Funeral of Andrew Kalstrom
Services in memory of the late Andrew Kalstrom, who died suddenly last Tuesday morning at his home in Berwyn, were held Thursday afternoon, in part of the home of his daughter, Mrs. Carl E. Guy, 629 A street southeast, and concluded at the Advent Church, on 8th between F and G streets northeast. The funeral was conducted by the pastors of the three different congregations of that faith in Washington, the Rev. Volney Lucas, the Rev. Charles Shaeffer and the Rev. Louis C. Sheafe. The services at the house included scriptural reading, prayer and song. Friends and relatives of the deceased were present in large numbers.
The services at the church were witnessed by a large congregation, including prominent members of the Order of Good Templars, in which Mr. Kalstrom had been a leader for many years, members of social clubs with which the family had been connected and comrades of Farragut Post, No. 10, G.A.R., of which deceased was a member. His comrades were his pallbearers. The burial case was entwined with the national flag and banked with floral pieces of varied designs and great beauty.
The exercises, simple, and impressive throughout, included the reading of a sketch by Mr. Lucas in review of the life of the deceased from his birth in Sweden 56 years ago. High tribute was given to his character as a man and a Christian. This was emphasized in brief addresses by Pastors Shaeffer and Sheafe. Several songs were sung by the church choir, led by Mr. Sheafe, Miss Clara Sheafe, his daughter, presiding at the organ. The interment was at the Congressional cemetery.

The National Intelligencer, February 1, 1851

Death of Mr. Kaufman (of Texas)

It is our painful duty to announce the decease of the Hon. David S. Kaufman, a Representative in Congress from the State of Texas. About two o'clock yesterday he was in his seat in the House of Representatives, but, feeling a painful sensation about the region of the heart, he returned in a carriage to his lodgings at the United States Hotel. He there lay upon his bed for some time, in apparent tranquil repose, in the presence of his wife. About sunset he spoke, in reply to an observation from his child, and suddenly expired. His disease was an affection of the heart.

Mr. Kaufman was a gentleman who had won general esteem by the amiableness of his disposition, and his death will be deeply regretted by his brother members, and be a loss to his State, in the National Councils, which few of her citizens can supply.

For details of the funeral and procession see "Pomp & Circumstance at Congressional Cemetery."

Kearney, Fleet Surgeon John A. The National Intelligencer, September 16, 1847 At the Naval Hospital, Island of Salmandina, aged about 53, of yellow fever, on the 27th ultimo, after a few days' illness, Dr. John A. Kearney, Fleet surgeon of the squadron in the Gulf of Mexico, a native of Ireland, and long a resident of this District and Maryland. By the Navy Register it appears that he first entered the service as a surgeon's mate on the 3d of March, 1809; and, from the same source, it appears his present commission bears date July 24, 1813. During the last war with Great Britain he was surgeon of the Constitution at the time of her successful engagement with the Cyane and the Levant ; and during the same war he was surgeon of the flotilla of gun boats in the harbor of Newport, (R.I.) under the command of Com. O.H. Perry, so eminently distinguished on Lake Erie. His high grade of professional attainments gave him a claim to the distinguished post he occupied at the time of his death, and his intrepidity during the War of 1812 against our former foes on the deep, was only equaled by the devotion he showed since the fall of Vera Cruz to lend a helping hand in preserving the lives of our countrymen blockading a coast most deleterious to the health of our naval marine. In this grievous affliction of Providence, words are vain to assuage the sorrow of his family, consisting of a wife and several children; yet it should be a source of consolation to them, in the changing scenes of earth, to know that he died in the discharge of his duty, and if professional skill could have been exerted successfully his valuable life would have been extended. The National Intelligencer, February 29, 1848 The remains of Fleet Surgeon Kearney and Lieutenant Charles W. Chauncey, of the United States Navy, having arrived from Mexico, they will be re-interred at the Congressional Burial ground. The funeral ceremonies will take place at the Episcopal Church, (Rev. Mr. Bean's,) near the Navy Yard, on Wednesday, March 1, at 12 o'clock. The officers of the Army and Navy, and friends and acquaintances of the families of the deceased, are invited to attend the funeral. Carriages will be in attendance at 11 a.m. at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and 17th street, near the War Department.	d. 27 Aug 1847		R53/18

Chinese Funeral

Ong Shu Kee Buried Quietly Yesterday Afternoon

The remains of Ong Shu Kee were lowered into a grave in Congressional cemetery yesterday afternoon in the presence of three of his Chinese friends and a few curious people who followed the body from points between the undertaking establishment of J. William Lee and the cemetery. Ong was not possessed of much of this world's goods and was not extremely popular with his fellow-countrymen. He was just a plain laundryman who did not visit the gambling places of the Chinamen and make himself popular with the sporting element. Had he been a leading light in the Chinese Masons' lodge things would have been different, and he would have had a much more elaborate funeral. While life remained his friends looked after him in their own way, but when death claimed him his body was hurried off to the undertaker's and was afterward buried.

Under ordinary circumstances a Chinaman would have been seated on the hearse with the driver and would have dropped imitation money along the streets to tempt the evil spirits and attract them from the corpse, but the weather was too cold for the one who was designated to perform this service yesterday, and he rode in the one carriage that followed the hearse. Evil spirits in the forms of small boys occasionally stepped behind the cortege and picked up the money to keep as souvenirs, but certainly no invisible spirits were responsible for the disappearance of the fake money. Upon reaching the cemetery the driver of the hearse was directed to the section in which the bodies of so many Chinamen have been interred, and the body was soon resting over the opening into which the remains of the laundryman were so soon to be lowered.

Several cups were placed about the grave, and these were filled with a liquid which soon evaporated. Each time the liquid disappeared the cups were refilled. This was done several times, and then the lighting of punk and the burning of paper made the affair take on a distinctive Chinese appearance. This done, the body was lowered into the grave and a small quantity of earth thrown upon the box covering. Then the Chinese friends of the deceased put in some roast chickens and cooked rice and the grave was filled. Some more punk was burned and fake paper money destroyed. The three friends had then finished the ceremony at the grave, and the body was left to rest there until such time as friends will come and have it disinterred to be taken to China.

Keefe, Charles A. The Evening Star, February 7, 1901, p. 3 Firemen Badly Hurt Collision Between Truck and Street Car on Connecticut Avenue Trainmen Placed Under Arrest Two of the Injured Men Conveyed to Emergency Hospital Investigation Ordered While responding to an alarm of fire turned in from box 35 about 8 o'clock this morning truck B was struck by one of the big yellow cars of the Metropolitan Railway Company at Connecticut avenue and M street. Three firemen who were riding on the truck were injured and the apparatus was badly damaged. The street car was also damaged. Explanations of the affair were promptly made by the firemen, in which they placed the blame on the motorman, while the men who were in charge of the car refused to make statements. Foreman T.J. Donohue, 41 years old, living at 1115 22nd street northwest, was injured about the right arm, leg and back. He is at his home under the care of Dr. Mayfield, and it is expected that he will be able to return to duty in a couple of weeks. Private Charles A. Keefe, 32 years old, who, with his wife and one child, lives at No. 1534 North Capitol street, and Private John J. Ryan, 25 years old, unmarried, who lives at 1123 19th street northwest, are under treatment at the Emergency Hospital. Both men are dangerously hurt, and it is feared that Keefe will not recover. His injuries consist of a broken shoulder, serious injury to the back and internal hurts. Both of Ryan's legs were broken below the knee and he was considerably bruised about the body. The doctors think he will recover. Keefe was at one time connected with the police force, and is a brother of Jack Keefe, the base ball player. District commissioner Macfarland was the first official to call on the injured men. He was very much distressed over the affair and gave orders for a thorough investigation. Chief Parris was also an early visitor to the truck house and hospital, and said the accident was undoubtedly due to the rule requiring the cars to stop on the far side of crossings. Motorman and Conductor Arrested Motorman John Larne and Conductor Thomas Davis, who were in charge of the car, were taken to the third precinct station to be held until the extent of the firemen's injuries can be definitely determined. In the event of the death of one or more of the victims, the motorman and conductor will be required to appear at the inquest. The fire for which the alarm was turned in occurred in the house of J.E. Williams, No. 1527 M street, and was caused by a supposed defective flue. Damage to the house and contents amounted to not more than $20. When the accident occurred which disabled truck B, one of the firemen summoned truck C company to respond to the alarm. The M street crossing on Connecticut avenue is regarded by the firemen as a dangerous place, because truck B usually crosses the electric road at this point in responding to alarms turned in from boxes east of Connecticut avenue. For this reason the driver almost invariably slows down, and such was the case this morning, according to statements made by the firemen and some of the witnesses of the accident. Several passengers in the street car were thrown from their seats when the collision occurred, but so far as has been reported they were not badly hurt. Soon after the accident happened a number of people congregated on the street, and everybody was willing to assist in removing the disabled firemen to places where they could be given medical treatment. Although two of the three victims were seriously injured they were not rendered unconscious. Keefe and Donohue were taken to the house of Dr. J.R. Bromwell, No. 1147 Connecticut avenue, and Ryan was taken to a cigar store on M street, where he was also seen by a physician. The third precinct patrol wagon was summoned, and after Keefe and Ryan had been removed to the Emergency Hospital the vehicle returned and Foreman Donohue was taken to his home. Relatives of the men taken to the hospital were notified of the accident, and they went at once to the institution to ascertain the result of the injuries. Dan Williams Was Driving Driver Dan Williams, colored, was handling the reins this morning, as he had done during a number of years. Foreman Donohue was standing on the turntable beside the driver and the other members were at their usual places on the truck, with Assistant Foreman George H. Reynolds at the wheel in the rear. Foreman Donohue began ringing the bell when the truck left the house and had not stopped sounding it when the truck neared the railway crossing and he saw the car coming north, as he says, going at a high rate of speed. The horses	b. 22 Nov 1868 - d. 7 Feb 1901	33 yrs.	R15/179 were also making good time, but were not moving as rapidly as they had been before they approached Connecticut avenue.

We can't avoid a collision, Foreman Donohue said to the driver; pull up Connecticut avenue, quick.

The foreman clung to the truck as the driver made an effort to turn north on Connecticut avenue. The truck was on the track in an instant, and the street car struck it just behind the horses. Dan Williams, the driver, was thrown from his seat, and he fell between the horses, while Foreman Donohue was pinned against the truck and the car. His first thought was to save the driver, for he feared the horses would run away, and that the heavy truck might pass over him. The foreman was soon on the ground, but he was so stunned that he could hardly stand. His fire hat undoubtedly saved him from more serious injury for it was badly smashed by coming in contact with the truck when the wearer of it was thrown violently against the ladder. Privates Keefe and Ryan were thrown from the truck, and part of the latter's clothing was torn from his body.

Keefe was on the running board just behind the foreman, and it is believed he was struck by the car. Behind him stood Ryan, who was injured when the side ladder was splintered. He was also thrown to the ground and the rear wheels of the truck touched his legs, but it is believed they did not pass over them. Neither of the two men seriously hurt was able to stand. What became of the motorman the firemen are unable to say, but they express the belief that he jumped from his car when he realized that an accident was unavoidable, or just after the two heavy vehicles came together. Besides receiving several scratches about his legs he was not injured.

It is stated that a pedestrian who saw the danger waived to the motorman to stop, but that the latter, thinking he wanted to get on the car, intended to stop on the far side of the crossing.

Statements by Chief and Foreman

Foreman Donohue said he had been going over the Connecticut avenue crossing in the service of the fire department for sixteen years, and this morning's affair was the first accident in which he had figured. Driver Williams, he said, was extremely careful, and the accident was certainly not his fault.

This morning's accident is the fruit of the rule required street cars to stop on the far side, remarked Chief Parris of the fire department to a Star reporter.

The chief added that he opposed the rule before it was made a police regulation. The fatal accident at 9th and R streets several months ago, he said, would also have been avoided had the rule been different. A letter containing an expression of the chief's views on the question is on file in the office of the City Commissioners.

The regulation of the Commissioners, passed the 9th of March of last year, reads:

Street cars shall not exceed a rate of speed greater than six miles an hour at street crossings, and when necessary to stop shall stop on the far side thereof, the rear end of the car or train to rest on a line with the curb on the far side of the intersecting street. Provided, That in cases where stops are now allowed on both sides of a crossing such stops may be continued if the railroad companies so desire.

Maj. Sylvester's Views

Major Sylvester, believing the importance of providing better protection for the more important thoroughfares in the city, called the matter to the attention of the Commissioners in his annual report.

Respecting this question he said: Pennsylvania avenue, Connecticut avenue and F street should be straight beats, with a squad of patrolmen constantly looking after the many matters of public importance thereon and thereabouts. The foreign legations, where distinguished representatives from other countries reside, should have attention from privates confined to short tours; the various circles should be looked after by details, and special attention given to control riding and driving at circles as the law directs, and hack stands and disorderly localities should be inspected continuously, but until Congress abandons the idea that the capital is not in need of such care it is feared these advanced and necessary precautions will not be possessed.

Only a few weeks ago Major Sylvester directed that Policeman Robertson be mounted on a bicycle for duty in this section, and he was just leaving the station to go on duty this morning when the accident occurred.

There is a hack stand at Connecticut avenue and M street, and usually the bicycle officer spends considerable time there. Had the alarm been turned in a few minutes later the officer would probably have been there and prevented the accident.

Story of an Eye-Witness

Dr. William Tindall, secretary to the board of District Commissioners, was a witness to the collision. He was walking south on Connecticut avenue, and shortly after passing N street he heard the gong on the truck. As the apparatus neared 18th street going east the gong was sounded louder, he said, and after crossing that street it was sounded still louder, making it possible to hear it two or three squares distant at least. The car which came in collision was observed by Dr. Tindall before it reached M street. It was going north, and in his opinion, at quite a rapid rate, but just how fast he is not able to say. It appeared to him that the motorman made no effort to slow up or stop before crossing M street, and the car was about in the center of M street when struck by the truck. The blow was a glancing one, it being evident to Dr. Tindall that the driver of the truck, seeing a collision unavoidable, pulled his horses as if to carry the apparatus up Connecticut avenue, and thereby avoid the car. The car was going or had been going at such a high rate of speed, however, that it was impossible for the truck to get out of the way, although it appeared to Dr. Tindall that the motorman, when he saw that a collision was certain, threw off the current and shoved down the brakes.

The force of the collision threw one of the firemen high in the air, while it looked to him as if the car knocked the other two injured men off. One of the men fell directly in front of the car and under the fender, so that but for the promptness by which the motorman brought the car to a standstill the man would have been crushed to death by its wheels. Dr. Tindall said, in reply to an inquiry, that he does not know whether any one was waiting to board the car at M street, but believes that had the car stopped or slowed up before passing the south building line of M street the collision would not have occurred.

Official Report

The official report of the accident made to the chief engineer of the fire department, Mr. Joseph Parris, by Acting Foreman Geo. H. Reynolds is as follows: While responding to an alarm of fire from box 35 at 8:08 o'clock this morning we went out M street, and when we reached Connecticut avenue we had pulled the horses down and were going at slow speed, ringing the bell. While crossing Connecticut avenue one of the Metropolitan cars was coming up at a high rate of speed and struck us, injuring Foreman Donohoe and Privates Ryan and Keefe, the latter seriously, I think. I sent Privates Ryan and Keefe to the hospital and Foreman Donohoe to his home, 1115 23d street.

Submitted a List

At the suggestion of Commissioner Macfarland, who has immediate supervision of the fire department, Chief Parris made a list at the time of the fatal accident on 9th street of the crossings over street railway tracks at each of which he deemed it necessary, for the protection of the firemen, as well as for the protection of the traveling public, that the cars should be required to stop before passing over. The Commissioners submitted the list to the officials of the Capital Traction Company and to those of the syndicate lines, and were informed by them that, in their judgment, it would result in serious inconvenience to the traveling public to require the cars to stop as recommended by Chief Parris. The railroad officials, however, promised the Commissioners that their motormen would be required to stop at a few of the crossings, and also assured them that they would require their men to allow right of way at all times to the apparatus of the fire department when responding to alarms of fire. Notwithstanding these promises, it is stated that if such instructions were ever given by the railroad officials to their men cars daily pass over the streets in question without even slowing up.

Commissioners Will Take Action

Commissioner Macfarland, as soon as he was informed of today's accident, directed that Firemen Keefe and Ryan be given every care and attention. In speaking to a reporter of The Star, Mr. Macfarland said that it seemed to him from what he had been told that the accident was due to the high rate of speed at which the street car was alleged to be traveling. Whether in fact the car was traveling at such high speed Mr. Macfarland does not personally know, because he did not witness the accident. He said, however, that the matter would be investigated very thoroughly and that the case would be laid before his associates for such action as they might deem necessary and proper to take. What that action will be he does not know, but he declared that the companies of the fire department, when responding to alarms of fire, must have the right of way, and that the intervention of Congress will be asked if nothing else can be done to prevent like accidents in the future.

Condition of the Injured Men

Late this afternoon the physicians at the hospital stated that Ryan was doing well, but that Keefe showed no signs of improvement. Keefe was overcome by smoke at the workhouse fire about eight years ago, when he was a substitute firemen. He came near losing his life at that time.

Thorough Inquiry

Officials to Investigate the Collision of Car and Truck

Instructions to Coroner Nevitt

Condition of Injured Men Will Prevent Their Attendance at Inquest Truckman Keefe's Burial

The District Commissioners, Chief Parris and Major Sylvester are actively interesting themselves in the matter of having a thorough investigation made of the collision between Truck B and a Metropolitan car and the injury to three firemen, as published in yesterday's Star. Coroner Nevitt was summoned to the office of Commissioner Macfarland after the death of Fireman Charles A. Keefe, one of the victims, was announced, and was told that a rigid inquiry into the facts was wanted. Chief Parris had members of the truck company and Major Sylvester had the third precinct policemen to summon witnesses to attend the inquest, which will be held tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock at the sixth precinct station. Assistant Foreman George H. Reynolds of Truck B Company obtained the names of about twenty witnesses yesterday, and it is believed that Coroner Nevitt will examine about three dozen persons who are alleged to know something about the accident.

Foreman T.J. Donohue and Private John J. Ryan, who were hurt at the time Keefe received his fatal injuries, will not be able to attend the inquest. The former is still under treatment at his home, and should his testimony be deemed important the jury may be taken to his house to hear his statement. Ryan, who is still in the Emergency Hospital, will not be in a condition to give his version of the accident. His legs are in plaster casts and he is suffering from other injuries, but the doctors are confident he will live. Because of his condition, however, any excitement might seriously interfere with his recovery. The physicians today reported that he is improving, and they are well satisfied with the progress he is making.

Motorman John Larne, who, with Conductor Thomas C. Davis, was taken to the third precinct to be held to await the result of the injury to the firemen, is still in custody, but the conductor was released early last night. The motorman will be present at the inquest. The Metropolitan Railway Company will be represented at the investigation by counsel, and a representative of the District Attorney Anderson may also be in attendance.

The Motorman's Record

Motorman Larne, it is stated, has been in the employ of the railway company for more than twenty years, and until yesterday he had never been in an accident. It is contended, on his behalf, that his car was running at the rate of only about six miles an hour, and that he could not have prevented the accident after he saw the truck approaching the crossing.

The body of Fireman Keefe was removed from the Emergency Hospital yesterday afternoon to his late home, No. 1534 North Capitol street, and prepared for burial by Undertaker Nalley. Today arrangements were made for his funeral, which will take place Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Wilson Memorial Methodist Church, on 11th street southeast. Chief Parris will select the pallbearers from the fire department, and there will be a special detail of firemen to act as an escort from the house to the grave.

Chief Parris saw Mrs. Keefe yesterday after the death of her husband and assured her that he would do everything in his power to assist her. As he understood the law, he thought she would be entitled to a pension, but some of the District officials fear the law will not permit this, for the reason that Keefe was a probationary fireman, and had not been in the department twelve months.

Provisions of the Law

The law under which firemen's pensions are granted is in part as follows:

And shall be used for the relief of any fireman who, having served not less than twelve months, shall, by reason of injuries received or disease contracted in the line of actual fire duty, going to, at, or returning from a fire, or having served not less than fifteen years, shall become so permanently disabled as to be discharged from the service therefore; and in case of the death of such fireman from such injury or disease leaving a widow or children under sixteen years of age, for their relief: Provided, That no fireman shall be entitled to any of the benefits of this relief fund who may, by reason of his own indiscretion, bring on any injury or disease which may incapacitate him from the performance of his duties as a member of the fire department, or who shall be retired for such cause or causes: Provided further, That such relief shall not exceed, for any one fireman or his family the sum of $50 per month; and a sum not exceeding $75 may be allowed from such fund to defray the funeral expenses of any fireman dying in the service of the District.

The Chief's View

Discussing the matter with a Star reporter this morning, Chief Parris said he thought Mrs. Keefe should be given a pension of $50 per month. If she cannot be given a pension under the present law it is because there was a mistake made when it was framed. The provision respecting service of twelve months, he said, was intended to cover cases in which firemen became disabled from natural causes during the first year of their service and not where a man was injured or lost his life while he was at, going to or returning from a fire.

Rule for Stopping Cars at Streets

Whether, in the event of it being found by the coroner's jury that the accident was due to the excessive speed of the street car, the Commissioners will require the street railways to return to the near-side rule of stopping cars is not known. It is understood that Commissioner Ross is an advocate of the near-side rule, and Captain Beach, the Engineer Commissioner, believes that, all things considered, the far-side rule is preferable. It is believed that Commissioner Macfarland is inclined to favor the near-side rule, although it is stated that he has not yet been convinced that such a rule would do more than slightly reduce the chances of such accidents as that of yesterday. Mr. Macfarland is inclined to the belief that the accident yesterday was due to the high rate of speed at which the car is said to have been traveling as it approached M street. But, whatever may be the fact developed by the testimony which will be submitted to the coroner's jury tomorrow, it is understood the Commissioners will, as above stated, endeavor to solve the problem of the speed of street cars in such a manner as to afford better protection to the companies of the fire department, and at the same time not inconvenience the traveling public.

Commissioners' View of Pensions

Referring to the question whether or not Keefe's family will be entitled to pension, it is said the Commissioners believe that the moment a man becomes a member of the fire department he and his family should become entitled to every right to a pension which the law appears to give only to those firemen who have been members of the department for at least twelve months. As Commissioner Macfarland remarked today, a fireman is liable to be killed or injured in the discharge of his duty a moment after he is sworn in, and he can see no good reason why a fireman should not, the moment he enters the service, instantly become entitled to a pension. The law, as Mr. Macfarland pointed out, does not say that a member of the fire department shall not monthly contribute a dollar of his pay to the relief fund until he is twelve months in the service, and he has requested the attorney for the District to examine the law and advise the Commissioners whether it is or is not true that the widow and child of Fireman Keefe cannot under the existing law be given a pension. If the attorney holds that they cannot, then Mr. Macfarland will move that the Commissioners request congress to not only provide for Mrs. Keefe and her child, but also amend the law so that hereafter a member of the fire department will be entitled the moment he enters the service to a pension. It is needless to say that in such an event the Commissioners will be unanimous on the question.

Injuries Received in Quarters

It has also been suggested to Commissioner Macfarland that the law should be amended in another particular, so that firemen who may be injured while in quarters shall be entitled to an allowance. In this connection it was pointed out that the law as it now stands appears to entitle a fireman to a pension who may be injured while going to, at or returning from a fire, and it is suggested that a member of the fire department who was injured in quarters by the kick of a horse, for instance, would not be entitled to an allowance, although he received the injury while performing some of the duties required of him.

The Collision Inevitable

Mr. Claude Grimes was in full view of the collision. He was on his way to his home from the store of John H. Magruder, where as was his habit, he had gone to open it for the day, and crossing Connecticut avenue diagonally, he stood at the corner and on the north side of the crossing. While waiting there for a northbound car he saw the truck coming east on M street at full gallop, and at once realized that a collision was imminent with the car for which he was waiting and which was now approaching. He rushed into the middle of the street and began to wave his arms, and the motorman slackened up preparatory to stopping on the far side of the street. Mr. Grimes supposes the motorman regarded his movement as a signal to stop. When he saw the truck Mr. Grimes says the motorman redoubled his efforts, and the truck driver, finding he could not bring the horses to a stop, turned them somewhat to the north on Connecticut avenue. Then, Mr. Grimes says, the horses seemed to swerve back, crossing the car track, so that the truck was struck about midway by the car.

It is the opinion of Mr. Grimes the accident was inevitable, and it is his belief that neither the motorman nor the truck driver was at fault.

The accident furnishes, in the judgment of Mr. John H. Magruder, an additional and stronger reason for the stationing of a policeman at this crossing. He says he has urged that this be done and that Major Sylvester, appreciating its importance, is evidently trying to do the best he can with the resources at hand. Mr. Magruder also thinks that the accident further illustrates the wisdom of the order once in force which directed all street cars to stop on the near side of the street.

Truck House in Mourning

Not since the Louisiana avenue fire of several years ago has the truck house on New Hampshire avenue, near M street, presented so sad and mournful a scene as it did last night. The collision of Truck B with the Connecticut avenue electric car, yesterday morning, had resulted in one brave fireman losing his life and the injury of two others. Out of respect to the memory of the dead comrade, Truckman Charles A. Keefe, who passed away yesterday afternoon, the stone work above the big doors was draped in black.

The unfortunate occurrence was the chief topic of discussion last night. Many visitors called during the day, inquiring after the injured men and expressing sympathy in the loss. Mr. L.Z. Leiter of Dupont Circle was among them. He expressed his regrets and his willingness to assist in contributing to the comfort of the injured firemen in any way possible. The telephone also did extra duty, and the man detailed at the desk was kept busy all day and last evening answering the messages.

Inside the truck house the members of the company who were so fortunate as to escape without serious injury were relating their experience in the affair. They were discussing the accident when Coroner Nevitt appeared shortly after 7 o'clock and heard the stories as related by the firemen, who were on the truck at the time of the collision.

Assistant Chief Kurtz was present, as were also Acting Foreman George H. Reynolds, who made the official report of the accident to Chief Parris immediately after it occurred; Dan Williams, the colored driver, who was thrown from his seat, and Private Ryan, who was also thrown to the ground and slightly bruised at the same time.

The damaged truck, which was sent to the repair shop yesterday, was replaced late in the day by the extra truck of an earlier type, which is always used in an emergency. The apparatus is not of modern design, but will suffice for the needs of the department until it is replaced.

Renders Verdict

Coroner's Jury Declares Collision of Thursday Was Unavoidable

Suggests Change in Regulations

Funeral of Fireman Keefe, Who Died as Result of Accident

The Floral Tributes

The jury of inquest in the case of Fireman Charles A. Keefe, who lost his life last week while on his way to a fire, reached a conclusion Saturday in less than five minutes, after a sitting lasting nearly five hours. It was the unanimous opinion of the jury that the death resulted from an accident which was unavoidable. The jury also recommended that the regulation requiring cars to be stopped on the far side of the crossings be changed, and that they stop hereafter on the near side. A copy of the verdict will be furnished the District Commissioners. John Larman, the motorman, who had been in custody since the accident occurred, was released.

Impressive services were held yesterday afternoon over the remains of the fireman at the Wilson Memorial Church, on 11th street southeast. Brief services were held at the house, where the detail of firemen, under Assistant Chief Kurtz, participated in the removal of the body to the church. The pallbearers, all members of the fire department, were: P.J. Earner, W.I. Seitz, Clarence Thompson, C.C. Warren, J.H. Ward and William Caton. Among the many floral offerings was a representation of fire alarm box 35, on which were the number of the box and the words: His last alarm. At the church the services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. A. Thompson.

During his remarks the minister reminded his hearers of the uncertainty of life, and referring to the accident he said he thought the man should be placed before the dollar, and inquired if it were not about time to stop sacrificing life for speed. The pastor referred to the many good qualities of the deceased and told of a remark recently made by the fireman to his mother that he wanted to die at his post.

As the procession wended its way from the house to the church several houses of the fire department were passed, and at each one the men were drawn up in front of the building to pay a last tribute to their departed brother. The tolling of the bells on the fire apparatus added to the solemnity of the scene. The body was interred at Congressional cemetery.

Death Due to Hemorrhage

Saturday afternoon, at the inquest, after The Star's report closed, Deputy Coroner Glazebrook testified that the death of Fireman Keefe was due to hemorrhage, following an injury to the body, showing that the victim had been caught between two objects and crushed. The only external injury was a bruise on one knee, such an injury as would probably be received by being dragged. The left collar bone was broken and the right one was fractured. The right shoulder was also broken. Witness said that Keefe was about six feet one inch in height and was a fine specimen of manhood.

E.F. O'Bannon, 1152 Connecticut avenue, told the jury that the street car was near Mr. Magruder's corner when he first saw it. He did not observe that the speed of the car was then being slackened, but he noticed just afterward that the speed was less. He heard the ringing of the bell on the car. Witness could not tell about the speed of the car or the truck horses.

E.W. Raub, 1817 M street northwest, testified that his attention was attracted to the truck by the ringing of the bell. Knowing several of the firemen and realizing how dangerous the Connecticut avenue crossing was, he watched to see if the truck would get over the tracks in safety. He heard people screaming and then came the crash, which was a tremendous one. He could not tell about the speed of the car. The horses, he thought, were slowed up before they reached the crossing.

William Young, colored, 1201 19th street northwest, witnessed the accident, but he knew nothing of the speed of the horses or the car.

W.W. Ford, colored, 1408 21st street, testified that he was standing near the cab stand at the time the accident happened. He did not notice the car until the collision occurred. Witness was watching the truck. The horses were slowed up, he said, about 18th street, and at Connecticut avenue the animals were turned north to go around the car.

Car Making Usual Speed

William W. Walker, colored, 1242 20th street northwest, explained to the jury the circumstances attending the accident as he saw them. The car came along Connecticut avenue, he said, at about the usual speed. Witness did not hear the motorman ring his bell as his car approached M street. The car and truck came together, he said, with a great amount of force.

Frank Carroll, colored, 1205 21st street, testified that he was standing at 18

Killed at White Sulphur

Reports of the wreck which occurred on the Chesapeake and Ohio road near White Sulphur, W. Va., at 7 o'clock last Saturday morning failed to give an entire list of the names of the dead, and as Mr. Samuel Keithley of this city had left for Hot Springs, Ark., at 9:40 Friday night over that line his relatives here communicated with the authorities by wire and thus identified his body. Mr. Keithley was a painter by trade and in the 38th year, but unmarried, making his home with his mother, who belongs to one of the old families of the District, at 634 M street southeast. He was going to the Hot Springs for his health and expected to spend the winter there. The remains were brought to the city this morning and taken to Mitchell's undertaking house on 11th street southeast. The funeral will be held from the house at 3 p.m. tomorrow. Besides his immediate relatives he had a wide circle of friends, who will be grieved to hear of his untimely end.

Shoots Self With Revolver
Mrs. Maud Kelly Uses Weapon While In he Street
Surgeons at the Emergency Hospital Say the Patient Is in a Critical Condition

A woman giving her name as Mrs. Maud Kelly, employed as a maid at the Metropolitan Hotel, shot herself in the abdomen with a revolver about 8:15 o'clock this morning while near the intersection of 7th street and Pennsylvania avenue. Surgeons at the Emergency Hospital, where she was taken, do not expect her to recover.

Luther Cooper of 3737 Prospect avenue, who was standing nearby, told the police of the first precinct he noticed the woman step on the lawn of the parking on the south side of the avenue, west of 7th street, and draw something from her coat. Before he realized what was happening the woman had fired the revolver. She fell in a heap on the grass. Cooper with a number of others, ran to her assistance. The ambulance was summoned.

The woman had taken the revolver from a pasteboard box. The weapon was picked up by Cooper, who turned it over to Detective Kliendienst of the first precinct. The woman's pocketbook, which contained $1.06, several car tickets and a key, a pair of tan gloves and a hair comb, were found on the ground alongside her.

Buys Pistol in Nearby Store

Detectives Mullen and Warren were detailed by Capt. Boardman to make an investigation, and they learned that the woman had purchased the revolver at a hardware store a few minutes before she shot herself. She gave her name at the store as Mrs. E.L. Barnes of 711 M street northwest.

At the Metropolitan Hotel it was stated that Mrs. Kelly had been employed there for he past three weeks, but had not been seen since Thursday night. Her trunk and wearing apparel were found in her room at the hotel. She was formerly employed at the Hotel Gordon, 916 16th street, but it is stated had left there about six weeks ago. She is said to have been married since she left the Gordon Hotel, but the police have been unable to locate her husband.

The surgeons at the hospital say the patient has not made a statement regarding the shooting. Because of her serious condition the detectives have not been allowed o converse with her.

The Evening Star, April 27, 1909, p. 20

Mrs. Annie Kelly Dies

Woman Who Shot Herself While on Street Passes Away

Mrs. Annie Kelly, who shot herself in the stomach yesterday morning while in the vicinity of Pennsylvania avenue and 7th street, died at the Emergency Hospital shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Detectives Warren and Mullen made an investigation. It was reported yesterday that the woman had recently married a young man employed at the Capitol, but the latter denied that such was the case. He knew the woman, he said, and had been told by her that she was a "brass widow." Her maiden name, he explained, was Annie Fishburn, although she had been known as Maud Fishburn and Maud Kelly.

The patient was recognized yesterday afternoon at the hospital as the woman who made a desperate effort to kill herself June 25, 1906, at 508 street northwest. At that time she shot herself three times in the chest and was treated at the Emergency Hospital. It is stated that her husband is named John Kelly, but that she had not lived with him recently.

The patient suffered intense pain after inflicting the wound, and begged that she be given relief. She was conscious and able to give her name and tell the hospital nurses that she had been employed at the Metropolitan Hotel.

The police sent a message last evening to Mrs. Emma Haines, Arkansas City, Ark., sister of the deceased, telling her of the occurrence. Coroner Nevitt viewed the body at the hospital this morning and gave a certificate showing that death had resulted from a self-inflicted wound.

Attempt at Suicide

Miss Annie Kelley Shoots Herself Through the Body

Conveyed to Hospital Where Surgeons Report Her

To Be In Serious Condition

Brooding over the loss of her husband, and, it is alleged, being unable to make ends meet financially, Mrs. Annie Kelley, twenty-five years of age, made an effort to end her life last night about 10:30 o'clock by shooting herself through the body. Three shots were fired, but only one of them took effect. After falling to the floor and realizing what she had done she called: "For God's sake come and help me." Her appeals were responded to by boarders in her house, and she was removed to the Emergency Hospital.

Three weeks ago, it is stated, Mr. and Mrs. Kelley separated, the latter taking boarders and roomers at her home, 508 K street northwest, and the former renting a room in another section. Mrs. Kelley thought she would make a success at keeping a boarding house, but yesterday she realized, she said to her friends that her venture had proved a failure. She was without funds, and she resolved to end her life.

After her husband left her, it is stated, she became despondent. She talked to friends of his absence, and a written statement found in her room last night indicates that she had seen a clairvoyant or had a spiritualistic seance for the purpose of gaining information about her future.

The Written Questions

Written upon a piece of thin paper were these questions:

"Will this man come back to me and when?"

"Is he in the city?"

"Will I stay at the place where I am?"

"Would you tell me if he wants to see me?"

In a book in the room was found a sheet of note paper upon which was written:

"I cannot stand this no longer. I am broken hearted. If there was a just God, would he let me suffer like I have. O, I think he will forgive me for this rash act. O, what will my sister think? Tell her I have gone with my mother. I have nothing on earth now."

"I am in trouble. God will see me out of this misery. Good-by."

"I am so nervous."

Conveyed to Hospital

Mrs. Kelley was in the dining room in the basement at her home when she shot herself. The tree reports were heard by occupants of the rooms and several of them made an investigation. John Goebell, one of the roomers, hurried to a telephone and summoned the police and an ambulance. Hen then went to the room where the wounded woman lay.

"Did you do this?" he asked her.

She responded in the affirmative and told him that she was tired of living. When she reached the hospital she was asked a similar question, but she was too weak to answer. She gave a nod, however, to indicate that she had done the shooting. Her condition was regarded by the physicians at the hospital this morning as being critical, but it was stated she has a slight chance to recover.

Denies Marriage

John Kelley, said to be Mrs. Kelley's husband, was found today by the detectives and questioned about the occurrences of last night, and was taken to police headquarters. The young man is a carpenter by trade. He denied that he had ever been married to the woman who shot herself. In conversation with Capt. Boardman and the detectives he said that the woman's name is Maud Fishburn, and that she has relatives at Arkansas City, Kans. He also said that she came here from 920 West Carey Street, Richmond, Va. Her sister, Eva Haines, he stated, lives in Arkansas City.

Recently, it is stated, the young woman inserted an advertisement in the local papers which read: "Refined widow would like to meet gentleman of means who will render financial assistance; object, matrimony." After Kelley had been questioned by Capt. Boardman and the detectives he was sent to the sixth precinct station and given quarters in a witness room. It is likely he will be released late this afternoon.

Richard Kelly, the unfortunate little boy who was run over by the cars on Maryland avenue some days ago, and was taken to the Washington Asylum to have his leg amputated, as was stated in the Star at the time, is now suffering with lock jaw, and it is feared he will not survive over the day. Great hopes of his recovery were entertained until the lock jaw ensued. Some surprise has been expressed that the railroad company has not afforded some aid to the unfortunate sufferer from the brutal carelessness of its employees running cars along Maryland avenue.

Mr. Kendall represented Nevada in the House of Representatives during the 42nd and 43rd Congresses, March 4, 1871 to March 3, 1875. He was born at Searsmont, Maine, April 22, 1828. He received his education at Phillips Exeter Academy and at Yale. He left the latter institution in 1849 to join the gold rush to California.

He grew up in the west, was admitted to the bar at Sacramento, Cal., and was a member of the California legislature in the early years of the civil war. He later removed to Hamilton, Nev., from which state he was elected to Congress.

In Congress he is remembered as an orator of no little ability. He was a lifelong Democrat. After leaving Congress he moved to Colorado when he was appointed in 1892 to a position in the interstate commerce commission, which position he held at the time of his death.

Fatal and Distressing Event

We record with painful regret a most tragic occurrence that took place last evening, about six o'clock, on Pennsylvania avenue, near Fuller's Hotel; when, on account of some misunderstanding between Rufus Elliott, a brother-in-law of Mr. John C. Rives, William Z. Kendall, a son of Mr. Amos Kendall, and Josiah R. Bailey, the party first named shot Mr. Kendall dead on the spot and severely shattered the left arm of Mr. Bailey, by two discharges from one of Colt's revolving pistols. Mr. E. then made his escape, and had not been arrested at nine o'clock. There are so many contradictory stories in circulation respecting the circumstances of this melancholy affair that we purposely refrain from giving any of the reports that have reached us in regard to it.

The National Intelligencer, Aug. 20, 1845

Wm. Rufus Elliott's Arrest--Proceedings before the Examining Justices

We learn that Wm. Rufus Elliott was arrested about ten o'clock last Monday night, on a warrant issued by Justice Morsell, charging him with causing the death of William Z. Kendall, by shooting him with a pistol on Pennsylvania Avenue. It appeared that Mr. Elliott, after firing the pistol at Mr. Kendall and wounding Mr. Baily, went in a hack to the house of George Parker, Esq., on C street, where he was surrendered under the advice of his friends. It was decided by Justices Morsell and Goddard, who were in attendance at Mr. Parker's, (where Gen. Jones also attended as counsel for Mr. Elliott,) to commit the accused for further examination. Yesterday he was brought into the Court House, in custody of the Marshal, when, the Justices appearing on the bench, at about 12 o'clock an investigation of the circumstances of this tragical affair took place, in one of the most crowded court rooms we ever witnessed.

The prisoner was defended by General Jones and P.R. Fendall, Esq., and took his seat by the side of his counsel. James Hoban, Esq., District Attorney, and H.H. Dent, Esq. appeared on behalf of the United States. Nearly twenty witnesses were examined in the course of the day.

The examination of witnesses was in progress at half past five o'clock, when the Court adjourned until this morning at eleven o'clock. The accused appeared dejected during the whole of the investigation, and his eye was bruised and discolored by the blow he had received from Mr. Bailey in the course of the day, before the fatal rencontre took place.

It was arranged that the deposition, Mr. Baily should be taken by the examining justices in the presence of one counsel for each party.

At the close of yesterday's investigation the prisoner was conducted to prison in custody of the Marshal.

Was He A Choctaw?

An Interesting Point Raised by an Administrator of an Estate

An interesting question is involved in an equity suit filed by A.F. Fox, administrator of the estate of Emmett Kennedy, agt. Thomas Pitchlynn and others by Messrs. Edwards and Barnard, the object being to determine who are the distributees of a fund in his hands, whether it should be under the laws of the District or under those of the Choctaw nation.

The bill states that Kennedy was born on the 3d day of February 1876, at Caddo, in the Indian territory. His parents were citizens of the Choctaw nation, his mother being Rhoda Pitchlynn Kennedy, a daughter of the late Peter P. Pitchlynn, who for many years was the representative of his people in this District. On information he avers that interstate's father and mother both departed this life while residents of and domiciled in the said Indian territory; and on the 21st day of December, 1888, and while the said interstate was about twelve years of age, and still residing in the Indian territory, he was appointed his guardian by the court here; that said interstate was brought to this district, and while temporarily at school at Westminster, Md., to wit, May 27, 1890, departed this life, and subsequently complainant was appointed his administrator; that while guardian complainant received for him from the estate of his grandfather, said Peter P. Pitchlynn, in this District, the sum of $8,525.94, being a portion of the moneys awarded by the United States to the Choctaw people, as he is informed; that this money was held by complainant, and invested for his ward, and he paid out various sums for his benefit during his life and on his death complainant received the residue of all said funds as his administrator, and after passing his final account in this court, holding a special term for Orphans' Court business, which was approved October 16, 1891, he still has remaining in his hands for distribution the sum of $7,287.70

The bill states that he is ready and anxious to distribute the funds, and he claims that the legal domicile of the said interstate at the time of his death was in the District of Columbia, and that his said estate should be distributed in accordance with the laws of distribution in said District; but he is informed that some of the defendant sclain that the said decedent, being a member of the Choctaw nation, had, in contemplation of law, his legal domicile in said nation, or in the said Indian territory, at the date of his death, and that his estate must necessarily be distributed as provided by the laws of said territory.

The defendants are the uncles, aunts and cousins of the intestate, some of the full blood and some of the half blood.

Coroner May Regard an Inquest to Be Necessary
A man whose body was identified as that of Thomas Kennedy of 1234 I street southeast died at the Washington Asylum Hospital about 4 o'clock this morning. He was picked up on the street by the police yesterday morning near 11th and M streets southeast in an unconscious condition and was taken to the hospital, where he died as stated. His body was removed to the morgue, where it was identified. Deputy Coroner Glazebrook performed an autopsy on the body about noon and found that the man's death was due to a fracture of the skull and pneumonia. How this injury was received the police do not know. The man was found about 4 o'clock in the morning and the length of time he had been there is not known. When picked up his clothes were wet from the rain and his condition had been rendered worse by exposure.
Behind the dead man's left ear the surgeon found a bruise, which, it is inferred, had caused the fracture of the skull. Dr. Glazebrook said the blow which caused the fracture must necessarily have been a severe one. It is the opinion of the police that Kennedy fell upon the sidewalk while under the influence of liquor and thereby received the injury Kennedy was an ex-marine, and the police say he was addicted to the use of intoxicants.
Coroner Nevitt viewed the body this afternoon and will decide upon the question of an inquest after the police have had an opportunity to make a further investigation of the affair.

Kibbey, Bessie J. The Evening Star, Friday, May 20, 1949 Miss Bessie J. Kibbey, Lifelong Sponsor of Charities, Dies at 92 Miss Bessie J. Kibbey, 92, for 50 years chairman of the Admissions Committee of the Washington Home for Incurables, died last night at her home, 2025 Massachusetts avenue N.W., following a long illness. A native of Washington, Miss Kibbey was a life-long sponsor of charities here, and was active in mission work. She had been a member of the Board of Governors of the Home for Incurables for 55 years. She retired as head of the Admissions Committee three years ago. Referred to by friends as "one of the city's greatest philanthropists." Miss Kibbey donated money for the city's first playground and was one of the original backers of the Washington Cathedral. Although Miss Kibbey was a life-long resident of the District, very little was made public about her activities. Friends said her father was killed at sea when she was an infant and that her mother died shortly afterward. She was raised by her grandparents, it was said, her grandfather coming here from England. It was said her early home near Third and C streets N.W., was given by her to start the first Young Women's Christian Home here. The New Municipal Center now stands on the site. Miss Kibbey was a member of St. Alban's Church and was a member of the Board of Lady Visitors of Children's Hospital. Funeral arrangements have not been completed. Richard T. Feller and Marshall W. Fishwick, For Thy Great Glory, The Community Press, 1965 p. 6 -- referring to the collection of donations to begin the National Cathedral: Bishop Satterlee made "every exertion to secure the money needed," and gathered $83,000 from Mrs. Percy R. Pyne, Miss Bessie Kibbey, Mr. Morgan, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Woerishoffer, W.K. Vanderbilt, Miss M.W. Bruce. pp. 64-65 -- referring to the Kibbey Carillon: It was not until the 1920's that definite steps were made toward procuring bells for the National Cathedral. A few years after the first American carillon was installed at Gloucester, Massachusetts, in 1922, Miss Bessie Kibbey of Washington, D.C., called on Dean Bratenahl at the Cathedral. On June 5, 1925, she asked him "to obtain a brief statement as to the number of bells that would be required for our Cathedral, what they would cost and where we could obtain a man to ring them." The following February, after discussions and investigations, Dean Bratenahl announced to the Cathedral Chapter that a carillon was being given to the Cathedral for its future Gloria in Excelsis Tower. Miss Kibbey, one of the earliest contributors to the	d. 19 May 1949	92 yrs.	R48/157

Cathedral, left in her estate at her passing in 1949 the sum of $150,000 for the carillon which she hoped would be one of the finest in America.

When it came time to build the Central Tower it was decided that, in addition to the 53-bell Kibbey Carillon, a 10-bell English ring would be installed simultaneously in the Gloria in Excelsis Tower. It would thus become the only tower in the world with both a carillon and a ring of bells.

In the spring of 1963 Richard Feller and Richard Dirksen, with newly appointed Carillonneur Ronald Barnes, went to Loughborough, England, to the Taylor Bell Foundry, to inspect and accept the Kibbey Carillon for Washington Cathedral. The sight of the fully assembled instrument drew these words from the awed Mr. Dirksen:

"There it stood! A gigantic gray skeleton of steel, towering into the smoky heights of the dusky shop and up amid the whirring pulleys which drive the wheels to many machines ... At the four corners and at the floor level were the great lower bells, the largest quite impossible of belief. Amid the whole, a polished oak clavier stood silent, bristling with wooden playing levers and with its many shining rods and wires extending above to the clappers of the bells. That is what I saw, but what I felt was something else entirely. As I stood speechless, staring at this wrought monster, a fear gripped me, and a few beads of sweat broke out: It was too big to go into the tower!"

Mr. Dirksen's fears were unfounded. The bells were approved, dismounted, and sent across the Atlantic. The bells themselves varied from one weighing 15 pounds to one weighing 24,000 pounds.

In June 1963, the 63 newly-arrived bells (53 carillon and 10 English ring) were hoisted to their permanent home. The Washington newspapers described the Cathedral as the scene "of an unusual show yesterday [June 28] as the last of 63 bells, weighing a total of 120 tons, were raised to a tower over the North Transept of the edifice." The delicate task was completed without mishap. On September 22, 1963, the Cathedral Carillonneur played the Recital of Dedication.

Mr. Kidwell had been from early life a prominent worker in the temperance cause, as a boy being a cadet of temperance, and since his majority he has been active as a member of the Sons of Temperance, Rechabites and Good Templars, filling the chairs in the subordinate and grand divisions, tents and lodges of those organizations. He was a consistent member of the Episcopal church, in early life being a communicant of the Church of the Ascension, and of late years of Grace church, South Washington, and for several years past has been a member of the vestry of Grace church an officer of the Sunday school. His funeral took place this afternoon, and was attended by a large concourse of friends, including the various temperance organizations, and Eastern Lodge, I.O.O.F., of which he was a member.

The Evening Star, November 7, 1876

The Funeral of the late Jeremiah L. Kidwell took place yesterday afternoon, from the family residence on D street southwest. The sad cortege moved from the house to Grace church, only half a square distant. The organizations of Odd Fellows, Rechabites and Sons of Temperance, to which the deceased belonged, attended, preceded by Donch's band. As the procession moved into the church, the choir sang, "Nearer my God to Thee, nearer to Thee." In splendid style. The sad and impressive service for the dead was conducted jointly by Rev. Dr. Holmead, the venerable rector of the church, and Rev. J.B. Everett, pastor of Silver Spring parish, Md. At the close of the service the cortege reformed and proceeded to Congressional cemetery, where the interment took place. The remains were encased in a heavy walnut casket, satin lined, with silver mouldings and extension handles, and covered in black cloth with silver fringes. The plate was inscribed: "Jeremiah L. Kidwell, died November 4th, 1876, aged 44 years." The casket was strewn with fairest flowers, the last offerings of the Sunday school of Grace church, the children of which laid their tributes upon the bier, in procession, at the termination of the service. A floral feature was a large cross, composed of white flowers, and presented by the Sunday school. The pall-bearers were selected as follows: Two on the part of Grace church, two on the part of the Odd Fellows, and two on the part of the Order of Rechabites.

Horatio King Dead -- He Passed Away Peacefully After a Severe Illness

A Long Life of Usefulness -- He Had Been a Resident of Washington for 50 Years

Sketch of His Career

Ex-Postmaster General, Horatio King, died this morning at 8:30 o'clock at his residence, No. 707 H street northwest, in the eighty-sixth year of his age. His end was calm and peaceful, and he recognized to the last the dear ones gathered at his bedside. In the winter of 1895-96 he suffered a severe attack of the grip. Last winter he was revisited by the disease in a more serious form, and failed to recuperate, steadily sinking until death ensued this morning.

He was the son of Samuel and Sally (Hall) King and was born in Paris, Maine, June 21, 1811. His father was a farmer, and emigrated from Massachusetts. His mother was a daughter of Jonathan Hall, an early settler in Paris, from Hopkinton, Mass. His grandfather was George King of Raynham, in the state last named, who, with his three brothers, served in the war for independence. George was orderly sergeant and clerk of the Raynham company, and one of the brothers fell in the war. Like most of the old and patriotic stock of the revolution and their immediate descendants, these ancestral relatives of his were staunchly democratic, which may, so far as early impressions go, account for Mr. King's political orthodoxy. Like most of the country-reared young men of that period, he was brought up on the farm, and in the ordinary acceptance of that term, he was not liberally educated, though he supplemented by careful study and voluminous reading and research the education which the common schools afforded. To a strongly practical training he added by his own exertions unusual literary culture, acquiring among his other accomplishments a good knowledge of the French language, which aided him greatly in his subsequent official career.

His Career as an Editor

In the spring of 1829, Mr. King went into the office of the Jeffersonian--a thorough Jackson democratic paper, then published in his native town--to acquire an expert knowledge of the printer's art, with the view of becoming the proprietor, if the business suited him. In about a year he bought the paper in partnership with Hanibal Hamlin, afterward senator and Vice President of the United States, and six months later became sole proprietor, being then about nineteen years of age. For a while he employed a village lawyer, at a salary of twelve York shillings a week, to assist him in editing the sheet. In 1832 he cast his first vote, for Andrew Jackson, and shortly afterward assumed the entire editorial management of his paper. Its files show him to have been consistent and earnest in his denunciation of South Carolina nullification, and throughout Jackson's administration, the Jeffersonian firmly, consistently and energetically support the old hero; and when Mr. Van Buren was, by the refusal of the Senate to confirm his nomination, recalled from England, where during the recess the President had sent him as minister, the Jeffersonian was among the first papers in the country to run his name for the presidency. In 1833 the unfortunate division of the democracy of Maine took place, and Mr. King was induced to remove his press to Portland in May of that year. The consequence was a sharp family quarrel of state and local matters for two or three years, when many of his principal competitors went over bodily to the enemy. From first to last, Mr. King combated every scheme which looked toward disunion. He edited the Jeffersonian until 1838, when he sold it to the Standard, which was soon after merged into the Eastern Argur, and may be said to still live in the columns of that staunch advocate of democratic principles. This terminated his professional connection with the public press.

In the Post Office Department

If anything more were wanted to complete Mr. King's practical education and his knowledge of business and of human nature, no better school could have been found than that which he enjoyed in his twenty-two years connection with all the various concerns and operations of the Post Office Department. There, if anywhere, the whole lesson was presented, and by a careful, diligent and intelligent observer could be learned. In that school, as was proved by his successive promotions, and especially by his eminent fitness for and usefulness in the responsible positions he occupied, he was neither an indifferent nor an unsuccessful student.

In the fall of 1838, Mr. King went to Washington to look for a newspaper opening, but not finding one to his mind, he, in March, 1839, accepted a clerkship at $1,000 per annum in the Post Office Department, tendered him by the then Postmaster General Amos Kendall. Thus at the foot of the ladder he commenced that connection which proved alike beneficial to the country and honorable to himself, and whence he climbed, every step marked by his ability and his energy, to the chief position. He thus had the proud distinction of being the only person who has ever started in the lowest clerkship and ended with the highest office in the department, that of Postmaster General. For years he was the corresponding clerk for New England in the contract office, a position of considerable responsibility, and requiring for the proper discharge of its duties the closest application and a large amount of labor. In 1850 he was transferred to a corresponding desk, having charge of the foreign mail service. In this connection his services were of the most beneficial character. Success under his management attended the effort to extend and improve our postal arrangements with foreign nations. In these days, when lines of steamships map the oceans as lines of railroads do the land, when almost every important commercial city of Europe, the islands and South American have their corresponding connection with some city of our Union, whoever, really and essentially has improved this branch of the service has conferred a benefit upon nations which not only the present, but future generations will fully appreciate.

Characteristics as an Official.

In the spring of 1854, on the death of Major Hobbie, Mr. King without solicitation on his part, was appointed by President Pierce to the office of first assistant postmaster general. To his subordinates he was considerate, kind and obliging, requiring of them, as he should, to have all the business entrusted to them, speedily and properly done, and their work kept up, but never acting captiously nor finding fault needlessly. One secret of his official success was his exactitude in keeping all his business in hand, his desk, at the close of each day being always clear of papers, and his positive requirement of his clerks that everything sent to their desks should be promptly attended to.

Becomes Postmaster General.

He held the position of first assistant postmaster general until January 1, 1861, when he became acting postmaster general. February 1 he was nominated by President Buchanan and on the 12th confirmed by the Senate as Postmaster General, serving in that capacity until the inauguration of President Lincoln and the appointment of his successor, March 7, 1861. He filled all these places with fidelity and distinguished ability. He was Postmaster General when treason stalked with a bold front through the streets of the national capital. As a lifelong democrat, Mr. King was loyal to the core, and remained so during the entire struggle. Though exempted by law from the performance of military duty, he furnished a representative recruit, who was duly mustered in and served in the Union army. This exhibition of patriotism and public spirit received official acknowledgment from the government.

After retiring from the Post Office Department he was appointed, In April, 1862 one of a board of commissioners to carry out the provisions of the emancipation proclamation in the District of Columbia. This position was tendered him by President Lincoln, unsolicited, and doubtless on account of his conspicuous services near the close of the previous administration. His associated commissioners were Daniel R. Goodloe and Dr. John M. Broadhead, with Wm. R. Woodward as clerk and B. M. Campbell as expert. Nine hundred and ninety-six claims, embracing 3,100 slaves, were presented within three months, limited by the law. Of these claims, thirty-six in whole and twenty-one in part, were rejected for disloyalty or defective titles, embracing 111 slaves, so 2989 were paid for under the act. Thirteen other claims for twenty-eight slaves were made after the time limit, and allowed by Congress, making the total number of slaves paid for 3,017.

The service of the commission was limited to nine months, and on finally leaving office, Mr. King became an attorney before the executive departments and the international commissions, which profession he followed until about 1875, when he retired as far as practicable from active business. He originated a series of Saturday evening literary entertainments at his private residence, which became very popular and contributed very much to elevate the literary tone of the city. The 100th and final meeting, was held, February 2, 1884.

Varied Accomplishments.

While not a fluent speaker, he was for years a ready and strong writer for newspapers and magazines on political, historical and literary subjects. In 1875, he published, "Sketches of Travel, or Twelve Months in Europe," and in 1895 "Turning on the Light," a dispassionate survey of President Buchanan's administration from 1857 to its close, and other original articles.

June 11, 1896, the honorary degree of L.L.D. was conferred upon Mr. King by Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa.

Mr. King's somewhat eventful life has been one of usefulness. In all the positions he has filled he has inaugurated important improvements, including, about 1883-85, the "Penalty Envelope," a convenient and economical device used by all the departments of the government for franking official mail matter, and which it is estimated has saved the government at least $100,000 every year since its introduction. Mr. King worked seven years before congress to have this device ordered by law, and neither received nor expected a cent for his efforts. It was simply a "labor of love" for the good of the service and the benefit of the government.

This is only one of his many good deeds. He was always a public-spirited citizen. For sixteen years he took great pleasure in his duties as a member, and most of the time as secretary of the Washington National Monument Society, and had the great satisfaction of seeing the completion and dedication of the beautiful marble obelisk -- a magnificent tribute to the memory of the father of his country. Congress having put the monument and everything concerning it under the charge of the War Department, and the work allotted to the society having been accomplished, he, with other of his associates, tendered their resignations.

May 25, 1835, he married Ann Collins of Portland, Me., by whom he had seven children, only three of whom survive, Mrs. Annie A. Cole of Washington, D.C., Gen. Horatio C. King of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Henry P. King of West Newton, Mass. The others died young. His first wife died September 22, 1869, and he married February 8, 1875, Isabella G. Osborne of Auburn, N.Y., who survives him.

Mr. King was a notable example to the youth of this country. Born and bred under circumstances which gave him no greater advantages that are enjoyed by a large majority of the young men of the Union, he attained by his own energy, industry and perseverance an exalted station, and made for himself a name and a reputation of which any man may be proud.

Mr. Henry F. King, with his wife, arrived at the King residence on H street from Boston just before the death of his venerable father, and was at his side when he died. The arrangements for the funeral have not been completed.

A Double Bereavement.

The blow came with terrible force to General Horatio C. King, the eldest son of the dead man. He was unable to visit his father because he was in attendance at the bedside of his daughter in New York. She died yesterday, and while overwhelmed with grief at her loss, the news was sent to him that his father was no more.

The Evening Star, April 15, 1872

Hon. Horatio King's closing literary reunion took place on Saturday evening, on which occasion he delivered a brief parting address to his guests. Hon. Amasa Walker, of Massachusetts, followed with a few remarks commendatory of literary reunions, and expressing the hope that the example set here would be followed in other places. Miss Ware read two favorite selections, and Prof. Brown an original poem, entitled "Good Night," by Mrs. Nealy, dedicated to Mr. King. Dr. Chickering moved a vote of thanks to the host and hostess, with some pleasant remarks, and Miss Forney, the Misses Gray, Miss Burnham, Mrs. Phillips and others favored the company with some fine music.

The Evening Star, March 11, 1861

On Saturday afternoon, the officers, clerks and employees of the Post Office Department convened in the principal hall of that edifice. The Hon. Horatio King, the retiring head of that important branch of the Government, then addressed them as follows:

My Friends: You have assembled to be introduced to your new chief, but before going through with this ceremony I wish simply to remark that, although now separated from you officially, I cannot bring myself to pronounce the word "farewell." Intimately associated as I have been with many of you for more than twenty years, were I henceforth to be separated from you socially as well as officially, I should feel sad indeed; but expecting as I do to remain in the city, where I shall doubtless have the pleasure of meeting you frequently, the unpleasantness of severing our official relations is thereby greatly softened, and I do not, therefore, propose to take formal leave of you. I need not say, however, that I shall ever remember with gratitude your uniform kindness towards me in all the positions I have been called to fill in the Department, and you have my best wishes for your prosperity and happiness.

The Hon. Judge Blair, Postmaster General, was then announced, when Mr. King, assisted by Gen. Skinner, of the appointment, E.L. Child, of the contract, and A.N. Zevely, Esq., of the finance divisions, introduced each employee by name. Judge B. courteously received them, one and all, expressing a hope that he would have their hearty cooperation in carrying on the important business of the Department. Immediately afterwards, Dr. Tate, Auditor of the Treasury for the postal department, and H. St. George Offutt, chief clerk, were introduced.

Dr. Hubert King Dies; Prominent Dentist Here for 50 Years

Dr. Hubert L. King, 79, a prominent dentist in Washington for 50 years, died yesterday in Garfield Hospital after a brief illness.

During his long career, Dr. King numbered among his patients and friends vice presidents, cabinet officers and many other persons prominent in Capital life. Among the first dentists here to establish a complete dental clinic, he maintained offices for many years in the Carry Building at Fifteenth and K streets N.W. He retired in 1945.

Active as a sportsman in his younger days, Dr. King owned a number of fine trotters and pacers, which he raced at the old Brightwood Driving Club and at other local tracks. He became acquainted with President Theodore Roosevelt through occasions when the two horse-lovers were riding in Rock Creek Park.

A native of Washington, Dr. King attended local schools and was graduated in dentistry from Columbian College, now George Washington University in 1895. He was active in civic, dental and fraternal affairs here for a number of years until poor health curtailed his activities.

Dr. King lived at 7423 Blair road N.W. He is survived by his widow, Lena Devine King; a son, Hubert G. King, a Washington attorney who lives at the Blair road address; a brother, Preston C. King, Potomac, Md., and two grandchildren, Mrs. William W. Waller and M. Graham King, both of Washington.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow noon in the Robert Pumphrey funeral home in Bethesda. Burial in Congressional Cemetery will be private.

The Evening Star, May 20, 1876

Fatal Gas Explosion at the Capitol

John King Killed, and S.B. Cutler Severely Injured

A gas explosion occurred at the Capitol about half-past 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in a small room used for storing documents under the east stairway of the Senate near the restaurant, by which Mr. John King, head carpenter, under the Supervising Architect, was so severely injured that his death resulted a little after 7 o'clock p.m., and S.B. Cutler, assistant superintendent of the document folding room, was severely injured. The concussion was distinctly felt throughout the entire building. The halls on the south side were filled with smoke and stifling gasses, and it was with considerable difficulty that the scene of the explosion could be reached. Carpenters had been employed for some days past placing shelves in the room for the purpose of storing there a lot of books from the folding room. The only opening to this room, where the explosion occurred, was the door leading into it.

How the Explosion Occurred

There was a bracket gas light over the door, and some of the employees on leaving the room must, in turning off the gas, have turned it on again without knowing it, there being no check on the key, which, on account of its height from the floor, was usually turned with a stick. The room was thus filled with the escaped gas. In the afternoon Captain Cutler with Mr. King went to the room to see after the shelving. Mr. King, unlocking the door, entered the room, followed by Captain Cutler a few feet behind. The room being very dark, they both stepped back towards the door, as the smell of gas was oppressive. When Mr. King reached the door he struck a match, and instantly a tremendous explosion occurred, both being thrown with great force against the wall on the opposite side of the hall.

Frightful Injuries of Mr. King

Mr. King was forced against the door jam, which fractured both his knees, and pieces of the door and sash, which were blown off, cut his face and neck in a frightful manner. He was also shockingly burned about the head and arms. When found he was doubled up on the floor of the hall, his head and breast having fallen forward upon his legs. A gash was found extending half way from the nose to the ear over the right eyebrow, the right thigh broken and the bone protruding through the flesh. At first he was supposed to be dead, but finally was seen to gasp, when restoratives were applied by some physicians present, and he was removed at once to Providence hospital.

Captain Cutler Was Stunned

and presented a frightful appearance with his face, neck and hands blistered, hair and whiskers singed close to the skin, but no bones were broken. He was taken into the room of the Sergeant-at-Arms, suffering great pain, and Senators Withers and Dennis, both belonging to the medical profession, attended him, and after his wounds were dressed he was removed to his home. Dr. McCoy, who is attending him, reports him badly burned, but that he has no internal injuries, and, if erysipelas does not set in, will recover.

Death of Mr. King

Mr. King was attended on his arrival at Providence Hospital by Drs. J.E. Bracknett and Beall, who dressed his wounds and, after administering opiates, made a more extended examination of his injuries and decided that nothing could be done to save his life, as the concussion had done its work. He lingered till after 7 o'clock, when death relieved him of his sufferings, Mr. King, was about fifty years old, of good reputation for integrity, and he leaves a family who reside on 6th, between H and I streets, northwest.

Force of the Shock

The door to the room was torn from its hinges and dashed against the opposite wall, shivering it to pieces. The wall was disfigured and torn, and in one place is to be seen the prints of Mr. King's hand, with portions of the blistered skin still clinging to the hard finish. The walls are blistered and blackened by the heat, and such was the force of concussion that after turning two angles, at least forty or fifty feet from where it occurred, the transom at the head of the Senate stairs was dashed into the room of the official reporters of the Senate, causing no little consternation among that diligent corps. The doors of the Senate restaurant were slammed to and fro, and a hat rack standing in a second room against double doors broken to pieces. The cashier of the restaurant was thrown violently back against the wall.

King. On Sunday, November 11th, 1883, at 5 a.m., after a brief illness of typhoid pneumonia, Mr. Maurice King departed this life to the deep regret of a large circle of friends and the irreparable loss of all whose privilege it had been to know him as an intimate associate.

While in the fresh flush of youth, with high hopes and bright prospects full of the assurances of an honorable and successful career, the grim specter came and beckoned him away.

The bereaved family have the heartfelt sympathy of all their neighbors and acquaintances who sincerely condole with them on the sad event, which has desolated their hearthstone.

Mr. King was a native of Washington and resided here all his life. He was a graduate of the public schools, and afterwards learnt the art of telegraphy in the office of the Western Union telegraph company, in this city, where he was employed as an operator when attacked with the illness which terminated his brief but honorable career.

During the recent struggle between the companies and the Brotherhood, Mr. King took part, with his fellow-operators, and often when the amount allowed striking operators was offered him he generously waived his claim in favor of someone whose necessities were greater than his own. This is spoken of only to illustrate his generosity of soul, which, indeed, was one of the most conspicuous features of his character. To the voice of pity or distress his ear was never closed, and his tender soul found its highest gratification when alleviating the woes of his fellow-man. Sincerely beloved in life and deeply lamented in death, he has passed the boundary to the unseen world; but his honest, manly, generous character shall remain fresh in the memory of his friends and stimulate them to so live that when the summons comes for them some sympathetic tongue may utter the same words of honest eulogy.

By His Friends.

Rudolph A. King Dead

Old Resident of City and Confederate Veteran

Rudolph Alpheus King, for many years a resident of Washington, and formerly engaged in the importing business here, died at the family apartments in the Alabama, 11th and N streets northwest, this morning shortly before 10 o'clock. The immediate cause of death was kidney trouble.

The deceased was engaged in the importing business years ago with his father, Mr. Z.M.P. King, at the corner of 15th and I streets, the storeroom being occupied at the present time as a drug store. He retired from an active business life some years ago, and up until three years ago enjoyed the best of health. He was, however, compelled to take to his bed about three weeks ago, the patient gradually sinking until the end came, as stated.

When the civil war broke out, Mr. King was studying at Hobart College, Geneva, N.Y., and when the news of the firing of the first gun in the war was received he at once left college and hastened to Virginia, where he joined one of the regiments of that state organized to uphold the southern confederacy.

Mr. King was in his 66th year, and, it is stated, was the first man to place coal oil on sale upon the local market. He did this immediately after the civil war when he came to this city to locate. About forty years ago he married Miss Bettie W. Moore of Eastville, Accomac county, Va., who survives him, together with two daughters and three sons--Mrs. Mary L. Turner, Mrs. H.C. Lewis, Dr. W.P.M. King, Z.M.P. King, and R.A. King, Jr.

Horatio King Dead -- He Passed Away Peacefully After a Severe Illness

A Long Life of Usefulness -- He Had Been a Resident of Washington for 50 Years

Sketch of His Career

Ex-Postmaster General, Horatio King, died this morning at 8:30 o'clock at his residence, No. 707 H street northwest, in the eighty-sixth year of his age. His end was calm and peaceful, and he recognized to the last the dear ones gathered at his bedside. In the winter of 1895-96 he suffered a severe attack of the grip. Last winter he was revisited by the disease in a more serious form, and failed to recuperate, steadily sinking until death ensued this morning.

He was the son of Samuel and Sally (Hall) King and was born in Paris, Maine, June 21, 1811. His father was a farmer, and emigrated from Massachusetts. His mother was a daughter of Jonathan Hall, an early settler in Paris, from Hopkinton, Mass. His grandfather was George King of Raynham, in the state last named, who, with his three brothers, served in the war for independence. George was orderly sergeant and clerk of the Raynham company, and one of the brothers fell in the war. Like most of the old and patriotic stock of the revolution and their immediate descendants, these ancestral relatives of his were staunchly democratic, which may, so far as early impressions go, account for Mr. King's political orthodoxy. Like most of the country-reared young men of that period, he was brought up on the farm, and in the ordinary acceptance of that term, he was not liberally educated, though he supplemented by careful study and voluminous reading and research the education which the common schools afforded. To a strongly practical training he added by his own exertions unusual literary culture, acquiring among his other accomplishments a good knowledge of the French language, which aided him greatly in his subsequent official career.

His Career as an Editor

In the spring of 1829, Mr. King went into the office of the Jeffersonian--a thorough Jackson democratic paper, then published in his native town--to acquire an expert knowledge of the printer's art, with the view of becoming the proprietor, if the business suited him. In about a year he bought the paper in partnership with Hanibal Hamlin, afterward senator and Vice President of the United States, and six months later became sole proprietor, being then about nineteen years of age. For a while he employed a village lawyer, at a salary of twelve York shillings a week, to assist him in editing the sheet. In 1832 he cast his first vote, for Andrew Jackson, and shortly afterward assumed the entire editorial management of his paper. Its files show him to have been consistent and earnest in his denunciation of South Carolina nullification, and throughout Jackson's administration, the Jeffersonian firmly, consistently and energetically support the old hero; and when Mr. Van Buren was, by the refusal of the Senate to confirm his nomination, recalled from England, where during the recess the President had sent him as minister, the Jeffersonian was among the first papers in the country to run his name for the presidency. In 1833 the unfortunate division of the democracy of Maine took place, and Mr. King was induced to remove his press to Portland in May of that year. The consequence was a sharp family quarrel of state and local matters for two or three years, when many of his principal competitors went over bodily to the enemy. From first to last, Mr. King combated every scheme which looked toward disunion. He edited the Jeffersonian until 1838, when he sold it to the Standard, which was soon after merged into the Eastern Argus, and may be said to still live in the columns of that staunch advocate of democratic principles. This terminated his professional connection with the public press.

In the Post Office Department

If anything more were wanted to complete Mr. King's practical education and his knowledge of business and of human nature, no better school could have been found than that which he enjoyed in his twenty-two years connection with all the various concerns and operations of the Post Office Department. There, if anywhere, the whole lesson was presented, and by a careful, diligent and intelligent observer could be learned. In that school, as was proved by his successive promotions, and especially by his eminent fitness for and usefulness in the responsible positions he occupied, he was neither an indifferent nor an unsuccessful student.

In the fall of 1838, Mr. King went to Washington to look for a newspaper opening, but not finding one to his mind, he, in March, 1839, accepted a clerkship at $1,000 per annum in the Post Office Department, tendered him by the then Postmaster General Amos Kendall. Thus at the foot of the ladder he commenced that connection which proved alike beneficial to the country and honorable to himself, and whence he climbed, every step marked by his ability and his energy, to the chief position. He thus had the proud distinction of being the only person who has ever started in the lowest clerkship and ended with the highest office in the department, that of Postmaster General. For years he was the corresponding clerk for New England in the contract office, a position of considerable responsibility, and requiring for the proper discharge of its duties the closest application and a large amount of labor. In 1850 he was transferred to a corresponding desk, having charge of the foreign mail service. In this connection his services were of the most beneficial character. Success under his management attended the effort to extend and improve our postal arrangements with foreign nations. In these days, when lines of steamships map the oceans as lines of railroads do the land, when almost every important commercial city of Europe, the islands and South American have their corresponding connection with some city of our Union, whoever, really and essentially has improved this branch of the service has conferred a benefit upon nations which not only the present, but future generations will fully appreciate.

Characteristics as an Official.

In the spring of 1854, on the death of Major Hobbie, Mr. King without solicitation on his part, was appointed by President Pierce to the office of first assistant postmaster general. To his subordinates he was considerate, kind and obliging, requiring of them, as he should, to have all the business entrusted to them, speedily and properly done, and their work kept up, but never acting captiously nor finding fault needlessly. One secret of his official success was his exactitude in keeping all his business in hand, his desk, at the close of each day being always clear of papers, and his positive requirement of his clerks that everything sent to their desks should be promptly attended to.

Becomes Postmaster General.

He held the position of first assistant postmaster general until January 1, 1861, when he became acting postmaster general. February 1 he was nominated by President Buchanan and on the 12th confirmed by the Senate as Postmaster General, serving in that capacity until the inauguration of President Lincoln and the appointment of his successor, March 7, 1861. He filled all these places with fidelity and distinguished ability. He was Postmaster General when treason stalked with a bold front through the streets of the national capital. As a lifelong democrat, Mr. King was loyal to the core, and remained so during the entire struggle. Though exempted by law from the performance of military duty, he furnished a representative recruit, who was duly mustered in and served in the Union army. This exhibition of patriotism and public spirit received official acknowledgment from the government.

After retiring from the Post Office Department he was appointed, In April, 1862 one of a board of commissioners to carry out the provisions of the emancipation proclamation in the District of Columbia. This position was tendered him by President Lincoln, unsolicited, and doubtless on account of his conspicuous services near the close of the previous administration. His associated commissioners were Daniel R. Goodloe and Dr. John M. Broadhead, with Wm. R. Woodward as clerk and B. M. Campbell as expert. Nine hundred and ninety-six claims, embracing 3,100 slaves, were presented within three months, limited by the law. Of these claims, thirty-six in whole and twenty-one in part, were rejected for disloyalty or defective titles, embracing 111 slaves, so 2989 were paid for under the act. Thirteen other claims for twenty-eight slaves were made after the time limit, and allowed by Congress, making the total number of slaves paid for 3,017.

The service of the commission was limited to nine months, and on finally leaving office, Mr. King became an attorney before the executive departments and the international commissions, which profession he followed until about 1875, when he retired as far as practicable from active business. He originated a series of Saturday evening literary entertainments at his private residence, which became very popular and contributed very much to elevate the literary tone of the city. The 100th and final meeting, was held, February 2, 1884.

Varied Accomplishments.

While not a fluent speaker, he was for years a ready and strong writer for newspapers and magazines on political, historical and literary subjects. In 1875, he published, "Sketches of Travel, or Twelve Months in Europe," and in 1895 "Turning on the Light," a dispassionate survey of President Buchanan's administration from 1857 to its close, and other original articles.

June 11, 1896, the honorary degree of L.L.D. was conferred upon Mr. King by Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa.

Mr. King's somewhat eventful life has been one of usefulness. In all the positions he has filled he has inaugurated important improvements, including, about 1883-85, the "Penalty Envelope," a convenient and economical device used by all the departments of the government for franking official mail matter, and which it is estimated has saved the government at least $100,000 every year since its introduction. Mr. King worked seven years before congress to have this device ordered by law, and neither received nor expected a cent for his efforts. It was simply a "labor of love" for the good of the service and the benefit of the government.

This is only one of his many good deeds. He was always a public-spirited citizen. For sixteen years he took great pleasure in his duties as a member, and most of the time as secretary of the Washington National Monument Society, and had the great satisfaction of seeing the completion and dedication of the beautiful marble obelisk -- a magnificent tribute to the memory of the father of his country. Congress having put the monument and everything concerning it under the charge of the War Department, and the work allotted to the society having been accomplished, he, with other of his associates, tendered their resignations.

May 25, 1835, he married Ann Collins of Portland, Me., by whom he had seven children, only three of whom survive, Mrs. Annie A. Cole of Washington, D.C., Gen. Horatio C. King of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Henry P. King of West Newton, Mass. The others died young. His first wife died September 22, 1869, and he married February 8, 1875, Isabella G. Osborne of Auburn, N.Y., who survives him.

Mr. King was a notable example to the youth of this country. Born and bred under circumstances which gave him no greater advantages that are enjoyed by a large majority of the young men of the Union, he attained by his own energy, industry and perseverance an exalted station, and made for himself a name and a reputation of which any man may be proud.

Mr. Henry F. King, with his wife, arrived at the King residence on H street from Boston just before the death of his venerable father, and was at his side when he died. The arrangements for the funeral have not been completed.

A Double Bereavement.

The blow came with terrible force to General Horatio C. King, the eldest son of the dead man. He was unable to visit his father because he was in attendance at the bedside of his daughter in New York. She died yesterday, and while overwhelmed with grief at her loss, the news was sent to him that his father was no more.

The Evening Star, April 15, 1872

Hon. Horatio King's closing literary reunion took place on Saturday evening, on which occasion he delivered a brief parting address to his guests. Hon. Amasa Walker, of Massachusetts, followed with a few remarks commendatory of literary reunions, and expressing the hope that the example set here would be followed in other places. Miss Ware read two favorite selections, and Prof. Brown an original poem, entitled "Good Night," by Mrs. Nealy, dedicated to Mr. King. Dr. Chickering moved a vote of thanks to the host and hostess, with some pleasant remarks, and Miss Forney, the Misses Gray, Miss Burnham, Mrs. Phillips and others favored the company with some fine music.

The Evening Star, March 11, 1861

On Saturday afternoon, the officers, clerks and employees of the Post Office Department convened in the principal hall of that edifice. The Hon. Horatio King, the retiring head of that important branch of the Government, then addressed them as follows:

My Friends: You have assembled to be introduced to your new chief, but before going through with this ceremony I wish simply to remark that, although now separated from you officially, I cannot bring myself to pronounce the word "farewell." Intimately associated as I have been with many of you for more than twenty years, were I henceforth to be separated from you socially as well as officially, I should feel sad indeed; but expecting as I do to remain in the city, where I shall doubtless have the pleasure of meeting you frequently, the unpleasantness of severing our official relations is thereby greatly softened, and I do not, therefore, propose to take formal leave of you. I need not say, however, that I shall ever remember with gratitude your uniform kindness towards me in all the positions I have been called to fill in the Department, and you have my best wishes for your prosperity and happiness.

The Hon. Judge Blair, Postmaster General, was then announced, when Mr. King, assisted by Gen. Skinner, of the appointment, E.L. Child, of the contract, and A.N. Zevely, Esq., of the finance divisions, introduced each employee by name. Judge B. courteously received them, one and all, expressing a hope that he would have their hearty cooperation in carrying on the important business of the Department. Immediately afterwards, Dr. Tate, Auditor of the Treasury for the postal department, and H. St. George Offutt, chief clerk, were introduced.

Fatal Gas Explosion at the Capitol

John King Killed, and S.B. Cutler Severely Injured

A gas explosion occurred at the Capitol about half-past 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in a small room used for storing documents under the east stairway of the Senate near the restaurant, by which Mr. John King, head carpenter, under the Supervising Architect, was so severely injured that his death resulted a little after 7 o'clock p.m., and S.B. Cutler, assistant superintendent of the document folding room, was severely injured. The concussion was distinctly felt throughout the entire building. The halls on the south side were filled with smoke and stifling gasses, and it was with considerable difficulty that the scene of the explosion could be reached. Carpenters had been employed for some days past placing shelves in the room for the purpose of storing there a lot of books from the folding room. The only opening to this room, where the explosion occurred, was the door leading into it.

How the Explosion Occurred

There was a bracket gas light over the door, and some of the employees on leaving the room must, in turning off the gas, have turned it on again without knowing it, there being no check on the key, which, on account of its height from the floor, was usually turned with a stick. The room was thus filled with the escaped gas. In the afternoon Captain Cutler with Mr. King went to the room to see after the shelving. Mr. King, unlocking the door, entered the room, followed by Captain Cutler a few feet behind. The room being very dark, they both stepped back towards the door, as the smell of gas was oppressive. When Mr. King reached the door he struck a match, and instantly a tremendous explosion occurred, both being thrown with great force against the wall on the opposite side of the hall.

Frightful Injuries of Mr. King

Mr. King was forced against the door jam, which fractured both his knees, and pieces of the door and sash, which were blown off, cut his face and neck in a frightful manner. He was also shockingly burned about the head and arms. When found he was doubled up on the floor of the hall, his head and breast having fallen forward upon his legs. A gash was found extending half way from the nose to the ear over the right eyebrow, the right thigh broken and the bone protruding through the flesh. At first he was supposed to be dead, but finally was seen to gasp, when restoratives were applied by some physicians present, and he was removed at once to Providence hospital.

Captain Cutler Was Stunned

and presented a frightful appearance with his face, neck and hands blistered, hair and whiskers singed close to the skin, but no bones were broken. He was taken into the room of the Sergeant-at-Arms, suffering great pain, and Senators Withers and Dennis, both belonging to the medical profession, attended him, and after his wounds were dressed he was removed to his home. Dr. McCoy, who is attending him, reports him badly burned, but that he has no internal injuries, and, if erysipelas does not set in, will recover.

Death of Mr. King

Mr. King was attended on his arrival at Providence Hospital by Drs. J.E. Bracknett and Beall, who dressed his wounds and, after administering opiates, made a more extended examination of his injuries and decided that nothing could be done to save his life, as the concussion had done its work. He lingered till after 7 o'clock, when death relieved him of his sufferings, Mr. King, was about fifty years old, of good reputation for integrity, and he leaves a family who reside on 6th, between H and I streets, northwest.

Force of the Shock

The door to the room was torn from its hinges and dashed against the opposite wall, shivering it to pieces. The wall was disfigured and torn, and in one place is to be seen the prints of Mr. King's hand, with portions of the blistered skin still clinging to the hard finish. The walls are blistered and blackened by the heat, and such was the force of concussion that after turning two angles, at least forty or fifty feet from where it occurred, the transom at the head of the Senate stairs was dashed into the room of the official reporters of the Senate, causing no little consternation among that diligent corps. The doors of the Senate restaurant were slammed to and fro, and a hat rack standing in a second room against double doors broken to pieces. The cashier of the restaurant was thrown violently back against the wall.

------	-------------	-----	------------

King. On Sunday, November 11th, 1883, at 5 a.m., after a brief illness of typhoid pneumonia, Mr. Maurice King departed this life to the deep regret of a large circle of friends and the irreparable loss of all whose privilege it had been to know him as an intimate associate.

While in the fresh flush of youth, with high hopes and bright prospects full of the assurances of an honorable and successful career, the grim specter came and beckoned him away.

The bereaved family have the heartfelt sympathy of all their neighbors and acquaintances who sincerely condole with them on the sad event, which has desolated their hearthstone.

Mr. King was a native of Washington and resided here all his life. He was a graduate of the public schools, and afterwards learnt the art of telegraphy in the office of the Western Union telegraph company, in this city, where he was employed as an operator when attacked with the illness which terminated his brief but honorable career.

During the recent struggle between the companies and the Brotherhood, Mr. King took part, with his fellow-operators, and often when the amount allowed striking operators was offered him he generously waived his claim in favor of someone whose necessities were greater than his own. This is spoken of only to illustrate his generosity of soul, which, indeed, was one of the most conspicuous features of his character. To the voice of pity or distress his ear was never closed, and his tender soul found its highest gratification when alleviating the woes of his fellow-man. Sincerely beloved in life and deeply lamented in death, he has passed the boundary to the unseen world; but his honest, manly, generous character shall remain fresh in the memory of his friends and stimulate them to so live that when the summons comes for them some sympathetic tongue may utter the same words of honest eulogy.

By His Friends.

Death of Paul King

An eccentric character, well known in the western portion of the city, died Sunday of softening of the brain at Garfield Hospital. He was Paul King, who dealt in leather for many years on Potomac avenue. He was invariably clad in a suit of leather, trimmed fantastically, and his delivery wagon was familiar because of the peculiarities of the signs it bore. Mr. King lived at No. 371 Maryland avenue southwest. His remains will be buried today from the Fifth Baptist Church.

When the civil war broke out, Mr. King was studying at Hobart College, Geneva, N.Y., and when the news of the firing of the first gun in the war was received he at once left college and hastened to Virginia, where he joined one of the regiments of that state organized to uphold the southern confederacy.

Obituary

The death of Eliab Kingman, Esq., whose funeral is announced in this issue of The Star, wipes out the last of a generation of journalists whose names have become historical. Outliving all his contemporaries, Thurlow Weed being the last on the roll of deaths among leading members of the press preceding him, he dies at last at the extreme age of 86, crowned with literary honors, but forgotten by all of the present generation of newspaper men, save the narrow circle of those whom he loved and in whom he delighted. Mr. Kingman was born in Warren, Rhode Island, on the 24th of May, 1797, of good old Puritan stock, graduated from Brown's University in 1820, took to quill-driving soon after, and finally located in Washington, where he afterwards became connected with the National Intelligencer as Congressional reporter, and in 1835, married Miss Cordelia Ball Ewell, eldest daughter of the late Dr. James Ewell, whom he survived seven years. Mr. Kingman very soon became prominently identified with several leading journals in the country as Washington correspondent, notably the Baltimore Sun, over the nom de plume of "Ion;" the Charleston Courier and the New York Journal of Commerce; occasionally writing for other journals, but being for the most part permanently attached to those first named. Among his intimate friends in modern journalism may be mentioned Messrs. John Savage, S.H. Kauffmann, C.S. Noyes and one or two others, the late James W. Simonton being among the number up to the time of his death. Mr. Kingman was the only surviving member of his family, there having been four sisters and one brother, the late Mr. Abner Kingman, of Boston, who died some two years ago. He may fairly be classed among the most noted and popular newspaper men of the past half century, who having nearly attained to the traditional four score years and ten, as the limit of human life, has been gathered to his Father's, rich in all knowledge, ripe in experience with honors well achieved, and after a life's labors well performed, he has gone to his rest, mourned, by a circle of devoted friends, who know him well and loved him sincerely.

Mr. Eliab Kingman, who years ago stood at the head of the fraternity of Washington correspondents, died at 10 o'clock this morning at his residence, corner of 14th and P streets. Mr. Kingman was born in Warren, Rhode Island, May 24, 1797, and, therefore, was in his 86th year. He has been gradually breaking down physically for some time, but retained his mental faculties in full vigor until recently.

Mr. Kingman's work as a correspondent was noted for conciseness and accuracy. His letters for many years to the Baltimore Sun, over the signature of "Ion," will be remembered as models in the way of meaty news, expressed with epigrammatic point. His exceptional reliability as a news gatherer caused his letters to be more quoted than those of any other correspondent of his day. Through a lucky hit made by him in the purchase of the square of ground where he resided, when it was of little value, and the sale of lots when the building boom reached that part of the city, he was put in possession of a competence, and was enabled to retire from the drudgery of newspaper work.

The Evening Star, February 5, 1883

The funeral of Mr. E. Kingman took place yesterday afternoon from his late residence, 1509 14th street and was attended by a number of Washington journalists and many other friends.

The Will of Eliab Kingman

A Caveat Filed By F.E. Martindale

The register of will has received from F.E. Martindale, of Port Richmond, N.Y., a caveat to the will of the late Eliab Kingman, which was filed here March 18th. The caveat sets out: 1st, Undue influence exercised over the testator at the date of the execution of the original will, February 24th, 1878, to the extent of annulling testator's own will and wishes in respect thereof. 2d, Of Mental incapacity, undue influence and fraud in the making, drawing, and executing of the codicil, dated October 17th, 1881, in that the testator was not himself cognizant on the 20th day of April, 1882 of having signed or executed any such codicil, and that said codicil does not express said testator's will as expressed at the date thereof and since.

Accompanying the caveat is an affidavit of Dr. Martindale that the signature of the codicil of October 17th, 1881, was obtained when testator was of unsound mind, by undue influence, and without the advice of his legal adviser, and for the purpose of nullifying testator's wishes. He further says that the memory, character and good name of testator will be injured by the admission of this codicil to probate, and he says, the codicil did not express his will, for on April 20th, 1882, the testator declared to him his intention to leave him $5,000, to be paid before any of the legacies are paid. Dr. Martindale is the nephew of Mrs. Kingman, deceased, and by the will and first and third codicils is left $5,000. In the codicil of October 17, 1881, all the special bequests, amounting to $8,500, are reduced to $750.

It is with pain we announce that the Hon. G.L. Kinnard, who was so badly scalded a few days ago on board the steamboat Flora, died at the hospitable dwelling of Gen. Lytle, on Saturday evening last, and was buried yesterday afternoon with distinguished marks of respect.

Mr. Kinnard was aged about 35 years, and was a highly respectable member of Congress from Indiana. His death is rendered the more distressing, as we understand he was on his way to Philadelphia, with a view of being married to a lady in that city, whom he intended taking with him to Washington.

"Tom" Kinslow Dead

Well-Known Washingtonian and Prominent Base Ball Player

Thomas F. Kinslow, the well-known professional ball player of this city, died this morning of consumption. "Tom" has been out of the game for the past two or three years, and for a year has been a victim of the dread disease. He is known all over the country on account of his splendid record on the diamond. Tom Kinslow began playing ball with the old "Quicks" of the first ward of this city and as a youngster was a star.

About 1885 he was signed by the Detroit of the National League, but without a trial was resold to the London, Ont., team. Tom caught every game played by the Ontario club that season and in such fine style that he was immediately gobbled up by one of the major league teams. He probably did his best work with the Brooklynns under Johnny Ward, in the Brotherhood year, his batting being well over the coveted .300 mark, while his fielding was sensational. Of a genial, sunny disposition, Kinslow made friends by the score, all of whom will lament his untimely taking off.

From Baseball Statistics:

Height: 5 ft. 10 in.; Weight: 160 lbs.

Began his professional career June 4, 1886. He played 10 seasons for 8 teams. His career ended 1898.

Why Lucy Jones Shot Herself

She Attempted Suicide Because Her Lover Served His Own Clam Chowder

Yesterday Major Dye directed Detective Block to make an investigation into the circumstances attending the shooting of Lucy Jones at house 411 14th street southwest, last Tuesday, as reported in yesterday's Star. The woman was removed to the Providence hospital by her friends immediately after the shooting, and Mr. Block had an interview with her at the hospital in which she stated that she did the shooting herself with a 22-caliber pistol, which she had kept by her for years. It appears that a party of pleasure folk of both sexes had been on an excursion to the Great Falls. The party included a young man with whom she was long on intimate terms, and who would not let her go, which gave rise to jealousy on her part. Upon the return of the part, Lucy Jones was not inclined to be amiable. The young man wanted some clam chowder served up for him, and instead of asking Lucy to serve it, he went to work himself at the job. Lucy, feeling aggrieved, went upstairs and soon afterwards the report of a pistol was heard. The young man, hastening upstairs found that she had shot herself. As he could not find a physician in the neighborhood, he took her to the hospital in a buggy. She is in a critical condition, and is not expected to recover. She is 24 years old and is from Front Royal Virginia.

Death By Her Own Hand

The Shooting of Lucy Jones

The Coroner's Inquest Today

Coroner Patterson held an inquest this morning at Joseph C. Lee's undertaking establishment over the body of the young woman, Lucy Jones, otherwise Molly Kirk, who died yesterday at the Providence hospital from the effects of a pistol wound supposed to have been inflicted by herself at house No. 411 14th street southwest, last Tuesday. The jury was composed of Messrs. Herman Schmidtman, Richard Schneider, Wm. Hageman, Charles Bill, Charles Mades, and J. Arthur McDermott.

Testimony of the Man With Whom She Lived

William H. Gibson of 411 14th street southwest, with whom it was reputed the deceased was living, said when he went home last Tuesday evening the deceased and two ladies were in the yard. Witness did not see them until he got to the house. They then went in and fastened the door. This was done in play. They were laughing. Witness got in by a key. When he went in the deceased went over and fastened a bouquet on the witness' lappel. Witness went out again again in a few minutes, but returned and talked with the ladies. Meanwhile he sent to the city for some clams. After the company left the deceased went up stairs, but returned in a few minutes, and then started up again. She, however, returned before reaching the head of the stairs, and coming to witness put her arms around him, and sat in the chair with him, where he was cutting up the clams. After kissing him she stated up again. Witness said to her, "Lucy, get an Irish potato, peel it, and cut it up, so it will go into a stew." She says, "It is no use cutting up a potato now to put into a stew. You have got to wait until it boils." Witness said, "All right, go ahead." She went upstairs, and it was hardly a second afterwards when he heard the report of a pistol. Then she cried out, "Billy, Billy, come up here!" Witness rushed up stairs and found her lying over the edge of the bed. Witness said, "Lucy, for the Lord's sake, what are you doing?" She said, "Take my clothes off." Witness began removing her clothing, and because he seemed slow she said, "Get out of the way; I will take them off myself." "She did so and witness examined her to see where she had shot herself, and asked her "Lucy, for the Lord's sake, what made you do this?" She told witness to go and get Ms. Hunt, who lived across the street. Witness got Mrs. Hunt who went out and got two other ladies. Witness then went after Dr. Boarman, who told witness he thought there was little hope of her recovery, and that he had better take her to Providence hospital, and upon that advice he took her to the hospital. In the ambulance deceased told him that "Seeing you cut those clams made me feel so, that you might just as well stuck a knife into me." "She cut up those kinds of capers often," said the witness, "telling me what she was going to do. I have taken a bottle of laudanum away from her, and have taken this pistol away from her." The witness said she had threatened suicide so often that he paid little attention to her. They had had no quarrel.

Name	Birth/Death	Age	Range/Site

"This wound was in the left side?" said the coroner, inquisitively. "Yes, sir," said the witness. "Was she a left-handed person?" "No, sir," said the witness.

Other Testimony

Miss Tenie Garrett, of 1106 C street, testified to the deceased attempting suicide by taking laudanum when living at witness' house on 13th street, about a year ago. Witness had heard her often threaten to commit suicide. She often had spells when her spiits were depressed.

Lillian Berry, who lives at 404 13th street, testified to calling on the deceased last Tuesday afternoon, and remained there till half-past six. While witness was there Mr. Gibson and witness' friend came there. When witness went away she invited the deceased to call on her the next day. The deceased said: "Perhaps there will be a crape on the door tomorrow." Witness said: "You do not expect to die so soon, do you?" and the deceased replied: "There are many deaths from one day to another."

Martha Raper, 1108 C street, testified that about four months ago she took laudanum away from the deceased, and that she had taken the pistol away from her about a year ago when deceased tried to shoot herself. The deceased occasionally drank deeply.

Detective Block testified to the statement made by the deceased last Thursday at the hospital. He went with Drs. Hamilton and Bayne. Witness represented himself as a doctor in order not to frighten her. Her statement was substantially what has been published in The Star--that she did the shooting herself. She said she shot herself with the left hand, although she was right-handed. She said Billy (Gibson) was in the house at the time, but not in the room. She declined to state the reason for the shooting. Witness asked her if there was any ill-feeling between herself and Gibson, and she said there was a little quarrel. The witness was satisfied that it was a suicide. The deceased was a woman of a great deal of temper.

Dr. J.F. Hartigan testified to the nature of the wound. The ball entered the left side of the abdomen and lodged in the spinal column. Hemorrhage and inflammation following the wound caused death.

A Verdict of Suicide

This concluded the testimony, and the jury returned a verdict that the deceased came to her death from a pistol shot wound of the abdomen, self-indicted, with suicidal intent.

Attempted Murder and Suicide

Shocking Tragedy in East Washington This Morning

Charles Knott Shoots Three Times at Mrs. Catherine Morris and Then Kills Himself

A little two-story frame house, No. 932 3d street southeast, the last of a row of houses of a similar character, was the scene this morning of a shooting tragedy, which threw that portion of the city into great excitement. The house is that where George Morris, a track hand on the Baltimore and Potomac railroad, which runs along K street, almost at the door of the house, lived with his wife Catharine Elizabeth, his little daughter and two railroad men, who boarded with them.

Mrs. Morris is a woman about 22 years of age and of rather comely appearance. To this house, about 9 o'clock this morning, in went a young man named Charles Knott. A lady, a neighbor of Mrs. Morris, who was making a call at the house, was the only person there besides Mrs. Morris. When Knott came in the visitor took her leave. A few minutes later pistol shots were heard in the house. Then Mr. Cross, the railroad gateman at the corner of 3d and K streets, heard a woman's scream. Instantly Mrs. Morris rushed wildly out of the back gate screaming for help. Blood was flowing from a wound in her head, and she presented a frightful appearance. The astonished gatekeeper intercepted her and caught her in his arms.

Meanwhile, neighbors and workmen in the neighborhood hastened to the spot. Mrs. Morris was carried into the back part of her house. In answer to the inquiries she said the man who shot her was still in the house. This caused a sensation. He was supposed to be in the front room, but who would go in to seize the murderer. Police Officer Rauke who arrived just then settled the matter by going boldly into the front door, and was followed by Mr. Cross and others.

"I Guess He's Done For."

There, lying in the middle of the floor of the little parlor, prone upon his face, was the body of Knott.

"I guess he's done for," said one of the officers' posse, as he turned the body a little with his foot and looked into the ashen face. The pistol, a seven shooter "Victor," with which all of this bloodshed was accomplished, was still clutched in the dead man's hands. There was a pool of blood about his head and his shirt bosom was dappled with blood. There were two wounds. One bullet had penetrated his skull, and another entered the breast near the heart. It is supposed that he died almost instantly after shooting himself.

The Story of the Tragedy

As elicited in fragments from Mrs. Morris, was as follows: Knott, when he entered the house asked her for a picture of his, which she had. She went out into the back room to take the photograph from her album. He followed her and when she turned to see what he wanted he raised the pistol and fired. She tried to escape by running out to the back yard. He fired at her three times and two of the bullets took effect, one entering the skull near the temple and the other passing through her lungs. She escaped out of the yard, and it was at that point that she was received into the arms of Cross, the gateman. Knott, it is supposed, returned to the front room or parlor, and standing in the middle of the floor shot himself twice. Five chambers of the revolver were emptied.

Mrs. Morris' husband was at work on the railroad about two hundred yards from the house. Knott was seen by railroad men before the tragedy watching Morris. It is supposed that he was awaiting an opportunity of going to the house when he would not be seen by Morris. The latter, however, was so near at hand as to be among the first to arrive at the house after the tragedy.

Dr. Herbert, who left Mrs. Morris about two o'clock this afternoon, had succeeded then in extracting the bullet, which was lodged in her lungs. He told a Star reporter that he would not at that time undertake to remove the bullet from her head. She was, he said, in a very critical condition, though her youth and strength were greatly in her favor. He thought the chances were against her, though he had known even worse cases to recover.

The Motive for the Tragedy

Remains somewhat a mystery. Even among the gossips of the neighborhood no suggestion is made prejudicial to Mrs. Morris' character. Knott, who was about 30 years of age and unmarried, lived with his aged mother on 7th street southeast, near Virginia avenue. He was, it is stated, a shoemaker by trade, and sometimes worked as a florist, but appears to have had no regular occupation.

Last winter Mr. Morris was engaged in boating, and necessarily absent from home a great deal of the time. Knott frequently visited his house, until Mrs. Morris being apprised that an evil construction might be put upon his intimacy, informed him, through his mother, that she had no objection to his visiting the house when her husband was at home. This caused him to stop his visits, and he had not been near the house for some time until today. It is thought that he had conceived a strong attachment for her, and that his jealousy prompted him to the tragedy which shocked the community this morning. Relatives of the Morris family to whom a Star reporter talked, think that Knott was insane.

Coroner Patterson will hold an inquest tomorrow over Knott's remains.

The Body of Knott

Was left lying in the middle of the parlor all the day, waiting until his mother could be found. The persons in the house gave their sole attention to the woman, who was lying in extreme agony in the little back room to which she went for the photograph album. The curb stones and fences of the neighborhood were lined all day with idlers and gossips who talked over the case and questioned the policemen, the reporters, physicians and others as they came out of the house.

At half-past 2 o'clock this afternoon, Mrs. Morris was resting quietly, and was thought to be doing well. The remains of Knott will be removed this afternoon to the dead house at the asylum should no claim be made for them.

Thomas Powell Knox, 66, Dies; Marine Band Composer, Arranger

By Patricia Sullivan

Thomas Powell Knox, 66, chief composer and arranger for the United States Marine Band for 16 years and a retired master gunnery sergeant, died of septicemia May 11 at Palmetto Baptist Medical Center in Columbia, S.C.

Mr. Knox was one of the nation's best-known contemporary arrangers of music for concert band and wind ensembles. He wrote primarily for the Marine Band, and those compositions were often played by other bands.

"He really was responsible--both through his original compositions and through his arranging--for creating a lot of the sound of the Marine Band," said Col. Timothy W. Foley, the band's current director. "He had a very profound influence on band music in the latter part of the 20th century."

Few Marine Band concerts are without at least one piece by Mr. Knox, and often there are several, "We'll continue to play Tom Knox as long as there's a Marine Band," Foley said.

Many, and perhaps most, Americans have heard Mr. Knox's music, which was often based on hymns, folk music and patriotic tunes. His "God of Our Fathers" -- variations on a Methodist hymn tune of that name -- was commissioned for President Ronald Reagan's first inauguration in 1981. The piece has been played at every subsequent presidential inauguration, and it closed a congressional prayer vigil service in the Capitol Rotunda the day after the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks.

Similarly, Mr. Knox's American hymn variants, "And Grace Shall Lead Me Home," was featured at a memorial concert in Oklahoma City honoring the victims of the federal building bombing there.

Mr. Knox's "Sea Songs" commemorates the 350th anniversary of the founding of Boston. It was premiered there in 1980, and has since been played by many bands around the world. Another perennial favorite is "American Pageant," commissioned for President Richard Nixon's first inauguration.

"Most important is that [his work] is played often," said Loras John Schisse, senior musicologist at the Library of Congress. "Music is dead unless it's played and Tom's music is not dead. That's really what immortality is for musicians."

Name	Birth/Death	Age	Range/Site
Frederick Fennell, the dean of American band music, said Knox had "a singular position among composers of wind band music in the United States."
"Tom had a style definitely of his own," Fennell said. "It was a blend of band and symphonic music. . . . He wrote the kind of music he knew would give pleasure to other people, which is not so easy to do."
The final scene of the movie "All the President's Men" contains a sample of Mr. Knox's music. As the reporters write another of The Washington Post's Watergate stories, a television above their heads shows President Nixon's second inauguration, which opened with an elaborate Knox fanfare commissioned by the president.
The Marine Band's library contains 263 Thomas Knox arrangements for concert band, brass choir, string orchestra, wind ensembles, chorus and solo voice, and dance band. He also wrote 42 original works, including a symphony for concert band.
"He had this wonderful ability to start with something very small, just a fragment of the melody or part of a chord, just enough to pique your curiosity, and then he takes his time," Schissel said. "Like a good novel, it takes a while before all the pieces come together. What makes Tom so good is that he makes it worth the wait. There's a great payoff at the end."
Mr. Knox was born in Danville, Ill. He heard the U.S. Marine Band on tour when he was a boy and decided he wanted to play in the band. He studied trumpet and cornet with Adolph Herseth, principal trumpet of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, and attended the University of Illinois, majoring in music. He joined the Marine Band in 1961.
John Philip Sousa, the legendary Marine Band conductor considered Illinois the best place to study concert band composition, arranging and conducting, and he willed his extensive band music library to the university's music department.
"The University of Illinois is really the birthplace of the school band movement, the college band movement," Schissel noted. Mr. Knox "had Illinois training and spent his professional career in the "President's Own," and for band people it just doesn't get any better than that."
Mr. Knox lived on Capitol Hill until his retirement in 1985, in a house across the street from the Marine Corps commandant's residence. At the time of his death, he was a resident of Mount Dora, Fla., and was en route to Washington on a train when he became ill and entered the hospital in South Carolina. But despite his distance from Washington, he maintained close ties with the band.
His sole survivor and brother, Richard Knox of Boston, said Mr. Knox continued to do commissioned work for the band in retirement. And although he no longer wore the band's striking concert dress uniform--scarlet coat with gold braid, brass buttons, navy trousers with a stripe down the side--Mr. Knox, according to his brother, was often heard saying, "Once you put on that red coat, you never really take it off."

Kohlenberg, agent for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at Adamstown, thirteen miles from Boyd's, committed suicide yesterday afternoon by hanging herself with a piece of cotton rope in the garret of her home. Mrs. Kohlenberg had been in a despondent mood. It is supposed that after she had eaten her dinner she went directly to the garret and soon afterward committed the deed which ended her life. She was found by her husband a little after 2 o'clock.
The news of her rash act was a shock to her many friends. Mrs. Kohlenberg's maiden name was Emrich, and she resided in her earlier years in Washington city. She had been married nearly ten years.

Sexton Commits Suicide
Hangs Himself in Belfry of Church
Where He Had Served Ten Years
Suspended from a rope in the belfry at Trinity Methodist Church last night was found the body of Edward Krantz, who had served as sexton of the church during the past five years. That the man who had served the congregation so faithfully had deliberately ended his own life there was no doubt. There was nothing about the place of worship to indicate that he was the victim of foul play. Life had left the body some time before 6:45 o'clock when Mr. Andrew Hancock made the ghastly discovery.
Last night was the first time in five years that Krantz had disappointed the members of the congregation by failing to open the church on time, and when Mr. Hancock found the edifice had not been lighted at the usual time he started on a tour of investigation. Naturally he started his investigations at the switchboard, and later went to the belfry. Reaching the belfry, he made a light and then discovered that he had almost walked against the dead form of the sexton. It was apparent that life was extinct, but in order that no mistake might be made a physician was summoned, and then the police were called to the church.
The body was taken from the belfry after the coroner had been notified and removed to the late home of Krantz, 520 4th street southeast. It is known Krantz had gone to the church at 6 o'clock in the morning, and it is believed he committed the deed soon after reaching there. He cut a piece from a rope he found in the church and tied it to the top round of the ladder from which his body was found suspended.
The deceased was 67 years old, and had been prominently identified with church work in Southeast Washington for a number of years. He was a man of regular habits, and it was not until one day last week that he was suspected of intemperance. There was something about his demeanor yesterday morning to indicate that he was in trouble. He was not the pleasant, talkative man he had been during all the ten years of his employment about the church. His manner caused remarks to be made by some of his friends, but nobody suspected that he contemplated taking his life. Had he not shown signs of melancholia early in the day his friends would never have believed he had ended his own life. Coroner Nevitt gave the usual death certificate.

Wedded On Birthday Seventy Years Ago

Marean T. Krepps, Aged Ninety-Two Years, and Wife Celebrate Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Marean T. Krepps, formerly of Harper's Ferry, W. Va., but now of this city, celebrated, yesterday, the seventieth anniversary of their marriage and also the ninety-second anniversary of Mr. Krepps' birth.

The court records of Shepherdstown, W. Va. show that Marean T. Krepps of Harpers Ferry and Margaret Lemon of Charles Town, W. Va., were married there October 13, 1840. Mr. Krepps was born in 1818.

With the exception of two or three years he has spent his long life in Harpers Ferry. He is the last surviving member of a family of four brothers and two sisters, all of whom lived to a ripe old age

Oldest Odd Fellow

In 1839 Mr. Krepps joined the Odd Fellows having been initiated in Virginia Lodge, Harpers Ferry. For seventy-one years he was an active member of the order. He is known as the oldest Odd Fellow in West Virginia, if not in the United States. Both he and his wife have been, for seventy-five years, members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Mrs. Krepps was born in Charles Town and is in her eighty-ninth year. Like her husband, she is the last of a large family, having had six brothers and five sisters, all of whom outlived three score years ,two of them having reached over ninety years of age.

Their long life in Harper's Ferry brought Mr. and Mrs. Krepps in contact with many thrilling events connected with the civil war, from the raid of John Brown until the close of the great struggle. Their reminiscences include many deeds of heroism of the battlefield, as well as a most interesting recollection of the first steam railroad.

Washington Relic Treasured

Mrs. Krepps treasures among her heirlooms a brass shovel and five tongs once the property of Martha Washington, which the wife of Gen. Washington presented to Miss Margaret Burriss as a token of friendship upon the latter's removal from Philadelphia to Charles Town, W. Va. Upon the death of Miss Burriss, then Mrs. Downey, the articles were given to the grandmother of Mrs. Krepps.

Of the nine children born to Mr. and Mrs. Krepps four are still living. They have seven grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

The aged couple are now dwelling at 420 10th street southeast and are busy receiving congratulations from relatives and friends both at home and out of the city. They have been so blessed in their long years of companionship that "Ma" Krepps as she is affectionately known among her little friends, declares:

"Life has been one continuous honeymoon. Pap and I never had a real quarrel in our lives."

Both Mr. Krepps and his wife enjoy a reasonable degree of health, are in possession of all their faculties and are dearly beloved and honored by all who know them.

Mrs. M. Krepps Dead

Member of the Methodist Church for Seventy-Five Years

Mrs. Margaret Krepps, wife of Martin T. Krepps, for seventy-five years a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died at the residence of her son-in-law, Dr. N.E. Webb, 1318 East Capitol Street, at 6 o'clock this morning. Funeral services will be held at her late home Friday afternoon, and will be conducted by Rev. A.H. Thompson, pastor of Waugh Church. The interment will take place in Congressional cemetery.

Mrs. Krepps was in the ninety-first year of her age. She celebrated the seventy-first anniversary of her marriage October 13 last. Her mind was clear to the end of her life, and among her interesting recollections was the running of the first train over the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and the John Brown insurrection at Harpers Ferry, where she had spent the greater part of her life. Mrs. Krepps is survived by her husband, who is ninety-three years of age, and four married daughters.

Death of Charles W. Kruger

Member of Marine Band and for a Time With Sousa

At a few minutes past 2 o'clock Tuesday morning, November 18, Charles W. Kruger, one of the best known members of the Marine Band, died of hemorrhage of the lungs resulting from diabetes. Born in Hamburg, Germany, he came to this country when a mere child. In March of the year 1880 he was enlisted as an apprentice in the band of the United States Marine Corps, remaining with it until 1893 when he followed the fortunes of John Philip Sousa and joined the new organization under Mr. Sousa's leadership.

While with the Sousa Band Mr. Kruger, as librarian and saxophone soloist, made many friends throughout the country and proved to be a most efficient member of that famous organization. In 1899 he returned to this city and again enlisted in the Marine Band. For several months his health had been very poor, and during the last stages of the disease he was unable to leave his room, and, for the most part, was confined to his bed. It was characteristic of his bright courage and indomitable will that at no time did he fail to maintain a cheerful disposition and brave front.

A musician of more than ordinary talents, and a man of excellent personal qualities his loss will be felt among those of the profession to which he belonged and by all who knew him.

Mr. Kruger leaves a wife and four children together with an only brother, Louis M. Kruger, also a member of the Marine Band.

The funeral will take place at Congressional cemetery tomorrow at 2 o'clock p.m., with full military honors.

Relatives Think Suicide Was Caused by His Ill Health

Family's Home Here

Funeral services were held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, over the remains of John P. Kullman, who committed suicide Tuesday afternoon, in Baltimore, by shooting himself through the head. The services were at Lee's undertaking establishment on Pennsylvania avenue northwest, and were conducted by the Rev. Dr. William L. Lynn. Interment was in Congressional Cemetery.

The remains of John P. Kullman were brought to this city last night by his son, William H. Kullman, who is pilot of the fireboat Firefighter. Mr. Kullman was seventy-one years of age, and always made his home in Baltimore, although his family have been residents of this city. His wife and six children reside at 478 F street southwest, where Mr. Kullman made visits every week.

Up to the time of his death, he conducted a store at 844 North Eutaw street, Baltimore, and it was on the floor of his store that a customer found him in a dying condition. He was unconscious at the time and was removed to the Maryland General Hospital, where he died without regaining his senses. His effects were searched and in them were found the name and address of his son in Washington, who was immediately notified.

It was said by a friend of the family that Mr. Kullman had been in ill health for some time, and his family attribute his self-destruction to his brooding over his condition.
