| Tabbs, Mrs. Jane Maria | d. 5 Mar 1833 | | R32/27 |
| The National Intelligencer, March 5, 1833 Departed this life on Monday morning, the 4th inst. after an illness of only a few hours, Mrs. Jane Maria Tabbs, daughter of the late Charles Carroll, of Bellevue, and wife of Moses Tabbs, Esq. of this city. Afflictive visitation! most severe calamity! deeply felt by a bereaved husband, orphan children, endeared connections, a widely extended circle of friends and acquaintances, and the Church of Jesus Christ, of which she was both a member and an ornament. They had not thought to be so soon deprived of her cherished society and friendship; but they acquiesce in the will of God. In the decease of this excellent lady, there has vanished from among us a mind of superior cast, full of affection and benevolence, highly cultivated and improved, and constantly exercised for the good of her species. We have seen her, at no distant period, amid the haunts of death, when his arrows were most thickly sped, and his victims were numerous--there she breathed his pestilential breath, and ministered comfort to the poor sufferers. She feared not death! Friendship would its offering bring, And wreath her marble brow, And richest odours round her fling, And o'er her coffin bow:- Would stamp his dust no common mould, Which her bess'd spirit wore, And while her virtues it extol'd, Her God, too, would adore: Would bend resign'd and kiss that dust, And bless the God who gave, And in her Saviour place its trust, That God who wills to save: Would check the tear, would hush the sigh, Which speak of ill to thee, Dear friend, now gone to God on high, In bless'd eternity. The friends and acquaintances of the family are respectfully requested to attend the funeral of the deceased at 1 o'clock, p.m. this day, without further notice. | | | |

Mrs. Tabler's Funeral
Was Prominent as Army Nurse During Civil War
The funeral of Mrs. Eugenia B. Taber took place this morning from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. S.K. Pettingale, No. 922 B street southwest, and the services, conducted by Rev. Dr. S.H. Greene, were attended by a large number of relatives and friends, including delegations from the Potomac Relief Corps, G.A.R., and the Army Nurses' Association, respectively. The casket was draped with the national colors, and there were many floral tributes.

Mrs. Tabler was a native of Alexandria, Va., and the sister of Edwin H. King, who died a few weeks since, and Norval W. King, for many years a clerk in the War Department. She lived to the age of 75 years, surviving her husband, Jacob Tabler, over fifteen years. Four sons and two daughters -- Edwin H., Wm. D., Norval T. and Jacob Tabler and Mrs. S.K. Pettingale and Miss Elizabeth D. Tabler, with thirteen grandchildren, some of them grown -- survive her. Mrs. Tabler and her brother, E.H. King, were both prominent choir leaders in the ante-bellum days. Possessing a fine contralto voice, she was prominent in musical circles of both Washington and Baltimore.

The family were at the early part of the war residing at the corner of 13th and G streets, and when, after the battle of Bull Run, some of the churches, including the First Baptist on the site of the present Builders' Exchange, were taken for hospitals Mrs. Tabler was one of the first to volunteer her services as a nurse and was employed here and at the Carver Hospital till the close of the war. Her services as nurse were recognized by Congress, a bill having been passed giving her a pension. Her bright, sunny disposition, with her Christian graces, made her a model nurse. She opened her house on many occasions to the sick and the wounded, giving her whole time and means to the cause. She was a charter member of both Potomac Relief Corps and of the Army Nurses' Association.

| Taft, Frederick The Evening Star, May 16, 1896 Fred Taft Drowned Brave Effort at Rescue by Policeman Phil Browns This afternoon a few minutes before 1 o'clock there was an exciting scene and a sad fatality on the river front at what is known as the little basin, near the bathing beach. Fred Taft, sixteen years old, whose parents live at 429 1st street northeast, was in swimming with a party of companions, and there was as exciting scene when he called "Help," and went beneath the surface of the water. There were several companions in the party, most of them pupils of the Blake school, and during the day's enjoyment about the river some one in the party dared young Taft to swim across the basin and back. "I can do it," said the plucky fellow, "and I'm not afraid to try it." He was as good as his word. he was not afraid to try it, and plunging into the cold water boldly struck out in the direction of the other side of the basin. In a short while he was safe and sound on the other side, and when he reached the shallow water he stood and called across the basin to let his companions know that he had partly succeeded. Without waiting many minutes to rest himself he returned to the deep water and started back in the direction of those whom he had left on the shore to welcome him upon his return. His stroke was as steady as it had been on the outward trip, but soon the youthful swimmer noticed that there was something the matter. The water had probably chilled him so that he was losing the use of his limbs, but he continued to do his best, and it was not until he was within fifteen or twenty feet of the shore that he realized that he was giving out and would need assistance. "I don't think I can make it," he called to those on shore and the next instant he cried for help. Then he sank beneath the surface, and all his companions could see of him were his feet. "Save him," shouted one after another of his companions, and two of them, Joseph Demar and Frank Pugh, jumped in the water and went toward him. When they got in reaching distance they saw his feet, and might have rescued him, but they feared he would drag them under the water, and so they returned and sent word around to the bathing beach. There Policeman Philip Browne was found, and he soon made his way to the spot, and, diving, had the youth out of the water. A quick trip was made to the Emergency Hospital and a half dozen physicians worked over the body for an hour and a half before they would give up in their attempts to bring him to. It was the general opinion, however, that life was extinct before the body was brought to the surface. Policeman Browne was warmly congratulated on his pluck and heroism, for it was not an easy task to dive in such a place, where there was every chance of being caught among the submerged timbers. | d. 16 May 1896 | 16 yrs. | R74/105 |

Almost Instantly Killed

Joseph B. Tait, Delirious From Fever, Jumps From Third-Story Window

Fatal Leap Taken While Attendants Were Temporarily Out of His Room--

Inquest Unnecessary

Joseph B. Tait, a young married man living at No. 101 Maryland avenue northeast, jumped out of a third-story window at his home to the ground below, a distance of about thirty feet, at 6 o'clock this morning and was almost instantly killed.

The unfortunate man had been ill of typhoid fever for about two weeks and was delirious, and last night was in so serious a condition that his wife and a trained nurse sat up with him. In his delirium he said repeatedly that he wanted to see the moon.

Just before the fatal act was committed Mrs. Tait and the nurse left the room for an instant. The windows in the room, being of heavy plate glass and entirely closed, no fears were felt for his safety.

As soon, however, as Mr. Tait found himself alone, he sprang from his bed and rushed to one of the windows, which he broke with his head, and leaped through. When found, almost immediately afterward, he was lying prostrate at full length on the ground. He was picked up by George Saur, foreman of Truck A, fire department, and carried into the house, but he died before he could be again placed in bed.

The deceased was manager of the bottling department of the Washington Brewing Company. He was 25 years old and leaves a widow and two children. Coroner Carr decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

A Golden Wedding

Last evening there was a gay party at the residence of Col. and Mrs. James A. Tait, No. 16 3d street southwest. The occasion was the celebration of the golden wedding of the well-preserved old couple, and it brought together quite a number of the older residents of East Washington, as well as many nephews and nieces and some grandchildren. Col. Tait told the story of the courtship of fifty years ago, which led to Miss Marion Beck becoming Mrs. Tait, the uncle of the latter, Rev. Dr. Laurie, having performed the ceremony. Among the guests were Mrs. Thomas Scrivener, now in her eighty-third year, whose husband is now eighty-five, was too feeble to attend. Inquiries were made for the colonel's old school master, Mr. Alexander McCormick, now living over the Eastern Branch. The bride had one of the short, stubby, one-button gloves in which she had been married, as also the high satin stock worn by the colonel when they joined their fortunes. The bride stated that the colonel at that time was twenty-four and she was twenty-two. They were married at the corner of 3d and South A streets, a few doors from their present residence, when the square opposite was a cornfield, and Pennsylvania avenue east of the Capitol was a country road. The couple received the congratulations of many friends during the evening.

Death of William Talbert

Mr. William Talbert, one of the oldest residents of the Navy Yard section of the city, died Thursday evening at his residence, 1235 10th street southeast, aged seventy-nine years. Mr. Talbert was born near Bladensburg, Md., but came here with his parents when a small child. Learning the trade of ship carpenter in the yard he worked there a long series of years, and under Lincoln's first and Hayes' administration he filled the position of master ship carpenter, and as such was busily employed, doing important work for the Potomac flotilla during the war. He, while at the navy yard, perfected an important improvement in marine railways, for which he made a claim on the government, and Congress referred the case to the Court of Claims, and a decree was passed in his favor, allowing him a percentage of the earnings of the improvement, and this not being satisfactory to him he appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, where the case is now pending. Mr. Talbert, several times served the old sixth wards in the boards of aldermen and common council. He leaves four sons and a daughter--George W. and Alexander being grocers, Thomas a retired feed dealer, and William a ship carpenter, and Mrs. Dubois, wife of Mr. W. Dubois of the White House. He leaves considerable property. The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Petrification of a Body

A few days since Mr. Edwin H. King, as undertaker, took up the body of the late William B. Talley, buried at the old Foundry burial ground, and reinterred in Congressional Cemetery. The body had been interred in low ground and the grave was half full of water. Notwithstanding it has been 16 years since the interment was made, the pine case and mahogany coffin were found in a perfect state of preservation. Some curiously being expressed as to the state of the body, the coffin was opened. The body and shroud were found to be in a perfect state of preservation. On further examination the body was found to have almost the hardness and consistency of stone, showing that petrification was rapidly going on.

Fell Down the Shaft

A young daughter of Mr. P.A. Taltavull, of 472 Maryland avenue southwest, named Gracie, met with a serious accident yesterday afternoon by falling down the elevator shaft at Lee's undertaking establishment, where Mr. Taltavull is employed as foreman. In company with her mother and two other children Gracie called to see her father. While the others were conversing she wandered to the elevator shaft, and without warning fell to the bottom, a distance of about twenty-five feet. When picked up by the almost distracted parents the little girl was apparently lifeless. After being removed to her home a physician found that she had sustained a broken arm and severe internal injuries.

The condition of the little one today was extremely critical, death being expected at any moment.

The Evening Star, April 11, 1881

Mr. Peter Taltavull, a well known resident of East Washington, who died last Friday, was buried yesterday from his late residence on 8th street between G and H streets southeast. Mr. Taltavull was 55 years of age at the time of his death, and had resided since his early boyhood near the Washington navy yard. For over a fourth of a century he was a member of the Marine band, was a fine performer on many instruments and one of the best soloists on the French horn in the country. He will be pleasantly remembered by many of our music-loving citizens. He had many friends throughout the city. He leaves a family of six sons and three daughters.

| The Evening Star, May 24, 1875 Sad Drowning of a Young Man Henry Tanner, a youth about 17 years old, a native of Switzerland, who came to this country about four years ago, was drowned yesterday while bathing in the Potomac, near those fatal rocks, the Three Sisters, above Georgetown. Young Tanner had been employed by Knight & Bro., patent agents, and was a most estimable young man, very intelligent, and of an amiable disposition, which made him many friends. He had boarded in this city with Mrs. John Baden, (sister of Mrs. Southworth, the well-known novelist) and yesterday visited Prospect Cottage, the home of Mrs. Southworth in Georgetown, in company with Frank Baden the nephew of that lady. They went out to enjoy a bathe in the Potomac and Tanner, who could not swim, got beyond his depth. Young Baden tried to save him, but did not succeed. The body was subsequently recovered and taken to Prospect Cottage, at the request of Mrs. Southworth, where it remained until this morning, when it was removed to the home of the parents of deceased in this city, near the tollgate. | | | |

The Ups and Downs of Life

A Former U.S. Consul Dying in a Police Station House Poor and Friendless

An old man, 72 years old, named James Madison Tarleton, a native of New Hampshire, but who has been about this city for several years past, having a lodging room at Mr. Burke's corner of 13th and D streets, was taken sick at a lunch house, No. 419 10th street, yesterday, and was a few hours afterwards removed to the police station house, nearly opposite, and Dr. John Walter called in to attend him. The doctor found him in a very low condition from pneumonia, and advised that he be permitted to remain there, as he was too feeble to ride to the hospital, and could not probably survive many hours. Subsequently Father Walter, of St. Patrick's church, was called in by request of some one to offer religious consolation, but the old man was unconscious. He appeared to be destitute of proper clothing, and the care necessary for an invalid of his age. A mattress was spread on a table in the prisoner's room on which he was laid, the room being kept comfortably warm, and Mrs. Tonnelt, a lady residing in that neighborhood, kindly prepared some warm tea for him, but he could not swallow. Dr. Walter remained with him for some time, but at a late hour last night there was no favorable symptom. It was ascertained that he had been in much better circumstances once. He was United States consul at Melbourne, Australia, under Presidents Pierce and Fillmore and subsequently was a successful merchant at Mobile, Alabama, but the war broke up his business, and misfortunes following, reduced him to want and sickness. He was without friends or means. Mr. Burke has furnished him with a lodging room for the past four years without charge.

This morning, Mrs. Hannah McL. Shepherd, resideing at No. 2326 G street northwest, who knew Mr. Tarleton at Melbourne on hearing of his condition sent to the station house and had him removed to the residence of her family for proper care and nursing. He was very low when taken away int he ambulance, and is not expected to recover.

This morning he was still breathing with great difficulty, but was in an unconscious condition, utterly unable to take medicine or nourishment.

Death of James Madison Tarleton

His Checkered Career--Dying in Poverty After Many Years of Prosperity

James Madison Tarleton, of whom mention was made in yesterday's Star as having been taken to the Central Police Station in a dying condition, and subsequently removed by direction of Mrs. Shepherd to her residence, No. 2326 G street, for proper care, died there about 7:30 o'clock last evening. He was born in New Hampshire and educated at Concord, receiving a liberal education and afterwards entered the cotton trade at Mobile, Alabama, where he accumulated a large fortune, but was unfortunate, and failed in 1842, leaving him without a dollar. In 1850 he was appointed assistant postmaster at Concord, New Hampshire, by Gen. Lowe, postmaster, where he renewed his acquaintance with the leading politicians of that state, among them General Frank Pierce, who, after his election as President of the United States, appointed Mr. Tarleton as consul to Melbourne, which position he retained until near the close of President Buchanan's administration. On his return to this country he made his home in the south, and at the breaking out of the war he removed north, being a strong union man though a democrat, and thenceforth became a decided republican. Under President Johnson he was appointed to the collectorship of Mobile, but was removed by Gen. Grant. Since that time he has been reduced to poverty, depending to a great extent on charity for his support. Mr. F.B. Burke, keeper of a restaurant corner 13 1/2 and D streets, gave him the use of a room, where he has been lodging for three or four years, taking his meals at Mr. Burke's most of the time. Among his private papers were found many of interest, some from his wife, and two friend and confidential letters from President Pierce, one bearing date of Boston, July 15, 1846, and the second one from Concord, February 1, 1847. Papers showing his good standing in society at Melbourne were also found, among them cards of invitations to many fashionable gatherings. A resolution, adopted by the Victorian Convention council, at Melbourne, May 7, 1859, asking Consul Tarleton to furnish the council with some information as to the land system of the United States, led to Mr. Tarleton's delivery a lecture on the subject, for which he received a vote of thanks.

| Sudden Death. | | | |
| Yesterday Mr. Edwin Tastet, a young man of much promise residing at the corner of 10th and B streets South Washington died very suddenly at his residence. He had been complaining for sometime of a disease of the heart, but yesterday morning he appeared to be in remarkably good health when some of his sisters left for church. In a few moments afterwards, however, he was found dead in his room, lying on his face in the bed. Dr. Morgan pronounced disease of the heart to be the cause of death. | | | |

| Tastet. At Woodbury, Maryland, on the 4th instant, Dr. Joseph M. Tastet, eldest son of Nicholas Tastet, of this city, aged 31 years. The subject of the obituary below lost his life by injuries incurred from being thrown from his horse, and the horse falling upon him, on Monday last, in the city of Baltimore. His funeral will take place this afternoon at half past 8 o'clock from the residence of his father-in-law, Mr. Thomas Mustin, on G, between 13th and 14th streets. | | | |

| Melancholy Accident | | | |
| The unfortunate death at Baltimore of Dr. Joseph M. Tastet, a native of this city, and until recently a resident here, will be subject of painful interest to a large circle of friends. The Baltimore "Clipper" furnishes the following particulars of the sad event: | | | |
| "We are grieved to have to announce the sudden and melancholy death of Dr. Tastet, formerly of Washington, but latterly located at Woodberry, in Baltimore county. The doctor had occasion to visit this city on Monday, 3d instant, and whilst riding his horse leisurely on Cathedral street, between the Bolton depot and Biddle street, the animal stumbled over the iron rail of one of the numerous switches in that vicinity, throwing the doctor, and afterwards falling on him, causing concussion of the brain and other fatal internal injuries, from the effects of which he did not rally, and death ensued between twelve and one o'clock the same night, notwithstanding he was almost immediately attended to by Drs. Ridgely, Johns, and Smith, and was kindly and attentively waited on at home by Dr Cherbonnier, of Washingtonville, until he expired. Dr. Tastet was greatly esteemed by his neighbors for his purely Christian character and unassuming manners, was a regular Sunday school teacher, and a constant attendant on religious worship, and the little community in which he resided feel that they have suffered a serious loss." | | | |

| Odd-Fellows' Funeral | | | |
| The Odd-Fellows' will attend the funeral of their late brother, Past Grand Dr. Joseph M. Tastet, this afternoon, who died on the 4th inst., at Woodbury, Md. The funeral will take place from the residence of his father-in-law, Mr. Mustin, on G, between 13th and 14th streets. The deceased was 31 years of age at the time of his death. It appears that Dr. Tastet, whilst riding his horse along Catherine street, Baltimore, between the Bolton depot and Biddle street, was thrown off, the animal having stumbled against one of the rails of the numerous switches with which the streets in that vicinity abound, and from the effects of which concussion of the brain ensued. The accident happed on Monday last, and the injured gentleman died the same night between 12 and 1 o'clock. The best medical aid that could be procured was immediately obtained, and he was attended, on his being taken home to Woodbury, by Dr. Cherbounier, of Washingtonville, who waited on him until his death. | | | |

| A Funeral Sermon | | | |
| Although a departure from our usual custom, we yield to the request of the gentleman who has placed in our hands the following communication, descriptive of the religious services performed yesterday in one of the principal churches of this city. The memory of the deceased gentleman whose panegyric was pronounced will long be treasured in the hearts of many of our citizens: | | | |
| I attended worship this forenoon at the Fourth Presbyterian Church, on Ninth street, of which Rev. Dr. J.C. Smith is Pastor. The services were conducted by Rev. Albert Barnes, jr., a very young man, but who, I am well assured, gives promise of a ministerial career of great usefulness and honor. The church is commodious, and was well filled, in part, as I learnt, by a very respectable body of Odd Fellows, without regalia, and by many other friends of the late Dr. Joseph M. Tastet, who was killed by falling from his horse in Baltimore on Monday last. The services were conducted with reference to that event; and at the request of the heart-stricken widow of Dr. Taste, who was present, the hymn commencing "Jesus, lover of my soul," was given | | | | out and sweetly sung by the choir. This was a favorite hymn with Dr. T., and was sung at the last communion at which he had participated in the church. The sermon delivered by Dr. Smith was an able effort, and a touching tribute to the deceased. "And Joseph died" were the words of the text. Dr. Tastet had been familiarly known by his given name to this whole church. He had been ten years a member of it, and pleasant memories cluster around that whole period of time. Intelligent, energetic, and full of vivacity, he had ever been a pious and zealous promoter of the welfare of the church and of the benevolent and Christian enterprises of its members. In its Missionary Societies and Sabbath School his aid had ever been invaluable. When about to take his departure from this city his farewell was publicly and formally made, and a beautiful Bible was presented to him in behalf of the Missionary Society of which he had been President. Of his residence at Woodberry Factory, near Baltimore; of the mutual friendship that grew up there between himself and family and the estimable people of that vicinity; of his sudden death; of the effect it produced upon that people; of the cessation of labor in the factory, and of the grief and gloom there manifested, Dr. Smith spoke with touching tenderness.

I never saw a more attentive congregation nor the evidence of more general sympathy. I felt an earnest wish that it were possible for the many friends of Dr. Tastet near Baltimore, and especially the teachers and children of the Sabbath School in which he there taught, to be present and hear the discourse to which I was listening. Though it made many weep, it was still a balm to every heart. C.

The deceased was a native of Madrid, Spain, but had been for many years an attached citizen to his adopted country. For more than 40 years he was an efficient clerk in the Treasury Department, where, by his genial manner, gentlemanly bearing, and polished affability, he was ever a favorite. His was a character jewelled with manly virtues. He has gone to his grave honored through a lengthened career, and lamented not only by a disconsolate widow and sorrowing children, but by the community of which he was a cherished member. Dying in the firm faith of his Redeemer, the sacred rites of the Catholic Church were administered to him, and with the holy calm which only Christians know, he closed his eyes on sublunary things to open them in Paradise. Long-Time Resident of Capital Dies at 73

Harry Tate, Who Lived in City for 60 Years, Expires at Home of Son

Harry Tate, 73 years old, for more than 60 years a resident of this city, died at the home of his son, Elmer M. Tate, 1410 Thirty-third street, yesterday after an illness of three months.

Mr. Tate worked for the Connecticut Pie Bakery, Georgetown, for about 25 years, until his retirement some years ago. He was a native of Gettysburg, Pa., and came to this city when 12 years old.

He is survived by two sons, Elmer E. and Milton Tate. His wife, Anna G. Tate, died about three year ago.

Funeral services will be conducted at the son's residence tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

The Evening Star, March 3, 1858

Dead -- Last night, at half-past ten o'clock, Capt. Joseph B. Tate, the founder of this paper--The Evening Star--and since the 3d of July, 1853, the manager of its financial affairs, died at his residence on M street, of a pulmonary affection, which had been gradually wasting him away for four years past. No man was better known to the present generation of the citizens of Washington; for no other among them--though making no pretensions--was more noted for active business habits and substantial usefulness in his sphere. In all of his dealings with every one, he was strictly an upright man, and took no thought of aught but the conscientious discharge of his duties to his family, his friends, and the community. As a husband, father, son, and friend, his death will leave a void in many hearts that no changes of life throughout time can fill. He lived a bright example of the value to society of true public spirit, probity, industry, and temperance in all things; and, dying, has left behind him a consequent reputation which should be a consolation to his widow and two orphans, so mournfully bereaved in his death. His end was calm and peaceful. For thirty-six hours before it transpired, he was aware of its approach; and, after receiving the consolations of the religion of Christ, the Redeemer of Men, he arranged his worldly affairs with as much equanimity as though in perfect health. He was a native of this city, and was aged thirty-nine years and nine months.

His funeral is to take place on Friday next, at 2 p.m., from his late residence (on M street, near the corner of Tenth) from whence his earthly remains will be escorted to their final resting place by the Washington Light Infantry and the Odd Fellows, and his friends and those of his family, who are invited to attend. We shall rarely look upon his like again.

The Evening Star, March 6, 1858

The Funeral of Capt. Joseph B. Tate was very largely attended yesterday despite the weather, which was the most disagreeable of the season. The religious services at the house were conducted by Rev. Dr. Hall, of the Church of the Epiphany, who attended the deceased in his last hours. The preacher gave an interesting and affecting account of his later interviews with the departed--of the patient resignation with which the sufferer bore his pains--of the calmness with which he arranged his worldly affairs, and of the childlike attention and simplicity with which he received religious teachings and prepared himself for his departure to another world.

Upon the conclusion of the exercises at the house a most touching scene was presented in the agonized leave-taking by the widow and orphans of the remains of the beloved deceased, and there was not a dry eye in the assemblage. The members of the Light Infantry company and Odd Fellows then passed by the side of the coffin to bestow a last mournful glance upon the pale yet pleasant features of the dead.

The escort, consisting of the Infantry, Capt. Davis, with Wither's Band, and Central Lodge and Columbia Encampment, I.O.O.F., under the marshalship of John W. Hodgson, and with Weber's Band, was formed into line, and the long funeral procession proceeded on its way to the Congressional Burying-ground, passing down Tenth street and along the avenue. At the grave after the Episcopal service had been performed by the Rev. Mr. Hall, Chaplain Martin Johnson, of Central Lodge, performed the funeral rites of the Odd Fellows, and the volleys of the Infantry over the grave concluded the mournful ceremonies, and the lamented one was left "In the deep stillness of that dreamy state of sleep."

The funeral arrangements, we should add were conducted in the most satisfactory manner by the undertaker, Mr. Anthony Buchly.

The Evening Star, March 4, 1858

The Flags of the Franklin Fire Company and of the Washington Light Infantry were flying at half-mast yesterday and today for the death of Capt. Tate, and the feeling of sorrow for his loss and of sympathy with his family; is universal in the community. The funeral takes place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from his late residence on M street and will, it is presumed, be very largely attended. In another column will be found calls for meetings on the part of Central Lodge and Columbian Encampment I.O.O.F., and of the Light Infantry, preparatory to attending the funeral.

Tavener, Clyde H., 60, who was a member of Congress in 1916 was one of the outstanding opponents of America's entrance in the first World War, died at a local hospital yesterday after a long illness. The Representative from Illinois' 14th District in the 63rd and 64th Congresses gained wide notice through two sensational speeches, "The World Wide War Trust" and "The Navy League Unmasked". Henry Ford contributed over half a million dollars for distribution of the speeches and excerpts were published in full-page advertisements in nearly every daily newspaper of the country. A native of Cordova, Illinois, Mr. Tavener was a journalist by profession and wrote many articles advocating Philippine independence. From 1919 to 1923 he was director of the Philippine Press Bureau in the United States and from 1923 to 1931 published and edited the magazine 'The Philippine Republic', which he founded. Before his election to Congress, Mr. Tavener wrote a daily syndicated letter published in 100 papers and a weekly letter distributed to 2600 weekly papers. He served as publicity director for the Democratic National Congressional Committee in the 1910 and 1912 campaigns. Surviving are his wife and a son, Clyde H. Tavener, Jr. of Washington, 2 daughters, Mrs. Homer G. Smith of Arlington, Virginia, and Mrs. Coleman Resenberger, of Washington.

Tragic Sound By Telephone

Young Woman Hears Sister's Sweetheart Kill Himself

Edward R. Taylor Fires Several Shots Into

Ceiling and Then One Through Brain

With details decidedly out of the ordinary, Edward R. Taylor, twenty-eight years of age, last evening committed suicide. It was his intention to have his sweetheart, Miss Regina Georgius, residing at 1919 Pennsylvania avenue, hear the fatal shot by telephone, but she happened to be away from home when he called up. Her sister, Miss Lillian Georgius, answered the phone bell however, and heard the reproduction of the report of the revolver. She also heard five other sounds. When the report of the last shot had died away all was silent, and although Taylor had said he intended to kill himself, Miss Georgius thought he was joking and did not realize the seriousness of the situation until she was told he was dead.

It is said that Taylor had been dispondent because of business troubles during the past week. He called at the Georgius residence yesterday and remained until after dinner, saying he would see Miss Regina last night. During the late afternoon and early evening he kept the telephone busy calling Miss Regina Georgius. He wanted her to meet him at Pennsylvania avenue and 9th street, but she declined to comply with the request, saying there was no good reason why he should not call at the house. It is believed that he did not want to go there, however, because he had been drinking. When he had conversed with the young lady several times his nephew, William E. Barber suggested that he "cut out" the telephone business for the night.

Shots in Rapid Succession

Taylor again called over the telephone about 8:45 o'clock and asked that Miss Regina be summoned to the instrument. George Rouzee, who answered the telephone, assured Taylor that Miss Regina was out, but Taylor thought his informant said that because the young woman did not want to be bothered by him again.

"Miss Lillian is here," Rouzee explained.

"Then," Taylor said, "have her come to the phone."

Miss Lillian Georgius then went to the receiver and heard what Taylor had to say. It appears tha Miss Regina had an earnest conversation with Taylor as to his alleged intemperance, and he is said to have remarked that she would be sorry for what she stated to him. Over the telephone he told Miss Lillian that Miss Regina would be sorry for what she had said to him when she should read of what he had done, and concluded the brief talk by directing her to listen. An instant later she heard the report of a pistol. Four other repors followed in rapid succession. There was a pause and then the fatal shot was fired.

Efforts to Prevent Tragedy

William E. Barber, the nephew, was trying to prevent the tragedy, but the armed man drove him away by threatening to shoo him. When Taylor pushed his nephew aside, in the hall where he telephone was located, he turned the weapon toward his temple and fired the fatal shot. Taylor then released his hold on the telephone, dropped the revolver and fell upon the floor.

Barber hurried from the house and summoned a policeman. A call was sent to the Casualty Hospital. Dr. Conklin responded, made an examination of the body and found life was extinct. Capt. Mathews called Miss Georgius by telephone and informed her of what Taylor had done. Miss Regina, her mother and sister were almost prostrated by the affair. Coroner Nevitt heard what witnesses had to say and gave the necessary death certificate.

Edward R. Taylor was manager of the saloon at 1st and H streets for his brother, William C. Taylor. Another brother, Samuel A. Taylor, is in business at 212 9th street.

Captain Taylor was remarkable for his perseverance and energy of character. The word "fail" was never in his vocabulary. If he could not succeed in one branch of business he left it at once, for the time being, and concentrated his energies upon some other.

His system of submarine batteries, for the defense of harbors and for blowing up the ships of an enemy, though believed to be capable of rendering great service in a time of war, was never contracted for by the Government, nor put into operation. With his submarine armor and his diving bell he made many successful experiments, and produced some highly beneficial results.

He furnished for the Government during the last Administration three sets of marine camels for lifting ships over bars, and for getting them off when aground or ashore, for which he received some $22,000, per set. One set he took to our squadron near Vera Cruz, during the existence of the war with Mexico. At the taking of Tabasco he acted as volunteer, and behaved handsomely.

At the commencement of the present Administration, Mr. Secretary Preston, at the suggestion of some of the commanders in the service, contracted with Captain Taylor to go to Gibraltar and examine the condition of the war steamer Missouri, sunk at that point some five or six years ago. He made the examination, and reported his observations to the Department. While on this duty he lost his health, and, in the hopes of regaining strength, repaired to Madeira. But, failing in this, he next proceeded to Havana, and remained in that warm climate a month or two. But still being feeble, he concluded to seek a colder climate and left Havana for New York. This change he thought braced him up, and improved his health. Soon afterwards he came to the seat of Government. But here his lungs became more oppressed, and he kept on declining until the 8th of April, when he died, leaving a wife and daughter, and a circle of friends who knew him well, to mourn the demise in the prime of his life, of a man so full of enterprise and public spirit. H.E.

Taylor who was forty years old, was apparently in the best of health when he left the station house, about 6 o'clock, to go to his post at 15th and H streets northeast. He was walking with Policeman Henry Ehles of the same precinct near 11th and H streets northeast when he was suddenly stricken.

Policeman Ehlers telephoned to the Casualty Hospital and Taylor was taken to that institution in the ambulance.

Policeman Taylor resided at 1213 D streets northeast with his wife who survives him. He was appointed to the police force March 19, 1904, and had been detailed at the ninth precinct since that time.

| The Evening Star, August 10, 1899, p. 3 Accidental Death Henry William Taylor, a Marine, Killed by the Cars Serving as Sentry at Navy Yard Five Cars Pass Over the Man's Prostrate Body Result of Inquest Henry William Taylor, a member of the United States Marine Corps, was killed in the navy yard about 10:30 o'clock last night by a freight train on a switch of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's tracks. The train had been in the yard to get two 13-inch guns and a gun carriage for shipment to Newport News. Taylor was the sentry on duty at the gate, and as soon as the train passed out he closed it. A few yards beyond five cars broke loose from the train and rolled back over the tracks through the gate. The sentry, who was standing on the track, had no way of seeing the danger he was in. Without a word of warning he was knocked down and the five cars passed over him. He was dead when the trainmen and marines picked him up. His skull was crushed, his left leg broken and both feet had been terribly mangled. | | | |
| The deceased was 48 years old and had served his country for about twenty-eight years in the army. A year ago he enlisted in the Marine Corps. During his service in the army he participated in the Cuban campaign and was in the battle of San Juan Hill. He has made several efforts to go to the Philippines, but was not successful. It was believed that his long service and age unfitted him for such duty. A few days ago he remarked to one of his comrades that he was tired of the Marine Corps, as he wanted to be where he could be on more active duty. The deceased enlisted from Philadelphia, where he has a married sister. | | | |
| Soon after the accident happened the body was removed to the morgue. This morning Acting Coroner Glazebrook held an inquest at the sixth precinct station. A verdict of accidental death was rendered and the jury expressed the belief that the accident was caused by defective brakes. | | | |

The Inquest

Jane Brown, colored, 516 M street southeast, was the first witness examined. She stated to the jury that she was sitting at her door opposite the gate when the accident happened. For nearly an hour prior, she said, cars were shifted in and out of the yard. When the train that killed the marine went out of the yard the latter stood and watched it for a few minutes. The train remained about a half square from the gate some time, and one of the train men went back with his lamp. He knocked at the gate, but received no response. Soon afterward she saw the cars rolling over the tracks in the direction of the gate. Had she known the marine was standing inside she could have warned him.

"Did the cars go very fast?"

"No, sir," she answered. "If they had gone very fast they would have attracted my attention."

Witness said she saw no light on the coaches. When the cars broke away the engine gave no warning. After the cars had gone through the gate she remarked that she was afraid somebody had been killed. She sent a boy over to see, and he called to her that the marine had been killed.

Harry Hall, a colored boy who lives at 510 M street southeast, gave similar testimony. He said the load was too heavy for the engine to pull around the curve, and the train had to back to get a good start. When the cars came back there was no light on them.

Horace Smith, another colored boy, who lives in the same neighborhood, was also examined. He told of the movements of the train just before the accident happened. So far as he could see there was nobody on the cars, nor was there a light. He went over with the previous witness and found the dead man's body.

Comrade's Testimony

Corporal James Albert Whalen testified that after the accident happened he went to the gate and found the dead man's body. He knew that several trains had passed in and out of the yard last night. The gate is kept closed, and when a train wants to come through a signal of some kind has to be given. Sometimes the notification is given by the ringing of a bell or the blowing of the whistle. Witness detailed the unfortunate man at the gate last night and he went on duty at 9 o'clock.

Conductor Arnel Hunter of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company told the jury that he was on engine 185 last night and went to the navy yard under orders to pull out some cars. He said he started out of the yard with eleven cars. The train "hung up" outside the yard, and it was necessary to go back in order to get another start. To get into the yard this time the gate had to be opened.

Cars "Drifted"

A second time, he said, the train "hung up," and then he discovered that the cars had cut loose and were drifting back. There was a brakeman on the cars that were drifting. When witness saw that the cars would probably go through the gate he jumped from the train and ran back to open the gate. He did not reach there in time, and the cars crashed through. So far as he knew, the engineer knew nothing of the break in the train. There is a steep grade from L street to the navy yard gate. Witness said that hand brakes were used. There was no air on the train. Janney couplers, he said, were used, and they were in first-class condition before the cars pulled out. They were also in first-class condition after the accident. The cars were joined without any repairs having been made and were sent south. He could not account for the accident.

Deputy Coroner's Testimony

Dr. P.E. McDonald, acting deputy coroner, gave evidence concerning the injuries inflicted. Death was due to shock and hemorrhage.

Thomas Farmer, brakeman, who was on the train last night, testified that he was on the train when the break occurred. He ran to the rear car and applied the brakes. Witness said he was excited when he saw that the cars would strike the gate. He called, "Lookout," although he did not know where the sentry was. Witness examined the couplers both before and after the accident and found them in perfect condition. This closed the testimony and the case was submitted to the jury.

A Fatal Dose of Arsenic

A Young Woman in South Washington Takes Her Own Life

Miss Josephine Taylor residing at 916 6th street southwest, yesterday morning took a dose of arsenic, and Drs. Leach, Williamson and J.T. Winters were called in, and after several hours work thought that she was out of danger. She, however, took an unfavorable turn during the night and died this morning at 11 o'clock. She was about 23 years of age and remarkably handsome. About a year ago her brother, Frank Taylor, was killed on the B. & P. R.R. Before taking the fatal dose she had been complaining. But few of the neighbors were aware of her death this afternoon, and little was known of the case. If the drug was taken with suicidal intent the cause of the act is at present wrapped in mystery. The case was reported to Dr. Patterson this afternoon by Officer Marks of the first precinct.

The Evening Star, October 20, 1884

The Suicide of Miss Taylor

Dr. Patterson, the coroner, on Saturday afternoon gave a certificate of death by poison administered by her own hands in the case of Miss Josephine Taylor, whose death at her residence on 6th street near K southwest, was mentioned in The Star on Saturday. The cause for the act seems to be yet a mystery, unless it was due to the reported opposition of some of her family to her receiving the attention of a young man to whom she had long been attached. Her funeral took place this afternoon and was largely attended, and after the services of the Episcopal church, conducted by Rev. Mr. Lee, the interment was made in Congressional Cemetery.

From: J. Joseph Barse, May 1, 2002

Mary Elizabeth Burton was the daughter of Thomas M. and Caroline Burton. She was married October 26, 1851, in Frederick County, Maryland, by the Rev. Dabney Bell. She was 16 at the time. Richard died eleven years later, leaving her with two children, when she was 27 years old.

Richard and Mary Elizabeth lived in a house on the corner of S. St. Asaph and Duke Streets in old Alexandria. The house is still there. When Richard died, Mary Elizabeth stayed in the house until she could stand her father-in-law, John Therrotte Taylor, no longer. She moved to C St. on Capitol Hill and opened a rooming house to support herself and her daughters and lived there the rest of her life.

Apparently, she kept in contact with the Taylor family, since she and her mother, Caroline M. Burton, are buried in a Taylor plot in

Mrs. Mary E. Taylor Dead

Widow of Stark B. Taylor Passes Away at Age of 82 Years

Mrs. Mary Ellen Taylor widow of Stark B. Taylor, died this morning at her residence, 1504 S street northwest. She was a native of this city, and had resided here during her lifetime of eighty-two years. Her parents came to this city from Virginia and settled first in old Georgetown, but later moved into South Washington, and lived there all the remainder of their lives.

Mrs. Taylor's husband was for fifty-six years the bailiff of the Court of Claims, having been an officer of that court from the time of its organization until his death, about a year ago last March.

Mrs. Taylor and her husband were among the first members of Grace Episcopal Church, at the corner 9th and D streets southwest, Mr. Taylor being one of the charter members of the church organization. Their eldest daughter, who died some years ago, was the first child to be baptized in the church.

She had been in failing health for about a year and a half and had been confined to her home for the past few months. She had been a well preserved woman for one of her years and was always active in her church work and benevolences. She is survived by five sons and one daughter.

Funeral services will be held Thursday morning at her late home and the interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

O may we meet thee, mother
Where kindred part no more
And journey with hand in hand
Among the spirit shore.

For that sweet day we're longing
When death shall set us free
We'll spring to meet each other
Beyond life's troubled sea.

Stark Taylor Dead --Had Served in the Court of Claims Since 1855

Was Ninety Years Old

Appointed on Recommendation of Jefferson Davis--

Leaves Wife and Six Children

Following an illness of about three months duration, due to the infirmities of old age, Stark B. Taylor, who served continuously in the Court of Claims ever since its organization, May 16, 1855, died at 5 o'clock this morning at his home, 1504 S street northwest. He was ninety years old, but in spite of his age he was active and painstaking in the execution of his duties at the court until two or three months ago, when illness compelled him to take to his bed.

Mr. Taylor was appointed a messenger at the Court of Claims upon the recommendation of Jefferson Davis, and on the reorganization of that tribunal in 1863, in the midst of the civil war, he was made bailiff, and held the latter office to the time of his death. Arrangements for the funeral will not be made until replies are received to telegrams announcing the death, which were sent by the family to sons who live in different parts of the country.

Stark B. Taylor was born in King George county, Va., in 1820, and had served ten years in the United States Army, part of that time in the Mexican war, when his name was brought up in May 1855, by Jefferson Davis, then a United States senator, for appointment to the post of messenger in the Court of Claims, which had just been created by act of Congress. By a curious coincidence the date of his appointment to the court, May 15, was also his wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were married in 1851.

Observed Anniversary in 1905

Five years ago, May 15, 1905, there was an impressive proceeding at the Court of Claims, when the court took formal cognizance of the fiftieth anniversary of Mr. Taylor's service. Assistant Attorney General Louis A. Pradt and Charles A. King addressed the court and gave eloquent expression to the high regard in which Mr. Taylor was held by both bench and bar. Members of the bar practicing before the court presented a finely engraved silver-headed cane to Mr. Taylor on that occasion, and the judges gave him a silver vase, suitably inscribed. Chief Justice Nott ordered that resolutions testifying to the appreciation of Mr. Taylor's long service, be spread upon the minutes of the court.

Mr. Taylor was for many years superintendent of the Sunday School of Grace Protestant Episcopal Church, and for fully twenty-five years he was a vestryman of that church. He was a member of Hope Lodge, No. 20, F.A.A.M.

Besides his widow there are six children surviving: William E., George W. and Benjamin E. of New York; Thomas F. of Austin Texas, and Dr. Alfred H. and Miss Mary E. Taylor of Washington.

*The National Intelligencer, Monday, January 19, 1846
Death of Hon. Wm. Taylor*

Mr. Dromgoole rose and addressed the House as follows: Mr. Speaker, to me, sir, has this day been assigned the melancholy duty of making, the solemn announcement to this House that death is in our midst. William Taylor, a Representative in Congress from the State of Virginia, is no more. He died at his own chambers in this city this morning at 4 o'clock.

The brief time which has elapsed since his decease has not allowed me an opportunity of ascertaining the circumstances attending that event. Since he reached Washington, at the commencement of our session, he has labored under constant indisposition. A general debility pervaded his physical frame; and this morning he suddenly expired. He sunk suddenly, and in a moment life was extinct. Without a murmur, without a sigh, he sank to rest--evincing, at his departure from this world, a calm composure, a quiet resignation, which admirably corresponded with the smooth progress of his previous life.

He was born in Alexandria, in this District. In early life he removed to the Valley of Virginia; and, having married, located himself in Rockbridge country, where he has ever since resided. Blest in his domestic relations, happiness and contentment have been his good fortune.

If, sir, his life has been marked by no extraordinary incidents, that fact constitutes an encomium on the moral beauty of his character. Although a well-educated lawyer, and highly reputable member of the bar, he manifested no restless eagerness for distinction, and suffered not the promptings of worldly ambition to disturb the evenness of his temper and betray him into uncongenial controversy. Remarkable throughout life for his uninterrupted equanimity, nevertheless he was, in his public capacity, firm and decided in his opinions; and in the conscientious discharge of his duties he was inflexibly upright.

Justice and integrity characterized his entire intercourse with his fellow men. Honor in its best sense regulated his conduct.

Whether contemplated in the faithful discharge of his public duties or in his fair and honorable intercourse with his fellow men, or as an exemplary husband and father, reposing in tranquil happiness by his own fireside, in company with an affectionate wife and children--in whatever scene, or under whatever aspect we may examine the character of my departed colleague, he will be emphatically pronounced, in the most dignified and refined definition of the term, a gentleman.

Such sir, was the man who, in the wise dispensation of an inscrutable Providence, has been removed from his country and his family before he had attained an old age.

Of the grief of his bereaved companion, and his now fatherless children, it does not become me to attempt a description. Into that private and sacred scene of mourning I will not, even by imagination, intrude.

If earthly consolation can alleviate their distress, some portion of it may, perhaps, be derived from the reflection that he was universally esteemed and beloved by his acquaintances, and that all his colleagues, in the highest degree, respected and loved him, and mourn his loss as that of a brother.

But, sir, at last, the highest source of comfort, and consequent resignation to their bereavement, will be derived from their Christian belief that the ways of God, however inexplicable to the finite wisdom of man, are just; and from the Christian hope that a world of sin and sorrow and temptation has been exchanged for one of immortal bliss.

Mr. D. concluded by offering the following resolutions which were adopted:

Resolved, That this House has heard with deep emotion the annunciation of the death of the Hon. William Taylor, a member from the State of Virginia.

Resolved, That this House tenders to the relatives of the deceased the expression of its sympathy on this affecting event, and, as a testimony of respect for the memory of the deceased; the members and officers of the House will go into mourning by wearing crape on the left arm for thirty days.

Resolved, That the members and officers of the House will attend the funeral of the Hon. William Taylor, deceased, on Monday next, at half-past 12 o'clock p.m.

Resolved, That a committee be appointed for superintending the funeral of the deceased,

Ordered, That a message be sent to the Senate to notify that body of the death of Hon. William Taylor, late one of the Representatives from the State of Virginia, that his funeral will take place from the Hall of the House on Monday next, at half-past 12 o'clock p.m., and that the Senate be invited to attend the same.

|---|----------------|------------------------|------------------|
| Resolved, That, as a further mark of respect for the memory of the deceased, this House do now adjourn. | | | |
| The resolutions were read, and agreed to unanimously, and Mr. Dromgoole, of Virginia, Mr. Dunlap, of Maine, Mr. McKay, of North Carolina, Mr. Abbott, of Massachusetts, Mr. Hungerford, of New York, Mr. Vance, of Ohio, and Mr. King, of Georgia, were appointed the committee for superintending the funeral. | | | |
| And the House adjourned until Monday, 12 o'clock. | | | |

| Obsequies of the Late Hon. Wm. Taylor | | | |
| The Funeral took place in the Hall of the House of Representatives yesterday, with impressive solemnity. Besides the presence of the Members of that House and of the Senate, the President of the United States (Polk), the Heads of Departments, the Chief and other Officers of the Army, and various Officials were present, and the galleries were crowded by spectators of both sexes. The religious ceremonies were conducted by the Chaplains of the two Houses: the Rev. Mr. Milburn addressing the throne of grace in a fervent and appropriate prayer and the Rev. Mr. Tuston following in an impressive discourse on the enviable character of the deceased, and on the solemn admonition conveyed to all his surviving associates and friends by the suddenness of his summons to another world. | | | |

The President's Health

It being generally known that President Taylor has been much indisposed for two or three days past, great anxiety was excited yesterday by information, which spread through the city, that his illness had assumed a very serious and critical aspect. This was really the case, we learn, during the greater part of the day. In the afternoon, however, the symptoms became less menacing.

His illness commenced on Friday last, with an attack of cholera morbus, which appeared to yield to medical treatment, but it afterwards assumed a different and more threatening type.

The following bulletin indicates his condition at ten o'clock last night:

"The President is laboring under a bilious remittent fever, following an attack of severe cholera morbus, and is considered by his physicians seriously ill.

The National Intelligencer, Wednesday, July 10, 1850

Weep, fellow-citizens! The hand of Death has stricken down a great and good man! Zachary Taylor, our honored and beloved President, is no more! A malignant and rapid disease has swept him from among the living. No longer ago than Thursday last, he was apparently in the full enjoyment of health and strength, participating in the patriotic ceremonies of our Nation's Birthday, and now he is numbered with the dead! He expired last night, at half-past 10 o'clock, surrounded by his afflicted family. He died with the composure which conscious virtue, fortitude, and confidence in the goodness of God can alone impart. His last intelligible words were: "I am not afraid to die; I have done my duty; my only regret is leaving those who are dear to me."

In all this wide land there is not a heart which honors the noblest attributes of our nature--truth, bravery, humanity, patriotism--that will not throb with pain and grief at this national bereavement.

"He was a noble gentleman:

"Sounds him for courtesy, behavior truth,

"And every fair demeanor an example.

"Titles of honor add not to his fame,

"Who was himself an honor to the title."

Admiral Taylor Dead

A Short Sketch of His Eventful Career

Admiral Wm. Rogers Taylor (retired) died last night, in his seventy-eighth year, at his apartments at the Portland. His funeral will take place from St. John's church Wednesday at 2 o'clock. He was born November 7, 1811 in Rhode Island, and on the 1st of April, 1828, was appointed a midshipman in the navy. He served in the war with Mexico on board the old St. Mary's as a lieutenant, and was present during the siege of Vera Cruz by Gen. Scott, being in command of a gun in the naval battery. In 1836, when the sloop-of-war Poacock ran ashore on the Island of Madeira, Midshipman Taylor was sent to Muscat in command of a cutter, to convey the diplomatic agent of this country to that place with some treaties in his charge. It was a perilous sea voyage of nearly five months duration, attended with peril from bad weather and from the Arab pirates, some of whom chased the cutter with her brave little commander for several hours. Upon his arrival at Muscat the Imam placed a sloop of war under his command to render aid to the threatened Peacock. He saw service during the civil war, being senior officer off Charleston in January 1863, when two rebel rams attacked the squadron, and engaged one of them with the Housatonic. He was present as fleet captain under Admiral Dahlgren during all the operations against Morris Island, and was in battle with Forts Wagner and Sumter on board the monitor Catskill on the 10th of July, 1863, and again on board the Montauk on the 18th. Captain Taylor was in command of the Juniata during the engagements with Fort Fisher on the 24th and 25th of December, 1864. Since the war he has been detailed upon several important duties, and was at one time in command of the Pacific station. He was promoted to the various grades as follows: Passed midshipman in 1834, lieutenant in 1840, commander in 1855, captain in 1866, rear admiral in 1871, and retired November 7, 1873. He last duty was in command of the South Atlantic station.

| Teiling, Charles B. The Evening Star, April 20, 1888 Shot By A Special Officer The Sad Death of Young Teiling Killed By a Bullet Fired From a Pistol at an Escaping Prisoner Charles B. Teiling, the young man who was shot through the body and seriously injured last Sunday morning by Special Officer Klopfer, as published in Monday's Star, died at his home, No. 821 D street southwest, about 1:45 o'clock this morning. As stated in Monday's Star the shooting took place on Ohio avenue, between 12th and 13th streets northwest. The officer was passing the house of Bessie Smith, No. 1214 C street, when the latter called to him to arrest a man who was very noisy in house. As the officer approached the house he was met by a man whom he recognized as Timothy Hurley. "You can't arrest me," said Hurley, as he made a motion as though to draw a weapon or assault the officer. Klopfer started to place Hurley under arrest when the latter attempted to escape. They had not gone far when the fugitive turned upon the officer and attempted to strike him with a bottle. Klopfer dodged the bottle, which fell to the sidewalk and broke. This gave Hurley an opportunity to escape, which he took advantage of, and when the officer recovered himself Hurley was some distance from him. Klopfer called to him to stop and threatened to shoot. Hurley did not halt as called upon to do, and Klopfer drew his revolver and fired two shots, as he says, to frighten Hurley. Hurley turned the corner of 12th street and escaped. The bullets from the officer's revolver went in the direction of the lumber yard on the opposite side of Ohio avenue. Shot While Going Home From a Hop Teiling was walking with Mr. Jesse Varnell. They had attended a hop given at the W.L.I. Armory and started home about 12 o'clock. Two of their companions, Frank Baur and Frank Skinner, had gone through C street. When the prisoner attempted to escape Teiling and Varnell heard the officer blow his whistle, which was followed by a pistol shot. The young men looked around, and an instant later the officer came around the corner of 13th street pursuing Hurley. As the officer turned the corner he fired the second shot. Teiling fell beside his companion fatally injured. As he fell he asked: "Is this you, Jess?" Varnell replied: "Yes." "I am shot through the heart." "Don't tell me that," said Varnell. "What did they shoot me for?" asked Teiling. "I have done nothing." Just then a young man named Codrick appeared and took charge of the injured man, while Varnell called his other companions, Baur and Skinner, and a few minutes later several policemen arrived and conveyed the injured man to the station, where he was attended by Dr. McKone. The young man was unconscious for a while, but when his father arrived at the station he had regained consciousness. Unconscious of the Cause of His Death About 5 o'clock Monday morning he was taken to his home, where he has since been attended by Drs. McKone and Stafford. The bullet, the physicians thought, entered the left breast and came out under his arm, but Varnell, who was with him, says the bullet entered his back. From time to time the patient showed signs of getting better, but last evening he began to grow weaker. After the patient fully recovered consciousness he did not realize that he had been shot, and until he died he imagined that a severe cold had settled on his lungs. Shortly after the news of the young man's death reached the police Special Officer Klopfer, who was out on bail, went to the first precinct station and gave himself up. The facts were reported to the coroner, who decided to hold an inquest at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning at the first precinct station. The Evening Star, April 21, 1888 The Shooting Unnecessary What the Coroner's Jury Decided in the Case of Young Teiling The Testimony at the Inquest Today--Statements of Teiling's Companions and of Special Officer Klopfer-- How the Officer Came to Fire the Shot-- Klopfer Held to Answer for the Fatal Result Coroner Patterson held an inquest today at the first precinct police station, in the case of Chas. B. Teiling, the young man who was fatally wounded Saturday night on Ohio avenue, near 13th street, by a shot fired by Special Policeman Benj. Klopfer, who was at the time in pursuit of a prisoner who had escaped from him. | d. 20 Apr 1888 | | R68/310 |

Young Teiling as stated in The Star, died early yesterday morning at his home, 821 D street southwest. The jury of inquest was composed of Thos. Somerville, Wm. Hl Douglass, Frank H. Belt, Robert Leitch, sr., Allison Nailor, and Warren M. Whyte.

The Testimony

The first witness was Jesse M. Varnell, who was with Teiling when he was shot.

Varnell told the story of the shooting. He and his three companions, Frank Skinner, Frank Bauer, and Teiling, were on their way home and separated at the corner of 13th and C streets. Skinner and Bauer going down C toward 12th and Teiling and witness going down Ohio avenue. They had gone a little distance from 13th street when they heard a police whistle and a pistol shot. A little later he saw Klopfer come around the corner of 13th street. "I saw his hand go up," said witness, "and the flash of a pistol. That was the second shot. A few seconds after this shot Teiling fell."

The witness said he did not see any one running, and did not see what became of Klopfer after the shot was fired. Witness called for assistance, but he did not know whether Klopfer heard his call or not.

Frank Bauers, the next witness, one of Teiling's three companions, who were going home from a hop at the W.L.I. Armonry, testified to seeing a crowd of people on the south side of C street. They saw some one running and heard something smash on the pavement. Witness heard a shot, saw the flash and heard a police whistle blow. Then he saw two or three men run to the corner of 13th street and turn the corner. Witness and Skinner then continued on down C street to 12th. Before they reached the corner of 12th they were hailed by Varnell, who told them Teiling was shot, and they ran around as quickly as they could to where Teiling lay.

Frank M. Skinner, the other of Teiling's companions, gave testimony substantially the same as Bauer's.

Wm. A. Codrick testified to hearing the shots. He ran around from C street to Ohio avenue, and came near, in the dark, running over Teiling's body. There he was asked by Varnell to stay by the body until Varnell called his friends. Witness saw the flash of the second shot. It was fired on Ohio avenue, and the man that fired it was going toward 12th street.

Dr. Lachlan Tler, who made a post mortem examination of Teiling's body, testified to finding a wound on the left side of the spinal column. The ball passed through the body fracturing two ribs and penetrating the upper lobe of the left lung, and making a slight opening on the integument. The bullet was found buried in the muscles. Death was due to hemorrhage and exhaustion, the result of the wound.

Many Bequests

Charities Remembered in Will of Mrs. Temple

The will of the late Mary J. Gunton Temple, widow of Edward Temple, and a woman well known in religious and benevolent circles, was filed early yesterday afternoon. The instrument is dated January 2, 1896, and George Wilcox, Francis E. Dana and Joseph J. Darlington are appointed executors. To the Washington Loan and Trust Company in trust for Rosa Quinn, a servant, is left the sum of $5,000, and then the following public bequests are made: Washington City Orphan Asylum, $10,000, Washington City Bible Society, $5,000; Children's Hospital, $3,000; Young Woman's Christian Home and Newsboys and Children's Aid Society, $2,000 each. To the testatrix's daughter Mamie Temple, the sum of $40,000 is given, the bequest to be given preference over the others, and to Norris G. Temple and wife is given the property near Pennsburg, Chester county, Pa., known as Gunton-Temple Place, subject to a charge of $300 a year for their aunts, Sidney, Jane and Mary Temple. The aunts are also given the sum of $200. A bequest of $6,000 is made to Edward Temple Wilson, a great nephew, and the sum of $2,000 each is given to Mrs. Elizabeth B. Beard, Mary J. Wilcox, Julia Dana, Mary G. Carter, nieces; William G. and Thomas G. Budington, nephews, and Clara Wilson Morey, a great niece. To George B. Temple, $1,200 are given, $6,000 to William B. Wright, son of an intimate friend, and to Harriet A. Zantzinger, $335 a year. The residue of the estate is left to the executors for the benefit of the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church, a memorial chapel to be erected in honor of William Gunton, the father of Mrs. Temple, and if there remain sufficient funds after that is done, one to be built in honor of her husband.

Admiral Temple Dead -- Stricken by Apoplexy While Alone in His Room

Brief Sketch of His Long and Honorable Career in the United States Navy

Rear Admiral William G. Temple, United States navy, retired, died at his apartments at the Portland yesterday afternoon, about 5:30 o'clock from an attack of apoplexy, which first manifested itself about noon of the day before. He was stricken while alone in his room, and his condition was not discovered until an hour later, when a waiter went to his room with his luncheon. The admiral was lying on the floor in a comatose state and the waiter thought he was dead. He gave an alarm at once and Medical Director Wales of the navy, an intimate friend of the invalid was promptly on hand. A hasty examination showed him that the case was beyond medical aid, and he directed his efforts to easing the last hours of the invalid. Admiral Temple was unconscious when found, and remained in that condition up to the time of his death. Mr. Edward L. Temple, a nephew arrived home yesterday afternoon from Rutland, Vt., and will have charge of the funeral arrangements. The admiral had no family. His wife, who was a daughter of Gen. J.G. Totten, died nearly five years ago. No children resulted from the marriage. The nearest relatives are two nephews and two nieces -- Edward L. Totten, who resides at the old Temple homestead built in 1812, in Rutland, Vt., the admiral's birthplace. Arthur Temple, Alice Temple, and Mrs. John A. Mason of Chicago, Ill. A sister of his wife, Mrs. Charles H. Graves, and her husband of Duluth, Minn., have spent several winters during the last few years at the Portland.

An Excellent Naval Record

Admiral Temple has an excellent naval record. He was born at Rutland, Vt. in March, 1824 and entered the navy as a midshipman in 1840, graduating from the Naval Academy six years later. He was with the Boston when that vessel was wrecked in the Bahamas in 1846. He participated in the bombardment and capture of Vera Cruz in 1847, as an officer of the steamer Scourge, and he took part also in the subsequent engagements at Alvarado, Tuspan and Tobasco, frequently commanding parties against the Mexican forces, and sometimes commanding batteries. Subsequently he assisted in the survey of the interoceanic railroad and canal across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and then took a cruise in the Pacific on the frigate Lancaster in 1860. By this time he had reached the rank of lieutenant and was placed in command of the steamer Flainbian at New York for a short time.

He had a very active career during the late civil war. In July 1862, having reached the grade of lieutenant commander, he was detailed to command the gunboat Pembina in the western gulf blockading expedition and from November 1862 until September 1864, he was fleet captain of the eastern gulf blockading squadron. While on such duty he led a force of sailors in defense of the approaches of Washington, at the time when the capture of the city was seriously threatened by Gen. Early's brigade in July 1864. Admiral Temple commanded the steamer Pontoosuc from November 1864 to May 1865 and participated in the attack on Fort Fisher, the capture of Wilmington, the bombardments of forts on the James river and in the capture of Petersburg and Richmond. He became a full commander in March 1865, and commanded the steamer Tacony; attached to the North Atlantic squadron, until 1866, when he was detailed to four years' term of ordnance duty. He reached the grade of captain in 1870, and his career was comparatively uneventful until 1884, when he escorted King Kalakaua of the Hawaiian Islands on the occasion of his memorable visit to this country, for which service he subsequently received the decoration of knight commander of the Royal Order of Kamehameha I. He became a commodore in June 1878, served as a member of the examining and retiring board and became its president in June 1881. He attained the highest rank in the navy, namely, a rear admiral, February 22, 1884, and voluntarily went on the retired list of the navy seven days later under the forty years' service law.

The National Intelligencer, Saturday, April 5, 1845

We regret to learn (says the St. Louis Republican) that on the 17th March, at Fort Scott, as Capt. B.A. Terrett, 1st regiment dragoons, was dismounting from his horse, having a loaded pistol in his hand, his horse started, and the pistol was accidentally discharged. The ball passed through his right lung, and he survived only about twenty minutes. The army has lost in Capt. T. a gallant soldier and an accomplished gentleman.

Charles W. Terry Dead

Life-Long Resident of Capital Victim of Typhoid

Prominent in Business and Masonic Circles --

A Pioneer Among Motorists

Charles W. Terry, a well known business man of this city, and prominent in Masonic circles, died last evening at his residence, 649 A street northeast, of typhoid fever, after an illness of six weeks. Mr. Terry's illness started with a cold, turning into the grip, and later developing into typhoid. He was surrounded by he members of his family when the end came. Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at his late residence. Rev. A.S. Johns, pastor of Christ Church, will officiate. The interment will be in Congressional cemetery.

Mr. Terry was born in Washington, and had he lived until April 12 next he would have been forty-three years of age. He was educated in the public schools of this city, and when quie young started in business. During the greater part of his life he was engaged in the printing business on John Marshall place. He was a member of Washington Centennial Lodge, No. 14, F.A.A.M.; LaFayette Chapter, No. 5, Orient Commandery, No. 5, and Almas Temple of the Mystic Shrine, and Pressmen's Union, No. 1. He was also a vestryman and treasurer of Christ Episcopal Church, G street between 6th and 7th streets southeast. During the bicycle days of twelve years ago he was an active member of the Arlington Wheelmen and participated in many road events of those days. When the motor car arrived he took up that game, and was among the first to join the Automobile Club of Washington. He was always fond of touring, and spent all of his leisure moments in his touring car.

The deceased was the son of Mrs. M.P. Terry and the late Daniel E. Terry of this city. In addition to his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Nellie R. Hutchinson, and daughter, Miss Arlien, fifteen years old, his mother, Mrs. M.P. Terry; two sisters, Miss Harriet J. Terry of this city and Mrs. Charles E. Overton of Southold, Long Island, and a brother, Ed B. Terry, also of this city, survive him.

Death of Ford's Theater Victim

One of the beneficiaries of the award made by the joint commission to those who were injured in the Ford's theater disaster, Francis William Test, died last night, after a brief illness, which was aggravated by the effect of the shock received three years ago. He had been for many years a clerk in the record and pension division of the War Department, and was highly esteemed by a large number of friends and acquaintances. He was a member of the New Church. The award made in his case was $2,500.

The Evening Star, May 13, 1896

Funeral of F.W. Test

His Death Unmistakably Caused by the Ford's Theater Disaster

The funeral of Francis W.S. Test, one of the Ford's Theater victims, will take place with Masonic honors from the home, 223 E street northwest, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mr. Test had the day before his death been awarded $2,500 for the injuries he received in the collapse of the interior of the Ford's Theater building, June 9, 1893. He fell headlong from the third floor and was found pinned in under a mass of timbers and debris, his head downward and only his feet visible. He remained in this position a long time, as the work of removing the material around him was unavoidably slow and there was constant danger that in moving it some heavier mass of timber would be released and fall upon him, thus further endangering his life. When finally taken out it was found that Mr. Test's arm was broken, several ribs were broken and he had received severe internal injuries, while the physical shock had visibly left its permanent effect on his mind. His health in the interval since the disaster had been continually poor. It was decided by his physicians that his liver had been injured, and he was greatly troubled by insomnia. An autopsy was held yesterday by Dr. S.S. Stearns, aided by his son, Dr. John Stearns, and Drs. Kingsman and Lothrop. It was found that the two broken ribs, the injury received at the time of the disaster, had punctured the liver and had affected that organ to such an extent that he was kept in continual misery until relieved by death.

In view of the unmistakable fact that Mr. Test's death was caused by the injuries received in the theater disaster an effort will be made to have the amount awarded him increased to $5,000 as an award to Mrs. Test, the same that was awarded to the widows of those who lost their lives in the disaster.

The Evening Star, May 14, 1896

Ford's Theater Disaster

Two More Claims Made and the Death of Test Will Change the Report

When the Ford Theater commission made its report last Monday to the Senate it was thought that all of the survivors of the disaster of June, 1893, who were entitled to payment for injuries received had been included in the bill and the amendment presented. Since then, however, two claims have been filed with the commission for damages for injuries received in that accident. The claimants are Richard C. Jones and Bernard H. Harrison. Mr. Jones filed his papers yesterday and Mr. Harrison today, both claiming disabilities due to the collapse of the building in which they were working. It is probable that these cases will be adjudicated at once and if meritorious will be included in the list presented with the bill and the amendment.

Another change is apt to be made shortly in the list of beneficiaries, owing to the death Monday night of Mr. Test, which it has been proved by an autopsy is to be traced directly to the fall of the building, in which he sustained several severe fractures, one of which caused a laceration of the liver that brought on his fatal disease. The commission awarded him $2,500 for his injuries, and upon presentation of a claim by his widow and a report of the autopsy it is unquestionable that her name will be included among those to receive $5,000.

The Evening Star, February 27, 1864

The decease of Miss Laura V. Test, on the 16th instant, recently announced, has excited much surprise as well as deep grief. She was the daughter of the Hon. John Test, deceased, many years back a member of Congress from Ohio, and the step-daughter of Robert S. Wharton, Esq. of this city. Being only in her 18th year and hitherto health, such an event was quite unanticipated. Her many amiable traits of character had already endeared her to a large circle of friends and clearly indicated -- like the early fragrance from the gorgeous rose just opening its petals--that when they should be more fully developed by additional years and cultivation, they would win and captivate all hearts coming within the sphere of her influence, but death loves a shining mark "Could grace of person, purity of affection, unselfishness of disposition, attractive conversational powers, refined manners, or constant vivacity and cheerfulness stay the scythe of the fell Destroyer, this very interesting girl had been yet spared his fatal visit. But she is gone, leaving a chasm in the family circle having been an only daughter, of a most afflictive description, and a vacancy in the school room being at the time of her decease yet a member of Madam Burr's seminary, that will long be sorrowfully noticed by her loving classmates. It is consoling to her kindred, and her numerous admiring acquaintances that one they loved so ardently was drawn by Divine grace, some months before her withdrawal from their companionship to consecrate her affections to the adorable Redeemer, thereby creating the assurance that, if they imitate her virtues and her course in this particular, they will be permitted to renew their acquaintances in a world where there are no sorrows and no partings.

A Lamented Death

The death of Benjamin N. Thomas, affectionately known as "Benny Thomas," has caused deep sorrow to all who knew him. He had been ill for a long time of consumption, bearing his sufferings with the cheerful patience characteristic of him, and he died at 5 p.m. on Saturday, in the same peaceful frame of mind. For 16 years he was in the employ of The Star, and during that time by the faithful and intelligent discharge of his responsible duties he won the love and confidence to a remarkable degree of his employers, his fellow employees, and the customers of the paper. While conscientiously exact in all transactions, his sunny temper and earnest disposition to oblige gained him friends, and probably he never made an enemy in his life. He was from youth a devoted member of the Fifth Baptist church, (Rev. Dr. Meador, pastor) and certainly no better argument for religion could be made than his sweet, pure, earnest life, faithful to every trust, and his tranquil happy death. He was also a faithful and beloved member of the Odd Fellows' fraternity, belonging to Columbia Lodge No. 10, Columbian Encampment, No. 1, and the Uniformed Battalion of Patriarchs. The deepest sympathy will be felt for his widowed mother and the others of his family, who have lost the best of sons and the best of brothers, in his early manhood.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday (tomorrow) at 2 p.m., from his late residence, 471 H street southwest.

The Evening Star, November 26, 1879

The Funeral of Benjamin N. Thomas took place yesterday afternoon from the residence of the family, No. 471 H street southwest, a large number of personal friends attending; also, Columbia Lodge No. 10, I.O.O.F. and the Uniformed Patriarchs, of which organizations deceased was a member, and which were headed by Weber's band. The remains were in a walnut coffin appropriately ornamented with silver mountings, in designs peculiar to the Odd Fellows and surrounded with many floral tributes from friends. The services at the house were conducted by Rev. Mr. Meador, pastor of the Fifth Baptist church, and the Odd Fellows' services at the Congressional Cemetery, where the remains were interred by C.C. Collison, chaplain of the lodge. The Rev. Mr. Meador in his remarks referred most feelingly to the character of the deceased, and his relations in his business and private life, which were marked. Under circumstances at one time most trying, by a faithful and conscientious discharge of duty and an adherence to the right, that won for him the warmest affection and regard of those with whom he was associated. His long and excellent record was well commended as an example to be followed in the path of Christian duty. The pall-bearers were: on the part of Columbia Lodge No. 10, I.O.O.F., Brothers G.Z. Colison and Frank M. Proctor; on the part of the Uniformed Patriarchs, I.O.O.F., Patriarchs Thomas W. Fowler, Wm. L. Arnold, John Long and F.L. Ourand. The quartette who rendered choice music at the residence at the grave were Brothers John H. Seiffert, R.H. Boswell, Gill and Connell.

The National Intelligencer,
 took place yesterday afternoon from his late residence, No. 2011 I street northwest, and was largely attended. Among those present were many distinguished officers of the army and navy. On the lid of the walnut casket was a massive plate, on which was inscribed "General Charles Thomas, U.S. Army. Born April 13, 1797. Died February 1, 1878." Two elegant floral crosses and wreaths were on the coffin. The services were conducted by Rev. Augustus Jackson, of St. Paul's P.E. church. At the conclusion of the services at the house the casket was removed to the hearse by eight soldiers from the 2d artillery, preceded by the following pall bearers: General Meigs, Colonel Montgomery, General MacFeely, General Pelouze, General Heintzelman, General Hunter, General Geo. C. Thomas and General Townsend. The cortege then proceeded to the Congressional Cemetery, where the remains were interred.

| The Evening Star, August 30, 1893 A Cashier's Suicide Mr. E.F. Thomas Ends His Life by a Pistol Ball E..F. Thomas, a well-known man of this city, committed suicide yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at his residence, 1135 9th street, by putting a bullet into his heart. There are few men about town whose face is more familiar to citizens generally than was that of the unfortunate man who killed himself yesterday. For years he had sat behind the marble counter at Harvey's restaurant as cashier and had taken in thousands of dollars for steamed and liquid refreshments. He was regarded as a model cashier and day in and day out his cash invariably balanced to a cent. He had many friends, not only among the customers of the place, but all about town, and was generally popular. For this reason his sad end is greatly regretted. He leaves a wife and son, the latter a boy aged about twelve years. Mr. Thomas belonged to the Masons and the National Union, an insurance order. It is expected that he will be buried under the auspices of the Masonic lodge tomorrow afternoon. Mr. Thomas formerly was an employee of the Post Office Department, but for four or five years past had been cashier at Harvey's. For several weeks past Mr. Thomas had been out of sorts and was disconsolate, so that his friends had some premonition of his rash intentions. He had been suffering from neuralgia and at times recently had been | | | | drinking rather heavily. There is little doubt that he acted yesterday while under temporary aberration of mind. It is said that a couple of months ago he attempted to commit suicide in a room in a small hotel on Pennsylvania avenue by turning on the gas. The escape of gas was noticed and his efforts frustrated by breaking in the doors. Yesterday, shortly after 4 o'clock, when his family were startled by a pistol shot, a rush was made to his room, and he was found feebly gasping, with a bullet wound in the left breast and the revolver lying beside him. Dr. Woodward, who lives just opposite, was called immediately, but the unfortunate man was dying then.

| The Evening Star, January 14, 1889 Died in the Hospital Late Thursday evening there arrived at the Baltimore and Potomac depot from Guilford's station, on the Washington, and Ohio railroad, a man named J.H. Thomas. He complained of being ill, and was removed in the police ambulance to Freedman's hospital, where he died during the night. The physicians at the hospital were unable to find any friends of the dead man. Sanitary Officer Frank was notified of the death. He learned that Thomas, who was about fifty-five years old, was a plasterer by trade, and had done some work about Guilford's station. Mr. J.C. Coleman, at that place, was notified of Thomas' death. The body will be held at the hospital until this evening or tomorrow morning to await the arrival of friends of the deceased. If no one appears to claim it the body will be buried in Potter's field. | | | |

| Thomas. In this city, on the 5th instant, James Henry, son of Wm. H. and Jane Thomas, in the 7th year of his age, formerly of Alexandria, Va. Weep not for me, dear mother, It will not ease your pain; But look to him who gave and took Your son with him to reign. Weep not for me, dear father, Your sorrow soothe with prayer To God above, who surely will Answer, and soothe your care. And you, my dear brothers, Who feel the parting pain, For loss of him, your brother, Who has gone with Christ to reign. Come, then, my dearest parents, When your pilgrimage shall end, You'll claim a place with God and us, Eternity to spend. This interesting idol of his parents and all who knew him, met with his death by being run over by an omnibus on the evening of the fourth of July, he was playing on a pile of sand just a foot or two from the pavement with other little mates. Jumping up he tried to make his escape, but too late alas--his little form was picked up by his father and placed in the arms of his agonized mother, whose name he never ceased calling to help him until the little tongue was still in death. A Friend. | | | |

Mrs. Jane Thomas Dies at Age of 92

Resident of Washington for Sixty-five years Buried Today

Mrs. Jane E. Thomas, 92 years old, widow of W.H. Thomas, and a resident of Washington for 65 years who died at her residence, 427 Eleventh street southwest, Sunday, was buried this afternoon in Congressional Cemetery. Funeral services were held from Epiphany Chapel, Twelfth and C street southwest, the church of which she had been a faithful communicant for many years.

The death of Mrs. Thomas removes one of the oldest residents of this city. She was active, possessed all her faculties to the last, recalling with vivid accuracy the old days when the southwest section of the city was a commons, through which the old James canal had the right of way, and when freight-laden vessels navigated to the very doors of the National Capitol.

Mrs. Thomas was a native of Virginia and was a member of a family of historic interest. Perhaps no family has contributed more to the service of their country than the Adams family, from which she descended. Her great grandfather fought valiantly in the Revolutionary War, and was an overseer of the Custis estate, the owner of which became the wife of President Washington and the "First Lady of the Land". Her father fought with distinction through the Mexican War, and the son of Mrs. Thomas, George W. Thomas, a local contractor is a veteran of the civil war.

Mrs. Thomas is survived by two sons, George T. Thomas and W.H. Thomas, Jr., fifteen grandsons, twelve granddaughters, and ten great grandchildren, the eldest of whom is a girl eighteen years old.

NOTE: Two grandsons fought with the American forces in the World War:

William Howard Thomas, Battery B, 110 Regiment Field Artillery, A.E.F., No. 1291633. Landed in France in the Spring of 1918, via New York.

James B. Thomas, Company 73, 112th Engineers. A.E.F. No. 1813969. Landed in France in the Spring of 1918, via New York, A.P.O. 673.

Both, later honorably discharged due to demobilization.

| The Evening Star, November 9, 1878 | | | |
| Death of Mr. Noble Thomas | | | |
| Mr. Noble Thomas, a well-known citizen, died yesterday morning of heart disease, at his residence, No. 618 5th street, aged 58 years. Mr. Thomas was, in early life, a seaman, and during Mr. Thornley's wardenship of the penitentiary he was the superintendent of the prison. For several years before the war he was one of the lieutenants of the old "Auxiliary Guard," which place he resigned on the breaking out of the war and went south. In the confederate service he was in the quartermaster's department, and was also connected for a time with the Richmond police. He returned here in 1865, "accepting the situation," and for some time he filled | | | | the position of constable. Mr. Thomas was a genial, kind hearted man, and had many friends, who will sympathize with his widow and children.

Noble J. Thomas Released on Bail

Will be Finally Dismissed Today

Noble J. Thomas, who was arrested about two weeks ago upon charges of aiding and abetting treason, and being a spy, was sent to jail by Justice Miller, who refused bail after hearing the statements of Messrs. George Hilton and William H. Harrison, these witnesses promising other evidence. On Wednesday the prisoner had a further hearing before Justice Miller, and no new evidence being produced, Justice Miller, released Thomas on $5,000 bail, determining to consult the District Attorney relative to a final disposition of the case. The consultation resulted in the Justice deciding to dismiss the case today.

The Evening Star, June 8, 1865

The Charge Against Noble J. Thomas

Noble J. Thomas, who was arrested in this city on the 27th of April, upon the charge of aiding and abetting treason for the benefit of the rebel government, was brought out again yesterday for a further hearing before Justice Miller. But one witness was examined yesterday, whose testimony went to show that Thomas, after leaving this city, appeared as a witness in Alexandria against several Union men from Washington who were arrested there by the rebels, and that he charged them with being spies. Justice Miller decided that all of the charges against the accused were not sustained; but Thomas was held to bail in the sum of $5,000.

The Evening Star, May 3, 1861

Resigned

We hear that Noble Thomas, Lieut. of the Auxiliary Guard, has resigned his position and left the city. He will be missed from his post (the telegraph post) at corner of 6th st. which he has so long adorned.

Death of William E. Thomas

Mr. William E. Thomas, who died yesterday in this city was well known to and will be missed by a wide circle of native Washingtonians, since he was born, grew up and spent practically his whole life within the ten miles square. His school-boy days were passed in South Washington, where he was one of the founders of the Jefferson Debating Society, an organization of note in South Washington's educational annals. His business was that of dairyman, and at different times he managed dairy farms in Maryland and Virginia. He was interested in scientific research, and a recent issue of Popular Astronomy contains an article by him, promulgating discoveries concerning the laws governing the density and height of the atmosphere. He was an active member of the Washington Chess Club and furnished the chess notes for Saturday's Star. His funeral will take place on Wednesday at 2 p.m. from Lee's undertaking establishment.

A Lamented Death

The death of Benjamin N. Thomas, affectionately known as "Benny Thomas," has caused deep sorrow to all who knew him. He had been ill for a long time of consumption, bearing his sufferings with the cheerful patience characteristic of him, and he died at 5 p.m. on Saturday, in the same peaceful frame of mind. For 16 years he was in the employ of The Star, and during that time by the faithful and intelligent discharge of his responsible duties he won the love and confidence to a remarkable degree of his employers, his fellow employees, and the customers of the paper. While conscientiously exact in all transactions, his sunny temper and earnest disposition to oblige gained him friends, and probably he never made an enemy in his life. He was from youth a devoted member of the Fifth Baptist church, (Rev. Dr. Meador, pastor) and certainly no better argument for religion could be made than his sweet, pure, earnest life, faithful to every trust, and his tranquil happy death. He was also a faithful and beloved member of the Odd Fellows' fraternity, belonging to Columbia Lodge No. 10, Columbian Encampment, No. 1, and the Uniformed Battalion of Patriarchs. The deepest sympathy will be felt for his widowed mother and the others of his family, who have lost the best of sons and the best of brothers, in his early manhood.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday (tomorrow) at 2 p.m., from his late residence, 471 H street southwest.

The Evening Star, November 26, 1879

The Funeral of Benjamin N. Thomas took place yesterday afternoon from the residence of the family, No. 471 H street southwest, a large number of personal friends attending; also, Columbia Lodge No. 10, I.O.O.F. and the Uniformed Patriarchs, of which organizations deceased was a member, and which were headed by Weber's band. The remains were in a walnut coffin appropriately ornamented with silver mountings, in designs peculiar to the Odd Fellows and surrounded with many floral tributes from friends. The services at the house were conducted by Rev. Mr. Meador, pastor of the Fifth Baptist church, and the Odd Fellows' services at the Congressional Cemetery, where the remains were interred by C.C. Collison, chaplain of the lodge. The Rev. Mr. Meador in his remarks referred most feelingly to the character of the deceased, and his relations in his business and private life, which were marked. Under circumstances at one time most trying, by a faithful and conscientious discharge of duty and an adherence to the right, that won for him the warmest affection and regard of those with whom he was associated. His long and excellent record was well commended as an example to be followed in the path of Christian duty. The pall-bearers were: on the part of Columbia Lodge No. 10, I.O.O.F., Brothers G.Z. Colison and Frank M. Proctor; on the part of the Uniformed Patriarchs, I.O.O.F., Patriarchs Thomas W. Fowler, Wm. L. Arnold, John Long and F.L. Ourand. The quartette who rendered choice music at the residence at the grave were Brothers John H. Seiffert, R.H. Boswell, Gill and Connell.

The National Intelligencer,
 took place yesterday afternoon from his late residence, No. 2011 I street northwest, and was largely attended. Among those present were many distinguished officers of the army and navy. On the lid of the walnut casket was a massive plate, on which was inscribed "General Charles Thomas, U.S. Army. Born April 13, 1797. Died February 1, 1878." Two elegant floral crosses and wreaths were on the coffin. The services were conducted by Rev. Augustus Jackson, of St. Paul's P.E. church. At the conclusion of the services at the house the casket was removed to the hearse by eight soldiers from the 2d artillery, preceded by the following pall bearers: General Meigs, Colonel Montgomery, General MacFeely, General Pelouze, General Heintzelman, General Hunter, General Geo. C. Thomas and General Townsend. The cortege then proceeded to the Congressional Cemetery, where the remains were interred.

| The Evening Star, August 30, 1893 A Cashier's Suicide Mr. E.F. Thomas Ends His Life by a Pistol Ball E..F. Thomas, a well-known man of this city, committed suicide yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at his residence, 1135 9th street, by putting a bullet into his heart. There are few men about town whose face is more familiar to citizens generally than was that of the unfortunate man who killed himself yesterday. For years he had sat behind the marble counter at Harvey's restaurant as cashier and had taken in thousands of dollars for steamed and liquid refreshments. He was regarded as a model cashier and day in and day out his cash invariably balanced to a cent. He had many friends, not only among the customers of the place, but all about town, and was generally popular. For this reason his sad end is greatly regretted. He leaves a wife and son, the latter a boy aged about twelve years. Mr. Thomas belonged to the Masons and the National Union, an insurance order. It is expected that he will be buried under the auspices of the Masonic lodge tomorrow afternoon. Mr. Thomas formerly was an employee of the Post Office Department, but for four or five years past had been cashier at Harvey's. For several weeks past Mr. Thomas had been out of sorts and was disconsolate, so that his friends had some premonition of his rash intentions. He had been suffering from neuralgia and at times recently had been | | | | drinking rather heavily. There is little doubt that he acted yesterday while under temporary aberration of mind. It is said that a couple of months ago he attempted to commit suicide in a room in a small hotel on Pennsylvania avenue by turning on the gas. The escape of gas was noticed and his efforts frustrated by breaking in the doors. Yesterday, shortly after 4 o'clock, when his family were startled by a pistol shot, a rush was made to his room, and he was found feebly gasping, with a bullet wound in the left breast and the revolver lying beside him. Dr. Woodward, who lives just opposite, was called immediately, but the unfortunate man was dying then.

| The Evening Star, January 14, 1889 Died in the Hospital Late Thursday evening there arrived at the Baltimore and Potomac depot from Guilford's station, on the Washington, and Ohio railroad, a man named J.H. Thomas. He complained of being ill, and was removed in the police ambulance to Freedman's hospital, where he died during the night. The physicians at the hospital were unable to find any friends of the dead man. Sanitary Officer Frank was notified of the death. He learned that Thomas, who was about fifty-five years old, was a plasterer by trade, and had done some work about Guilford's station. Mr. J.C. Coleman, at that place, was notified of Thomas' death. The body will be held at the hospital until this evening or tomorrow morning to await the arrival of friends of the deceased. If no one appears to claim it the body will be buried in Potter's field. | | | |

| Thomas. In this city, on the 5th instant, James Henry, son of Wm. H. and Jane Thomas, in the 7th year of his age, formerly of Alexandria, Va. Weep not for me, dear mother, It will not ease your pain; But look to him who gave and took Your son with him to reign. Weep not for me, dear father, Your sorrow soothe with prayer To God above, who surely will Answer, and soothe your care. And you, my dear brothers, Who feel the parting pain, For loss of him, your brother, Who has gone with Christ to reign. Come, then, my dearest parents, When your pilgrimage shall end, You'll claim a place with God and us, Eternity to spend. This interesting idol of his parents and all who knew him, met with his death by being run over by an omnibus on the evening of the fourth of July, he was playing on a pile of sand just a foot or two from the pavement with other little mates. Jumping up he tried to make his escape, but too late alas--his little form was picked up by his father and placed in the arms of his agonized mother, whose name he never ceased calling to help him until the little tongue was still in death. A Friend. | | | |

Resident of Washington for Sixty-five years Buried Today

Mrs. Jane E. Thomas, 92 years old, widow of W.H. Thomas, and a resident of Washington for 65 years who died at her residence, 427 Eleventh street southwest, Sunday, was buried this afternoon in Congressional Cemetery. Funeral services were held from Epiphany Chapel, Twelfth and C street southwest, the church of which she had been a faithful communicant for many years.

The death of Mrs. Thomas removes one of the oldest residents of this city. She was active, possessed all her faculties to the last, recalling with vivid accuracy the old days when the southwest section of the city was a commons, through which the old James canal had the right of way, and when freight-laden vessels navigated to the very doors of the National Capitol.

Mrs. Thomas was a native of Virginia and was a member of a family of historic interest. Perhaps no family has contributed more to the service of their country than the Adams family, from which she descended. Her great grandfather fought valiantly in the Revolutionary War, and was an overseer of the Custis estate, the owner of which became the wife of President Washington and the "First Lady of the Land". Her father fought with distinction through the Mexican War, and the son of Mrs. Thomas, George W. Thomas, a local contractor is a veteran of the civil war.

Mrs. Thomas is survived by two sons, George T. Thomas and W.H. Thomas, Jr., fifteen grandsons, twelve granddaughters, and ten great grandchildren, the eldest of whom is a girl eighteen years old.

NOTE: Two grandsons fought with the American forces in the World War:

William Howard Thomas, Battery B, 110 Regiment Field Artillery, A.E.F., No. 1291633. Landed in France in the Spring of 1918, via New York.

James B. Thomas, Company 73, 112th Engineers. A.E.F. No. 1813969. Landed in France in the Spring of 1918, via New York, A.P.O. 673.

Both, later honorably discharged due to demobilization.

| Thomas, Noble J. | d. 9 Nov 1878 | | R88/129 |
|-------------------------|---------------|--|----------------|

Death of Mr. Noble Thomas
Mr. Noble Thomas, a well-known citizen, died yesterday morning of heart disease, at his residence, No. 618 5th street, aged 58 years. Mr. Thomas was, in early life, a seaman, and during Mr. Thornley's wardenship of the penitentiary he was the superintendent of the prison. For several years before the war he was one of the lieutenants of the old "Auxiliary Guard," which place he resigned on the breaking out of the war and went south. In the confederate service he was in the quartermaster's department, and was also connected for a time with the Richmond police. He returned here in 1865, "accepting the situation," and for some time he filled

| the position of constable. Mr. Thomas was a genial, kind hearted man, and had many friends, who will sympathize with his widow and children. The Evening Star, June 10, 1865 Noble J. Thomas Released on Bail Will be Finally Dismissed Today Noble J. Thomas, who was arrested about two weeks ago upon charges of aiding and abetting treason, and being a spy, was sent to jail by Justice Miller, who refused bail after hearing the statements of Messrs. George Hilton and William H. Harrison, these witnesses promising other evidence. On Wednesday the prisoner had a further hearing before Justice Miller, and no new evidence being produced, Justice Miller, released Thomas on $5,000 bail, determining to consult the District Attorney relative to a final disposition of the case. The consultation resulted in the Justice deciding to dismiss the case today. The Evening Star, June 8, 1865 The Charge Against Noble J. Thomas Noble J. Thomas, who was arrested in this city on the 27th of April, upon the charge of aiding and abetting treason for the benefit of the rebel government, was brought out again yesterday for a further hearing before Justice Miller. But one witness was examined yesterday, whose testimony went to show that Thomas, after leaving this city, appeared as a witness in Alexandria against several Union men from Washington who were arrested there by the rebels, and that he charged them with being spies. Justice Miller decided that all of the charges against the accused were not sustained; but Thomas was held to bail in the sum of $5,000. The Evening Star, May 3, 1861 Resigned We hear that Noble Thomas, Lieut. of the Auxiliary Guard, has resigned his position and left the city. He will be missed from his post (the telegraph post) at corner of 6th st. which he has so long adorned. | | | |

Mr. William E. Thomas, who died yesterday in this city was well known to and will be missed by a wide circle of native Washingtonians, since he was born, grew up and spent practically his whole life within the ten miles square. His school-boy days were passed in South Washington, where he was one of the founders of the Jefferson Debating Society, an organization of note in South Washington's educational annals. His business was that of dairyman, and at different times he managed dairy farms in Maryland and Virginia. He was interested in scientific research, and a recent issue of Popular Astronomy contains an article by him, promulgating discoveries concerning the laws governing the density and height of the atmosphere. He was an active member of the Washington Chess Club and furnished the chess notes for Saturday's Star. His funeral will take place on Wednesday at 2 p.m. from Lee's undertaking establishment.

Accidental Death

Asbury N. Thompson Suffocated by Illuminating Gas

Asbury N. Thompson died about 10:30 o'clock last night while being taken to the Homeopathic Hospital in the police ambulance from the effects of illuminating gas the man had inhaled while in his room at 715 9th street northwest. All the circumstances attending the affair indicated that Mr. Thompson had left the gas turned on accidentally, and the coroner quickly reached that conclusion. A certificate of accidental death was given and relatives took charge of the body for interment.

The deceased was about sixty years old and was a native of this city. He had been employed as a clerk in the WSar Department for about forty years, and was well known in official circles. Late yesterday afternoon he returned to his room, and about 10 o'clock others in the house detected the odor of gas and made an investigation. The ambulance was summoned and the dying man was removed to the hospital as stated. Upon reaching the hospital the doctors found that life was extinct and the body was ordered to be removed to the morgue.

The deceased leaves a widow and several grown children. His funeral will probably take place Monday.

In Last Resting Place

Funeral of Late A.N. Thompson Conducted by G.A.R. Post

The funeral of Asbury N. Thompson took place yesterday afternoon from Boteler's undertaking parlors, 639 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. The services were conducted by the rev. George E. Maydwell of Waugh M.E. Church, and were attended by a large number of friends. The casket was covered with floral tributes from friends of the family.

Among others present were Major John Tweedale, U.S.A., and a delegation of Mr. Thompson's former associates in the War Department, and Captain James M. Edgar and a delegation from the Old Guard, of which the deceased was for many years an active member.

The interment was made in Congressional cemetery, where the burial service of the Grand Army was conducted by Commander J. Tyler Powell and the officers of Potomac Post, No. 11, G.A.R., of which post the deceased was a charter member.

The Rev. Henry S. Stevens, department chaplain, assisted in the Grand Army services.

Edgar F. Thompson Claimed By Death

Newspaper Employe for Almost 40 Years Dies on Way to Hospital

Edgar F. Thompson, who had worked on newspapers in this city for nearly 40 years, and an employe in the composing room of the Washington Post for the last 25 years died yesterday. Mr. Thompson, who was 66 years old, became ill just after finishing work in the composing room, and, escorted by his son, John Thompson, went down to the street and got into an automobile, but died several minutes later. His son, who had been getting ready to carry him to Emergency Hospital, rushed him there in the car, but he was pronounced dead upon arrival.

Funeral services will be conducted at his late residence, 947 Fourteenth street southeast, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Interment will be in Congressional Cemetery. Masonic services, under the auspices of the Andrew Jackson Lodge of Alexandria, Va., of which he was a member, will be conducted at the grave.

Mr. Thompson learned the compositor's trade on the Alexandria Gazette. Coming to this city, he worked for the old Sunday Herald and other papers before working for the Post. He was a native of Alexandria.

Besides his Masonic affiliations, Mr. Thompson was a member of Columbia Union, No. 101, of this city, and formerly a member of the executive committee of the union. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Miss Frances Thompson and Miss Emeline Thompson, and five sons, Robert Thompson, John Thompson, Paul Thompson and Edgar F. Thompson, jr., all of this city, and another son, Malcolm Thompson, now in South America.

Mrs. Thompson's Funeral

Impressive Services Both at Church and Congressional Cemetery

The death of Mrs. Eliza A. Thompson, whose funeral took place from the First Methodist Protestant Church, in Southeast Washington, yesterday afternoon, has caused deep regret in that section of the city, where she was well and favorably known for many acts of kindness and charity performed by her during the fifty years she has lived in that section, endearing her to a very large circle of neighbors, friends and acquaintances. The Independent Order of Odd Fellows has lost a warm, earnest and steadfast friend and supporter. Connecting herself with Odd Fellowship by taking the degree of Rebekah in Harmony Lodge, she was one of those who organized the Ladies' Odd Fellows' Relief Association, No. 1, November 15, 1864, whose object was to relieve the distress of the widows and orphans and indigent Odd Fellows, taking an active part and serving as its president and continuing an ardent supporter until it merged into the first Rebekah lodge established by the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia, September 7, 1875. At its institution Mrs. Thompson was elected the first vice grand, and subsequently the first lady noble grand of Naomi Rebekah Lodge, No. 1. On the declination of the treasurer, Mrs. Cannon, to continue longer in office, she was unanimously elected treasurer, and has since been continuously re-elected to the same office, serving her thirty-fifth term when stricken with the sickness that terminated fatally March 31. The religious services at the church, conducted by the Rev. J.W. Gray, D.D., were unusually impressive. The church was crowded to its utmost capacity. A solo, "Only Remember," was sung by Mr. James H. Cathell; also a solo, "Asleep in Jesus," was sung by Mr. Nichols. At Congressional cemetery the beautiful ceremony of the Daughters of Rebekah was conducted by Naomi Rebekah Lodge, No. 1, Mrs. Sarah M. Sanderson acting noble grand, Mrs. Georgie Mothersead acting vice grand, Mrs. Juliana Allan, chaplain, and Mrs. Alice V. Thomas, marshal.

Prominent members of the order of Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, Independent Order of Mechanics and the Veteran Firemen, including Grand Master John I. Brown, Grand Representative Fred. A. Stier, Grand Secretary Wm. R. Hunt, Grand Representative Wm. P. Allan, Past Chancellor John Gullihier, Past Architect James H. Cathell, President of the Veteran Firemen James H. Richards, and representatives from every subordinate and Rebekah lodge in this city were present throughout the ceremonies.

The floral offerings were numerous and handsome, and probably the most beautiful and touching was the placing of a pink carnation with green by each member of the Rebekah degree in the casket as they passed around it. Handsome floral pieces were sent by Harmony Lodge, No. 9; Naomi Rebekah Lodge, No. 1; Calanthe Lodge, No. 11, Knights of Pythias; Washington Company, No. 1, Knights of Pythias, and from the employees of the ordnance department of the navy yard.

Mr. John W. Thompson has the sympathy of his friends in this sad affliction, coupled with the fact that one of his daughters, who was stricken with illness at the same time with her mother, continues very ill at the present time.

Local Scientist Dead

George F. Thompson of Bureau of Animal Industry

George F. Thompson of 319 B street southeast, who was editor of the bureau of animal industry, Department of Agriculture, died suddenly yesterday about 3:30 o'clock, after a comparatively short illness. He was forty-five years of age. His wife and four children survive him.

Mr. Thompson was called to Chicago just a few days before Christmas, and while en route there was taken ill of the gripe. He was able to be up and about while in Chicago and started for home the day after Christmas, arriving here January 3. Since then he has been confined to his bed, though no fears were entertained of his death. There was a decided change for the worse last night, however, and pneumonia developed.

It was recognized that death was rapidly approaching, although the best medical attention was furnished. Mr. Thompson died, as stated, at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon surrounded by the members of his family.

Prominent in Bureau

Mr. Thompson had been prominently identified with the work of the bureau of animal industry of the Department of Agriculture from the time he became a clerk in the department in February 1894. He made a special study of sheep and goats, especially of the Angora goat. Last summer he went to Europe by direction of the Agricultural Department to make investigations of the milch goat. Upon his return he wrote a series of papers on the subject, which added greatly to Mr. Thompson's scientific reputation.

Before coming to the Department of Agriculture, Mr. Thompson was a teacher in the Kansas State College and received the degree of M.S.

Mr. Thompson was prominent in local church and Sunday school work, having for a number of years been assistant secretary of the Columbia Baptist Association. He was a member also of Manhattan Lodge, A.O.U.W.

The trip to Malta last summer, is said to have been of great benefit to Mr. Thompson's physical health. His recent illness was unexpected, and, as stated, of short duration.

Arrangements for the funeral services had not been completed last night.

Funeral Tomorrow

Last Rites Over the Remains of George F. Thompson

The funeral of George F. Thompson, late editor of the bureau of animal industry, Department of Agriculture, whose death was announced in the Sunday Star, will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Metropolitan Baptist Church, 6th and A streets northeast. The pallbearers selected to serve are Messrs. Roberts, Carroll, Latelle, Bryant, Allier and Lyon.

It is probable that Rev. J. Compton Ball, pastor of Metropolitan Church, will officiate. A delegation of employees of the Agricultural Department has arranged to attend the obsequies. Suitable resolutions have been drawn up by Mr. Thompson's former associates, expressive of their regret at his untimely death, and arrangements have been made to place on his bier several handsome floral pieces from the bureau of animal industry and other branches of the department.

Funeral Services Over Remains of George F. Thompson

Funeral services over the remains of George F. Thompson, late editor of the bureau of animal industry of the Department of Agriculture, took place at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the Metropolitan Baptist Church, corner of 6th and A streets northwest. The services were conducted by the Rev. John Compton Ball, the pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. E. Hez Swem of the Virginia Avenue Baptist Church, Rev. Dr. Samuel H. Greene, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, and Rev. J.J. Muir, pstor of the Temple Baptist Church. The choir of the Metropolitan Church sang "Lead Kindly Light" and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," which were the two favorite hymns of the deceased. The pallbearers were Mr. C.C. Carroll, Mr. Laub LePelle, Mr. F.W. Bryant, Mr. Henry A. Lyon, Mr. John G. Allee and Mr. John Roberts. The interment was in the Congressional cemetery.

The work of the deceased as the assistant secretary of the Columbia Baptist Association received much commendation from the ministers and laymen alike throughout the city. Taking up the work when the late Mr. Samuel Yeatman was unable to attend to the duties of the position, Mr. Thompson labored zealously in behalf of the Baptist Churches of the city.

Resolutions of Respect

The employees of the Department of Agriculture held a meeting in the office of the secretary of the department yesterday at 11 o'clock and adopted resolutions testifying to the high regard in which Mr. Thompson was held by his associates in the department. The resolutions recited that the department had lost one of its most efficient and faithful employees, who by his many personal qualities and Christian character had endeared himself to all of his associates during his eleven years of service, first as proofreader and editorial clerk in the office of the experiment stations, editorial clerk in the division of publications, superintendent of document room, division of publications, and lastly as editor of the bureau of animal industry. The resolution also stated that his fellow workers in the Department of Agriculture extended to the family of Mr. Thompson their sympathy in the hour of affliction, and that as a further evidence of the personal affection and esteem in which the deceased was held it was ordered that a copy of the resolutions be engrossed and presented to the family.

The resolutions bore the signature of Mr. A.D. Melvin, chief of bureau of animal industry; Mr. Joseph A. Arnold, assistant chief of the division of publications, and Mr. C.L. Mariatt, who is in charge of the experimental field work of the bureau of entomology.

Mr. George R. Thompson, the well-known hardware merchant, corner of 10th and B streets is quite ill at his residence in South Washington.

The Evening Star, October 22, 1877

Death of Mr. George R. Thompson

On Saturday night Mr. George Richard Thompson whose illness was noticed in Saturday's Star, died at his residence, No. 473 Maryland avenue. Mr. Thompson had been ill several weeks. He was a native of this city, a son of the late Wm. Thompson, for many years a foreman in the Washington Arsenal. He received his education in the public schools of this city, and was one of the bright boys in the fourth district grammar school -- Mr. J.E. Thompson principal. When quite a young man he entered the hardware store of Mr. J.R. Elvans as a clerk, and was subsequently a partner. About fifteen years ago the firm was dissolved, and Mr. Thompson started (firm of Thompson & Co., at the corner of 10th and B streets) the business of coachmaker' and wheelwrights' supplies, with a general hardware business, which has been quite successful. Mr. Thompson was also an active building association man, having been connected with several as secretary, and was one of our most upright and energetic citizens possessed of many traits of character which endeared him to a large circle of friends. He was a bright Mason holding his membership in Dawson Lodge, No. 16; Washington Chapter, No. 2, and Columbia Commandery of Knights Templare. His funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at one o'clock.

(Note in the Police Court news: Dr. H. Jones was charged with fast driving. It appears he tried to force himself through Maryland avenue, between 4 1/2 and 6th streets, where ropes had been stretched across the avenue in consequence of the illness of Mr. G.R. Thompson, and succeeded in doing so, driving the horse at full speed. A permit was produced in court showing that the ropes were placed there by authority of the District Commissioners; also that Jones behaved in a very rude and boisterous manner; and the court imposed a fine of $20.)

Thompson Succumbs to Attack of Indigestion Prominent in Fraternities Employed at Washington Naval Yard for Over Fifty Years Served in District Militia Received Commission as Lieutenant From President Lincoln -- Funeral Services Sunday Afternoon John Wesley Thompson, better known as "Uncle John," who for the past half century had been employed at the Washington navy yard, died at 1:20 o'clock this morning after a brief attack of acute indigestion. Mr. Thompson returned from his work yesterday afternoon apparently in the best of health. He was seventy-nine years old. The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence, 606 G street southeast, Rev. Dr. Grey officiating. Interment will be at Congressional cemetery. The services will be held under the auspices of the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias, of both of which organizations the deceased was a member. Mr. Thompson was born in this city at the corner of 7th and F streets, and subsequently lived on F street between 6th and 7th streets northwest, and learned the trade of plasterer. Entering the laboratory of the navy yard, Washington in 1850, he was so assiduous in the discharge of his important duty as a pyrotechnist that he had continuous employment by the government ever since. He was commissioned first lieutenant of the District of Columbia militia by President Abraham Lincoln in 1861. He was one of the commissioners of the fire department of Washington and its president for five years, and he was also a member of the board of health. He was also the marshal of the Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association. Became Odd Fellow in 1849 Mr. Thompson was initiated into Odd Fellowship by Bay Side Lodge, No. 66, at St. Michael's, Talbot county, Md., in February, 1849, and afterward became connected with Harmony Lodge, No. 9, of this city. He passed the chair of Harmony Lodge and entered the Grand Lodge in January, 1866, and after active participation in its affairs, passing through the offices of grand warden and deputy grand master, reached the chair of grand master in July, 1872. Since then he served frequently as chairman of several of the important committees of the Grand Lodge. Mr. Thompson was also a prominent member of the Knights of Pythias, beginning as a charter member of Calanthe Lodge, No. 11, March 1868. He advanced step by step until he reached the distinction of past grand chancellor. He was chosen supreme outer guard of the Supreme Lodge in 1876, and continuously filled that office for thirty years. Became Member of I.O.M. He early connected himself with Franklin Lodge, No. 2, Independent Order of Mechanics, and passed through the chairs of the lodge. He afterward withdrew from Franklin Lodge and assisted in organizing Capital Lodge, No. 14. He was elected treasurer of the lodge on its institution and held that place until his death. Entering the Grand Lodge, Independent Order of Mechanics, he was elected grand treasurer and was re-elected to that position for several years. He was then elected grand architect, and after the conclusion of his term entered the Supreme Lodge, I.O.M. in 1888. He served in the subordinate offices of the Supreme Lodge, and at the session in May, 1899, was unanimously elected supreme ruler for the term of two years. In all the positions Mr. Thompson occupied he was most faithful and proved himself a man of fine executive ability. He was extremely popular in all the fraternities with which he was connected. | | | |

Death of an Old and Respected Citizen

The many friends of Mr. Wm. Thompson, a well-known justice of the peace in this city for about forty years, will regret to learn that he died about 5 1/2 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the family residence, on the corner of 5th and M streets northwest. Mr. Thompson was a native of Hull, England, born December 1st, 1788, and he was therefore in the 90th year of his age. He received a liberal education, and it was intended that he should succeed to the large mercantile business conducted by his father, but his tastes were for literature, and he had such a dislike for the arbitrary features of the British government that he declined entering into business, choosing rather to try his fortunes under this government. In 1819 he made his way to Montreal, Canada, and after spending a few months in that city and Quebec, he reached Baltimore in the following spring. Here he found a number of friends, and he began to teach stenography, having for his students a number of members of the bar, some of whom subsequently became noted as leading men in the country. As a teacher of stenography he followed the courts from county seat to county seat, and in this work he became acquainted with many of the leading families of Maryland. He then went to the western part of Virginia, Pennsylvania and the eastern part of Ohio, then regarded as the far west. In his stenography classes he also taught grammar and elocution, and among his pupils were Senators Robert J. Walker, Stewart, McKennon and Wiley. In 1824 he located at Morgantown, Va., and published there a whig paper, advocating the election of Henry Clay to the Presidency, which enterprise he abandoned after Mr. Clay's defeat. About this time he published a book called the "Fayette Remembrancer." He then, with his wife, to whom he had been married about four years previously, started the Uniontown (Pa.) Academy. In 1829 he determined to make this city his home. At that time there were but two public or free schools in the District, (the Eastern and Western Lancasterian schools) and but few private schools. He established a school for boys near the corner of 6th and H streets, but subsequently removed to Louisiana avenue, near the City Hall. Mrs. Thompson took charge of a girl's school, and among her pupils was Mrs. Amadon, who for many years was known as one of the best teachers in the District. Mr. Thompson about this time became the political correspondent of the New Your "Courier," then edited by Gen. James Watson Webb, and of the Baltimore "American," and subsequently he became the local editor of the "Metropolitan," published in Georgetown. In 1834 he published the Washington "Mirror," which was the only paper at that time which gave any considerable attention to local affairs. This paper he sold to Mr. Rufus Dawes, who changed its character to a literary journal, and it failed in 1836. About this time Mr. Edward Dyer suggested to him that he should take a commission as a justice of the peace, and he procured the commission for him. Mr. Thompson was then made a police magistrate. He was subsequently for about ten years a reporter for the "National Intelligencer." He then established the "Saturday News," afterwards the "Washington News," a weekly paper, and edited it up to about twenty years ago. He held the position of justice of the peace for about forty years, and for a long time was one of the police justices under the board of police, holding that position until the establishment of the Police Court, about eight years since. As a journalist and citizen he advocated many municipal reforms, and being from the first opposed to the old fee system, he was an earnest advocate of the Metropolitan police. Mr. Thompson was a man of the strictest integrity, and one of the best and most valued citizens of the District.

The Evening Star, August 12, 1878

The Funeral of the Late William Thompson took place at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon from All Souls' church, corner 14th and L streets, and was attended by a large number of relatives and friends of the family, and by many old citizens, members of the Oldest Inhabitants Society and others. Many of the personal friends of the deceased called at the family residence, corner of 5th and M streets during the day to take a parting look at the remains. The body was encased in a rosewood casket, covered with black cloth and neatly trimmed with silver mountings. On the lid was the name, date of birth, and death of the deceased, and over the breast was placed a large cross, wrought of beautiful white exotics. The simple and appropriate funeral services of the Unitarian church were divided between the residence, the church and the cemetery by Rev. H.R. Wailworth of Baltimore, who, at the request of the family, officiated in the absence of Rev. Mr. McCauley, the pastor of the church. In his discourse he made reference to the great progress of the age covered by the long and upright life of the deceased; the wonderful inventions and the general march of education and science; and especially to his long and honorable official life as a magistrate in this community. The remains were deposited in the family lot at the Congressional cemetery. The pallbearers were Messrs. Frederick Bates, M.R. Dawes, Germond Crandall, Wm. B. Smith, C.C. Callan and H.O. Noyes, and the undertakers were the Messrs. Lee.

Excitement and the Heat
Causes That Led to Death of William A. Thompson
Heard That His Residence Was Burning and Ran to It--
Noted as an Engraver

William A. Thompson, one of the best-known citizens of South Washington, died suddenly about 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at his home, No. 462 Maryland avenue. His death was due to heart disease resulting from excitement and the heat. He was chief engraver in the United States coast and geodetic survey. Yesterday afternoon a message was received at Mr. Thompson's office that Mr. Thompson's house was burning. The sender of the message did not know if it was Mr. William A. Thompson's house or that of his son Harry, who lives in Brookland. The elder Thompson grew greatly excited, and although his son assured him that there was no occasion for him to become alarmed, he left the office and started toward home. He was in such a hurry that he virtually ran part of the way home, and upon reaching there he complained that he was overcome by the heat. Just as he was about to reach for a fan he fell to the floor. He died in less than two minutes. The fire referred to was at Brookland, near the home of Mr. Thompson's son.

An Active Career
The deceased was 63 years old, and was a native of this city, having been born near the corner of 5th and G streets northwest.

He was the second of seven sons of the late William Thompson. Two brothers, Dr. Millard F. Thompson and H.C. Thompson, and two sisters, Misses Mary E. and Amanda C. Thompson, survive him. He leaves a widow and two sons and three daughters. Forty-four years ago Mr. Thompson entered the employ of the government, and received a number of promotions until he was made chief engraver. He was an elder in the Sixth Presbyterian Church, and in connection with his church work he did a great amount of charity. The deceased was also a member of Dawson Lodge, F.A.A.M., and Columbia Commandery, K.T. His funeral will take place from the Sixth Presbyterian Church at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The Rev. Daniel Skellenger, pastor of the church, will officiate. The body will be placed in the family vault at Congressional cemetery.

Large Gathering Attests Esteem in Which Deceased Was Held

The funeral of Mr. William A. Thompson, who died suddenly Monday, took place from the Sixth Presbyterian Church yesterday afternoon. In addition to the family the church was crowded to its capacity by his friends and representatives of the various organizations of which he was a member. Around the casket were banked floral tributes in great profusion.

The services at the church were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Skellenger and Columbia Commandery, K.T., and at the grave by Dawson Lodge, No. 16, F.A.A.M.

The coast survey, in which he had been employed since boyhood, was particularly well represented. In addition to the floral emblem sent by his associates in the office, the employees of the engraving division, of which he was chief engraver, met Wednesday and formulated a set of resolutions, showing the deep esteem in which he was held by those associated with him and recounting his qualities and virtues.

Thompson. Monday evening, about 9 o'clock of consumption, in the 39th year of his age, William Henry Thompson, youngest son of Wm. Thompson, Esq., of this city. He went to his final rest with serenity and joyful hope, after enduring protracted suffering with Christian fortitude. His friends are invited to his funeral tomorrow afternoon, from Grace Church, (Island) at 4 o'clock.

The Evening Star, August 13, 1867

Dead -- Within a few days we have had occasion to notice the death of several well-known citizens, and now regret to add to the list that of Mr. William Henry Thompson, son of Wm. Thompson, Esq., and brother to Mr. John E. Thompson, principal of the Fourth District Male Grammar School. His demise was not unexpected, as he had been a lingering sufferer from consumption, bearing his pains with manly and Christian fortitude and patience. He was an esteemed member of the Masonic order, and his funeral, which takes place at Grace Church, South Washington, at 4 p.m. tomorrow, will be attended by his lodge. Mr. Thompson, for some years, held a position at the Capitol, but has latterly carried on business as tobacconist on 9th street. He was universally respected for the manliness and integrity of his character, and the warmth and steadiness of his friendships.

Perley's Reminiscences, p. 60

After the death of Dr. Thornton and of his accomplished wife, it became known that she was the daughter of the unfortunate Dr. Dodd, of London, who was executed for forgery in 1777. Her mother emigrated to Philadelphia soon afterward, under the name of Brodeau, and brought her infant daughter with her. In Philadelphia she opened a boarding-school, which was liberally patronized, as she had brought excellent letters of recommendation and displayed great ability as a teacher. The daughter grew up to be a lady remarkable for her beauty and accomplishments and married Dr. Thornton, who brought her to Washington in 1800.

| Thornton. At his residence in F Street, after a tedious confinement, by malady, which he bore with unruffled resignation, the highly gifted Doctor William Thornton, one of the oldest and most respectable inhabitants of this City, and who, for many years past, presided at the head of the Patent Office, in the Department of State. His funeral will take place on Sunday next, precisely at one o'clock, when his friends, and the friends of the family, are respectfully requested to attend. | | | |
| The National Intelligencer, April 4, 1828 The Late Doctor William Thornton The funeral of the late Doctor Thornton took place last Sunday; and on that occasion, every honor that could be shown, either by citizens or strangers, to solace his amiable and bereaved family, and evince the sincerity of public regret for his merits and memory was manifested. His body was accompanied to the place of interment by the President of the United States (John Quincy Adams), the Heads of Departments, members of Congress, and functionaries of the Corporation. And, on this melancholy occasion, the associates of the Columbian Institute having voted to wear badges of mourning for him, were joined by the medical and other learned societies to which he belonged, and by other respectable citizens who all discovered unusual sympathy, in paying this last tribute of respect to his remains. If the practice of lavishing obituary praise, in all our public journals, had not almost broken down the distinctions between merit and mediocrity, and depreciated the value of any expressions of public opinion, it would be a sadly pleasing employment to sketch the biography of Doctor Thornton, whose genius most certainly has not a thing of every-day growth. But, the abuse to which we allude, will confine us to the meager detail of a few obituary and broken sentences. Doctor William Thornton was an adopted American citizen. He was born in the British West Indies, in a family affluent and respectable. He was educated in classical learning, and for his profession, in the best schools in Edinburg. Here, after a residence of some years, he took his medical degrees, extolled for gifts and attainments. After traveling subsequently for several years in Europe, he returned, in the bloom of manhood, to America; and, having happily married in Philadelphia, this country thence forth became the land of his choice. During the first Administration, he was introduced to President Washington, whose regard he conciliated, and by whom, having been appointed a Commissioner for laying out this Metropolis, and fixing his future residence here, he may be considered as one of its founders. As soon as the Patent Office in the State Department became established in Washington, he was invited to preside over its important duties, a function, which, during four successive Administrations, he has ably fulfilled. Doctor Thornton was distinguished by a clear understanding, a tenacious memory, and an exuberant imagination. Highly gifted by nature, those gifts were exalted by an excellent education. His benevolence expanding into philanthropy, was active and boundless. Witness the early, eager, and disinterested effects of argument and eloquence which are embodied in his memorials, some of which preceded public opinion, and probably contributed to incline its tardy prudence in favor of Greek liberty, and South American Independence. To try, indeed, to do great good to great members of unhappy men, constituted the ruling effort of his life. His temperament was highly sensitive, and of course, his character was not exempt from those alloys that are blended with genius, and which we must take with it, or be content to live without it. He was constant and warm in his friendships, open and, decided in his enmities. His love of knowledge was great; his love of liberty greater; but his greatest love was that of truth. Truth he incessantly sought, through every avenue of science or literature, and fearlessly pursued through the whole course of his career with unabated ardor. In every relation of social life, | | | |

and emphatically in all its endearing charities, he was exemplary. In fine, a more fervent patriot and philanthropist never existed; nor a kinder kinsman, more devoted husband, or truer friend. C.

Perley's Reminiscences, p. 60

Prominent as an adopted citizen of Washington and as a personal friend of President Adams was Dr. William F. Thornton, Superintendent of the Patent Office, who had by personal appeals to his conquering countrymen, in 1814, saved the models of patents from the general conflagration of the public buildings. He was also a devoted lover of horse-racing, and on one occasion, when he expected that a horse of his would win the cup, Mr. Adams walked out to the race-course to enjoy the Doctor's triumph, but witnessed his defeat.

| Obituary | | | |
| A friend who has known the late estimable John Van Ness Throop as a citizen of Washington for thirty years past, takes occasion to pay a brief passing tribute to his memory. Born at Chatham, in the State of New York, on the 15th April, 1794, he was the son of Major Daniel Throop, a brave officer and soldier of the revolution, and the grandson of Col. Benjamin Throop, who served his country with great gallantry and renown to himself throughout that struggle. He (Col. B. Throop) led a hundred Mohican warriors into Canada in behalf of the Colonies; was by Montgomery's side at his death; and participated in the memorable battles of Long Island, White Plains, Saratoga, and Monmouth, at the latter of which he was wounded. His grandson, the immediate subject of this notice was endowed with more than an ordinary share of honorable revolutionary sentiments, which thus inherited, gave tone to his sentiments and character through life. Endowed with keen perceptions, he was remarkable in early life, not only for the geniality of his disposition, but for remarkable readiness of mind, rendering him the life and soul of the social circle at home or abroad. High spirited, proverbially, he was equally kind hearted, loving those connected with him by the ties of relationship or friendship, with no ordinary affection. When in the prime of life, he had no professional superior as an engraver, in the country, and as a man he was honest and ingenious in his nature, to a fault. His death, which took place in this city on the 3d of July last, leaves a vacuum in many hearts--of wife, children, and friends--that never will be filled on this side of the grave. | | | |

| Throop, Nathan H. | d. 10 Oct 1856 | | R41/52 |
| The Evening Star, October 9, 1856 | | | |
| A Washington Victim | | | |
| Among the victims at the Baltimore riots, yesterday, was a citizen of Washington, a young man named Nathan H. Throop, son of J.V.N. Throop, the engraver. He fell at the corner of St. Paul and Monument streets, and was carried to the street, where a medical examination being made, a ball was discovered to have entered his left temple and passed through the brain to the opposite side. Another ball lodged in the right shoulder, and the arm was severely cut, as if by a knife. The Baltimore Sun of today speaks of him as of having been last night pronounced in a hopeless condition, with the brains oozing from the wound in his head; but on inquiry at the house of his parents we learn that he is alive today and able to converse. | | | |
| The Evening Star, October 11, 1856 | | | |
| The Condition of Young Throop | | | |
| The Baltimore Sun of this morning says, "Nathan H. Throop, the young man from Washington city, wounded during the election riots, still lingers at the house of officer Morgan. He yesterday morning appeared somewhat easier and partook of food. He was also able to converse with his parents who have arrived in the city and are in attendance upon him. Prof. Smith, who has him in charge, is of the opinion that though he may possibly survive a few days longer, he cannot possibly recover, as the ball in his head cannot be found and must produce inflammation and consequent death. Of the remaining wounded, so far as we could ascertain, there is no serious apprehensions of fatal results, all their cases evidencing improvement." | | | |
| The Evening Star, October 13, 1856 | | | |
| Dead. The Perseverance engine house flag is at half mast for the death of young Throop who we learned died in Baltimore at 7 o'clock this morning. The remains will be brought to this city in the afternoon train. | | | |
| The Evening Star, October 14, 1856 | | | |
| The Death of Young Throop | | | |
| The Baltimore Sun of this morning says: "As was anticipated by the physicians in attendance upon Nathan H. Throop, the young man from Washington city, who was wounded in the late election riots, his injuries terminated fatally on yesterday morning about eight o'clock, he having shown signs of a speed dissolution on Sunday afternoon, and continued to sink gradually up to the time stated, when he breathed his last without any apparent increase of pain. Coroner Chalmers was summoned and proceeded to hold an inquest over the remains and there being no evidence direct as to the shooting, a post mortem examination was made by Drs. Smith and Johnson. They found that the slug had struck the middle of the left temple passing obliquely through the skull backwards and towards the other side, making a breach through the substance of the part of the left hemisphere of the brain, perforating the dura mater of the cerebrum and lodging under it, against the inner surface of the skull where it was found. This wound, in their opinion, caused his death. The jury thereupon rendered a verdict that his death was caused by a ball from fire arms by some party to them unknown. | | | |
| At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the remains were removed to the depot attended by his relatives and a number of friends, who left for Washington with them in the five o'clock train. His funeral will take place from the residence of his parents, No. 500 Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, during today. This makes the fifth victim of the disgraceful and inhuman riots of Wednesday last. | | | |

| The Death of Young Throop | | | |
| The Baltimore Clipper of this morning almost goes into black over the death of Young Throop of this city, killed in the recent Baltimore election riots, characterizing him as a "young and promising American" and abusing our foreign-born citizens in its well known way, of course, in the same connection. | | | |
| The citizens of this city, many of whom knew the lawless and otherwise disreputable character of this young man well, will be surprised to see the Clipper's statements. | | | |
| Now, we have to say that the deceased was well known to the police of Washington as one of the most desperate of a gang of young rowdies, thieves and desperados, and had himself not infrequently been in the hands of officers of justice under charges of stealing, rowing, etc. On the day before the Baltimore election, he applied to a respectable citizen of Washington, who had been in the habit of hiring to him a gun for | | | |

hunting, for a revolver, boasting that his purpose was to shoot a foreigner, and saying that he was going to Baltimore. He was refused. He then applied to another citizen for one, who also refused to let him have it on being cautioned by the person who had first refused him.

Previous to being shot he was seen to fire two shots at the Democrats from behind a grating near the base of the Washington Monument. This we learned yesterday from one of the first citizens of Baltimore. There is not a shadow of doubt of the truth of that fact, which will be proved beyond all question when the circumstances of the fight at the Baltimore election shall be investigated.

We repeat this city held no more disreputable, mischievous and dangerous youth of his age than this "young and promising American" of the Clipper, who was pretty much such another as Washington Nailor, Ray, Croggin, Bailey and Co.

In view of these facts, our fellow-citizens, hundreds of whom are personally aware of their truth, will comprehend that this misguided young man, who had been a nuisance and a terror here for years, has simply met the fate that is apt to overtake such evildoers.

The Death of Young Throop.

The following is an extract from the article in the Baltimore Clipper of Tuesday last, which devolved on us what we regarded to be a duty to criticize it as it was criticized on the same day in the Star:

"Death of Young Throop – Nathan H. Throop, the victim of a depraved and bigoted mob of Irish, died at the residence of officer James Morgan, No. 85 Ross street, at quarter past eight o'clock yesterday morning. It will be recollected that this young man, but little over nineteen years of age, was standing quietly in the neighborhood of Mount Vernon Place on election day, when the Irish, with all the fury of their illiterate and demon-hearted race, rushed up the street, and finding nothing more formidable to heap their vengeance upon, one of them fired at him, and he fell wounded in the leg. Whilst in this helpless condition—a condition which would excite the commiseration of any man with the least spark of human kindness in his breast—another Irishman approached, and, placing his musket within a few feet of him, fired a slug into the brain, and, as he fell over upon the pavement, the Irishman pierced him through the arm with the bayonet attached to his musket, and rifled his pockets of all the money they contained. There were five bullets in different parts of his body. It seems too shocking for contemplation. A young and promising American shot down in the streets of his country by a band of transported and beggarly foreigners, and whilst gasping from the effects of his fatal wounds to be robbed. This murder is almost without a parallel in heinousness."

This article, embraced as will be perceived, seeping and unjustifiable charges against a large and worthy class of our fellow-citizens, as well as false statements as to the circumstances under which the unfortunate youth received his death wound.

This morning, we are informed by a citizen of well known character and deserved influence, that the unfortunate youth had for the last two years been almost immediately under his eye, and had given, so far as he could perceive, every promise of making a useful citizen, notwithstanding his more youthful aberrations. We publish the fact with more true pleasure than we can express, because though impelled by what we thought to be a grave duty to the public involved on us, our sympathy with the parents of the deceased was and is as active and sincere as that of any man in this community.

We deplore that the unfortunate youth failed to be guided by what we learn to have been the earnest advice of his older brother given on the morning of the sad affair, to keep away from the scene of the contest.

The witness testified to being engineer of train 304 of the Baltimore and Potomac road and to having left the depot here at 6:36 yesterday morning with the passenger train north. Midway between the Navy Yard tunnel and the Pennsylvania avenue bridge, said the witness, is a block signal station right on the curve. The station is somewhat difficult to see. "Yesterday morning," said the witness, "I was looking out for the signal and when I saw that the block was all right I pulled open the throttle and at almost the same time I saw a man standing right on the track almost twenty or twenty-five feet from us. We were going about twenty or twenty-five miles an hour. He was standing sidewise to us and facing a train on the opposite track. I applied the brakes and pulled the whistle." "At the first blast the man raised his head and made an effort to get off the track, but we were too close and he was struck, almost immediately. I judge he was struck by the bumper on the left side." The witness testified that the air brakes were in good condition and that at the rate he was going it was impossible to stop inside of 200 or 300 yards. He did not know whether he had really struck the man until he saw him lying in the ditch. He stopped his train, backed, and reported the accident to Wilmington, leaving the body with the crew of the freight. What Mr. Fenton Saw The second witness was Engineer Fenton of the freight train of which Thrush was a brakeman. He said he was on the Pennsylvania avenue siding and just pulling out for Washington. Just as he was getting out of the siding he saw the conductor of his train (Sheets) and Brakeman Thrush standing together. As he passed the conductor jumped on the train. "Just about this time," said the witness, "I heard the approaching train blowing a danger signal. I looked out of the window and saw Thrush standing on the north bound track. Almost instantly the other engine struck him. He was thrown almost thirty-one feet, right up against our train." Witness did not know why Thrush was standing on the track, probably, however, to get aboard the end of the train. So far as he knew the dead man was perfectly sober. H. Swan, a flagman, and Chas. Sheets, conductor of the freight were also examined. Several jurymen and the coroner asked the witnesses questions in an effort to bring out the reason for the curve on the railroad at this point. Witnesses did not seem to know, except to get the road into the city. The Verdict. The verdict of the jury was of accidental death, that is "that the said John Thrush came to his death about 6:45 a.m., October 25, 1892, on the track of the Baltimore and Potomac railroad, of concussion of the brain, the result of being struck by a locomotive. From the evidence we believe that the accident was unavoidable and not due to neglect on the part of the engineer or the employees of the road." | | | |

Death of Judge Thruston

Died, at his residence in this city, on Saturday morning last, in his 83d year, the Hon. Buckner Thruston, Associate Judge of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia. Judge T. was a native of Virginia, but emigrating to Kentucky, his fine abilities and liberal attainments brought him early into public life, and in 1805 we find him representing his adopted State in the Senate of the United States, in which he continued to serve until January, 1810, when he resigned his seat to accept from President Madison the judicial appointment which he held to the period of his death. It is not for us to trace the history or judicial character of this eminent and esteemed citizen. That task will be performed better and more appropriately by other hands. It will suffice for us to add to this brief notice, simply, that the deceased was a gentleman in the best sense of the term; that his superior abilities and classical attainments, combined with his urbane manners in private life, made his company pleasing, instructive, and every where acceptable, and procured for him general esteem. He has descended to the tomb at a ripe age, and has left a large circle of descendants, relatives, and friends to cherish his memory.

Circuit Court of the District of Columbia for the County of Washington

At a meeting of the Bar and Officers of the Court, on the 30th day of August, 1845, on motion, Richard S. Coxe, Esq. was appointed Chairman, and Wm. Brent, Secretary.

On motion of Jos. H. Bradley, Esq. the following Resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this meeting have heard with deep and sincere emotion of the death of the Hon. Buckner Thruston, for many years a Judge of the Circuit Court of the District of Columbia,

Resolved, That we lament the death of an individual with whom we have been long associated in the administration of justice, and in the intercourse of society, distinguished by his elegant attainments as a scholar, for his extensive erudition, for his integrity on the bench, and his accomplishments as a gentleman.

Resolved, That we sincerely sympathize with his afflicted family in the death of Judge Thruston, full of years and ripe in character.

Resolved, That the District Attorney be requested to submit these proceedings to the Circuit Court, and to ask the Court to permit them to be entered on their minutes, and to unite with the Bar and Officers of the Court in paying respect to the memory of the deceased, and that we will wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That a copy of these proceedings be respectfully communicated to the family of the deceased, and is published in the several newspapers in this District.

James Hoban, Esq., District Attorney, submitted the above proceedings to the Court, accompanied with some just remarks on the character and virtues of the deceased.

To which the Hon. Wm. Cranch, Chief Judge, made the following reply on behalf of the Court:

The Court has received with great sensibility information of the death of the Hon. Buckner Thruston, one of the Judges of this Court.

Having been long associated with him in the discharge of our judicial duties, we cannot but deeply feel the loss we have sustained. His judicial life has been prolonged beyond the usual term of human life, and has been uniformly marked with strict integrity.

But this is not the time or place to pronounce his eulogy. His long and faithful services are well known and appreciated in the community, and will be long remembered.

The surviving Judges deeply sympathize with the gentlemen of the Bar, officers of the Court, and the afflicted family of the deceased, and will join in the testimonials of respect proposed by the Bar and officers of the Court, and will order their proceedings to be entered on the minutes of the Court. The Court will now adjourn. Wm. Brent, Clerk.

The Funeral of the Late Thruston took place last Monday morning. The remains of the venerable Judge were deposited in Congress Burial Ground. The funeral services of the Episcopal Church were most impressively read by the Rev. L. Gilliss, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Stringfellow. A great number of citizens attended the funeral solemnities out of respect to the memory of the deceased, amongst whom were noticed Senator Benton, Major General Scott, and General Van Ness. The following gentlemen acted as pall-bearers: The Hon. Judge Cranch, the Hon. Judge Morsell, the Hon. Judge Dunlop, General Walter Jones, W.W. Seaton, Esq., James Henry, Esq., Joseph H. Bradley, Esq., John Marbury, Esq., General Roger Jones, and General Roger Weightman.

Funeral Services Held

The funeral of Julius Thurm, who died at his residence at Good Hope Wednesday night, aged 70 years, took place yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and was under the auspices of the Knights of Pythias, the deceased having been a member of Arlington Mounted Division No. 9, and of Germania Lodge, No. 15, both of that order. The funeral was largely attended. An escort from Arlington Division accompanied the remains, being mounted at the head of the funeral cortege. The floral offerings were many, the casket being entirely covered by them, and a carriage required for the remainder.

As the funeral procession moved from the house two mounted burglars rendered "Nearer, My God, to Thee." The pallbearers were selected from Arlington Mounted Division. The remains were taken to the German Lutheran Church, 4 1/2 street southwest, where services were conducted by the pastor. Germania Lodge held

The City of Washington, Its Men & Institutions

Hon. John Mellen Thurston, former United States Senator from Nebraska, is one of the many who came to Washington in an official capacity, and becoming enamored of the manifold attractions and possibilities of the national capital elected to make it his home. Mr. Thurston upon his retirement from the Senate, opened a handsome suite of law offices here in the Bond Building, corner of Fourteenth street and New York avenue, northwest, with a branch office at Omaha, Nebraska, and also an office as general counsel of the Yacqui Copper Company, at 170 Broadway, New York. He numbers among his clients business firms from all sections of the country of ht highest standing in the commercial and financial world, as well as public men of influence and power. He is regarded as occupying a position in the front rank of the legal fraternity in the United States.

Senator Thurston was born at Montpelier, Vermont, on August 21, 1847. His ancestors were Puritans, and their settlement in this country dates back to 1636. His grandfather, Mellen, and great grandfather, Thurston, were both soldiers in the revolutionary war. His parents, Daniel S. and Ruth (Mellen) Thurston, moved to Wisconsin in 1854. His father was a private soldier in the First Wisconsin Cavalry, and died in the service in the spring of 1863. Senator Thurston was educated in the public schools and at Wayland University, Beaver Dam, Wisconsin, supporting himself by farm work, driving teams and other manual labor. He was admitted to the bar May 21, 1869, and in October of the same year located in Omaha, where he has since resided. In that city he was elected a member of the city council in 1872; city attorney of Omaha in 1874, and a member of the Nebraska legislature in 1875. He was a member of the Republican National Convention in 1884, and temporary chairman of the Republican National Convention in 1888; was president of the Republican League of the United States from 1889 to 1891, and was selected as permanent chairman of the Republican National Convention held in St. Louis June 16, 17 and 18, 1896, which nominated Major William McKinley of Ohio, for President. In 1877 he became assistant attorney for the Union Pacific Railway Company, and in February, 1888, was appointed general solicitor of the Union Pacific system.

Marine Bandsman Retires

Louis Tilleux, French Horn Player, Completes Thirty Years' Service

A reception was given yesterday at O'Donnell's cafe, on 8th street southeast, opposite the marine barracks, in honor of Mr. Louis Tilleux, a native of Belgium and a French horn player, who has just rounded out his thirty years of good and faithful service in the Marine Band and has taken advantage of the law, which permits him to retire on a pension. Leader Santelmann and Second Leader Smith of the Marine Band were present and made addresses and expressed their regret in parting with so valuable a member of the band.

Mr. Tilleux became a member of the Marine Band January 6, 1876. When he severed his connection with it yesterday he was its oldest member in point of service. During nearly fifty years of his life Mr. Tilleux has played in bands and orchestras in various parts of the world.

He is one of the five famous Belgian musicians who have served with the Marine Band. He was born in Ghent, where he began his musical career as a singer at the age of seven years. He was graduated in 1869 from the Conservatory of Music in Paris. After that he traveled through France, Italy, Russia and Germany, playing in various opera houses. He went to Cairo and enlisted in the orchestra of the khedive, Ismail Pasha. He was a cornetist in the khedive's orchestra from 1869 to 1871. The orchestra consisted of sixty players. In the winter season they played at the palace in Cairo or at the Italian opera, which was supported by the khedive. While with this organization Mr. Tilleux played at the premier production of Verdi's "Aida." It took place in Cairo in 1871 at the request of the khedive. In 1871 Mr. Tilleux left Cairo and traveled around the world and landed in the orchestra of the French opera at New Orleans during the regime of Calabrazza. Schneider was then leader of the Marine Band in Washington, and he had known Mr. Tilleux in New Orleans, so that the latter's entrance to the Marine Band was easy.

Comdr. Tillman, Scientist, Dies

Noted Marine Surveyor Set Navigation Course on Mississippi

Comdr. Edwin Hord Tillman, U.S.N. retired, who traveled more than 400,000 miles by water in his 47 years as a marine scientist, died yesterday at his home, 1910 Kalorama road N.W. He was 79.

His travels and studies took him to many foreign ports and along the United States coast lines and rivers. He was recognized as one of the ablest marine surveyors of his generation, and his works for the basis for present-day guides to navigation along the coast, the Mississippi River and the Yukon River in Alaska.

While serving in the Coast and Geodetic Survey, Comdr. Tillman designed and constructed the "Tide and Current Diagrams," basis of water movement volumes published today by the survey. His "Coast Pilots" guides for mariners along the Atlantic coast and its harbors and bays were the fruit of eight years of painstaking investigation. Comdr. Tillman's hydrographic soundings reached from Eastport, Me., to Pensacola, Fla.

He also set the course of navigation for the Mississippi for over 1,000 miles between New Orleans, La., and Cairo, Ill., a work which required three years. As a reward, he was given command of the 11 vessels which escorted President Taft on his official voyage down the Mississippi, during which they became fast friends.

Won Taft's Praise

On this occasion, the noted mariner's outspokenness won the President's praise and approval. Mr. Taft's physicians were making every effort to restrict his diet in order to keep him from gaining weight. To avoid tempting him, his aides were accustomed to restrict not only the President's menu but that of all persons seated with him.

Comdr. Tillman resolutely rejected such a proposal declaring, "Let him learn to control himself." The regular dishes were served on the voyage. Mr. Taft heard of the incident and curbed his own diet without imposing short rations on the other voyagers.

Because of navigation retirement laws, Comdr. Tillman's work in charting the Mississippi and Yukon waters came after he was technically on the retired list. In 1905, he had served 30 years. Discouraged by the slow promotion which kept his entire class below the rank of commander, the mariner accepted retirement. Nevertheless, he was soon called back to service and saw 16 years and 11 months of actual service after he had been placed on the retired list.

Comdr. Tillman was the son of a Tennessee Congressman who remained a Unionist during and after the Civil War. His oldest brother was the youngest colonel in the Confederacy and later became a diplomat. Another brother was superintendent of the United States Military Academy. Three others were noted jurists.

He is survived by his widow, the daughter of a former Danish Minister to the United States; two daughters, Mrs. Randolph Leigh and Mrs. W. Calhoun Stirling; a son Lt. E.H. Tillman, jr., now stationed at Charleston, S.C., and five grandchildren, Miss Frida Frazer, Miss Margheritta Stirling, Edwin Tillman Stirling, Elizabeth Stirling and Alice Tillman.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. at the home of a son-in-law. Dr. W. Calhoun Stirling, 2618 Thirty-first street N.W. Interment and services will be private. Members of the family will serve as pallbearers.

| We are sorry to learn that Mr Cornelius Tims of this city, was drowned on Tuesday night in the Potomac, under the following painful circumstances. Mr. Tims had accompanied the National Greys and a large party of ladies and gentlemen in the pleasure excursion which they made down the river in the steamer Columbia. On the return of the boat, about 12 o'clock, when it was between this city and Alexandria, Mr. Tims imprudently got into the small boat that was then suspended at the stern of the steamer. Unfortunately, in moving to and fro the deceased was overturned and fell into the Potomac. The engine of the Columbia was immediately stopped, the boat lowered, and every attempt was made, but in vain, to save him. We understand that the body had not been recovered last night, although two or three parties had been searching for it between this city and Alexandria. | | | |

Funeral of Daniel Tindall

Was a Union Veteran and Member of Masonic Fraternity

The funeral of Daniel Tindall, whose death occurred yesterday afternoon, will be held tomorrow afternoon from the late residence, 811 E street southeast. Interment will be made in Congressional cemetery and the funeral will be private. The pallbearers will be selected from among the members of the Masonic fraternity, which will have charge of the burial service.

Mr. Tindall was a brother of Dr. William Tindall, secretary to the board of District Commissioners. For many years he was clerk of the Washington asylum. He had been ill several weeks, but within the past few days his condition had improved, and hopes for his recovery were entertained by the physician and the family. A sudden change for the worse, however, occurred yesterday morning, and death came late in the afternoon.

Daniel Tindall served in the Union army during the civil war in Company I, 14th Illinois Infantry. He took part in the battles of Forts Henry and Donaldson and of Pittsburg Landing, being seriously wounded at the latter battle. He rejoined his regiment before his wound healed, and participated in the campaign which culminated in the investment of Vicksburg and in the siege of that stronghold of the confederacy. Later he took part in the battle of Hatchie river, from which he was returned to the hospital. His wound did not heal for several years following the war, and he never fully recovered from it.

Mr. Tindall had been a resident of the District for many years.

Tingey. Died on Saturday last, Mrs. Tingey, wife of Thomas Tingey, Esq.

The National Intelligencer, Friday, May 1, 1807

The public were, in the last number of this paper advised of the death of Mrs. Tingey. She died in the 57th year of her age, about thirty of which she had passed in the married state.

Her virtues in the relation of a wife, a parent and a friend were, perhaps, unsurpassed by any of her sex, and constitute a monument in the hearts of her kindred and friends, which will be imperishable.

A long, lingering, and often excruciating illness, she bore with more than ordinary fortitude, and with a cheerfulness superior to what, considering her emaciated frame, her friends could have conceived her capable of supporting -- At length worn down by the violence of disease, she resigned without a groan or struggle, her soul to Him who gave it, retaining her entire senses to the last -- having some time previously given full testimony of her faith in the holy Christian Religion, and through that of an assurance of being received to a life of bliss -- leaving a disconsolate family, and numerous friends to bewail her loss.

The National Intelligencer, February 24, 1829

At the Navy Yard in this City, about 19 o'clock a.m., yesterday, aged 79 years, Commodore Thomas Tingey, Commandant of that Yard, and for twenty eight years a resident of this City in that capacity.

To his exalted worth every one who has ever known him will bear testimony. His irreproachable character must be to his bereaved widow and affectionate children an invaluable legacy.

His commission in the Navy was nearly coeval with its existence. For almost fifty years he has sustained the character of an officer of the Navy with unsullied reputation.

As the head of a family, he was a venerable and true patriarch. As a man, he was humane, kind, and generous. As a citizen, faithful and loyal.

His death, though it has happened to him in the fullness of years, will be mourned by all who knew him. The friends and acquaintances, and those of the family, and the Officers of the Army and Navy, generally, are respectfully requested to attend the funeral without more particular invitation.

Legionary Order -- The volunteer companies of the 1st Battalion, 2d Legion, 1st Brigade of the Militia of the District, will parade in front of the Navy Yard gate, on Wednesday morning, the 25th instant, at 11 o'clock, for the purpose of paying funeral honors to the late Commodore Tingey.

By order, Thos. B. Reily, Actg. Adjt.

The Tingey Tablet

Memorial to Man Who Laid Out Washington Navy Yard

A bronze tablet has been placed on the commandant's house at the navy yard in memory of Capt. Thomas Tingey, U.S.N., who laid out the yard in 1800, and from that date was its commandant until his death there in 1829. Capt. Tingey, who was very popular with the citizens of Washington, may fitly be styled "The Father of the Washington Navy Yard.."

The unveiling will take place Wednesday the 28th instant, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon. The exercises will be simple, consisting of a brief address by Frank W. Hackett, ex-assistant secretary of the navy, to be followed by remarks from Secretary Bonaparte. No special invitations have been sent out, but the public generally will be welcomed. It is expected that army and navy officers, members of the Oldest Inhabitants' Association, of the various patriotic societies, of the Columbian Historical Society, and all persons who are interested in the navy yard and its associations, or in the early history of Washington, will take the opportunity to be present.

Historic Houses of George-Town and Washington City

The Commandant's House, said to have been designed by Latrobe, was not built till 1807. In the passage of years it has been so changed that Latrobe's hand is scarcely apparent--if, indeed he did furnish the original design. The successive occupants present a roster of so many notable personalities that any biographical discussion would exceed the limits of space, but there must be an exception in the case of that early Commandant, Captain or Commodore Tingey--he is referred to by both titles--who lived in the Commandant's House for so many years that he is said to have "bequeathed it in his will, under the mistaken impression that he owned it." As a matter of fact, he died interstate.

Thomas Tingey, son of an English clergyman, was born in London in 1750. As a young man he served in the British Navy until 1771. He then entered the merchant marine. After the Revolutionary War, he commanded ships in the American merchant service and lived in Philadelphia after 1783; after 1797 he lived in Kingston, New Jersey. In the short naval war with France, he was made a Captain in the American Navy, September 3, 1798, senior of five captains added that year. During the following winter he commanded the "Ganges" and two smaller vessels cruising in the Windward Passage, where they took sundry prizes.

In January, 1800, Benjamin Stoddert ordered Captain Tingey to Washington to supervise construction of a 74-gun ship of the line and the improvement of the Navy Yard. In a letter to William Marbury, Stoddert described Tingey as "an officer of great merit and understanding, who has seen the Navy Yards of England."

Through President Jefferson's opposition to a permanent Navy, in the peace establishment of 1801 only nine Captains were retained in the service. Tingey was twelfth in point of seniority and lost his rank as Captain but remained superintendent of the Washington Yard till 1803, then became temporarily "financial agent" and, on November 23, 1804, was re-commissioned Captain and made Commandant of the Yard and Naval Agent, combined duties he continued to perform for the rest of his life. It is worth noting that Captain Tingey's rules for the government of the Washington Navy Yard (1808) were adopted for all other naval stations on the Atlantic Coast.

Captain Tingey did not live in the Yard until the Commandant's House was built in 1807. In the meanwhile he had a house nearby at the northwest corner of 11th and G Streets, S.E. He was an indefatigable worker and a meticulously exacting administrator, but that did not prevent his being also an highly respected and genial social lion. His arrival in Washington started the naval circle that afterwards became so prominent in the city's social life. No ball, banquet or reception was complete without him, up to the time of his death in 1829. But, along with his love of society, a strong sense of civic responsibility led him to take an active part in public affairs. Amongst other interests, he was concerned with public education and was a school trustee as early as 1805. He headed the Vestry of Christ Church for a long time and was an incorporator of Christ Church Burying-Ground (now the Congressional Cemetery) in which, at last, he was to be buried.

His action at the British invasion has linked his name inseparably with the story of the Navy Yard. He was the last Government official to leave the city and the first to come back.

About 2 o'clock on the afternoon of August 24, 1814, Secretary Jones of the Navy went to the Yard and authorized Captain Tingey to lay trains of powder and make all necessary arrangements to fire the place. About half-past eight in the evening, having definite news that the British were within the city, Tingey ordered the matches applied. When the fires and explosions started, embarking in his gig he was rowed down the Eastern Branch, in full view of the burning Capitol, and spent the night near Alexandria.

Coming back the next morning, he reached the Yard about a quarter before nine. The story of the Navy Yard's destruction is too well known to need repetition, but Captain Tingey's own account of the conditions he found is worth remembering. After noting the demolition of the buildings and the ruin of the shipping, he says:

"It appeared that they [the British] had left the Yard about half an hour when we arrived. I found my dwelling house and that of Lieutenant Haraden untouched by fire, but some of the people of the neighborhood had commenced plundering them; therefore hastily collecting a few persons known to me, I got some of my most valuable materials moved to neighbors' houses out of the Yard, who tendered me their offers to receive them, the enemy's officers having declared private property sacred. Could I have stayed another hour, I had probably saved all my furniture and stores, but being advised by some friends that I was not safe I therefore again embarked in the gig, taking along out of the Branch one of the new launches, which lay safe I had no sooner gone than such a scene of devastation and plunder took place in the houses (by the people of the neighborhood) as is disgraceful to relate; not a movable article from the cellars to the garrets has been left and even some of the fixtures and the locks of the doors have been shamefully pillaged."

Ghosts, Washington's Most Famous Ghost Stories, by John Alexander, The Washington Book Trading Company, 1988

Call it interservice rivalry if you will, but the Navy's original commandant occasionally surveys his old home grounds too. Captain Thomas Tingey supervised the building of the Washington Navy Yard from his home--Quarters A--during the second decade of the nineteenth century. It was also Captain Tingey who personally set fire to the yard in 1814 to keep it from falling into the hands of the advancing British troops; and it was the same Captain Tingey who directed the Navy Yard's reconstruction after the war.

For some twenty-four years, Captain Thomas Tingey lived in the rambling mansion that had been built by Benjamin Latrobe. He and his wife had become quite reluctant to part from it--even in death. Old newspaper articles say that Captain Tingey willed the home to his wife, but the government had other ideas. The Navy fought and won the right to retain possession of the property.

Apparently that bitter battle in the courts didn't sit too well with the spirit of Captain Thomas Tingey. The ghost of the harassed commandant has been seen regularly down through the years--looking out from the upper windows of the mansion--surveying the Navy Yard he helped to build, and defying the Navy to evict him. Some say he holds no malice for his successors, and a few of his successors swear he provided them with inspiration. Captain Thomas Tingey just doesn't seem to want to leave his post.

| Todd, John Payne Todd. In this city on the morning of the 17th instant, John Payne Todd, Esq., in the 61st year of his age. "Ladies of the White House" by Laura Carter Holloway "Paine was notoriously a bad character. His character was the sorrow of his mother's life. Mr. Madison, during his lifetime, bore with him like a father and paid many of his debts, but he was an incorrigible spend thrift. His heartless unprincipled conduct embittered the last years of his mothers life and no doubt shortened it." He involved his mother in serious financial troubles which left her destitute in the last years of her life. Congress, who bought Pres. Madison's papers from Mrs. Madison (and thus removed her debts and left her with a small income), was well aware of Todd's reputation and ensured that the payment for the papers was left in trust to Mrs. Madison, to ensure that her son could not touch the principal. Mrs. James Madison, The Incomparable Dolley, by Ethel Stephens Arnett, Piedmont Press, Greensboro, North Carolina, 1972, p. 238 Very little is known of Payne's life from his birth until he was a young man. He is often mentioned in Dolley's letters as being near-by, but only a few details are given as to what he was doing. He was with his mother in 1794 when she married James Madison. Once when he was a boy in Washington, Dolley was greatly worried about his health and wrote to Anna about his continued weakness: "My prospects rise and fall to sadness as this precious child recovers or declines." In 1805 Dolley was concerned about enrolling him in Bishop John Carroll's school in Baltimore. Different biographers have placed him in different institutions during his early school years, and Irving Brant in His James Madison wrote that Payne completed St. Mary's College in Baltimore where he "studied moral and natural philosophy and French under Father Dubourg." This same teacher at St. Mary's reported to Payne's parents that they had every reason to be please with their son's progress in his studies. Thus far, Dolley seemed happy with his advancement, for she wrote Anna on May 12, 1812: Payne is in Baltimore yet, and as much admired and respected as you could wish. He writes me that Mrs. Patterson and Mrs. Bonaparte are very kind to him, and he is invited out all the time. We intend to send him in a few months to Princeton. About the same time, Sally McKean, the Marchioness Carlos D'Yrujo, gave Dolley some interesting additional information on Payne: Your son Payne has been twice to see me, but unfortunately I was out both times, the Marques saw him, and says he is a fine young man, grown so tall and handsome. I shall make an effort to find him today, and intend to ask him if he remembers that time when a little fellow he pulled off General Van Cortlandt's wig at the very moment he was making me a flourishing compliment. For some unknown reason Dolley's hope for her son to enter Princeton did not materialize. Payne had assisted President Madison in his office in 1813 while Presidential Secretary Edward Coles was absent because of his illness. In the meantime, the War of 1812 was in full swing and the President was hoping to negotiate peace terms with the British through representatives he planned to send to Europe. With some secretarial experience to his credit, Payne Todd, now twenty-one, was appointed as one of Albert Gallatin's attaches for the mission; and the delegation sailed for Europe in the spring of 1813. At the invitation of the Czar of Russia, the Americans first went to St. Petersburg, but the British ... | b. 1792 – d. 17 Jan 1852 | 60 yrs. | R41/230 |

| The National Intelligencer, May 18, 1841 If "it is better to go to the house of mourning than to the house of feasting," it may not be unprofitable to recur to such dispensations of Providence as may afford a useful moral. In the death of Mr. Seth J. Todd, the community at large, as well as his relatives and friends, have met with a severe bereavement. Though his sojourn among us has been comparatively short, it has been a true commentary on the Prophet's grand injunction, "Do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God." His mind was naturally of a retiring contemplative cast, which the voice of the poor and distressed never failed to arouse to a ready and efficient hearing. It might truly be said of him-- "Large was his bounty, and his soul sincere." His friendships were somewhat singular, being stronger and more tenacious in the hour of adversity than of prosperity, as is verified, in several instances, by his proffering the facilities of his name and advice to unfortunate industrious neighbors, raising them from their embarrassments and sending them on their way rejoicing. The writer of this once called on him in a case of death and destitution in the neighborhood. He observed, after a liberal contribution, that he felt obliged to any one for calling on him in such cases. Death had no terrors for him--he met his approach with perfect composure; for he had done his work, and cast himself on the alone merits of his Savior, which he testified to inquirers were now unspeakably precious. He fell asleep with all that benignity of countenance brightened as though already mingling in the joys of the upper sanctuary. "Sure the last end Of the good man is peace. How calm his exit! Night dews fall not more gently to the ground, Nor weary worn-out winds expire so soft." | | | |

Probate Court

The Todd Estate--Will Proved

Yesterday, in the Probate Court, in the case of the estate of the late William B. Todd, who died intestate, his widow and her two daughters, joined by their husbands, renounced all claims to administration, there being no minor heirs, in favor of her three sons, Thomas A.G., Seth J., and William B. Todd. This administration is on the personal property, such as the household furniture, bonds, stocks, and cash, the aggregate estimate of which is $350,000, to administer on which the sons above-named qualified by giving bond in the sum of $700,000.

Todhunter, seventy-eight years old, who had been in the pension and claim business in this city for many years, fell down a flight of steps in the flats at No. 707 13th street northwest, about 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and was instantly killed. The noise made by the fall attracted a number of people to the flats. A colored woman who happened to be passing at the time notified people in the neighborhood. No time was lost in calling for medical assistance. The ambulance from the Emergency Hospital, in charge of Dr. Williams, soon reached the flats. An examination showed that Mr. Todhunter's neck had not been broken by the fall. Coroner Carr was summoned, and he permitted the removal of the body to R.S. Cain's undertaking establishment on 7th street. An investigation of the premises developed that an iron fixture at the head of the steps had been broken. It is supposed Mr. Todhunter, realizing he was going to fall, grabbed this fixture, but it was not strong enough to hold his weight. The deceased was a native of Maryland, having been born near Baltimore. He attended school in his native state and completed his education at Princeton. Long before the war he came to this city and was prominent in official and social life. During the Mexican war he was connected with the War Department, and was sent to fill an important position in New Orleans. He was also connected with other branches of the government, among them the pension office. He finally concluded to abandon official life and enter the claims business. A daughter and son, who live at 1812 16th street northwest, survive him. Suicide

About eight o'clock this morning Mr. T.A.F. Todschinder, a small beer manufacturer on Maryland avenue, Capitol Hill, committed suicide by hanging himself to a beam in the upper story of an old stable in the rear of his premises. When found life was extinct, though he had been absent from his family so short a time that, when discovered, the rope by which he was suspended was severed in the hope that life might be still remaining. The cause of the act is attributable to the worst result of drinking habits, viz: mania-a-potu. Two of the children of the deceased are, as we write this, down the river on a pleasure excursion with the Sabbath School of St. Peters' Church. The deceased was in comfortable circumstances, and owned considerable property.

The Evening Star, August 13, 1858

The Late Mr. Todschinder. A friend of Mr. Todschinder whose suicide was announced yesterday in the Star assures us that it was the result of family difficulties and not of mania potu as has been alleged in the newspapers.

FBI's Clyde A. Tolson, 74, Dies
By Richard M. Cohen
Washington Post Staff Writer

Clyde Anderson Tolson, for years both the number two man in the FBI and J. Edgar Hoover's alter ego, died yesterday of heart failure -- until the last a steadfast defender of the FBI he had helped build and its director who once called him "my strong right arm."

The former associate director, 74, had been in ill-health for about the last 10 years since suffering a stroke in 1964. He was admitted to Doctors Hospital here last Thursday and died at the hospital yesterday morning.

For nearly 20 years, Mr. Tolson and Hoover were inseparable friends. They took turns dining at each others' homes, went to the race track together and even vacationed together -- usually near a race track. In the morning's, Hoover's bullet-proof limousine would stop at Tolson's apartment to pick him up and often the two men would get out on Constitution Avenue NW to walk part of the way to the Justice Department together.

So close were the two that the grief-stricken Mr. Tolson submitted his resignation May 3, 1972, the day after Hoover died, and refused to accept a condolence call from the man appointed as Hoover's temporary replacement, then Assistant Attorney General L. Patrick Gray, III. Gray later was appointed acting director of the FBI.

Mr. Tolson lived out his retirement in the house Hoover had willed to him at 4936 30th Pl., NW, among the antiques and paintings Hoover had collected. In all, he was willed the bulk of Hoover's $551,500 estate -- yet another reflection of the relationship between the two men.

But while Hoover was the out-front -- and frequently outspoken -- FBI director, Mr. Tolson was the seldom seen and nearly anonymous alter-ego. His name surfaced in the press only rarely, and then frequently in letters to the editor in which he defended either Hoover or the bureau. He kept at it even after the death of Hoover and his own retirement. In 1973, for instance he wrote The Washington Post saying there was "not the slightest truth" to a statement by former FBI Assistant Director William Sullivan that Hoover "was not of sound mind" in his later years.

In some of his letters, Mr. Tolson reflected his and Hoover's deep-seated views on what they said dangers of the international Communist conspiracy and the threat it posed o American institutions.

Mr. Tolson's contemporaries in the bureau credit him with an acute sense of "public relations timing," as former FBI assistant director Cartha DeLoach put it yesterday.

DeLoach recalled that Mr. Tolson possessed a photographic memory, and was able to read a memorandum in a flash and virtually recall its contents word for word.

As a result of his ability to speed-read and remember everything he read, DeLoach said Mr. Tolson's desk was always clean -- never a paper on it.

But while Mr. Tolson and Hoover were close friends and alike in many ways a close friend of both said they had strikingly different personalities.

"He had more warmth than Mr. Hoover," said an old associate of both men. "I think he enjoyed life a great deal more. He had a twinkle in his eye for the girls and Mr. Hoover never condescended to that."

But essentially, Tolson was a shy man, in many ways the perfect civil servant. He was born in Missouri and grew up in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. At the age of 18 he accepted a position in the old War Department where he eventually used his stenographic skills to become confidential secretary to Secretary of War Newton D. Baker.

Mr. Tolson remained to serve two other secretaries of War, but in the meantime put himself through college and law school at night. He received both degrees from George Washington University.

It was about that time that he met Hoover, a native Washingtonian, and struck up wha became a life-long friendship. In 1928 -- four years after Hoover became FBI director -- Mr. Tolson joined the Bureau, and was assigned to the Boston field office where his work caught Hoover's attention. With that came a transfer to Washington and a close association with Hoover.

Although later a pre-eminent Washington bureaucrat ... retained his shorthand skills, Mr. Tolson was no slouch with a gun. In 1936 he accompanied Hoover when he personally arrested Alvin "Creepy" Karpis, a murderer and bank robber. The case made headlines coast to coast and did much to enhance the G-Man image of the FBI.

Later that same year, Mr. Tolson shot it out in New York City with Harry Brunette, a gangster and bank robber. In addition, Mr. Tolson played what the FBI later called "a prominent part" in the investigation and apprehension of eight Nazi saboteurs who landed in 1942 on Long Island and Florida.

It was on such exploits -- later grist for countless radio and television shows -- that the FBI built its image and Mr. Tolson his career. By 1947, Hoover created a special title for Mr. Tolson -- associate director.

In that capacity he was number two to one of the most powerful men in Washington -- the keeper of the files. Yet Mr. Tolson's associates found him soft-spoken and self-effacing, a man, they recall, who never lost his temper. And for all his closeness to Hoover, it was understood that Mr. Tolson could never succeed him. He was too old.

In 1970, Mr. Tolson reached the mandatory retirement age of 70, in too poor health to remain with the Bureau and get an exception to the retirement policy. Hoover retired his friend -- and then rehired him, saying he was needed to complete work already under way.

In the end, Mr. Tolson became Hoover's principal heir, receiving the house stocks, bonds and Hoover's personal belongings. But according to John P. Mohr, the now retired assistant to Hoover, Mr. Tolson received none of the celebrated personal files that Hoover reportedly kept.

"He had no files from the Bureau," Mohr said. "I can't think of anyone who was less inclined to have Bureau files than Mr. Tolson."

While his associates describe Mr. Tolson as a man dedicated to the FBI, he somehow found time to tinker with inventing. He sought and received a patent, for instance, on a bottle cap after he cut his finger on one. In addition, he invented -- and had installed -- electrically operated windows, one of which was used by Lyndon Johnson in the White House and one by Hoover himself. The device automatically shut the window at a certain time so a person could go to sleep in a cool room but wake up in warm comfort.

Mr. Tolson, who like Hoover never married, is survived by his brother, Hillory, the executive director of the White House Historical Association. A friend said yesterday it is likely that Hoover's former house would be put up for sale.

In a statement, FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley, said the death of Mr. Tolson left a "great void in he law enforcement field ..."

"As the close associate and confidant of former FBI director J. Edgar Hoover, Mr. Tolson devoted his life to the service of the American people and to effective law enforcement throughout the country."

The FBI announced that services will be conducted Wednesday at the Joseph Gawler's Sons Funeral Home, 5130 Wisconsin Ave. NW, with burial later at the Congressional Cemetery.

Correction

A picture accompanying a story in yesterday's editions of The Washington Post on the death of Clyde Anderson Tolson, former No. 2 man in the FBI, was not one of Mr. Tolson.

The photograph was of Louis B. Nichols, who ranked third in the FBI at the time of his retirement in 1957 and who now lives in Virginia.

Tolson Will Is Challenged By Brother

By Leon Dash and Douglas B. Feaver

Washington Post Staff Writers

Clyde A. Tolson, who was J. Edgar Hoover's closest friend and deputy for decades at the FBI, disinherited his own brother to the benefit and at the suggestion of yet another long-time FBI official, the brother has charged.

In a petition challenging Clyde Tolson's will, brother Hillory Tolson accused John P. Mohr of using "fraud and deceit" to exclude Hillory Tolson from the $500,000 estate, Mohr, generally described as the No. 3 man at the FBI, retired from the bureau June 30, 1972, about two months after Hoover died and Clyde Tolson resigned.

"Before June, 1972, and many years prior o then," Hillory Tolson's petition states, "Tolson suffered physical and mental debility." Tolson, according to the petition, was often incoherent and confused and was unable to walk without aid.

"As a result of (Tolson's) weakened condition, physically and mentally, (Mohr) and those in collaboration with him prevented others, including (Hillory Tolson)," the petition said, "from seeing (Clyde Tolson), who became a virtual recluse.

Hillory Tolson and his two children are Clyde Tolson's only living relatives. The contested will says, "To my brother, Hillory A. Tolson, and his children, James Walter Tolson and Pamela Tolson Holst, I leave nothing by this will."

Tolson's holdings -- $430,000 in cash and stocks, $70,000 in oil and mineral leases in the Southwest and Hoover's house on 30th Place NW -- are left to 13 beneficiaries and two nonprofit associations.

Much of the estate presumably came from Hoover, who left Tolson almost all of his holdings, estimated at $551,500 when he died on May 2, 1972.

| Hillory Tolson, a one-time FBI agent himself, a former official with the National Park Service and now the executive director of the White House Historical Association, referred all questions to his attorney, Rolland Lamensdorf. Lamensdorf said he knew of no specific event or long-standing grievance that would have caused Clyde Tolson to disinherit his brother. "It's surprising to me that what occurred did occur," Lamensdorf said. Only Mohr is named in the petition . . . and coercion" on Clyde Tolson, although there is the suggestion in the petition that other unnamed individuals participated. Lamensdorf would not list other names. There are two Tolson wills that Lamensdorf knows of, he said, one dated in June 1972, and the other the following August. Clyde Tolson died in April of this year. Both specifically exclude Hillory Tolson. Lamensdorf said that the Tolson brothers had not been close in recent years. "Frankly," he said, "I think Clyde Tolson was an extremely dedicated man to the FBI. He restricted himself during and after hours to the FBI . . . He was a very sick man over the last three years of his life." The Washington Post, March 27, 1973, p. B3 Selling to the Highest Bidder By Maxine Cheshire Clyde A. Tolson, the lifelong friend who was J. Edgar Hoover's sole heir, has been quietly selling off the late FBI director's belongings at Sloan's auction gallery here. One batch of valuable paintings and art objects was sold several weeks ago. Another 40 boxes of miscellany, including bar supplies and four pairs of binoculars, were unpacked for bids this past weekend. The high-powered glasses, one pair of which bore Hoover's name, were presumably used for viewing horses at the racetrack, not spying on people. There has been nothing in Sloan's catalog to associate either Hoover or Tolson with the items sold. Officials of the gallery refused to confirm the ownership of the items. The "consignee" had insisted on keeping the transaction private, one spokesman said. Hoover's connection came to light after one group of paintings by American artist Lucien Powell, who died in 1930, was sold on March 3. Two views of the Grand Canyon brought $2,200 and $1,500. Another, titled "Mountain of the Holy Cross," brought $1,500. A prominent journalist who purchased the canvases decided to find out more about the artist by contacting another famous painter of the Western scene, Peter Hurd. According to Hurd, the two most prominent collectors of Lucien Powell paintings in the U.S. were J. Edgar Hoover and the late President Franklin Roosevelt. All three of the paintings in the earlier Sloan auction this month are listed in the inventory of Hoover's estate, filed by Tolson with the District Court. Also sold in that auction were a jade bowl of Hoover's which went for $1,500 and a Pueblo Indian bowl by a well-known wife-and-husband team of potters, Maria and Julian Martinez. It brought $600. Hoover was a collector who regularly attended Sloan's auctions himself. The bibelots and artifacts in his household furnishings were valued for tax purposes at nearly $70,000. An unspecified amount has come on the market in recent months, but most buyers did not know what estate the items came from. | | | |

Edward L. Tolson Dead

Prominent for Years in Local Business Circles

Edward L. Tolson, a member of the firm of Brown & Tolson of 1409 H street northwest and one of the best-known auctioneers of the city, died today at 10:50 o'clock at the family residence, 1006 Park road northwest. The cause of Mr. Tolson's death was a complication of diseases, from which he had long suffered.

Last Friday morning he conducted a sale at his place of business and shortly thereafter complained of feeling ill. He was advised to go home, and later went to his residence, where, a few hours after his arrival, he became worse and his case was regarded as critical. His condition, however, remained unchanged for several days. Tuesday a change for the better was noticed, but this rally was only temporary, for after a few hours of improved condition he began to grow worse, gradually sinking until the end came this morning, as stated.

Mr. Tolson was fifty-seven years of age, and had been a member of the auctioneering firm of Brown & Tolson for a long business period. He had been particularly successful, it is stated, on account of his ability as an auctioneer. He was a native of Maryland, having been born at Seven Oaks in 1849.

Mr. Tolson was married twice. His first wife died some years ago. His second wife was a Miss Bartlett, whom he married about three years ago and who survives her husband. Five children by his first marriage -- Mrs. Marion Phelps, Mrs. C.E. Parsons, Miss Elise S. Tolson and Messrs. Edward L. Tolson, jr., and Sidney S. Tolson -- also survive him.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been made, but it is stated that the services will take place at the family residence Saturday afternoon and will be private. It is understood also that Rev. Dr. J.J. Muir, pastor of the Temple Baptist Church, will officiate.

F.Y. Tolson, Civil War Veteran, Dies At 76
Was Lifelong D.C. Resident, Prominent Mason and Carpenter.
Golden Anniversary Near

F.Y. Tolson, 76 years old, veteran of the Civil War, prominent Mason and lifelong resident of Washington, died at his residence, 1236 F street southeast, yesterday, after a lingering illness. Mr. Tolson was a carpenter, and had done much work in the Navy Yard and elsewhere in the District.

He married Miss Virginia Burgess, May 25, 1875, and the couple had been looking forward toward celebrating their fiftieth wedding anniversary. He is survived by his widow, two sons, Albert and Gilbert Tolson; three daughters, Mrs. Evelyn Walker, Mrs. Hattie Hoepfer and Mrs. Katie Walls; 12 grandchildren, one great-grandchild, and nephews and nieces.

Mr. Tolson was a member of Takoma Lodge, No. 29, F.A.A.M., and the Metropolitan Baptist Church. He fought with a New York regiment during the Civil War.

Funeral services will be conducted at the residence tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Dr. John Compton Ball pastor of the church of which Mr. Tolson was a member, will officiate.

| The Evening Star, January 21, 1892 A Cab Driver Killed Last night John F. Tolson, a well-known cab driver, was killed by being thrown from the box of his cab and striking on his head. Mr. Tolson lived with his wife and four children at 323 M street southwest and was driving his team to the stable in the rear of his house. The team ran into a snow bank and he was thrown from his seat and knocked insensible. He was at once taken to his house, but died in a few moments. Dr. Hazen was called in and found a wound on the top of his head, and it is thought that striking squarely on a jagged stone or piece of ice inflicted the injury which caused death. | | | |
| The Evening Star, January 23, 1892 An Inquest to Be Held Yesterday afternoon it was rumored that John F. Tolson, the cab driver who was found in the alley in rear of his house, had been foully dealt with, instead of dying from the result of an accident, as published in yesterday's Star, and Coroner Patterson, in view of the reports, decided to hold an inquest in the case. There is no evidence so far as could be ascertained this afternoon that foul play took part in the case, and the dead man's wife does not believe that there is any truth in the rumor. The deceased suffered from heart trouble and at times he was affected with spells of dizziness. This afternoon Deputy Coroner Schaeffer made an autopsy on the body and an inquest will be held at the fourth precinct station at noon tomorrow. Tolson was a member of Meade Post, G.A.R., and the funeral will be conducted by members of that organization. | | | |

Miss Mary A. Tolson Dies of Pneumonia

Was for More Than Twenty-Five Years Employe in Register of Wills' Office

Miss Mary Aline Tolson for more than 25 years an employe of the office of the Register of Wills, died Sunday at Garfield Hospital, of pneumonia after an illness of six days.

Miss Tolson, who was the daughter of the late Frank B. and Alice Bowie Tolson, came of an old Maryland family, having been born on the Tolson estate, at Weston, Prince Georges County, Maryland. She is survived by three nephews -- Robert Jones, Page Jones, Frank Tolson Jones, and one niece, Aline Jones of New York.

Funeral services were held at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Fourteenth street and Columbia road this afternoon. Interment was at Congressional Cemetery. Pallbearers were John L. Edwards Copeland P. Jones, Robert C. Jones, Clarence Baden, Howard Duckett and Marshall Bowie, relatives of the deceased.

Miss Tolson, through her long experience in the office of the Register of Wills, was an expert on probate law and was known to practically all the members of the bench and bar of the District of Columbia. She had been in active charge of all of the docket books in the register of wills' office for a number of years.

In Memoriam

Tolson. A memorial tribute of loving remembrance on the death of Mr. Watkins Tolson. The 30th of March 1897, at 1:40 a.m. he passed to his reward from his late home, Rose Cottage, in Woodburn. His illness was one of long and patient suffering, which he bore with Christian fortitude. He suffered much and lingered on the shores of mortality until March 30, when he sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. He bore pains which were excruciating without murmuring. He gave satisfactory assurance of his future abode of bliss, and thus after a pilgrimage of 57 years spent in the bosom of the M.E. Church, his happy spirit took its departure to heaven. We committed his loving remains to the grave in Congressional cemetery. His loving children and grandchildren, with a large number of friends, were present. A suitable discourse was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Canter, pastor of Mt. Vernon M.E. Church, of which he was a member. Mr. Watkins Tolson was born in Prince George's county, Maryland, of a distinguished family, highly connected, and a gentleman by birth and character in every sense of the word. He leaves a loving and devoted with to mourn his loss. Katie Ray

| Tompkins. On Saturday, September 6, 1913, at his residence, 132 C street northeast, Judge Charles M. Tompkins. Interment (private) Monday, September 8 at 2:30 o'clock. The Evening Star, September 8, 1913, p. 16 Charles M. Tompkins is Dead, Aged 91 Years Former Lawyer and Judge and Many Years Employee of Pension Office Judge Charles M. Tompkins, for many years an employee of the pension bureau, died Saturday at his home, 132 C street northeast, aged ninety-one years. Funeral services were held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the residence. Rev. Dr. William I. McKenney, pastor of Wesley Methodist Episcopal Chapel, was the officiating clergyman, and interment was in Congressional cemetery. Judge Tompkins was a native of Westchester county, N.Y. Born at Somers in 1822 he was graduated from New York University in 844. Removing in the summer of 1847 to Fond du Lac, Wis., he became identified with the grain, lumber and warehouse business, and engaged in the practice of law, later serving as district attorney for Fond du Lac county and judge for the counties of Fond du Lac and Calument, and postmaster of the city. Coming to Washington in May, 1861, Judge Tompkins entered the pension office, where he remained for forty-nine years, serving on the board of review. Judge Tompkins numbered among his ancestors former Gov. Daniel D. Tompkins of New York and Dr. Elias Cornelius, surgeon in the revolutionary army, who enjoyed the friendship and confidence of Gen. Washington. He is survived by one daughter. The Evening Star, August 13, 1902, p. 6 Valuable Servant Judge Tompkins' Long Career in Pension Bureau 80 Years Old Today Entered the Service Under Barrett May 9, 1861 During Forty-One Years He Has Never Been Late or Tardy--His Recollections Few men remain four-score years sound in mind and body. Today Judge C.M. Tompkins, dean of the pension office, was congratulated by friends in the office on his eightieth birthday. He is still alert and active--never late or tardy--and to all appearances able to render good service for some years to come. Judge Tompkins entered the bureau as clerk May 9, 1861, when it contained less than 100 employees, and now it outranks some of the departments in the scope and importance of its work. That he has been in the bureau continuously for over forty-one years is good evidence that his service and experience are considered valuable to the government. To know that during this long period of service he has had the confidence of his superiors in office and good will of his associates is of itself gratifying, and he considers it the most fortunate part of his life to have served under three of the most illustrious men of the country--Lincoln, Grant and McKinley. Judge Tompkins went to his desk in the pension bureau today as usual Throughout the day friends called to express the wish that he may live to celebrate many birthday anniversaries. The mail brought him not a few letters of congratulation. Long and Active Career This venerable servant of the government was born August 13, 1822, in Westchester county, N.Y. After pursuing the usual academic course in his native town (Somers) he entered the university in the city of New York in 1840, and graduated in 1841. Among his classmates were Dr. Howard Crosby and A. Oakey Hall of New York. Theodore Frelinghuysen was at the time chancellor of the university and ran for Vice President on the ticket with Henry Clay Judge Tompkins reverts with pride to the fact that his first vote was cast for "Clay and Frelinghuysen." Having prepared himself for the law, he moved to Wisconsin in the summer of 1847 and settled in Fond du Lac. In 1848 Mr. Tompkins was nominated for the office of district attorney for the county on the Whig ticket, running ahead of his ticket. In 1850 he was elected judge for the counties of Fond du Lac and Calumet, which office he held for four years. Shortly after his election he was appointed postmaster of the city, serving nearly the whole of President Fillmore's administration. In 1849 Judge Tompkins was married to Miss Amelia Davis of Fond du Lac, eldest daughter of Col. C. Davis, a pioneer, and three children were the fruits of this union, but none survive. | | | |

Judge Tompkins was fortunate in his ancestral relations, being a lineal descendant of Gov. Daniel D. Tompkins of New York, while his grandfather, Dr. Elias Cornelius, was an eminent surgeon in the revolutionary army under Gen. Washington, whose friendship and confidence he enjoyed during life.

Interesting Recollections

"I came to Washington in 1861 to attend Mr. Lincoln's inauguration," Judge Tompkins said to an Evening Star reporter today. I had no thought of remaining here, and probably should not have done so had it not been for Senator Timothy O. Howe of Wisconsin, who was a personal friend.

"'War will break out, and you'll have a chance of seeing something if you stay,' Howe said to me.

"He secured a position for me in the pension bureau, and I have been with the bureau ever since. I witnessed the inauguration of Lincoln that year, and I have been present at every inauguration of a President of the United States since that time. I recall distinctly of attending the reception at the White House on the evening of March 4, 1861, and shaking hands with Mr. Lincoln. There was a vast crowd about the White House, and it was by the greatest effort that I succeeded in reaching the President. I saw Lincoln on various occasions while he was President I lived on the Island, south of the Smithsonian Institution, and he frequently drove near my house

"I called on president McKinley shortly before his death to introduce some friends who were visiting me. An hour after Garfield was shot at the 6th street depot I took a train for Trenton, N.J. I was at Englishtown when the train which conveyed him and his physicians to Elberon passed through. I was at Ocean Grove when he died, and went to Elberon a few hours after his death.

War-Time Excitement

Judge Tompkins gives a graphic description of the excitement in Washington when President Lincoln was shot. At the first battle of Bull Run he heard distinctly the cannonading. He recalls vividly the interest among the citizens of the District of Columbia when General Early tried to invade the national capital, and was only prevented from doing so by the timely arrival of the 6th Army Corps. With a hundred other clerks in the pension bureau he drilled in the open court of the patent office. Joseph H. Barrett was commissioner of pensions when Judge Tompkins first entered the service of the government. Mr. Barrett is said to be living in Cincinnati, and is hale and hearty, despite his advanced age.

"Wonderful changes have taken place in Washington since I first came here," Judge Tompkins said. "Many and many times during the civil war I saw government wagons stalled in the mud. Pennsylvania avenue and 7th street were the only thoroughfares paved with cobble stones. Now you can go to any part of the city on the best of asphalt pavements, and you can walk under shade almost everywhere.

"In those days the people of the city were dependent on omnibuses. Now street cars will take you to any part of the city and miles into the country. Then Washington was a country village; now it is one of the finest residence cities in the world."

Blessed With Good Health

Judge Tompkins is blessed with good health. His hand is as firm and his nerves as strong as those of one much younger. He is strong in mind and body. His home at 132 C street northeast is a pleasant one. The judge often entertains his friends.

A year ago last May, upon the completion of forty years' service in the pension bureau, Judge Tompkins was presented by his colleagues in the bureau with a beautiful silver loving cup. This token of love and esteem has a conspicuous place within his home and he points to it with great pride to all who visit him.

Tompkins, Isaac d. 1 Nov 1834 57 yrs. R49/102

The National Intelligencer, November 4, 1834

In this city, on Saturday morning the 1st inst., Isaac Tompkins, Esq. of Binghamton, New York, in the 58th year of his age, leaving an amiable and affectionate widow and three orphan children to mourn their irreparable loss. Mr. Tompkins had been for several years an extensive stage proprietor and mail contractor, in which he had gained the entire confidence of the department and of the public. As a gentleman of honor and integrity he was unsurpassed. If a conscientious discharge of all the relative duties of life, both public and domestic, combined with the highest degree of philanthropy and benevolence in all his intercourse with the world, could afford protection against the shaft of death, he had still lived. But the mandate of Omnipotence is irrevocable; Dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return! He died in peace, and in the confident hope of a glorious resurrection. Though from home, his funeral, which took place on the 2d inst. was attended by a numerous concourse, who testified by their undissembled sorrow the respect which was borne to him in life, and the honor due to his memory while slumbering in death.

Death in Hotel Fire

Fourteen Persons Perish in Chicago

Many Suffocated

Hotel Lincoln a Veritable Fire Trap

The Place Was Crowded With Visitors to the Live Stock Show

Chicago. December 4--Fourteen persons, along the scores crowded into the Lincoln Hotel at 116 Madison street, met death shortly before 6 o'clock this morning in a fire which will pass into local history as one of the most horrible Chicago has ever experienced.

Death came suddenly to a few but with awful slowness to others who were penned in the death trap and suffocated or burned to death. Some died in their rooms some chanced all in jumping and lost, while others were found in the hallways, where they had expired with their fingers dug into the cracks of the floor. All of the bodies were recovered, as the hotel was not destroyed.

The Death List

Following are the identified dead: M.M. Handy, Janesville, Wis.; Edward Toner, Milwaukee; H.K Wood, Lebanon, Ind; BF Boswell, Chicago; Samuel L. Yocum, Davenport, Iowa; J.C. Yocum, Davenport, Iowa; F.L. Ewing, Marietta, Ohio; A.B. Coon, Marengo, Ill.; T.V. Slocum, Waconda, Ill.; Ward Lowe, Minneapolis; F. W. Carey, Bucyrus, Ohio.

Three others, including one who died on the way to the hospital, had not been identified up to noon.

The victims were taken to Rollston's morgue, and all day the place was filled with anxious people interested in the dead or seeking to assure themselves of the safety of friends or relatives.

The building was a fire trap of the worst kind according to experts. There were but two exits, a narrow stairway leading down the four floors of the building and an uncompleted fire escape in the rear.

Fire Escape Gives Way

The fire started on the second floor, presumably from a lighted cigar dropped on the carpet. Guests occupying upper rooms at the front part of the hostelry, aroused by the screams of a woman, were able to escape down the stairway, and about thirty people reached safety by means of the fire escape. To add to the horror, however, this gave way while others were attempting to escape, and three men were dashed to death on the pavement of the alley below.

For the people still in the rear rooms, there was now no escape save by jumping. The stairway was in flames and the fire escape gone. Horror-stricken faces appeared at the windows and cried frantically for help. Firemen cried back to them to wait until nets or mattresses could be brought and those who did in most cases escaped with slight injuries. But some crazed with fright, jumped to the pavement and were either killed or badly hurt.

With great difficulty the fire, although comparatively a small one, was subdued, but it was some time before the rescuers could penetrate the dense bank of smoke which filled the place. It was an awful scene which met their gaze. The dead or unconscious were lying stretched on the floors, or in some cases on their beds. Some had attempted to slip on a garment before making for the street, but had been overcome, but most of them were in their night clothes.

Stores Full of Half Clad Guests

Every store and other hotels in the vicinity were filled with men and women who had escaped with only their night gowns. An investigation will be made. A fire wall around the freight elevator and other precautionary alterations had been ordered some time ago, but the matter had been neglected.

Firemen and policemen were not reticent in speaking of what they witnessed at the catastrophe. They condemned the building as a "fire-trap."

Ambulances and patrol wagons from all parts of the city were called to the place and the dead and injured were quickly attended.

All but fourteen of the guests at the hotel were out-of-town patrons. Most of them came to Chicago to attend the international live stock show. Up to 10 o'clock last night persons were taken in at the hotel and in every room or place in which a cot could be erected, it is said, guests were accommodated. A large number of stockmen with their families were turned away after the hotel was filled.

Shortly after the fire broke out the firemen rushed up the stairway into the place and began the work of rescue. Men, women and children were carried down ladders, fire escapes and smoke-filled halls.

Thrilling Rescue of Mother and Son

In one instance a fireman of engine company No. 2 saved a woman from running to the rear of the building to certain death on the fourth floor, only to be forced to drop her from the third floor to the roof of the building at 178 Madison street. The woman held her seven-year-old son in her arms. She was Mrs. J. Sheppard, and her son is named Frederick. She was then carried from the roof of the building to the Brevoort House, where a physician was summoned. It was found that their injuries were slight.

The building is constructed of brick, with but one stairway leading to the upper floors and a fire escape in the front of the building.

E.C. Weber, the night clerk, was one of the first persons to discover smoke on the second floor. It is believed that the fire began in this section of the building. Weber refused to make any statement, and after he had secured possession of the hotel register he was taken to the central station, where he is being detained.

A short time after the fire was discovered consternation reigned in the upper floors. Mrs. Sheppard's son was one of the first to be awakened by the presence of smoke. He awakened his mother, and both began screaming. Many persons were thus warned of the danger and made their escape.

J.E. Herbert's Jump

J.E. Herbert of Salineville, Ohio, jumped from the fourth floor, where he had been sleeping. He struck on the roof of 178 Madison street, where Mrs. Sheppard fell. His right leg was broken and he suffered internal injuries. He was taken to the county hospital.

W.J. Thomas, a mail clerk of Cedar Rapids, jumped through a window on the fourth floor, and in his blind haste narrowly escaped falling to the street. He managed to make his way to the fire escape and climbed to the ground. Previous to Thomas' escape twenty-five to thirty persons had climbed down the fire escape to the street. All were in their night clothing.

Allen Oldorf of Milwaukee made a perilous descent from the fourth floor by scaling the wall by means of the iron shutters. Oldorf stated that he had seen at least a dozen persons on the top floor, vainly endeavoring to make their way from the building by means of the front stairway.

Many of the bodies were found in the beds in positions of slumber. Others were found in the hallways, lying face downward, in positions that mutely portrayed how they had vainly endeavored to save their lives. Some were half-clad and others wore nothing but night clothing. It was by means of articles and letters in the pockets of what little clothing some of the dead persons wore that many identifications were made.

Proprietor's Statement

P.A. Smith, proprietor of the hotel, says: "I am certainly not to blame for this awful catastrophe. Three weeks ago the agents of this building were notified to place a stairway in the rear of the building, and also to build a fire wall around the freight elevator shaft in the rear. The contractors came and looked the building over, but nothing was done. Last night our seventy rooms were all filled, and I should judge that we had about 125 or 150 guests. From what I can learn, the fire started in the rear of the building on the second floor. This probably accounts for the escape of guests who occupied front room son the upper floors They had an opportunity to reach the stairway before the flames reached that part of the building, but the occupants of the rear rooms were cut off by the flames. Most of our guests last night were persons who came to Chicago to visit the stock show and knew little of the building."

Chief Musham of the fire department said that in some ways it was the worst fire he had attended during his career as a fireman, and that so dense was the smoke that it was impossible to reach the imprisoned guests, who died like rats in a cage. When the firemen finally managed to make their way into the room the sight that met their gaze was appalling. Men and boys lay about the floors of the rooms and hallways where they had fallen in their eagerness to escape.

Veritable Fire Trap

"The building," said the chief, "was one of the worst fire traps I have ever seen. The floors in places had cracks in them large enough to drop a penny through and the smoke just sifted through and suffocated the inmates of the rooms before they had time to make their way into the hallways."

From what could be learned from persons who escaped from the building, it appeared that the fire was accidentally started, probably by dropping a lighted cigar on the carpet in the hallway on the second floor. The smoldering fire filled the building with heavy smoke and several were suffocated.

Resident of Washington

Edward T. Toner Once Member of Columbia Typographical Union

Edward T. Toner, the compositor who lost his life in the Lincoln Hotel fire in Chicago Thursday morning, as stated in The Star, was a native of this city and a member of the local typographical union. He served as secretary of the union several years ago. The deceased was forty years old. His wife and three children survive him. They are living at 228 A street southeast, in this city. Thomas W. Toner, father of the deceased lives at 1119 G street southeast.

About five years ago Edward Toner went to Denver, Col., where he was employed on the Rocky Mountain News. Later he moved to Milwaukee, where he worked on the Free Press and Milwaukee Sentinel. Two months ago he went to Chicago and obtained a position on the Chicago Inter-Ocean. His wife received a letter from him last week, in which he spoke of coming home to spend the Christmas holidays.

Mrs. Toner first learned of the fatality last night when she read in The Star an account of the fire. Later she received a dispatch from a Chicago undertaker telling of her husband's death. The undertaker was instructed to prepare the body for burial and express it to this city. It is expected it will reach here tomorrow. Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

Injuries Were Fatal

Death of Little Child From the Effects of Burns

Helen May Torbert, three years old, died at the home of her parents, No. 111 C street southeast, about 9:30 o'clock last night from the effects of burns received during the afternoon. The deceased was the youngest of four children of John B. Torbert, a clerk in the Post Office Department.

Mrs. Torbert left her child asleep in the crib yesterday afternoon in a room on the upper floor, while she went about the house attending to her household duties. She was attracted by the cries of her child, and upon reaching the room she was horrified at finding the child's clothing a mass of flames. The mother grasped a blanket and soon had the blaze extinguished, but not before the babe had received fatal burns. It is supposed the fire resulted from the child playing with matches. The crib in which the little one slept was near the mantel, on which matches were kept. The child evidently got hold of a match and by some mysterious manner ignited it. A physician was called and the patient was given the best treatment possible. The funeral took place this afternoon.

Zeverly, "Residences in City Hall Neighborhood," Columbia Historical Society, Vol. 6

The second door west from this row, now numbered 322, was once the property and home of Rev. Horace Stringfellow, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church from 1840 to 1846. Early in the fifties he sold it to Jas. M. Torbert, who made his home there for nearly thirty years, up to the time of his death, in 1880. Mr. Torbert was born in Delaware in 1802, and became a resident of this city in 1831, and at the time of his death (1880) had been a clerk in the Treasury Department for forty years. His wife, born in Virginia in 1815, was the daughter of Mrs. Eliza Peyton, whose home will be mentioned in another page of this paper. Besides three sons there also two daughters of Mr. Torbert still residents of the District, one at Bethesda and one in the city. Mrs. Torbert died here in 1860. The sons are also living in this city; the elder, John P. Torbert, having been a resident of the eastern section of the city for many years, and actively associated with St. Mark's Episcopal Church (now the pro-cathedral church of this diocese) since it was completed.

Death of John P. Torbert

Deceased Was Lifelong Resident of This City

Announcement of the death of John P. Torbert, a native and lifelong resident of this city, was the cause of genuine sorrow and feeling of personal loss among an unusually large number of personal friends. His last illness began two weeks ago with an attack of pleurisy. A serious heart trouble rapidly developed and resulted in death, which occurred at his residence, corner of 2d and A streets southeast, Saturday evening.

Mr. Torbert was born April 4, 1842, and was educated at private schools and at Rittenhouse Academy. After his school days he followed in the footsteps of his father and became an expert bookkeeper and accountant.

He was employed on the census of 1880 and in 1887 entered the office of the first auditor of the Treasury Department, where he continued until the time of his death.

In 1878 he became a blue lodge Mason identifying himself with Pentalpha Lodge, No. 23. Being by nature a very religious man, he took a deep interest in the workings of his lodge, and after passing successively through the several chains, he became, in 1864, its master, and has since kept up his active interest in masonic affairs. In this works, as in everything he undertook, he evinced an enthusiasm which never flagged and was never discouraged.

For the greater part of his married life, Mr. Torbert resided on Capitol Hill. Shortly after the organization of St. Mark's parish he identified himself with it and became an active member of its communion. As warden and registrar of the parish he served faithfully for many years, and his thoughts to the last were of his many interests in the church.

Mr. Torbert was married, February 2, 1864 to Miss Elizabeth C. Bryant, daughter of the late John Y. Bryant of this city. His wife and three children survive him, the latter being John Bryant and W.S. Torbert of this city and Mrs. W.D. Porter, jr., of Hyattsville, Md.

The funeral will occur from the residence of his son, John B. Torbert, 111 C street southeast, and thence to St. Mark's Church. Interment will be at Congressional Cemetery.

The Evening Star, June 4, 1906, p. 16

Funeral of John P. Torbert

Services Over Remains Tomorrow at 4:30 o'clock P.M.

The funeral of the late John P. Torbert will take place at 4:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the home of his son, Mr. John B. Torbert, 111 C street southeast and will be under Masonic auspices. The cortege will proceed to St. Mark's Episcopal Church, where services will be held and the interment will be at Congressional Cemetery. Pentalpha Lodge, No. 23, F.A.A.M., of which deceased was an honored member, will meet at Masonic Temple at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, when pallbearers will be appointed and the lodge will attend the obsequies in a body.

The death of Mr. Torbert occurred Saturday evening at his home, 200 A street southeast, after an illness from heart disease of about two weeks. He was born in this city April 4, 1842, and spent his entire life here. He was the eldest son of the late James M. and Elizabeth Peyton Torbert and a grandson of Mrs. Eliza Peyton, a resident of the District of Columbia from the time of its organization in 1801.

Deceased in 1867 entered the office of the first auditor for the Treasury Department, where he served continuously until the time of his death. His knowledge of customs law was extensive, and in its application he was considered an authority.

He stood high in local Masonic circles and passed through the several chairs in Pentalpha Lodge until he became worshipful master. He was of a strong religious nature, and to his Masonic work, as to everything else he undertook, he gave his best endeavor. He was also active in church work, having for many years been identified with St. Mark's Protestant Episcopal Church on Capitol Hill, serving as its senior warden and registrar.

Mr. Torbert was married on February 2, 1864, to Miss Elizabeth C. Bryant, daughter of the late John Y. Bryant of this city. His wife and three children, Mary E., wife of Mr. W.D. Porter of Hyattsville and John B. and W.S. Torbert of Washington survive him.

| Who's Who In The Military | | | |
| Born on August 23, 1788, in New Haven, Connecticut, Totten was appointed a cadet at West Point in 1802; and in July 1805, the tenth graduate of the Academy, he was commissioned a second lieutenant of engineers. After a year as secretary to the surveyor general of the Northwest Territory (an uncle who was also his guardian and a mathematics professor at West Point) he resigned his commission in March 1806, but two | | | | years later he reentered the Corps of Engineers at the same rank. While engaged in the construction of Castle William and Fort Clinton in New York harbor, 1808-1812, he was promoted to first lieutenant in July 1810. Advanced to captain in July 1812, he served as chief engineer of the army on the Niagara frontier during the War of 1812, winning brevets to major in June 1813 and lieutenant colonel in September 1814. For the next 24 years he was engaged in coastal defense and river and harbor work, from 1818 to 1830 in association with Gen. Simon Bernard. He was especially closely connected with the construction of Fort Adams at Newport, Rhode Island. He advanced to major in 1818 and to lieutenant colonel in 1828, and with his promotion to colonel in December 1838 he became chief engineer of the army and inspector at West Point. He held those posts until his death, a period far longer than any predecessor or successor. He continued to serve on various engineering boards, and during the Mexican War he served as chief engineer of Gen. Winfield Scott's army, earning a brevet to brigadier general in March 1847 for his successful planning of the siege of Veracruz. He was a regent of the Smithsonian Institution from its founding in 1846. From its establishment in 1851 until 1858 and again in 1860-1864 he was a member of the Lighthouse Board, and he contributed signally to the solution of several difficult problems of lighthouse construction, notably for those at Seven-Foot Knoll near Baltimore and Minot's Ledge near Cohasset, Massachusetts. He also carried on experiments in the construction of emplacements for heavy ordnance. During 1859-1861 he conducted a detailed inspection of the defense requirements of the Pacific coast. He continued as chief of engineers after the outbreak of the Civil War, receiving promotion to brigadier general in March 1863 when the Corps of Engineers and the Topographical Engineers were merged. He was brevetted major general in April 1864, but he died the following day, April 22, in Washington, D.C. Willett's Point, New York, home of the Engineer School of Application from 1885 to 1901, was renamed Fort Totten in his honor in the latter year on its conversion to a coast artillery fort.

Generals In Blue

Joseph Gilbert Totten, the tenth graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, was born in New Haven, Connecticut, on April 17, 1788. (His uncle Jared Mansfield was the first professor of mathematics at West Point.) Young Totten entered the Academy almost as soon as its doors were open and was commissioned second lieutenant, Corps of Engineers, on July 1, 1805. Including his attendance at West Point, his military career spanned sixty-two years, for the last twenty-six of which he was chief engineer of the army. This period of service was interrupted only once, from 1806 to 1808, when he acted as his uncle's secretary while Mansfield made the first formal survey of the newly admitted states of the Northwest Territory. Totten was a captain of engineers before most of the Civil War generals were born. During the War of 1812, he won the brevets of major and lieutenant colonel for services on the Canadian frontier and in 1818 became major of engineers. After a score of years of distinguished engineering service in many years and fields, he became chief engineer of the army and also inspector of the Military Academy. In the Mexican War he operated as Winfield Scott's chief engineer during the siege of Vera Cruz and was brevetted brigadier general, U.S. Army for gallant and meritorious conduct on March 29, 1847. During the years before the Civil War, Totten was a prominent contributor to a number of areas of scientific advancement, including the lighting of the navigational hazards of the eastern seaboard, the investigation of the effect of the firing of newly perfected heavy ordnance in outmoded gun positions, and the study of the New York, Boston, and San Francisco harbors. Meanwhile he wrote a number of reports bearing on the country's defenses. He continued as chief engineer of the army after the outbreak of the Civil War; in 1863 he was elevated to the grade of brigadier general, U.S. Army; and following his sudden death from pneumonia in Washington on April 22, 1864, was posthumously brevetted major general. General Totten was buried in the Congressional Cemetery.

Who was Who in the Civil War

Totten, Joseph Gilbert (1788-1864)

The chief engineer of the U.S. Army at the beginning of the Civil War, Joseph Totten, had held that office since 1838. An early graduate of West Point (1805), Totten was a veteran of both the War of 1812 and the Mexican War. Serving entirely in the engineers, he had risen to the rank of colonel by 1861. He had also earned brevets, two for the war with Great Britain and one for his service with Winfield Scott in Mexico, especially at the siege of Vera Cruz. During the Civil War, in addition to his regular duties of maintaining harbor channels and defenses and lighthouses, he was responsible for providing engineering officers to the armies in the field and providing special supervision for such projects as the massive defensive ring around the nation's capital which was never really challenged by the rebels because of its strength. On March 3, 1863, the Corps of Topographical Engineers was merged into the Corps of Engineers, and Totten was promoted to brigadier general, USA, in recognition of his heightened responsibilities. While still serving in this office, Totten died suddenly, on April 22, 1864 of pneumonia. He was subsequently brevetted major general in the regular army for eminent service, to rank from the day preceding his death. (Barnard, John G., Eulogy on the Late Brevet Major General Joseph G. Totten).

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Bvt. Major General Joseph Gilbert Totten was born in New Haven, Conn., August 23, 1788. His schoolmate, Ralph Ingersoll, describes him as a bright, noble youth, of fine mind, fond of study, and always at the head of his class, gentlemanly in his deportment, and greatly beloved. He entered the Military Academy Nov. 4, 1802, under the auspices of his uncle, Captain Jared Mansfield, then an Acting Professor of Mathematics at West Point; was graduated from that institution July 1, 1805, when he was promoted to be a 2d Lieutenant of Engineers; and resigned from the Army March 31, 1806 to accompany, as Secretary, his uncle Captain Mansfield, who had been appointed by President Jefferson, Surveyor-General of Ohio and the Northwest Territory. Young Totten, Feb. 23, 1808, re-entered the Corps of Engineers; was promoted to be a 1st Lieut. July 23, 1810, and Captain July 31, 1812, and served, till the outbreak of hostilities with Great Britain, at Castles Williams and Clinton, then under construction, for the defense of New York. At the early age of twenty-four he became the Chief Engineer, in the Campaign of 1812 on the Niagara frontier, of the "Army of the Centre," under General Van Rensselaer, being engaged in the Battle of Queenstown, where our small force, which had crossed the Niagara, after a heroic resistance, was compelled to capitulate to a greatly superior foe. The bearers of two flags of truce having been shot down by the Indians, Colonel Scott himself, fixing a white cravat on the point of the sword, and accompanied by Captains Gibson and Totten (from whose neck the improved signal of submission was taken), marched through a shower of Indian bullets and barely escaped the knives and tomahawks of two savages, who leaped like tigers upon them from the road. Unhurt, as by a miracle, they finally reached General Sheaffe, to whom was surrendered our whole force on the Canada side of the river, consisting of 293 survivors of the fierce battles, and some 600 skulkers, who had done no more fighting than spectators in a balloon might have claimed.

Upon the resignation of General Van Rennsselaer, Totten was transferred, as Chief Engineer, to the Army of the North, under General Dearborn, being in it engaged in the capture of Fort George and the repulse of the British Flotilla on Lake Ontario, near Forty-mile Creek, his "meritorious services" being rewarded with the brevet of Major.

After a short service with Wilkinson's army in the descent of the St. Lawrence River, Totten in 1814 became the Chief Engineer of the forces on the Champlain line of operations, being engaged in the defense of Plattsburg, which he had fortified. In his official dispatch to the War Department giving an account of this signal victory, the commanding general "recommends to the particular notice of the government" eleven officers who had "distinguished themselves by their uncommon zeal and activity, and had been greatly instrumental in producing the happy and glorious results of the siege." Of these eleven, three were the officers of engineers, -- Totten the chief, and DeRussy and Trescot his assistants,--all of whom were brevetted for their "gallant conduct at the battle of Plattsburg." After his skill and labors had given such eminent results to his country, Bvt. Lieut.-Colonel Totten joined General Izard on the Niagara, soon after the successful sortie from Ft. Erie. This fort being of no further use to us, Totten, with the sanction of the General, mined it, and Nov. 5th laid it in ruins—one of the last acts of this war against Canada. Totten's military experience with his mathematical training at West Point, admirably fitted one of his acute intellect for what was destined to be the great labor of his life,--planning and constructing seacoast fortifications.

During the Revolution some of our more important harbors had been fortified with feeble earthen works, and from that time till the close of the second war with Great Britain, many small, weak, and ill-designed forts and batteries were built by foreign engineers in our service, of cheap and perishable materials. The only large casemated work was Castle Williams, on the Montalembert system, built in 1807-10, in New York harbor.

A permanent Board of Engineers was created Nov. 16, 1816, General Bernard, the great constructor of the citadel of Antwerp under Napoleon, being at its head, with Colonel McRee and Lieut. Colonel Totten members, to which was confided the labor of working out the fundamental principles and elaborating the projects for durable works to defend our entire seacoast. The masterly reports of this board, most of them written by Totten, laid down the great principles of national defense so forcibly and incontestably that they have ever since been the safe guides to all succeeding boards; and, though often ably attacked, have stood firm against all assaults. Till 1838, when Totten became Chief Engineer of the Army, he continued most of his time on the Board of Engineers, though after 1825 he was also the constructor of Ft. Adams, Newport harbor, R.I., the second work in area in the United States, and the first in its combination of the principles and details of the art of fortification. When this fort was commenced, little was known of building great structures in this country; hence he had to make numerous experiments to test the qualities and adaptabilities of almost every kind of material.

Besides these military works, he was often called upon to devise and direct harbor and river improvements, and other important civil constructions for the government, states, cities, and corporations; and, as Chief Engineer, was ex-officio Inspector of the Military Academy, having charge of the general direction of the institution.

For twenty-six years he continued at the head of the Engineer Department, administering with untiring devotion, spotless integrity, and signal ability the varied details, the financial responsibilities, and the professional labors of that arm of service so essential to our national defense and internal development.

In the War with Mexico, General Scott summoned his early companion-in-arms, in whose judgment he had the most unbounded confidence, to aid him with his professional skill in the siege of Vera Cruz, which he directed with such signal ability that he was not only appointed one of the commissioners for arranging the terms of its capitulation, but also was brevetted, March 29, 1847, a Brigadier-General, for his "gallant and meritorious conduct."

In addition to General Totten's multiplied military avocations, he was an active and most useful member of the Light House Board, from its organization in 1852; a Regent of the Smithsonian Institution from its establishment in 1846; a corporator of the National Academy of Sciences, created in 1863; one of the Harbor Commissioners for the cities of New York and Boston; and a member of many scientific associations, to some of which he made valuable contributions.

He rose from the lowest to the highest grade in his branch of the Army; was five times complimented by advance rank for meritorious and distinguished services; became a Brigadier-General by a special act of Congress in 1863, when the Topographical Corps was merged into the Corps of Engineers; after near threescore years of "long, faithful, and eminent services," was brevetted a Major-General in the Army; and the next day, April 22, 1864, breathed his last in the city of Washington, terminating his illustrious career at the advanced age of seventy-five.

General Totten, physically, mentally, and morally, was a remarkable man. Compactly built, with a strong, robust frame, a vigorous constitution exempt from most ailments of life, and with temperate and regular habits, his powers of endurance were astonishing. No elemental changes, no bodily privations, nor any amount of labor seemed sensibly to affect him; and his equable disposition and serenity of thought prevented the disturbance of his even balance and protected him from polemic excitation. His intellect was thoroughly disciplined, system pervaded his daily life, and his perseverance never flagged till the goal of his efforts was attained. The constitution of his mind was remarkably sound, muscular, and of the Baconian order, following more the inductive than syllogistic methods. All his great and varied powers received their direction from common sense, for he was eminently practical,--a thorough man of the world. From the highest he disdained not to descend to the lowest, and the next moment could pass from the microscopic to that which required the greatest amplitude of comprehension. Often would he leave the elaboration of the minutest contrivance at his drawing-table, perhaps to prepare a masterly report on national defense. He devoured books, literary, scientific, and professional, though he "read not to contradict, nor to believe, but to weigh and consider;" hence he was accurately informed, an instructive talker, and a terse, vigorous, and masculine writer, never sacrificing strength to polish. It was because he dug deep that he was able to pile high. Conservative in all his views, he was slow to adopt innovations; yet he was ever foremost to embrace all great professional improvements. With no controversial tendencies and few prejudices, he could weigh deliberately and receive truths as guests, not as enemies. His perceptive were equal to his reflective qualities, nothing, however minute, escaping his eagle eye. His judgment was as sound as his reason, and his almost Draconian sense of justice required of others the measure of right practiced by himself. His self-control was amazing, no murmur escaping him under the severest trials of bereavement or injustice. Thoroughly subjugating his feelings, and disciplined to obedience, not even the persecutions of a corrupt superior, like Secretary Floyd, shook his immutable integrity, which no sophistry could swerve, no power bend, no blandishments veer, and no influence warp, for it was the pole-star of all his actions. But with all his sterner virtues, he possessed in an eminent degree the graces of life. He had a delicate appreciation of music, was a connoisseur of the fine arts, could design and draw beautifully, was distinguished for urbanity of manner and genial social qualities, had the keenest sense of wit and humor, and, above all, possessed that great moral excellence which adorns the Christian soldier and gentleman. In fine, he was a polished, true, and great man; a patriot in its broadest sense; and in an age of soldiers, like that of Louis XIV, or Napoleon he would have been awarded the highest military honors.

General Barnard, in his elaborate eulogy of General Totten, delivered before the national Academy of Sciences, says of him: "He was no trifler with the realities of life, who dallied with them for his pleasure, or who wielded them as instruments of ambition or self-interest. To him, as to all true men, the meaning of life was concentrated in one single word, DUTY. This 'chief end of man,' which is to glorify God by obedience to His laws in the use of the faculties He has bestowed, was his ruling principle,--the celestial cynosure to which his eyes were ever directed, and from which no allurements of lower motives could divert it. Nor was his sense of duty of that frigid, repulsive nature which reduces the conduct of life to a formula, and, substituting rules for emotions, his chief happiness in the pleasures of domestic and social intercourse, but singularly susceptible to everything that ministers to innocent enjoyment ... Gentle, kind and good; mild, modest and tolerant; wise, sagacious, shrewd, and learned; yet simple and unpretending as a child, he died as he had lived, surrounded by hearts gushing with affection, and the object of respect and love of all with whom he had ever been associated.”

The Light House Board, in one of its resolutions upon his death, says, “That the high scientific attainments, the admirable administrative qualities, the perfect knowledge of general principles, the attention to every minute detail of the system, impressed the mental and moral qualities of General Totten upon his associates in a way to make his mind eminently a leading one of the Board, while his sincerity, patience, perfect amiability, and retiring modesty rendered him one of the most charming of associates in executing work to which he was so much more than sufficient.”

Sad Death of Mrs. Mamie F. Toulson

While Suffering From Mental Aberration She

Takes a Fatal Dose of "Rough on Rats"

Mrs. Mamie F. Toulson, wife of Capt. A.R. Toulson, and daughter of Mr. S.N. Hilton, of 110 4th street southeast, died under peculiar circumstances at her father's residence, Saturday night, aged 27 years. Mrs. Toulson was the wife of Capt. Toulson, of Northumberland County, Va., and lived at Norfolk, Va., until about two years ago, when on the birth of her second child she lost her reason. Then she was brought here for treatment, and after several months in the insane hospital, where her condition greatly improved, she went home to her parents. Recently it was noticed that her malady was returning, and strict watch was kept on her, for she had several times attempted to take her life. Saturday she succeeded in eluding the observation of friends, and through a colored boy secured a package of "Rough on Rats," of which she took a large dose. This fact was not communicated to the family until she was seized with spasms, and then Drs. Bayne and Chew were summoned, but she was past recover, and died from the effects of the poison.

Death of Henry C. Towers

Succumbs to an Illness of Two Months

Known in the Forestry Service as Santa Clause From His

Liberality at Christmas Time

Henry Clay Towers died at 1:30 o'clock this morning at the home of his brother, Lemuel Towers, jr., 1432 Belmont street northwest, after an illness of two months.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock next Monday afternoon at his late residence. Rev. Frederick B. Howden, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church of Georgetown, will officiate, assisted by Rev. William Tayloe Snyder, rector of the Church of the Incarnation. Interment will be made in Congressional cemetery. The pallbearers will be Edward J. Stellwagen, David Rittenhouse, Luther S. Fristoe, W. Price, A.K. Parris and William Dove.

Native of This City

Mr. Towers was in the sixty-fist year of his age. He was born in this city and spent his entire life here. For many years he was teller for the banking form of Middleton & Co. Later he organized the firm of Towers & Co., from which later he severed his connection and entered the West End National Bank as paying teller. He resigned this position and July 1, 1901, was appointed to the position of chief purchasing agent of the forestry division, Department of Agriculture, which position he held at the time of his death.

Mr. Towers was a member of St. John's Episcopal Church of Georgetown. He never affiliated with any fraternal organizations, but was an enthusiastic member of the K. of R. Society of this city. His brother, Lemuel Towers, jr., and one sister, Miss Julia L. Tower, survive him. He was the son of Col. Lemuel Towers, who was in command of the Washington Light Infantry when that organization saw about three months' service in the civil war.

Had Many Devoted Friends

Mr. Towers was known and respected by every employe of the forestry service, both in this city and in the field.

His untiring efforts to please his fellow-employes won for him many friends. His annual Christmas treat of a tree for the children of the bureau employes and the distribution of gifts will long be remembered. Each year

Mr. Towers prepared a huge tree, brilliantly illuminated with electric lights and laden with toys, which was placed in the hallway of the forestry building. He would then appear in a "Santa Clause" costume and after greeting the employees and their children with a "merry Christmas" would distribute the toys. Many offers were made by the other employees of the service to aid him in purchasing the gifts, but Mr. Towers always refused, with thanks, saying he desired to be the "Santa Claus" alone.

Towers. On the morning of the 11th instant, John T. Towers, in the 47th year of his age. The funeral to which the friends of the family are invited will take place this afternoon at 4 o'clock moving from his late residence on K street between 8 and 9th streets to Trinity Church on 3d street where the funeral service will be performed.

The National Intelligencer, August 12, 1857

In the demise of this excellent citizen after a painful illness of several weeks duration, we are sure our whole community will feel more than an ordinary share of grief. Mr. Towers was a native of Alexandria, but for the last 30 years a resident of Washington, and one of our most popular and useful men. Possessed of excellent natural powers, cultivated through years of toil in a round of public and private duty, with a disposition at once manly, generous and true, he won early in life the respect and esteem of the people and served them faithfully many years in both branches of the City Councils and very recently for one term as Mayor. In all the relations of life he acted well his part, and has descended to an honorable tomb, leaving to the young men of the day an example of how much may be achieved by well-directed industry and ambition Mr. Towers was in the 47th year of his age.

At his death lived on the North side of K street between 8th and 9th. Funeral from Trinity Episcopal Church.

Death of John T. Towers

The Washington public will grieve to learn that ex-Mayor John T. Towers died yesterday at the residence of his father-in-law, in Montgomery county, Md., of the disease under which he had been wasting away for some months past.

We knew him intimately since the boyhood of both of us, and rarely knew a man in whose nature there were combined more substantial and valuable qualities. He was distinguished for public spirit, frankness, liberality and good sense as a citizen, and for all the personal qualities which secure for a man the ardent love of his own family and of those even remotely depending upon him for happiness or success in life. Few men of his age have been of more substantial service to Washington city, the improvement and prosperity of which were always the subjects of unflagging solicitation on his part.

The Funeral of Mr. Towers

Between 4 and 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the funeral procession left the late residence of Mr. Towers, headed by the Grand Lodge I.O.O.F. of the District Central Lodge, and members of the Patriarchal branch, accompanied by Prosperi's band and a band of martial music.

The pall-bearers on the part of the Corporation were—Gen. R. Weightman, J.H. Bradley, James F. Halliday, Samuel E. Douglass, Jonathan T. Walker, Dr. A. McD. Davis, A.G. Seaman, Samuel Bacon. On the part of the Odd Fellows--P.G.M.'s John Mills and John Sessford, and P.G.'s William Cooper and William Hoover.

The line of march was down Massachusetts avenue and Third street to Trinity Church, (Episcopal) in which the deceased was a pew holder.

The bells of the Fire Company No. 6 and of the Fifth Presbyterian Church were tolled during the march.

On receiving the corpse at the house a solemn and affecting dirge, the composition of the leader, Mr. F. Prosperi, was performed by the band.

The services at the church (in the absence of Rev. Mr. Cummins) were performed by Rev. Mr. Pinckney, and Rev. Mr. Hutton, of Brookville, Md. Who ministered by the bedside of Mr. Towers during his illness, and who delivered an instructive and impressive funeral sermon.

At six o'clock, the procession, which was a long one, numbering some sixty carriages containing the family and friends of the deceased, Corporation officers, etc., left Trinity Church for the Congressional Cemetery. At the grave the concluding rites of the Episcopal Church were performed by the Rev. Mr. Hutton, and the impressive service of the I.O.O.F. was performed by P.G.M. John T. Clements, who officiated as chaplain.

From early manhood he was prominent in local military affairs, entering first the old National Blues (afterward the Grays), under Gen. Peter F. Bacon and subsequently the Washington Light Infantry. When the civil war was inaugurated he was captain of Company A of the battalion, and the company which entered the United States service was commanded by him. When this service expired, being acquainted with the upper Potomac, he served for a short time under General Patterson in the neighborhood of Winchester. He had command of the 1st District Regiment subsequently, and was provost marshal of Alexandria, Va., for several months during the war. He had the honor of commanding the first volunteer company which entered the service, and which, in May and June of 1861, with other companies of the District, had charge of the Chain bridge, where good service was done in preventing intercourse between the opposing hosts. On one occasion the force prevented President Lincoln from possible capture, when he was too closely approaching the lines of the enemy.

For some years Colonel Towers had been an invalid at his home presiding there with a family of three sons and a daughter, in the house he moved into from 6th street between G and H streets, over fifty years ago.

Funeral of Col. L.W. Towers

Six of His Nephews Act as Pallbearers -- Tribute to His Worth

The funeral of the late venerable Col. Lemuel W. Towers took place from the old family residence, No. 817 K street northwest, at 2 o'clock this afternoon. During the entire morning there were callers constantly coming to offer sympathy to the family and take a last look at the features of one they had esteemed so highly.

The body reposed in a heavy casket, covered with black cloth and heavily trimmed with silver, and the well-known features of the dead man were almost lifelike, seeming more as if in the repose of sleep than set for eternity. The casket was covered with exquisite floral offerings and the mantels of the parlors and their corners were filled with similar remembrances.

The services were attended by a large number of the old citizens of the District, and of representatives of the Washington Light Infantry, of which Col. Towers was one of the organizers, in 1836. The infantry had expressed a desire to designate six of its officers to serve as pallbearers, and to turn out the battalion as an escort of honor, but the family regretfully declined, preferring no display and wishing to continue the Towers custom of having immediate relatives act as pallbearers.

Rev. F.H. Barton of St. John's Church, Georgetown, conducted the services, and paid a feeling tribute to the high and manly qualities of the dead and the charity which always characterized his acts and his opinions.

At the conclusion of the services at the house the remains were taken to Congressional cemetery, where they were buried in the Towers family lot. The pallbearers, who were all nephews of the dead man, were William H. Towers, C.M. Towers, W. Scott Towers, William P. Towers, James M. Towers and John T. Towers.

The surviving children of the deceased, who are Mr. Harry C. Towers of the West End National Bank, Mr. Lemuel W. Towers of the Columbia Fire Insurance Company, Mr. J.V.R. Towers of the government printing office and Miss Julia Towers, and a number of near relatives and old friends, accompanied the body to its last resting place.

Biographical Directory of the United States Congress 1774-1989

A Representative and Senator from Connecticut; born in Franklin, Conn., February 2, 1755; was graduated from Yale College in 1778; studied law; was admitted to the bar in 1781 and commenced practice in Litchfield, Conn.; major general of militia (Connecticut Men in the Revolution lists the name of Uriah Tracy, in a company that marched from sundry places for the relief of Boston, etc., in the Lexington alarm, 1775, and were formed into an independent and ranging company at Roxbury. The military services of Senator Tracy were of a clerical nature for a short period.); member of the State house of representatives 1788-1793, serving as speaker in 1793; State's attorney for Litchfield County 1794-1799; October 13, 1796; elected to the U.S. Senate to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Jonathan Trumbull; reelected in 1801 and 1807 and served from October 13, 1796 until his death; President pro tempore of the Senate May 14, 1800; died in Washington, D.C. July 19, 1807; interment in the Congressional Cemetery.

 First burial of a public person in the new cemetery ***

The National Intelligencer, July 22, 1807

Departed this life on the 19th inst. in the 54th year of his age, Uriah Tracy, a Senator of the United States, from the state of Connecticut; and on the following day he was interred with the honors due to his station and character, as a statesman, and to his rank as a major general; his pall being supported by the heads of departments and officers of government.

For many years he experienced frequent and severe sickness, and his last illness commenced on the 4th of March last, while attending the funeral of Mr. Baldwin, his former fellow student, and late colleague in the Senate.

In his youth he received a liberal education, and the early part of his active life was devoted to the practice of the law. He was ever an able, popular, and pleasing advocate, and rose to eminence, by the strength of his talents and steady devotion to business.

His last fourteen years were devoted to the service of his country, in her national councils, where he was long and distinguished member, admired by his political friends, and respected by his opponents.

In wit and humor he was unrivaled -- in delivery graceful and perspicuous -- and in argument acute and lucid.

His speeches were sometimes perhaps tintured with severity; but the ardor of debate, the rapidity of his ideas, and the impetuosity of his eloquence constituted an apology. He was firmly attached to the principles of the late administration, which he ever maintained. For some years past, of consequence he has been in opposition: yet he possessed a due share of influence in the body to which he belonged. His death will be deeply deplored by his friends, and from the actual talents he possessed, may justly, be considered a national loss.

Ely, Selden Marvin, "The District of Columbia In The American Revolution and Patriots of the Revolutionary Period Who Are Interred in the District or In Arlington," Columbia Historical Society, Vol 21, pp. 128-154

Senator Uriah Tracey, of Connecticut. "Connecticut Men in the Revolution" lists the name of Uriah Tracey in a company that marched from sundry places for the relief of Boston, etc., in the Lexington Alarm, April, 1775, and were formed into an independent and ranging company of Roxbury. The military services of Senator Tracey were of a clerical nature for a short period. There is nothing on his grave to permanently record his army connection. He was the first congressman to be interred in Congressional Cemetery. This occurred July 19, 1807, by exhumation from Rock Creek.

Loses His Life by Drowning

Charles Triepel Goes Beneath Ice on a Pond

Little Dog Returns Home Apparently Distressed

Members of Police Force Recover Body

A fox terrier belonging to Charles Triepel, a Western High School boy, entered his master's house, 2516 17th street, late yesterday afternoon dripping wet, with muddy feet and whining as if he had been whipped. He acted so queerly that Charles' mother became alarmed. Later, when her son did not return to dinner she was extremely worried. It was the first time the boy had missed a meal at home in his life.

The harbor police found his body this morning under the ice of a skating pond near the western end of the bridge, the other end of which is at the Chevy Chase street car loop.

Charles was very fond of skating and as there has not been very much ice this winter he made frequent explorations to find good ponds. He probably walked across the bridge with his dog soon after school was out yesterday, and seeing the ice on the pond below him went down to investigate.

The ice near the edges of the pond looked safe, and he ventured out, but he had not gone more than twelve feet when it cracked. Perhaps he slipped, and the impact of the fall broke the ice. The water of the pond is quite deep--at least nine feet--and when Charles found himself submerged there was no foothold beneath him.

Wore Heavy Overcoat

He wore a heavy overcoat, and there was hardly a chance for him to save himself. He could not move freely, and the icy water benumbed his arms and legs.

It is probable that he threw his arms out on the ice in an effort to pull himself from the water. His handkerchief, found on the edge of the hole, might have been used to help get a grip on the slippery edges.

Charles' half brother, Bogart Triepel, searched for him last night. Knowing that the boy was fond of skating, he began this morning a systematic search of the skating places where Charles was known to go. It was Bogart who found the cap and handkerchief lying beside the hole in the ice.

He called up the tenth precinct and told the desk sergeant. The later notified the harbor police. They took a small flatboat in a wagon to the pond, pushed it out on the ice, and after a short search found the body.

Pond in Deep Gully

The pond is in a deep gully, and it was a difficult matter to get the boat and the body out, but a large crowd had assembled and helped the police. The coroner had to be notified, and he quickly made out a certificate of accidental drowning.

Charles Triepel's mother is Mrs. Emma M.V. Triepel, librarian of the Treasury Department. Her husband died nine years ago.

Charles would have graduated next year. Miss Edith Westcott, principal of the Western High School, knew him well and was deeply affected by the news of his death.

"He was a fine boy," she said, "and he was a good student. We just finished his report for the half year ending this week. He never had a failure during his whole career in this school, and he stood highest in his class."

Funeral of Drowned Boy

Funeral services over the remains of Charles Triepel, sixteen years of age, who was drowned Tuesday evening in a pond near the Chevy Chase Bridge across Rock Creek, will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow morning at his late home, 2516 17th street northwest. The services will be conducted by Rev. George F. Dudley, rector of St. Stephen's P.E. Church, of which the deceased was a member. Interment will be made in Congressional cemetery. As yet the pallbearers have not been selected.

Pen Women to Attend Funeral Services for Mrs. Emma Triepel

Former Treasury Librarian Who Helped Found Group To Be Buried Tomorrow

MISS EMMA M.V. TRIEPEL

Mrs. Emma E.M.V. Triepel, 76, retired librarian of the Treasury Department, said to be the last surviving founder of the National League of American Pen Women, who died Saturday at her home, 3429 Mount Pleasant street, N.W., will be buried tomorrow in Congressional Cemetery.

The burial will be private, following funeral services at 2 p.m. in St. Stephen's and the Incarnation Episcopal Church. Members of the Executive Board of the National League of American Pen Women and of the District of Columbia branch of the league are to attend the church services.

Mrs. Triepel was appointed librarian of the Treasury Department in 1905 and continued in that position until retired in 1933. For nearly 25 years she prepared a daily summary of news relative to the Treasury Department which was distributed to Government officials.

Wrote for Magazines

At the time of her death, Mrs. Triepel was fifth vice president of the National League of American Pen Women and a member of the District branch.

For many years she was a contributor to the Scientific American, Science News and Seismograph. She also wrote folklore and Negro dialect stories for household magazines and shortly before her death was writing memoirs which she had titled "Tales of a Gatesville Road."

Born in Elizabeth City, N.C., December 16, 1866, the daughter of Judge William E. Vaughan of the Pasquotank County Probate Court, and Mrs. Vaughan, she was educated in the public schools of that section, and taught school there for some years. Twice married, and twice widowed, while still a comparatively young woman, she turned her attention to acquiring a college degree, and about 1910 was graduated from the George Washington University with a bachelor of science degree.

Descendant of Pioneers

Mrs. Triepel traced her family in direct descent from Capt. Francis Mason who settled in Virginia in 1613, and from Gen. Thomas Mathews of Revolutionary War fame. She was a member of the Emily Nelson Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution; Stonewall Jackson Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy; the Col. William Branthwayth Chapter, Colonial Dames of the Seventeenth Century, and the Esther Chapter of the Eastern Star.

She is survived by her son, Lt. Comdr. William Bogart Vaughan Cash, U.S.N.R., on active duty in Washington; a sister, Mrs. Claudia Ness of Baltimore, and her brother, William E. Vaughan of this city.

James Trimble Dies

Came to Washington From Ireland in 1846 -- Two Sisters Survive

James Trimble, a resident of this city since 1846, died Monday at the home of his sister, Mrs. Charles W. Bland, 503 A street southeast. Funeral services were held at the home of Mrs. Bland, this afternoon, interment being in Congressional cemetery.

Mr. Trimble was born July 31, 1845, in the north of Ireland. His parents, William and Lucinda Trimble, came to this country the following year, at the urgent request of Matthew Wright, an uncle, then of advanced age and suffering from an illness that a year later caused his death. Matthew Wright located in Washington about 1790 and at his death left a legacy of $20,000 to the city, the interest on which is paid annually to the Washington City Orphan Asylum and St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum, these being the only institutions of the kind in existence at that time. The fund is now invested in 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia.

Mr. Trimble was unmarried and is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Bland and Mrs. Adam Gaddis, 1017 East Capitol Street.

Kenton N. Harper, History of the Grand Lodge, 1911

p. 382-383: Grand Master, 1897

To Bro. Trimble's marked executive ability and thoroughgoing business methods may properly be given a large share of the honor of successfully launching the New Masonic Temple enterprise, which developed during his administration from a suggestion of Columbia Commandery, No. 2, K.T.

He has for many years been an exceedingly popular official of the District and brought to the position of Assessor, to which he was appointed March 16, 1890, an intimate knowledge of local affairs which enabled him to discharge the duties of that office with the consummate skill bred of long experience.

He was born March 16, 1842, finished his classical education in 1860 at Kenyon College, Ohio, and for two years thereafter was in charge of the preparatory department of a college located at La Grange, Ky. He received the degrees of A.B. and A.M. in regular course from his Alma Mater. Removing to Washington in 1865, he took up the study of law in Columbia (George Washington) University and graduated therefrom in 1867 with the degree of LL.B. The following year he commenced the practice of his profession in Pomeroy, Ohio, in partnership with Judge Lewis Paine, of that place, a distinguished lawyer and an alumnus of Kenyon College, but in 1869 returned to Washington and continued the practice of law until his selection as Assessor, as before stated, which position he held for ten years, when at his own request he was transferred to the Board of Assistant Assessors of Personal Property, which position he now occupies.

During the existence of the District Legislature he was a member of that body, representing the Tenth Legislative District.

While pursuing his studies at Kenyon he became a charter member of Kenyon Chapter of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, for which he still retains his early enthusiasm, being at present the President of the Washington Graduate Association of that fraternity. He was also identified with the Nu Pi Kappa Literary Society and early developed a reputation as an orator, a reputation which later years has broadened and strengthened to an enviable extent. He is a charter member of the University Club of this city, and of the national Geographic Society, the Churchman's League of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and the Oldest Inhabitants' Association, and Vice-President of the Masonic Temple Association. In religion he is an Episcopalian, and since his residence in Washington has been a member and communicant in St. John's P.E. Church, Sixteenth and H Streets, Northwest, being for many years a vestryman of said church and its registrar.

In Masonry Bro. Trimble has for many years been actively interested., He received the Blue Lodge degrees in B.B. French Lodge, No. 15, in 1867, having been entered January 21, passed February 18, and raised March 23, of that year. He affiliated with Pentalpha Lodge, No. 23, May 5, 1880, and served as its Master in 1883, withdrawing therefrom in 1907 to become a charter member of Temple Lodge, No. 32. He received the Capitular degrees in Washington Royal Arch Chapter, No. 2, in 1868, and became High Priest in 1877. He received the Orders of Knighthood in Columbia Commandery No. 2, April 5, 1868; the same year demitted from Columbia Commandery and organized Ohio Valley Commandery at Pomeroy, Ohio, and was elected its first Eminent Commander under the charter. On February 4, 1876 he affiliated with Columbia Commandery.

After filling a number of the subordinate Grand Lodge offices he was elected Grand Master for the year 1897.

December 11, 1878, he was elected and installed Grand High Priest of the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of the District of Columbia and served in that capacity for two successive years.

He is Past President of the Convention of Anointed High Priests. In the A.A.S.R. he has attained the thirty-second degree and been elected Knight Commander, Court of Honor, and Past Wise Master of the Rose Croix Chapter. He is also a member of Almas Temple A.A.O.N.M.S.

Biographical Directory of the United States Congress 1774-1989

A Senator from Ohio; born in Woodford, Ky., April 4, 1786; was graduated from Transylvania College, Lexington, Ky.; studied law, was admitted to the bar in 1811, and commenced practice in Highland County, Ohio; adjutant in the campaign against the Potawatomi Indians in 1812; major of Ohio Volunteers May 7, 1812; taken prisoner at the capture of Detroit, major of the 26th U.S. Infantry March 18, 1813; brevetted lieutenant colonel September 17, 1814, for gallantry at Fort Erie, where he was severely wounded; lieutenant colonel of the 1st Infantry November 30, 1814; transferred to the 8th U.S. Infantry May 17, 1815; resigned March 1, 1819; elected to the U.S. Senate and served from March 4, 1819 until his death in Washington, D.C. December 13, 1821. Interment in Congressional Cemetery.

The National Intelligencer, December 14, 1821

Died, in this city, on yesterday morning, the Honorable William A. Trimble, a Senator of the United States from the State of Ohio, aged 35 years. He came to this city in very ill health from Albany, where he had lain ill for some weeks, and declined gradually from the moment of his arrival to that of his death.

We shall briefly shadow out the life and character of the deceased, as far as our information will enable us.

He was educated for the profession of law, and commenced practice in the year 1811 with flattering prospects. In 1812, the war having broken out, he joined the Ohio volunteers under Gen. Hull, and was elected a Major. He was unusually diligent in the study of military tactics, and made correspondent progress.

He was at the surrender of Detroit, in 1812. In the month of October, in the same year, before he was exchanged from captivity, he attached himself to a regiment of volunteers commanded by his brother, Col. Allen Trimble, who was required by Gen. Harrison to reduce the Pottowattamie Villages on St. Joseph's. He officiated as Adjutant in that expedition, and displayed great vigilance and perseverance.

As soon as exchanged, he received a Major's commission in the Army of the United States.

He was in Fort Erie when it was attacked, and acquitted himself gallantly. He was also engaged in the memorable sortie made from the same place, on the enemy's lines, and there received a wound from which but few supposed he would recover, and the effects of which have brought him to the grave.

In the winter of 1818 he was elected United States Senator from the State of Ohio, and resigned his command in the army. In the discharge of his duties in the Senate, he was assiduous and independent.

He went to the Conferences with the Indians held by Messrs. Cass and Sibley at Chicago, and on Lake Michigan. On this journey he suffered from the inclemency of the weather, and became indisposed.

During his painful illness, he was not heard to repine. He was patient, ardent to accomplish his purposes, and esteemed by all men to be inflexibly honest.

He was not married, but has left a mother and several brothers and sisters to mourn his death.

Owing to the death of Col. Trimble, a Senator from the State of Ohio, no business was yesterday transacted in either House of Congress.

The funeral of the lamented gentleman is to take place this day at 12 o'clock, from the Capitol. He is intended to be buried with the Military honors eminently due to his memory as a gallant soldier, should not the extreme inclemency of the weather prevent it.

The National Intelligencer, Saturday, December 15, 1821

Funeral of Colonel Trimble

The last honors to the remains of our deceased fellow-citizen, were yesterday paid in due form. At half past ten o'clock, the committee of arrangements, pall-bearers, mourners, and marine corps, attended at Mrs. Peyton's boarding house, the late residence of the deceased and the corpse was removed, in charge of the committee of arrangement, thence to the Senate Chamber. On arriving there, it was deposited in the body of the Chamber, the Senate occupying their seats, and the President of the Senate in the chair. Soon after which, the House of Representatives came in, attended by their Speaker and Clerk, the former of whom was invited to seat at the side of the President.

An impressive exhortation was then pronounced by the Rev. Mr. Ryland, who availed himself of the occasion strongly to inculcate the necessity of preparation, whilst in health, for that end to which all must sooner or later come, and for the Hereafter which is beyond it. He concluded by prayer, in which all present joined.

After this, the Funeral Procession moved from the Capitol, headed by the Marine Corps, commanded by Colonel Henderson, with reversed arms, and solemn music. The pall-bearers were Mr. Johnson, of Ky., Mr. Chandler, Mr. Williams, of Tenn., Mr. Taylor, Mr. Benton, and Mr. Stokes. The surviving Senator, and the Representatives from the State of Ohio, were the mourners and most of the Members of both Houses, besides the Secretaries of State and of War, and other public officers, joined in the train.

Neither House of Congress sat yesterday.

A Senator from Ohio; born in Woodford, Ky., April 4, 1786; was graduated from Transylvania College, Lexington, Ky.; studied law, was admitted to the bar in 1811, and commenced practice in Highland County, Ohio; adjutant in the campaign against the Potawatomi Indians in 1812; major of Ohio Volunteers May 7, 1812; taken prisoner at the capture of Detroit, major of the 26th U.S. Infantry March 18, 1813; brevetted lieutenant colonel September 17, 1814, for gallantry at Fort Erie, where he was severely wounded; lieutenant colonel of the 1st Infantry November 30, 1814; transferred to the 8th U.S. Infantry May 17, 1815; resigned March 1, 1819; elected to the U.S. Senate and served from March 4, 1819 until his death in Washington, D.C. December 13, 1821. Interment in Congressional Cemetery.

The National Intelligencer, December 14, 1821

Died, in this city, on yesterday morning, the Honorable William A. Trimble, a Senator of the United States from the State of Ohio, aged 35 years. He came to this city in very ill health from Albany, where he had lain ill for some weeks, and declined gradually from the moment of his arrival to that of his death.

We shall briefly shadow out the life and character of the deceased, a far as our information will enable us.

He was educated for the profession of law, and commenced practice in the year 1811 with flattering prospects. In 1812, the war having broken out, he joined the Ohio volunteers under Gen. Hull, and was elected a Major. He was unusually diligent in the study of military tactics, and made correspondent progress.

He was at the surrender of Detroit, in 1812. In the month of October, in the same year, before he was exchanged from captivity, he attached himself to a regiment of volunteers commanded by his brother, Col. Allen Trimble, who was required by Gen. Harrison to reduce the Pottowattamie Villages on St. Joseph's. He officiated as Adjutant in that expedition, and displayed great vigilance and perseverance.

As soon as exchanged, he received a Major's commission in the Army of the United States.

He was in Fort Erie when it was attacked, and acquitted himself gallantly. He was also engaged in the memorable sortie made from the same place, on the enemy's lines, and there received a wound from which but few supposed he would recover, and the effects of which have brought him to the grave.

In the winter of 1818 he was elected United States Senator from the State of Ohio, and resigned his command in the army. In the discharge of his duties in the Senate, he was assiduous and independent.

He went to the Conferences with the Indians held by Messrs. Cass and Sibley at Chicago, and on Lake Michigan. On this journey he suffered from the inclemency of the weather, and became indisposed.

During his painful illness, he was not heard to repine. He was patient, ardent to accomplish his purposes, and esteemed by all men to be inflexibly honest.

He was not married, but has left a mother and several brothers and sisters to mourn his death.

Owing to the death of Col. Trimble, a Senator from the State of Ohio, no business was yesterday transacted in either House of Congress.

The funeral of the lamented gentleman is to take place this day at 12 o'clock, from the Capitol. He is intended to be buried with the Military honors eminently due to his memory as a gallant soldier, should not the extreme inclemency of the weather prevent it.

The National Intelligencer, Saturday, December 15, 1821

Funeral of Colonel Trimble

The last honors to the remains of our deceased fellow-citizen, were yesterday paid in due form. At half past ten o'clock, the committee of arrangements, pall-bearers, mourners, and marine corps, attended at Mrs. Peyton's boarding house, the late residence of the deceased and the corpse was removed, in charge of the committee of arrangement, thence to the Senate Chamber. On arriving there, it was deposited in the body of the Chamber, the Senate occupying their seats, and the President of the Senate in the chair. Soon after which, the House of Representatives came in, attended by their Speaker and Clerk, the former of whom was invited to seat at the side of the President.

An impressive exhortation was then pronounced by the Rev. Mr. Ryland, who availed himself of the occasion strongly to inculcate the necessity of preparation, whilst in health, for that end to which all must sooner or later come, and for the Hereafter which is beyond it. He concluded by prayer, in which all present joined.

After this, the Funeral Procession moved from the Capitol, headed by the Marine Corps, commanded by Colonel Henderson, with reversed arms, and solemn music. The pall-bearers were Mr. Johnson, of Ky., Mr. Chandler, Mr. Williams, of Tenn., Mr. Taylor, Mr. Benton, and Mr. Stokes. The surviving Senator, and the Representatives from the State of Ohio, were the mourners and most of the Members of both Houses, besides the Secretaries of State and of War, and other public officers, joined in the train.

Neither House of Congress sat yesterday.

| Trott, Benjamin | d. 27 Nov 1843 | | R39/98 |
|------------------------|----------------|--|---------------|

The National Intelligencer, November 29, 1843

On Monday afternoon, after a lingering illness, Benjamin Trott, artist. This gentleman was a native of Boston and it was his proud boast that he had been the intimate friend of the celebrated Gilbert Stuart. Mr. Trott was an enthusiastic follower of his profession. His mind was vigorous, his genius undoubted, and his reputation equal to that of any other engaged in similar pursuits. His style of miniature coloring was rich and decisive, and bore a strong resemblance to the oil paintings of his friend Stuart. He has died far from the land of his birth, but here he has found friends who can mourn over the fate of poor Trott. His funeral will take place this day, at 12 o'clock from Mr. Clary's, on H street north, between 10th and 11th streets west.

Benjamin Trott (ca. 1770-1843)

Benjamin Trott, one of this country's foremost miniature painters, was born in Boston. Where he was instructed is not known; according to his friend William Dunlap, Trott arrived in New York in 1793 having already "attained a great portion of skill" (all Dunlap quotations for Trott: 1834, vol. 1, pp. 414-415, 430).

Trott attracted the attention of Gilbert Stuart (1755-1828), who had recently returned from Dublin in the company of Walter Robertson. A few months later Stuart left New York for Philadelphia, accompanied by Trott. When Stuart painted his first portrait of Washington, Trott made a miniature copy after it (unlocated) which was engraved at least five times. Stuart called the best and closest of his imitators; Trott made many copies after the master. Dunlap observed that Stuart "assisted (Trott) by advice, and recommended him. Trott's blunt and caustic manner was probably to Stuart's taste."

Trott's irrational jealousy and his eccentric nature have been well documented. When Robertson and Robert Field were also in Philadelphia, wrote Dunlap, "Field and Robertson both annoyed Trott. Of Robertson (Trott claimed that) his excellence depended upon the secret he possessed—the chemical composition with which he mixed and used his colors; of Field, that his work was too much like engraving."

In 1797 Trott returned to New York, then retreated to Albany because of a yellow fever epidemic, moved back to New York in 1799, and by 1804 was in Philadelphia again. The following year he packed up the tools of his trade and traveled on horseback through western Pennsylvania, Kentucky, and Ohio, a journey that proved financially successful. He returned to Philadelphia once more in 1806, listing himself in the city directory there every year but one until 1820. Dunlap recorded that in 1806 he himself "became somewhat intimate with Trott and pleased with the pungency of his remarks and amused by the eccentricity of his manners. At this time his reputation was at its height. . . by his distillations and filterings he produced some of the cleanest pigments that I ever used; and he bestowed upon me specimens of all the necessary colors for miniature." Trott was less generous when he met Edward Greene Malbone, who proposed that they exchange examples of their work: "the fame of the young painter annoyed Trott," wrote Dunlap, and he refused. In 1809 Trott shared a house and studio with Thomas Sully.

Trott became a member of the Society of Artists and contributed to their exhibitions at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts from 1811 to 1814. In 1812 a critic signing himself G.M. praised Trott's miniatures for possessing "all the force and effort of the best oil painting . . . and the . . . likeness, dignity of character, expression and harmony of coloring . . . approach nearer to the exquisite productions of Stuart, than those of any other artist in America" (Portfolio, July 182; quoted in Boston, 1944 [see bibliography for Trott], p. 267).

In 1819 Trott traveled south to Norfolk and Charleston. On his return to Philadelphia he married precipitously and imprudently. In 1823 he settled in Newark, New Jersey, where he obtained a divorce and lived in relative obscurity until about 1829. As the vogue shifted from light-colored, translucent miniatures toward opaquely painted ones, Trott's work had fallen out of favor. He moved to New York, avoiding Philadelphia, where he felt he had lost his public. In 1833 he was in Boston. Trott moved to Baltimore in 1839, writing to a friend, A. Woolcot: "I am at present busy painting in miniature how long it may last I can't tell so far I have been frustrated in giving satisfaction to the few I have painted who are of the right kind. I have had many difficulties to encounter besides ill health and the want of money" (January 2, 1839: correspondence in Gratz Collection, Historical Society of Pennsylvania). He died in Washington D.C.

Trott's early copies in miniature after Stuart, such as the portrait Joseph Anthony, Jr. (Yale University Art Gallery, New Haven), reveal his initial indebtedness to his rival, Robertson, as well: backgrounds are dark and densely hatched on the diagonal, and the treatment is labored. As his own style began to develop, the background hatching diminished and the heads of his subjects became large and angular.

| Trott's work is often criticized for its unevenness, but the miniatures from the period about 1800-1825 are generally finely executed and consistent in style. His technique had rapidly matured into an assured, dashing, fluid brushwork applied in natural, clear colors. Backgrounds with a sky motif were treated by floating on thin washes of white and blue and leaving large areas of the pure ivory unpainted. Hatching was confined to the areas on either side of the shoulders. Trott posed his sitters elegantly and usually similarly, with body turned to the left and an almost full face making arresting eye contact with the viewer. Subjects have elongated necks and wear coats with extremely high collars. The coats are rendered with broad washes; the jabots are painted with bold, rapid strokes that heighten the portraits' immediacy. Traces of the preparatory drawing can often be seen. Shadows are articulated in blue around the eyes, nose, and mouth. Men, their hair frequently brushed forward in the coup de vent style, at times appear disheveled—even rakish. For likenesses of women, Trott continued to employ on occasion a dark, hatched background. His late works were undistinguished because of changes in fashion and the effects of his diminished circumstances. Trott rarely signed his miniatures. | | | |

Shot Fatal to Boy Waiting For Mother

Louis Troutman Dies of Wound From Pistol in Hands of Negro

Louis Troutman aged nineteen years, of Capitol Heights, Md., who was accidentally shot in the head last night while waiting to meet his mother at the railway station at 61st and C streets northeast, died at the Emergency Hospital about 10:30 o'clock this morning. From the time he reached the institution last night the surgeons held out practically no hope for his recovery. He did not rally during the night and sank rapidly this morning.

An inquest for investigating the circumstances of the shooting will be held by Coroner Nevitt at the morgue probably tomorrow morning. Arthur Carroll, the seventeen-year-old colored youth who was arrested shortly after the shooting, is being held at the ninth precinct station house and probably will appear at the inquest. Whether Carroll will be further detained in custody or released on the ground that the shooting was purely accidental will be determined by the jury's verdict.

Young Troutman had an appointment last night to meet his mother, Mrs. Virginia Troutman, at the electric railway station at 61st and C streets northeast about 7:30 o'clock and escort her to their home some distance away from the car line. He talked with several of his friends while waiting for the next car.

Was Showing Weapon

Carroll, with several companions, joined the throng around the little station. He had in his hand a revolver which according to a statement to the police, he had found several days before and showed it to his friends.

Without warning the weapon was discharged. Young Troutman reeled and, with a groan, fell to the floor of the stations. His friends, recovering from the fright of the shot, bent over him and saw blood streaming from the right side of his face. He tried to speak, but soon dropped into unconsciousness. An effort was made to revive him and to stop the flow of blood from the wound.

Mother Faints at His Side

The next car arrived in the midst of the excitement and Mrs. Troutman stepped off and began to look for her son. When she was told he was lying unconscious and wounded on the station floor she fainted at his side.

No time was lost in placing Troutman aboard a car bound for this city, and at 15th and H streets northeast he was put into an ambulance and rushed to the Emergency Hospital. The surgeons pronounced his condition serious, and decided that an operation to remove the bullet from the head was too dangerous to undertake.

Mrs. Troutman was cared for by friends and assisted to her home.

The police of the ninth precinct made an investigation of the affair and arrested Carroll on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. The prisoner, the police say, explained that the shooting was entirely an accident, and his claims are said to be substantiated by several persons who witnessed it.

Following an investigation by Coroner Nevitt of the shooting he ordered an inquest to be held at the District morgue tomorrow morning at 11:30 o'clock.

In Memoriam

Trusheim. In the death of Mrs. Emma Mason Trusheim, formerly a beloved teacher of Jefferson building, we mourn a sincere friend and loving cousin, one whose ear was open and whose generous heart responded to the cry of distress. She has gone to her God, her chosen friend, my poor long-suffering cousin and her tired heart is at rest. May she be forever happy in the sincere prayer of her loving cousin.

| Tuck-a-Lix-Ta | d. 30 Mar 1858 | | R55/180 |
| The Evening Star, March 30, 1858 | | | |
| Death of an Indian--One of the Pawnee delegation of Indians, now in this city on a business errand, died yesterday at Mrs. Maher's hotel, where he had been lying ill for several days past. He had received every attention from Mr. Mix, Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and from Maj. Dennison, who had charge of the delegation. The name of the deceased Indian was Tuck-a-lix-tah, owner of many horses. | | | |
| As we go to press the very long and striking funeral procession of the deceased Indian is passing down the Avenue, on its way to the Congressional Cemetery. The religious services at the house were performed by the Rev. John C. Smith of the 9th street Presbyterian Church. | | | |
| The Evening Star, March 31, 1858 | | | |
| Funeral of Tuck-A-Lix-Tah | | | |
| Yesterday, the funeral of Tuck-a-lix-tah, (the owner of many horses) a promising brave of the Pawnees, who died, after a long illness, at Mrs. Maher's hotel, took place at one o'clock, p.m. The coffin of fine mahogany was made by Mr. A. Rochly, undertaker, under whose management the funeral was placed. | | | |
| The body was placed in the coffin and beautifully decorated with flowers. From an early hour until one o'clock, the house was crowded with visitors, who desired to see the corpse before it was interred. Upon the arrival of Rev. J. C. Smith, the minister selected for the occasion, the ceremony began with a short prayer. After which Nasharo-lad-a-ho-he (Big chief) of the Teppah band of Pawnees, delivered a short address expressive of their affliction from the death of the young brave. The coffin was placed in the hearse and the Pawnees followed as mourners in coaches; after them the Siouxs and delegations of other tribes then came a long line of carriages containing ladies and gentlemen, who were invited to attend the funeral. | | | |
| Upon arriving at the Congressional Cemetery the procession was formed, headed by several citizens acting as pall-bearers; who bore the corpse to the grave; then followed the minister; Mr. Mix, Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs; Major Dennison, agent of the Pawnees; Mr. Allis, Interpreter, of the Pawnees; Rev. Mr. Williamson, as Interpreter of the Sioux; then the Pawnees, Sioux and other delegations in line. After the coffin was deposited in the grave, the tomahawk, war club, moccasins, and trinkets of the deceased were put in, and over all his buffalo robe. Again the Rev. Mr. Smith addressed the throne of grace with a short prayer that the death of the stranger might open to the hearts of his brethren a way for the Holy Spirit which should result in their eternal good. The prayer being concluded, Le-it-z-a-nashato, (Sword Chief,) of the Loup band of Pawnees, spoke as follows: | | | |
| "I feel very poor now, that my young man has died. It makes me feel as if the Great Spirit is not pleased with us; but He has done it, and we are satisfied. The Great Spirit has taken him. We feel satisfied, too, with our Great Father, now that he has done all this for him, and buried our young brave like one of his own great chiefs; and we feel glad that all these white men and women are our friends, and feel so much for the poor Indian. When we go back, our people will not understand this mysterious act of the Great Spirit. But we are very tired now; we want to go home and tell our people that the Great Spirit took him; that while he came to do good business for them, he died, and he sleeps in our Great Father's burying ground. We hope our Great Father will settle our business and let us go to our villages. We will feel poor when we think that we have left our young man behind us; but, on our return, other scenes may make us forget this mourning." | | | |
| Rev. Mr. Smith here made some remarks expressive of sympathy for the Indians in the loss of their brave; and was followed by Mr. Mix; Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs, who said: | | | |
| "I wish to impress upon their minds that the death of their brave was the act of the Great Spirit, and it should make them better Indians, as it shows his great power. The burying of their bereaved; and the sympathy of our people, and the kindness of their Great Father, I hope will induce them when in their villages to treat our people, men, women and children, kindly. The Pawnees are a brave people, and the Great Father will set a mark on this grave, so that if any of their braves ever come here and wish to see the spot where the young brave sleeps they can find it." | | | |
| The remarks were interpreted by Mr. Allis, the worthy interpreter of the Pawnees, in whom they have great confidence, he having gone among them in 1833 as an assistant missionary, and lived among them till about four years ago, when he removed to Iowa. | | | |
| Rev. Mr. Williamson, who interpreted to the Sioux, is an Indian missionary. | | | |
| We are informed that the deceased requested Major Dennison, two days before his death, to have his grave dug and prepared for him immediately. | | | |

Woman, Struck By Car, Dead

Injuries To Head Fatal To Mrs. Annie Tucker

Mrs. Annie Tucker, sixty-five years of age, who lived at 507 8th street southeast, died Tuesday from injuries received about 7:30 o'clock that same day, when she was struck by a street car while crossing near the intersection of 8th and E streets.

Several who were passengers on the car at the time the accident appeared at the morgue this morning and gave evidence concerning the circumstances under which the injuries were sustained by the elderly woman.

James Lee, motorman, was praised for his conduct under stress by witnesses who gave testimony at the inquest. Mrs. Mary G. Olcott of New York, cousin of Representative Olcott, was a witness.

"He is one of the finest and most remarkable motormen I've ever seen," Mrs. Olcott declared. "His car was going at slow speed. He was ringing his gong and was able to stop the car almost instantly."

It was in evidence that Mrs. Tucker, who had a white shawl over her head, turned and looked toward the car when the gong was sounded. Witnesses expressed the belief that Mrs. Tucker became bewildered and turned the wrong way.

She was knocked down and injured about her head.

Dr. Butz, the attending physician, told the jury that the injured woman was unconscious when he reached her. She died about three hours after the accident happened.

A verdict of accidental death was returned.

The funeral of Mrs. Tucker will take place from her late home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Interment will be at Congressional cemetery.

It Was Frank Tucker

Drowned Man Identified as Congressional Cemetery Employee

Mystery Surrounding His Death

Coroner Making an Investigation of the Circumstances

Mrs. Schamel's Mistake

The body buried in potter's field yesterday, after having been identified by Mrs. Charles Schamel of No. 603 A street southeast, as that of her husband, who has been missing six years, was disinterred this morning by request of Supt. Vandiver of the Congressional cemetery, who very positively declared it was the remains of Frank T. Tucker, a cemetery employee, missing since Thursday before last.

It is barely possible that Tucker was murdered and thrown into the canal, where the body was found, and the coroner's office is at work solving the mystery. The likelihood is, however, that Tucker accidentally fell in while intoxicated and was drowned.

Mrs. Schamel's hope of securing a pension for herself and her three little children, who are in straightened circumstances, her husband having been discharged from the United States army on account of disability incurred in service, is, by this later development dissipated. Charles Schamel fled from his home by climbing out of a back window at night while his little family slept, and since has not been heard from.

The body, now identified as that of Tucker, was discovered in the canal between 33rd and 34th streets last Sunday morning. It had evidently been in the water several days. It was removed to the sixth precinct morgue. No autopsy was performed, because Coroner Carr expected that speedy identification would discover the events preceding the death going to show whether or not it was suicide, accidental or criminal. The police reported that a receipt signed by Crump Lee and $1.15 in cash were in the pockets of the clothing, but they had received no complaint of missing men resembling the deceased. It was learned, however, that a man of the same description had been seen Friday last in an intoxicated condition near the Aqueduct bridge, and it was believed that the unknown fe into the canal and drowned that night.

Body Unclaimed

No one came forward to claim the body until yesterday, as already stated in The Star, when Mrs. Schmael declared her conviction that the dead man had been her husband. Accordingly, a certificate of death was issued and the remains reinterred. Then the supposed widow set to work, assisted by sympathetic police officers at headquarters, to prepare pension papers for presentation today, but he present developments have completely stopped her plans.

Frank T. Tucker was about 45 years old and was a widower, having two children, who were paced in the care of his two married sisters in this city. For nine years past he worked as gravedigger and laborer in Congressional cemetery, but lived with one of his sisters in Georgetown. He has a brother, Henry M. Tucker, a well-known resident of that locality.

Supt. Vandiver speaks very highly of the industrious and sober character of his employee, and says he was the last man to be suspected of committing suicide, of becoming intoxicated or of gambling. Other acquaintances, on the contrary, say that Tucker, was an "occasional drinker."

Mr. Vandiver last saw Tucker Thursday of last week, since which time the latter failed to report for work. He had not been despondent or drinking up to that time, and had not received any large sum of money from any source known to his employer. Learning of the finding of the body at Georgetown, Mr. Vandiver today secured its disinterment. His identification of it is almost perfect. The necktie, shoes, shirt, coat and trousers given by him to Tucker were on the body, but it was so far gone in decay that he could not extend his identification. He says, however, that the dead man was of the same height and build as Tucker.

Arranged for Reinterment

Satisfied that he had found the missing employee, Mr. Vandiver sent word to the brothers and sisters and made arrangements to have the body decently interred in Congressional cemetery. Dr. Glazebrook, deputy coroner, when the facts were laid before him by The Star, acting for Coroner Carr, ordered the body removed to the morgue, in order to determine by autopsy the cause of death. He stated that it is not too late for a complete investigation to be made, and the cause of death will be officially settled.

The brother and two sisters of Tucker visited potter's field today and completed the identification. A scar on the chin convinced them. Examination of the trousers pocket brought out the receipt reported by the police, and already mentioned. It was found that the receipt was headed "Washington cemetery," and in reality was an order to Tucker to dig a grave for the body of a man named Crump, to be delivered by Undertaker Lee.

Mr. Vandiver said that it had issued from his cemetery. The key of the cemetery gate was found also on the body. Superintendent Vandiver is inclined to think that no very great effort was officially made to learn the dead man's identity. The body is now at the morgue for examination by Dr. Glazebrook. Tucker has insurance on his life, and the remains will be cared for by the relatives,

Tucker, 1004 B street southwest, opposite the Smithsonian Institute. A son of Mr. Tucker, hearing a noise in the hall, stepped out, and seeing the thieves seized one by the collar and jerked him into the street. At this moment the other drew a billy and struck the young man on the forehead, knocking him senseless. Both the thieves then ran off, and Mr. Ford, who was visiting at the house, appeared upon the scene, and fired two pistol shots after the retreating scoundrels. One of them was heard to cry out "I'm shot." after the last round was fired, but both managed to escape. Dr. Leach was at once called in to dress the wound of Mr. Tucker, and found it of quite a serious nature. Officers Aldridge and Lewis soon afterwards arrested two colored men, well known to the police, named Sam Rainey and Bowie Williams, on suspicion of being the parties and locked them up for a hearing. Williams and Rainey have been held for a hearing tomorrow. One of the parties has owned up to the job, and implicates the other, and said another not yet arrested. Mr. Tucker is very seriously injured, his skull being fractured, and it will be some time, if ever, before he will be able to identify the parties. The blow was struck by a heavy stone, weighing about four pounds. Rainey when arrested had a portion of a walking cane, with the silver head on it, which it is supposed he had stolen; also, a felt hat under his arm. He is well known to the police, as is also Williams. Chief Clarvoe has turned the case | | | |

The Burglars' Assault on Mr. Tucker

Attempt of One of the Prisoners to Escape

Last evening the detectives arrested of being engaged in the burglary and assault at the house of Mr. Wm. S. Tucker, on south B street, on Thursday evening, making five now under arrest. The two last arrested are Monk Moldin and Pete Parker, who, the officers say, are, with Sam Rainey, the guilty parties. They were locked up in separate cells last night at the central guardhouse, and soon afterwards Mr. August Voss, the station-keeper, heard a strange kind of sound coming from one of the cells, and after listening he found it proceeded from the cell occupied by Sam Rainey. Procuring a light he discovered the prisoner at work removing the bricks from the wall surrounding the iron door. He had smashed up the wooden bench, and with small fragments of it had scraped away the mortar between the bricks, and was in a fair way to escape. Mr. Voss put on him a pair of iron bracelets and removed him to another cell. Mr. Tucker's condition is represented by his physicians to be very critical.

In the Police Court today Mr. Closs stated that an information had been filed with him by Detective Coomes, charging Samuel Mason, alias Sam Rainey, with assault and battery with intent to kill John A. Tucker on Thursday night last, at his residence on south B street; that Mr. Tucker was in a very critical condition from the wounds received, and from representations made he asked that Rainey be committed to await the results of the injuries, and that Bowie Williams be held in the sum of $500 bonds as a witness; so ordered.

Death of Mr. John A. Tucker

The Coroner's Inquest Today

Mr. John Abel Tucker, who, it will be remembered, was struck with a stone by a colored burglar on the night of the 1st inst., died yesterday afternoon at his father's residence, No. 1004 11th street south (directly south of the Smithsonian Institute), from the effects of the wound. The deceased on the night in question hearing a noise in the hall of the house, went to see what it was, and discovering the thieves seized one by the throat. A scuffle ensued between them, during which they got from the house into the street. Mr. W.S. Tucker, the aged father of the deceased, came to his son's assistance, and at this time a pal of the thief went to his assistance and one of them struck the deceased with a large piece of blue rock. The parties made off, but Mr. Wm. T. Ford fired two shots at them as they ran towards the Smithsonian lot. About two hours after the occurrence Officers Aldridge and Lewis arrested Sam Rainey, Bowie Williams, and Ed. Howard, three well-known colored roughs, on the charge of having committed the deed. Other arrests followed, but the detectives, feeling assured that Rainey was the guilty party, he was committed to jail, as also Bowie Williams, in default of $500 bail as a witness, and the others were released. Drs. Fenwick and Leach were immediately summoned, and Dr. N.S. Lincoln was afterwards called in, and Mr. Tucker's skull was trepanned; but on the third day after he was struck, convulsions took place and they occurred periodically until death ensued.

The deceased was the eldest son of Mr. W.S. Tucker, formerly and for many years a "penny post." The deceased was by trade a carpenter, about 40 years old, and was of a kind disposition. He leaves a wife but no children.

The Coroner's Inquest

This morning at 10 o'clock, Coroner Patterson, assisted by Dr. Hatigan, held an inquest at the house of the deceased, Officer Reese summoned a jury as follows: Robert Mahoney, A. Hutton, G. Wooster, B.R. Gray, H. Drury, James Magee, T.W. Riley, H. Johnson, C.M. Farris, Lewis Lepreux, M. Shughrue, and Edward Hammersley.

John H. Tucker, the father of deceased, was the first witness. He testified that his son received the injury at 7:30 p.m., on last Thursday night; witness was sitting in the front room reading the paper, his son in a rocking chair in the same room; they were conversing about renting a house, when Mrs. Tucker remarked that there was some one in the alley and she thought it was some one after the clothes. His son opened the door and crept out easily, when he saw some one going out of the alley; when the man went out he pulled the door to and witness' son grabbed him and asked what he wanted; he replied that he wanted Johnson; witness remarked that he wanted some old clothes, that he had been there before. Here the man commenced pulling and hauling so as to get away; his son told him he could not go until the police came, at the same time holding him; they had got to the mouth of the alley when another fellow came out behind and struck witness' son; witness then grabbed him by the back of the neck, but the fellow got away from him; the new comer then stuck witness' son twice and ran out into the street, witness following by this time his son was in the gutter with the other, who picked up a stone and smashed it down on his son's head, both the men then ran away, and witness' son never moved afterward; witness did not see but two men; witness picked the stone up afterwards; both men ran across the street through the mud and went along towards 12th street; witness had seen the men before at the oyster wharf; had seen the men since and ecognized both of them.

By a Juror: The one his son was scuffling with was not the one who struck him.

Bowie Williams one of the party of colored men, was the next witness, and testified that Sam Rainey was the one who ran up and struck Mr. Tucker with his fist, and he saw that that did not hurt him, then he ran out in the gutter for a stone and struck him, and knocked him down.

Mr. Coomes (detective officer) said that Rainey's right name was Mason.

Detective Coomes testified that he worked up the case, and after the arrest of Williams and the other parties, Williams made a confession, and told all about it; Rainey afterwards said that a man named Pete Parker was the man who struck the blow. They had also arrested Howard and Moulton, and they had them all in a room together with Williams, when he asked the latter if there was any other one corrected with them, and he said there was not; that Rainey was the only man. Rainey did not make any denial.

After taking this testimony the coroner ordered that Williams be committed as a witness.

Mr. Tucker was recalled, and recognized Williams as the man his son was scuffling with when he was struck by the other man.

Anna Bell Taylor, a colored servant in the family of Mr. Tucker, corroborated the testimony of Mr. Tucker sr.

Dr. J.F. Hartigan testified as to the postmortem examination. The cause of death was an inflammation of the organs of the brain, consequent upon the injuries received.

Dr. H.E. Leach, corroborated this statement as to the cause of death.

The testimony here closed, and the jury afterwards rendered.

A Verdict

that the said John A. Tucker came to his death on the 8th day of May 1873, about the hour of 4 o'clock p.m., by reason of wounds of the head inflicted by one Samuel Mason, alias Samuel Rainey with a stone, on the first day of May, 1873, and the jury further say that Bowie Williams was an accessory.

The funeral of Mr. Tucker will take place from the residence of his father on B street, tomorrow at 3 o'clock p.m.

Death of Mrs. Sarah A. Tucker

Mrs. Sarah A. Tucker died Saturday last at 12:10 o'clock at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Jennie Rye, 429 10th street southwest, in this city. Mrs. Tucker was one of the oldest native residents of Washington and probably one of the most widely known and beloved women of the city. Her death will be mourned and she will be missed by a very large circle of relatives and friends. Mrs. Tucker, was born in Georgetown, December 7, 1810, nearly ninety-two years ago, and resided here continuously up to the time of her death.

In 1826 she with her husband, the late John H. Tucker, moved into and occupied a residence on B street southwest owned by them, the same being about the twelfth house to be erected on what was then the "Island." During the terms of Presidents Andrew Jackson, Martin Van Buren and William Henry Harrison, Mr. Tucker was selected from among the employees of the Post Office Department as a special messenger to convey the President's message to New York by stage, to be delivered to the postmaster in that city for publication.

Mrs. Tucker was of Scotch descent from the MacPhersons, the earliest settlers of Georgetown, two of whom became mayors of the ancient burg. Her father, William MacPherson, was captain and owner of the sailing ship Jeannette, plying between Georgetown and England, on which the late Dr. William Gunton took passage to this country, and mentioned in the published life of Mr. Gunton, his personal friend. Mrs. Tucker was of a most lovable disposition, vivacious, always cheerful, and loved to indulge in reminiscences of her young days, especially during Jackson's administration, with whom Mrs. Tucker was personally acquainted, and with whom she danced at his inaugural ball.

Three daughters, Mrs. Jeannet M. Rye, Mrs. Thomas H. Walker and Mrs. Annie O. Thompson, widow of William S. Thompson; and two sons, Francis Cookman Tucker and Alexander Dallas Tucker, survive her. She leaves, also, twenty-seven grandchildren and thirty great grandchildren.

Biographical Directory of the United States Congress 1774-1989

A Delegate and a Representative from South Carolina; born in Port Royal, Bermuda, June 25, 1745, attended the common schools; studied medicine at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland; moved to South Carolina and practiced medicine; served as a surgeon in the Revolutionary War; Member of the Continental Congress in 1787 and 1788; elected as a Federalist to the 1st and 2nd Congresses (March 4, 1789 to March 3, 1793); appointed U.S. Treasurer by President Jefferson and served from December 1, 1801 until his death in Washington, D.C., May 2, 1828. Interment in Congressional Cemetery. Uncle of Henry St. George Tucker

The National Intelligencer, May 2, 1828

In this City, at a quarter before 6 o'clock last evening (May 1), the Honorable Thomas Tudor Tucker, Treasurer of the United States, in the 84th year of his age. He had been confined to his bed, by the malady which terminated his life, for thirteen weeks, and died in the entire possession of his mental facilities, and in the most resigned and pious frame of mind.

Of this venerable and most estimable man, it is not our purpose to portray the character, further than to say, that he was a patriot of the purest character, tested in the ordeal of the Revolution, and approved in the political trials which followed it. He was a Representative from the State of South Carolina, in the first Congress of the United States, and for some time afterwards, deservedly enjoying the respect of those with whom he was associated in the important duty of putting this Government into operation. He had, for many years previous to his decease, filled with fidelity the duties of the office which he held at the time of his death; and, in his public as well as private life, was the model of a gentleman, and an example to all around him.

The Funeral of the deceased will be attended by the Officers attached to the Treasury Department, who are for that purpose requested to attend at the Treasury Office this day, at 10 o'clock, a.m. Of the arrangements for the Funeral, further notice will be given.

The National Intelligencer, May 3, 1828

The funeral of the late venerable Dr. Tucker, Treasurer of the United States, took place from his late residence yesterday afternoon and was numerous and most respectably attended.

Diana Dru Dowdy, "A School for Stoicism": Thomas Tudor Tucker And The Republican Age, South Carolina Historical Magazine, 96 No. 2 (April 1995).

The specter of war in 1812 between Britain and America threatened to choke off the family ties between America, England, and Bermuda. Not only was this distressing, but also James, Thomas's nephew and Nathaniel's son, considered enlisting in the British army. Thomas shuddered "at the thought of beholding enemies in the sons of our most inestimable brothers ... I wish they were all well provided for in some other department." Despite these thoughts of war pitting the branches of the family against each other, Thomas was proud of "our little Navy" and arrogantly boasted that "2 or 3 years of War [with the British] will teach them to treat us with perfect respect, and convince them that they have foolishly lost what was of incalculable value to them." Still, he worried about St. George's safety after the British captured Hampton. The painful sluggishness of the American effort frustrated him and made him impatient -- "we ought to have been at the Walls of Quebec long ago... Whatever we may be as individuals, we appear as a nation to be without nerve."

As America continued to lose, Thomas wished the war would end, noting that "shou'd our host of Plenipotentiaries finish it without humiliating concessions, they will merit thanks." Thomas resided at the capital until the British burned it, and he became, like many others, a wanderer, having "no longer a country or a Government that I can speak of with pride." Many of Thomas's books and papers were destroyed in the attack, but luckily the necessities for conducting business were saved. "There is in every public Office much rubbish of little value," he noted; he had been able to separate out the important documents and carry them off before the British arrived. When peace finally came, Thomas embraced it eagerly.

William N. Tucker Dead

Funeral Services This Afternoon

From His Late Home

William N. Tucker, who for many years was in charge of the fish and oyster wharves at the foot of 11th street southwest for the lessees, T.R. Riley and W.W. Riley, died at the home of his nephew, John W. Tucker, 618 11th street southwest, Tuesday. His funeral took place from his former home this afternoon at 2 o'clock and was attended by many of his friends and associates. Rev. Mr. Galliher of Ryland Methodist Episcopal Chapel conducted the services and the interment was in Congressional Cemetery. The pallbearers were Capt. Frank M. Evans, W.W. Riley, William M. Neitzzy, David M. Faunce, John T. Brarson and Charles Norfolk.

Capt. Tucker, or "Uncle Ben," as he was familiarly known to those who had business at the oyster and fish wharves, was seventy-six years old, and for more than thirty years had been in charge of wharfage collections at the fish and oyster wharves, retiring from that position last March, when the District took possession of the public wharves. About a month ago Capt. Tucker was stricken with paralysis that caused his death.

Tudge. On January 6, 1914 at 5 a.m., at his residence, Silver Hill road, Charles beloved son of Charles and Emma Tudge, aged twenty-three years.

Once again the reaper, with silent tread
In the still ray dawn of day,
Has entered our midst, without warning or fear,
And taken our boy away.

Taken him just in manhood's pride
Just when he seemed most dear;
Just when the laurels he strove to win
Shone on his brow so clear.

But we know he is safe in the beautiful land,
Free from all sorrow and care,
Where so many loved ones we scarce them can count
Were waiting to welcome him there.

And some day again, though we know not when,
But 'twill be an endless joy
When face to face, at that great white throne,
We'll meet our darling boy.

By His Mother, Emma Tudge

Funeral Thursday, January 8 at 2 o'clock p.m., fro East Washington Heights Baptist Church. Friends and relatives invited.

| Tudor, Mrs. Delia | d. 18 Sep 1843  Removed to Massachusetts, December 4, 1861  | 91 yrs. | R41/92 ® |
| Tudor. In this city on 6 o'clock on Sunday morning last in the 92nd year of her age, Madam Delia Tudor, widow of Hon. William Tudor of Revolutionary memory. Her funeral will take place from her late residence at 11 o'clock this day at which the friends of the deceased and those of her daughter (Mrs. Comm. Stewart) are invited to attend. The National Intelligencer, Saturday, September 23, 1843 Madam Delia Tudor, whose decease, in this city, in the 92d year of her age, has been very recently announced, was in many respects too remarkable and distinguished a person to be allowed to pass away from among the living without some further tribute to the merits of her life and character. She was the Widow, as has been already noticed, of the Hon. William Tudor, who was, at the early age of twenty-four years, appointed by Congress to be the first Judge Advocate General of the Army, in which he afterwards held the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. She was the Mother of Hon. William Tudor, whose name is endeared to his friends by the memory of his virtues, and to his country by his public services and by the literary works which he left. It was with the expectation, unhappily never realized, of being joined here by her distinguished son, that she came to reside in this city; where, after he was called to his Maker from the service of his country in a foreign land, she continued to reside from choice. A contemporary of that eventful period in her country's history which called forth in man and woman all the noblest traits of character, she imbibed, in her youth, from the sources which surrounded her, a loftiness of sentiment, free from the slightest tinge of frivolity. Possessing Charity in its most extended sense, with an entire abnegation of self, and living only to bless others, she was elevated by Religious sentiment and conviction above all the vain agitations and illusions of this world. In the character of Wife and Mother no language could exaggerate the tenderness of her attachments of her devotion to her domestic duties. In early life she was the center of the most intellectual and brilliant society, native and foreign, of which a refined taste, discoverable in every thing she said, made her the ornament and the pride. Not in the memory of her surviving friends only, but in the pages of a Segur, Chastellux, and other writers of that day, her name is found associated with the most honorable and gratifying marks of respect and admiration. She was by Nature endowed with talents of a high order; and many effusions of her pen became known from time to time beyond the immediate circle of her admiring friends. To the day of her death she continued the frequent exercise of her pen, of which a charming illustration may be found in the Lines elicited by the Commemoration of the 17th of June last at Bunker Hill, and was published in the National Intelligencer of June 26; in which, after alluding to the memorable scenes of the Revolution, (to which she had been personally a witness,) with a rapid glance; from the landing of the persecuted Pilgrims on these shores, to the present aspect and condition of this country, she gratefully and beautifully exults that now "Rich culture springs where tangled forests grew, "And children's children in succession rise "To bless the barque that gained these distant skies." It was on the occasion of receiving from her own hand a Letter enclosing a copy of these Lines that the following touching reply was addressed to Mrs. Tudor by the distinguished President of Harvard University, and arrived at its destination in time to be read to and comprehended by her: Madam Tudor: I cannot sufficiently regret the delay which has occurred in acknowledging your surprising letter of the 21st of July last. But it reached Cambridge just after I had set out on a journey to Quebec, and was not brought to my notice until a day or two since. Be assured, Madam, no greater surprise could have occurred to me than to receive a letter from the widowed lady of my beloved and venerated legal master., whom I remember in the brightness of her early beauty more than fifty years ago, then a favorite of the muses, and competing with the poets of that day for some of the occasional honors which were publicly proffered for their exertions. To receive from this lady, who "remembered me in tunics," the lines which she had the kindness to enclose, evidencing that the fire of fancy yet burnt warm and bright amid the snows of nearly the ninetieth winter--how wonderful! how delightful to find her publicly and justly acknowledged" venerable for every quality that attracts respect!" Yes, Madam, I am indeed delighted with such an evidence of the continuance not only of your health but of your mental powers; and that Heaven, who distinguished you so greatly among your contemporaries in early life, has continued to bless you with a constant supply of intellectual power, at a period when usually "the golden bowl is broken" and the "daughters of music are brought low." Long, Madam, may they be your companions! Long may you continue to enjoy their smiles and their favor! I | | | | have, Madam, a vivid recollection of the scenes to which your letter alludes--the intercourse my mother enjoyed with you, and which she so much valued--the kindness with which I was for so many years received in your family--the poised and affectionate greetings of your respected husband; and the pleasures I have so often partook with and in your domestic circle.

Your letter, Madam, has communicated a delight, in some respects tinged with sadness, by recalling scenes long buried amid the lost things of far distant years.

May the best of Heaven's blessings continue to be yours!

Most truly and respectfully, your humble servant,

Josiah Quincy

Cambridge, September 13, 1843.

So exempt did Mrs. T. remain from physical infirmities; so vivid did her imagination and feelings continue; so cheerfully did she yet sympathize in the pursuits of the youngest and happiest, her playful and original wit still beaming in everything she said, that her friends around her felt no alarm, but vainly hoped that in every thing she would be an exception to the general laws of Nature. Unprepared for the event, it need not be added that the decease of this most estimable lady has plunged in the deepest affliction her descendants, immediate and remote; and especially that beloved Daughter (Mrs. Comm. Stewart) whose life and affections have been for many years so closely entwined around the existence of her Mother, that the severance of the connection must have been attended by pain to the survivor which nothing but a consciousness of ever faithful discharge of filial duty can assuage or alleviate.

The National Intelligencer, June 26, 1843

The Day of Bunker Hill

The Lady who has favored us with the following Lines suggested by the Celebration of the seventeenth instant, when a young girl, saw the British troops pass on to the engagement at Bunker Hill, and witnessed also the return, in a short space of time, of very many of them borne on litters. Venerable though now in years, as she is for every other quality that attracts respect, it is not surprising that the completion of the Monument in memory of that day should recall the thrilling scenes she witnessed, and wake up the train of thought which dictated these lines:

Ecclesiastes, Chapter first, verse ninth
Had it been thine, great King! on earth to stay,
And note the dawns of this peerless day,
To future years those words would not resound--
That "nothing new beneath the sun is found."

Mute as in Heaven, no party strife takes place,
Though adverse thousands crowd those names to trace
Who on this hallowed spot, in martial pride,
Fought for their country--conquered, bled, and died!
On Freedom's sons devolve the vast domain,
Who unimpaired the sacred trust sustain.

Wilds that no mortla footstep then had pressed--
A house, invites the sufferer--the oppressed.
No rigid rules depress his daity toil:
Lord of himself, fond of the cultured soil,
A happy future opens to his view
Rich culture springs where tangled forests grew,
And children's children in succession rise
To bless the barque that gained these distant skies.

Mother of Henry J. Tudor and Mrs. Comm. Stewart.

Will of Delia Tudor, former of Boston, now of Washington (dtd. Oct. 17, 1839, probated Nov. 1, 1843; Book 5, pp. 340-342; O.S. 2434; Box 16)

| Turner. Suddenly on February 2, 1904, Clarence C. Turner, son of Smith and Rebecca Turner, in the 26th year of his age. A precious one from us is gone A voice we loved is stilled There is a vacancy in our heart That never can be filled. Would we call him back again-- Our dear, suffering son? No, we must submit and say, "O God! Thy will be done." By His Loving Parents Funeral from residence of his parents, 415 G street southeast, February 5, at 2:30 o'clock p.m. The Evening Star, February 3, 1904 Takes His Own Life Clarence C. Turner Swallows Fatal Dose of Laudanum Occupied a Room at the Fredonia Hotel, but Declined to Register in Advance Clarence C. Turner, a drummer in the employ of Eugene S. Cochran, tobacconist, at 1115 Pennsylvania avenue, committed suicide at the Fredonia Hotel last night by taking laudanum. He went to the hotel about 9 o'clock yesterday morning and his body was found shortly before noon today. An empty bottle found in the room showed that the poison had been purchased at the Belmont pharmacy, corner of 12th and H streets. The proprietor of the pharmacy says that the young man made the purchase yesterday morning. He said there was nothing in the purchaser's demeanor to arouse his suspicion. Turner gave his own name to the druggist and his business address. His reason for wanting the poison, he said was that his horse had fallen on the ice and cut his foot. He did not register at the hotel. The hotel proprietor was in the office when Turner called and said he wanted a room for a few hours, as he wanted to get a little rest before going to work. "If I oversleep myself," he said, "don't call me, for I'll pay whatever extra charge there is." "Will you register?" he was asked. "I'll register when I come down," the young man said. He then went upstairs to his room. Had Evidently Lost Sleep Turner's appearance indicated to the hotel proprietor that he had probably been without sleep the night before, but refrained from questioning him to any extent. This forenoon the housekeeper reported that she had been unable to arouse the occupant of the room that had been assigned to Turner. The proprietor looked through the transom and became convinced that the occupant of the room was dead. The engineer was summoned and he climbed through the transom and unlocked the door. He found that the man's body was cold and there was not a sign of life left. Captain Boardman was communicated with and he sent Detective Horne to the hotel to take charge of the room and contents until relieved by first precinct officers or the coroner. The only thing found in the pockets of the dead man's clothes to show his name was a letter that had been addressed to him by a young lady he had been visiting in Northeast Washington. Statements contained in the letter indicate that Turner was not physically strong, and that he had been depressed in spirits. It was stated today that last Saturday he made a remark to a friend which showed that he contemplated taking his life. The young lady on whom he had been calling was considerably agitated about his failure to visit her home last night and called at Mr. Cochran's store to inquire about him. She was unable to learn anything and returned home. Complained of Illness | | | |

| Turner was 24 years old and lived with his parents at 415 G street, southeast. He had been in the employ of Mr. Cochran for about one year, and was regarded as an excellent salesman. After being away from the store several days he returned Saturday and was paid what salary was due him. At that time he said he had been sick. Coroner Nevitt investigated the case and gave a certificate in accordance with the facts. Arrangements were made for the removal of the body to the morgue. Later in the day relatives of the dead man were informed of his death and they took charge of the remains. Turner's parents formerly lived in Charles county, Md., not far from Marshall Hall, and his body will probably be taken there for interment. | | | |

The Late George V. Turpin

The remains of the late George V. Turpin reached this city Saturday from Longview, Tex., where he died last Sunday of dropsical rheumatism. Mr. Turpin was a gallant soldier in the confederate army and was during the war a prisoner of war in Camp Chase, Ohio, for a year. He was in Capt. Walter Drew's company of the twenty-third Virginia cavalry. His remains were taken to Congressional cemetery and placed in a vault until yesterday, when they were interred with religious ceremony.

Turpin. On the 20th instant, at his residence in this city, of pulmonary disease, of which he had been a patient sufferer for many years, James S. Turpin, in the 39th year of his age. Praise of the dead is but too common, yet in this instance the writer feels it but due to say, that if a devoted husband, affectionate father and a friend in whom there was no guile, can be a consolation to friends and relatives at a distance, then may they console themselves, for truly in an eminent degree were combined, kindness, moral worth, and indeed every virtue calculated to endear.

The friends and acquaintances of the family are requested to attend the funeral on Sunday next, at 2-1/2 o'clock, p.m., at his late residence on D between 13th and 14th streets. (Richmond Whig and Enquirer please copy).

| Illness of Mr. John Tyler | | | |
| Mr. John Tyler, son of the late President Tyler, who has been critically ill since Thursday last, was, it was thought, a little better today, and was said to be resting easily, when a Star reporter called at his home, No. 1217 B street southeast. Mr. Tyler has been paralyzed for about nine years, but has not been considered dangerously sick until about two weeks ago. He is well advanced in years, having been born April 29, 1819, and was just three months older than the late Capt. Bassett, of whom he was a life-long acquaintance. | | | |

| A Pension Provided for the Widows | | | |
| Recent Death Here of the Son of the Tenth President | | | |
| Aid From Citizens | | | |
| A son of a President of the United States died a few days ago in this city, where he had lived in poverty and obscurity for a number of years. Once he lived in the White House and went to the Capitol with the messages of the President, his father. His name was John Tyler, and he was the son of the tenth President of the United States. He drew a pension of $8 a month for service in the Mexican war until his death. For a number of years in the latter part of his life he held a position in the department service in Washington, but the changes of politics threw him out, and he was unable to obtain reinstatement. | | | |
| The problem, "What shall we do with our ex-Presidents?" is not nearly so important as "What shall we do with the families of our ex-Presidents?" for of late years the ex-Presidents have taken care of themselves, or have been cared for by their friends, but this kindness has not been extended always to their families. And the son of a President of the United States is handicapped for life. "My greatest misfortune is that I am the son of the President," said the child of a chief executive. | | | |
| President's wives have been cared for by Congress. Pensions of $5,000 a year have been granted to five of them -- Mrs. Tyler, Mrs. Polk, Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Lincoln and Mrs. Garfield. Mrs. Grant is comparatively rich, the result of the success of her husband's memoirs, and Mrs. Garfield has a very comfortable fortune, contributed by some rich friends of her late husband. | | | |
| As a rule, Presidents' sons have shown themselves amply able to care for themselves. John Adams left a fortune of $50,000 to his son, John Quincy Adams, but the younger Adams had been elected President of the United States before he received his father's bequest. He was a man of great mental capacity, and he was amply able to make his own way in the world. | | | |
| Jefferson's children were not so fortunate. He was so poor that he sold his library to Congress for $23,000 (about one-quarter of its value), and later he indorsed a note for $20,000 for a friend, which we was compelled to pay. He was in danger then of losing Monticello, but Philip Hone, mayor of New York, raised $8,5000 in that city in 1826, and the people of Philadelphia and Baltimore added $5,000 and $3,000, respectively, to the sum, so that Jefferson died solvent. His daughter, Mrs. Randolph, and her children, who had been with him during his last years, were left penniless, and Mrs. Randolph contemplated opening a school. But South Carolina and Virginia voted $10,000 each for her support, and she lived on the interest of this money till her death, in 1836. | | | |
| Some of the Presidents | | | |
| Madison left no children to share his small estate. Monroe died poor, but his two daughters had married before his death, one of them being the wife of George Hay of Virginia, and the other of Samuel L. Gouverneur of New York. | | | |
| John Quincy Adams left an estate about as large as that of his father -- $50,000; but the Adams family was quite able to take care of itself without inheritance, and down to the present day it has earned honors and wealth. | | | |

Jackson left no children. His grand-niece is a clerk in the government departments. Van Buren was one of the richest of Presidents. It was said he drew no salary till he left the White House, and that he received the $100,000 which had accumulated during his term in one lump. He had a son, Abraham, who graduated at West Point and served with distinction in the army. He was brevetted for gallantry at Churubusco. Abraham Van Buren married a woman who was well to do. John Van Buren, President Van Buren's second son, graduated at Yale and became one of the leading members of the New York bar. He was elected attorney general of the state.

William Henry Harrison left a small estate, which went eventually to his son, the father of Benjamin Harrison, who was a member of Congress from Indiana for four years. Benjamin Harrison inherited very little of his money, and he had to make his own way from the beginning of his career. But he showed conspicuous ability as a lawyer, and his practice since he left the White House has been worth probably $20,000 or $30,000 a year to him.

The Tyler Family

President Tyler's first wife died while he was in the White House. One of his sons, Robert, went to Philadelphia, where he held several civil offices. Then he went to Richmond, where he was appointed register of the treasury. At the expiration of his term of office he moved to Montgomery, Ala., where he edited a newspaper until his death. John Tyler, who has just died, was secretary to his father, though he did not hold the title of private secretary, as that office was created after he left the White House. He drew no salary, and he said not long ago that when he left the White House he pawned his watch for $30, because he had no money. John Tyler would have been one of the victims of the explosion on the Princeton, which killed his future stepmother's father, if he had not been escorting Mrs. Gilmore, the wife of the Secretary of the Navy, to the cabin at the time the Peacemaker blew up. Mr. Gilmore was killed in the accident. So was Mr. Gardiner of New York, whose daughter became Mrs. Tyler not long afterward. President Tyler had a son by his second wife, who was conspicuous in the politics of Virginia, and who became president of William and Mary College, the institution from which his father had graduated. Mrs. Tyler was the first President's wife to receive aid from Congress. A pension of $5,000 was granted to her.

Mrs. Polk also received a pension from Congress. She had no children. President Taylor left several children, who were quite competent to take care of themselves. His eldest daughter married Jefferson Davis and is still alive. She draws a pension from some of the southern states. The second daughter married W.H. Bliss, major in the army, and she was the mistress of the White House during part of her father's term. After the death of her father and her husband she married Philip Dandridge of Virginia, who left her comfortably provided for. Her brother, "Dick" Taylor, was a man of much distinction. He was a member of the secession convention of Louisiana, entered the confederate army, served under Stonewall Jackson in the valley campaign, rose to the rank of general, and served with credit till the end of the war. After the war he went to New York where, just before his death in 1879, he published a book with the title, "Destruction and Reconstruction."

Gloom at the White House

President Fillmore had only one child--a daughter, who died while he was yet alive. President Pierce had three children--all boys. Two of them died while quite young. The third lived to be thirteen. He was killed in a railroad accident while traveling with his father and mother from Andover to Lawrence, Mass, in January 1858, it was only two months before the inauguration of his father as President, and the accident cast a gloom over the White House during the entire administration of President Pierce. James Buchanan was a bachelor. The Lincolns brought three boys with them to the White House. One died during his father's administration--he was the President's favorite child--and another not long after the murder of the President. Robert T. Lincoln, the oldest of the three, was spared to his mother, and his career has been an honor to his father's name. He has been Secretary of War, minister to England, and he is reckoned a possibility in the presidential contest. He has been successful as a lawyer too. His mother received a pension of $3,000 from 1870 till 1882, when it was increased to $5,000.

President Johnson left two daughters, both of whom married well. Martha became the wife of Judge D.T. Patterson and she was the mistress of the White House during her father's term. Mary married Daniel Stover, who died before Mr. Johnson became President. She too, was with her father in the White House. After his retirement she married W.R. Bacon.

The Grant family was fairly well-to-do when the second term ended, but the unfortunate connection with Ferdinand Ward plunged it into poverty. When Grant was dying he completed his book of memoirs, having in view a provision for his family. Mrs. Grant has received half a million dollars in royalties from the book. She has a pension of $5,000 a year, too, granted to her by Congress soon after her husband's death. Fred. Grant is the only member of the family who has been at all conspicuous in public affairs. He was minister to Austria, and he is now one of the police commissioners of New York city. He has been discussed as a vice presidential possibility.

President Hayes retired to his old home in Fremont, Ohio, at the end of his term, taking with him about $50,000 of his salary as President. He left a good estate. His four sons are all in business, and are said to be prospering. One of them is in Cleveland and another is in Toledo. The one daughter lives in the old homestead at Fremont. She never married.

In Recent Years

There were four sons and a daughter in the Garfield family. Their future was assured by a popular subscription taken at the time of their father's death. The $16,500 raised for Thomas Jefferson was very small compared with the $360,000 contributed by the people of the United States for the support of the Garfield family. This sum is held in trust, and the income is paid to Mrs. Garfield. At her death the principal will be divided among the children. Mrs. Garfield has also a pension of $5,000 a year from the government. One of the Garfield boys has gone into politics, and is a member of the Ohio legislature. The daughter married her father's private secretary, Stanley Brown, and lives in this city.

President Arthur left a modest fortune to his children, Allan and Nellie, when he died. President Cleveland will leave a large fortune to his little ones. He was worth comparatively little when he came to Washington, but between his first and second terms he was credited with accumulating a large sum through fortunate speculations in Wall street.

Ex-President Harrison's son is in business in Terre Haute, and he is prospering. Mrs. McKee, the ex-President's other child, is married.

Buried at Arlington

The remains of Capt. John Tyler, the last surviving son of ex-President Tyler, were removed on Wednesday of this week from the private vault in which they have rested since his death, and interred at Arlington cemetery. The services of committal were conducted by the Rev. Gilbert F. Williams of Christ Church, East Washington, who officiated also at the time the body was removed from his late home to the place of its temporary deposit. At the final interment Wednesday only the relatives and a few of the immediate friends of Capt. Tyler were present.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

She was so long by pain oppressed,
That wore her strength away;
It made her think of endless rest,
Which never can decay.

Afflictions sore some time she bore,
Physicians were in vain;
God thought it best that she should rest,
And eased her of her pain.

In love she lived, in peace she died;
Her life was asked, but God denied.

| Tyrrell, Conrad E. | d. 2 Sep 1911 | | R161/254 |
| The Evening Star, September 5, 1911, p. 18 Tyrrell Inquest Tomorrow The inquest that is to be held to fix the responsibility for the death of Conrad E. Tyrrell, boilermaker, who was fatally injured Saturday afternoon when an explosion occurred in the McKinley Manual Training School where he was employed, has been postponed until tomorrow. It will be held at the morgue at 11:30 o'clock. Funeral services over the remains will be conducted tomorrow. The interment will be in Congressional cemetery. The Evening Star, September 6, 1911, p. 14 Young Tyrrell's Death Charged To Accident Verdict Rendered by the Coroner's Jury, Following Investigation of Gas Explosion Conrad Tyrrell, the young machinist who sustained serious injuries in a gas explosion at the McKinley Manual Training High School Saturday evening while installing the smokebox above a boiler, from which he died later, came to his death by an accident, according to the finding of a coroner's jury sitting at the morgue at noon today. The jury did not attempt to fix responsibility. Assistant Corporation Counsel Smith represented the District at the hearing and James S. Easby-Smith and other attorneys represented the various firms employed in the work at the school. Attempt to Locate Leak William A. German, assistant to the District building inspector, testified that since Friday at noon he had been attempting to find where the gas was escaping. He had gone to many parts of the building, he said, but had been unable to detect just where the leak was located. Once when he approached the boiler on which Tyrrell was standing while working on the smoke box, witness declares he warned the machinist that he should not strike a match anywhere near one of the gas pipes, as an explosion might occur. He was still on the search for the leak when the explosion occurred that resulted in Tyrrell's injuries. Mr. German was assisted in his search by Highland Maddox, janitor of the school. Questioned by Mr. Smith, Maddox said he did not believe the leak had been discovered. Tyrrell Asks for Match Working with Tyrrell at the time of the explosion was William Moore, colored, who declared that Tyrrell first asked him for a match, but that instead he found him a piece of paper which Tyrrell evidently lighted from a lantern which he had near him. Witness, with other laborers helped Tyrrell from the boiler top after the explosion. Tyrrell died from a blood clot on the brain formed by the rupture of a small artery and caused by a fracture of the skull on the right side of his head above the ear, according to a statement by Dr. Charles S. White, deputy coroner, who conducted a post-mortem examination in the case. | | | |
