capt. Faunce is an expert waterman, and such an accident as occurred to him is by no means uncommon. It is believed that he has safely made his way into a harbor on the Maryland side of the river, and either does not think it necessary to notify his family or is so far away from a telegraph station as to be unable to do so.

Capt. Faunce resides at 501 I street southwest with his family. Mrs. Faunce is not alarmed for the safety of her husband, knowing him to be a good enough sailor to take care of himself in any emergency.

The Evening Star, February 7, 1902, p. 3

Capt. Faunce Safe

His Boat Located, but Inaccessible to Those Ashore

Information has been received here from the brother of Captain Chris. Faunce, whose boat was blown out of Occoquan creek during the gale of Sunday night last, that the latter's craft has been located at the mouth of Mattawoman creek. The discovery was made by means of powerful field glasses through which it was discovered that the captain's boat was caught in the ice at a point inaccessible from shore. Smoke was seen to be issuing from the cabin stove pipe, which relieves fears entertained by the captain's family as to his safety. The jibsail was also noticed to be up, evidently for the purpose of drying it out. As yet the friends of Captain Faunce have been unable, on account of the ice, to bring him ashore.

The Evening Star, February 8, 1902, p. 7

Aid of Capt. Faunce

Rescue Party Leaves Washington for Mattawoman Creek

An effort is to be made today to get provisions and fuel to Capt. Chris. Faunce, who is imprisoned aboard his sloop Albatross in the ice in the mouth of Mattawoman creek, Md. This morning Mr. Chas. Faunce, a son of Capt. Faunce; Thomas Faunce, a nephew, and Messrs. Hahn and John Murray left here on the steamer Estelle Randall for Glymont. From there they will, this evening, go to the point on the shore nearest the Albatross and will make an effort to get out to her. It is believed they can cross on the ice, but should this be impossible a boat will be secured and an effort made to work it through the open water in the ice.

The party have with them an ample supply of provisions, and fuel will be obtained in the neighborhood of Mattawoman. While it is thought Capt. Faunce has fuel and provisions on hand, his supply is probably running low, and if aid does not reach him he will soon be in distress.

The Evening Star, February 10, 1902, p. 3

Captain Faunce at Home

Rescue Party Found Him Waiting at Glymont

Capt. Chris. Faunce, the old fisherman, who was blown from the Virginia side of the Potomac, across to the mouth of Mattawoman creek, Md., through the ice, in the heavy gale of yesterday week, is back at his home in this city, none the worse for his rough experience. When the party, which left this city Saturday last on a mission to rescue him from the ice, reached the wharf at Glymont, they found Capt. Faunce had rescued himself and was waiting on the wharf for the steamer. Rescued and rescuers returned home Saturday evening on the Estelle Randall.

Capt. Faunce makes light of his adventure and says he was at no time in any grave danger. When the gale sprang up his boat, the Albatross, was lying well up in Neatsico creek, and he was alone on the boat. The ice began to move and about dusk carried the boat with it out into the river. While the wind blew with hurricane force, and the water was very rough, rolling and tossing the boat badly, the ice prevented the seas from breaking over her, and she was kept dry. All he could do was to permit the heavy ice from crowding his little craft and crushing it. The wind carried him across the river and into the broken ice in the smooth water at the mouth of Mattawoman. The rough voyage only lasted about two hours, and by 9 o'clock Sunday night he was safe in a good harbor, with ice piling outside of the boat and protecting it. Having plenty of fuel and provisions he remained aboard the Albatross, which was not harmed by the ice, until last Friday morning, when he came ashore on the ice and made his way to Glymont, and, as stated, returned home Saturday evening.

Capt. Faunce will shortly return to Mattawoman, and will take precautions to prevent damage to his boat when the ice begins to move again.

The discovery was made by means of powerful field glasses through which it was discovered that the captain's boat was caught in the ice at a point inaccessible from shore. Smoke was seen to be issuing from the cabin stove pipe, which relieves fears entertained by the captain's family as to his safety. The jibsail was also noticed to be up, evidently for the purpose of drying it out. As yet the friends of Captain Faunce have been unable, on account of the ice, to bring him ashore.

The Inquest in the Case of Conrad Faunce

An inquest was held at the first precinct satation yesterday on the body of Conrad Faunce, who was killed by being run over by an engine of the Baltimore and Potomac railroad, at the corner of Maryland avenue and 13th street, Wednesday night, testimony was given by Frank H. Childs, Anna L. Skidmore, E.F. Long, Geo. K. Handy, John L. Roby, Fletcher Skidmoe, D.L. Power, George Bresnahan, J.C. Gill, and A.K. Sharp, that the deceased came to his death by being run over by an engine of the Baltimore and Potomac railroad, attributed the cause to the carelessness and negligence on the part of the employees and agents of said company, and recommended that hereafter, there be required to place flagmen at all street crossings at all hours when trains and engines are passing.

Killed on the Railroad

Conrad Faunce, a well-known fisherman, living on Maryland avenue, between 12th and 13th streets, was run over and killed last night on a side track of the Alexandria railroad at the junction of 13 1/2 street and Maryland avenue. It is thought that Mr. Faunce was walking on this track about 8:30 o'clock and failed to hear the approach of an engine, employed in shifting cars, behind him. He was knocked down and the engine passed over his right arm, side and legs, mangling his body in a shocking manner, and killing him, it is supposed, instantly. His body was found beside the track and removed to the home of the deceased. He leaves a wife and three children.

The Evening Star, April 11, 1896
Capt. John Faunce and His Son Percy

Capt. John Faunce, his son Percy of this city, and seven colored men were drowned near Virginia Beach yesterday afternoon. The tragedy occurred at Capt. Faunce's fishery about a mile and a quarter south of the Princess Anne Hotel and about midway between life-saving stations 2 and 3, too far for the life savers to render assistance in time.

They were just putting out from the beach to set a net when a big wave struck the boat and turned it end over. Not one in the boat was saved. Two succeeded in getting on top of the boat and remained there about fifteen minutes, but they were washed off and sank.

The affair was witnessed from the shore by John Faunce, another son of Capt. Faunce. As quickly as possible he put out in a small boat with another man, but reached the scene too late.

Percy Faunce's Body Found

Information has been received here that the bodies of Percy Faunce and the two colored men were recovered this morning a short distance from the place where the disaster occurred, and the former's remains are expected to reach his home, 803 G street southwest, tonight.

At the time the dispatch was sent from Norfolk this morning search was still being made for the body of Capt. Faunce and the other lost men.

Capt. Faunce was one of the most experienced fishing men who sailed out of Washington, and had followed the water almost his entire life. He was a widower, and, with his two sons, Percy and John, resided with his sister, at 803 G street southwest. Mr. Faunce's two brothers, who are also in the fishing business, left last evening for Norfolk as soon as they learned of the affair.

Winifred Faunce

Winifred Faunce, 75, who retired as a personnel adviser for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, died Monday of cancer in the Wisconsin Avenue Nursing Home in the District. She formerly lived on Nebraska Avenue NW.

In 1934 and 1935 Miss Faunce, playing from the Manor and Brook Manor country clubs, won the Women's District Golf Association championship.

She was a member of the Episcopal Church of the Epiphany here and did volunteer work at Washington Cathedral.

Miss Faunce, a District native, was a graduate of old Central High School and George Washington University. She received a master's degree in psychology and personnel administration from Columbia University.

She received an award for her contribution to the development and administration of the merit system in the state grant-in-aid program of HEW. She worked for HEW and its predecessor organizations for 30 years.

She leaves no immediate survivors.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Friday in the Church of the Epiphany, 1317 G St. NW. It has been suggested that expressions of sympathy be in the form of contributions to the church.

Man Believed to Be John R. Feaster Sent to Hospital
A man, who was later identified as John R. Feaster, was found lying upon the sidewalk in front of 519 8th street southeast this morning about 6:15 o'clock, and attracted the attention of a number of pedestrians. The man on the pavement was unconscious, and he was removed to the Casualty Hospital. There was a cut over the left eye of the unconscious man, and it was suspected that he had been assaulted. Later in the day Detective Cornwell made an investigation, and was convinced that the patient had fallen upon the sidewalk. He was ill when he left his home at 615 L street southeast, this morning about 5:45 o'clock, and had to be assisted to the door by his wife. He went to the barn of the railway company and got excused from work, and was told to send a substitute to perform his duties. The substitute was found at a house near where the sick man was afterward picked up. At the time he was taken to the hospital nothing was known about his identity, and it was not until Detective Cornwell had made an investigation that his name was ascertained. The detective learned from Mrs. Feaster that her husband had been ill for a number of days, but had insisted upon going to work.

John R. Feaster Fractured His Skull When He Fell on the Street
John R. Feaster, forty-five years old, who fell from the steps of a house on 8th street southeast at an early hour yesterday morning and received such severe injuries, as stated in yesterday's Star, died at the Casualty Hospital last night about 10 o'clock. Coroner Nevitt made an examination of the body and found that Feaster had sustained a fracture of the skull. His death, the coroner found, was the result of an accident, and he gave a certificate accordingly. Feaster had been in the employ of the Capital Traction Company for many years, having driven a hill horse before the cable system was installed. His fall yesterday morning, it is thought, was due to his illness. After the coroner had concluded his investigation the body was removed to the late home of the deceased. Feaster is survived by a widow.

The Evening Star, June 30, 1891

It Was Mrs. Feldvoss

The Body That Was Found in the Eastern Branch Yesterday

The body of a woman seen in the Eastern branch not far from the railroad bridge yesterday, as published in yesterday's Star, was recovered and brought ashore and soon afterward the remains were sent to the morgue. Later in the afternoon Mr. Adolphus Feldvoss visited the morgue and identified the corpse as being that of his wife. Mr. Feldvoss with his wife and daughter lived at No. 621 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, where the husband has a tailor shop. Mrs. Feldvoss has been a constant sufferer for a long time from nervousness and dyspepsia and several physicians treated her without success. Lately she became melancholy, and it was feared that her mind would become unbalanced.

She Took Long Walks

Mrs. Feldvoss was 52 years old, and lately she has been going out for long walks, Lincoln Park being one of her favorite places to visit. Sometimes she went out early in the morning and at other times she would go out in the afternoon and remain in the park or out walking for a long time. Yesterday she left her home before dinner and started out for a walk, as she had many times before, but there was nothing unusual about her actions. She went in the direction of Lincoln Park, as she had on previous occasions, but instead of sitting in the shade of one of the large trees there she continued on her journey to a watery grave. Near the water's edge she sat on the green grass and removed her shoes and stockings and she laid her bonnet and gold-headed umbrella beside them.

Walked to Her Death

Then she walked into the water and was drowned. During the day the unfortunate woman's husband was out looking for her, but it was not until 5 o'clock that he went to the morgue and found his wife's dead body on the cooling board.

Coroner Patterson viewed the body and gave a certificate of death in accordance with the facts.

Funeral of Mrs. Fellows

Venerable Lady Is Buried in the Congressional Cemetery

Funeral services for Mrs. Cornelia C. Fellows, who died at her home, 121 North Carolina avenue southeast, Saturday, were held last evening at the residence. Rev. Dr. W.L. DeVries of St. Mark's Episcopal Church officiated. The interment was in Congressional cemetery. Although of advanced age, Mrs. Fellows had been in good health up to within the last year. She was in bed only two days before she died, surrounded by members of her family and a few friends who had called, not thinking that her illness was of a serious nature. That she had many friends among the people of the District, where she had lived for thirty years, was shown by those who attended her funeral and by the floral tributes offered.

Mrs. Fellows was the widow of Homer Fellows, for many years a prominent resident of Washington, and at one time master of Myron M. Parker Lodge, No. 24, F.A.A.M.

Dr. Karl Fenning Dies, Patent Law Authority

Dr. Karl Fenning, 82, a nationally recognized authority on patent law and a former professor of patent law at Georgetown University, died yesterday at a Washington hospital following a long illness.

Dr. Fenning, a native of Washington, was appointed by President Harding as assistant United States Commissioner of Patents in 1921 and served in that post until 1925.

From 1925 to 1927 he was special assistant to the Attorney General in the patent unit.

Dr. Fenning attended old Central High School and received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Trinity College, Hartford, Conn.

Received Degrees Here

He received his law degree from National University in Washington and his mamster of patent law degree from Columbia College, now George Washington University.

During his career in patent law, Dr. Fenning practiced in Washington, New York and Cleveland.

He was a professor at Georgetown University from 1923 to 1948.

He served as chairman of the National Committee on Patent Legislation from 1925 to 1936 and was chairman of the legislative committee and president of the National Council of Patent Law Associations in the late 1930s.

In the late 1940s, he served for several years on the advisory council of the Committee on Patents for the House of Representatives.

Active in Groups

Dr. Fenning had been active in many professional organizations including the American Bar Association. He was a president of the American Patent Law Association and was a first secretary of the Friends of the Law of the Library of Congress.

He was a member of the American Academy of Air Law and served as vice president of the American group of the International Association for Protection of Industrial Property.

Dr. Fenning was organizer and honorary member of the Cleveland (Ohio) Patent Law Association.

He was the author of more than 100 books and pamphlets relating to patent law and was editor of the first 80 volumes of the U.S. Patent Quarterly.

He was a member of Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity, the Cosmos Club and Trinity College Alumni Association.

Dr. Fenning is survived by his wife, Hazel O'Neill Fenning, at the home, 5863 Chevy Chase parkway N.W.

Friends may call at the Hines Funeral Home, 2901 Fourteenth street N.W.

Death of George G. Fenton
George G. Fenton of Indiana, late chief of the appointment division of the Post Office Department, died at his residence on Wallach place, at 12:30 this noon, of consumption, after a long illness, being confined to his house since February last. Fenton came to Washington in 1882, and accepted a minor clerkship in the Post Office Department, reaching the grade of chief of division in September, 1892. He served through the war in an Indiana regiment, and was sheriff of Jefferson county previous to his removal to this place.

Funeral. - The compositors and pressmen of the Government printing office headed by a band of music, yesterday afternoon attended the funeral of Mr. James Fenton, a pressman. The body was interred in Congressional Cemetery.
Contributed by Dan Fenton, Dec. 2004:
The following information may be of help in locating the burial site of James Fenton. Congressional Cemetery records reveal that on the 15th of December of 1862, a child of James R. Fenton was buried in Range 65, Site 69. This was probably James' son, Lambert H. Fenton as Lambert doesn't appear in any records after this time.
James L. Fenton died on the 19th of July, 1864, in Washington, D.C., and was buried in Range 73, Site 227, in Congressional Cemetery. His body was removed to Range 65, Site 69, on August 5, 1869. James' widow probably moved James' body to be with that of their deceased son.

Was Veteran of Two Wars
Richard M.A. Fenwick Dies in His Eighty-Second Year
Was a Soldier Against Mexico and of District Regiment in Civil Strife

Richard M.A. Fenwick, one of the oldest residents of the capital city and a veteran of the Mexican and civil wars, died at 9 o'clock this morning at the family residence, 208 H street northwest. The cause of death was general debility. The deceased, who retired from an active business life nearly twenty years ago, was in his eighty-second year. For several months it was observed that his health was gradually failing and several weeks ago he became unable to leave his bed, gradually declining until the end came.

The deceased was a son of Richard Fenwick, who for many years in the early life of Washington was a paymaster in the post office. Early in life he learned the painting trade and took up his residence in the house in which he died, and which at that time was the only habitation within several squares. October 11, 1849, Mr. Fenwick married Miss Emeline L. Killmon of this city. Three years previous to that time he had entered the army formed for the war with Mexico, and at the close of hostilities came to this city. At the outbreak of the civil war Mr. Fenwick enlisted in the 2d Battalion of the District of Columbia Volunteers as a private in Company A, commanded by Capt. E.C. Carrington.

This battalion was one of the first to respond to president Lincoln's call for volunteers, and performed valiant service in the matter of guarding the bridges and approaches to the capital city. His wife, a son, daughter and granddaughter, Charles M. Fenwick, Mrs. Willard D. Jewell and Miss Lavinia Jewell, respectively, survive him. For several years Mr. Fenwick was connected with the secret service. Later in life he became a member

Death of Mrs. Ferguson

Mrs. Martha A. Ferguson died yesterday afternoon at her residence, 227 D street northwest, aged 70 years. Mrs. Ferguson was the widow of the late Justice of the Peace Ferguson, who was a contemporary with Justices Donn, Murphy, Cull, Walter, Mills and Harper and other prominent magistrates of the District.

The deceased lady was born in the Shenandoah Valley, Rockingham county, Virginia, and her maiden name was Steele. Her brother, Rev. William C. Steele, chaplain, U.S.A. is now stationed at Randall's Island. She had resided for a number of years in Baltimore city, but for the past thirty years Washington had been her home. She leaves seven daughters and one son, all grown, and a number of grandchildren. She was noted for her kindness and benevolence of heart and as a close reader of the newspapers. She was always well posted in the current events of the day and was a bright and entertaining talker upon topics in general and about matters and things that had transpired in Washington during the past quarter of a century. Her funeral will take place Wednesday afternoon.

Young Man Is Dazed by Smash-Up. Two Others in Car Uninjured

William Ferguson, sixty-four years of age and residing at 2012 Portner place northwest, was instantly killed, shortly after 11 o'clock last night, in an automobile accident at the intersection of New York and Florida avenues.

Osmun Ferguson, his son, who was driving the car; Harry Kopp of 1017 7th street northwest, and his son, LeRoy Kopp, fourteen years of age, who were in the car, narrowly escaped a similar fate.

The body of the elder Ferguson was taken to the morgue after the coroner had viewed it. His son went to Casualty Hospital in the ninth precinct patrol wagon. He was suffering from extreme nervousness and needed medical attention.

Mr. Kopp and his son suffered no hurt. They proceeded to their home.

Permission Given by Owner

Early in the evening Dr. Jesse Ramsburgh, who owned the car, was told by young Ferguson, who has acted as his chauffeur for nearly a year, that he had a prospective buyer for the auto. As the physician desired to dispose of the machine, he authorized the young man to take the prospective purchaser for a drive.

Ferguson told the physician he would also take his father. Ready consent was given to the arrangement.

Later Ferguson and his father called at the Kopp home in 7th street. In a few moments the quartet started out for the trial spin.

They rode about the principal thoroughfares of the northeast section of the city until shortly after 11 o'clock, when they drove the car down Florida avenue. They were on the west side of the avenue. Young Ferguson, who was at the wheel, started to make a turn into New York avenue.

Here the dense foliage of the trees casts a shadow on the sidewalk. It is believed that the chauffeur misjudged just where the curbing was located. He was sending the machine along at high speed, according to those who witnessed the accident. In a moment there was a crash as the big auto jumped the curbing and jammed into a tree.

Top Is Smashed In

Some who viewed the smash declared that the car skidded about 100 feet. As soon as it hit the tree the top was smashed in. The elder Ferguson was killed almost instantly.

The police of the second and ninth precinct stations were notified at once. Both patrol wagons went to the scene. The accident, however, had occurred in the territory of No. 9 precinct station.

Young Ferguson was in a dazed condition. He was taken to the hospital for treatment in the precinct wagon.

The body of his father was covered with a cloth, awaiting the arrival of the coroner before it was taken to the morgue.

The skull of the dead man was badly crushed by the top of the automobile as it was torn from its place.

Minnie Lewis, colored, who resides at 115 Florida avenue northwest, was sitting in front of her home when the accident occurred. Later she declared that the machine was going at a high rate of speed.

She said that it was going "very fast," while others said at last thirty-five miles an hour.

The other occupants of the car escaped injury. Mr. Kopp was riding in the rear seat with the elder Ferguson when they suddenly crashed into the tree, but escaped practically without a scratch.

Account Given by Harry Kopp

Harry Kopp gave a very clear account of the accident when seen last night.

"I was sitting in the rear seat with old Mr. Ferguson, and my son LeRoy was on the front seat with young Mr. Ferguson," he said. "We had been riding around the city for some time, and turned into Florida avenue from 13th street northeast.

When we reached New York avenue the machine was turned around the corner. The next thing I knew I was struck on the head.

"None of us were thrown out of the machine. I was only stunned for a short time

"Of course, I do not know how fast we were going, but I don't believe the speed was great."

Dr. Ramsburgh Gave Consent

When Dr. Jesse Ramsburgh was seen last night he said he felt deeply for young Ferguson, who has been in his employ since last August.

"I have every confidence in him" he said. "He is one of the best men I have ever had for a chauffeur. He is conscientious and never drinks.

"I am especially sorry for him in the sad accident to his father."

Dr. Ramsburgh said he gave the young man permission to show the car to Harry Kopp, a prospective purchaser, last night, and that young Ferguson told him he was going to take his father along for the ride. The physician readily assented, and thought nothing further of the matter until he was informed that his car was badly smashed in an accident.

Dr. Ramsburg said the car was a seven-seated touring twenty-five-hundred-dollar Wayne car, and that, from the information at hand, the rear wheel was smashed, as was the side and top.

Young Ferguson is about twenty-five years of age, his employer said, and has demonstrated his especial fitness for the position since the date of his employment.

Last Rites For The Dead

Funeral of William H. Ferguson Wednesday Afternoon

Arrangements have been made for the funeral of William H. Ferguson, who was killed Saturday night as result of an automobile accident at New York and Florida avenues, to take place from the home of his daughter, Mrs. E.M. Seaman, 817 8th street northeast, Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Osmun Ferguson, son of the deceased, who was operating the automobile at the time it ran into the tree and resulted in the fatality, has left the hospital. He is still suffering from nervous shock. He says he does not know at just what speed the automobile was running.

Coroner Nevitt gave permission for the removal of the body to an undertaking establishment, and it was taken there instead of to the morgue.

An examination of the body by the coroner disclosed a fracture of the skull, but no injury to the neck. The nose was broken, and the fracture was so severe that particles of the skull had been pushed against the brain.

A certificate of accidental death was given.

Ferguson. On Wednesday morning, December 12, 1900 at 7:45, Capt. William P. Ferguson, aged 84. Funeral Friday at 2 p.m. from his late residence, 1007 South Carolina avenue southeast. Interment private.

The Evening Star, December 15, 1900, p. 6

Funeral of Capt. Ferguson

The funeral of Capt. William P. Ferguson took place yesterday afternoon from his late residence, 1007 South Carolina avenue southwest, the services being conducted by Rev. J.W. Gray of the First M.P. Church and Rev. A. Norman Ward of the North Carolina Avenue M.P. Church. The interment was made at Congressional cemetery.

The deceased was 84 years of age. He was born on Georgia avenue near 4th street east and resided in the eastern part of the city all his life, spending a number of years in the navy yard as clerk in the engineer's office. He was captain of a company in the three months' service in 1861, and served in the same grade in the 3d Maryland Regiment. During Mayor Wallach's administration of city affairs he was a member of the common council of the city. As a youth he attended the Methodist Protestant Sunday school and as a man he was a member of the First Church up to the date of his death--over half a century. His wife died several years ago, as also his son, Samuel T., who was a minister of the Maryland conference of the M.P. Church. Three sons--John B., J. Rufus and David A.--and two daughters--Miss R.H. Ferguson and Mrs. W.P. Westwood--survive him.

In his address at the funeral Dr. Gray briefly sketched the life of the deceased, noting that in a modest, unassuming manner, whether in leading his company on the field of battle or in the more quiet walks of life, he conscientiously performed his duty.

Found Dead In Kitchen By Younger Brother
Suicide of Harry M. Ferris by Inhaling Illuminating Gas
Harry M. Ferris, an upholsterer, thirty years of age, living at 1226 6th street southwest, inhaled illuminating gas early this morning and was found dead in the kitchen of his home by a younger brother.
The odor of gas was detected by the younger brother about 5:30 o'clock. He traced it to the kitchen. He turned off the gas at once, opened the door and summoned assistance.
Dr. Newton responded from the Emergency Hospital. He was told that the case was very urgent, and the driver urged his horse all the way from the hospital. When the physician reached the house, however, he found that life had been extinct some time.
Returned Home Early This Morning
Ferris was at home at dinner time yesterday. He left the house early in the evening, leaving his widowed mother and younger brother at home. It is thought he returned home about 1 o'clock this morning. Those in the house heard him when he entered, and supposed he would retire.
Instead of going to bed he went to the kitchen and seated himself near a table on which rested a small gas stove. He disconnected the tube, placed the end of it in his mouth and turned on the flow of gas. When he became unconscious the tube dropped from his mouth.
The police of the fourth precinct made an investigation of the suicide. Later Coroner Nevitt had a jury view the body at the house, and the testimony was afterward taken. A verdict in accordance with the facts was returned, and an undertaker was summoned.

Fielding, William d. 6 Dec 1894 33 yrs. R15/155

Fielding. On December 6, 1894, William Fielding, aged 33 years. Funeral Sunday, 2 p.m., at 834 7th street northeast.

The Evening Star, December 7, 1894

The Third Victim

Fielding, Who Fell at City Post Office, is Dead

There was a slight return of the Burst of Energy at the post office site today, and fifty-two men were employed. The reason was that work was resumed on the iron handling, and several beams were set in the space around the central tower. These men have within them the possibility to finish the building by the 23d of August, 1897, according to the lavish estimates of The Star made at the beginning of the scrutiny that has been made of the work. But this is too absurdly generous to be worth more than passing consideration.

William Fielding, the mortar mixer who fell yesterday morning and fractured his skull, as told in The Star of last evening, died at the Emergency Hospital at 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon. His death has cast a gloom over the building, as he was one of the most intelligent and popular workmen employed there. He was a sober, industrious man, and great sympathy is felt for his wife and family of four small children, who are left without a bread winner by this sad accident.

This is the third fatal casualty at the site within two months. One man, who had received severe injuries in the Chilean riot while a sailor on the U.S.S. Baltimore fell a short distance and died from the shock. Another man who had just come from Chicago to work on the stone setting was crushed under a massive granite block that fell when the steel dog on the engine ratchet broke. Fielding is the third victim.

Edward T. Findley, thirteen years of age, whose parents live at 1329 W street northwest, received a fatal injury Saturday afternoon, while playing a game of baseball on a lot near his home with a number of companions. He accidentally collided with another player, and his death occurred yesterday. Saturday afternoon about 3 o'clock the boy left his home to engage in the game. He was shortstop on his nine, and was standing near the base line when one of the boys on the opposing team ran against him, the latter trying to score a run at the time. The heads of the boys bumped together with force enough to fracture the skull of the Findley boy, and as stated, this caused his death.
Coroner Nevitt made an investigation and gave a certificate of accidental death.

The Evening Star, October 18, 1875

Sudden Death from Debility

Randall Fish, an old man, while being removed from a dining saloon, near the depot of the Baltimore and Potomac railroad to the Washington Asylum Hospital, Saturday, died in the ambulance, and a post mortem examination was held by Conner Patterson, who decided that he died of senile debility. Deceased was a native of Maine, and it is said was at one time high sheriff of Kennebec, Knox and Lincoln counties of that state. He has been engaged in the sale of a fertilizer in this vicinity for some time past.

The Evening Star, October 20, 1875

The remains of Capt. Randall Fish, who died so suddenly on last Saturday evening were, on account of his having been a member of the Masonic fraternity, interred in the grand lodge ground of the Congressional cemetery yesterday afternoon. The Rev. Mr. Steele, of St. Mark's Episcopal church officiated, Capt. Fish at one time was quite wealthy, being a director of a bank in New York city and president of gold mining and lumber companies in Virginia. He led an active business life for almost three score years and ten. He was a man of quick perceptive faculties, and was the author of many useful inventions.

Due to Heart Disease
Mrs. Catherine Fisher Found Dead in Her Home
A policeman was summoned to the house of Mrs. Catherine Fisher, in the rear of 2001 Brightwood avenue, about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, where the sole occupant of the shanty, Catherine Fisher, apparently dropped dead while she was dressing. She had not been seen about the neighborhood since Sunday and one of her neighbors went to the house yesterday to inquire about her health. Much to her surprise she found the woman's dead body in the room.
Coroner Nevitt went to the house and made an investigation. He gave a certificate of death from heart disease. Mrs. Fisher was the widow of a soldier and drew a pension of $8 a month. She was sixty-six years old and had lived in the shanty where she died for a number of years.

Fitzhugh, Alexander The National Intelligencer, January 23, 1841 Died at his father's residence, near Bladensburg, Prince George's county, Md. on the 15th instant, in the 27th year of his age, Mr. Alexander H. Fitzhugh. The deceased, although suddenly cut down in the very flower of his youth, with a career of usefulness and honor just dawning upon him, had secured the confidence and esteem of a large number of friends. He possessed a noble and generous disposition, keenly alive to the wants and the happiness of others, and singularly regardless of self. By the urbanity and suavity of his manners, and the frankness and uniformity of his deportment, he found an easy access to the hearts of all who were capable of appreciating those endearing and estimable qualities. Dutiful and affectionate as a son, ardent and devoted as a brother, candid and confiding as a friend, he was beloved in life, and is now tenderly mourned in death. The void which this heavy bereavement has made in the domestic circle must long be felt; and the only consolation which can soothe the bosom thus bleeding and wounded is the rich consolation of religion. Let us, therefore, who are sorrowing over the grave of a son, brother, and friend, who went down to the grave with the prayer of penitence upon his lips, endeavor to realize the blessings of affliction, and so live under its sanctifying influence that we may be always prepared to die. Death of An Aged Indian Agent

The Intelligencer of this morning has the following:

"The veteran and venerable Thomas Fitzpatrick, Indian Agent for the Upper Arkansas, Platte Indians, who has been some weeks in Washington on business connected with his agency, died yesterday morning at Brown's hotel of pneumonia. We presume his age must have been approaching seventy years. Mr. Fitzpatrick was a valued servant of the Indian Department and possessed more influence with the wild denizens of the great plains than perhaps any other white man."

THOMAS FITZPATRICK

The National Intelligencer, February 15, 1854

Major Tomas Fitzpatrick

The late Major Thomas Fitzpatrick, whose death was announced a few days since, had been for many years in the employment of the Government as Indian agent in the remote West, and one of the most active, faithful, and competent persons engaged in that arduous service. He went first to the Rocky Mountains in 1823, attached to the expedition of Gen. Ashley, and ever since that time has been occupied in the Indian country, either as trader, explorer, or agent. In 1843, on account of his knowledge of the West and acquaintance and influence with the Indian tribes, he was engaged by Mr. Fremont to accompany him in the capacity of guide in his second great expedition. This long and perilous exploration extended from the frontiers of Missouri, by way of the Great Salt Lakes, to the Great Forks of the Columbia, and hence to Fort Vancouver, connecting with the surveys of the sea expedition under Capt. Wilkes; thence, by the Tlamath Lake, in Oregon, and skirting the eastern side of the Sierra Nevada, or great Californian Snowy Mountains, down to latitude 38°, solving the problem of a vast interior basin, unconnected by water with either ocean; thence across the mountains to Sutter's Fort, in the valley of the Sacramento; thence up the valley of San Joaquin and the Tulares, turning the "point" of the Sierra, to the head of the Mohave River; thence, skirting the southern rim of the Great Basin and the southern shores of the Great Salt Lake, back to Saint Louis. Mr. Fitzpatrick continued with the expedition through the whole route. In the course of so long a travel it frequently became necessary to divide the party, sometimes for the purpose of pursuing different routes, sometimes for an advance to push forward and reconnoiter. In such cases the command of that portion from which the leader of the expedition was separated was always assigned to Fitzpatrick. Thus he led a portion of the party in charge of the heavier baggage and provisions from a point above the mouth of the Kansas to St. Vrain's Fort, and thence to the Great Salt Lake; justifying then, as on still more trying occasions, the confidence in his high qualities which led to his selection for the purpose. The junctions of the two divisions at these points respectively are thus noticed, under the proper dates, in the sententious memoir of Mr. Fremont:

"Reaching St. Vrain's Fort on the morning of the 23d, (July, 1843,) we found Mr. Fitzpatrick and his party in good order and excellent health, and my true and reliable friend Kit Carson, who had brought with him ten good mules, with the necessary pack-saddles. Mr. Fitzpatrick, who had often endured every extremity of want during the course of his mountain life, and knew well the value of provisions in this country, had watched over our stock with jealous vigilance, and there was an abundance of flour, rice, sugar, and coffee in the camp, and again we fared luxuriously. Mr. Fitzpatrick had been here a week, during which time his men had been occupied in refitting the camp."

At Salt Lake the other branch of the party had arrived first and his coming was looked for with much anxiety. Says Mr. Fremont's report, under date of September 13, 1843:

"The people to-day were rather low-spirited, hunger making them very quiet and peaceable. It was time for the men with an expected supply of provisions to be in the neighborhood, and the gun was fired at evening to give them notice of our locality, but met with no response."

The next day, however, after an early encampment--

"Tabeau galloped into camp with the news that Mr. Fitzpatrick was encamped close by us with a good supply of provisions--flour, rice, dried meat, and even a little butter. Excitement to-night made us all wakeful; and, after a breakfast before sunrise the next morning, we were again on the road."

It was not always, however, with visions of plenty that Fitzpatrick's command was looked for by those travel-worn, and often nearly famished pioneers in the desolate regions which they penetrated. In the terrible passage of the Snowy Mountains, in mid-winter, when the whole party so nearly perished of cold and hunger, Fitzpatrick was one of the most active, useful, and intrepid of the party; at the commencement of the passage aiding Mr. Fremont in the advance reconnaissance's, and afterwards entrusted with the bringing up the rear and passing the remaining horses and mules of the expedition.

The ascent of the out-spurs of the mountains commenced on the 25th of January, 1844. On the night of the 26th the advance party, with Fremont and Fitzpatrick, encamped at an elevation above the sea 6,310 feet.

"January 27--Leaving the camp (says Fremont) to follow slowly, with directions to Carson to encamp at the place agreed on, Mr. Fitzpatrick and myself continued the reconnaissance's. . . . On either side rose the mountains, forming on the left a rugged nucleus, wholly covered with deep snow, presenting a glittering and icy surface. . . . Towards the summit of the peak the fields of snow were four or five feet deep on the northern side. The winter day is short in the mountains, the sun having but a short space of sky to travel over in the visible part above our horizon; and the moment his rays are gone the air is keenly cold. The interest of our work had detained us long, and it was after nightfall when we reached the camp."

The next day the party went through the pass with much difficulty, and often compelled to make large circuits, and ascend the highest and most exposed ridges, in order to avoid snow, which in other places was banked up to a great depth. On the 29th the way became so full of difficulties that they were compelled to leave their only piece of ordnance--a mountain howitzer which had made the whole journey with them to that point, but which it was found impossible to drag further up the rugged and snow-covered acclivities. The following day the advance division met a small party of Indians.

"We explained to them (says the report) that we were endeavoring to find a passage across the mountains, and told them that we wished them to bring us a guide, to whom we would give presents of scarlet cloth and other articles which we showed to them. They looked at the reward we offered, and conferred with each other, but pointed to the snow on the mountain, and drew their hand across their necks, and raised them above their heads, to show the depth; and signified that it was impossible for us to get through."

The melancholy prospect did not, however, prevent the intrepid expedition from turning their faces determinately westward, and on the 31st they came full in view of the great central ridge which they were to cross, the "lower parts steep, and dark with pines, while above it was hidden in clouds of snow." At the camp that evening a council was held again with the Indians, who made like representations of the impossibility of the party scaling the snowy heights before them; but finally consented to furnish a young man for a guide who had once been to the other side. The provisions were very low--neither tallow nor grease of any kind nor salt remaining. In this condition the party silently and thoughtfully set their faces toward the main chain in the beginning of February. The snow deepened rapidly, and it soon became necessary to break a road. For this purpose a party of ten was formed mounted on the strongest horses; each man in succession opening the road on foot or on horseback until himself and his horse became fatigued, when he stepped aside; and, the remaining number passing ahead, he took his station in the rear. In this laborious manner they made sixteen miles on the 2d of February and only seven miles on the 3d. On the 4th they were obliged to abandon the hollows altogether, and work along the steep mountain side, where the snow was covered with an icy crust.

In the afternoon, endeavoring to break a road through a pass which the guide indicated, their best horses gave out. Only a few of the strongest had been able to draw themselves up the hill without their packs; and all the line of the road from the camp of the previous night was strewn with camp stores and equipage and horses foundering in the snow. That night they camped without shelter, and a strong wind springing up at sundown made it too intensely cold to permit sleep. The following morning their Indian guide deserted, after receiving a further donation of a blanket from their scanty store. It was then determined by Mr. Fremont to explore the country ahead; and on the morning of the 6th he set out, accompanied with Fitzpatrick and a small reconnoitering party on snow shoes. They marched in single-file, trampling the snow as heavily as they could, and at a distance of ten miles reached the top of one of the peaks, whence they could see the coast range, which was immediately recognized by Carson, and they knew that between them and that range lay the valley which was the paradise of repose and plenty which they had in view. But they were at a great height above the valley, and between it and the plains stretched "miles of snowy fields and broken ridges of pine-covered mountains." Late in the day they turned toward the camp. One of the men became fatigued and his feet began to freeze. Fitzpatrick remained with him till his clothes could be dried and he was in a condition to go on. After a toilsome march of twenty miles the party straggled into camp one after another at nightfall. Here it was determined to draw the baggage over the trail which had thus been made in sleighs, which the men during the day had been making; and it was thought that after the men and sleighs had passed the path would be hard enough to bear the animals. With one party drawing sleighs Fremont advanced that night four miles along the trail, Fitzpatrick remaining behind to form an intermediate station between the advance camp and the animals, which were still in the rear. The night was bitter cold, and provisions were getting "fearfully scant." The advance made but, a mile and a half that day; and a snow-storm threatening, which would destroy the road made through so much population, the men were sent back to Fitzpatrick, with directions to bring on the animals in the morning. February 9 the snow kept them in camp, and four sleighs came up with the bedding of the men. They suffered much from want of salt, and all were getting weak from insufficient food. February 10 and 11 they made a few miles, but high wind continued, with drifts of snow, and the trail had become nearly invisible; and in the evening a message was received from Fitzpatrick of the failure of the attempt to get the horses over the snow. The half-hidden trail had proved too weak to support them, and they had broken through, and were plunging about or lying half-buried in the snow. Here, then, was the point where the last degree of resolution and courage were necessary to save the desperate fortunes of the party. The instructions sent back to Fitzpatrick were to return the horses to their last pasture grounds, and then, with all the force of the party, after having made shovels and mauls, to open and beat a road through the snow, strengthening it with the boughs of the pines. Fremont's journal continues:

"February 12--We made mauls, and worked hard at our end of the road all the day. We worked down the face of the hill to meet the people at the other end. Towards sundown it began to grow cold, and we shouldered our mauls and trudged back to camp."

In this manner the parties worked at either end till a solid road was made for the animals to pass to the summit. The subsistence of the party during these days consisted of a small portion of dried peas, with mule and horse meat, obtained by killing those animals when too much exhausted and famished to travel further.

The descent and passage through the deep fields of snow and long intervening space of rough mountains promised to be scarcely less laborious and hazardous than the ascent. They labored down the mountain in much the same manner as they had ascended, and on the 25th of February, believing that the difficulties of the way were passed, Fremont, with a party of eight, started ahead to proceed as rapidly as possible to Sutter's land returning to his famishing companions with a supply of provisions and fresh animals; Fitzpatrick remaining with the body of the party to follow slowly. This part of the journey proved more difficult than was expected, and it was not till the evening of the 6th of March that the little band found themselves in the hospitable precincts of Capt. Sutter. Here they were received with the frank and cordial reception that so many emigrant parties have since received at the hands of that gentleman, and they enjoyed a night of rest, enjoyment, and refreshment. But the party left in the mountains with Fitzpatrick were to be attended to; and the next morning, supplied with fresh horses and provisions, they hurried off to meet them. Fremont relates their encounter:

"On the second day we met, a few miles below the Rio de los Americanos; and a more forlorn and pitiable-looking sight than they presented cannot well be imagined. They were all on foot; each man weak and emaciated, leading a horse as weak and emaciated as themselves. They had experienced great difficulties in descending the mountains, made slippery by rains and descending snows, and many horses fell over precipices and were killed, and with some of them were lost the packs they carried. Among them was a mule with the plants we had gathered since leaving Fort Hall, along a line of two thousand miles travel. Out of sixty-seven horses and mules with which we commenced crossing the Sierra, only thirty-three reached the valley of the Sacramento, and they only in a condition to be led along. Mr. Fitzpatrick and his party, traveling more slowly, had been able to make some exertion at hunting, and had killed a few deer. This scanty supply was a great relief to them; for several of them had been made sick by the strange and unwholesome food which the preservations of life compelled them to use. We stopped and encamped as soon as we met; and a repast of good beef, excellent bread, and delicious salmon which I had brought along were their first relief from the sufferings of the Sierra, and their first introduction to the luxuries of the Sacramento.

After the return of Fitzpatrick from his expedition, he received the appointment of Indian Agent in the far West from President Polk, and continued in the same employment, to the entire satisfaction of the Government, through each succeeding Administration till the time of his sudden death. A letter written to a friend a few days before his decease concludes with this sentence: "Ever since I had the honor of belonging to the Indian Department I have done my utmost endeavor to serve it faithfully and honestly." He was known throughout the Indian country by the name of the "Broken Hand," from the circumstance of one of his hands having been wounded by the explosion of a powder flask.

Fitzpatrick was born in the county of Caran, Ireland. He came to the United States in 1818, and since 1823 has been known and famed as a "Rocky Mountain man." He died at the age of fifty-six. His memory is worthy of that respect and honor which belongs to one who has fulfilled all the duties to which he was called with an intelligent mind, and a courageous, intrepid, and loyal spirit.

"Fleet foot on the corral,
Sage head in the cumber,
Red hand in the foray,
How sound is thy slumber!"

Death of a Venerable Scientist

Mr. Charles Louis Fleischmann, aged 84 years, died yesterday at his rooms in Meyer's Hotel, where he has been living for the past twenty years. Mr. Fleischmann was prominent some years ago as a scientific investigator. He was born in Bavaria and was connected with the Patent Office as early as 1839. He assisted Prof. Morse in his early experiments with the telegraph, and in 1847 he was sent abroad by the government to investigate the practicability of improving the breed of sheep in this country by importation. He held the position of consul at Stuttgart, and in 1855 he was a member of the international jury of the Paris exposition. He has published a number of articles on literary, economic and scientific subjects. By many who are familiar with the history of the first experiments with telegraphy, Mr. Fleischman is credited with doing much toward inducing Congress to take hold of the matter. It was his success in interesting eminent men in Europe in the telegraph, it is said, that awoke people in this country to a realization of the fact that a new and great engine of civilization had been produced. Mr. Fleischman is survived by only one member of his family, his daughter Amelie, who recently returned from Europe. The funeral takes place from Meyer's Hotel at 4:30 o'clock today. The remains will be buried in the Congressional Cemetery.

Death Due to Suffocation

Eleanora Fleishman, seven months old, died yesterday at the home of her parents, 122 E street southeast. Her death was due to suffocation, the child having turned on her face and did not have strength enough to get in a position which would enable her to get air enough to save her life. Coroner Nevitt made an investigation and gave the necessary certificate of death.

Mrs. Sarah A. Fletcher Succumbs at Age of 90

Mrs. Sarah A. Fletcher, 90 years of age, one of Washington's oldest native-born residents, a witness of and participant in many local historic events, died Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. M. Melvius Toner, 634 F street northeast. Funeral services were held this afternoon at the Church of the Nativity, Fourteenth street and Massachusetts avenue southeast. Interment was in Congressional Cemetery.

Mrs. Fletcher was born in old Southeast Washington and for many years was a tireless worker at Christ Episcopal Church, near her home on Ninth street southeast.

During the Civil War she was active in aiding the wounded, bringing many injured during the Battle of Bull Run, or Manassas, back to her home and nursing them to health. At the close of the war her home on Ninth street southeast was used as headquarters for the review of the troops of Gen. Sherman.

Mrs. Fletcher was the widow of William Archibald Fletcher, who was well known in social and political life of older Washington. He was commissioner of the sixth ward of the District during the administrations of Mayor Wallach and Mayor Emery.

Surviving Mrs. Fletcher are six children--Mrs. Elvie Clark, Mrs. I.F. Jones, Mrs. I. Britt, Mrs. Franzoni Myers, Mrs. L.O. Fletcher and Mrs. M. Melvius Toner--as well as many grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Civil War Nurse Buried As 4 Generations Mourn

Mrs. Sarah A. Fletcher, 91, Cared for Soldiers at Battles of Bull Run--

One of the Oldest Native-Born Washington Residents

With great-great-grandchildren standing in line of mourners, Mrs. Sarah A. Fletcher, 91 years old, 634 F street northeast, was laid to final rest yesterday in a grave in Congressional Cemetery. Mrs. Fletcher was a civil war nurse and one of the oldest native-born Washington residents.

For more than fourscore years, Mrs. Fletcher resided in the Southeast section and only in recent years took up her residence in the Northeast. She was of the Episcopal faith and until her death was active in church work. To her efforts principally was attributed the building of the Christ Church parish hall, on G between Sixth and Seventh streets southeast.

During the civil war she was active day and night, administering to the wounded. When the battles of Bull Run were fought, Mrs. Fletcher was on the scene and took many of the wounded to her home, nursing a majority of them back to health. At the close of the war, her residence in Ninth street near G southeast was the headquarters for the review of Gen. Sherman's men.

Her husband, the late Archibald Fletcher, was well known in the city. He was commissioner of the Sixth ward of the District during the administrations of Mayors Wallach and Emory, during the days when Washingtonians voted. Mrs. Fletcher died at her home Saturday morning.

The Rev. Enoch M. Thompson, rector of the Chapel of the Nativity, Massachusetts avenue and Fourteenth street southeast, where Mrs. Fletcher worshiped in the late years of her life, officiated at services there. Six members of her immediate family, five daughters and a son survive her. They are: Mrs. Elvie Clark, Mrs. I.F. Jones, Mrs. I. Britt, Mrs. F. Myers, Mrs. M.M. Toner and L.O. Fletcher, all of this city.

Death of William Flinn

Mr. William Flinn died this morning at his residence, 120 C street northwest, in the seventy-sixth year of his age, having been born in Westmoreland county, Pa., in 1818. For many years he was prominent in the political and social circles of the middle Atlantic states. After completing his education he entered the newspaper business and at the age of twenty-five was editor of the Pittsburg Aurora. Subsequently he came to Washington and entered the departmental service, where he remained for some years. He was the warm personal friend of James Buchanan, who appointed him his private secretary when he was elected to the presidency. Afterwards he was the agent of the United States navy in this city, and more recently held a position in the State Department. He had a wide acquaintance among the men who have been prominent in the United States during the last fifty years, and enjoyed intimate relations of friendship with the late James G. Blaine. Mr. Flinn married a sister of the wife of John C. Rives, the publisher of the Congressional Globe. His widow with one daughter survives him, and he also leaves a sister, Mrs. Harriet McCurdy.

The Body of Daniel J. Flynn Found in the Eastern Branch

Mr. Daniel J. Flynn, a clerk in the Land Office, on Monday last attended the Mexican Veterans' excursion to Marshall Hall, and on returning to the city was last seen alive about midnight on Monday night at Christman's restaurant, from when he started for his home, in Uniontown, where his wife and family reside. He did not reach home, however, nor was he seen alive afterwards. This morning, about 8 ½ o'clock, Mr. Frank Payne, clerk for Mr. Wm. Guinand, wood and coal dealer, at the foot of 3d street southeast, discovered a body floating off the wharf, and Mr. Guinand had it brought in, when it was discovered to be the body of Mr. Flynn. Sergeant Pierce took charge of the remains, and placing Officer Loane in charge, notified the family. Dr. J.P. Hartigan, acting coroner, viewed the body and ordered its removal to the 8th precinct station. There was found on the body his watch and chain; the watch stopped at 1:03 o'clock, showing probably the hour he fell into the water. There was also his seal ring on his finger, and a pocket book in his pockets containing some small change, as also some private papers, which would tend to show that if there was any foul play at all, it was not for the valuables upon his person. The body was much swollen and disfigured by bruises, but these may have been caused by floating against the rocks. Owing to some suspicions being expressed by his friends (including some members of Franklin Lodge, No. 2, Knights of Pythias, of which he was a member,) Dr. Hartigan determined to make a post mortem examination and ordered a jury to be summoned for this afternoon. Mr. Kennedy, secretary of the Mexican Veterans' Association, said he was talking with the deceased on the trip up the Potomac, and he was perfectly sober.

The Drowning of Mr. D.J. Flynn

The Coroner's Inquest

Yesterday afternoon, Dr. J.F. Hartigan, acting coroner, held an inquest at the eighth precinct station on the body of Mr. D.J. Flynn, which was found in the Eastern Branch yesterday morning, as stated in the STAR last evening. Mr. George Brown was the foreman of the jury. Mr. Victor Beyer testified that as he was coming over the Maryland bridge on Monday night with a wagon load of vegetables he met two men who turned their heads so as to prevent their faces being seen. Messrs. Hancock, Vickers, and Murdock, shipkeepers on the U.S. vessels at the navy yard, testified to hearing a splash in the water on Tuesday morning about one o'clock, and from the noise judged the body must have struck the water at full length.

Geo. Dent testified that he was drunk on Monday night and laid down near the city end of the bridge; it was between 12 and 1 o'clock, as he thought, when he saw two men or boys walk on the bridge, and when they got about twenty-five yards out one attempted to throw the other overboard; heard the splash in the water, but thought the party who went overboard got ashore.

Mrs. McClary, residing at the corner of 8th and M streets southeast, testified that she heard three men coming down 8th street about 12:45 o'clock on Tuesday morning. They stopped at the corner and commenced talking about lodges, grips, etc.; two of the men turned back and went up 8th street, and one remained at the corner. After a short time some other man came and took the one on the corner away towards the bridge.

W.H. Mockabee testified that he met deceased about 12 o'clock on Monday night at Christman's restaurant; had some conversation with him, and they drank together. John Soper testified to being with Mockabee at the time.

Dr. Hartigan stated that he had made an examination of the body, and that it presented no marks of violence, and that he was satisfied that the deceased made no efforts to save himself after he got in the water; the he was insensible from drink or the concussion of the fall, and was drowned before reason returned.

The jury returned a verdict: "That the deceased, Daniel J. Flynn, came to his death between the hours of 12 and 2 o'clock a.m., September 15, 1874, from accidental drowning near the Navy Yard bridge, city of Washington."

The deceased was a native of Dublin, Ireland, was about 33 years of age, and a clerk in the General Land Office. He was a member of Franklin Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and leaves a wife and three children residing in Uniontown. His funeral will take place this afternoon.

The Evening Star, September 19, 1874

The funeral of Mr. Daniel J. Flynn, who was drowned in the Eastern branch on Monday night took place from his late residence in Uniontown, yesterday afternoon and was attended by a large number of friends, including many of his fellow clerks from the General Land Office and Franklin Lodge No. 2, Knights of Pythias in citizens dress and without music (by request of the family). The funeral services were conducted by Rev. A.B. Atkins of St. Johns P.E. Church, Georgetown and Rev. Arthur Steel of St. Mark's Church, Capitol Hill. At the grave in Congressional Cemetery, Mr. Richard Emmons of Franklin Lodge, read the burial service of the Pythian order.

Takes His Own Life
Policeman Flynn Sends a Bullet Through His Brain
Ill-Health The Cause
Coroner Expresses Opinion That His Mind Was Diseased
Had Been Injured By A Fall

Stepped From a Rapidly Moving Car and Was Thrown to the Ground
Police Court attaches and others whose business calls them to the police temple of justice were greatly shocked this morning when the announcement was made that Policeman Michael J. Flynn, who had been for years on duty at the building, had committed suicide. The officer shot himself this morning about 5:30 o'clock at his home, 27 N street northwest, while he was lying upon his bed, the bullet entering his right temple and passing through his head, lodging in the wall. Coroner Nevitt, who had been acquainted with the policeman for nearly twenty years, made a careful investigation of the affair and gave a certificate of death from a self-inflicted wound. Dr. Nevitt was of the opinion, however, that the policeman was not in his right mind at the time he fired the shot, and so stated in the certificate.

Ill health and an injury the policeman received yesterday are the reasons assigned for the deed. Yesterday afternoon, while on his way home from court, he stepped from a moving car and was thrown down and rendered unconscious. He soon regained consciousness, however, and when taken home he seemed to have fully recovered from the effects of the fall, but had no recollection of what had occurred. The street car incident happened on New York avenue, almost directly in front of the policeman's home. It is said he stepped from the car when the vehicle was running at the rate of about fifteen miles an hour.

Policeman Smith Gives Aid
Crossing Policeman Smith, who does duty at North Capitol street and New York avenue, was the first one to reach the unconscious man. He summoned assistance and had him taken to his home. Mrs. Flynn was not at the house at that time, and a colored man was directed to look after the injured man.

"There's nothing the matter with me," the big policeman declared when he reached the house. But Crossing Policeman Smith noticed that he had sustained an injury to his head, and he feared serious trouble might result.

The crossing policeman returned to the house after he had prepared a report of the accident and noting Flynn's condition had Dr. Ball called. Mrs. Flynn returned home shortly afterward and was informed of her husband's injury. The couple moved to the house only three days ago and the accident was the second one he had been in since that time. Following the shooting this morning Flynn recalled numerous sick spells he had experienced during the past ten years, the last one being about three months ago, when he had to undergo an operation for a growth on his head.

"People have told me that his mind seemed to have undergone a change," said Mrs. Flynn to a Star reporter this morning, "but I never suspected that he would take his life. It is such a terrible thing."

Policeman Flynn did not go out of the house last night, following the call of the physician. His fall last night had stopped his watch, and having been recently moved to the N street house, the clocks had not been started, and the members of the family were unable to tell the time this morning when they awoke.

Fatal Shot Fired

It was about 4:30 o'clock when they had a conversation about the time and the wife suggested that they should take another nap. This was agreed to by the husband, but about an hour later they were again awake. The husband was partly dressed when his wife left the room to attend to some household duties, and when she passed the small stand in the room, in a drawer of which her husband had kept his revolver, she noticed that the drawer was partly open.

"What have you done with your pistol?" the wife asked.

"I have it," was the response. "Now that we live farther away from court," he added, "I am going to carry it to work."

"Run on downstairs and get breakfast," he added good-naturedly, not betraying the slightest indication that he intended to end his life.

Mrs. Flynn closed the door and went to the bath room, hardly reaching there before she heard the report of the weapon. Turning, she went back to the room to ascertain the cause of the noise, and was met by their pet dog, which had been frightened by the noise and was leaving the room. The wife glanced into the room and observed that blood was streaming from a frightful wound in her husband's head. She quickly summoned a neighbor, Private James A. Sullivan of No. 6 Engine Company. Later the police were summoned, and Policemen McGrath and Brady remained at the house until the arrival of the coroner.

Native of Massachusetts

During the time "Mike" Flynn, as he was known, was connected with the police force he made a host of friends, and he always had a pleasant word to say to them. Many of his friends called today to express sympathy with the bereaved wife. Even the unfortunate prisoners who had been in the habit of getting arrested at intervals, always expected a pleasant word from the big-hearted policeman, and they were seldom disappointed. The deceased was a native of Massachusetts, where he was born March 3, 1858. He served ten years in the army as an artilleryman, spending part of the time in the west, part in New York, and concluding his service at Fortress Monroe. July 1, 1887, he went on duty as a policeman, being assigned to the 6th precinct under Lieut. Kelly. Later he was transferred to the 9th precinct, and still later he did duty in the 2d precinct, being detailed at the Police Court when he was no longer able to do active street duty.

It is recalled that while he was doing duty in the 6th precinct he suffered a severe attack of pneumonia. He was nursed through the illness by ladies living near the police station, his condition being such that it was impossible to remove him to his home. Shortly after his recovery Miss Thompson, one of those who had attended him as a nurse, became Mrs. Flynn, and they had lived happily together for seventeen years.

Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

Great Regret Expressed

The news of the death of Policeman Flynn reached the Police Court shortly after it occurred, and was the talk of every one. Every one seemed to have experienced a personal loss, and there were expressions of regret and sorrow for the policeman's death and praise for his work and his character. When the information reached Judge Kimball his honor said to a Star reporter:

"It is with the utmost sorrow that I hear of the news of Mr. Flynn's death. He was the most valuable officer who has been detailed to this court in many years. He had a lovable character, and every one around the court thought highly of him, as I did. I cannot help believing that he committed the deed in a fit of temporary insanity. I was talking with him yesterday and he seemed all right. His place will be hard to fill."

"Mr. Flynn was always attentive and faithful to duty," stated Judge Mallowny when he learned of the death of the veteran officer. "He had a knack of handling crowds. Everybody like him, and his place will be hard to fill. The court will not seem the same without his genial countenance."

Other officials of the court expressed the same sentiments, and the sorrow written on their faces showed the sincerity of their remarks.

His Quaint Methods

In many ways the officer was unique in his dealings with the public.

"Now, you boys move away from that lamp post; it can hold itself up without your help," he would shout at a group on the court house corner.

"Now, girls, move inside out of the sun, or the flowers on your bonnets will be wilted," were he usual orders to a group of women to be seen at intervals wearing shawls over their heads and standing on the sidewalk.

"Cases of cussing and swearing, vags, speakeasies, carrying concealed weapons, pistols, razors, toothpicks, button hooks," he would reply, when some one asked him about a certain case, "are tried in the District Court."

Flynn was a great sufferer in the past few years of his life. Rheumatism was his chief complaint in the past couple of years, and he would be on duty at times when he was hardly able to walk.

MEMORIAL TO CHARLES FORBES, LINCOLN'S ATTENDANT AND FRIEND

In life as in drama, the supporting cast is often key to the success of the leading actors. As recognized by the Lincoln Group of the District of Columbia, Mr. Charles Forbes, who was buried at Congressional Cemetery on October 12, 1895 without a memorial, was not only Mr. Lincoln's personal attendant (from 1861 until Lincoln's assassination in 1865) but also a valued friend of the President and his family.

On November 12, 1983, the Lincoln Group unveiled a memorial at the graves of Mr. Forbes and his wife. The handsome ceremony, attended by over fifty people, was marked by an address by His Excellency Tadhg O'Sullivan, Ambassador of the Republic of Ireland to the United States, by music of Lincoln's era played on historic instruments by the Fourth Maryland Patuxent Brass Band, and by refreshments served in the Chapel. Mr. Forbes was born in Ireland in 1836 and emigrated to the United States as a boy. He was in attendance on Lincoln at Ford's Theater on the night Booth assassinated the President.

Personal aide Charles Forbes carried the ever present heavy plaid shawl Lincoln favored, winter or summer. Closest to the door of box eight, Forbes was seated on a straight chair.

As the two men (Parker and Burns) passed through the theatre doors on their way to Taltavul's Star Saloon, they saw Forbes who had left the Presidential party alone in the box. Forbes joined Parker and Burns at the bar.

Forbes was President Lincoln's valet. He was called Charlie by President Lincoln and "my friend Charles" by Mrs. Lincoln. Forbes was detailed to the White House as a clerk-messenger from the Treasury Department. Because of his discretion and versatility in handling details, he soon became the personal attendant to the president.

Forbes accompanied the Lincolns to Ford's Theatre on the fateful night of April 14. He was sitting in the audience just outside the presidential box as Booth passed him and the unattended post where a policeman was supposed to be stationed. Forbes regretted afterward that possibly there was something he could have done to stop the assassination. Mrs. Lincoln bore him no ill will and showed him only kindness and friendship. She gave Forbes the suit of clothes President Lincoln wore that night.

Death of Dr. C.M. Ford
 D. Charles M. Ford, whose illness has been announced in The Star, died last evening at 6:40 o'clock, at his home, corner of Pennsylvania avenue and 2d street southeast, Dr. Ford was taken sick on the 23d of January with rheumatic fever, and was attended by Drs. Busey Hagner, Dunn and J. Ford Thompson. Dr. Ford was born at Troy, N.Y., in 1840, and graduated in medicine at the University of Pennsylvania in 1861. He came at once to this city as assistant surgeon of a New Jersey regiment, and soon afterwards was made surgeon in charge of the Old Capitol prison, which position he held till the close of the war. He was for many years a member of the medical board of Providence hospital, and at the time of his death was the surgeon for the B. and P. railroad here. He built up a large practice, which was not by any means confined to his neighborhood. He stood high in the Masonic fraternity, and was an active friend and an honorary member of all the military organizations in the city. He leaves a widow and two children.

The Late Dr. C.M. Ford
 The Medical Society of the District Saturday evening adopted appropriate resolutions representing the death of Dr. C.M. Ford. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, from the Church of the Reformation, Capitol Hill. Dr. Ford, after his graduation from the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, in 1861, was commissioned assistant surgeon, U.S.N., and appointed to the steamer Huntsville, at that time one of the blockading fleet, Gulf of Mexico. Remaining in the navy about one year he resigned, returned to Troy, N.Y., his native place, and married Miss Hattie A. Ives, daughter of a prominent gentleman living nearer that city. A few weeks later he came to Washington and was at once commissioned assistant surgeon, U.S.A., and assigned to duty at Clifftown hospital, whence, after a faithful service of nine months, he was transferred as surgeon in charge of the old capitol prison, where he remained until the prison was abolished after the close of the war. Resigning his commission in the army he located on Capitol Hill, and was engaged in practice there until the date of his last illness.

A Serious Shooting Affair

Columbus Fearson Dangerously Wounds Young John Ford

A Georgetown Tragedy Caused by the Unlawful Attentions of Two Men to One Woman

Columbus Fearson, a white man 64 years of age, shot and perhaps fatally wounded John L. Ford, a nineteen-year-old white boy, about 8 o'clock last evening, in Cissel's alley, between 32d, Potomac, Water and Grace streets. The affair grew out of the young man paying attention to a woman with whom Fearson was living. Two shots were fired, only one taking effect, striking the right side of the abdomen, passing through the bladder and lodging in the intestines, not far from the skin. Fearson did not attempt to escape after committing the crime, and a few minutes afterward was placed under arrest by Policeman Seymour.

Fearson, who is perhaps better known as Lum, has a wife and three children living, residing on 21st street near L street, but he has not lived at home for several years. For the past two months he has been living in Cissel's alley with Mrs. Lillie M. Cooper, the wife of an engineer on the U.S.S. Maine, a woman well known in that locality.

Ford and Mrs. Cooper have been quite intimate, it is alleged, and the frequent calls of the young man at the house were objected to by Fearson. On more than one occasion he had warned the young man to cease paying visits, but the warnings were unheeded. Only last Saturday the two had an altercation, in which, it is claimed by Fearson, Ford struck him with a stone. Sunday another warning was given, and by way of emphasis Fearson drew a pistol and threatened to shoot the boy if he showed up again. The young man stated that he would visit the house as often as he pleased, and he was carrying out this intention when shot.

The Fatal Visit

The visit which culminated yesterday in the shooting began as early as 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Ford called at the house, and is said to have remained with the woman until after 6 o'clock. He went home, and returned shortly before 8 o'clock. Having some hesitation about entering the place, fearing that Fearson was around, he stood on the outside of the house and whistled for the woman. Instead of seeing her, he saw her irate paramour, who raised a window, and drawing a revolver, fired two shots in rapid succession. Ford immediately sank to the ground, but partially recovering his strength, managed to drag himself to the front of the house, where he fell on the sidewalk unconscious. He was picked up a few minutes later by the police and was hurriedly driven to the Emergency Hospital. The sounds of the shots attracted quite a crowd to the scene, and many people present solemnly remarked that something had occurred which they had expected to see long before.

Mrs. Cooper, the woman over whom the shooting was caused, is about thirty years of age, and has an attractive face. She left her husband about a year ago, having been living with Fearson nearly half of that time. She met Ford about three months ago. After the shooting she disappeared, and has not since been seen.

The Injured Man

John Ford, the injured man, is a blacksmith by trade, and lives at 1036 Jefferson street. He bears a good reputation. He lived at the home of his sister, who was aware of his association with the Cooper woman, and repeatedly urged and begged him to cease visiting her, but to no avail. At the hospital he did not express any fear when told that his wound was very dangerous, and would perhaps result fatally.

Lum Fearson is a well-known man and has lived in Georgetown all his life. At present he is employed as a rigger, but in years past had a rather shady occupation. During the robbery of the paymaster's boat on the canal in 1873 he was one of the main witnesses who sent the principals to the penitentiary for a long time. They threatened to kill him when their term expired, but nothing was ever done. He was also connected, so it is claimed, with the stealing of the books and other papers of the old board of public works, before the present form of government in the District, and placing them under the door of Mr. Columbus Alexander, a well-known resident of this section of the city. He was employed by the people behind the scheme. Fearson had a reputation in other ways, but of late has kept himself straight.

Fearson Committed to Jail

Today Columbus Fearson was taken to the Police Court on a charge of attempted murder. Because of the condition of young Ford the case was continued and the defendant was committed to jail to await the

The Evening Star, August 10, 1896

The Charge is Murder

Columbus Fearson Must Answer for John L. Ford's Death

The Latter Dies at the Emergency Hospital From the Effects of the Old Man's Bullet

John L. Ford, the nineteen-year-old youth who was shot Friday evening last by Columbus Fearson at the house of the latter in Cissel's alley, situated between 32d and Potomac and Grace and Water streets, Georgetown, died at the Emergency Hospital this morning from the effects of his wounds. Fearson, who did not attempt to escape after shooting Ford, and who claimed to have acted in self-defense, is in jail, and the charge of attempted murder against him was changed to that of murder when the authorities were apprised of his victim's death.

The cause of the shooting was alleged by Fearson to have grown out of young Ford's attentions to Mrs. Cooper, who was Fearson's housekeeper. It was said that Ford and the woman were very intimate, and that Fearson, who has a wife and family residing on 21st street near L northwest, with whom he has not lived for several years, objected to it. Ford, however, continued to call frequently at the house despite Fearson's warnings, and a week ago last Saturday the men had an altercation, in which Ford struck his older rival with a stone.

The next day Fearson again warned Ford not to come to his house, and displaying a pistol, declared he would shoot Ford if he did so. To this the latter retorted that he would call on Mrs. Cooper when he pleased.

Story of the Shooting

Last Friday afternoon Ford spent some time with Mrs. Cooper in Fearson's house, leaving about 6 o'clock. He returned shortly before 8 o'clock, and stood on the outside whistling for the woman. It is said that while Ford was thus engaged Fearson raised a window and fired two shots from a revolver. Ford fell to the pavement and dragged himself to the front of the Fearson house, where he became unconscious and was picked up a few minutes later by the police and removed to Emergency Hospital.

At that institution it was found that one of the shots had taken effect, the ball entering the right side of the abdomen, tearing through the bladder and intestines and lodging on the left side under the skin. Immediate steps were taken to save Ford's life, and an operation was performed, but he was beyond medical relief, and sank steadily until death came this morning.

During his conscious periods he said nothing of the affray, save to declare the his back was turned when the shots were fired. He was kept alive by transfusion, rallying somewhat Saturday evening, but yesterday he became delirious and his parents and his brother and sister were summoned to his bedside. Ford was a blacksmith by trade, and resided at 1036 Jefferson street with his sister. His intimacy with the Cooper woman was known to his family and he was repeatedly urged to break it off, but declined. Persons living in the vicinity of Cissel's alley also saw the course affairs were taking, and were expecting a culmination of them like that reached.

The Principals in the Tragedy

Columbus Fearson, or "Lum," as he is familiarly called is well known to the police. He was connected with several affairs of an alleged disreputable nature in past years, and it is claimed that by turning state's evidence in 1873 he sent the other principals in the robbery of the paymaster's boat on the Chesapeake and Ohio canal to the penitentiary for long terms. Of late he is said to have been leading a better life and following his occupation, which is that of a rigger. Fearson is nearly sixty-five years old.

Mrs. Lillie M. Cooper, over whom the difficulty arose, is a good-looking woman, about thirty years old, who left her husband, an engineer on the U.S. battleship Maine, a year and a half ago and has been living with Fearson for the last six months. She met Ford three months ago. Mrs. Cooper disappeared after the shooting and her present whereabouts are unknown.

Fearson Unmoved

When Fearson was informed at the jail today that Ford was dead he made no special comment on it, merely reiterating his declaration that he had fired in self-defense to protect himself from a threatened attack by the dead boy.

Coroner Hammett will hold an inquest on Ford's body at the Emergency Hospital at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. The police are searching for Mrs. Cooper, who is regarded as a most important witness.

Deputy Coroner Glazebrook will hold an autopsy to determine the exact cause of death.

Forrest, Alexander The Evening Star, October 9, 1854 Funeral of a Fireman. Yesterday afternoon the Northern Liberties and Franklin Fire Companies followed to the grave the remains of Alexander Forrest, late an officer of the first named company, the members of which turned out in immense numbers to pay the last token of respect to his memory. The Franklin also paraded largely, and many friends of the deceased, not firemen, filled up the lengthy cortege. Prosperi's band was engaged for the occasion and played appropriate strains in their usual talented manner. The procession moved thorough the Avenue to the Congressional Cemetery, where the body was interred with solemn ceremonies, the Rev. A.G. Corothers, of the Fifth Presbyterian Church, officiating. The hearse was attended by eight pall-bearers, dressed in the uniform of the Northern Liberties and the procession was in charge of Messrs. John Goddard, Jr., and E.G. Evans, Marshals, also in the Northern Liberties dress. The banners were in mourning, and altogether the procession made an imposing appearance. Returning the Northern Liberties escorted the Franklin members to their engine house, soon after which both companies were dismissed.	d. 8 Oct 1854		R54/80

Forrest, Ann H. Forrest. On the afternoon of the 17th instant, after a protracted illness, which she bore with Christian fortitude, Mrs. Ann H., relict of the late Andrew Forrest, in the 71st year of her age. The above was one whose loss will be deeply felt by all who knew her; one who, while living, was loved and respected, --dead, she will be remembered by her friends, who will feel that their affection was worthily bestowed. Her illness was characterized by the utmost patience, resignation, and cheerfulness, under prolonged suffering, even to the last. Certainly, her last illness was remarkable, and by those only who were daily watching over her can a just idea of her singular tenacity of life be formed. For months she had never been free from excessive pain--and this alone tends somewhat to mitigate the sorrow for her loss. And if it can be any comfort to her beloved children, to her large circle of acquaintances, let them dwell upon the knowledge that she passed through life as a Christian--that she lived and died esteemed by her friends, beloved by her relatives, cherished by her children, and regretted by all. The friends and relatives of the family are respectfully invited to attend her funeral, from the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Thomas Altemus, No. 587 Eighth street east, at 3 o'clock tomorrow (Sunday) evening, the 19th inst.	d. 17 May 1861	70 yrs. Forrest, Bladen The Evening Star, October 17, 1870 Sudden Death of Bladen Forrest Mr. Bladen Forrest, who, for nearly forty years past, has been a resident of Georgetown, died suddenly of apoplexy, at 9 o'clock last evening, at his residence, on the corner of 1st and Frederick streets. The deceased was sixty-one years of age and was the proprietor of the well-known "Forrest Hall." He was enjoying a smoke, and his pipe falling to the floor was broken; whereupon he went to the mantel and taking another charged it with tobacco, but, before he lighted a match for the purpose of continuing his smoke he was taken quite sick, and was assisted to a chair, and from thence to a lounge, upon which he died in about half an hour, although medical attendance was promptly summoned. He had suffered from attacks of the same kind previously, and on this occasion did not seem to be aware of immediate danger, as he consoled his relatives around him with the opinion that nothing serious would ensue. The Evening Star, October 19, 1870	b. 1810 - d. 18 Oct 1870		R56/25

Death of Admiral Forrest

Admiral French Forrest, formerly of the United States Navy, late of the Confederate Navy, died at a quarter to 2 o'clock p.m., on the 22d inst. after a short but painful illness of typhoid fever, in the 71st year of his age. Admiral Forrest fought bravely in the War of 1812; he was in the naval engagement under Commodore Perry; also fought valiantly in the Mexican war; he was appointed at that time Adjutant General of the land and naval forces, and the responsible duty devolved upon him of having the forces transported into the interior of Mexico. When Virginia seceded, he joined the fortunes of the Southern Confederacy, and was given the position of commander-in-chief of the naval forces of Virginia, and commanded at the Norfolk Navy Yard, and was afterwards appointed to the command of the James River Squadron, and then acting Assistant Secretary of the Navy. A kind and affectionate husband and father, and a true and sincere friend, beloved and respected by all who knew him. His funeral will take place from the residence of his brother, Bladen Forrest, No. 78 1st street, Georgetown, on Saturday, the 24th instant, at one o'clock p.m.

Naval officer. Born in St. Mary's County, Maryland, Forrest entered the U.S. Navy as a midshipman in June 1811. He was aboard USS Hornet when it fought HMS Peacock in 1813 and claimed service in the Battle of Lake Erie. Rising to the rank of captain in 1844, he commanded the landing operations of Gen. Winfield Scott's American army at Vera Cruz during the Mexican War. From 1855 to 1856 he was the head of the Washington Navy Yard.

Resigning his commission after Virginia's secession, Forrest joined the state navy of Virginia as a captain in April 1861. He accepted a commission at the same rank in the Confederate navy in June, making him its third-ranking officer. He had commanded the navy yard at Norfolk while in Virginia service, and he remained in that position when he entered the Confederate navy. His primary task was the reconstruction of the ineffectively scuttled USS Merrimack into the ironclad ram CSS Virginia. Command of the vessel, however, went to Franklin Buchanan, much to Forrest's disappointment. Forrest was replaced at Norfolk three months after the Battle of Hampton Roads to become the head of the Office of Orders and Details. There he was responsible for ensuring the flow of correspondence and orders within the Confederate Naval Department.

In March 1863 he took command of the James River Squadron. Frustrated by this squadron's relative inactivity, Secretary of the Navy Stephen R. Mallory replaced him with Commdr. John K. Mitchell in May 1864. Since his name disappears from the roster of Confederate naval officers by June, he apparently was dismissed from service. After the war, he returned to his home in Alexandria, Virginia, and died in Washington, D.C., in November 1866.

Forrest, French (1796-1866)

Already 65 by the outbreak of the Civil War, French Forrest failed to measure up as the commander of the Confederacy's James River Squadron. The Maryland native was a veteran of five decades in the navy including the War of 1812 battle of Lake Erie and service at Alvarado and Vera Cruz during the Mexican War. He joined the Southern war effort in 1861, and his assignments included: captain, Virginia Navy (1861); commanding Norfolk Navy Yard (ca. April 25, 1861 - ca. May 9, 1862); captain, CSN (1861); chief, Office of Orders and Detail (1862-63); and commanding James River Squadron (1863-ca. May 1864). When the Union fleet abandoned Norfolk, Forrest was dispatched by the Virginia authorities to take charge of the naval equipment and stores there. During the famous fights of the Virginia and Monitor in Hampton Roads he was aboard the tugboat Harmony. After the fall of Norfolk he was made a bureau chief in the Navy Department and then took charge of the small flotilla on the James. During 1863 the squadron's poor behavior was blamed on Forrest who was relieved by John K. Mitchell in early 1864. While Forrest's name had appeared on the naval register of January 1, 1864, it was missing from that of June 1, and it must be assumed that he had been dropped from the rolls. In any event he barely outlived the war.

Death of Mr. Forsyth

In another column our readers will perceive, many of them with deep regret, none of them with indifference, the annunciation of the death of the late Hon. John Forsyth, of Georgia, late Secretary of State. He died at his residence in this city on Thursday evening, of congestive fever, after an illness of three or four weeks. To pronounce the eulogy due to the public character of this distinguished gentleman is a duty that does not devolve on us; but it is not fitting that we, who knew the deceased so long as a public man, should withhold from his memory the justice of saying that he possessed qualities which placed him much above the level of the mass of mankind. The high offices which, during so great a portion of his life, he successively filled, both in his own particular State and in the National Government, attest at once the superiority of his abilities and the public estimation of them. To the high advantage of superior talents he added, also, that of an elegance and dignity of manners which shed a grace on the exalted stations which he filled. His death, sundering many ties of devoted affection, has plunged in the deepest distress a large and most interesting domestic circle.

The National Intelligencer, Monday, October 25, 1841

The Funeral of the Hon. John Forsyth, which took place in this city on Saturday, was attended by the Representatives of Foreign Governments now in Washington, by the Heads of our Executive Departments, the General-in-Chief of the Army, and many other officers of the Government, and military, as well as many private citizens. The religious services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Hawley and the Rev. Mr. Butler, of the Episcopal Church.

The National Intelligencer, October 28, 1841

The Hon. John Forsyth

Mors sola fatetur

Quantula sint hominum corpuscula.

Again the insatiate Archer has sped his unerring dart, and another distinguished victim has fallen beneath his fatal shaft. Each day's revolution illustrates the solemn truth that man is dust, and to dust he must return. The most exalted as well as the most lowly are alike subject to the inevitable decree which has gone forth from the throne of Omnipotence; and, whether he moves in the humblest walks of life, or revolves in the highest and most brilliant circles of society, the grave awaits him; and from that last resting place of man there is no escape. The most inordinate ambition and the lowliest aspirations--the most illustrious actions, as well as the most obscure and humble efforts--all tend to the same end--all await the inevitable hour that closes forever the changeful drama of life.

"The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

But what, at last, are the most splendid efforts of successful ambition? What all the distinction that rank, or fame, or wealth can bestow? The mere avarice of air--the brilliant dreams of a few fleeting moments--the delusive ignes fatui of life--all ending in the awful reality of death, and demonstrating, in the language of Pindar, that "we are shadows, and the dreams of shadows are all our fancies imagine." Where are now the illustrious Egyptians who figured on the stage of life two thousand years ago, who erected pyramids whose and who caused their bodies to be embalmed that they might be preserved till their immortal spirits should again return to reanimate them? Sir Thomas Brown has told their history in a few words: "Mummy has become merchandise; Mizraim cures wounds, and Pharaoh is sold for balsam."

It was about 27 years ago that I first saw the distinguished individual whose name heads this article. What changes, what revolutions have occurred, and what myriads have passed away from the stage of life and sunk into the oblivion of the grave, since then! I was standing in the gallery of the House of Representatives when Mr. F. rose to address that body. It was his first parliamentary effort, and I listened, like all present, with deep interest to the speech he then delivered. He was in the thirty-fourth year of his age, with a countenance of great beauty and benignity, and a figure well proportioned and graceful. His eye was blue, soft, and expressive, his complexion fair, his features regular, and his hair light and glossy. His fine talents and agreeable manners gave him at once a prominent stand in the body to which he belonged that he always retained, and he rose rapidly in the estimation of his countrymen. He was then unhackneyed in the tortuous ways of the politician, and had all the warmth and nobleness of heart which belong to the South. He stood forth the bold and ardent defender of his country, and the eloquent advocate and supporter of the republican principles he had embraced.

In 1817 the following sketch of Mr. Forsyth was written and published in a work entitled "Letters from Washington:"*

"Mr. Forsyth has, like most of the members of the American Congress, been educated for the bar, at which he has practiced for some years with considerable success. He received the rudiments of his education in the seminary of which Mr. Crawford (afterwards Secretary of the Treasury) acted as usher, and completed it at Princeton. He first distinguished himself in a case of impeachment, instituted by the Legislature of Georgia against the commissioners employed to dispose of some public lands belonging to the State. On this occasion, though but a stripling, he displayed much ability, and acquired no little reputation. It was the means of making him known through his adopted State, (being a native of Fredericksburg, Virginia,) and of bringing him into public life as a member of the great National Council. The practice of the law has, therefore, for the present, been relinquished either from necessity or inclination. Legislation, however, seems to be better adapted to his habits and feelings, and it is scarcely probable he will ever return to his profession, if he should be so fortunate as to succeed in the difficult and arduous duties of a legislator and statesman in which he is now engaged. I think Mr. F. has ambition, and is solicitous to render himself conspicuous in political life. His talents are of no ordinary character, and, were he to devote more of his time to the improvement of his mind and the acquisition of that various and general knowledge so essential to a statesman, he would have few or no superiors in this country. He is a brilliant and sometimes an eloquent speaker. His voice is harmonious and susceptible of great modulation, but not sonorous or powerful. He wants impetuosity and vehemence, but supplies this deficiency by a constant, regular, and uninterrupted flow, which resembles a stream where no rocks arise or projections intervene to disturb the gentle motion of its current. His style is not figurative or ornate, but sufficiently flowing and oratorical to gratify the ear and please the mind. He is, however, more of a debater than an orator; his elocution flows, but never gushes, his phraseology is sometimes tastefully selected and arranged, and his arguments ingenious and plausible, if not always conclusive. He possesses the "dazzling power of argument," though he wants the epigrammatic point and graceful antithesis which are observable in Grattan and the Irish orators," etc.

This sketch requires little alteration. Time and experience matured his faculties, and his enlarged knowledge of mankind gave him greater power over the workings of the human heart. As a debater few excelled him. He was always prepared; prompt, ready, courteous, and gentlemanly. His keenest shafts were dipped in rose water and never rankled. A smile irradiated his countenance even when his retorts were tinged with bitterness, and his opponent was constrained to admire his courtesy while he felt the force of his blow. Mr. Forsyth continued in public life till a few months before his death. He passed successively through the high stations of Member of the House of Representatives, Senator of the United States, Minister to Spain, Governor of Georgia, and Secretary of State, in all of which he displayed the splendid talents with which he had been endowed, and exercised his faculties for the welfare and glory of his country. Though devoted to party, he was not blinded to the merits of those who opposed his political tenets, and though often exposed to the battery of the press, and denounced and condemned for the opinions he entertained, and the measures he supported, he suffered no feeling of hatred or animosity to disturb the tranquility of his mind, or to embitter his intercourse with his fellow-man. In the social circle, he was not less conspicuous for the ease, grace, and sauvity of his manners and the amiableness of his disposition. He could be familiar without being undignified, and reserved without being offensive. He was always self-composed, and always at his ease. It was but rare that anything had power to disturb the apparent serenity of his mind, or to throw into agitation the habitual placidity of his temper. He could be roused at times, however, and then his indignation was not easily subdued. At personal or national insult he felt deeply; and he manifested that feeling both in his language and manner, but it was an ebullition which reason as well as virtue would justify.

Mr. Forsyth has filled a considerable space in the public eye for the last quarter of a century. His career has been a brilliant and useful one. He has occupied elevated stations through life, and has rendered important services to his country--and he has sunk into the silent tomb covered with honors. Fortune and his own merits had placed him where the high gifts with which his Maker had endowed him might be employed in promoting the glory and welfare of his country; and it cannot be said that he did not employ them successfully to that end. He has won a niche in the temple of immortality, and secured a page in the history of the Republic. He has now passed away forever from the fitful scenes, the toils and agitations of life, and sleeps, with those who have gone before him, the long deep sleep of death. Could a voice from the tomb be heard, what would be his language now?

"Ye lying vanities of life!

"Ye ever-tempting, ever-cheating train!

"Where are ye now? And what is your amount?"

Foster. On the 22d instant, Mollie, second daughter of Jane E. and W.J. Foster, in the sixth year of her age.

Thou, Mollie, in thy bloom of life,
The world but little trod,
Had'st turned from earth's delusive light,
To yield thy heart to God.
An opening flower that caught the hue
Of Heaven's refulgent dyes
And dripping with the mourning dew.
Was gathered to the skies.
God help the mother in her grief
The father in his woe;
The hand alone can give relief
That measured out the blow.
The blessing on each lonely hearth,
And grasps the spirits rivers
That loved and served here on earth,
May meet and love in Heaven.

The relatives and friends of the family are respectfully invited to attend her funeral from the residence of her parents, 350 Va. avenue, between 4 1/2 and 6th streets, on Sunday, the 24th instant, at two o'clock.

Funeral of Ex-Congressman Fouke

The funeral of the late Hon. Philip B. Fouke, took place yesterday at 4 o'clock from St. Mark's church, Capitol Hill, Rev. A.F. Steele officiating. The pall-bearers were, Judge Cuppy, Judge Casey, Hon. R.W. Johnson, Gen. W. McKee Dunn, Col. Pennybacker, Dr. William K. Mohadey, Thomas J. Durrant and E.C. Ingersoll. The plate on the burial casket read as follows: Hon. Philip B. Fouke, died October 3, 1876, aged 58 years.

Belleville Weekly Advocate, October 6, 1876

The papers announce the death of Philip B. Fouke, at Washington, on the 3d inst. Mr. Fouke was a native of Kaskaskia, Ill., and spent most of his life in this city. He was one of the first editors and publishers of the Belleville Advocate in 1840 and subsequent years. From 1859 to 1863 he represented the Belleville district in Congress. He was also State Attorney for the Circuit, then composed of St. Clair, Madison, Monroe, Randolph, Perry, Washington and Clinton counties. He commanded the 31st regiment of Illinois Volunteers at the battle of Belmont, and has resided since the war principally at Washington, D.C. His age was about 65 years. He was a man of more than ordinary ability, and of the most generous impulses. He leaves many friends in Southern Illinois to mourn his loss.

Historical Encyclopedia of Illinois, 1916

Fouke, Philip B., lawyer and Congressman was born at Kaskaskia, Ill., Jan. 23, 1818; was chiefly self-educated and began his career as a clerk afterwards acting as a civil engineer; about 1841-42 was associated with the publication of "The Belleville Advocate," later studied law and, after being admitted to the bar, served as Prosecuting Attorney, being re-elected to that office in 1856. Previous to this, however, he had been elected to the lower branch of the Seventeenth General Assembly (1850), and, in 1858 was elected as a Democrat to the Thirty sixth Congress and re-elected two years later. While still in Congress he assisted in organizing the Thirtieth Regiment Illinois Volunteers, of which he was commissioned Colonel, but resigned on account of ill-health soon after the battle of Shiloh. After leaving the army he removed to New Orleans, where he was appointed Public Administrator and practiced law for some time. He then took up the prosecution of the cotton-claims against the Mexican Government, in which he was engaged some seven years, finally removing to Washington City and making several trips to Europe in the interest of these suits. He won his cases, but died soon after a decision in his favor, largely in consequence of overtaxing his brain in their prosecution. His death occurred in Washington, October 3, 1876, when he was buried in the Congressional Cemetery, President Grant and a number of Senators and Congressmen acting as pall-bearers at his funeral.

Death of an Old Resident

Mr. John E. Foulkes, an old and well-known citizen of Washington, died last night, after a protracted illness, at his residence in the Seventh Ward. Mr. Foulkes was for years engaged by the most extensive business houses and banks of Washington as a financial clerk, and by the government as a clerk in the Census Bureau. He was eminently qualified for those positions, his powers of mathematical calculation being remarkable. In addition to the position he occupied in the Census Bureau, he had been a long time employed in the Bank of Washington and other banks, and at the time of his death was the bookkeeper for J.C. McGuire & Co. Mr. Foulkes was between sixty-five and seventy years of age.

The National Intelligencer, Wednesday, August 20, 1834

On Thursday, 14th inst (at the residence of Clement T. Coote, his brother-in-law) after a very protracted affliction, John Fountain, aged 37 years.

Mr. Fountain was a native of England, and, recently resided at Hoddesdon, near London; he, with his family, arrived at New York the latter part of June, and in this city on the first of July last; for several years he was a member of the Baptist denomination, and rejoicing in, and confidently resting upon, the perfect obedience of his Redeemer, to the requirements of the Divine law, for his justification until eternal life,

" breathed his soul into its rest,

The bosom of his God."

Placid resignation, united with the firm energy of his mind, were, to the last, remarkable. Having taken a friendly, affectionate, and final leave of his attending physician, Doctor May, and which, in the course of the day, was extended, at intervals, to his dearest connection, and friends, (for he had a presentiment of the hour of his removal, which he mentioned, and which was realized,) he recollected that he had omitted to request that a post mortem examination should be made; he sent for the Doctor again to his room, and made an especial request to that effect. His desire was that the peculiar character of his disease might be distinctly ascertained; particularly, as some very eminent physicians in England, owing to some peculiar and unusual symptoms, did entertain different opinions of his case; particularly Doctor James Johnson, of London, and Doctor John Leigh, of St. Ives, Huntingdonshire.

The examination requisite was made by Doctors May and Hall, of this city, and, from the known professional skill and judgment of these gentlemen, there can be no doubt but the process and result of the investigation will be so used by them as to extend the benefits of medical science.

The noblest eulogy that can be ascribed to human frailty is fidelity to God and man in all the varied relations of life. Such may be eminently said of Capt. Fowke. In business, of unflinching integrity, as a husband, tender and provident; as a father, loving and kind; as a friend, warm-hearted and sincere; as a Christian, vigilant and faithful; he lived an ornament to society, died strong in his faith and rich in his hopes of a blissful immortality. May our heavenly Father speak peace and comfort to his mourning loved ones.

Fowke. Departed this life, March 27, at 3 o'clock p.m., Willie Thomas, the eldest son of Captain Samuel and Ellen Fowke, aged 28 years and 18 days.

Oh, what upon this earth doth prove
So steadfast as a mother's love.
Oh, what can bring relief
Or solace to a parent's grief.

No more, my darling, shall thou lie,
With aching heart and half shut eye,
Pillowed upon my aching breast
Serenely sinking into rest.

Yes from my arms thy soul has flown,
Alone, and found the heavenly throne,
To join that blest angelic ring
That ever round the altar sing.

I've thought when years have rolled away
That thou would be our ages stay;
And often have I dreamed to see
The boy, the youth, the man in thee.

Farewell, my child, the due shall fall
At morn and evening o'er thy pall;
And flowers blooming o'er thy bier
Be watered by thy mother's tear.
By His Mother.

Biography

Charles B. Fowler (1931-1995), American writer and consultant in the arts, was noted for his activity and commentary in the field of arts education. A prolific author, he wrote more than two hundred articles as well as books, reports and other works. Fowler frequently spoke at arts and arts education gatherings, providing insightful views on the state of the arts nationally. For fifteen years (1974-1989) he served as Education Editor of Musical America Magazine, reporting "On Education" across the country. From 1966 to 1971 he was editor of Music Educators Journal. His last publications were Sing!, a textbook for secondary school choral classes (Hinshaw, 1988), the widely acclaimed sequel to Coming to Our Senses: Can We Rescue the Arts for America's Children (American Council for the Arts, 1988), entitled Strong Arts, Strong Schools (Oxford University Press, 1996) and Music! Its Role and Importance in Our Lives, a textbook appropriate for high school and introductory college courses (Glencoe/Macmillan/McGraw-Hill, 1994). From 1989 until 1993, Dr. Fowler served as director of National Cultural Resources, Inc.

As a practitioner of several arts and with an extensive background in teaching on every level, Dr. Fowler championed the cause of arts education as an essential part of every person's education. He was a guest professor at a number of American universities, participated in numerous educational projects and symposia, and lectured on the subject of arts education throughout the United States and abroad. His degrees included a Bachelor of Science in Music Education from the Crane School of Music, SUNY at Potsdam, a Master of Music from Northwestern University and a Doctor of Musical Arts (with a minor in fine arts) from Boston University. He was awarded the Distinguished Alumni Award from Boston University in 1990 and an honorary doctorate from the Crane School of Music in 1995.

Dr. Fowler wrote educational materials for the New York Philharmonic, the Metropolitan Opera, the National Endowment for the Arts, and the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. He was the writer for the grand opening of Epcot Center for Walt Disney Productions, the grand opening of Knoxville World's Fair, the annual Christmas pageant at the Crystal Cathedral in Garden Grove, California, and several National Public Radio programs. He prepared scripts for Jose Ferrer, Richard Thomas, Gregory Peck, President Gerald Ford, and Dinah Shore, among others.

Funeral of Geo. W. Fowler

Services at Congress Heights M.E. Church Yesterday Afternoon

The funeral of George W. Fowler, late superintendent of the Sunday school of the Congress Heights Methodist Episcopal Church and a member of the official board of the church, whose death occurred Monday morning last at his home on 4th street, Congress Heights, took place yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Methodist Episcopal Church in that suburb. The edifice was filled with friends of the deceased superintendent, many of whom accompanied the remains to their resting place in Congressional cemetery. Numerous floral pieces from church organizations and individuals surrounded the casket.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. H.M. Spencer, the pastor of the local Methodist Church; Rev. H.R. Naylor, the presiding elder of Washington district; Rev. W.L. Orem, ex-pastor of the Congress Heights Methodist Episcopal Church, who came from his charge near Baltimore, and Rev. Charles O. Isaac, the pastor of the Anacostia Methodist Episcopal Church. Allusion was made to the work of the deceased as a member of the church and the head of the Sunday school. The pallbearers were: Lieut. W.T. Anderson of the fifth police precinct, J.P. Talbert, Stephen Wright, John O. Stewart, R.H. Beall and E.E. Harrison.

Why should our tears in sorrow flow

When God recalls his own,

And bids them leave a world of woe

For an immortal crown?

Then let our sorrows cease to flow,

God has recalled his own;

But let our hearts in every woe

Still say, "Thy will be done."

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, from the residence of her parents, No. 532 9th street southeast. Friends and relatives are invited. (Baltimore Sun and Upper Marlboro Gazette please copy).

Sudden Death of a Well-Known Citizen

The sudden death from heart disease, of Mr. Henderson Fowler is announced. He died yesterday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, having but a few hours before left his home in apparent good health. The deceased, when a boy about 14 years old came from Maryland to this city, and learned the trade of bricklayer, and for many years carried on the business of builder in this city. He was also for a number of years a dealer in wood and coal at the intersection of 4 1/2 street and the old canal. About twelve years ago he retired from business, and has since lived quietly in the eastern section of the city. He had been for a number of years a prominent member of Fourth-street (M.E.) Church. He leaves a widow, four sons and two daughters. He was much esteemed by a large circle of friends.

Shot Dead by a Negro Rough

A Policeman Brutally Murdered

Officer Fowler Killed in the Performance of His Duty

By a Negro Desperado in the Presence of Numerous Bystanders,

Who Were Vainly Appealed To Aid Him

This morning, about 10:20 o'clock, Officer John H. Fowler of the Metropolitan Police Force, was shot and killed by John Langster, alias "Guinea" Lancaster, alias Robinson. Office Fowler was in charge of the chain gang, which was at work cleaning alleys near the Baltimore and Ohio railroad depot. Lancaster managed to get away from the others, and he was pursued to an alley between E and F and 1st and 2d streets northeast, by Officer Fowler, who found him in an out house, and called on him to surrender. Lancaster defied arrest, and Fowler said then he would have to shoot, when Lancaster told him that he could shoot too. Officer Fowler then seized him and started to take him out, when a negro named Wilson rushed up. Lancaster then struggled to get away, and Officer Fowler drew his pistol, for the possession of which the prisoner struggled with him, during which time the officer fired one shot in the air. The prisoner then got possession of the pistol and at once fired at the officer, the ball passing through the right hand and into the right side of the policeman, in the region of the liver. While the officer was struggling he vainly called for help, but although there were several men about none went to his assistance. A number of boys--Joseph L Pearson, W.S. Chesley, Thornton Chesley, A. Hamilton and E. Holmes--were playing baseball in the neighborhood, and one of them offered his bat to a man to go to the assistance of the officer, but the man refused.

Immediately on receiving the shot Mr. Fowler put his hand on his side, and fell near the corner of 1st and E streets, and said: "I am dead," and the prisoner during the excitement got away.

The Murderer Captured

He was pursued to No. 311 D street by Officers Boland, Boyle and Slack, with Lieut. Kelly. The fugitive threw away the pistol in his flight. The first named officer found him in a basement in the act of pulling his clothes--the striped ones--off. When told that there was one more load in the pistol, he said: "I am sorry I did not know it, for I would have given him that too." He was taken to the seventh precinct station, where he refused to give his name, and he was locked up.

Some of the officers and citizens bore Mr. Fowler to the room of Lieut. Kelly at the seventh precinct and Mr. Stockskill, a medical student, and Dr. Magruder were soon at his side, but he died within a few minutes.

Officer Fowler was regarded as one of the best officers on the force and resided with his family at the corner of 9th and C streets southeast, where he leaves a wife and three small children. He was born and reared in the west end and his wife is a daughter of Mr. Joshua Lloyd.

The affair drew to the neighborhood of the station an immense crowd, but only a few, other than the witnesses, were allowed to enter.

Two Men Arrested for Refusing to Assist the Officers

Officers Coghill and Boland selected from the crowd Robert Jackson and John Miller, two colored men, and charged them with refusing to assist the officer, and they were locked up. Both of them protest that they are innocent of any charge.

Coolness of the Murderer

Soon after they were locked up Lancaster commenced to sing as if he had nothing on his mind. Several parties gathered about his cell, and the prisoner, recognizing one in clerical garb, said to him: "God told me to kill him."

"Did God tell you to shoot him twice?" he was asked.

"No," said he, "I am a good shot; one shot is enough. What did he shoot at me for? One shot sung right past my ear, and when I got it I shot."

"Yes," said one of the prisoners, "you shot at the officer twice, among the first shot right at his head."

"No, I didn't," said the prisoner, "I am a dead shot."

His manner was such that even the clerical gentleman remarked, "I can hardly look at the officer and hear this ribaldry without wishing for lynch law. In such a case lynch law would not be out of place."

The Prisoner Playing Crazy and Mimicking the Widow of Fowler in her Grief

Mrs. Fowler arrived at the station at 11:30 o'clock with a lady friend, and was nearly frantic with grief. A short time afterward Mr. Mitchell, the undertaker, and Mr. Joshua M. Lloyd, her father, were sent for, and in the meantime the prisoner disrobed himself and attempted to play crazy, and mimicked Mrs. Fowler in her grief.

The Coroner's Jury

Dr. Patterson, the coroner, and Dr. Townshend, the health officer, were soon at the station. The former directed a jury of inquest to be summoned, and the following were sworn: Daniel Sheehan, J. Fred. Kelley, Henry H. Hoff, C.P. Shettle, W.O. Patton and Charles Speht. In consequence of the prevailing excitement the inquest was adjourned till ten o'clock tomorrow, and the witnesses were directed to appear at that time.

Lancaster's Record of Crime

Some three years ago Lancaster, after being committed to the Reform school, made an attack on Mr. Newman, foreman of the chair shop, for some fancied wrong, and the foreman had to knock him down before he could quiet him. His acts on this occasion were disgraceful, and recently he made an attack on Mr. Farnham, one of the teachers, and head of a colored family of the reform school. He had to be severely punished for this attack. Some time since he was fined $50 in the Police Court for cutting a man with a razor. He was arrested for assault and battery with intent to kill his father by shooting at him. The charge could not be sustained, and he was sentenced to three months for carrying concealed weapons.

Shot Dead By A Negro

How Policeman Fowler Was Killed

The Story of "Guinea" Langster's Bloody Deed Told at the Coroner's Inquest Today--The Verdict--The Prisoner Feigning

Insanity--The Prisoner Attempts to Strike a Witness

The murder of Policeman John H. Fowler by the negro John Langster yesterday morning, a full account of which was published in THE STAR last evening, attracted a very large crowd about the seventh precinct station-house, where he was confined. There was a good deal of excitement, and many threats were made of lynching. In order to avoid any possible trouble Langster was removed about dusk to the fifth precinct station. The officers found when they tried to enter his cell that he had stuffed the keyhole of the lock with chewed meat, paper, etc., rammed in with a match. Afraid that he might be taken by force, he had done this in the hope that it would prevent entrance to his cell. After half an hour's work the keyhole was cleared, and Langster was brought out handcuffed and placed in the patrol wagon. He remained at the fifth precinct station-house all night and pretended to be crazy whenever his cell was approached.

The autopsy of Policeman Fowler at 3 o'clock revealed the fact that ball had entered the body between the tenth and eleventh ribs, passed through the liver, severed the vena cava, one of the principle veins in the body, and then lodged in the spine, from which it was chiseled out. The body was then turned over to the family of the deceased.

BORN THAT WAY

Yesterday afternoon a gentleman named Hudson took the prisoner a lunch, with the view of getting him to talk. This act of kindness appeared to have a softening effect upon him, and he ate what was brought with a relish. Mr. Hudson remarked while the prisoner was eating, "That was a terrible act," and the prisoner replied, "Yes, I was born that way."

Lieut. Kelly asked, "What way?" and he answered, "Afflicted with quick temper."

WHY AND HOW THE REMOVAL OF THE PRISONER WAS EFFECTED

Lieut. Kelly, in view of the talk of lynching, yesterday afternoon asked that his reserve force be increased. Major Dye, however thought that the best way would be to remove the prisoner, and the fifth precinct was suggested as the proper place of confinement for the present. Lieut. Kelly therefore ordered a cab to be driven to the station at 7 1/2 o'clock, and at that hour but few persons were around. In a little time, however, the street swarmed with people, and it would have been unsafe for him to have appeared. The cab was therefore ordered away to return about 8 o'clock. It had been discovered when the cab drove up that he had obstructed the lock, as stated above, and it took some time to pick the stuff out. At 8 o'clock, however the prisoner was put into the cab, and Lieut. Kelly gave orders to take him to jail to deceive the crowd, and he safely reached the fifth precinct station, where he was locked up.

THE PRISONER'S ANTICS THIS MORNING--HE DENIES THE SHOOTING

He remained very quiet all last night, but conversed freely with all who visited his cell. This morning he commenced his antics of yesterday again-singing and laughing alternately. He related all about how the homicide occurred, but denied doing the shooting. He said Officer Fowler had always treated him well and had several times spoken to Superintendent Stoutenburg in his behalf when he had been doing wrong, to prevent his being punished. Yesterday morning he made up his mind, he said, to escape from the gang at all hazards, and would have done so had it not been for the rest of the gang. When he closed with Officer Fowler, after that officer fired his pistol in the air, he did not take the pistol from him, but in the tussel, as the officer was about to aim his revolver at him, (Langster,) he turned his arm under, and the officer shot himself. He did not shoot him at all. When roused up this morning he said he would not get up unless someone gave him a cigar. The station-keeper gave him a cigar, as he wanted, and he soon after partook of breakfast, remarking, as he finished, "That's much better breakfast than I got yesterday morning." After breakfast he was put into the fifth precinct patrol wagon, several men accompanying it, and was taken to Mr. G.W. Davis's photograph gallery, where his picture was taken. During this operation he acted very mulish and stubborn, and would not consent to sit in the chair; but after the officer forced him into the seat he remained quiet until the work was done, when he was carried in the same wagon to the seventh precinct station-house, to be present at the coroner's inquest.

THE INQUEST TODAY

Shorter after 10 o'clock a.m., Dr. Patterson, the coroner, summoned the jury, which was sworn in yesterday, as stated in the STA, and began the inquest. The jury was as follows: Daniel Shehan, J. Fred Kelly, Henry H. Hoff, C.B. Shettle, W.O. Patton and Charles Speht. A number of idlers had gathered about the station house, although there was no prospect of seeing or hearing anything. The excitement which had prevailed yesterday in the vicinity had quieted down and no further talk of lynching was heard. The coroner and the jury occupied a room in the second story of the station house, and the singing of the prisoner, who sat half naked in one of the cells below, could be plainly heard in the room above. He had refused to keep his clothing on and was still pretending to be insane.

A BOY'S TESTIMONY

The first witness sworn was a boy about fifteen years old named Thornton Chesley, who testified that he followed the policeman, whom he saw running after a convict into an alley. When the policeman, Fowler, came up to the man he said: "Surrender now; I don't want to shoot you. I have always been a good friend of yours." The witness said that the convict refused to surrender, and then the two began to struggle together. The witness described the position of Fowler when he fired the pistol, and said that he fired right over his head. The policeman told the convict that he didn't want to shoot him, but wanted him to come along without any trouble. The convict, however, said: "You will have to shoot me."

FOWLER COULD HAVE SHOT THE PRISONER IF HE HAD BEEN SO INCLINED

In answer to a juror the witness said that Policeman Fowler could have shot the convict if he had wished to. The witness said that he got on the policeman's horse and went for help, and after he had gone he heard two shots. While Fowler was struggling with the convict he had asked a colored man to help him in the name of the law, but the man had refused.

SAW LANGSTER SHOOT THE OFFICER

W.T. Clark was the next witness and he said he boarded at 415 D street, and went out in the alley and saw a policeman tussling with a convict. He stepped back to tell the lady with whom he boarded she had better close up her house, and when he was away he heard two shots. He came back into the alley at once and saw the convict with a pistol in one hand and with his arm about the officer and he saw him shoot the officer in that position.

A SIXTEEN-YEAR-OLD BOY'S STORY

A. Hamilton, a boy about sixteen years old, was the next witness, and he testified that he saw two men struggling in the alley, and saw a pistol brandished in the air and heard a shot, but he did not know who fired it.

"GUINEA' HAS DONE IT FOR ME THIMS TIME"

John G. Crozan, the next witness, testified that he was in the alley and heard two shots, and running father up, he saw the police officer standing there. The officer put his hands on his hips and said: "I am shot. 'Guinea' has done it for me this time." Mr. Houck, who had followed him, and others then carried away the officer; but the convict stood there with a pistol in his hands. The others left with the officer, and the witness was afraid to go up to the negro because he had a pistol in his hand. The witness stayed behind the others to watch the man, and when he turned and ran up 2d street the witness followed him a short distance.

"MY WIFE AND CHILDREN"

Henry T. Houck, the next witness, testified that he heard the excitement and came out in the alley from 1st street. He saw two shots fired, and then the officer walked towards the witness and fell into his arms. The only words the officer said while he was being taken to the station was, "My wife and children." When he reached the station he inquired about his wife. The witness heard the shots, but did not see the firing.

ANOTHER BOY'S GRAPHIC ACCOUNT OF THE DEATH STRUGGLE

Alfred S. Wilson, another of the boys who witnessed the struggle in the alley, testified that after the officer shot over the convicts' head he held the pistol back of him, and the convict, after a contest, finally seized it, and the colored man who was helping the officer ran away. After the convict had gotten possession of the pistol he shot at the officer twice, but each time the officer knocked the man's hand up so that the balls went into the air. But the third shot hit the officer. The officer staggered, and as he was being borne away he said: "Oh! let me lie down on the grass and die."

When the witness spoke of the colored man running away Robert Jackson, the man referred to who was standing in the rear of the room, called out: "Coroner, swear me. I would like to say something while all these boys are talking."

"In a moment," said the coroner, "your turn will come."

"I want to say--," went on Jackson, but he was silenced by Lieut. Kelly.

ROBERT JACKSON'S "TIME FOR DISAPPEARING"

Robert Jackson then testified that he was passing down the alley with his bag, as he was a rag gatherer. He stopped at the corner and saw the officer struggling with the convict in the other alley. He had heard a pistol shot, but did not see any shooting up to that time. The officer called him and he went toward him, and the officer told him to take hold of the convict's arm. The convict finally got the pistol from the officer and held it in his left hand. The witness shoved the convict around, as he saw him trying to shoot him (the witness). The pistol went off and the ball went above the head of witness. After that, when he fund the convict was shooting, the witness said: "I jist banished up the alley; but I didn't run away, as some people say I did." The witness went on to say that he assisted the officer at once.

Edward Holmes, the next witness, testified to the general facts of the occurrence, but said that he did not see the shooting.

TESTIMONY OF ANOTHER BOY

W.S. Chesley, another boy, testified that he went into the alley opening on 2d street and saw the convict holding on to the fence with both hands while the officer was pulling at him. He thought that the officer was trying to put the nippers on his legs. During the struggle a colored man in the alley told them to get out as they were injuring his property. The witness said that the officer called for assistance, and then recounted what passed between the convict and the officer, agreeing with previous witnesses.

THE PRISONER BROUGHT IN

Officer Boyle, who was with Officers Bolan and Slack and Lieut. Kelly when the man was arrested, came in the room where the jury was seated and brought with him the prisoner Langster. He wore only his convict pants having torn up his shirt last night. He shuffled along to a seat pointed out to him and then looked all about the room with an ugly scowl upon his face. This expression remained unchanged. His bare breast showed a powerful development.

OFFICER BOYLE'S TESTIMONY AS TO DAMAGING ADMISSIONS OF THE PRISONER

Officer Boyle testified that the prisoner had told him he had shot Officer Fowler; that God had told him to do it, and that it was only necessary for him to have one shot, as he was a good marksman, having been in the United States army. The prisoner expressed regret when told that another ball remained in the pistol; that he had not known it as he would have shot the s-- of a b-- that looked under the bed where he had concealed himself when arrested.

AN EXCITING SCENE

The Prisoner Tries to Strike A Witness

Robert Jackson was called again, and was describing how the convict had shot the officer, when the prisoner, who was seated near, with a most malignant expression on his face, started up with the intention of striking the witness. Lieut. Kelly grasped him about the neck with both hands, and forced him back in his chair.

The prisoner glared at his intended victim in impotent rage, and muttered between his teeth.

"You are a liar, you s-- of a b--. I'll slug you."

After this episode the hearing was resumed, and Dr. Hartigan testified as to the results of the autopsy which are given above. He said that death resulted from hemorrhage. The hearing was then concluded.

THE VERDICT

After consultation the jury at once brought in the following verdict: "That he said John H. Fowler came to his death between 10 and 11 a.m., September 9th, 1884, at the seventh precinct station corner of 1st and F streets northwest, city of Washington, D.C., from a pistol shot wound of the abdomen, inflicted with a pistol in the hands of John Langster, alias George T. Hudson."

MORE DEVILTRY OF THE PRISONER

Langster was at once removed to his cell, and an officer going there a few minutes later found that he had written on the wall:

"John Langster, murderer of Policeman Fowler."

He had also stuffed the keyhole up again as he did last night.

THE PRISONER TAKEN TO JAIL

Preparations were at once made to remove the prisoner to the jail, where he was taken in the ambulance, under the charge of several officers.

During the progress of the inquest a crowd gathered about the station house, composed mostly of children. These curious youngsters peered into the windows and shouted about the door, and elevated into heroes the boys who were summoned as witnesses. These boys were nothing loath to exhibit themselves to the numerous admirers, and after stepping out of the station house would walk back again right past the officers at the door amid the speechless admiration of the youthful spectators.

Shortly after 12 o'clock Officer Wheelock drove up in the patrol wagon, and Lieut. Kelly going into Langster's cell placed handcuffs upon him and brought him out. Officers Boyle and Harlowe got in the wagon with the prisoner and Lieut. Kelly, and it was driven rapidly off to the jail. The prisoner had been furnished with an old undershirt and a coat and had a handkerchief knotted about his neck. He looked more civilized than when he was before the jury, but his face still wore the scowl.

To the Editor of the Evening Star:

The suggestion of Lansburg Bros. is a noble one, and one that should be seconded by all charitable people. I have known John H. Fowler personally and as a member of this post for several years, and know that the District has lost one of its best officers and his family a kind and loving husband and father, and that when he died his widow did not have a dollar in the world to buy bread for herself and four small children. You can put Meade Post, No. 5, G.A.R. down for $50, with a belief that we can double the amount at our next meeting. We will also give a lecture benefit at an early day for the same cause.

THE WOMAN IN THE CASE

In addition to his name which the prisoner had written twice on the walls of his cell, with a degree of chirographic excellence which does credit to the reform school, he had also written "Miss Katie King, 1359 H street northeast."

Langster told one of the officers that he could have written better if he had been feeling well. The officer remarked that he was not feeling in such high spirits as he was yesterday.

THE REMAINS OF OFFICER FOWLER

were removed to the residence of his father-in-law, Mr. Joshua Lloyd, at 243 8th street southeast, by Mr. Mitchell, the undertaker. The funeral will take place at 3 o'clock on Friday.

Homicide Cases Before the Grand Jury.

The district attorney has this week presented to the grand jury which reconvened on Monday four cases of homicide, the cases being those of Willie Hood, the colored boy charged with causing the death of Columbus Bailey, a white boy, on September 5th, by fracturing his skull with a brick; Robert H. alias "Cuffey" Burrell, charged with killing Walter Jones, on September 7th, by shooting him; John Langster alias Lancaster, the workhouse convict, who is charged with killing Officer John H. Fowler on September 9th, by seizing the officer's pistol and shooting him, and George Hough, the printer, charged with killing William McMahon on September 27th by cutting him. The district attorney, it is said, will present the other homicide cases pending as rapidly as possible and endeavor to have the cases set for speedy trial.

It Amounts to $1,097.20

The Evening Star Newspaper company handed this morning to Mrs. John H. Fowler, the widow of Officer Fowler, of the Metropolitan police force, who was recently killed in the discharge of his duty, the sum of $1,097.20, the amount contributed for her relief by the people of the District. The contributions were first suggest by Messrs. Lansburg & Bro., the well-known merchants, who headed the list, and they were speedily followed by others, The Star being the custodian of the same. Mrs. Fowler says she desires to tender, through The Star, her heartfelt thanks to all who have so generously contributed for the relief of herself and family, and to add that she will ever hold them in the most grateful remembrance. In fact, she was quite overcome with emotion and could not find words to express her gratitude.

Fowler, Milton	d. 23 Oct 1898	1 yr.	R96/359
The Evening Star, October 24, 1898 Anacostia Happenings Death of a Child Caused by Accident Milton Fowler, the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. J.T. Fowler of Minnesota avenue, Anacostia, whose age was a few days over one year, died early yesterday morning from the effects of a strange accident that occurred the preceding day, the particulars of which are as follows: Saturday morning about 10 o'clock Mrs. Fowler was absent from her house, attending to some business at her husband's store, several squares away. The house and children were left in charge of a young colored woman named Eva Bruce. The girl was preparing to give the kitchen floor a scrubbing, having for the purpose a bucket of soap suds. She left the room for a broom, leaving Milton, who was unable to walk, crawling about the floor. She says she was not gone more than a minute, and when she returned she found the boy wedged into the bucket of water, his head downward and his arms tightly pressed by his body inside the receptacle. The child was taken from his position unconscious and apparently dead. Neighbors succeeded, after working some time, in resuscitating him. He was placed under treatment and was apparently doing well. About midnight, however, a change occurred, and the child died at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. Dr. Watson gave a certificate of death. The remains were interred this afternoon in Congressional cemetery.

Fowler. On January 3d, 1879, after a short but painful illness, which he bore with Christian fortitude, Owen F., the beloved son of John H. and Sarah J. Fowler, aged nine years.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is still;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

Day after day we saw him fade
And gently sink away;
Yet often in our hearts we prayed
That he might longer stay.

Dearest Owen, thou hast left us,
We thy loss most deeply feel;
But 'tis God that has bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal.

Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life has fled;
Up in heaven with hearts to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

By His Mother

Suicide in a Graveyard.

Laborer Philip W. Fowler Kills Himself in Congressional Cemetery.

Philip W. Fowler, employed as a laborer in Congressional Cemetery, committed suicide yesterday morning about 9 o'clock by cutting his throat with a penknife. Fowler had been working in the cemetery during the entire summer, mowing the lawn and raking grass. Yesterday morning he reported for duty about 7:30 o'clock and commenced raking grass near the superintendent's house. He worked only a few minutes, however, and then disappeared.

About an hour afterward his absence was discovered, and a search was instituted for him. For several hours all the employes of the cemetery scoured the grounds in search of Fowler, and about 3 o'clock in the afternoon his dead body was found in an unfrequented part of the cemetery. His throat was cut almost from ear to ear, and apparently he had been dead for several hours.

Coroner Woodward was notified, and after investigating the case gave a certificate of death from suicide.

Remains Interred in Congressional Cemetery

The remains of Walter Scott Fowler, who died last Sunday, were interred this afternoon in the family lot in Congressional cemetery. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. E. Hez Swem at the residence of Mr. William W. Wallingsford, 434 10th street southwest, where the deceased had made his home for many years and where he died.

Mr. Fowler was a native and a life-long resident of this city. He was forty-five years of age, and for nearly twenty years past had been continuously in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

The announcement of Mr. Fowler's death, which was unexpected, was in the nature of a severe shock to an unusually large circle of friends and acquaintances, by whom he was most highly regarded. Deceased was the youngest brother of Mrs. Alice Thompson.

---------------------------	----------------	---------	---------------

Fox. On Tuesday last at his residence in this city after a protracted illness, the Rt. Hon. Henry Stephen Fox, late her Britannic Majesty's Minister Plenipotentiary to the government of the United States.

The National Intelligencer, Saturday, October 17, 1846

The Funeral of the late Mr. Fox took place yesterday, all the arrangements for which having (in the absence of Mr. Pakenham) been directed by Mr. Crampton, Secretary of the British Legation. The funeral was attended by the President of the United States (Polk), the Heads of Departments, the Diplomatic Corps, and many of our most respectable citizens.

The religious services were impressively, performed by the Rev. Mr. French, of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

The Pall Bearers were --

The Secretary of State,
Major General Scott,
The Minister of Russia,
The Minister of France,
Commodore Warrington,
The Major of Washington (Seaton)

The remains of the deceased were conveyed to the Congressional Cemetery, and deposited in the public vault to await the instructions of his connections in England.

Note: Uncle was Charles James Fox (1749-1806) British Statesman. One of the great orators of his day; one of Pitt's chief rivals and opponents; dissipated, but honest and progressive in public affairs; advocated religious freedom, abolition of slave trade, electoral reform and other liberal causes; foreign secretary 1782-83 and 1806; supported the cause of the American colonists by his speeches in Parliament.

Columbia Historical Society, Volume 19, page 34

Mr. Fox was one of the most distinguished diplomatists whom the United Kingdom has ever sent to represent its interests in this capital. He was the grandson of that General Fox who led the British troops against the colonists at the battle of Lexington and the nephew of the renowned statesman Charles Fox. The British Legation was at that time located in a tall brick building on the corner of 23rd and Pennsylvania Avenue and was afterwards the home of Slidell of the Slidell-Mason episode. It is now occupied by St. Ann's Infant Asylum.

Vaughan's successor, Henry Stephen Fox, minister for eight years, 1836-1844, was of a very different kidney. He was forty-five years old, with a long line of distinguished ancestors which included Charles II and Henry of Navarre. Like most old bachelors he was queer, but unlike most of them he was extraordinarily queer. It is fairest to Fox to draw first a description of him from the pen of one of his cultivated countrymen, James B. Buckingham, Esquire, who in 1838 visited Washington:

[Fox] has the reputation of being amiable and learned; but he is so rarely seen, either in his own house or out of it, that it is regarded as quite an event to have met with him. His appearance indicates feeble health; and his habits are quite sufficient to account for this. Instead of rising at four in the morning, like the ex-president, John Quincy Adams, he goes to the opposite extreme, of not quitting his bed till one or two in the afternoon; and he avoids mingling with society, either at home or elsewhere, as if it were naturally distasteful to him. Book-auctions, which are frequent here, sometimes tempt him, but scarcely anything else can draw him out. He has the reputation of being a great entomologist, and it is said that his greatest happiness consists in the frequent receipt of cases of insects from the various parts of the world." (J.S. Buckingham, America: Historical, Statistic, and Descriptive [2 vols., 1841] I, 235-36)

Appropos of times of rising, one recalls the case of the French philosopher Descartes, whose life-long habit was to get up at noon. While spending a winter in Stockholm, the Queen of Sweden insisted on his rising at five o'clock in the morning. He died before the winter was over. The moral seems to be, don't let the Queens of Sweden bluff you out of a habit that you like.

Some further account of Minister Fox is largely derived from the book of Mrs. Seaton mentioned above: He was excessively thin, with the cadaverous complexion of a confirmed opium-eater. Scrupulously neat, he wore a blue swallow-tailed coat made by a Rio de Janero tailor. His high collar extended almost to the crown of his head, and his large hat suggested that of a West India planter. He always carried a huge, green silk umbrella. He never entertained women, as he disdained to shake hands with them. He knew his colleagues only by candle-light. At a funeral of one of them, he remarked, "How very odd we all look by daylight." He played at cards for high stakes, and never paid a debt if he could avoid it. On one occasion his creditors surrounded the legation and demanded that he name a definite date for satisfying their claims. He appeared at a window and announced, "The Day of Judgment." One of his famous mots is recorded by Lord Byron, "I met the other day Henry Fox, who has been dreadfully ill, and, as he says, 'so changed that his oldest creditor would not know him.'"

Fox's legation was the Kuhn House, which was built in the 'twenties by Capt. Joseph L. Kuhn, paymaster in the Marine Corps. It was on the south side of K Street between 24th Street and Washington Circle, just west of the circle. It now forms the northeast part of St. Ann's Infant Asylum. Its appearance, both inside and out, is much the same as in Fox's day. He continued to occupy this house after the appointment of his successor and he died there on October 13, 1846. His tomb is in the Congressional Cemetery.

When in 1842 Charles Dickens visited Washington he put up at Fuller's Hotel on Pennsylvania Avenue, and was entertained by Fox at the British legation.

In connection with the death of Hon. Henry Stephen Fox, a copy of the following letter from the President of the United States was found in the cemetery records:

"Washington, 16 Sept. 1847.

Sir:

You are hereby requested to set apart in the Congressional Burial Ground an appropriate spot for the interment of the body of the late Mr. Fox, formerly Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of her Britannic Majesty to the United States.

Yours respectfully,
James K. Polk

The Funeral of the lamented Dr. Charles S. Frailey took place yesterday afternoon, from his late residence on New York avenue, and was attended by a very large concourse of people, including the Grand Lodges of the Masonic and Odd Fellows' Orders, and by several subordinate lodges.

The services on the part of the family were performed by Rev. Dr. Pyne, of the Episcopal church; the eulogies at the grave (Congressional burying ground) by P.G.M. French and G.M. Whiting, of the Masonic Order; the Masonic prayer by Rev. Byron Sunderland; and that on the part of the Odd-Fellows by B.E. Gittings, Chaplain.

Wither's and Weber's bands accompanied the procession.

History of the Naval Lodge, No. 4, F.A.A.M.

p. 353-354: Grand Master, 1855-56

Doctor Frailey was born December 29, 1803, in the City of Baltimore, Md., and was there educated, graduating from the University of Maryland in 1825, with a diploma as M.D. Removing to Ohio with a view of practicing his profession he was soon diverted therefrom by receiving an appointment as Assistant Surgeon in the United States Army, and repaired to Fort Brady, at Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, where the extreme rigors of the climate soon implanted in him the germ of that disease which afflicted him through life. In the year 1835 he removed to Washington to accept a clerkship in the Land Office, where his abilities soon raised him to the position of chief clerk. He afterwards became chief clerk of the Interior Department, and spent the remainder of his life in this city.

Bro. Frailey was a man of distinguished ability, of vigorous and cultivated intellect, of stern integrity, and of honest purpose, and his untimely taking off at the age of fifty-two deprived the jurisdiction of one of its most valued leaders. A classmate at the University has borne testimony that he was a most congenial and attractive companion, very brilliant in conversation, with a fine tenor voice, and immensely popular with both his fellow-students and the faculty. A daughter, Miss Frailey, now residing in Washington recalls his charming personality, his wonderful memory, and his unusual ability as a reader, impersonating the characters so thoroughly as to lose his identity.

He was entered, passed, and raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason between January 31 and February 4, 1828, in Tuscarora Lodge, No. 59, then held at New Philadelphia, in the State of Ohio. In 1846 he dimitted and became one of the original members of National Lodge, No. 12, of this jurisdiction. He was elected Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge in 1847, and acceptably filled that office until 1854, when he was elected Grand Master, being one of only three in our local history to reach that exalted station without previous service as Master of a subordinate lodge.

To Bro. Frailey is due the inauguration of the present elaborate system of correspondence, the first report along the lines now followed having been presented and signed by him as Chairman of the Committee on Correspondence in 1849.

He received the Capitular degrees in Columbia Chapter, No. 1, R.A.M., in 1854.

Bro. Frailey also possesses the distinction of being the first Past Grand Master to receive a jewel appropriate to his station, and the circumstances surrounding its presentation were as sad as they were unusual. The jewel having been authorized and procured the presentation was delayed by the condition of the brother's health until a time when it was seen that the Grim Destroyer was marching on with relentless steps, when a committee repaired to the home of the sufferer, and in the presence only of his wife, Past Grand Master B.B. French, in a few beautiful and feeling words, made the presentation, to which Bro. Frailey submitted a written reply which is preserved in the Report of the Grand Lodge Proceedings of 1857 (p. 11), and recommend to the perusal of serious readers as the utterance of one who stood upon the brink of eternity and to whom in some measure had already come "the light that never was on sea or land."

Nineteen days thereafter, on May 24, 1857, he passed away.

His funeral took place two days later at Congressional Cemetery, under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, with Grand Master George C. Whiting conducting the Masonic service, and Past Grand Master B.B. French as eulogist.

A friend and admirer has left this tribute to his memory:

"A grave bedewed with manly tears,
A name spotless and bright,
The sum of all true fame."

Andrew J. Frank Dead

Former Naval Officer Passes Away in His Eighty-Seventh Year

Mr. Andrew J. Frank, father of Capt. J.A. Frank of the sanitary office, police department, died this morning in his 37th year, at 10:50 o'clock, at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Cordelia Low, No. 477 N street southwest.

Mr. Frank was born in King George county, Va., in 1814, and came to Washington sixty-four years ago. For a number of years prior to the outbreak of the civil war he was a sailing master for the United States coast survey, but after war began he entered the regular navy. He was soon promoted, reaching eventually the highest of the warrant positions. He took part in many of the naval battles along the James river and with the North Atlantic squadron, and was frequently complimented for meritorious services.

Two sons and one daughter--those above named and Mr. James Frank--survive him. The funeral will take place Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and the interment will be made in Congressional cemetery.

John A. Frank Dead

Was Sanitary Officer for Many Years

John A. Frank, sanitary officer in the police department, whose serious illness was mentioned in yesterday's Star, died of pneumonia at his home, 502 G street northeast, this afternoon, about 1 o'clock. No man ever served in the police department whose death brought sorrow to a wider circle of friends than does that of the popular sanitary officer. Born in Virginia in 1844, he came to this city when he was quite a boy, and became connected with the police department as a station-keeper in 1880. Recognizing his ability, the superintendent of police detailed him at headquarters as sanitary officer after he was formally sworn in as a member of the force. During the performance of his duties for a number of years he had charge of the work of looking after the indigent sick and sending home persons who were here without means of returning to their places of residence.

This work brought him in contact with persons of all classes, and he became well known in all sections of the United States. He was probably as well known to the veterans in several of the homes as were some of the officials of those institutions. Most of the old soldiers who had had dealings with him knew him as Capt. Frank, and even after he gave up the work of assisting them many of them called upon him when they came to this city. It was with genuine sorrow that Major Sylvester learned of the death of the sanitary officer this afternoon. The deceased was a member of Justus H. Rathbone Lodge, K. of P. His wife and five children survive him. Three children now married were those of his first wife. Arrangements for his funeral have not yet been made.

Arrangements have been made for the funeral of John A. Frank, the police sanitary officer, to take place at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Services will be conducted over the remains at his late home, 502 G street northeast, and the body will be placed in the receiving vault at Congressional cemetery. The delay in completing the arrangements was caused by the absence from the city of a son of the deceased. He will reach here tomorrow in time to attend the funeral.

Death of Henry Frankland

Fugitive From Asylum for Insane Commits Suicide in Illinois

Information was received here last night of the death at Springfield, Ill., of Harry G. Frankland, a former resident of this city, who escaped from St. Elizabeth's Asylum for the Insane in August. Frankland left here soon after he got away from the asylum, and although every effort was made to find him the authorities were unable to locate him. Mr. William H. Kimball, brother-in-law of the deceased, received a message last night telling of his death.

Mr. Kimball called at police headquarters and had Sergeant Carter ask the Springfield authorities about the circumstances attending Frankland's death. This afternoon a response was received from the chief of the Springfield police department, giving the information that he had committed suicide by shooting himself. Relatives will telegraph instructions later in the day respecting the disposition of the body.

Thomas Sabins, captain of the boat, telegraphed from Fort Washington a report of the drowning and asked that the police search for the body. He explained that a buoy had been left to indicate the place where the drowning occurred. Franklin who was about forty-three years old, lived in Riley court southwest and was well known along the river front. He was recently employed by Capt. Robert Knott, owner of the oyster boat named and yesterday he started for the lower Potomac. The Evening Star, April 16, 1912, p. 14 Body of Drowned Man Identified By Police Proves to Be That of Edward Franklin, Lost From Boat Last November The body of Edward Franklin, drowned from an oyster boat in the Potomac river November 10 of last year was found this morning by the crew of the mine planter, Royal P. Frank. Identification was established by tattoo marks on the arm of the corpse which answered the description given the police when the drowning occurred. Franklin, a white man, and about forty-four years of age, had his home in Raleigh court. He was taken on as one of the crew on the oyster boat Bessie Ford, Capt. Bob Knott, for a trip after oysters in Wicomico river last fall. He was lost overboard on the way to the oyster grounds. The crew of the Bessie Ford hunted for the body, but was unable to locate it. A buoy was set at the place where he went overboard. In the vicinity the police boat afterward dragged the river without success. The body was recovered this morning by the mine planter's crew and towed to the wharf at Fort Hunt. The authorities at the army post notified Washington. The police boat went after and brought back the corpse. Photographer Sanberg bared the arms and revealed the marks in India ink. They were immediately recognized as answering the description of Franklin.

William L. Franzley, a brakeman on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, was run over by a car near 2d and L streets northeast this morning about 9:20 o'clock and instantly killed. Conductor David Frye, who had charge of the crew, was standing on the ground near the train at the time and witnessed the accident. He was unable to be of any assistance, however, and could only signal the engineer to stop the train in time to prevent further mutilation of the body. The accident occurred on a side track that is used in connection with the work of hauling material for use on the new union station. The train was being backed along the siding and was soon to make a stop. Brakeman Franzley was standing on the rear platform of the car, and it is believed that when he attempted to get off the moving train he lost his footing or was tripped by a projection and thrown upon the tracks. His body rested directly on one rail and two wheels of the end car passed over his body before Engineer J.D. Gibson could stop the train. Besides the injury to his body his skull was fractured and minor cuts and bruises were inflicted. Surgeons were called, but there was nothing that they could do, as the man's life had been crushed out in an instant. The body was cared for by the railroad men until the arrival of the dead wagon, when it was conveyed to the morgue. The deceased was 28 years old and unmarried. He had boarded at the house of Mr. Layton, 413 2d street northwest for several months. Relatives of the unfortunate man live in Georgetown. They were notified of the accident, and will probably take charge of the remains. Coroner Nevitt heard the statements of witnesses and gave a certificate of accidental death. The Washington Times, December 31, 1904 Brakeman Franzley's Body Taken In Charge Members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen yesterday took charge of the body of Brakeman William L. Franzley, who fell between two freight cars and was cut in two pieces by the wheels. The remains were turned over to J. William Lee, undertaker, and were prepared for burial. The police and trainmen made efforts to find the dead man's relatives today, but at noon they had not met with success. Franzley, who was twenty-two years old, boarded at 413 Second Street northwest, and but little was known of him there save that he worked on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

Drowned in a Post Hole

A Little Boy the Victim of a Singular and Distressing Tragedy

A distressing accident occurred yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. Charles Frazier, who lives a short distance south of Congress Heights, by which his five-year-old son, Stewart Harrison Frazier, lost his life by drowning.

The mother of the little fellow was absent from home at the time of the occurrence, having come to Washington to meet her husband, who is an employee of the city post office. When Mrs. Frazier kissed her child and drove away Stewart returned to his play. A short distance from Mr. Frazier's house Edward Arnold, a carpenter, living in Anacostia, and Allen Jones, who is employed by Mr. Frazier as a man-of-all-work, were engaged in putting up a fence. A number of post holes had been dug by the men for the purpose, some of the holes had during the past few days become filled with water. Allen Jones said last night to a Star reporter that while Mr. Arnold and he were absent from the scene of their work for only a moment the little boy fell into a hole, head first. Jones saw the child in not more, he said, than a minute after he had fallen in and at once extricated him from his position. The boy was then unconscious. Every effort was made to resuscitate him and Dr. S. Harrison of Anacostia, who was sent for, did all for the little fellow that medical skill could suggest, but all the efforts were to no purpose, and the child died without regaining consciousness.

Stewart was a handsome boy, and was well known in Anacostia, where he frequently visited his sister, Mrs. Wm. H. Brinkley. The bereaved parents were greatly shocked upon being notified of the sad affair, and the mother was prostrated by the sudden blow.

Funeral of William B. Frazier

The funeral of William B. Frazier will take place at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from 732 1/2 12th street southeast. His death occurred at El Paso, Tex., February 28. William B. Frazier was born June 4, 1878, at Joliet, Ill. and lived twenty-five years in Mattoon, Ill., but left that place three years ago to come to Washington. He was employed in the naval gun factory at the Washington navy yard as machinist, and two years ago was married to Miss Marcella Foley of this city. He left here four months ago and went to El Paso for the benefit of his health. It was believed he was improving, but he contracted a cold which developed into pneumonia and proved fatal.

Mr. Frazier was a member of the Congregational Church of Mattoon. His wife and a son and four sisters survive him. The sisters are Mrs. Charles E. Gabbert of Crowley, Ill.; Mrs. W.E. Thutchen and Misses Mary and Florence Frazier of Mattoon. Five brothers, James, Simon, George, Alex and Thomas, also survive him. He was a member of the Knights of Pythias and the international Association of Machinists.

Run Over and Killed by a Railroad Train

Mr. Florence Frederick, driver of a two-horse wagon, loaded with sand, was run over last evening by a southern train of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at the southern end of the Anacostia bridge, and the driver and his two horses were instantly killed. Mr. Frederick was thrown a distance of seventy-five feet, and one of his horses was carried a distance of 130 feet by the engine, and the other horse some 60 feet on the cow catcher. The man was picked up and carried to his late residence in Uniontown, and several physicians were summoned as soon as possible, but life was extinct before any of them arrived. Deceased was a German, 52 years old, and leaves a wife and five children. The flagman stationed at that point warned Frederick of his danger, and not to attempt to cross before the train passed, but he whipped his horses up to pass, notwithstanding the warning.

The Inquest

This morning, Dr. Patterson, the coroner, held the inquest--the jurors being as follows: Jos. S. Worthington, F.A. Young, S.F. Shreve, R. Swan, U. Swan, L. Bingham, D. Lee, George Anderson, R.F. Martin, William Martin, James Webb and John Johnson.

The first witness was Henry Haggermaker, who testified that he has a shop in the house of deceased, but a few steps from the crossing, and saw the accident; the deceased was whipping up his horse to get across and the engine struck the team, which was less than 30 feet from the track when witness first saw deceased. The engine was going south and witness heard it coming; did not notice whether there was any head light. Before witness looked out he heard the flagman calling to Frederick to stop. It was about twilight and light enough for the deceased to have seen the engine some distance off. If the team had not been unmanageable, the deceased could have checked up after the flagman hailed him to stop. Frederick was whipping the horses when he first saw him. Both the horses seemed afraid of the cars. The flagman did his best to stop deceased by calling to him; was positive that the whistle was blown for the crossing, and also the signal for brakes given before the team was struck. The track is about four feet above the road bed; thinks that the train was running at about forty miles per hour. They usually run at a high rate of speed. Deceased was in the habit of crossing the track daily, and it seemed to witness that after deceased whipped up the horses to get them across they became unmanageable and he could not hold them up.

Peter L. Davis testified that he was talking with Haggermaker and the flagman; heard the whistle blow for the crossing. The flagman got his lamp and went to his post; deceased had just got off of the bridge, and he put whip to his horses. The flagman warned him not to come any further. Deceased said "Let me alone, I can make it." The flagman then went in front of the team, but had to get back to keep from being run over. When he started to make the rise the whistle blew down brakes--the engine being 30 or 40 yards from the crossing. The engine struck the team just as the front wheels reached the track. The train was checked in a short distance below and run back. The horses appeared to be under control, and the head light as also the signal lights and flags were displayed on the train. The train was going at the rate of 20 to 25 miles an hour. The deceased had time to have stopped after the first hailing. It was perhaps three-fourths of a minute from the time the whistle blew to the time of the accident.

T.W. Roberts, the flagman, testified that when the whistle blew he heard the deceased coming over the bridge, and heard him start his horses up. Witness was at his post before he heard the whistle; signaled with the light to stop but deceased continued to whip his horses, and witness then called to him, when he answered, "Get out of the way," and continued to whip them. Witness jumped out of his (F.'s) way just in time to save himself, and as the train struck the team he turned his head. The first signal was given over 900 feet above the crossing. The train was running from 20 to 25 miles per hour. Witness was standing on the track with Davis, when he saw the train about a mile off, and then he got his light from the store. The horses came to the track at a full gallop.

The Verdict

The jury rendered the following verdict: "That the said Florence Frederick came to his death at the crossing of the Washington City and Point Lookout railroad and Monroe street, Uniontown, D.C., by reason of injuries received in a collision with an engine of said road. The jury are of the opinion that the flagman and other employees of the road are in no wise to blame in the matter. But we earnestly urge that the District authorities compel the railroad company to place such safeguards at this point as shall render such accidents impossible.

Crushed to Death By Cars

The Disaster on the B & P Railroad -- Graphic Account of It

Narrow Escape of the Ex-President's Party

Touching Scenes and Incidents

An accident occurred on the Baltimore and Potomac railroad on Saturday afternoon which resulted in the killing of two persons and the wounding of fifteen or twenty more, some seriously. This accident happened to the train on which ex-President Hayes and his family and the Cleveland Troop and others, also President Ells, of the Lake Erie Railroad, left this city. The train was run into by two engines coupled and running as one--in railroad parlance known as a double header--about 300 yards south of Severn Station (about 27 miles from Washington and 14 miles from Baltimore,) killing two men--Mr. John Oliver, a baggage master, of Baltimore and Mr. J. Weimer Young, of Shamokin, Pennsylvania. The train containing the ex-President and party was in charge of Capt. Armacost, drawn by engine 293 Pennsylvania R.R. John Unglaub engineer, McKeever, fireman, and consisted of eight cars--the first being a Pullman car, containing a number of persons from Shamokin and vicinity--the second and third, the Cleveland troops (the ex-President's escort); next, the car containing the President and party, next, Mr. Ells private car and some ordinary cars. The train left Washington at a few minutes to one o'clock, and being run as a special stopped for orders at Bowie and Odenton, the conductor receiving orders to run to Severn regardless of the "double header." The President and party had just lunched and was conversing when the accident occurred. On the double header were Engineer Freeburn, Fireman Frere, John Roy conductor, and John Oliver, baggage agent; on engine No. 1 (B&P) Jacob Rider, engineer; B. Everhardt, fireman and Robert Oliver, conductor. They were running at the rate of 40 miles per hour. The north bound train expecting to meet the engine was slowing up and the speed had been reduced to 15 or 20 miles per hour.

The Collision

Just as the train rounded the curve, which is in a cut, the engineer of the special noticed the approaching engines, and, putting on his air brake, reversed his engine, but it was too late. Mr. Rider, the engineer of No. 147, before reaching Severn saw that they were going too fast and shut down, and as soon as Freeburn discovered his mistake he reversed his engine, but without avail, for at two minutes to two o'clock the engines came together with a crash followed by the hissing of steam. Captain Amacost, the conductor, was at the time in the third car of the train (that in front of the President's), and states that when rounding the curve he noticed that the engineer had applied the air brake and reversed the engine, and as soon as he felt this the thought flashed on his mind that the "double header" was before him, and then came the shock, followed by the noise made by the escaping steam. Jumping out at once, he saw the three engines on their sides, all pitched over to the east side of the track, the first sleeping car having been telescoped by the tender and cab of the engine. The first car in turn knocked in a portion of the second one. Amid the sound of escaping steam

Cries of Distress were heard from the first sleeper. The Cleveland troop, Capt. Harris, and some of the hands of a freight train laying on the siding and Mr. A.J. Disney, who has charge of this section, with his men and others, immediately set to work taking out the people from this car--it being then supposed that those on the engine had jumped off. Mr. D.D. Domer (editor of the Shamokin Times and brother of Rev. Dr. S. Domer and Mr. G.W. Domer, civil engineer) was found with a piece of timber and the tender resting on him. Fortunately there was a jack on the freight train, with which the weight was lifted; and he was extricated and found badly injured.

The Ex-President and Mrs. Hayes

with their party, were somewhat shaken up. Minnie, one of the servants, had her head forced through a panel. With this exception none of them were hurt, and Mr. Hayes and his sons joined the party of rescue in assisting to extricate the injured, while Mrs. Hayes and the ladies assisted in binding up their wounds.

Mr. J. Wimer Young's Body was found under the tank on the floor of the first car, crushed fearfully about the body, and Mr. Freeburn was covered with coal, his head bleeding and blood running from his legs, which were badly lacerated. He was at first supposed to be dead.

The Body of Mr. John Oliver was not found for some time. It was under the cylinders of engines 183 and 1, which were completely dovetailed. His entrails protruded and the upper portion of his body was literally cooked by the steam.

Dr. Schneider, surgeon of the Cleveland Troop, was fortunately on the train and attended the most seriously wounded.

Within a few moments after the accident a message was sent to Baltimore, and one also to Dr. C.B. White, living some three miles away, and it was not long ere Dr. White was on the ground. Drs. Latimer, Atkinson and Bosely, of Baltimore--Dr. Thompson remaining at the Union Dept to attend those arriving--were sent out on the train which was sent for the President. A wrecking train was also sent out, in charge of Mr. H. Hassan, of the N.C. R.R.

The Wounded

were made as comfortable as possible and taken back to Odenton, where they remained until a new piece of track had been constructed around the wreck, which took some two and a half or three hours. Mr. Unglaub, the engineer of the north bound train, was badly bruised and is supposed to be internally injured. As soon as he was released, he having remained in his car and been forced into the drawing-room of the car occupied by the Shamokin party, he attempted to walk but fell. He was taken to the station and Mrs. Disney placed a bed in her front room for him and had one fixed up in the office for Mr. Freeburn and another for Mr. U. in her parlor.

He Stuck to His Engine

Mr. Unglaub stated that he saw the engines as soon as he was about turning the curve, and might have jumped, but he put on the brakes and reversed his engine and stuck by his engine, but they were too close then to prevent the collision. The ex-president and Mrs. Hayes went around among the wounded, as did others of the party, speaking encouragingly to them. Mrs. Hayes having heard of Mr. Unglaub's gallant conduct, with Mr. Hayes called on him. She said, "You have acted and we have to thank you that so many of us are safe. Your conduct has saved our lives." Mr. Hayes added, "Yes, sir, not one of our coach is injured." Mr. Unglaub, with much feeling, said, "But, my God, what has become of the poor souls who were in the first car?" Mrs. Hayes remarked hastily, for her feelings were getting the better of her, "Please say no more, for you could not help it."

The Part of a Real Hero

The Members of the Cleveland Troop surprised all present by the system with which they worked. It was remarked that all on the train who were uninjured did all they could to alleviate the sufferings of those that were hurt. Ex-President Hayes and Mr. Ells, of the Lake Erie railroad, tendered everything on their cars if necessary to relieve suffering, and Mrs. Hayes tore up one of her skirts for bandages.

The Ex-President Continues His Trip

A special train sent out from Baltimore took the President to that city, where he arrived about 4:30 o'clock and remained at the residence of Mr. S.M. Shoemaker until a new piece of track had been built around the wreck and the cars of the train which were uninjured--which included the special--could be sent in. This was accomplished in about four hours, and in that time the wounded, with the exception of Mr. Freeburn, were taken into Baltimore. Mr. Freeburn was brought to his sister's house, on 4 1/2 street in this city, yesterday.

The Killed and Wounded

There were two killed--J. Weimer Young, merchant of Shamokin, Pa.; John Oliver, baggage-master, Baltimore and Potomac railroad, and ten wounded, as follows: D.D. Domer, editor Shamokin (Pa.) Times, wounded about the head and right arm, condition critical; J.W. Somers, Shamokin, cut on the left side of the head, condition critical; J.A. Weaver, mayor-elect of Shamokin, cut on the left side of the head; W.P. Morall, Shamokin, hurt about the head; D.G. Geiger, postmaster at Shamokin, head and hands cut; W.H.M. Orem, Frank Crone, W.W. Littlehales, Shamokin, head cut; G. Marshall, Shamokin, hand cut; John Purcell, Shamokin, both hands hurt; W.L. Huntly, Shamokin, leg hurt; G.W. Barnhardt, Girardville, head cut; Edward Williams, of First Cleveland (Ohio) Troop, right ankle fractured; Dr. Taggart, Frackville, knee injured; H.A. Weldy, Tamaqua, head cut; W. Arden Jones, Shamokin, bruised about the body; C.G. Homer, Girardville, back injured; C.F. Holshoe, Shamokin, slight sprain--18. Railroad employees--G.G. Orr, Pullman car conductor, right ankle cut; James Johnson, Pullman car porter, left leg broken; H. Freeburn, engineer, skull fractured and leg badly cut; John M. Unglaub, engineer, injured in side, leg and head; Robert Oliver, conductor, bruised; E.M. Skeen, train hand, G. Frere, fireman, Jacob Rider, engineer, Robert Everhart, fireman, and William Talbot, train hand, slightly injured--10.

A Special Dispatch from Shamokin

says that "D.D. Domer, editor of the Shamokin Times and John W. Somers are both lying in a critical condition. The latter will scarcely recover. The injuries of the others are very slight. The funeral of J. Weimer Young, who was killed instantly, will take place Tuesday. Mr. Young was about 48 years old, and leaves a family.

Removal of the Bodies

Mr. Oliver's body was taken to Baltimore from which his funeral will take place, and Mr. Young's body to Shamokin, Pa.

Death of Engineer Freeburn

Mr. Freeburn, who was brought here yesterday, was able to converse a little before he left Severn, but after his arrival here about all he said was to complain of coldness in his legs. He was taken to his sister's house on 4 1/2 street near F southwest, and although yesterday afternoon he brightened somewhat, at night he commenced to sink, and between 3 and 4 o'clock this morning he died. Mr. Freeburn was one of the best known engineers in the service of the company. He was about 37 years of age, a native of Phillipsburg, Dauphin county, Pa., and since he was 15 years old has been engaged in railroading, being on the Pennsylvania Central, Northern Central and the B & P since its commencement, and has always been regarded as one of the most careful employees of the road. His mistake (the failure to keep out of the way of the special train), which led to the accident is a puzzle to those who know him. It has been ascertained that he must have had full control of his faculties just before he reached the station, for he blew his whistle for the crossing and his engine was reversed. One who has worked with him since his boyhood says that for a moment he must have become oblivious as to where he was. It was found that besides the injuries to his legs, his skull was fractured both in front and rear. The deceased engineer was a member of Harmony Lodge, No. 17, F.A.A.M., Lafayette, R.A. Chapter, No. 5, and Columbia Commandery, No. 2, K.T. He was not married. His remains will be interred in Congressional Cemetery on Thursday. The story that he ran ahead in violation of orders is denied by friends, who say his orders were to go ahead, make all possible time, and await orders en route.

The B & P Railroad Accident

The Inquest of the Body of Engineer Freeburn

The inquest on the body of Mr. H.H. Freeburn, better known as Harry Freeburn, the engineer who was injured in the accident at Severn, on the B & P R.R., on Saturday last, was continued yesterday after our report closed.

Capt. Calvin Armacost, conductor of the special train, testified that he left Washington at 12:50; received orders at Benning's to run as "second section of number one," and at Odenton not to pass Severn (3 1/4 miles north of that point) till engines 1 and 147 had arrived. The next thing he knew was the application of air brakes, within 300 yards of Severn, and the crash came within 50 yards of the switch. The curve is in a cut, and the approaching train could not be seen till quite close.

John Roy, conductor, testified that he was on Saturday morning running on the extra, bound south. Left Baltimore at about 1:33 p.m. Witness read his orders, "Run to Severn regardless of second section, number one; all third class schedules are annulled." This means that he had the right of the track to that point, and then should have gone on the siding by the north end. Did not do this. Both conductor and engineer sign these orders, and with this both complied. They are required to open the switch--the conductor being responsible for this. About 400 yards from the switch Freeburn shut his engine off and blew a long blast. Witness took his keys out and got on the tank, expecting to open the switch. A young man walked across the track in front of the telegraph office and witness thought he had an order for them. The engineer blew "up brakes," which means "go ahead," and he got on the step ready to catch the orders; found the young man had no orders and sprang back into the engine to stop the engineer; by this time they had reached the south end of the siding when the other train was approaching around the curve. The engineer blew "down brakes," applied his air brake and reversed his engine. When within 10 feet of the train witness jumped off. They were running then 20 to 25 miles per hour. It was witness' business to have stopped the engineer, and he would have done so were it not for seeing the man on the platform. The witness with some feeling said: "Engineer Freeburn and myself are solely responsible, and as he is dead, I am the responsible party for this accident." Mr. Lappin read the order to them twice and distinctly before they left.

Frank Lappin (train dispatcher), of Baltimore, testified to the orders as above, and the order books from Union depot and Odenton were shown; corroborating the testimony.

of the jury was that death was caused by injuries received in a collision near Severn station, on the Baltimore & Potomac railroad, which was caused by the neglect of said Freeburn to obey orders.

The funeral of the late H.H. Freeburn, better known as Harry Freeburn, who died on Monday last from injuries received in the accident, on Saturday last, at Severn, on the B & P R.R., took place this afternoon, from his sister's residence, on 4 1/2 street below F street southwest. Prior to the hour of the funeral there were many callers to take a look at the remains. The body was attired in a black suit and encased in a handsome walnut casket with silver bar handles, furnished by the Lee Bros.; and on it were the following floral tributes: A broken column, from his friends at the St. James' Hotel; a pillow, from the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and a cross from the officers and employees of the B & P R.R., with the letters H.F. and B.P. R.R. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Samuel Domer, of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, and there were present Harmony Lodge, No. 17; Lafayette Chapter, No. 5, and Columbia Commandery, No. 2, of Masons, and a large representation from the Locomotive Engineers. Two pall-bearers were taken from each organization. Many of the officials of the road were present. The cortege proceeded to the Congressional Cemetery, where the interment took place.

Tribute of Respect
At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Public Schools, held on Tuesday, July 3d, Dr. F.S. Walsh, from the Third District, announced in suitable terms the death of Mrs. Margaret Freeman, late teacher in the public schools, and submitted the following resolution, which was passed unanimously:
Resolved, That this Board has heard with regret of the decease of Mrs. Margaret Freeman, for the last nine years an efficient teacher in the Third District, that while we bow with submission to the will of Divine Providence, we deplore her loss to our public schools, and heartily sympathize with her bereaved family and friends.
The Annual Report of the Trustees of the Public School, 1860, p. 8
With regret we announce the death of another teacher since our last report.
Mrs. Margaret Freeman late principal of Primary No. 6, in the third District was elected in 1851 as assistant in Primary No. 2, of the same district and served uninterruptedly in our Public Schools from that date until her death. Her loss to the school over which she presided was deeply felt and expressed at the time by members of the Board, who were best acquainted with that loss. She was a lady well versed in the duties of her profession with a sense of order nice and discriminating, and a talent superior to the obstacles of her calling; after nine years service in our schools, she died on the sixteenth of June last, leaving to her pupils the remembrance of every quality that could adorn the school room and deprive it of its irksomeness.

The Late Major B.B. French -- His Death This Morning
Sketch of His Life -- Arrangements for the Funeral
Our entire community were shocked today by the unexpected announcement that Major B.B. French, who has for several years past held many important positions of honor and trust in our midst, expired at 1 o'clock this morning at his residence, No. 137 East Capitol street. He has been in ill health for a few weeks past, but it was not feared that he was afflicted with a mortal disease. The immediate cause of death was disease of the heart. He leaves a wife and two sons, one of whom is resident of Boston, and was with him at the time of his death.

He had been sick for about two weeks, but rallied so much that yesterday morning he arose, dressed, and was so apparently well that he played three games of cribbage with his eldest son, Frank, who had been telegraphed for from Boston. About eleven o'clock a.m. he was taken with a pain in the region of the heart, which never left him. It was severe at times that he could be heard far outside the premises moaning with pain. Doctors C.M. Ford and William P. Johnston tried all in their power to even relieve his excessive suffering without avail. He was such a strong, hearty man that nature made a fearful struggle to hold its own, only to the most excruciating agony of the deceased. The last time he was seen in public was on the occasion of the press excursion to Glymont, a few weeks since, when he seemed as well as ever, but complained of excessive fatigue in walking home from the boat.

Mr. French's career in the Masonic fraternity is well known. At the time of his decease he was Lieutenant Grand Commander of the Supreme Council of the Thirty-Third degree, besides having been Grand Master of the District of Columbia, and Grand Master of the Knights Templar. Indeed so allied had his name become with Masonry that one of the most flourishing lodges in this city bears his name.

Sketch of His Life

Benjamin B. French was born in Chester, Rockingham county, New Hampshire, on the 4th day of September, 1800. He was the son of Daniel and Mercy French. His mother's maiden name was Brown. She was the daughter of Benjamin Brown, of Chester, and sister of Francis Brown, an eminent divine, who at the time of his death, in 1821, was president of Dartmouth college. Mr. French was the only child of his mother, who died when he was eighteen months old. His father was a lawyer of high standing, and was for several years attorney general of the State of New Hampshire. He received a good common school and academic education, and it was the earnest desire of his father and friends that he should enter college, which he declined to do. In 1819, he went to Boston with a view of going to sea. Disappointed in obtaining a berth on board a ship, he enlisted as a soldier in the army of the United States and was stationed at Fort Warren, on Governor's Island, in the harbor of Boston, with a detachment of the eighth regiment of infantry. He was, soon after enlisting, appointed a sergeant and performed his duty faithfully for about four months, when, at the earnest solicitation of his friends, who provided a substitute, he left the army on the 12th day of September, 1819.

He then returned to his father's, and although contrary to his own inclinations, commenced the study of law, which he pursued with diligence, for five years, that being the time fixed by the bar rules of New Hampshire. At the February term of the court of common pleas for the county of Rockingham, held at Portsmouth, in 1825, Mr. French was admitted an attorney at law; and in the month of March following, commenced the practice at Hookwot, in the county of Merrimack, from whence, in September, he removed to Sutton, and married Elizabeth S. Richardson, daughter of the Hon. William M. Richardson, chief justice of the supreme court of New Hampshire. Mr. French entered immediately into full practice, and with his industry and natural business tact, would probably have taken a very respectable place at the bar had he continued his profession. He was elected assistant clerk of the senate of New Hampshire, in June, 1826, to which office he was twice reelected. In 1832 he was elected a representative from the town of Newport, in his native State, to which he had removed, and was reelected, for the two succeeding years. For three years of the time Mr. French resided at Newport, he was editor of the New Hampshire Spectator, a democratic paper; and its subscription list more than doubled while it was under his control. It was afterwards united with the New Hampshire Argus, and edited by Hon. Edmund Burke, and is still published at Newport.

He was appointed an assistant clerk of the U.S. House of Representatives in 1833, and at once resigned his position in New Hampshire and removed his family to this city. He held the situation of chief clerk under Mr. Garland and Col. McNulty, and when the latter left the office of Clerk of the House, on the 18th of January, 1845, the deceased was elected to that office. He was also unanimously re-elected by the next and several succeeding Congresses.

He was appointed Commissioner of Public Buildings under President Pierce, and again under President Lincoln's administration, continuing in that office until it was abolished under President Johnson's administration in 1868, since which time, until the first of July, he was employed in the Treasury Department until a few weeks since, when he resigned.

Major F. evinced considerable talent as a poet. General Schenck, of Ohio, it will be remembered, had the office of Commissioner of Public Building (which Major F. held) abolished in an appropriation bill under President Johnson's administration, styling the deceased "The Poet Laureate of the Administration," he having a short while before published some verses laudatory of the President under the title "Andrew Jackson and Andrew Johnson."

During his long residence in this city, besides the National offices of honor and trust he held, Major French was for many years President of the Boards of Alderman and Common Council respectively. He was also member of the Levy Court, and the Oldest Inhabitant's Association. He was known throughout the country for his high standing in the Masonic fraternity. He was Grand Master of the District and Past Most Eminent Grand Commander of the Knights Templar of the United States.

His title of Major, by which he has always been known, came from the fact of his having held a major's commission in the New Hampshire militia.

Arrangements for the Funeral

The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, the interment to be made in the Congressional Cemetery. Anthony Buchly, the undertaker, has prepared for the remains a walnut coffin, covered with black cloth, on the lid of which is a silver plate inscribed: "Benjamin Brown French. Born September 4th, 1800; died August 12th, 1870." The entire Masonic fraternity will participate.

Funeral of the Late Major B.B. French

The obsequies of the late Major B.B. French took place yesterday afternoon, and were largely attended by our citizens and the Masonic fraternity. The friends of the deceased commenced to assemble at 3 o'clock at the residence of the family and at the church on 4 1/2 street. The residence was crowded at an early hour, many being desirous to take a last look at their departed friend. The coffin was placed in the parlor, and in charge of a guard of honor, consisting of eight Knights Templar of Washington Commandery, No. 1. The coffin was ornamented with Masonic emblems, and the eight handles were wrought in Masonic insignia. On the lid was a silver plate, on which was engraved the name, date of birth and death of decease; and on the coffin was placed the regalia which he wore when living. Flowers were also tastefully placed around the coffin. The members of the family were seated in the parlor, with the personal friends, and the Rev. Florides Steele, of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, read the service, according to the ritual of that church, at the conclusion of which he delivered an earnest prayer. The coffin was then borne to the hearse. In front of the house the guard of honor stood with drawn swords, under which the remains passed to the hearse. The family of deceased and the friends were then provided with carriages, and the procession moved to Four-and-a-half street Presbyterian Church, where the Masonic bodies were in waiting. All of these bodies met at the Temple, corner of 9th and F streets, at 3 o'clock when the procession was formed by the Grand Marshal, and marched to the church, headed by the Marine band, in time to meet the funeral cortege from the residence. On arriving at the church the band performed a dirge while the remains were borne in through a detachment of the guard of honor up through the main aisle to a space in front of the pulpit. The Masonic fraternity, and all who could gain ingress to the church, were provided with seats. The Masonic choir, under the leadership of Mr. Henry Bradley, occupied the gallery and while the large assemblage was being seated a dirge was played on the organ by Prof. Scheel. The Masonic choir then sang a funeral dirge composed for the occasion. During the services, at intervals, they sang "Behold, I show you a mystery," and the funeral hymn by Istria, from the tenth Psalm. The officers of Washington Commandery then took position round the coffin, and the funeral services of the Knights Templar were conducted by J.F. Wollard, Eminent Commander, assisted by Prelate J.T. Hoover. At the conclusion of the services the lid of the coffin was raised, and the members all filed past to take a last look at the face of the deceased. When all had passed, the lid was replaced, and the funeral procession formed down 4 1/2 street, in the following order:--Marine Band; Washington, Columbia, and Potomac Commanderies Knights Templar, and visiting Sir Knights; Members of the Supreme Council of the thirty-third degree; Grand Consistory of Maryland, with band; Grand Chapter Royal Arch Masons, District of Columbia; B.B. French Lodge, No. 15; Washington Brass Band; Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia; Hearse; Pallbearers--On the part of the Grand Lodge, C.F. Stansbury, P.G.M.; J.E.F. Holmead, P.G.M.; G.A. Hall, P.D.G.M.; J.E. Rawlings, P.J.G.W.; On the part of the Grand Chapter, James G. Smith, P.G.H.P.; Willison Middleton, P.G.S.; Andrew Glass, P.G.K.; H.A. Whalton, G.K.; On the part of Washington Commandery, Sir Knights P.H. Hope and G. Bruff; Family and friends of deceased; Other associations of which deceased was a member; Citizens. The procession then passed down 4 1/2 street by way of Pennsylvania avenue to the Congressional Cemetery, where a large number of people had collected. Indeed the whole route of the funeral was livid with spectators, who vied with the Masonic fraternity in doing honor to the memory of the deceased. While the procession passed the Capitol the bell of the Columbia Fire Company was tolled, deceased being an honorary member of the old volunteer organization. Arriving at the cemetery the coffin was placed over the grave prepared for it in the family lot and immediately beside that of his first wife. The scene was impressive in the extreme, as twilight had well set in, and the candles carried by the Masons being necessarily lighted threw a mellow light over the grave and its surroundings. The ceremonies here were conducted by J.H. Russell, Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, which were followed with a chant by the Masonic choir, and benediction by the Rev. Floridius Steele. The remains were then lowered in the grave, and the mourning friends sadly departed.

Rites for the Dead

Funeral of Edmund F. French Takes Place Today

The funeral of the late Edmund F. French, who was for more than half a century a resident of Capitol Hill and for a long series of years a clerk in the Treasury Department, took place this afternoon from his late residence, No. 23 B street southeast. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Clarke of St. James' P.E. Church and were attended by a large number of friends of the deceased, including many who attended the East Washington public schools in the years when he served as a trustee, and there were many floral tributes sent in. The interment was at the Congressional cemetery.

The deceased was a native of New England and was a brother of the late Col. Benj. B. French. He had reached the age of eighty-two years. He was the father of Dr. French of East Capitol street, and leaves another son and a daughter. Up to three years ago he enjoyed robust health, but at that time he suffered an attack of paralysis, which left him very weak. Subsequently he had two other attacks, the last one terminating fatally Monday last.

Another Handsome Memorial Window

Mr. Frank O. French, of New York, has just placed in All Souls' Church in this city, a beautiful stained glass window, to the memory of his mother, who lived and died here. Briefly described, it may be said that a rich arabesque of conventional leaf pattern borders the window and crosses the middle, dividing it into two chief sections. These are used to illustrate two notable scenes at the close of Jesus' ministry, -- His last interviews with Peter and Mary, as related in the 20th and 21st chapters of the Gospel of John. The upper picture represents Jesus in a robe of rich purple, over which is loosely thrown a mantle of white; about his head a nimbus of deep blue; in his hands a shepherd's crook, and around him a few sheep and lambs. Peter, half kneeling in supplicating posture, attentively listens while Jesus utters his parting command: "Feed my lambs, feed my sheep;" here given in Latin inscription, "Pasce aynos meos; pasce oves meas."

Name	Birth/Death	Age	Range/Site

he scene of the lower section represents the meeting of Jesus with Mary, who has just been seeking him at the sepulcher now deserted. It presents Mary Magdalene arrayed in rich robes of saffron and crimson, with loosely flowing hair, in reverent listening attitude, with the alabaster box by her side. Jesus, in an underrobe of white, overwhich is a tunic of olive green and a mantle of saffron brown, gathered up at the front, bears in one hand, having risen from the grave, a white banner of victory, and, with the other hand outstretched, addresses Mary, "Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father." Beneath the picture part of his words are given in the Latin inscription, "Dicit et Jesus; Moli me tangere."

Across the base of the window runs the inscription. "In memory of Elizabeth Richardson, wife of Benjamin Brown French, born 13 July, 1805, died 6 May 1861."

Mrs. French it may be added here, was the daughter of the late Hon. William M. Richardson, for more than half a century chief justice of New Hampshire, and a cousin of Judge William A. Richardson, of this city, formerly Secretary of the Treasury; and the window above described forms a fitting pendant to one of similar character, placed in the same church by that gentleman, as a memorial of his wife, several months ago, and fully described in The Star at the time.

Francis O. French Dead

He Was President of the Manhattan Trust Company of New York

Francis Ormond French, president of the Manhattan Trust Company of New York, died yesterday afternoon at his cottage at Tuxedo. Mr. French was born at Chester, N.H., September 12, 1837. His father was Benjamin Brown French, who was clerk of the United States House of Representatives in 1845-47 and commissioner of public buildings under Lincoln.

Mr. French graduated from Harvard in 1857 and was admitted to the bar in 1860. In September, 1862, he was appointed deputy naval officer of customs at Boston and in 1863 was appointed deputy collector of the same port. He resigned in 1865 to enter the banking firm of Samuel A. Way of Boston. In October, 1870, he went to New York to enter the firm of Jay Cooke & Co. After the Cooke failure Mr. French represented the London firms of McCullough & Co. and Melville Evans & Co. in New York. In 1874 he, with others, secured control of the First National Bank and engineered the funding operations of United States loans. In 1880 he retired from business, but in 1888 accepted the presidency of the Manhattan Trust Company.

Death was due to heart failure. The funeral will be held tomorrow. The interment will be in this city.

Hard we strove to keep thee with us,
 But love and skill were all in vain;
 We must lay our darling loved one
 'Neath the graveyard's sod away.

Death's cruel dart has pierced our hearts
 And bowed us down with grief,
 And beneath the silent sod
 My darling wife will sleep.
 By Her Beloved Husband

Farewell, dear daughter, a long farewell;
 Farewell till we shall meet again;
 Till we shall meet at Jesus' feet,
 Where parting is no more.

We have given love's last token,
 We have parted back her hair
 From off her marble forehead
 And left the last kiss there.

Funeral of Mrs. French

Services Held This Afternoon From Home of Her Nephew

Funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Mary E. French, widow of Maj. B.B. French, who was commissioner of public buildings during Lincoln's administration and a personal friend of the war President, were held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at 506 East Capitol street, the home of her nephew, Dr. William B. French, where she resided for the past few years. Mrs. French was in the seventy-fourth year of her age. Her husband, who was prominent in District affairs and for whom the B.B. French Masonic Lodge was named, died about thirty years ago.

The exercises were conducted by Rev. Father F.I. Fealy, assistant pastor of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, of which Mrs. French was a member. Interment was made in Congressional cemetery.

Mrs. French died at noon Wednesday. She had no children, but is survived by one sister, Mrs. Margaret French, widow of the late Edmund F. French, of this city.

Mrs. French was born in the District and has been a resident here all her life. She married Major French in the early sixties. Her maiden name was Mary E. Brady and she was the daughter of Peter Brady, who came to this country from Dublin, Ireland, when a young man.

Mrs. French received her education in the Georgetown Convent. She was regarded as the ideal type of the woman of ante-bellum days, with charming personality and manners. All her life she was very charitable and her church work was carried on with a conscientious spirit. For many years she lived in the family residence on the present site of the Congressional Library, but when the houses there were ordered to be torn down, she was forced to leave the premises along with the other residents of the square.

-------------------	----------------	--	---------------

Frey. John "Jack" Andrew Frey, 67, died Friday, August 22, 1997, at D.C. General Hospital from injuries sustained in a fall at his home in Washington, D.C., according to his companion of 43 years, Peter L. Morris of D.C.

Frey was born Aug. 29, 1929, in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he graduated from Purcell High School in 1947. He went on to study Romance languages at the University of Cincinnati, for which he received a bachelor of arts degree with honors in 1951, as well as a master's degree in 1952. He then completed a doctorate (studying under Helmut Hatzfield) at Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C., in 1956.

That same year, he began his teaching career at Wheaton High School in Maryland, and then taught French and Spanish at St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia from 1958 to 1960.

Frey returned to D.C. in 1960 to join the George Washington University faculty, where he held the following positions: assistant professor of Romance Languages (1960 to 1963); associate professor of Romance Languages (1963 to 1971); chair of the department of Romance Languages and Literatures (1966 to 1969, 1983 to 1989, and 1992 to 1994); professor of Romance Languages (1971 to 1995); and professor emeritus of Romance Languages (1995 until his death).

Morris said Frey received a Fulbright grant for study and research in France in 1958, and traveled professionally to France almost every year after that. He spoke French with native fluency and had reading knowledge of Italian.

In 1991 at GW, Frey was the first recipient of the Oscar and Shoshanna Trachtenberg Prize for Excellence in Teaching. According to Morris, Frey's peers said he "possessed extraordinary talent and commitment to the classroom and was an imaginative and resourceful faculty member."

In 1992 he received an order of the Palmes Academiques award, at the level of chevalier, from the French government in a ceremony at the French Embassy in Washington, in recognition of his work on 19th century French thought.

A "prolific author," Morris said Frey had numerous articles published in professional journals. He had written books on the French authors Stéphane Mallarmé and Emile Zola, and on the poetry of Victor Hugo, which Morris said will be published in the spring of 1998 by Greenwood Press of Connecticut.

Frey served six years as a trustee of the Sacred Heart Nursing Home in Hyattsville, Md. In 1986, he cofounded the Washington Institute for Creative Activity.

In addition to Morris, Frey is survived by a host of colleagues, students, and friends.

A rite of Christian burial was held by Dignity Washington at St. Margaret's Episcopal Church in D.C. on Aug. 27. His remains were buried at Congressional Cemetery in D.C.

Memorial contributions may be made in his name to the Department of Romance Languages, George Washington University, 8013 22nd St., NW, Room 513, Washington, DC 20052.

The National Intelligencer, March 2, 1844

Whilst preparing for the Funeral of the sufferers by the accident of Thursday (Explosion of the Princeton), Death has stricken another victim in the midst of us, in the person of the Hon. Henry Frick, one of the Representatives from the State of Pennsylvania, who breathed his last yesterday, about 12 o'clock, at his lodgings in this city.

Mr. Frick was in the 50th year of his age, was in delicate health when he came on to attend Congress, and had been so, we believe, for some years. He has left a widow and a number of children, one of whom was with him for several days before his death, to mourn over the heavy loss they have sustained.

In pursuance of the earnest desire of his family, his remains are to be taken home for interment at the place of his late residence. They will leave the city this morning; and will be attended to their resting place by his son and two of his respected colleagues of the House of Representatives.

Coroner's Inquest

An investigation took place on Monday and yesterday, before Coroner Woodward, into the circumstances which led to the death of a man named William Froehlich, a draughtsman, employed at the Washington Navy Yard, who was found drowned in the Potomac on Monday, not far from the Long Bridge. It appeared from the testimony that Froelich had been severely beaten and bruised, and Mr. R.H. Harrington, and C. Finnegan, a hackdriver in his employment, have been charged with assaulting the deceased on Thursday last, in Mr. Harrington's hotel, at the Navy Yard, where the deceased boarded. Charles Finnegan was committed to jail by Justice Crandell on Monday night, and Mr. Harrington was held to bail yesterday, in the sum of $500, by Justice Goddard, to answer for assaulting the deceased. We attended the investigation and heard most of the evidence laid before the inquest. What the verdict of the jury was in the case we have not been able to ascertain, the Coroner having been directed by the jury not to furnish a copy of it for publication, for fear of an increased excitement in that part of our city where the deceased resided and was personally injured.

The National Intelligencer, June 28, 1849

Acquittal of R.H. Harrington--The trial of the defendant, charged with an assault upon William Froelig, was resumed yesterday morning. A number of witnesses were examined, both in support of the prosecution and on the part of the defense. The testimony was closed about four o'clock, and the case was submitted without argument by the counsel on both sides. The jury, after retiring a few minutes, returned into Court with a verdict of not guilty.

Charles Finnegan, also charged with an assault on William Froehlig, will be tried to day.

In this moment of unparalleled crisis, a man of scant experience and weak authority was burdened with the need to make rapid decisions of national importance. He was sorely in need of the guiding hand of the clerk of the House of Representatives, Patrick Magruder, a former congressman and custodian of the Library of Congress. But Magruder had been ill for months and had acted on his doctor's advice to leave town and restore his health at mineral springs. No one was around to advise Frost on how and when to protect the volumes of House paperwork from enemy vandals. His colleagues, Samuel Hamilton and Brook Berry, had been plucked from their offices to serve in an artillery company.

Funeral of Joseph Fry

The funeral of the late Joseph Fry, an old and esteemed citizen of Capitol Hill, took place from his late residence on New Jersey avenue near D street southeast yesterday afternoon and a large concourse of friends and relatives were in attendance. Mr. Fry had passed three score and ten, which he spent in the neighborhood where he died and was a well-known carpenter. He was an active member of the old Columbia Fire Company from 1837 to the time of its disbandment in 1864, and was a member of the Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association, which attended the funeral in uniform. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Parson of the Church of the Reformation, an old friend and neighbor, and he paid a feeling tribute to the worth of the deceased as a quiet, unassuming yet useful citizen. The remains were borne to the hearse by pallbearers selected from the veteran firemen and neighbors, and escorted by the firemen and followed by a large number of relatives and friends they were taken to the Congressional cemetery, where the interment took place.

Sudden Death of Wesley Frye, The Blind Ballad Vender

Last night, about 10:30 o'clock, a man, who was standing at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and 7th street, suddenly dropped to the ground as if in a fit. Some half dozen men who saw him fall rushed up and found him insensible and without visible signs of life. He was carried to Gilman's drug store, when life was found to be extinct, and he was recognized as the well known blind vender of printed songs, etc., named Wesley Frye, who, before he lost his sight, was a sporting man well known in this city, Alexandria, Richmond and Baltimore. Mr. Waters, special officer at the St. Marc hotel, who had assisted in his removal to the drug store, turned the body over to Officers Johnson, Arnold and Milstead, who conveyed it to the 7th precinct station house. Mr. Frye was about forty years of age, and unmarried. He lived near the Navy Yard.

Dr. Hartigan, assistant coroner, this morning investigated the case, and came to the conclusion to hold no inquest, the cause of death being cerebral apoplexy, caused by dissipation. He ordered the body to be kept until 4 o'clock p.m., and if not claimed by the friends of the deceased, to be buried at the expense of the corporation.

Our old citizens are rapidly dropping away and we are sorry to say that the much respected Joseph Fuggitt is now on his death bed. He has suffered for some time with great patience and, now that the end is near, seems entirely resigned and in the full possession of his mental faculties. Mr. Fuggitt is about 62 years of his age and has been for a large portion of his life extensively engaged in the lumber business.

On this corner, which remained unimproved until 1859, there is a large house that was also built by Mr. Fuggitt. Neither of these houses have been changed in appearance since originally built; the one next to the corner having the winding stone steps which seem to have been more popular in those days than since.

Mr. Fuggitt was born in Charles Co., Maryland, in 1808, and had been a resident of this city for fifty years at the time of his death in March, 1870. During twenty-three years of that time he was extensively engaged in the lumber business. His only child, Mr. Nathaniel B. Fuggitt, who was born here, still continues a resident of the city.

No. 311 D Street, next to the Fuggitt house, was also built by Mr. Fuggitt, and was the home of Dr. James Chestney for eleven years up to the time of his death in January, 1869.

Hast thy life forever fled?
Hast thou bid adieu to earth
And all its pleasures--little worth.

The color from thy cheek has fled;
It hath the paleness of the dead;
Quiet and still dost thou lay;
Wake, sister, wake; see, tis 'day.

Farewell, farewell, my sister dear,
Life is sad without you here!
Oh, may we meet in heaven above,
Where all is peace and joy and love.

Some Old-Time Buildings

Discussion at Last Meeting of Oldest Inhabitants

Statement by Mr. James Croggon and Others

Representing Pennsylvania Avenue Structures

The building now being demolished was after Strothers gave it up, kept by Williamson, and about 1830 by the Fullers.

Conducted a Stage Line

Azariah Fuller first engaged in running a stage line between this city and Baltimore, having his residence in a two-story brick on 14th street north of the buildings used as a hotel.

The hotel consisted of several brick buildings whose alls were pierced, turning them into one, the center one being used as the office, and they were erected by Col. John Tayloe, father of Col. B. Ogle Tayloe, the first president of the Oldest Inhabitants.

Mr. Allison Nailor, taking part in the discussion, said he had heard of Fuller in both places, and he remembered Gallabrun, John Hands, Daniel Rowland and Coburn as having been at the Mansion House, remarking that some high-toned people patronized the house.

Mr. Croggon said the Fullers were at the 14th street corner till 1836, when, the Post Office Department having been burned out, the government leased the building for a year or two, the Fullers going up to the Mansion House and returning to 14th street in time to entertain Charles Dickens in 1839. The Fullers remained here till 1847, when the Willards came, the house under their name being opened in October of that year with a dinner at which were some of the most prominent men of the nation.

Claims Two Victims

Lives Lost Yesterday in the Potomac River

Police Search For Bodies

Remains of Herbert J. Callender Promptly Recovered

Another Drowning Today

Efforts to Save a Brother--Signs of Exhaustion

Bateau Filled and Upset

Two lives were claimed by the Potomac river yesterday, the record for the previous Sunday having been three victims. Those who were drowned yesterday were Herbert J. Callender and Cecil B. Fuller. The former was a tinner and was in business at 210 C street northeast, his parents living at 1443 Chapin street. Fuller, who was eighteen years of age, resided at 419 10th street southwest and was employed as a clerk in Jackson's cigar store, 7th street. Callender was drowned in the basin, near the navy yard bridge. The former was swimming and the latter was thrown into the water by the capsizing of a boat.

Herbert Callender and his brother, Burton H. Callender, appeared at the bathing beach shortly after 5 o'clock in the afternoon to enjoy a swim. They had been in the water about an hour and were beyond the confines of the bathing beach, having gone through the narrow channel and reached the outer basin. It was their intention to swim to a boat that was a considerable distance from the shore.

Was Giving Out

When the young man was about ten yards from the boat Burton noticed that his brother was giving out and he went to assist him. telling him to take things easy and not to get excited he placed his arm about the other and started to help him to the boat. Herbert was rapidly growing weaker. Both were showing signs of exhaustion when Herbert pushed himself away from Burton and made an effort to reach the boat. Burton swam toward the boat and reached there just about the time he heard his brother say: "I can't make it, Burt."

Burton turned and made another effort to assist his brother, but the latter had disappeared beneath the surface of the water. News of the drowning reached boatmen and others in the vicinity of the bathing beach and a number of persons were attracted to the scene. The crew of the police boat was summoned and the body was recovered about 7:30 o'clock. The remains were removed to the morgue and the brother of the deceased called there soon afterward. He related the sad story to the man in charge and made arrangements with Undertaker Bradley for the removal of the remains to the home of his parents on Chapin street. The funeral will probably occur tomorrow afternoon. Rev. Weston Bruner, pastor of the Fifth Baptist Church, will officiate and the body will be interred in Prospect Hill cemetery.

The deceased and Miss Florence Blake were married only a few months ago.

Bateau Overturned

The first that was known of the drowning of Cecil Fuller was when a companion, Lloyd Duehring, who resides at 614 F street southwest, called upon the police in Anacostia and related the story of the overturning of a bateau and of the disappearance of his friend. As soon as the occurrence was reported the crew of the police boat, hastened to the scene of the drowning and dragged for the body. They had not succeeded in finding it at sunrise, when it was necessary to stop for rest. It appears that the two young men went sailing yesterday afternoon, and it was about 11:30 o'clock when they reached a point opposite Clark's boathouse, where they were to cast anchor.

When the boat had been made fast, they stepped into a bateau to row ashore, but the small craft filled and overturned, throwing both men into the water. It was all that Duehring could do to save his own life. When he reached the shore he at once sought the assistance of the police. An effort was made to find the missing man, it being thought by some of the policemen that he might have reached the marsh and was waiting to be rescued. They failed to find any trace of him, however, so the crew of the police boat was notified.

Friends of Fuller visited the scene of the drowning today and made a search for the body. Arrangements were made for the crew of the police boat to renew their efforts this afternoon, beginning after 3 o'clock.

Fuller's Body Recovered

Young Man Who Was Drowned Sunday Night Last

The body of Cecil Fuller, the young man who was drowned in the Eastern branch Sunday night by the overturning of a bateau, as stated in yesterday's Star, was found floating in the water near the foot of 2d street southeast this afternoon. Some laborers working at the pumping station found the body and made it fast to a sand scow. The police were notified and the body was taken in the morgue. It is stated that the body was in an advanced state of decomposition, and it was with considerable difficulty that it was placed aboard a boat and removed to the morgue.

Acting Coroner Glazebrook made an investigation and gave a certificate of accidental death. The fate which befell the young man following a day's outing in a sailboat with a friend, Mr. Duehring. Both men were thrown into the water. Duehring managed to get ashore, but Fuller was drowned. Undertaker J. William Lee took charge of the body and removed it to his establishment, at 332 Pennsylvania avenue. Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

Shocking Occurrence
Last evening, about half-past six o'clock, the vicinity of the National Hotel was thrown into great and painful excitement by a frightfully tragical occurrence that took place on the steps immediately at the entrance to the hotel. This was the deliberate shooting of Mr. Edward H. Fuller, of this city, by the hands of Lieut. James W. Schaumburg, formerly of Philadelphia, we believe, but who for many years past has spent much of his time in Washington, and has recently boarded at the National. The following is reported to be a correct account of the rise and cause of this sad affair:
Several years since Schaumburg boarded at Fuller's, now Willard's Hotel, kept by A. Fuller & Co. When the firm became insolvent he was indebted to it several hundred dollars, and has so continued ever since. Applications made to him from time to time for payment by the surviving partner, Edward H. Fuller, have been disregarded by him, as we learn, on the ground that the debt was due not to Mr. Fuller, but to the trustees under the insolvency. Mr. Fuller, nevertheless, pursued the claim, and in an altercation on the subject some two years ago with Schaumburg personally chastised him. This circumstance was matter of general notoriety at the time, and got into the newspapers.
Public notice was again drawn to the matter on Tuesday morning last by the appearance of a number of large handbills posted in the most public way along Pennsylvania avenue, announcing, under "the signature of Edward H. Fuller, that James W. Schaumburg was a coward, liar, and swindler, with allegations and statements to substantiate it."
On Tuesday and yesterday afternoon and evening Schaumburg was seen pacing backward and forward along the avenue, suspected by many, and, as it would seem, too truly, with deadly intent, in search for Fuller. Unhappily, last evening, at the time above stated, Mr. Fuller had mounted the steps to enter the National Hotel from Sixth street, when he was espied by Schaumburg, who was standing near the door on the east side of the portico; and when Fuller approached at the distance of about four feet he received the fire of one barrel of a revolver in the hands of Schaumburg, and instantly retreated across towards the south side of the avenue, pursued by Schaumburg, with, as some say, a drawn bowie-knife in his hand. A number of hackmen and others following Schaumburg with hostile shouts induced him to give up the pursuit, and retire to the hotel, where, after seeking a retreat from room to room to elude the excited crowd from the street, he at last gave himself up to the police. Being conducted to the office of Justice Morsell, he was duly committed to the county jail, where he now remains.
At a late hour last night Mr. Fuller's condition was critical; the ball having entered about an inch and a half to the right of the navel, and had not been extracted; indeed its place of lodgment had not been found.
The National Intelligencer, February 7, 1853
We are pleased to state that the condition of Mr. Edward H. Fuller was reported yesterday to be much better. His pulse which at one time on Saturday had risen as high as 104, fell to 105 yesterday, and for a time he was enabled to sit up in bed. He also exhibited some appetite for food. The previous exceeding irritability of the region of the wound was so much abated as to admit of considerable pressure, and altogether hope for his recovery was the predominating feeling. Whatever may be the result, the skill, care, and unremitting attention so fully rendered the case on the part of the physicians, Doctors Miller, Boyle and Holmead, deserve public notice and general approval; nor do the tender assiduous, and equally indispensable services of Mr. and Mrs. DeSaules, of the Waverley House--into which Mr. Fuller was taken immediately after he first fell--less merit warm acknowledgment. Nowhere could the unfortunate patient have been more kindly treated or more efficiently served.
The National Intelligencer, Feb. 23, 1853
Mr. Edward H. Fuller's condition on Monday was very discouraging. Yesterday, however, he rallied considerably though towards evening his fever was quite high.

Criminal Court

On Wednesday the trial of James W. Schaumberg was continued. The principal witness, Mr. Edward H. Fuller, was examined, and gave a statement of the shooting and attendant circumstances; in the course of which he stated that the ball from Schaumberg's pistol had never been extracted, and that he occasionally experienced a pain in his left side from it.

Several other witnesses were examined on the part of the prosecution, and Drs. Miller and Boyle testified to the serious character of the wound inflicted, which was calculated to be mortal.

Yesterday Messrs. Jno. B. Sullivan and Jno. A. Linton were called into the witness box on the side of the prosecution, when the testimony for the prosecution closed.

By consent of the Counsel for the United States, Z. Collins Lee, Esq. made an additional opening argument for the defense.

The following witnesses were examined for the defense: Wm. G. Walworth, Jno. W. Wells, James G. Berret, and Gilbert C. Russell.

The trial will probably occupy the whole week.

Criminal Court

The trial of Captain Schaumburg for shooting at Mr. Fuller with intent to kill, which was commenced yesterday, was resumed today, Mr. Fuller appearing on the stand at the opening of the Court to give his testimony. It will be unnecessary to repeat it, as the account was given on the former trial in all the papers of the country. The evidence was bona fide--a repetition of what was then stated.

The Court was filled with spectators, and the enclosure inside the bar crowded with auditors. There is a large array of legal talent employed on both sides. Messrs. Fendall and Chilton; appearing for the prosecution, and Messrs. Z. Collins Lee, of Baltimore, S.S. Baxter, of Washington and Jeremiah Clemens of Alabama for the defense. The opening address to the jury was made yesterday by Mr. Fendall, to which Mr. Baxter replied on the part of Capt. Schaumburg.

Outcome of the Trial: Hung jury, 9 for conviction, 3 against.

Death of Mrs. Fuller

Mrs. Emily Thomas Fuller, wife of the late Edward H. Fuller, died early Tuesday morning at the residence of her son-in-law, John D. McChesney, 2030 16th street northwest, on the 73d anniversary of her birth. Singularly, her death occurred just 29 years after that of her husband, January 29, 1866. Many of the old residents of Washington will remember Mr. Fuller as the proprietor of the old Fuller's Hotel, now Willard's and the Kirkwood House on the site of the present new hotel, the Raleigh. She leaves three daughters, Mrs. John D. McChesney, Mrs. Wales Thompson of New York and Mrs. Robert Johnston of Norfolk, Va., and one son, Edward F. Fuller of Minnesota. Twenty-four grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren also survive her. The funeral, which was private, occurred this morning at 11 o'clock from the residence of her son-in-law, the interment being at Congressional Cemetery.

The Bernhart of the Moving Picture

The Story of Mary Fuller, the Well Known Heroine in

"What Happened to Mary" and Many Other Popular Film Plays

Mary Fuller's place among the artists of the screen is that of Sarah Bernhardt's in the spoken drama. Miss Fuller is the "Queen of the Screen." She isn't as great an actress as Bernhardt, but she is young yet. The great French tragedienne is old enough to be her grandmother.

In the three years that Miss Fuller has been with the "movies" she has created and acted more parts than the divine Sarah has in all her long career on the stage. Through the films' multiplication of her personality on the screens she plays in a single night to a larger audience than Mme. Bernhardt does on a whole tour.

Miss Fuller is a versatile and finished actress. Also, she is a dreamer, a scholar and an idealist. She has an incredible capacity for hard work and an ambition that is boundless. Many of the plays she acts in she writes herself.

"There are a great many uninteresting pictures on the market to-day," she says. "This is due to several reasons. One of these is, perhaps, a censorship that is too strict, too narrow. Another is a lack of perception in the choosing of scenarios and in their production. This is due to haste, to the ever-present pressure of time. Staging and producing a scenario, as a rule, is as much hurried as getting out a daily newspaper. It has to be. The demand of the public for "something new" is incessant. Therefore, the output of pictures is a matter of quantity. It is a question of so many miles of film each week. Whether the scenery and action shall be of the best along every foot of the way is something that no one has time to consider carefully.

"But a great improvement in all these things is coming. It is near at hand. The real pictures of to-morrow will be feature subjects. They will be in many reels, as some of them already are, constituting a whole evening's entertainment. They will be perfect as to photography, acting and mounting. But most of all, they will each have a story that is strong, well knit and vital to everyone. They will tell things that will touch the souls of the multitude that sees them.

Miss Fuller's Aims

"I hope to help make such pictures and to put on the screen some big, fine character studies that will live in the minds and hearts of the audience. By such things as these I may inspire those who see me, give them a lift over some hard bit of the rugged road. But even if I do not inspire my audiences I shall feel that I have succeeded if I bring them happiness. If I can accomplish both – give the people hope as well as joy – I shall be satisfied and feel that my own life is being well lived.”

Viewed as mere words, Miss Fuller’s aspirations are not much different from those of any other actress who loves her work and lives for it. But Miss Fuller is in earnest. Behind these ambitious hopes are several years of notable achievement, first on the legitimate stage and later in the “movies.”

Even when Miss Fuller was a very young girl her consuming ambition was to be an actress. She never had been in a theater, probably she didn’t know there was such a thing, but she lived in a land of make-believe romances that she evolved in her childish brain. As soon as a child begins to think it begins to “pretend.” Some children never outgrow this. All their lives they move in a realm of fancy where the real things are those they imagine and the practical things are the dreams. Such children, in some cases, become eminent in art or literature, or the stage. Most of them, however, fail utterly. Those that succeed have the spur of a restless, relentless ambition to drive them forward. Miss Fuller is one of these.

An Imaginative Child

“When I was a very little girl,” she says, “I used to make dolls out of handkerchiefs, put them in grape baskets and drag them about. In my eyes these rather grimy, shapeless doll people were real beings. I loved fairy tales. I never tired of listening to stories. When I could find no one to tell me stories, I made them up myself. Therefore, my handkerchief dolls were princesses, giants, dwarfs, kings, queens, anything and everything. Almost from moment to moment they changed in character. They played more new parts than I ever expect to. The grape baskets in which they scraped over the ground were royal coaches, railway trains and I don’t know what else.

“In those mud-pie days I began acting. I got the other little girls, and boys with whom I played to ‘pretend’ also. Those who didn’t have what I considered adequate ability I placed in the audience and charged them two pins each. I made up each ‘play’ on the spur of the moment. I have seen some motion-picture plays that were scarcely less improbable than those productions of my childish imagination.

“After I grew up and finished school, I came to New York to carry out my ambitions. I didn’t know even the name of a single manager. It was hard, discouraging work getting a start, but I made good. I toiled early and late. I studied. I wrote a lot of plays, most of which I rejected before any one else had a chance to. I wrote for the newspapers. It was all a process of education. I never was a star in the regular drama, but I did play a number of leading parts in several productions. Then three years ago, I decided that I should perfect myself in the art of expression and went into motion pictures. Later on I am going back on the stage. I shall be ready to play big parts then, and to realize some of my pet ambitions.”

The Stage and the Movies

Many persons who have had experience on the stage and in the silent drama have tried to define the differences between the requirements of the two. Each person takes a little different view. Miss Fuller believes that any actor can learn much from motion-picture work. The picture, she says, brings to the surface the best that there is in a person in sentiment or emotion. On the stage the distance from the audience is bridged by gestures that must be more or less exaggerated and by the voice. In the pictures the motions must be real. The more natural and expressive they are the better they “get across.”

Motion-picture acting and the art of the pantomimist are two separate things. Pantomime is grace and poetry of movement – something that can be learned by any one who is adaptable. But the acting for the camera, to impress the audience, has “to come from the depths,” as Miss Fuller puts it. It has to combine the art of the pantomimist and the humanity of everyday life. The mind plays as great a part as the body in making clear the sentiments that have to be expressed.

Making a picture before the camera is not a silent affair. All the actors talk. They try to live the parts for the moment as they themselves see them. They “make up” the dialogue as they go along. With Miss Fuller this is the case more than with most stars of the screen. To her, the make-believe surroundings that are within the scope of the camera’s eye are all quite real. When she played “Mary Stuart” she wept real tears. When she spoke it was in the stately language of those days. For the time being she was the ill-fated queen of Scotland, portrayed in Schiller’s somber tragedy.

Likes to Impersonate Queens

The parts that Miss Fuller has created for the films have covered a wide range. She likes best those that might be termed classical; for example, “Mary Stuart” is one of her favorite roles. She wrote the scenario herself. The queens of history have a fascination for her. She is going to portray a series of them. In each case she will study the history of the time and write the scenario. One of these queens will be Mary Tudor; another, Isabella of Spain. The queen of Sheba will be a third. One of these days, when she goes back to the legitimate stage, she is going to play a king – Richard III.

An idea of Miss Fuller's versatility as a motion-picture actress may be gathered from a list of a few of many parts she has played. With the Vitagraph Company, with whom she began her career as a star of the "movie," her first part was "Mario's Wife," in An Eye for an Eye. Later she had the principal parts in Elektra, a Greek tragedy; The Peacemaker, a modern comedy; The Love of Chrysanthemum, a Japanese romance; The Sepoy's Wife, an East Indian tale, and Her Adopted Parents. In this she was a woman 80 years old.

With the Edison Company, where she has been the last two years, she has played Aida in the film drama adapted from the opera of that name; the title roles in Kathleen Mavourneen and Mary Stuart, the "Countess Morowsky" in The Prophecy; the "Indian Lali" in The Translation of a Savage, "Pette San" in An Almond-Eyed Maid, the "Wall Street Girl" in When the Right Man Comes Along, the imperious stenographer in When Greek Meets Greek, "Amelia" in he Robbers, "Joyce" in Joyce of the North Woods, "Eve" in a Woodland Paradise, "Annette" in he Daughter of the Wilderness, and scores of others, the names of which she herself has forgotten.

She is best known, however, as the heroine in the What Happened to Mary series and its sequel, Who Will Mary Marry? The latter was published in an American and an English magazine concurrently with its film appearance.

Miss Fuller says she likes the motion-picture work for two principal reasons. One is the almost daily opportunity for creating some new character which is a constant stimulant to her originaive faculties: the other is that in motion-work she doesn't have to travel.

Acrobatic Stunts

Miss Fuller's plays, as a rule, do not call for her to do the acrobatic "stunts," which are a feature of so many motion pictures. But when she has anything of that sort to go through with, she does it with the same intense enthusiasm as everything else. She has the higher type of courage – the ability to master fear. It takes nerve, for instance, to drive a high-powered, over-engined motor boat at the top of its speed as she did in The Girl and the Motor Boat, to snatch a child from in front of an onrushing locomotive. She did this in The Switchman's Tower. He engine was less than 10 feet away when she made the thrilling rescue. In another picture play, A Letter from the Princess, she drove a big automobile at high speed down crowded Picadilly, in London. In Five Seconds from Death, she rode a bucking broncho; in A Way to the Underworld, she came down a rope, hand over hand, from the seventh story of a building. This she recalls as one of her most difficult feats.

"In that play," said Miss Fuller, "I was abducted by one of the villains – there were a host of very bad men in that melodrama. The rope hurt my hands so that I couldn't think of anything else except when I would get down to the bottom – if ever I would get there alive. At the foot of the rope were some cobblestones that looked far from soft. They were real. But there was the merciless camera buzzing away and I had to get through with it. I didn't lose myself in that part. I was just Mary Fuller sliding down a rope. The sage director's torrent of verbal suggestions and instructions while I was coming down got on my nerves, too. Usually the stage director doesn't worry me much, but this time everything seemed to go wrong. It all took more muscle and nerve than I thought I possessed. When I got to the bottom, my hands were raw and bleeding."

The only other time that Miss Fuller has been really upset in her moving-picture experiences was when she was about to play her first part before the camera. It was what is technically known as an "emotional lead" – an Italian woman. The first rehearsal had to be postponed twice on account of the scenes not being set. When they were ready, she was so weak with anticipation she could hardly stand. But when the picture was finished it was pronounced a great success and she was very happy.

Most of the actors and actresses in films say that it seems strange, almost uncanny, to see themselves on the screen. This is not so with Miss Fuller, and never has been. To her it seems all very natural, like the reflection in a mirror. She studies each real of films in which she appears to see where she could have done better. Although she has played queens and waifs, saints and sinners, women of all ages and all nationalities, the pictures that show her in tragic roles are the ones that interest her most.

The Day's Work

Miss Fuller's day at the Edison studio, away up in the northern part of New York City, begins when the light is strong enough for the taking of pictures to begin. When the weather is sunny, every moment is utilized for photographing the scenes that are laid out of doors. The actors in these various scenes have only a general idea of what the story is about. In a single reel there may be thirty different scenes. These are not taken consecutively. They follow one another in the making, according to the practicability of the light, the readiness of the small stage, and a hundred other things. But before each scene is rehearsed the stage director tells the actors briefly what they must try to "get across." When the picture play is completed the film is like the negative that is made in ordinary photography. This is developed and is printed upon other films, called "positives." These are run through a projecting camera and thrown on a screen. He stage director and some of the principal characters are the sole audience in this first view. They then see as a whole what they have been doing piecemeal. Practically every film is changed in one way or another before the public sees it. It is either condensed or expanded. If a part of the action is not vivid enough, it is done over.

Therefore, the work of the star in the "movies" practically never ends. Many interior scenes are made in the studio late at night. Miss Fuller's principal place of abode while she is not at work is her dressing room. It is about the size of a New York hall bedroom, which is some 8 by 12 feet. It is not richly furnished. Quite the contrary. There are two kitchen chairs in Miss Fuller's room, a mirror rests on a broad shelf. There is a wardrobe made of unpainted boards and curtained with calico, where her costumes in use are hung. Two trunks complete the furniture. Space has to be economized as much as in a steamer's cabin.

Writes Plays Herself

When Miss Fuller is not "in a picture" she goes to her dressing room and takes up whatever work she was engaged in while waiting for her parts in the scenes. Usually this work is writing scenarios for plays in which she is to appear. She has a big pad of paper and a pencil on the low shelf that is her dressing table. In a moment she is absorbed in spinning the threads that make up the story which later will be visualized on the screen.

Miss Fuller's only diversion is going to the theater. She sees the players of Shakespeare as often as she has an opportunity. Her mother and sisters live in Washington, D.C. Miss Fuller says she herself has practically no home life. She lives in a New York hotel. She doesn't care for housekeeping. She says she knows nothing about it and has no taste for it. She is as little concerned about dressmaking or millinery. Like all girls, she likes nice clothes, but dress with her is so little of a passion that she leaves what she wears when off the stage to the judgment of her modiste. Miss Fuller takes a keen interest in her stage costumes, because that is part of her business, and can not be slighted any more than her acting.

She is a omnivorous reader. Going up or down town in the subway or elevated, she buries herself in a book or magazine until she reaches the end of her journey. She is fond of society in the sense that she is ever eager to learn something from every person that she can. She is a brilliant conversationalist. She is a keen student of human nature. But all her energies are concentrated toward one end. She hopes some day to become and to prove herself the greatest tragic actress that this country has ever produced – the Bernhardt of America.

Depot for Years Popular With Customers Frederick Furlong, a cripple who had sold newspapers about the front of the Baltimore and Ohio depot for more than twenty years, committed suicide this morning by blowing off part of his skull with a shotgun. The deed was committed at the young man's home, No. 1225 G street northeast, about 6:35 o'clock. After a thorough investigation of the case Coroner Nevitt expressed the belief that Furlong had been driven insane by sickness and worry, and so stated in his certificate of death. Hundreds of commuters and others who travel on the Baltimore and Ohio road and who patronized the crippled newsboy, as they called Furlong, made anxious inquiries for him this morning when they failed to see him at his post of duty. The news of his death proved to be a severe shock to many who had shown an interest in him for years. The interest was reciprocal, too, for while they had expressed regard for the young man, the latter had always been extremely obliging to them. He knew all the regular patrons of the road and was often able to give them desired information in addition to serving them their daily papers. His failure to be on hand with his papers this morning caused more comment than would the absence of a railroad official. During the past two months Furlong had been sick. He had some trouble with his heart and had been led to believe he could never get well. He brooded over his sickness until he was unable to sleep, and then he tried to force sleep by the use of medicine. Yesterday he went on an excursion with his mother and other members of the family, returning home about 10 o'clock. His Sister's Discovery This morning his married sister, Mrs. Pinkney, went into his room to get some towels and found her brother seated on the bed with his gun in his hands. What are you doing there? Mrs. Pinkney inquired, not suspecting for an instant that her brother had any idea of killing himself. I heard somebody in the back yard, was the answer she received. She told him the noise was made by a neighbor and put the gun in the corner, telling him he had better see if he could get a little more sleep. Getting the towels from a bureau drawer where they were kept, Mrs. Pinkney left the room and went down stairs. She had hardly reached the lower floor before she heard a loud report made by the firing of the gun.

Rushing back to the room on the second floor, Mrs. Pinkney was horrified at the sight presented. There on the bed was the dead body of her brother, his brains having been blown out. Particles of brain and spots of blood were on the wall and floor, while blood was pouring from the ghastly wound. Dr. L.D. Walter was called to the house, but he could do nothing, as the wound had caused instant death. Mrs. Furlong, the young man's mother, and other relatives were immediately sent for, and relatives in New York were also notified of the death.

Had Accumulated Property

The deceased was twenty-eight years old and was a native of this city. During the twenty years he was engaged in selling newspapers he saved considerable money and a few months ago he purchased the house in which he ended his life. He sold his first papers the day President Garfield was assassinated. Being a cripple and compelled to use crutches, he was unable to do much manual labor. A few years ago he purchased several horses and carts, and the investment proved to be a profitable one. He was always extremely considerate of his mother and sisters.

His funeral will probably take place Thursday morning, although the exact time will not be definitely fixed until relatives in New York are heard from.
